AN EXPLICATION
OF THE GOSPEL-THEISM
AND THE DIVINITY
OF THE
CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

Containing the true Account of the Syſtem of the Univerſe,

AND OF THE CHRISTIAN TRINITY.

Propos'd to the Conſideration of all Learned and Holy Men.

By Richard Brocklesby, a Chriſtian Trinitarian.

When I have raiſed up thy Sons, O Zion, againſt thy Sons, O Greece. Zech. ix. 13.

LONDON,
Printed for the Author, by J. Heptinſtall; and Sold by Samuel and John Sprint at the Bell in Little Britain. M DCC VI.

MVSEVM
BRITAN
NICVM

3Om

The PREFACE.

A Book of many and great Singularities, the Fruit of much Time and Thought, of anxious Contemplation and great Labour, I publiſh to the World; and for ſuch a Publication need not to make an Apology: As we need to make, when we will be communicative to the Publick, but communicate nothing out of our own ſtore, ſay nothing but what hath been as well ſaid before, and publiſh new Books that have nothing new in them, nothing that encreaſeth the Stock of Learning, no Improvement of Knowledge. But this deſigneth an Advancement of Learning, and of the beſt Learning, which is the Chriſtian (in order whereto it maketh ſome Improvement of thoſe Arts of common Learning, Logick and Rhetorick) it pretendeth to an Explication of the Chriſtian or Goſpel-Theiſm (which compriſeth an Explication of the old Pagan-Theiſm, Natural Religion, and much of the old Judaical-Theiſm) and ſuch an Explication which is an Improvement of this infinitely valuable and Divine Learning. It explaineth the matters of the Chriſtian-Theiſm (the main of them) by ſetling their true Notion and Idea, proving their Truth and Reality, aſſoiling the Difficulties that incumber them; and becauſe throughout the whole it obſerveth, explicateth, and vindicateth a Divine and Saint of God-kind of Excellency that is in them (which is their Specifick Nature and their peculiar Glory and Excellency) thence it is Intituled both an Explication of the Goſpel-Theiſm and of the Divinity of the Chriſtian Religion. The due Explication of both theſe conſiſteth in giving a good account of two comprehenſive Theories, that compriſe a vaſt number of Theories (neceſſary to the right underſtanding the Chriſtian Religion) the one is The true Syſtem of the Univerſe of Rationals, the other is The Chriſtian Trinity. The Chriſtian Trinity is here (as it ought to be) of the Chriſtian, not the Scholaſtic kind of Explication; whence I denominate my ſelf A Chriſtian Trinitarian, in contradiſtinction to A Scholaſtic Trinitarian.

In the Age wherein we live, great Induſtry hath been us'd (not without conſiderable Succeſs) to improve the Humane Arts and Sciences, Natural Philoſophy, Mathematicks, Medicine, Anatomy, the Mechanic Arts, and the Man-killing Art of War: but the like Induſtry hath not been us'd in cultivating and improving Theology, which in our Times is as imperfect in its notices of things, as much inwrapp'd in Obſcurities, as in former Ages, and continueth clogg'd with the ſame Difficulties, ſome of which are ſo great, that it is much, that the Chriſtian Religion ſhould keep a Standing in the World. This Conſideration prevail'd with me, to dedicate my Time and Studies to the Improvement of the Learning of the Chriſtian Theology, which is as capable of Improvement as the Human Arts and Sciences, needeth it at a greater rate than they, and is far more worthy to employ our Induſtry, the Theories of it being of infinite importance, and the truly noble Theories (that employ the Contemplation of Angels) the Summity of Learning and Science. (a) Γυμνάσιον μὲν φαμὲν εἶναι τῆς ψυχῆς τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην σοφίαν, τέλος δὲ τὴν θείαν, We ſay, that the Human Wiſdom is a lower exerciſe of the Soul of Man, but the Divine is the end. The greater excellency and importance that theſe Divine Theories are of, the more pious care and ſedulous application is requiſite, that we commit no Miſtakes in them: For a Miſtake meerly in Natural Philoſophy can be no great matter (it is not a burning the Capitol, as Epictetus ſpeaketh;) but a Miſtake in Theology may be deadly in its ſelf and its conſequences. (b) Ὅσῳ μεῖζον τὸ ὑποκείμενον, καὶ ὁ κίνδυνος χαλεπώτερος, The greater the Subject is, the greater is the Danger; whence a moſt pious care and moſt ſedulous contemplation is requiſite in the Theory of the Godhead and the Perſons thereof. Which is alſo requiſite in theſe Theories, becauſe all the Helps and Aſſiſtances that we have, are ſcarce ſufficient to enable us to maſter the mighty Difficulties that ſome of them involve. In ſome Inſtances the Revelation is not full and clear; the Holy Scriptures (the only ſure Guide in theſe Theories) afford but imperfect notices, their ſenſe is ambiguous, it is not an eaſie matter to fix and determine it, and to inveſtigate their genuin Interpretation. In making Interpretations of Scripture, and explicating theſe great Theories, Eccleſiaſtical Tradition is very needful; but in caſes where it is needful, it is of no value. It was not of any value, to determine a trifling Diſpute between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches touching the time of obſerving Eaſter; nor another the like Diſpute about re-baptizing thoſe that were baptized by Hereticks; nor that greater Diſpute between the Catholicks and the Arians: both Parties in theſe Diſputes pretended to Apoſtolical Tradition, and their Pretenſions were alike frivolous and vain. Nothing is more fallacious than pretended (unwritten) Tradition: nor is there any ſafe relying upon the great Councils of the Church (their Authority, Wiſdom and Reaſons) of which none can certainly ſay, what are legitimate Councils and to be allowed, and what not. They have erred and may err (and therefore muſt be tried by the Rule which they ought to obſerve) they have decreed things groſly erroneous and ſinful, and have contradicted one another in their Decrees, as being of ſeveral Parties (Arian and Catholic, Neſtorian and Eutychian, Iconoclaſts and the contrary:) Ignorance and Temerity, Faction and Intereſt, have manifeſtly borne ſway in them, and things have been determin'd in them meerly by the majority of Men's Voices agreeably to their Prejudices. The Writings of the Fathers are of great uſe, but not in expounding difficult places of Scripture, nor in theſe great Theories touching the Godhead, wherein they (in conſort with the Councils) are great Maſters at creating Difficulties, but cure none. Their Notices of the Trinity are in great part unholy Trifles and Futilities; here they are unlike themſelves, and their Diſcourſes (otherwiſe laudable) are as remote from the Sanctity of their Religion and good ſence, as the things that they contemplate are remote from ordinary apprehenſion.

(a) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 284.

(b) Gr. Naz. Or. 26.

But the Difficulty that is in theſe Theories, is like that which is in acquiring Virtue, ſuch as ſhould awaken and excite Induſtry, not ſtifle and ſufflaminate it. The great Difficulty is in the beginning. Sapere aude, incipe. From ſmall Beginnings Men raiſe themſelves to great Eſtates (and like Simonides, that gained his little Wealth hardly, his great Riches eaſily:) So he that hath gained a true Principle, hath got a Thread by the end that will lead him out of a Labyrinth. Lignum parvum incendit lignum magnum, as the Jews ſay. In the main of theſe Theories (as in acquiring Virtue) the Difficulty is not inſuperable; Clearneſs and Certainty in them (notwithſtanding their Difficulty) by ſedulous ſeeking may be found. (c) Nil tam difficile eſt, quin quærendo inveſtigari poſſiet. Nor is a ſedulous Enquiry into theſe Divine Theories diſſonant from Piety, but it is really a Duty of Piety. For Chriſtianity is not like Muhammediſm, (d) that is afraid to be ſearch'd into. Old Errors paſs undiſcover'd, becauſe Men are afraid to look into them, being affrighted with that Maxim, Scrutator majeſtatis opprimetur à gloria. But they are worſe ſcar'd than they can be hurt by a pious ſearch into Divine Myſteries. Godlineſs requireth a ſedulous Enquiry into the great Myſtery of Godlineſs. If thou crieſt after knowledge, and lifteſt up thy voice for underſtanding: if thou ſeekeſt her as ſilver, and ſearcheſt for her as for hid treaſures: then ſhalt thou underſtand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God. But ſuch an Inquiſitiveneſs into Divine Myſteries there may be, which is not of the pious, and therefore not of the laudable, but of a criminal kind. And it is too poſſible, that there may be a Theology (touching the Godhead and the Perſons thereof) that declaimeth againſt, yet practiſeth an Inquiſitiveneſs into Divine Myſteries that is not of the pious kind. A Theology that preſcribeth Rules, Μὴ περιεργάζεσθαι τὰ σιωπώμενα, μὴ πολυπραγμονεῖν τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ, yet it ſelf maketh curious Theories, of which the Scripture hath ſaid nothing; with great Curioſity and Philoſophic Subtilty it ſpeculateth the (Scholaſtic) divine Eſſence, and by its Theories which are of kind and quality no better than School-philoſophy, it profaneth the Divine Myſteries, depraveth and dark'neth them by its Explications. At the rate that the old Ariſtotelian Philoſophy ſalveth the Phænomena of Nature, it explicateth the Divine Myſteries. And as ſome great Phænomena of Nature are now with great induſtry ſalv'd, but not without introducing a better ſort of Philoſophy than the Ariſtotelian: ſo the great myſterious Theories of the Chriſtian Theology may be competently well explained, but not without introducing a better kind of Theology than the Scholaſtic, which was the Theology both of the Arians and the Catholicks, and is the Theology which from ancient times prevaileth in the Church.

(c) Terent.

(d) Meritò ſuſpecta merx eſt, quæ ea lege obtruditur, nè inſpici poſſit. Grot.

The Origin of this ſort of Theology is from the Schools of the Philoſophic Pagans, whoſe Theology therefore, and its ſuppoſed Traduction from the Hebrews, we were oblig'd to take into conſideration in our Firſt Book, as alſo the Pagans Syſtem of the Univerſe of Rationals (their City of Gods and Men) and their Inſtitutions of Virtue, ſo to illuſtrate that Divine Excellency, which is peculiar to the Religion of Chriſtians. Of theſe matters we have given a large Account, becauſe this Firſt Book is deſign'd to be an Inſtitution of the knowledge of the Pagan-Theology, which ſort of Inſtitution is very much wanting in the Commonwealth of Learning. For none can have cauſe to repent of employing his Time and Studies in converſing with this Learning of ancient Times. Young Students in Theology ought to be furniſh'd with an Inſtitution of it, that they may be converſant in the Pagan-Theology with caſe and pleaſure, and to their great emolument. The Learned alſo are not without need of it; for the Pagan-Theology is generally miſunderſtood; and ſo it was in the elder times, when it was a Fountain of Evils to the Church both in Doctrine and Worſhip. Without underſtanding the Pagan-Theiſm the Scriptures cannot be underſtood, nor any of our Diſcourſes touching the Trinity of the Chriſtian Religion. A principal Vice in the Chriſtian Church, both in ancient and latter times, is a criminal philoſophic-paganizing the matters of the Chriſtian Theology. Which Vice ought to be cur'd, that Chriſtians may duely Chriſtianize in their Theology (which would be a great ſtep to a right underſtanding the myſterious Theories of it) and this beſt Method we take for the Cure of it. We ſhew the true nature of the philoſophic Pagan Theology, and that as ſuch it conſiſteth of τὰ ἀλλότρια, things heterogeneous and alien from the Sanctity of our Religion: but withall we ſhew, that the Theology of the Pagans (both popular and philoſophic) is not without its noble parts, that ſeveral Branches of it are a great Confirmation of the Truth of the Theories of the Chriſtian Religion, and an Antidote againſt the Atheiſm and Deiſm of the Times wherein we live. But chiefly our account of the Affairs of Paganiſm (both in our firſt and ſecond Book) and our large Confutation of Van Dale's Book of Oracles, hath reſpect to the Deiſts of theſe Times, who pretend to believe the Exiſtence of a God, but will by no means believe that there is a Devil, the belief of whoſe Exiſtence is alike fundamental to Chriſtianity as the belief of the Exiſtence of God, and whoſe Exiſtence is ſo manifeſt in the Affairs of Paganiſm, that it is uſually matter of obſervation to Travellers in Heathen Countries. (e) It is impoſſible (ſaith a late Traveller) to force an (Eaſtern) Indian to curſe the Devil. And if he is preſs'd to do it, he will anſwer, He is not to curſe one that hath done him no harm.

(c) Dr. Gemelli's Voyage round the World, Par. 5. L. 2. c. 1.

In our Second Book we conſider the Agreement and Difference between the Chriſtians and the Pagans touching the Monarchy of the Univerſe, and the principal Matters in diſpute between them; which are certain Debates, that concern the Syſtem of the Univerſe, namely, whether the Pagans mundane Syſtem, or our Catholic Church, is the true City and Kingdom of God? And whether the true God was an Intrinſic of their Theopolity? The Reſolution of which Queſtions ſheweth, how far the Pagans were from being his Worſhippers, and how far they were ignorant of him; that our Heathen ſtate is deadly, and the Pagano-mundane Empire is the Kingdom of Darkneſs. The proof whereof from the Pagan Theology is an Atteſtation of the Heathen World to the Truth of one half of the Chriſtian Religion; and it ſheweth the neceſſity of introducing into a ſinful World a Saviour-King, his Kingdom and ſaving Religion.

For the right underſtanding and illuſtrating the Theology of the Godhead, we have introduc'd into Theology a ſort of Learning, which we have called Nobility-Learning, that hath been of great uſe in the Inveſtigation and Deſcription of that Idea of God (an Idea of immenſly difficult Inveſtigation and Deſcription) which our Third Book repreſenteth. With this Idea of God many Theories are connex'd touching his Religion and God-ſervice, his original Law and Kingdom, his Creation and the final Cauſe thereof. And with theſe Theories we have combin'd the Theory of a Præ-exiſtence of Souls, which ſome will greatly diſguſt. But we have done it, not out of Vanity, but meer Neceſſity, not knowing how to give an Account of an univerſal Lapſe of human Souls from any other Hypotheſis; nor do we know any other Hypotheſis de origine animæ, that tolerably ſuiteth with the Nobleneſs of our Religion. They that ſuppoſe themſelves furniſh'd with a better Hypotheſis, might do well to communicate it: but they muſt not think, to give an Account of the now original Evils of Souls meerly from the Hiſtory of Adam in his terreſtrial Paradiſe, as we have plainly prov'd in our Account of the criminal and penal Evil, which is involv'd in the Lapſe of Mankind. Every Man that will converſe with his own Soul, may be competently well ſatisfied, that he came into this World both an Heaven-born Soul and a lapſed Soul (that needeth a Renovation into the divine Image); which is an Hypotheſis ſo far from being diſſonant from the general ſenſe of Chriſtians, that they implicitly aſſert it in almoſt all their Books of Piety; ſo that it may be counted a branch of their Theology.

Our Fourth Book repreſenteth an Idea of the Holy Spirit; from which Idea, conjoined with the Idea of God, it is manifeſt, that by long and ſedulous Contemplation a great Improvement is made in the Theology of the Godhead. And it may be hop'd, that in proceſs of time contemplative Divines will make a greater Improvement, and go to greater heights in this divine Learning, than thoſe to which we have proceeded. With this Idea of the Holy Ghoſt, An Idea of the Nature of the Holy Scriptures is connex'd, which demonſtrateth, that they are Aliens from Scholaſticiſm, and conſequently our Theology of the Godhead and the Perſons thereof ought to be of another kind and Character than Scholaſtic. This Character of the Scriptures, is ſuch a Preſcription againſt the Articles of the Scholaſtic Theology, as the ancient Writers alledge againſt Hereticks; for the Scriptures are not of Scholaſtic Interpretation. It is a Teſt or Touchſtone, whereby to diſcern, what Dogmata in Theology are genuin, and what are ſpurious; for thoſe which ſuppoſe the Holy Scriptures not to be of an holy-popular but a Scholaſtic kind of ſenſe, are of the illegitimate kind. Holy People may try Doctrines (as the Palate trieth Meats) by the holy Life which is in them.

64

Our Fifth Book beginneth with ſuch an Idea of the Law of Nature, as promiſeth an univerſal Satisfaction. For it giveth not a lame and mutilate, but a duely plenary Account thereof (in the various Conſiderations of it) clearly explicateth and defineth the principia juſti & decori, proceedeth upon the true Grounds of Law and Morality, and ſheweth, that thoſe Grounds are as plain and certain as thoſe of the Mathematicks. From the Law of Nature, as it is the Law-Religion of the Law-Religioniſts, we deduce the natural and legal condition of Mankind, whence the Deiſts of our Times, that adhere to Natural Religion againſt the Chriſtian, may diſcern the ſtate that they are in; for if they are not Atheiſts, but a ſort of Religioniſts, they are the Law-Religioniſts, whoſe Religion is ruinous to their Soul-intereſts; and if that will not ſufficiently ruin them, the Religion of their Saviour will do it, from whom they are Apoſtates. His ſaving Religion we have deduc'd from the Beginning of the World, and conſidering it under the various Names and Notions of it, we have given an Account of its Nature and Excellency, which more eſpecially appeareth in the Nobleneſs of the Faith of his genuin Religioniſts, and the Tranſcendence of their Virtue and Piety.

Our Sixth Book repreſenteth an Idea of our bleſſed Saviour (connex'd with an Idea of the Chriſtian Trinity) about whoſe Perſon there have been, and are, more Diſputes and unchriſtian Conteſts in the Chriſtian Church, than about all other Articles of Religion put together. It may juſtly ſeem ſtrange and be ſurprizing, that in all theſe innumerable Conteſts which have been in former or latter Ages, all the contending Parties ſhould miſtake his true Idea: yet there is nothing more evident and certain than that they have miſtaken it. For ſeeing God is certainly The imperial Eſtate of the Kingdom of God, what can this definitive Name The Son of God ſignifie, but The imperial Son of this high and holy imperial Eſtate (The imperial Saint of God-kind of Son) The Perſon of the Meſſiah? And what can this definitive Name Meſſiah the Prince, A Prince and a Saviour, The Prince of Life, ſignifie, but that our Saviour is The Prince the Son, and is the ſame unto God, as the Prince the Son in an Empire (or Kingdom) is to the King the Father? His true Idea may be underſtood from that Meſſage which the Inga or King of Peru ſent by his Army to the People of Chile, (f) that they came not to ſpoil them of their Lands or Goods, but only to oblige them to own the Sun for their God, and the Inga for his Son and their Lord. The Inga ſuppos'd the Sun to be God, himſelf the imperial Son of the Sun, and therefore The Lord the Son and Lord of all. In ſuch ſence our Saviour is the Son of God, and this is his true Idea. But altho' this Idea is ſelf-evident, yet being diſſonant from the ſence of all Parties, it will probably (in reſpect of ſome Branches of it) give Offence to all Parties. For the diſagreeing Parties ſuppoſe, that there is no Medium between God and Creature, and accordingly they are divided in their Opinion, one Party creaturizing the Son of God, the other ſuppoſing him to be God, ſo as to be The eternal almighty God. Both which Idea's are ſinful Extravagancies, widely diſſonant from his true Idea who is God, but it is only as The imperial Son of God. And this the diſagreeing Parties ought to have conſidered, that it is one thing to be God definitively and abſolutely, and another thing to be God as the imperial or Creature-tranſcendent Son of God, and only as ſuch; which is the true Idea of our Saviour. By this Hypotheſis his true Divinity, Deity or Creature-tranſcendence of Perſon is ſecur'd, and the Chriſtian Trinity and Religion is conſtituted: but becauſe this imperial Son of God is neceſſarily An imperial Saint of God-kind of Son, and the Perſon of the Meſſiah (who is eſſentially Deus-homo) this therefore is one branch of our Hypotheſis, That there is no Abſtract Logos or incomplex Son of Eternal Generation. Which branch of our Hypotheſis will probably give offence to the generality of Divines and Chriſtians.

(f) Ovalle's Relation of the Kingdom of Chile, B. 3. c. 2.

Some will object, that the denying an Abſtract Son or incomplex Logos of Eternal Generation, is very prejudicial to the Honour of our bleſſed Saviour: which is a matter of ſo great regard, that it muſt be acknowledg'd, that it were far better that ſuch an one as I had never been born, than that I ſhould in the leaſt degree diminiſh his Honour or eclipſe his Glory. But this Objection is wholly groundleſs; for altho' our Hypotheſis diſcardeth the Scholaſtick's extravagant and irreligious deifyings of their own Idea's, yet it ſtrenuouſly aſſerteth and proveth the Deity or Creature-tranſcendence of our Saviour's Perſon (both in his primary and his officiary Capacity, both native and factive) and thereby entitleth him to the divine Honours in conſort with God the Father. In which divine Honours an Abſtract Son or Logos of Eternal Generation ought to have no ſhare. For ſuch a Son or Logos is not the Perſon of our bleſſed Saviour, nor of any concern to us or our Religion, but is only a Scholaſtic Idea, whoſe Deity cannot be ſuppos'd without doing heinous Diſhonour unto God, and bringing ruinous Prejudices and Miſchiefs upon the Chriſtian Trinity and Religion. And ſuch an honouring a ſuppoſed Son of God, our Saviour will not count a doing him Honour.

It may be objected, that our Hypotheſis, which denieth an Abſtract Son or Logos of Eternal Generation, is contrary and repugnant to (Judicium Eccleſiæ Catholicæ) the Judgment of the Catholic Church, to which we owe great reſpect. And we do indeed owe ſuch reſpect thereto, that we ought not to diſſent from it, but upon ſuch Grounds and Reaſons that will juſtifie our Diſſent, make it neceſſary, and are of force, to outweigh the reſpect that we owe to any meer human Authority whatſoever. Such Reaſons our Hypotheſis proceedeth upon, Reaſons ſo many and ſo mighty, that they cannot deceive us, unleſs mathematical Evidence and Certitude can deceive us. And as divine Authority cannot be alledg'd, ſo no humane Authority may be alledg'd againſt the Certitude of Demonſtration.

Some will probably object the Crime of Hereſie againſt our Hypotheſis, that in denying an incomplex Son or Logos of Eternal Generation, it denieth much of the Catholic Faith. But nothing of the Catholic Faith is denied by this branch of our Hypotheſis ſave only the Scholaſtic Theology (commonly called the Catholic Faith) which being falſe and illegitimate (as we have plainly demonſtrated) a Doctrine cannot be therefore Hereſie or Infidelity, becauſe it is repugnant to this human Scholaſtic Faith. Which is not of kind and quality the Chriſtian and Divine Faith, but heterogeneous and exotic; nor do the Matters of it (being Scholaſtic) appertain to the ſaving Faith of Chriſt's Believers; nor are they eſſential to his being The Chriſt, the belief whereof is the Summary of the Chriſtian Faith. But becauſe the Chriſtian Trinity is eſſential to his being The Chriſt, the Anti-Trinitarians are concern'd, to vindicate themſelves from the Crime of Hereſie, wherewith they are charg'd by the Church. And becauſe God the Father's Scriptural Monothe-iſm is an Article alike fundamental as our Saviour's being The Chriſt, therefore the Church is concern'd, to vindicate herſelf from the Charge of Hereſie, which the Anti-Trinitarians recriminate upon her and her Scholaſtic (Catholic) Faith. Which, whether it be liable to the Charge of Hereſie or not, is certainly ſo very criminal, that the Church is oblig'd, not to impoſe it, but diſown it.

With great Aſſurance we may diſown the Scholaſtic Explications of the Trinity: but we may not be ſo dogmatical and decretory touching all our own Explications thereof, till they have paſs'd the Cenſure of the learned World. Great things are not begun and perfected at one time. There may be ſomething of Obſcurity, Difficulty, Falſity, in our Explications, which I am not aware of. Which therefore I propoſe to the Conſideration of all learned and holy Men (with all due deference to their Perſons and Judgment) to be examin'd and cenſur'd (according to their deſert) as being prepar'd thankfully to receive their Inſtructions, Admonitions, Reproofs, and to rectify any thing that they ſhew to be amiſs. And ſeeing I have no worldly or ſelfiſh Intereſt, but deſign only to ſerve the Intereſt of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs, I may not doubt, but that they will concur in my Deſign, aſſiſt my Explications of divine Myſteries, and be my Fellow-helpers to the Kingdom of God. And of the Sons of Profaneneſs it may reaſonably be hop'd, that henceforth they will forbear ſcoffing at the Trinity as a Myſtery, ſeeing from a due Explication thereof it appeareth, to be the moſt venerable religious Myſtery that the Mind of Man can contemplate, and ſuch a Myſtery which could never enter into the heart of Man to invent or excogitate: Which therefore argueth the Chriſtian Religion to be of divine Original, no Effect of humane Artifice or Impoſture, (or, to ſpeak in the Courtly Language of theſe Times, of any Prieſtcraft;) Our Explication alſo of this divine Myſtery, appeareth to be true and legitimate from the Coherence and Conſiſtence of the whole of it; for Lies do not well hang together.

But ſome things may be really conſiſtent and coherent, that yet do not ſeem well to hang together: Of which there is an inſtance in this Book, which diſcourſeth of ſeveral Matters of Natural Philoſophy that occur in the Moſaic Hiſtory of Paradiſe, yet it affirmeth of this Moſaic Hiſtory, p. 461. that there is no Natural Philoſophy in it. But of this Affirmation the meaning is not, that there is no matter of Natural Philoſophy in the Moſaic Hiſtory; but, that Moſes doth not treat of ſuch Matters as a Natural Philoſopher, but as a Prophet of God. Of this the Reader ought to be advertiſ'd, and of another thing alſo that occurreth in this Book; which is, a Repetition of ſome Citations (ſometimes out of Choice, and ſometimes from a Failure of Memory): But theſe Repetitions are ſo ſmall and ſo few, that a Reader muſt be very much wanting in Candor and Good-nature, if he inſiſteth upon them as any conſiderable fault. Touching theſe Citations, all poſſible Care hath been taken, that they be true and legitimate. And becauſe in Citations the Senſe of Authors is uſually miſrepreſented, therefore (ſo often as it can be done without inconvenience) the cited Author's own Words are here ſet before the Reader's eyes; which is not a little to his Advantage: For ſo by reading one Book (in ſome degree) he readeth a great number, and becometh acquainted with Books of ancient Learning, which ought to be reviv'd in our time.

But all human exotick Learning is here made uſe of only to ſerve the Chriſtian Learning, which cannot be promoted otherwiſe than in Conſort with the Chriſtian Life. Whence, in great part, this Book conſiſteth of Chriſtianity in re practicâ, as being deſign'd to promote not meer Notional Learning, but (that which is far better than the beſt of ſuch Learning) Virtue and Piety, and ſuch Virtue and Piety which is ſaving to the Souls of Men, which conſtituteth regenerate and ſanctify'd Chriſtians (the only Heirs of Salvation) and is not to be found in unregenerate Humanity. Such a Piety (not an empty Surface thereof) ought to ſound from all our Pulpits, and a Chriſtian Church muſt not be alien from it in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, or Life.

ERRATA that (for ſeveral Reaſons) could not well be corrected by a Pen.

PAge 23. Column 2. Line 21. read ען אזל. p. 29. c. 2. l. 27. r. Subvection. p. 79. c. 1. l. 40. r. θεωρητικοί. p. 72. c. 1. l. 67. r. συνθήματα. p. 142. c. 1. l. 38. r. the Platoniſt. p. 155. c. 2. l. 2. r. ἀῤῥενόθηλυς. p. 217. c. 1. l. 12. r. Excommunication. p. 300. c. 1. l. 32. r. συνήθειας. p. 388. c. 1. l. 1. r. ישמו הוא. p. 394. c. 2. l. 40 r. προσάσουσιν. p. 578. c. 2. l. 40. r. ἐκπομπῇ. p. 626. c. 1. l. 36. r. Improbabilities. p. 776. c. 1. l. 55. r. Aſſimilation. p. 852. c. 1. l. 9. r. A Third ſort of Arguments. p. 861. c. 1. l. 5. r. Intellectualiſts. Some Engliſh words ſlightly miſ-ſpell'd ſeem not to need a Correction: as, p. 7. incompatible. p. 107. contumelius. p. 360. Phiſiology. p. 414. unregenrate. p. 434. alloted. p. 636. ſingnifieth and exhilerate. p. 640. opperative. p. 690. parriſide. p. 723. Agreebly. p. 755. Intelligennt. p. 762. Teſtamens. p. 794. Eleaſinian. p. 814. Ungdodlineſs. A Repetition there is of a, the, and new, p. 17, 683, 828.

In the Margin, p. 102. at (r) r. Solem mundi. p. 122. at (l) r. καθήκει. p. 169. at (b) r. ἥλικον. p. 579. at (n) r. magnificus. p. 652. at (a) r. Virtutes. p. 656. at (s) r. totus. p. 682. at (l) r. κωμὰς. ibid. at (t) r. εἰς ἡμᾶς. p. 752. at (f) r. dicenti. p. 723. at (o) r. Ἀχέροντος. ibid. at (r) r. ἃ διδάγει. p. 774. at (r) r. ſempiternas. p. 833. at (e) r. cogitare. p. 851. at (w) r. formam. p. 864. at (y) r. ἀρετὴν.

THE

THE Goſpel Theiſm Explained,
AND THE DIVINITY
OF THE
CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

BOOK I.

An Idea of the Pagan Syſtem of the Univerſe.

The INTRODUCTION.

Of the firſt Theory in Theology. Of the Pagans One Intellectual Head of the Univerſe, and of their One Univerſe. Of the various Conſiderations thereof.

THE principal and moſt eminent Branch both of the Chriſtian and Pagan Theology (wherein the goodneſs of the one and the badneſs of the other chiefly appeareth) is their diſſonant Doctrine, περὶ τῆς συστάσεως τοῦ παντὸς, touching the Conſtitution of the Univerſe, which ought to be the firſt Theory in Theology, and is ſo in the Pagan Theology. For the ſeveral Sects of Philoſophic Pagans agree in the uſual diſtribution of Philoſophy (a) into Theoretic and Practic (Philoſophy as to the matter of Theory and the matter of Practice, commonly ſo call'd;) and in the Theoretic part of Philoſophy (Phyſiology, Metaphyſicks, or the Philoſophic Pagans Theology) ἡ τῶν ὅλων φύσις, the nature of the Univerſe and the things thereof is contemplated in the firſt place, the practic part of Philoſophy being built upon certain Maxims, δόγματα, or decretory Sentences touching the Conſtitution of the Univerſe. This their Philoſophy in both the conſtitutive parts of it is an Heathen kind of Philoſophy, which is no ſmall diſparagement; but their Method of philoſophizing was Rational and Judicious, and ought to be a pattern to Chriſtian Theologers. They look'd upon the Theory of the Conſtitution of the Univerſe as the firſt Fundamental Theory. (b) What is thine Art or Profeſſion? To be good (ſaith the Philoſophic Emperour.) And how can this be well effected but by certain Theorems, ſome concerning the Nature of the Univerſe, and ſome concerning the proper Conſtitution of Man. (c) Plato conſidering, that the knowledge both of Divine and Humane Things belongeth to Philoſophy, allotted one part of it for contemplating and treating of the Nature of the Univerſe (which is call'd, ἡ περὶ τῶν ὅλων φιλοσοφία, the Philoſophy touching the whole;) a ſecond part for treating of Humane Things; and the third part of Philoſophy is the Logical. It is ſaid, that this method of philoſophizing was the Indians, that a certain Indian at Athens ask'd Socrates, τί ποιῶν φιλοσοφοίη; what he was doing philoſophizing? Socrates anſwering, that he was inquiring, περὶ τοῦ ἀνθρωπίνου βίου, touching the matters of Humane Life; the Indian derided him, and told him, that none can have the knowledge of Humane Things, that doth not know, τὰ θεῖα, the things of the Gods, or the Divine. Philoſophers muſt contemplate in the ſame method that Phyſicians practiſe. (d) As Phyſicians deſigning to cure parts of the Body, firſt take care of the ſtate of the whole: So the nature of the whole muſt be firſt known, that we may ſpeculate humane things; for Man is a part of the whole. Good is two-fold; Ours and the good of the Univerſe: the latter is the principal and beyond the other, which is in order unto it. The Theory of the Conſtitution of the whole ought to be the firſt Theory, (e) becauſe (ſaith a Pythagorean) the knowledge of the divine and moſt excellent things is the beginning, and cauſe, and rule of Man's Felicity. This Method of philoſophiſing a Chriſtian Apologiſt learn'd from the Schools of the Philoſophic Pagans. (f) All things are ſo connex'd and link'd together, that Humane things are not to be known without a diligent ſearching into the things Divine, nor can a Citizen of a particular City underſtand his

(a) Gaſſend. t. 1. l. proœm. c. 1. & 9.

(b) Τίς σου ἡ τέχνη; ἀγαθὸν εἶναι. τοῦτο δὲ πῶς καλῶς γίνεται ἢ ἐκ θεωρημάτων, τῶν μὲν περὶ τῆς τοῦ ὅλου φύσεως, τῶν δὲ περὶ τῆς ἰδίας τοῦ ἀνθρώπου κατασκευῆς. M. Ant. l. xi. s. 5.

(c) Πλάτων μέντοι κατανοήσας, ὡς εἴη μιᾶς ἡ τῶν θείων καὶ ἀνθρωπίνων ἐπιστήμη, πρῶτος διεῖλε, καὶ ἔφη τὴν μέν τινα περὶ τῆς τοῦ παντὸς φύσεως εἶναι πραγματείαν· τὴν δὲ περὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων· τρίτην δὲ περὶ τοὺς λόγους. Ariſtocl. ap Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. xi. c. 3.

(d) Ibid.

(e) Ἀρχὰ καὶ αἰτία καὶ κανὼν ἐντὶ τᾶς ἀνθρωπίνας εὐδαιμοσύνας ἁ τῶν θείων καὶ τιμιωτάτων ἐπίγνωσις. Theag. ap. Stob. S. 1.

(f) Omnia ita cohærentia, connexa, concatenata ſunt, ut niſi divinitatis rationem diligenter excuſſeris, neſcias humanitatis; nec poſſis pulchre gerere rem civilem, niſi cognoveris hanc communem omnium mundi civitatem. Min. Fel. p. 125.

duty and behave himſelf aright, unleſs he underſtandeth the City of the Univerſe, and conſidereth himſelf as a Citizen thereof.

The Philoſophic Pagans (that were Theiſts) did ſo far contemplate the Univerſe aright, they acknowledg'd one intellectual Head of it preſiding over it; for by Jupiter the Pagan Theologers underſtand (g) that moſt ancient and princely Mind, which all things follow and obey, the common Father of Gods and Men, the Maker and King of all. And as they acknowledge this one intellectual Head of the Univerſe, ſo they ſuppoſe, that there is but one Univerſe, not ſuch an Univerſe as the Epicureans imagin'd, who talk'd of infinite incoherent Worlds in infinite Space; which may be call'd, an Univerſe of Worlds; but is not ſo an Univerſe, as to be one total mundane Syſtem (or Syſtematical Frame,) but only the Aggregate of incoherent Severals, A-Syſtematical multitudes of particular Syſtems and Comprehenſions; whereas this was the Senſe of the Pagan Theiſts touching the Univerſe; that it was ſo an Univerſe, as to be one total mundane Syſtem, the one total mundane Syſtem, beſides which there is no other World, according to that commonly receiv'd Maxim of theirs, (h) ὅτι εἷς κόσμος, καὶ ἓν τὸ πᾶν, that there is but one World and one Univerſe. But this one World or Univerſe may be one Syſtem made up of ſeveral ſubordinate Syſtems involving and comprehending one another in greater and greater Orbs and Comprehenſions, and ſo may conſiſt of multitudes of particular mundane Syſtems, every one of which may not improperly be call'd a World, according to that of Proclus, (i) One Polity is a comprehenſion of many Polities, and one World of many Worlds. Such an one World is that plurality of Worlds which Plutarch diſputeth for, which is not diſſonant from the Senſe of the Stoicks whom he oppoſeth, and would ſeem to differ from them, yet without diſagreement. They argu'd thus for the Unity or Singularity of the World: There is but one Jove, one Fate, one Providence, which could not be πλειόνων ὄντων κόσμων, if there were more Worlds than one. Plutarch refuſeth this Conſequence of theirs, and thus argueth againſt it. (k) What neceſſity is there, that there muſt be more Joves than one, if there be more Worlds? for why may not the God of the whole be ruler in chief in every one of theſe Worlds, having Mind and Reaſon, as he that is ſtiled by us, κύριος ἁπάντων καὶ πατήρ, Lord and Father of all? or what hindreth but that a multitude of Worlds may be all ſubject to the Fate and Providence of one Jove, himſelf inſpecting and directing every one, and imparting Principles and Spermatick Reaſons to them: For in our Region of humane things one Body is often conſtituted of ſeveral Bodies, as an Aſſembly, an Army, a Chorus. And is it not poſſible, that in the Univerſe ten, or fifty, or an hundred Worlds ſhould all be govern'd by one Reaſon, and be order'd in reference to one Principle? Such a plurality of Worlds is not at all diſſonant from the forementioned Maxim of the Pagan Theiſts, that there is but one Univerſe or one World, (as there is one intellectual Head preſiding over it;) which one Univerſe is capable of four ſeveral Notions or Conſiderations. For it muſt be conſider'd both Politically and Phyſiologically: And as it is conſider'd Politically, it may be conſider'd both as it is the Pagans Univerſe of Rationals, and as it is their Univerſe of Gods, which is not abſolutely the ſame with their Univerſe of Rationals.

The Univerſe was politically conſider'd by the Pagan Theologers; for they ſuppos'd it, to be a mundane Political Syſtem, City, Monarchy or Polity Imperial, having the forementioned intellectual Head preſiding in it, and over it, as an Imperial Potentate. But they conſider'd it alſo Phyſically or Phyſiologically, ſuppoſing it to be an Animate Syſtem or Fabrick, a Mundane Animal; and the forementioned intellectual Head was conſider'd as the Mundane Syſtems, Animative Genius (Mind or Soul,) yet ſo as to be alſo the Imperial Head of the Mundane Monarchy. So the Zeus or Jupiter of their Theology (which is God in the Pagan Notion and Expreſſion) is ſaid to be (l) βασιλεὺς θεῶν, the King of the Gods, and θεὸς θεῶν, God of the Gods, (as he is ſtil'd in Plato;) and ſo Plutarch (who ſometimes diſtinguiſheth the true Jupiter (m) from the Jupiter Homericus, yet) ſaith of Homer, τὸν τῶν ἀρχόντων ἄρχοντα θεὸν, ὕπατον κρειόντων προσεῖπε, he ſtiled that God, who is the Prince of Princes, the higheſt of Rulers. And Ariſtotle (who allotteth τὸν ἀνωτάτω τόπον, the higheſt place, the Heavens, to the Divinity) thus argueth for the Monarchy of the Univerſe;

> Τὰ δὲ ὄντα οὐ βούλεται κακῶς πολιτεύεσθαι,
> Οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη, εἷς κοίρανος.

The Syſtem of Beings is not willing to be ill govern'd; according to Homer, the Government of many is not good; therefore there is one Prince or Monarch of all. The Zeus or Jupiter of the Pagan Theology was alſo of the ſecond conception; for apud Theologos Jupiter eſt Mundi Anima (ſaith Macrobius) Jupiter, with the Theologers, is the Soul of the World, ſuppos'd to be a Vital Principle diffus'd and diſpread through all, as well as an Imperial Power over all. So Porphyry declareth the Senſe of the Greek Theologers. (n) By Zeus the Greeks underſtand the Mind of the World, which framed all things in himſelf, and containeth the World. The Nous of Anaxagoras (who was himſelf call'd Nous for his Dogma) is of affinity with this Notion; for his Maxim was, (o) that Mind being imperial and unmingled with any thing, ordereth all things, pervading and paſſing through all things. Nous or Mind might be firſt introduc'd by Anaxagoras into the Phyſiology of the Greek Philoſophers of the Ionick Succeſſion, although * Mind was a Principle in the Greeks Religion long before Anaxagoras's time. Anaxagoras was a Naturaliſt, not a Religioniſt, ſuch as the Phyſiologizing Pagan Theologers were, (and therefore his Solitary Mind, notwithſtanding its Affinity with, is different from their Mind of the World:) but he choſe to phyſiologize, not after the method of his Predeceſſors, that were Materialiſts, and acknowledg'd no other Subſtance beſides Body; but agreeably to that great Principle of popular Pagan Theology, a Principle that all wiſe men agree in (as Plato ſaith in his Philebus,) that νοῦς ἐστὶ βασιλεὺς οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, Mind is the King of Heaven and Earth.

(g) Κάλει τὸν μὲν Δία νοῦν πρεσβύτατον καὶ ἀρχικώτατον, ᾧ πάντα ἕπεται καὶ πειθαρχεῖ. M. Tyr. Diſſ. 29. Εἰς οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἐκλαμβάνουσι τὸν Δία, ἢ εἰς νοῦν πρεσβύτατον καὶ ἀρχαιότατον, κἀντεῦθεν καὶ σοφώτατον. Nyceph. in Syneſ. p. 356. Ὁ κοινὸς ἀνθρώπων τε καὶ θεῶν πατήρ. Muſon. ap. Grot. in Luc. 2. 49. Τῶν πάντων δημιουργὸς καὶ βασιλεύς. Ariſtid. orat. in minerv.

(h) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. l. 1. c. 2. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 14. c. 23.

(i) Τὴν μίαν πολιτείαν πολλῶν πολιτειῶν εἴποι ἄν τις ἀριθμόν, ὥσπερ καὶ τὸν ἕνα κόσμον πολλῶν κόσμων συνεκτικόν. In Tim. p. 39.

(k) De Def. orac. p. 425.

(l) Eugub. de per. Phil. l. 3. c. 13. & l. 5. c. 6.

(m) De Def. orac. p. 426.

(n) Τὸν Δία τὸν νοῦν κόσμου ὑπολαμβάνουσιν, ὃς τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ ἐδημιούργησεν, ἔχων τὸν κόσμον. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 9.

(o) Αὐτοκράτορα γὰρ ὄντα αὐτὸν καὶ οὐδενὶ μεμιγμένον πάντα φησὶν αὐτὸν κοσμεῖν τὰ πράγματα, διὰ πάντων ἰόντα. Plato in Cratylo.

* V. Marſham. Can. Chron. p. 261. Ed. Lipſ.

CHAP. I.

1. The Pagan Theologers ſuppoſe the Univerſe of Rationals, to be one Mundane City, Political Syſtem or Commonwealth, which is their prime fundamental miſtake. 2. Learned Chriſtians alike erroneous with the Pagans, 3. Of the ſeveral Orders of Rationals of which the Pagans Mundane City conſiſteth. 4. Of the Demonial Order and its neceſſary Exiſtence in the Univerſe according to the Pagans. 5. Of the Jewiſh Eſſens. 6. Of the Traduction of the Philoſophic Pagan Theology from the Hebrews. 7. A Review of it.

I. THE Goſpel Theiſm repreſenteth the Univerſe of Rationals as in a divided State, compriſing not only a great diverſity, but a contrariety of Kingdoms and Societies, of Laws and Government, of Eſtates and Conditions, of Lives and Religions, of Heads of Empire and Parties of Men and People; but the Pagan Mundane Theiſm (which doth not acknowledge any ſuch Society or City as the Church of God) repreſenteth the Univerſe of Rationals as of one piece, as one Mundane City, Polity Imperial, or Commonwealth, of which all Rationals are Members and Citizens. For as the Pagan Theologers agree, that there is but one World or Univerſe, ſo they agree, that this one World or Univerſe is (p) μία πόλις, one City, (q) the common City of Gods and Men, that are to live together with Juſtice and Virtue, in Concord and Happineſs. So they explain the Conſtitution of the Univerſe. (r) As God (or Jupiter) is to the World, ſo is a King to a City; and as a City is to the World, ſo is a King to God. (s) The reaſon of the whole is like reaſon ordinating a City, (t) μίαν ἐκ πάντων πολιτείαν συνυφαίνων, compoſing one Polity of all. In which Polity there are ſeveral διακοσμήσεις, ordinate Conſtitutions of Gods, the laſt whereof are the Gods that fill this ſenſible World, ſharing it amongſt them, and having their ſeveral Diſtricts, Lots or Prefectures in it, and perpetual Receptacles, by this method they compoſe the one and beſt Polity of the World. The Pythagoric Verſes thus explain τὴν σύνταξιν τοῦ ὅλου, the Conſtitution of the Univerſe. (u) The ſeveral kinds of rational Eſſences are plac'd in ſeveral ranks (the immortal Gods are the imperant party, and mortal Men the ſubject party, and the immortal Gods are of ſeveral ranks,) by which method they are diſcriminated and united; they are diſcriminated by their ſeveral Ranks, but come together, εἰς μίαν κοινωνίαν, into one Society. Mundus omnis ſocietate cœli & terræ conſtat, & eorum naturis quæ utrinſque ſunt; the Society of Heaven and Earth, and of thoſe Natures which are in both, maketh the World, ſaith Apuleius. So the Univerſe is defin'd by the Pagan Theologers, (w) The Syſtem of Heaven and Earth, the Syſtem of Gods and Men. The World is a Syſtem conſtituted of Gods and Men; as if you ſhould ſay, It is a City conſiſting of the party imperant and the party ſubject. (x) A City ſignifieth the Place and alſo the Inhabitants, the Society of the Citizens. The World is a City in both Senſes; a City conſiſting of the Gods and Men, the Gods being the party regent, and Men the ſubject. Theſe are of a Society, becauſe they communicate in Reaſon, which is by nature Law to all. So Cicero argueth; (y) that the Gods and Men having Reaſon in common have Right Reaſon in common, which is Law, and therefore Men are conſociate with the Gods in this reſpect; they are of one common Law, and conſequently of one Jus (comprehenſion of Right and Due) and theſe things being common to them, they muſt be accounted Citizens of the ſame City (Society,) unde univerſus hic mundus una civitas communis deorum atque hominum exiſtimanda, whence this Univerſe is to be thought one City of Gods and Men in common. So the Philoſophic Emperor argueth; (z) that Reaſon is common to all, that Reaſon which preſcribeth what is to be done, and what not; and if that, then Law; and if Law, then are we Fellow-Citizens; and if ſo, then are we partners in ſome one Commonwealth; and if ſo, then the World is as it were a City; for what other Commonwealth is it, that all Men can be ſaid to be Members of? Often and with great admiration he inſiſteth upon this Idea of his paganically conſtituted Univerſe (to which the ſtate of the Univerſe according to the Iſraelitical and Chriſtian Theiſm is diametrically oppoſite,) ſometimes ſtyling it (a) μεγάλη πόλις, this great City, ſometimes πόλις φίλη Διός, this lovely City of Jove, ſometimes his City and Country as a Man (my City and Country as Antoninus is Rome, as a Man the whole World,) and ſometimes affirming, that Men are Citizens, πόλεως τῆς ἀνωτάτης, of the ſupernal City, of which other Cities are as Houſes or Families. (b) Why ſhould not Man be called of City and Country κόσμιος Mundane? Why not the Son of God?

So the Pagan Theologers diſtinguiſh two Republicks; the one particular, wherein a Man is born, (c) alteram magnam & verè publicam, quâ Dii atque homines continentur; in quâ non ad hunc angulum reſpicimus, aut ad illum, ſed terminos Civitatis noſtræ cum ſole metimur; the other great and truly publick, comprehenſive of the Gods and Men, wherein we look not towards this or that Corner, but our City is commenſurate with the Circuit of the Sun: Which univerſal mundane Syſtem they call not only the City of God, but the Kingdom of God. (d) In regno nati ſumus, Deo parere libertas eſt. We are born in a Kingdom, it is our liberty to obey God. Much of diſcourſe there is amongſt them touching the Harmony of the Univerſe; and it muſt be acknowledg'd, that in this their mundane kind of Monarchy or Political Syſtem of Rationals (which is ſuited to their Demonolatry, and which neceſſarily laps'd them into Demonolatry) there is Harmony, Unity and Indiſtinction of things more than enough. For God and the Creature are not duly diſtinguiſh'd, but criminally confounded by deifying Creatures and introducing multitudes of inferiour Gods. The Kingdoms of good and bad Demons (or Angels) are not diſtinguiſh'd, but jumbled together and confounded (or rather in Paganiſm there is no acquaintance with the Polity of the holy Angels.) The Church and the World

(p) Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 24.

(q) Plut. adv. Stoic. p. 1063.

(r) Diotog. de regno.

(s) Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 39.

(t) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 5. c. 24. 21. & l. 6. c. 15.

(u) Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 238.

(z) l. 4. s. 4.

(a) l. 12. s. 36. l. 4. s. 23. l. 6. s. 44. l. 3. s. 11.

(b) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 9.

(c) Sen. de otio ſap. c. 31.

(d) Sen. de vit. beat. c. 15.

(w) Σύστημα ἐξ οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, τὸ ἐκ Θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων σύστημα. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. l. 1. c. 25. Ὁ κόσμος ἐστὶ σύστημα ἐκ Θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων· ὡς εἴ τις λέγοι, πόλις ἐστὶν ἐξ ἀρχόντων καὶ ἀρχομένων. Gat. in Ant. p. 352.

(x) Λέγεσθαι δὲ κόσμον καὶ τὸ οἰκητήριον Θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων. ὃν γὰρ τρόπον πόλις λέγεται διχῶς, τότε οἰκητήριον, καὶ τὸ ἐκ τῶν ἐνοικούντων σὺν τοῖς πολίταις σύστημα· οὕτως καὶ ὁ κόσμος οἱονεὶ πόλις ἐστὶν, ἐκ θεῶν καὶ ἀνθρώπων συνεστῶσα, τῶν μὲν θεῶν τὴν ἡγεμονίαν ἐχόντων, τῶν δὲ ἀνθρώπων ὑποτεταγμένων, κοινωνίαν δ᾽ ὑπάρχειν πρὸς ἀλλήλους, διὰ τὸ λόγου μετέχειν ὅς ἐστι φύσει νόμος. Ar. Did. ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 15. c. 15.

(y) De Leg. l. 1. & 3. & Paradox. 2.

World are not diſtinguiſh'd, but confounded; or rather the Church is ſhut out of being, there being no place for any ſuch thing as the Church of God in the Pagan Syſtem. Heaven, Earth and Hell are not duly diſtinguiſh'd, but criminally confounded into one Monarchic Political Society, and they are ſtated as friendly conſpiring together. So the Stoicks ſay, (e) πάντα δὲ φίλων μεστὰ, all is full of Friends, of Gods firſt, next of Men by nature ally'd to one another. (f) All things are link'd and knit together, and the Knot is ſacred; they are co-ordinately conſtituted and conſtitute the ſame World: πάντα φιλὰ ἀλλήλοις, all things are mutually amical, (whence they thought themſelves ſecure from ſuffering any Diſaſters after Death.) And becauſe they ſuppos'd themſelves, to be by Nature and the Conſtitution of the Univerſe the Citizens of the Kingdom of God already, they could not be prevail'd with, (when the Goſpel was publiſh'd) to enter into the real Kingdom of God; nor could any one enter into it (according to their Maxims) without being guilty of the crime of Schiſm; for he muſt be (g) as an Hand or Foot cut off and diſſever'd from the Body, deſtroy the unity of the Mundane Body, ceaſe to be a part of the whole, and become an Apoſtem of the World. And becauſe their whole (or Univerſe) was an Univerſe of Heathen Gods and Heathen Men, if (as parts of the whole and Citizens of their great City) they look'd upon themſelves as oblig'd to take care of and preſerve the whole (as their Maxims taught them) they muſt neceſſarily think themſelves oblig'd to oppoſe and deſtroy the real Kingdom of God, which was oppoſite and deſtructive to their whole. Their Theory of the whole was their fundamental Theory, (h) the ground of their Morality and Practical Virtue, the Rules whereof are ſuch as naturally flow from theſe Pagan Principles. (i) This All is one (all things are combin'd into one amical Syſtem) every one is a part of this whole (this Heathen Univerſe of things) which is govern'd by the Will of Nature. All Rationals (the Pagan Jove, Pagan Demons, and Pagan Men) are one Alliance and Kindred. And Heathen Mankind (k) are God's Societiſts and Citizens, and the Univerſe is their City and Country. They ſuppos'd themſelves (as Fellow-Citizens with the Gods) to be no leſs than Celeſtial Citizens; which ſome of their Friends have alledg'd as a ground of that mighty power, which they pretended to, the right and power of making Gods. (l) Jus ſuffragiorum in Cœlis ipſis ſe habere putabant Gentiles (uti qui mundi concives eſſent,) neque Deos ipſos eorum conſortium rejecturos, quos illi unâ voce heic Apotheoſi dignos judicaverant. The Gentiles and the Gods being Fellow-Citizens of one World, they thought they had the right of ſuffrage in Heaven it ſelf; and that the Gods would not refuſe the Conſortſhip of thoſe, whom they with one voice pronounced worthy of an Apotheſis. This Vanity of theirs was not unhandſomly rebuk'd by Ageſilaus; when the Thracians honour'd him with Temples and Divine Honours, and ſent an Embaſſy, to ſignifie ſo much to him; he ask'd their Embaſſadors, if their Country had power to make Gods of Men? and they anſwering, it had; Go to then (ſaid he) firſt make your ſelves Gods, and then I will believe that you can make me a God.

II. The Heathen Hypotheſis touching the undivided ſtate of the Univerſe is of much larger extent than reputed Heathen Authors; it appeareth in the Writings of Philo, who by the moſt is reputed a Jew, by ſome a Chriſtian; but if he muſt be denominated from the main of his Sentiments, he ought to be call'd a Philoſophic Pagan, and accordingly he is call'd by Clemens, the Pythagorean Philo. Agreeably to the Senſe of the Pagans he calleth God (m) the Prince or Ruler of this great City. (n) Several times he calleth the World this great City, and he repreſenteth it as one great City in the ſame Notion and upon the ſame Grounds with the Pagans. (o) This World is a great City, having one Polity and one Law, the reaſon of Nature commandeth what is to be done, and forbideth what is not to be done. In commending the Law of Moſes he ſpeaketh the Language of a Philoſophic Pagan. Moſes's Law beginneth with the Creation of the World, (p) the World harmonizing with the Law and the Law with the World. A Man of the Law being ſtraitway a Coſmopolite or Citizen of the World, ordering his Actions according to the directive Will of Nature governing this Univerſe of things. God's Religioniſts indeed are in a large ſenſe Citizens of this lower World, they have a Duty to diſcharge as ſuch, and muſt not fail of a dutiful and virtuous correſpondence with Nature and common Providence; but the proper Deſign and Effect of the Moſaic Law was not to inſtate Men mundane Citizens at large, nor was it the proper Law of that eſtate of Life, nor was it the Law of (Mundane) Nature governing all things as ſuch; but it was the Law of that Imperial Majeſty, who governeth all things as Lawgiver of the Law of his Church. Nor do the truly Religious direct their Actions meerly to the directive Will of Nature governing this Univerſe of things (which is to be Infidels) but to the Law of their Eſtate in holy Society, which is paramount to that of meer Mundane Citizens. But becauſe a Mundane Citizenſhip and a great Mundane City carry a ſhew of Amplitude and Magnificence; Euſebius followeth Philo and the Philoſophic Pagans, and thinketh, that he honoureth God by ſtiling him (q) The King as of a great City the World. He ruleth the World (ſaith Euſeb.) ὡς ἂν μεγάλης πόλεως, as a great City, being both Lord, King and God. A learned Commentator on M. Antoninus calleth his reſembling the World to a City, (r) iconem pulcherrimam, (a moſt lively reſemblance) applaudeth his Author for uſing it frequently. And Lipſius is tranſported at the thoughts of a Mundane City conſiſting of the Gods and Men (having Reaſon in common as a common Law) and with the Philoſophic Pagans Diſcourſes about it. (s) Theſe are excellent things, and expreſs both the Dignity of the World and ours, as alſo our Duty and Office. It is a reſemblance which the Stoicks are much pleas'd with, and often uſe, as Seneca to Marcia; you are entring a City common to the Gods and Men. Cicero: This whole World is to be look'd upon as one City of Gods and

(e) Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 24.

(f) M. Ant. l. 7. s. 9. & l. 6. s. 38.

(g) Ibid. l. 8. s. 34. & l. 2. s. 16.

(h) Caſaubon. in Perſ. p. 290, 291.

(i) Omnia hæc unum eſſe. Ὅτι μέρος εἰμὶ τοῦ ὅλου ὑπὸ φύσεως διοικουμένου· ὅτι συγγενὲς πᾶν τὸ λογικόν.

(k) Sen. Ep. 94. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 24.

(l) De Religion. Gentil. p. 108.

(m) Τὸν ἄρχοντα τῆς μεγάλης πόλεως. De Decal. p. 513. ed. Gr. Paris.

(n) Τὴν μεγαλόπολιν. περὶ κόσμοπ. p. 3. περὶ μοναρχ. l. 1. p. 558.

(o) Ἡ μὲν γὰρ μεγαλόπολις ὅδε ὁ κόσμος ἐστὶ, καὶ μιᾷ χρῆται πολιτείᾳ, καὶ νόμῳ ἑνί. λόγος δὲ ἐστι φύσεως, προστακτικὸς μὲν ὧν πρακτέον, ἀπαγορευτικὸς δὲ ὧν οὐ ποιητέον. Περὶ Ἰωσήφ. p. 360.

(p) Ὡς καὶ τοῦ κόσμου τῷ νόμῳ, καὶ τοῦ νόμου τῷ κόσμῳ συνᾴδοντος, καὶ νομίμου ἀνδρὸς εὐθὺς ὄντος κοσμοπολίτου, πρὸς τὸ βούλημα τῆς φύσεως τὰς πράξεις ἀπευθύνοντος, καθ᾽ ἣν καὶ ὁ κόσμος διοικεῖται. Περὶ κοσμοπ. p. 1.

(q) Ὥσπερ μιᾶς τινος μεγαλοπόλεως τοῦ κόσμου βασιλέα. Pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 8, 9.

(r) Gat. in Ant. p. 75.

(s) Phyſ. Stoic. l. 2. Diſſ. 7. Sunt Pulchra, & dignitatem mundi exprimunt & noſtram. Itemque officium & munus. Imago eſt, quæ valde placita Stoicis, & paſſim uſurpant, &c.

and Men in common. Elſewhere: The World is as a common Houſe of the Gods and Men, or a City of both. I ſay again, theſe things are excellent, and ſublime; and who is not erected, as alſo poſſeſs'd with Reverence and Fear, when God and the Genii as about him, and above him, Inſpectors and Rectors are in his thoughts? And on the other ſide, who contemneth not Avarice, and diveſteth himſelf of ſordid Cares, when he incompaſſeth himſelf with the World as his City and Country? Seneca. We have not incloſ'd our ſelves within the Walls of one City, but with generous greatneſs of Mind have enlarg'd our ſelves to the whole World's Commerce, to give the more room for the Exerciſe of Virtue: Of all Virtue indeed, eſpecially Charity and care of Mankind. We are all the Citizens of one City. Some have their Eyes ſo dazled with the falſe Luſtre of Philoſophic Pagan Virtue, Bravery, and generous Sentiment, that they cannot diſcern the difference between an Holy Divine Republick and a Paganical Mundane Syſtem. Others, not looking beyond the ſhews and appearances of Truth, heedleſly entertain falſe Notions of the State of the Univerſe, and ſpeak the Language of the Pagan Theiſts irreconcileable both with the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Religion. Which is the beſt Apology that can be made for this Paſſage of Minucius Felix, (t) Deo una domus eſt mundus hic totus, to God this whole World is one Houſe; and for that other beforemention'd, that in order to Duty and Virtue every one muſt know, hanc communem omnium mundi civitatem, (this common City of all which is the World,) and for that (u) of Tertullian, unleſs his words may be underſtood in a large ſenſe) Unam omnium Rempublicam mundum agnoſcimus, We acknowledge one Republick of all, the World. There are many Paſſages in ſome late Learned Writers (Divines and others) that need this Apology; ſuch as theſe following. (w) The whole World is but one Commonwealth, whereof God is the Monarch. The End of all our Actions, the Univerſal Good is call'd, (x) The Good of the whole Univerſe, as it were one Corporation or Society. (y) All Rational Beings or Agents are and muſt be conſider'd together as naturally and neceſſarily conſtituting one Intellectual Syſtem or Society. —— Men are the finite parts of the Rational Syſtem, whereof God is the infinite yet ſympathizing Head. —— God and Mankind are the conſtituent parts of this Syſtem, (z) the Aggregate Body of Mankind ſubordinate to God as the Head of Rational Beings in this Natural Syſtem or Commonweal eſtabliſhed by Natural Law. (a) God having made the Heavens and the Earth, and divers other Creatures, not at all ſenſible of their common Happineſs, would alſo make ſome Beings, which might know him, and might make up one Body conſiſting of Rational Members. All Men are Members of this Body, ſo that it is neceſſary to their Happineſs, that all particular Men, as Members of this Body, conform their particular Wills to the Univerſal Will of God, that governeth the whole Body as the Head or Soul thereof. This Language (without conſidering the divided ſtate of the Univerſe) a learned Writer of the Laws of Nature uſually ſpeaketh. (b) The moſt ample Society of all Rationals, the City of God. The Syſtem of all Rationals, or the whole Natural City of God. The whole aggregate of Rational Beings, or the whole City, the Head whereof is God. The Syſtem of all Rationals, the Kingdom of God. God the Head and Father of Rationals, and other Rationals as his Sons. All Men, although they are not under the ſame Humane Imperial Power, yet are in the moſt ample City of God. In the City of God, or in the Univerſe, they are Subjects, that in an Humane City are Supream. This Law of Nature, care of the publick Good, is the Natural Law uniting all Rational Beings; the Summary of the Laws of Rational Nature, or of the City of God, which is the Aggregate of Mankind ſubordinate to God the Rector, his City conſtituted by the nature of it. The whole Syſtem of Rationals, that City the Head of which is God, the Members all his Subjects. So ſome build their Scheme of Politicks upon (c) the Divine Monarchy of the World (as they ſpeak) meaning thereby, (d) that the World is a Kingdom whereof God is the King, (e) and that Humane Commonwealths are by God's inſtitution parts of this Univerſal Kingdom. They that diſcourſe of Politicks, muſt be underſtood, to ſpeak in the uſual Senſe of Politicks; theſe Chriſtian Theiſts therefore in their Schemes of Politicks (of ſuch Law and Morality which is Politicks, and of Theo-Politicks) agree with the Pagan Theiſts in making the Univerſe of Rationals a City, Kingdom, Monarchy, or Imperial Polity in the uſual Senſe of Politicks conſiſting of the party imperant and the party ſubject, the Supream together with the Subordinate Rationals. They agree with them in making the Univerſe of Rationals one Mundane City, Commonwealth, and Polity Imperial: They agree with them in making Common Reaſon (which directeth to Common Good) to be the Common Law, which uniteth the Univerſe of Rationals into a City or Polity Imperial: And they agree with them in making degenerate Mankind, to be by nature in the ſtate of Society with God, the Citizens of the City of God, and the Subject-party of his Kingdom in the uſual Senſe of Politicks. In great degree therefore their Conſtitution of the Univerſe of Rationals is the Paganical, but with theſe differences; the Pagan Theiſts deify inferiour and ſubordinate Rationals, which theſe Chriſtian Theiſts do not; and they are much more curious than theſe Chriſtian Theiſts in diſtinguiſhing ſeveral Ranks and Orders in their Mundane City of Rationals.

III. Sometimes the Pagan Theologers make a diſtribution of three, and ſometimes of four Orders, ἐν λογικῷ διακόσμῳ, in their ordinate Conſtitution of Rationals. For (f) St. Auſtin from Apuleius and the Platonic Theologers thus repreſenteth the Polity of the Univerſe; Dii excelſiſſimum locum tenent, homines infimum, Demones medium. The Univerſe hath an higher, a middle, a lower part. The Gods have the higheſt place, Men the loweſt, the Demons are in the midſt. Their dignity of place is different, as they are of different excellency of Nature. To the Immortal Gods Plato allotted Heaven, as was fit for their Majeſty; and theſe Celeſtial Gods are partly viſible (ſuch as the Sun, Moon and Stars) and partly inviſible, which are diſcern'd by the Sagacity of our Mind, and from the ſeveral utilities of Life, which they are ſuppos'd to produce or take care of. In the Air between the Ether and the Earth there are certain divinæ mediæ poteſtates, Mediate Gods, or Divine Powers, which are ſaid to be ſubſervient Miniſters to the Gods, but the Preſidents and Superintendents of (t) p. 318.

(u) Apol. c. 38.

(w) Mr. Charnock. Diſc. of the Ex. and Attr. of God. p. 396.

(x) Eſſay in Morality. p. 18.

(y) Mr. Tyrrell Diſquiſ. of the Law of Nature. Pref.

(z) Idem ch. 1. p. 28.

(a) Monſ. Paſchal cited in the abovesaid Pref.

(b) Dr. Cumberl. de Leg. Nat. c. 7. p. 350. Ampliſſima omnium Rationalium ſocietas, Dei Civitas. p. 296. Syſtema omnium rationalium ſeu tota civitas Dei naturalis. p. 300. Totum aggregatum entium rationalium, ſeu integra civitas cujus caput eſt Deus. c. 4. p. 180. Syſtema omnium rationalium Regnum Dei. c. 1. p. 22. Rationalium caput ac patrem, alioſque rationales tanquam ejus filios. c. 5. p. 303. Homines omnes, etiamſi ſub eodem imperio humano non ſint, ſunt tamen in ampliſſima civitate Dei. c. 9. p. 388. In Civitate Dei ſeu Univerſo, ſubditi ſunt, qui in civitate humana ſunt ſummi. c. 2. p. 88. Lex naturalis uniens omnia entia rationalia. p. 235. Leges naturæ rationalis, ſeu civitatis Dei. c. 1. p. 28. Aggregatum humani generis Deo Rectori ſubordinatum illius civitatem naturâ ſuâ conſtitutam. In pro legem: totum Syſtema Rationalium, civitas illa cujus caput eſt Deus, membra omnes Deo ſubditi.

(c) Mr. Baxter, Holy Commonwealth; c. 3. Th. 26.

(d) Ibid. Th. 24.

(e) Ibid. ch. 5. initio.

(f) De C. D. l. 8. c. 14. Apuleius de Deo Socrat. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 5.

Θεῶν μὲν ὑπηρέται, ἀνθρώπων δ' ἐπιστάται. M Tyr. D*iſſ.* 26.

Men, of whom they are ſollicitous Curators and Guardians. The Gods Supra-demonial and Demonial are the Curators of Men, and Men are the Servers and Worſhippers of the Gods. Thus the three kinds or orders are ſtated as in Political Society, and link'd together in one Chorus and Harmony, the Father and Opificer-God ruling over all, (g) as Hierocles repreſenteth them. But ſometimes, as in his Comment upon the Golden Pythagoric Verſes, he calleth the whole middle Order the illuſtrious Heroes, taking the name Heroes in a large ſence, ſo as to comprehend the whole middle Order, which is uſually diſtinguiſh'd into Demons and Heroes, and Demons are diſtinguiſh'd into Demons native and factive or adventitious. When the middle Order is diſtinguiſh'd into Demons and Heroes, there is a quadripartite diviſion and gradual Subordination of rational Beings ἐν τῇ πολιτείᾳ τοῦ παντὸς, in the Polity of the Univerſe, (h) as Plutarch ſpeaketh. Who alſo applaudeth a diſtribution of Rationals, which he ſaith is Heſiod's, though no ſuch thing appeareth in Heſiod. (i) Heſiod (ſaith he) was the firſt that clearly and diſtinctly made a diſtribution of Rationals into four kinds: Gods, Demons good and many, Heroes and Men. (k) In the Air together with the Demons the Heroes cohabit, by which name they call the Souls of the Dead, that are ſignaliz'd by ſome Merit. Which Heroes are called Demons (factive) by many of the Pagan Theologers, (l) who diſtinguiſh an higher and more auguſt kind of Demons, that were never link'd to an human body, and a ſecond kind of Demons, Dii Manes the Souls of the Dead (for the unclothed Soul is ſaid to be a Demon) Soul-Demons that were Demon-Gods; for the making of which ſort of Gods the Romans had certain Sacra or Conſecrations, whereby the Souls of Men may be turned into Gods. The Men of the Golden-age in Heſiod when they departed this Life, became by the appointment of Jupiter Demons, ſuch a divine or demonial ſort of Powers as he deſcribeth, ἁγνοί, ἀλεξίκακοι, φύλακες θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων, Pure and Good, Patrons and Protectors of mortal Men, Overſeers of their Actions, Givers of Riches. And this officiary Dignity of theſe tutelar Demons, he calleth γέρας βασιλήϊον, a Royalty given them.

But although theſe diſtributions of the Univerſe of Rationals into three or four Orders are currant amongſt the Pagan Theologers, it muſt not be thought that they confine themſelves thereto; for ſometimes they deſcend to greater exactneſs in making diſtributions of the Gods and Demons, and thereby enlarging their Orders of Rationals. In a large Sence all their Men-ſuperiorities, or Rationals κρείττονες ἀνθρώπων, of ſupra-human kind, nature and condition, that were Objects of their religious worſhip, are called Gods; as in Ovid, Deus & melior natura are the ſame; and Cicero argueth, (m) eſt aliquid homine melius; eſt igitur profectò Deus. But in their enumerations of the Orders of their mundane Republick the name Gods is taken in a ſtricter Notion; for they are contradiſtinguiſh'd to the Demons and Heroes, and ſo they are contradiſtinguſh'd in the Golden Pythagoric Verſes, (n) where Hierocles hath miſtaken the meaning of καταχθόνιοι δαίμονες (the Terreſtrial Demons,) which doth not ſignifie Human Souls, but is the ſame with δαίμονες ἐπιχθόνιοι, Demons the Preſidents of earthly things; which Preſidentiary and tutelar Demons, together with the illuſtrious Heroes, are (in eſſence and in honour) Dii medioxumi, midling Gods in the Gentile Theology. But although the name Gods in theſe Golden Verſes, and in other uſual enumerations of the Orders of their Imperial Polity is taken in a reſtrict Notion, yet they uſe it in ſo general and comprehenſive a Notion, that it ſignifieth the All or Collective of the Secondary Gods (ſtrictly ſo call'd) together with their Head, King and Father (the Supream Deity,) the God of Gods, or higheſt God, as Hierocles ſpeaketh. But in ſome of their enumerations of the Orders of their Imperial Polity the Supream Deity (who is of it as the Principal Head and Regent Party thereof) is an Order by himſelf, diſtinct from all the inferior Gods; and in theſe enumerations there are four Orders of Rationals beſides Men. For ſo the Greek Theologers in Euſebius (o) diſtinguiſhing the Demons and Heroes and the Supream God from the Secondary Gods, make a diſtribution of Rationals into four kinds beſides Mankind. In the firſt place, they Segregate the Supream God, whom, they ſay, they know to be over all, and firſt of all, and God of all, the Father and King. In the next place they ſet a Second kind of Gods, the third place they allot to Demons, and the fourth to Heroes. This is the diſtribution of Rationals, that M. Tyrius maketh in his Account of the one Political Mundane Syſtem, in which, beſides the Supream God, there are three Orders of Subordinate Gods, that are concern'd in the Government of the World, whom this Writer calleth θεοὺς θεοῦ παῖδας καὶ φίλους, Gods the Sons and Friends of God. Conceive (ſaith he) that the great King remaining unmov'd giveth Law to the Subjects, the Law of their Safety and Well-being, the Conſorts of his Empire being many both viſible and inviſible Gods; ſome of which that are neareſt to him and immediately attend him, (p) are ſuch Kings that are next of Kin to the King, of the ſame Family and Table; others are their ſubſervient Miniſters; and thoſe of a third Rank are inferior to them. You ſee the Series and Order of Empire deſcending from God to the Earth.

Sometimes theſe Theologers deſcend to more than ordinary exactneſs in their diſtribution of the Demonial (or middle) Order, the whole of which is call'd Angels, Demons, Heroes, (q) yet oftentimes (ſaith Hierocles) we diſtribute the middle kind into three. That of the middle Order which is next to the Celeſtials we call Angels; that which is next to the Terreſtrials we call Heroes; that which is equidiſtant from both extreams, we call Demons, as Plato doth many times. (r) The name of Angels was not in uſe amongſt the Pagans in Plato's time, nor a great while after: But amongſt the later Pagan Theologers that liv'd ſince the times of Chriſtianity, there is frequent mention of Angels and Archangels: And a Divine of our own is of Opinion, that Hierocles by the Order of the immortal Gods underſtandeth the ſame with thoſe called in the Scripture Archangels; (ſ) for I find (ſaith he) that he giveth the name Angels to an Order next below them. According to this mode of Theologizing, Hierocles's Demons muſt be thought the Holy Angels, and his immortal Gods the Holy Archangels of the Scripture-Theology. But ſuch learned Men ought to conſider, that the confounding theſe two Theologies, the Scriptural and Paganical (h) Qu. Platon. p. 1001.

(g) De Fato p. 40.

(i) De Def. orac. p. 415.

(k) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 23.

(l) Plutarch. de plac. phil. l. 1. c. 8. de Def. orac. p. 421. Apuleius de Deo Socr. M. Tyr. diſſ. 27. Herald. in Arnob. p. 115. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 11. Viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 9. c. 11.

Quod homini præcellit Heros aut Dæmonium aut Deus id fuerit, neceſſum eſt, Selden. de D. Syr. proleg. c. 3.

(m) De N. D. l. 2.

(n) Windet. de vit. funct. p. 117. ed. 3. vid. Viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 21. Laert. p. 581. ed. colon. an. 1615.

(o) Pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 5. Εἰς γένη τέτταρα πάντα τὸν λόγον [ἔχοντα] διαιροῦντες πρώτιστα πάντων τὸν πρῶτον ἀφορίσαντες θεὸν εἰδέναι φασὶ τοῦτον εἶναι τὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσι. πρῶτόν τε ὄντα καὶ πάντων θεόν. πατέρα τε καὶ βασιλέα. μεθ' ὃν γένος τὸ θεῶν ὑπάρχειν δεύτερον, ἑπόμενον δὲ τὸ δαιμόνων, τὸ δὲ ἡρώων τέταρτον.

(p) Βασιλεῖς συγγενεστάτους, ὁμοτραπέζους αὐτοὺς καὶ συνεστίους. τοὺς δὲ τούτων ὑπηρέτας· τοὺς δὲ ἔτι τούτων καταδεεστέρους, διαδοχὴν ὁρᾷς καὶ τάξιν ἀρχῆς καταβαίνουσαν ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ μέχρι γῆς. Diſſ. 1.

(q) Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 41, 42. procl. in Tim. p. 290.

(r) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 247.

(ſ) The deſign of Chriſtianity. ſ. 3. Ch. 14. p. 154.

ganical is really an injury to both Theologies: That the order of immortal Gods in the Pythagoric Verſes certainly compriſeth the Supream God (elſe there would be no Precept in thoſe Verſes for worſhipping the Supream God): That the Order of immortal Gods in Hierocles differ at the rate of Gods from the Angelical or Demonial, and are diſtinguiſh'd (t) into ſeveral Ranks and Gradualities according to the gradual Subordination of the Celeſtial Orbs or Spheres (which are things incompatible to the Holy Archangels of our Theology:) That the Pagan Theologers, who treat of theſe Matters, ſubject the Order of Angels and Archangels to that of the Gods (the immortal Gods) according to that of Porphyry. (u) The Prieſts are analogous to the Archangels in Heaven, that look to the Gods whoſe Angels they are. In Porphyry and Jamblichus, who were great Magicians, of great familiarity with Spirits, and who talk of certain Notes or Characters, whereby they could diſtinguiſh the φάσματα or apparitions of the ſeveral ſorts of Gods, the four Orders of Rationals (Gods, Demons, Heroes, Human Souls) are diſtributed into theſe nine Claſſes. The inviſible Gods. The viſible Gods. The Archangels. The Angels. The Demons. The ſuperior or coſmical Archontes. The inferior or material Archontes. Heroes. Souls. In which Enumeration of nine Orders the Gods * are reckon'd diſtinct from Angels and Archangels, (w) as the Annotator upon Jamblichus obſerveth. The ſuperior Archontes are (x) κοσμοκράτορες, Prefects of this ſublunary World, that preſide over the Mundane Elements and Mundane things. The inferior Archontes preſide over the Terrene Matter and Terrene Material Things only. The Souls mention'd in this diſtribution are unclothed Souls, which are diſtinguiſh'd from the Heroes by their inferiority.

IV. The ſeveral Orders of Rationals which conſtitute the Pagan Mundane Monarchy or City Imperial (the Heroes only excepted) appertain to the original Conſtitution of the Univerſe. The middle Order of Demons doth not emerge upon any lapſe of Angels, ſuch as the Scripture-Theology ſuppoſeth, but is ſuppos'd by the Pagan Theologers, to be originally requiſite and neceſſary in the Polity of the Univerſe for many Reaſons. (1.) That all the Regions of the Univerſe may be full and repleniſhed with agreeable Animals and Rationals. For theſe Theologers conceive, that the ſeveral Orbs and Regions of the Univerſe are inhabited by agreeable Animals according to the Original and Natural order of Things; (y) that Heaven (which is called by Plato Fire) hath the Stars for its Inhabitants; the Ether (which is another ſort of igneous Nature or Element next under the Moon) is inhabited by Etherial Demons; that the Air (the next ſucceeding Region) is inhabited by Aerial Demons, and that the Element of Water is inhabited by an Aqueous kind of Demon, which Plato calleth ἡμίθεον (ſemideous) according to the Original and Natural Order of the Univerſe. Of the Aerial Demons Plato ſaith; Although they are near us, they are inviſible to us; they are of admirable Prudence, and of ſuch a kind as excelleth in Wit and Memory; they know all our Mind, and have a marvellous Kindneſs for any one of us that is Honeſt and Good, but hate one that is mighty bad. Theſe things are diſcours'd in his Epinomis with great ſerioūſneſs and zeal for his Religion, forbidding all innovation in theſe Matters, becauſe it would be an alteration of eſtabliſh'd Religion, and becauſe Mortal Nature cannot poſſibly know any thing certain concerning them. Yet thus much theſe Theologers pretend to know. (z.) That there are Demons in the Ether, Fire, Air and Water; that no part of the World is devoid ζώου κρείττονος θνητῆς φύσεως, of an Animate Nature more than Humane; that (according to their uſual Maxim) All things are full of Gods, and that there are Myriads of theſe Genii abroad in the World, which are ἀθάνατοι Ζηνὸς πρόπολοι, immortal Natures that have a Family Relation to Jove, and are his Houſhold-Servants; which is a groſly Paganical Mode of Theologizing, that repreſenteth their Polity as of kind and quality the Demonial, wherein the Aerial Demons have the ſtate and right of Citizens. But in this Paganical Mode of Theologizing, there is much of ſound Reaſon and Philoſophy (which is eaſily diſtinguiſhable from the impure Phantaſtry and Paganiſm that is in it;) for the Reaſon of Mankind contemplating the Univerſe cannot fail to pronounce it incredible, that this Mole-hill of the Earth (a) called by Pliny, Mundi punctus, ſhould be all the World; or that the Air and vaſt Etherial Regions ſhould be nothing better than a great Waſt or Solitude unfurniſh'd with Inhabitants, ſeeing the Earth, Sea and Rivers are all repleniſh'd with agreeable Animals. (2.) That there may be due Order amongſt Rationals (b) there muſt be τὰ πρῶτα, τὰ μέσα, τὰ ἔσχατα, the prime, the middle, and the laſt; ſo Nature gradually deſcendeth (without any wide leap) from the moſt excellent to the leaſt excellent by the middle Order. An appearance there is of great Order in the Pagans Mundane Polity (for in the ſame Proportion that Heroes tranſcend Men, the Gods tranſcend the Demons,) and in their Method of Religious Worſhip; (c) for they aſcend in the ſame orderly Gradation by which the Rational Beings of the Univerſe deſcend; aſcending gradually and orderly from the Gods that are near us to the more remote, proportionating their Honour κατὰ τὴν τάξιν, according to their Dignity, and referring ἐπὶ τὸν δημιουργικὸν αὐτῶν θεὸν τὸ σέβας, their Honour to God the Opificer of them. They put a difference between Sovereign and Subordinate Worſhip, and alſo diſtinguiſh'd ſeveral degrees of Subordinate Worſhip, and not only venerated one Supream Deity, but referr'd the honour of their Subordinate Deities to the Supream. So infinitely falſe is this Aſſertion of a late Writer, (d) That amongſt the Idolatrous Nations there is but an obſcure, ſcarce any Notice of a Supream Deity, nor are any Sacrifices made to him. So great a Conſonance there is between ancient Paganiſm and the Chriſtiano-Paganiſm, which aſſerteth that (e) Ultima reducuntur in Deum per media: Ideo mediantibus ſanctorum ſuffragiis Dei beneficia in nos diffunduntur. We have the Benefits of God by the Saints Mediation, agreeably to the Order of reducing the laſt things to God by the middle. (f) It is lawful to worſhip Angels and Saints with Dulia, or inferior Honour proportion'd to their Excellency. (3.) The Gods (ſaith Apuleius) are not contaminated

(t) Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 10. Tria ſunt genera Deorum; Dæmones, Intelligentiæ ſiderum, Dii Cœlicolæ cum ſummo Deo extra Cœli ſoliſque vias habitantes. Eugubin. de per. phil. l. 5. c. 2.

(u) Τοὺς μὲν ἱερέας ἀναλογεῖν τοῖς ἐν οὐρανῷ ἀρχαγγέλοις τετραμμένοις πρὸς θεούς, ὧν εἰσὶν ἄγγελοι. ap. procl. in Tim. p. 47.

* Quemadmodum Artifex non omnia quæ in animali ſunt, efficit oculos, ita neque ratio fecit omnia Deos: verùm alia quidem eſſe Deos ſtatuit, alia vero Dæmones ſequenti natura, poſt hæc autem Homines. Plotin. En. 3. l. 2. c. 11.

(w) p. 206. & v. p. 205.

(x) Jamblic. de myſt. p. 41, 49, 84. Liv. Galant. Chriſt. Theol. cum plat. comp. l. 6. p. 179, 182.

(y) Eugubin. de per phil. l. 8. c. 21, 27. Ficin. in plotin. p. 289. Nè regio foret ulla ſuis animalibus orba, Aſtra tenent Cœleſte ſolum formæque deorum Ovid.

(z) Alcin. Doctr. plat. c. 15. M. Tyr. diſſ. 26. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 18. &c.

(a) l. 2. c. 68.

(b) Hier. in aur. car. p. 17. M. Tyr. diſſ. 27. Saluſt. de D. & mund. c. 13.

(c) Ficin. Arg. in Dial. 7. de Leg. Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 10. Marcil. com. p. 347.

(d) Huet. Dem. Ev. pr. 9. c. 107. ſ. 3.

(e) Aquin. ap. Chemnit. exam. Conc. Trid. par. 3. p. 579.

(f) H. T. Abridg. of Chriſt. Doctr. p. 76. in expoſ. of 1. Command.

taminated with any handling of us, nor doth it beſeem the Majeſty of the Celeſtials, to manage the care of Humane Neceſſities; the Demonial Order therefore is neceſſary, for all matters of Service and Miniſtery to the Gods and of good to Men. (g) τὸ μὲν θεῖον ἐστιν ἡγεμονικὸν, διακονικὸν δὲ τὸ δαιμόνιον, The Order of the Gods is Imperial in the Polity of the Univerſe, the Demonial Order is Miniſterial, whence they are called ὀπαδοὶ θεῶν, the Followers and Servitors of the Gods; and they are diſtributed, (ſaith Proclus) according to the ſeveral Properties of the inmundane Gods, whoſe Followers they are. The Pagan Theologers would not believe, (h) but that if there are Demons, δηλονότι ϗ οὗτοι τοῦ θεοῦ εἰσιν, undoubtedly they are Gods Demons (his Servitors) and that we ought to give Credit, and to do Sacrifice to them according to the Laws, and pray that they may be propitious. (4.) The Demonial Order according to theſe Theologers is neceſſary for managing the Affairs of their Demonial Religion and Vertue, and for the felicity of their Souls. For not only the Chriſtian, but the Pagan Theologers themſelves derive their Religion from the Inſtitution and Diſcipline of Demons, to whom (i) they attribute the Management of the preſidency of their Oracles (which govern'd all their Religious and Civil Concerns;) the Affairs of Prophecy and Divination (that by Dreams, inſpiration of Prophets, entrals of Beaſts, Birds, Meteors, and the like Signs and Tokens of future Events) are alſo of their Management, and the Miracles done by the Magi are aſcribed to their agency. All theſe things are done by the appointment and Authority of the Gods, but by the Agency and Miniſtry of the Demons. So Plato ſaith in his Sympoſium. (k) By this Order all Vaticination cometh to Men, and the Sacerdotal Art about Sacrifices, Religious Rites and Inchantments, and all Divination and Goety. (l) Quorum adminiculis præcipuis Pythagoras enituiſſe dicitur, & Socrates Numáque Pompilius, & ſuperior Scipio, Hermeſque ter maximus, & Tyaneus Apollonius, atque Plotinus, auſus quædam ſuper hac re diſſerere myſtica. By whoſe aid (and inſpiration) Pythagoras, Socrates, Numa, and the Elder Scipio, gain'd their Vertue and Fame; as alſo Hermes Triſmegiſt, Apollonius Tyaneus and Plotinus, who hath diſcours'd certain abſtruſe things touching the Conjunction of theſe Genii with the Souls of Men. To this Demonial aid and inſpiration, the Thurgical Theologers aſcribe their ſublime ſort of Vertue and the Reduction of their Souls, according to that of Hierocles. (m) They raiſe us from a Terrene to a Divine Life. (n) But none can return to that of himſelf which is moſt Divine, unleſs he hath a Demonial Guide, who is to make a genuine Purgation of every Lover of the Gods, the firſt-fruit whereof is a Ceſſation of our connate Evils from Generation. Hence that Prayer in the Pythagoric Verſes.

Ζεῦ πάτερ ἢ πολλῶν τε κακῶν λύσειας ἅπαντας·
Ἢ πᾶσιν δείξαις οἵῳ τῷ δαίμονι χρῶνται.

Jupiter Father, either do thou thy ſelf looſe all Men from theſe Multifarious Evils: or ſhew them all what Demon is to be made uſe of for that purpoſe. A Paſtoral Office and eximious Paſtoral Vertues are attributed to this Order by Plato, who ſtileth them νομεῖς θεῖοι, Divine Paſtors, and (in his Politicus, and in his fourth of Laws alſo) he reporteth a Tradition, that in the Saturnian Golden-age, Mankind did not live under the Government of Men, but of a Diviner and better kind, the Demons. (5.) The Demonial or middle Order is neceſſary for matter of Entercourſe and Society between the Gods and Men, and to be Mediators between them. Θεὸς ἀνθρώπῳ οὐ μίγνυται, That which is a God is not approach'd by Men, but all Commerce and Intercourſe between the Gods and Men is by the Mediation of Demons, ſaith Plato in his Sympoſium. Who therefore ſtileth this Order, (o) The Interpreter and Carrier from Men to the Gods, and again from the Gods to Men; of the Supplications and Prayers of the one, and of the Injunctions and Rewards of Devotion from the other. As the Pagan Theologers have aſſign'd the Mediatory-Office to the Demonial Order, ſo their way of diſtinguiſhing this Order from the Supra-demonial Order of the Gods is, to repreſent them as in reſpect of their Place of Abode, their Temper of Mind and Conſtitution of Body, intermediate between the Gods and Men. They are of a middle Rank between the Gods and Men in reſpect of their place of Abode, (Heaven is the Region of the Gods, the Earth of Men, the Demons inhabit the ſublime Aerial place;) they have the Paſſions of the Mind in common with Men (Anger, Pity, and ſuch more) immortality of Body in common with the Gods; but their Conſtitution of Body is Aerial, whereas the Gods have Etherial, and Men Terreſtrial Bodies, as Apuleius diſcourſeth. The generality of the Pagan Theologers do not hold the mortality of Demons, nor the change of Demons into Gods (by any Purgation of the Reliques of their old Nature,) and ſeveral of them deny, (p) that Humane Souls are chang'd into Demons or Angels, or can be rais'd to the Angelical Orders. But theſe are Branches of Plutarch's Demonology; who ſuppoſeth, (q) that the change from a Demon into a God, is from a mutable, paſſible, mortal Nature, into a Nature immutable, impaſſible, and immortal. For in his Life of Romulus, he diſcourſeth; That vertuous Souls are of ſuch a Divine Nature and Condition, that they paſs from Men into Heroes, from Heroes into Demons, and thence if they are as in Religious Purgations perfectly purged and conſecrate, and be diſcharg'd of all that's ſubject to Death and other Paſſions, they are tranſlated into Gods, having attain'd the moſt excellent and bleſſed Conſummation, not by the Decree of any City, but really and according to right Reaſon. (6.) The Demonial Order (in ſubſerviency to the Gods) is ſuppoſed to manage Nature, Providence, and the Affairs of Men in their ſeveral Eſtates of Life, and all manner of Prefectures, Curatorſhips, and Superintendencies over ſublunary things. For the Univerſe of Pagan Deities (their Theopolity) is an Univerſe of preſidentiary Gods and Demons called by Plato (r) ἄρχοντες ἐπιμεληταὶ ἐπιστάται, Rectors, Curators, Prefects, which have their ſeveral Prefectures, and govern the Matters thereof; the Earth and the whole Univerſe being diſtributed into various Cures and Prefectures, as the Ægyptians diſtributed their Country into ſeveral Nomi or Prefectures, and Sais was Minerva's Lot or Prefecture, who was alſo the Preſident Tutelar Deity of Attica. So the Nations are ſaid to be diſtributed by the common Father, ἐθνάρχαις ϗ πολιούχοις θεοῖς, to ſe-

veral

(g) Jambl. de myſt. p 36. Apulei: de Deo Socr. procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 197.

(h) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 393.

(i) Plutarch. de Def. or. p. 417. Apul. ſupr.

(k) Διὰ τούτων καὶ ἡ μαντικὴ πᾶσα χωρεῖ, καὶ ἡ τῶν ἱερέων τέχνη, τῶν τε περὶ τὰς θυσίας ϗ τὰς τελετὰς ϗ τὰς ἐπωδὰς καὶ τὴν μαντείαν πᾶσαν καὶ γοητείαν.

(l) Am. Marcellin: l. 21.

(m) Αἴροντες ἡμᾶς ϗ κουφίζοντες πρὸς τὴν θείαν πολιτείαν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν γῇ διατριβῆς. in aur. car. p. 41.

(n) Jamblic. προτρεπ. p. 10, 11. v. de myſt. p. 131. & S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 9.

(o) Ἑρμηνεῦον καὶ διαπορθμεῦον θεοῖς τὰ παρ᾽ ἀνθρώπων, καὶ ἀνθρώποις τὰ παρὰ θεῶν, τῶν μὲν τὰς δεήσεις καὶ θυσίας, τῶν δὲ τὰς ἐπιτάξεις ϗ ἀμοιβὰς τῶν θυσιῶν.

(p) Gale in Jambl. p. 205, 211.

(q) De Def. orac. p. 416.

(r) Eugub. de per phil. l. 8. p. 417, 428, 454. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 242. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 4. p. 115, 143. Gale in Jambl. p. 279, 286, 291.

veral Nation and City tutelar Gods (which have their Demons under them,) whereof every one adminiſtreth his own Allotment in his own way. So Humane Souls in their Original ſtate in the ſupernal Regions (ſ) are ſaid to be diſſeminated amongſt and about their Social Stars, having Gods for their Leaders, and Demons for their Curators. So the Government of the World was modell'd into an harmonious Syſtem, the ſeveral Gods being of ſeveral Faculties and Offices, (all are not good at all things,) and the Prefecture of a God (t) containing the Prefectures of ſeveral Demons, under whoſe Care and Providence Mankind and all Sublunary Things next and immediately are. The vaſt variety of things in Nature and Providence is ſuppos'd to be adminiſtred by a vaſt variety of Gods, which this Theology furniſheth for the various needs of Men and their ſeveral conditions of Life (for Health, Corn, Wine, Eloquence, War, Victory, Honour; for Shepherds, Women in Travail, Way-faring Men, and ſuch more,) and in ſubſerviency to the Gods, it ſuppoſeth a δαιμονίαν ἐπιςασίαν, Demonial Preſidency in ſo vaſt a variety, that no thing (not the leaſt of things) is without ſome Genius to preſide over it. All things are full of Gods and Demons, which have their ſeveral (κλῆροι, λήξεις) Lots and Prefectures under their care. (u) Nothing is without a Divine preſident. No part of univerſal Nature is to Homer without a God, none is deſtitute of a Prefect or Ruler; but all things and places are full of Divine Names, of Divine Reaſons, and of Divine Art. For if the whole World be an happy God, not any of its Parts is without a God and a Providence; and if they partake of God and Providence, they have a Divine Nature to preſide over them, (which adminiſtreth the Matters of Providence:) God hath ſet preſident Powers over all Men, to diſtribute to them according to their Worth, unto the leaſt thing that is done. Such Maxims of the Pagan Theology introduc'd a numerous, or rather innumerable Fry of Divine Preſidents, πολιῦχοι, ἑςιῦχοι, ἀγοραῖοι, ἐνόδιοι, γαμήλιοι, ἐπικάρπιοι, and ſuch more. Some of them preſide over Plants and their parts, others preſide over Animals, ſome preſide over Infants, others are the Preſidents of Womens Affairs, and others of the Doors of their Houſes. The Virtues and Vices, Appetites and Paſſions, Youth and Old Age, Speech and Silence, Labour and Reſt, and ſuch more have their Divine Preſidents; the Sea, Rivers and Fountains and the Woods have theirs in great abundance; the Hills and Valleys, High-Ways, Fields, their Dung and the ſweeping of their Houſes are not without their Prefects. (7.) The Demonial Order was thought neceſſary for conjoining the extremes, and becauſe without it Harmony, Unity and Continuity would be wanting in the Univerſe of Rationals. For (w) it is in Nature as in the moſt perfect Harmony, in an Harmony of Sounds that which is of a middle nature maketh the Conſonancy of the Extreams; and in all apt Compoſures ſomething of a middle nature is requiſite. (x) Betwixt the immortal Gods and the mortal there muſt be a middle kind, more excellent than Man, leſs excellent than God, (that which is God,) that by its Mediation, univerſal rational Nature may cohere, and one part of it may not be disjoin'd from another. He that taketh away the Air that is betwixt the Earth and the Moon, (y) will diſſolve the Unity and Communion of the Univerſe, a vacuity being made in the midſt: The like is done by them that take away the Demon-kind. Which intervening between the Gods and Men, by the cognation which they have with both, (z) they are a common Bond or Ligament, whereby Humane weakneſs is connex'd to the Divine Pulchritude. The Univerſe of Rationals therefore is repreſented by the Pagan Theologers as undivided and of one piece; and ſo Jamblichus repreſenteth his four Orders of Rationals, (the Gods, Demons, Heroes, and Human Souls) as compacted together into one harmonious Syſtem. (a) The intermediate kinds (the Demons and Heroes) are a common Bond of the Gods and Souls, making an indiſſoluble connexion between them and one continuation of things from firſt to laſt, and an undivided Communion of all, cauſing a juſt and ſymmetral Temperament of the whole, and thence ariſeth a Proceſſion of the Superior to the Inferior, and a reduction of the Inferior to the Superior an equal order and meaſure of Communication deſcending from the Superior, and of reception in the Inferior, and All become amical and accommodate to All, receiving the Cauſes of All from the Gods above. The Univerſe of Rationals being thus compacted together into one amical and harmonious Syſtem, there is (b) una Monarchia in toto Mundo, ut ſit totus Mundus quædam Reſpublica, cives ejus omne hominum genus; One Monarchy in the whole World, the whole World is one Republick, and all Mankind Citizens of it, as a Chriſtian Platoniſt deſcribeth the State of the whole. And he deſcribeth it agreeably to the Sentiment of his Maſter. (c) Wiſe Men ſay (ſaith Plato) that Heaven and Earth, the Gods and Men, have Society and Friendſhip and well compos'd Order; which is a fundamental Miſtake of the Pagan Theology (that maketh it Pagan,) and therefore is no Traduction from the Hebrews.

V. But Voſſius ſaith (d) There is ſuch Agreement between the Platoniſts and Chriſtians in the matter of Demonology, that it is hugely probable to me, that either they themſelves, or thoſe from whom Plato learned this Doctrine, partly received it from ancient Tradition deriv'd from the Sons of Noah; and partly when it was obliterated as to the main of it, receiv'd it from the Hebrews or Egyptians, or ſome others that deriv'd it from the Jewiſh Nation. Grotius is of Opinion, that Pythagoras took from the Hebrews the Names of thoſe Orders of Rationals that Conſtitute (ſ) Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 201, 217.

---

(t) Ibid. p. 207. Plutarch. de Fato p. 573. de An. Tranquill. p. 472.

(u) Μηδὲν ἄναρχον. Ecphant. de regno. ὐδὲν μέρος Ὁμήρῳ ἄθεον, ὐδὲ δυνάςυ ἄπορον, ὐδὲ ἀρχῆς ἔρημον, ἀλλὰ πάντα μεςὰ θείων ὀνομάτων, καὶ θείων λόγων, καὶ θείας τέχνης. M. Tyr. diſſ. 16. Εἰ γὰρ ὅλος ὁ κόσμος θεὸς εὐδαίμων ἐςὶ, ὐδὲν ἐςὶ τῶν συμπληρύντων αὐτὸν μορίων, ἄθεον καὶ ἀπρονόητον· Εἰ δὲ ϗ θεῦ πάντα μετέχει ϗ προνοίας, θείαν ἔλαχε φύσιν. Procl. in Tim. p. 287. Πᾶσι τε ἐπέςησεν ὁ θεὸς δυνάμεις τῆς κατ' ἀξίαν ἀποκληρωπκαὶ μέχρι τῆς μικροτάτης ποιήσεως. Simplic. in Epict. p. 216.

(w) M. Tyr. diſſ. 27.

(x) Ἀνάγκη γένος τι εἶναι τιμιώτερον μὲν ἀνθρώπυ καταδεέστερον δὲ θεῦ, τῇ δὲ ἑαυτῦ μεσότητι τὰ πρὸς ἄλληλα συνάπτον, ὥςε τὸ πᾶν λογικῆς τῆς ὐσίας αὐτὸ ἑαυτῷ συνδεδέσθαι καλῶς. Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 14.

(y) Τὴν ἑνότητα διαλύσει καὶ τὴν κοινωνίαν τῦ παντός. Plut. de Def. orac. p. 416. Liv. Galant. p. 392.

(z) Δεσμὸς συνέδησε τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην ἀσθένειαν πρὸς τὸ θεῖον κάλλος. M. Tyr. diſſ. 26.

(a) Ταῦτα δὴ ὖν τὰ γένη μέσα συμπληρῦντα τὸν κοινὸν σύνδεσμον θεῶν τε ϗ ψυχῶν, ϗ ἀδιάλυτον αὐτῶν τὴν συμπλοκὴν ἀπεργάζεται, μίαν τε συνέχειαν ἄνωθεν μέχρι τῦ τέλυς συνδεῖ, ϗ ποιεῖ τῶν ὅλων τὴν κοινωνίαν εἶναι ἀδιαίρετον, κρᾶσιν τε ἀρίςην ϗ σύμμιξιν τοῖς ὅλοις ἔχειν σύμμετρον, πρόοδόν τε ἀπὸ τῶν βελτιόνων ἐπὶ τὰ ἐλάττονα, ϗ ἀναγωγὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ὑποδεεςέρων ἐπὶ τὰ πρότερα, ἀναβιβάζει πως ἐξ ἴσυ τάξιν τε ϗ μέτρα τῆς κατιύσης μεταδόσεως ἀπὸ τῶν ἀμεινόνων, ϗ τῆς ἐγγινομένης ὑποδοχῆς ἐν τοῖς ἀτελεςέροις ἐντίθησι, ϗ ποιεῖ πάντα πᾶσι προσήγορα ϗ συναρμόζοντα, ἄνωθεν τὰς τύτων ὅλων αἰτίας ἀπὸ τῶν θεῶν παραδεχόμενα. De Myſt. p. 8, 9.

(b) Eugub. de per. Phil. l. 4. c. 17. l. 8. c. 22.

(c) Φασὶ δὲ οἱ σοφοὶ ϗ ὐρανὸν ϗ γῆν, ϗ θεὺς ϗ ἀνθρώπυς κοινωνίαν συνέχειν, ϗ τὴν φιλίαν ϗ κοσμιότητα.

(d) De Idol. l. 1. c. 8. In quo oſtendimus, ſic ſatis convenire Platonicis cum Chriſtianis, &c.

his Mundane City, and that from the Hebrews he deriv'd many other things of his Inſtitution. (e) Thoſe Spirits which are interpos'd between God (the Opificer of things) and Men, the Hebrews call ſometimes Elohim, or Gods, ſometimes Angels. Thence thoſe Names were taken by Pythagoras, who took many things from the Hebrews, as Numenius and other Pythagoreans profeſs'd; and whoſe Inſtitutes are ſaid by Joſephus, to be the ſame with the Inſtitutes of the Eſſens. But thoſe names be uſed with ſome difference. For by the name of Gods, he called thoſe ſublimer Minds that approach nearer to the Nature of God, which he held immutable: but thoſe Spirits that are next below them, he call'd Angels, as being thoſe that annunciate and declare unto us the Rules of well and happy living, as Hierocles ſpeaketh; from whom we alſo learn, that thoſe Angels ſo call'd in common, were again diſtinguiſh'd into three Claſſes; into Angels ſtrictly ſo call'd, into good Demons and Heroes. All theſe things were deriv'd from Pythagoras's School into the Platonic. If Pythagoras took the Names of the ſeveral Orders of his mundane City from the Hebrews, he took the name without the thing; for in the Hebrew Theology there is no ſuch diſtinction of Gods and Angels as the Pythagoric Philoſophy ſuppoſeth: nor is it a deſcendent from the Hebraical, but from the Zoroaſtrian Theology, as Mr. Mede ſaith (in his Apoſtacy of the later times) Demons in the Gentiles Theology were Deaſtri, or an inferior ſort of deify'd Powers, as a middle between the Sovereign (Suprademonial) Gods and mortal Men. So ſaith Plato, πᾶν τὸ δαιμόνιον μεταξύ ἐστι θεοῦ τε καὶ θνητοῦ, A Demon is intermediate between God and Man. So ſay all the Platoniſts, and well-nigh all other Sects of Philoſophers; I am ſure moſt do; for it is a very ancient Doctrine, inſomuch that Plut. de Def. Orac. fetcheth the diſtinction between θεοί, i. e. Sovereign Gods and Demons as far as the antiquity of Zoroaſter. As Pythagoras had not the chief Orders of his mundane City from the Hebrews, ſo neither had he their Names from thence; For Pythagoras and Plato had no acquaintance with the name of Angels, which demonſtrateth their unacquaintedneſs with the Hebrew Theology, the Deſign and Buſineſs whereof is the due Unpaganizing of a People. If therefore theſe Pagan Virtuoſo's (Pythagoras and Plato) were converſant in it, they might have imbib'd Antipaganiſm (which is Gods Religion,) to diſcard the plurality of Gods, the Demonolatry of the Pythagoric Verſes, (f) the deifying the Heavens and heavenly Bodies (which is a principal Branch of the Pythagoric and Platonic Theiſm;) but (as if we ſhould deduce the origine of Images from the Iconoclaſts) they are not ſuppos'd to have imbib'd from it any thing of Antipaganiſm, but only the Pagan Theiſm, which was never there. If Pythagoras had introduc'd into the World a new ſort of Theiſm diſtinct from, and oppoſite to the Pagan Theiſm, there had been ſome colour for this Pretenſion, that he was converſant with the Scriptures, or the Hebrew Theology, and took his Theiſm with the Terms of it from thence: But the Pythagoric or Pagan Theiſm (which are the ſame, ſave only that Pythagoras intermix'd with the Popular-pagan Theiſm Philoſophy and Theurgy) is Senior by much to Pythagoras, to the Scriptures, and to the Hebrew Theology; his Theoſophy knoweth no better Polity than the Pagan-mundane, its Polity of Gods is no other than the Theopolity of the Pagan Religion and Laws, its Deities are of kind and quality the Paganical (ſuch as Apollo, Minerva, Diana,) the Order of immortal Gods in Hierocles are no better than thoſe Myſtic-Metaphyſical Phantomes, the Intelligences of the Celeſtial Orbs, nor are his good Demons any thing better than evil Angels (as Chriſtianity repreſenteth them, (g) and all Chriſtians renounce them as ſuch;) therefore the Pythagoric Theology is no traduction from the Hebraical. But thus not a few of the learned World Diſcourſe, as if the Pagan Theiſm could not have been in the World, unleſs it had been ſtollen (as the Fathers ſpeak) from the Hebrews. And ſome ſay, (h) The Heathens in their ſtealth were very imprudent, glean'd only that which was not worth the carrying away.

What regard is to be had to the Teſtimony of Numenius and other Pythagoreans, or to the Inſtitutes of the Eſſens (which are cited by Grotius, to prove the traduction of Pythagoriſm from the Hebrew Theology,) will appear from this account of the Jews Affairs. (i) In the Times of Hyrcanus and Ariſtobulus (as appeareth from a Decree that was then made,) the Jews applied themſelves to the Study of the Greek Philoſophy, and ſeveral of them became ſuch proficients in it and admirers of it, that both Joſephus and Philo, inſtead of the holy Popular and holy Scriptural notices of God, have ſubſtituted the Philoſophic Pagan. The Dogmes of the Greek Philoſophy were imbib'd by Jews, who conform'd their Midraſh, or Allegorical Expoſition of their Law to the Philoſophy of Pythagoras and Plato, diſtorting it by their Myſtical Expoſitions, as is viſible in Philo, from whom that abſurd allegorical Mode of Expounding the Scriptures, which prevail'd in the Chriſtian Church, had its riſe, as Photius obſerveth. (k) The Helleniſtical Jews imitated the Philoſophic Pagans, and Origen and other Chriſtian Theologers imitated the Helleniſtical Jews. This humour of Philoſophic-paganizing gain'd the Jews (uſually contemn'd and hated amongſt the Heathen) a good Reputation for Wiſdom amongſt the Philoſophic Pagans. Longinus (a Philoſopher as well as a Philologer) and his Scholar Porphyrius make an honourable mention of Moſes, ſtyling him the Legiſlator; in Porphyry he is ſtyled the Prophet, who alſo mentioneth with reſpect the ſacred Books and Oracles of the Prophets. Numenius before him had mention'd Moſes with great reſpect and ſeveral Honourary Epithets; it was uſual with this Philoſopher to inſert into his Books places of Scripture, and following the Track of the Helleniſtical Jews) to make Allegorical or Tropological Interpretations of them, (l) as Origen ſaith; who alſo informeth us, that Ariſtobulus a Jew by Nation and a Peripatetick Philoſopher, had allegoriz'd the Scripture (in the time of Ptolomæus Philometor) long before Philo. But his Character ſheweth, and the deſign of his Books (in which he proveth that the Peripatetic Philoſophy depended upon the Law of Moſes and the other Prophets, (m) ſaith Clemens) that this Philoſopher

---

(c) Hebræi Spiritus iſtos qui inter Deum rerum opificem hominesque ſunt interpoſiti, modo אלוהים θεοὺς, modo מלאכים ἀγγέλους vocant. Atque inde eas appellationes ſumpſit Pythagoras, quem multa hauſiſſe ab Hebræis Numenius aliique Pythagorici profitebantur. Cujuſque adeo inſtituta eadem eſſe cum Eſſenorum inſtitutis Joſephus prodidit. Sed & eas voces uſurpavit adhibito diſcrimine. Nam θεοὺς vocabat mentes ſublimiores & ad divinam naturam propius accedentes, quas ſtatuebat ἀτρέπτους· ἀγγέλους autem eos ſpiritus, qui proximum primis illis locum eſſent ſortiti, ὡς ἐκφαίνοντας καὶ διαγγέλλοντας ἡμῖν τοὺς πρὸς εὐζωίαν κανόνας, ut loquitur Hierocles; qui itidem nos docet, illos communiter dictos ἀγγέλους iterum diſtinctos in claſſes tres; in ἀγγέλους proprie ac peculiariter ita dictos, in δαίμονας ἀγαθοὺς, καὶ ἥρωας. Quæ omnia ex Pythagoræ Schola in Platonicam ſunt derivata. Not. in Matth. 1. 20.

(f) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 37. Eugub. de per. phil. l. 8. c. 1.

(g) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 378.

(h) Dr. Ham. Ser. on Act. 17. 30.

(i) Cun. de Rep. Hebr. l. 3. c. 4. Fuller. Miſc. in Append. & l. 3. c. 7. l. 2. c. 3.

(k) V. Mr. Dodw. Diſc. of Sanchoniathon. p. 66, &c.

(l) C. Celſ. l. 1. p. 13. l. 4. p. 198. Spencer. not. p. 55.

(m) Strom. l. 5. p. m. 434. ed. Lugdun. Batav.

Philoſopher did not Myſticize the Scriptures to a Senſe ſo conformable to Pythagoriſm and Platoniſm, as Philo did afterwards, of whom the Greeks uſually ſaid; Ἢ Φίλων πλατωνίζει, ἢ Πλάτων φιλωνίζει, Either Philo Platonizeth, or Plato Philonizeth. The Holy Scriptures being thus Philoniz'd, and the Moſaic Theology Philoſophic-paganiz'd, it is no whit ſtrange, that the Philoſophic Pagans ſhould have it in great eſteem, that Numenius ſhould look upon Platoniſm as a deſcendent from it, and fancy ſuch a Conſonance between them as that ſaying of his importeth; τί γάρ ἐςι Πλάτων ἢ μωσῆς ἀττικίζων; What is Plato but Moſes ſpeaking Greek? For as Eugubinus ſpeaketh, (n) He had ſeen ſuch a thing in Philo; he conſider'd the Hebrew Theology, not as it is in it ſelf, but as that Platonic Allegoriſt had repreſented it.

But beſides the allegorical Interpretations of Scripture, there was another thing that gain'd the Jews a great Reputation amongſt the Pagans, which was the Inſtitution of their Eſſens, who, (o) as Joſephus ſaith, were a ſort of Men not unlike the Pythagoreans of the Greeks. (p) They are highly commended by Philo and Joſephus, whoſe honourable Character of them is tranſcrib'd by Porphyry. Pliny and Solinus admir'd their Inſtitution, and not only private Men, but great Kings (as Philo ſaith) have admir'd and honour'd them, and celebrated their Philoſophic Life. With reſpect to theſe Monaſticks and Aſceticks Numenius reckoneth the Jews amongſt the Nations famous for Wiſdom that ſymbolize with Plato. Thoſe Nations are the Brachmans, Jews, Magi and Egyptians. And with reſpect to theſe we may allow that account of the Jews in Laertius, ἔτοι δέ εἰσιν ἀπόγονοι τῶν ἐν Ἰνδοῖς φιλοσόφων, Theſe are a Progeny of the Indian Gymnoſophiſts. If the Inſtitution of theſe Judaical Pythagoricks was antecedent to Pythagoras's Inſtitution, then it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe this latter a derivative from the former; the above mention'd Ariſtobulus (q) had reaſon to ſay, that Pythagoras tranſlated many of our things into the Philoſophy of his Sect; and Joſephus might ſay with great reaſon, that he was not only knowing in the matters of our Diſcipline, ἀλλὰ ϗ ζηλωτὴς αὐτῶν ἐκ πλείστου, but alſo an Emulator of them for the moſt part. But if the Inſtitution of theſe Judaical Pythagoricks (r) be of much later Original than Pythagoras's time, it will ſignifie nothing to Grotius's purpoſe (to prove the Traduction of Pythagoriſm from the Hebrew Theology,) and the reports of Judaical Zealots for the Glory of their Nation without ground or reaſon will ſignifie as little. Now that the Inſtitution of the Eſſens is of much later Original than Pythagoras's time, is the concurrent Opinion (ſ) of ſuch learn'd Men, that are competent Judges in theſe Matters (and of Grotius himſelf on 1 Maccab. 2. 42.) who with great reaſon ſuppoſe the Sect of the Eſſens, as alſo that other Sect of the Phariſees, to have riſen from the חסידים Aſſideans (mention'd 1 Maccab. 2. 42. and 7, 13. 2 Maccab. 14. 6.) thoſe eximious ſupererogating Saintiſts among the Jews. But the Sanctity and Religion of theſe Judaical Pythagoricks was not purely Judaical; they were in part Pythagoric Magi, and therefore a Traduction from the Pagan Pythagoreans. For beſides their enormous Superſtitiouſneſs beyond the ſize of any other Sect of Judaical Religioniſts, beſides their Schiſm which divided them from the Jews and their Religion, (they thought their own Ceremonies more holy than thoſe of the Temple, and therefore did not Sacrifice there, but by themſelves,) they are noted (t) for honouring the names of Angels, a branch of the Pythagoric Demonolatry. (u) They were addicted to Divination (the foretelling things to come) to which the Pythagoreans were moſt extravagantly addicted; and Joſephus ſaith, (and Porphyry from him) they ſeldom miſs'd the Mark in their predictions. (w) The ſame Author mentioneth ſeveral of their Prophets. Menahem the Eſſen foretold the Kingdom to Herod. Judas the Eſſen predicted Death to Antigonus. Simon the Eſſen foretold to Archelaus the term of his Domination. Whence it is manifeſt, that there is a mixture of Pythagoric Demonolatry and Theurgy in their Inſtitution. Which Character of their Inſtitution may determine a matter of debate amongſt learned Men, (x) whether the Eſſens were Solicolæ, Worſhippers of the Sun or not? (y) They ſpeak not any thing profane (ſaith Joſephus) before the riſing of the Sun, but certain Patrial Prayers unto him, as praying to be Orient. In going to the ground they us'd great caution; for digging an Hole in the Earth (a Foot-ditch) with an Inſtrument, into which they evacuated, (and into which afterwards they threw back the Earth which they had digg'd up) covering all with their Garment during the time of Evacuation, ὡς μὴ τὰς αὐγὰς ὑβρίζοιεν τοῦ θεοῦ, leſt they ſhould be injurious to the Light or Rayes of God. Some are of Opinion, that the Eſſens were Worſhippers of the Sun, becauſe they ſuppoſe that Joſephus in theſe places affirmeth it; and they believe it the rather, (z) becauſe the Sampſæi in Epiphanius (that ſprung from the Eſſens) were Worſhippers of the Sun, and had their name שַׁמְשָׁאִין from שֶׁמֶשׁ the Sun, which they Worſhipped. Others think it incredible that Joſephus ſhould call the Sun God after the Pagan mode (although it will hereafter appear, that he affecteth the Pagans Dialect) or that the Eſſens being Jews ſhould be Sun-worſhippers. But they that conſider at what a rate the Platoniſts and Pythagoreans worſhipp'd the Sun (the Platoniſts and ſuch like Philoſophers worſhip the Sun only amongſt the Celeſtials, (a) ſaith Ficinus) and that the Eſſens were in part Pythagoric Magi (ſuch as Clemens deſcribeth, (b) the Magi abſtain'd from Wine, things animate and venereous, and worſhipp'd Angels) will be prone to think them Sun-worſhippers, whether Joſephus affirmeth it or not. Probably upon this account (for the reaſons uſually given ſatisfy not) no mention is made of their Sect in the Writings of the New Teſtament, becauſe they were look'd upon by the Holy Writers, not as a Sect of Judaical Religioniſts, but as Foreigners to the Jewiſh Church and Religion. If they were look'd upon as a Sect of the Jews Religion, with what truth could the Apoſtle call the Sect of the Phariſees the ſtraiteſt Sect of our Religion, the Eſſens being by much the moſt ſevere and rigid of all others? Or if they were look'd upon by the Holy Writers as a Sect of the Jews Religion, they might conſider them as a Branch of the Sect of the Phariſees, and compriſe them under that Name. For ſo the Jewiſh Writers ſometimes (c) do not diſtinguiſh the Names of Phariſees and Aſſideans, but call all the Aſſideans Phariſees (the Names may well be confounded, becauſe both of them denote Saintiſts, and becauſe the Piety of the Aſſideans was plainly Phariſaiſm)

and

(n) De per. phil. l. 1. c. 30.

(o) Antiq. Jud. l. 15. c. 13.

(p) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 8. c. 11, 12. Selden. de J. nat. & Gent. l. 5. c. 3. Laert. in proœm. & Caſaubon in Notis.

(q) Seld. ſupr. l. 1. c. 2.

(r) V. Luc. Holſten. obſ. ad vit. Pythag. p. 72.

(ſ) Scaliger, Caſaubon, Druſius, Cunæus, Fuller, L'Empereur, Hottinger, &c.

(t) Druſ. de 3. Sect p. 236. Scaliger Elench. c. 27. Selden de D. Syr. p. 31. Grot. in Col. 2. 18.

(u) Euſeb. ubi ſupr. Druſ. de 3. Sect. l. 4. p. 245.

(w) Scultet. exercit. Ev. l. 1. c. 30.

(x) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 5. Petit. Var. Lect. c. 21. L'Emper. in Bertram. de Rep. Jud. c. 19. Iſ. Voſſ. de Sibyl. or. p. 28.

(y) Πρὶν γὰρ ἀνασχεῖν τὸν ἥλιον, οὐδὲν φθέγγονται τῶν βεβήλων, πατρίους δέ τινας εἰς αὐτὸν εὐχὰς, ὥσπερ ἱκετεύοντες ἀνατεῖλαι.

(z) Hotting. Theſaur. phil. p. 38.

(a) Com. in Plotin. p. 423.

(b) Strom. l. 3. p. m. 325.

(c) Druſ. de Haſid. Qu. Hebraic. l. 1. p. 47. de 3. Sect. l. 1. c. ult.

and compriſe the Eſſens under that Name, which are thought by many, (that have obſerv'd a great agreement between them and the Phariſees in their Dogmata) to have had their origin from the Phariſees. If this Conjecture will approve it ſelf (which ſome Learned Men (d) are inclin'd to embrace) the Phariſees muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into two ſorts; the one the Popular, which are famouſly known; the other the Philoſophical (that is, the Unpopular) who pythagoriz'd in their Inſtitutes; which proveth a Traduction of their Sect from the Greek Pythagoreans (whoſe Philoſophy the Jews ſtudied and imbib'd) not any Traduction of Pythagoriſm from the Hebrew Theology, as Grotius ſuppoſeth. But becauſe this Opinion of that excellent Perſon is no ſingularity of his, the Jews and Chriſtians both of ancient and modern times (e) have entertain'd an Opinion touching the Traduction of the Philoſophy and Theology of the Philoſophic Pagans from the ancient People of God, the Jewiſh Church and Scriptures, we will conſider further theſe following Reaſons againſt it.

VI. Firſt, It is the Subject of innumerable fabulous Conceits and Narrations apparently ſuch. (f) Such as that Conceit touching Adam, that he was a great Philoſopher from his Birth (or as the Jews ſpeak, חכם גדל) ignorant of nothing pertaining to the Myſtery of Nature. Such is that Report (from Eupolemus and Alexand. Polyhiſtor,) that Abraham converſing with the Egyptian Prieſts at Heliopolis, taught them Aſtrology and the other matters of Science (he is ſaid by Eupolemus, to have found out Aſtrology and the Chaldaic Art) ſaying, that the Babylonians and himſelf were the Inventors, but that Enoch was the firſt Inventor of Aſtrology, who learned all things from the Angels of God. Of the ſame Character are thoſe other Reports (from Nic. Damaſcenus, Artapanus and others,) that Abraham taught the Egyptians Arithmetick and Aſtrology, which they were altogether ignorant of before his coming. (He is ſaid to have inſtituted the Phœnicians alſo in the ſame Arts;) that he inſtituted the King of Egypt in Aſtrology and ſpent twenty Years there; And that of Philo; that Abraham by the motion of the Stars and Heavenly Bodies found out the knowledge of the true God: And that of Joſephus (rightly call'd by Lud. Cappell. homo χαυνὸς,) who pretendeth to have ſeen one of Seth's Pillars, whereon the matters of Sidereal Science were ingraven. (g) Artapanus hath reported, that Joſeph was the firſt that taught the Egyptians Geometry, that they aſcribe to Moſes the Invention of Ships, Arms, Machins, and of Philoſophy; and Clemens addeth, that the Greeks learn'd from him the Stratagems of War. Eupolemus (who is follow'd by Theodoret and Iſidore) ſaith of Moſes, that he was the firſt Wiſe Man, and that he taught the Hebrews the knowledge of Letters; which is alike true with that of Artapanus, that Moſes was Orpheus's Maſter. The Senſe of Clemens, Euſebius, and others, is thus repreſented by a Learned Man; (h) that the beginnings of Learning in all kinds was among the Jews, whilſt the whole Heathen World beſides was barbarouſly ignorant; that Moſes appointed Maſters among the Tribes, γραμμάτων εἰσαγωγεῖς, which initiated the Youth of Iſrael in all kind of Secular Learning. Yet we read in (i) Euſebius and Clemens, that the Chaldeans were the Inventors of Aſtrology, the Egyptians of Geometry and Medicine, and (to ſay nothing of other Arts) that Philoſophy had its origin from the Contemplative Power of the Soul, was given by Divine Providence, was given to the Greeks by the Son of God by the means of Inferiour Angels, and that part of it might be from Evil Angels. Philoſophy therefore and other Pagan Literature (as theſe Authors acknowledge) was derived from ſeveral Originals, and is not to be ſuppos'd intirely a Traduction from the Hebrews. But ſuch a Suppoſition is for the Tooth of the Hebrew Doctors, who are never wanting in fabulous Conceits and Narrations. (k) One of them (R. Meir) was ſurpris'd, to find ſo many Truths (mix'd with Falſhoods) in the Writings of the Greek Philoſophers, מי נתן הכהן בבית חקברות who hath given us a Prieſt among the Graves, in a ſordid place? But his wonderment was ſilenc'd, when he found it written in a Book, that the Grecanic Sophiſts learn'd thoſe ſcatter'd Fragments of Wiſdom which appear in their Writings, from the Wiſe Men of Iſrael in their Babylonian Captivity. The ſumm of their Pretenſion is, “ That all Arts and Sciences (Poetry amongſt the reſt) were firſt amongſt them and originally theirs; that they came into the Gentiles Hands, when they were conquer'd by them, and forc'd to live amongſt them, and under their Domination, or when their Books were tranſlated; that the Ancient Philoſophers receiv'd their Wiſdom from Shem, Heber, Abraham, and other Fathers, eſpecially from Solomon, to whom all Nations reſorted to hear his Wiſdom; that the Foundations and Principles of all Sciences and Philoſophic Diſciplines were traduc'd from them to the Chaldeans, thence to the Perſians, whence the Greeks had them; that all the Wiſdom of the Gentiles is פסולת מחכמת בני ישרל the Dregs and Droſs of the Wiſdom of Iſrael, or ſome Gleanings which their Wiſe Men have left them: (J. Mart. Clemens, Tertullian, Euſebius, Tatianus, Theophilus, and other Ancients, (l) are ſaid to be of this Mind, that the knowledge of many things which the Greeks had, was nothing elſe but the Dregs of the Science of Iſrael) and that all true things which the Iſhmaelites and Edomeans, (that is, the Chriſtians) have, are from the Sons of Iſrael. Socrates (of whom they ſay, that he was the firſt, that found out by Philoſophy, that there is Ens aliquod abſtractum) had his Philoſophy from Aſaph and Achitophel, Plato had his from the Prophets, himſelf writeth, that he ſpake with a Prophet of Iſrael, and thought him at firſt a Man of ſmall Learning, but having more throughly conſider'd his words, he much admir'd him, and endeavour'd to underſtand his Mind. (A late Rabbi inferreth from hence (m) the Eternity of their Law, becauſe it is ſo perfect in all matters of Wiſdom, and he ſaith, his Intention is, to write a Book call'd Plato Moſaicus;) Ariſtotle alſo wrote in a certain Epiſtle, that he had ſpoken with Simeon the Juſt about Natural things, but was aſtoniſhed at his Wiſdom when he heard him ſpeak of Divine things; this Philoſopher, when Alexander had taken Jeruſalem, found the Books of Solomon, and publiſh'd them under his own Name with the addition of his own Errors; but at length he was made a Convert by Simeon the Juſt (a Proſelyte of Juſtice) at the end of his Days he chang'd his Mind, embrac'd the Law and Doctrine of the Hebrews, (they ſay alſo in their Talmud (n) that Cæſar Antoninus took care to be circumciſed and died a Jew) and

(d) Fuller, Miſc. l. 2. c. 3.

(e) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 325.

(f) Coſri p. 52. ed. Buxt. Euſeb. pr Ev. l. 9. c. 16, 17. Voſſ. de Sect. Phil. p. 3. Viv. in Aug. de c. D. l. 18. c. 2. Sir W. Rawleigh Hiſt. l. 1. p. 1. ch. 11. S. 2. Wits Ægypt. l. 3. c. 12. Marſham Can. Chron. p. 72. Ed. Lipſ.

(g) Voſſ. ſupr. p. 11. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 9. c. 27. Viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 18. c. 39. Clem. Strom l. 1. p. m. 254. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 88. 111. ed. 2.

(h) Dr. Ham. 1. Ser. on Act. 17. 30.

(i) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 10. c. 6. Clem. Strom. l. 6. p. m. 497. l. 7. p. 505. l. 1. p. 227. & l. 5. p. 405. Vid. Gr. Naz. orat. 3. c. Julian.

(k) Coſri p. 29.--32. & p. 131, 420. ed. Buxt.

(l) Windet. de vit. funct. p. 4.

(m) Menaſ. Ben Iſr. Qu. in Lev. p. 191. in Gen. p. 15.

(n) Buxt. Syn Jud. c. 2. p. 105.

"at his death taught his Diſciples the Immortality of the Soul and Future Rewards and Puniſhments. If now we miſtruſt the Judgment or Sincerity of theſe Rabbinical Hiſtorians, and will not take their Reports upon their bare word (which few Men will do;) if we ask what ſingular Eminency in all Arts and Sciences their Nation hath to ſhew? or what ancient Books, Monuments, and Syſtems of Philoſophy are they poſſeſs'd of? (o) They ſay, that their Nation hath loſt many egregious Sciences and Books. Either they have loſt them, or they never had them; for the beſt of their Philoſophic Writers know no better Philoſophy than the Peripatetic; their Book Jezirah (a Cabaliſtical Book of difficult Explication) which pretendeth to be a Relique of the ancient Judaical Philoſophy, and which beareth the Name of the Patriarch Abraham, (p) is plainly ſuppoſititious, and in the beſt accounts that are given of its Sublimities, there is ſuch an heap of Rabbinical Phantaſtry, of abſurd Nugacities, of Peripatetic Philoſophy, Magick, and Aſtrology, that no wiſe man can doubt of the Wiſdom of Buxtorf's Cenſure of Cabaliſm. (q) This Cabaliſtic Doctrine is an Abyſs unſearchable, a Labyrinth inextricable, neither ſhewing Ingreſs nor Egreſs, of no uſe or advantage: So that one being ask'd, what he thought of Cabala? anſwer'd not ineptly, The ſame that he thought of Fabula.

The Cabala which this Author hath charg'd with Fabuloſity, is, (r) the Cabaliſts Philoſophical Cabala, as it muſt be call'd, to diſtinguiſh it from the other ſorts of Judaical Cabala's. For the Talmudiſts have their Cabala as well as the Cabaliſts, their Oral Law (Syſtem of Traditions) which they ſuppoſe a Tradition from Mount Sinai, is a Cabala according to that Talmudic Maxim (s) דברי קבלה כדברי תורה The words of the Cabala are as the words of the Law. Beſides this Talmudic Cabala the Cabaliſts (t) have a Magical, Grammatical, and Philoſophical (or Theological) kind of Cabala. The Magical (or Practical) is a Cabaliſtical kind of Art Magick (familiarity with Angels, curing Diſeaſes, quenching Fires, expelling Devils, and the like) which maketh Charms, Amulets, Exorciſms by cabaliſtical abuſes of the Scripture and Sacred Names. Thus R. Moſes Ben Nachman is ſaid to have drawn a great Ship into the Sea (which the Workmen could not do) at Barcelona, in the ſight of the King; and alſo to have brought a little Ship to Land by virtue of the Tetragrammaton written in a Schedule. This ſort of Magick appeareth to be of conſiderable Antiquity among the Jews; (u) for Joſephus maketh an high Elogy of Solomon's Wiſdom for finding out and compoſing forms of Exorciſm and Enchantment (Conjuration) whereby Diſeaſes are cur'd, and Demons expell'd, ſo that they never return again. And this Method of cure (as he ſaith) is ſtill in force amongſt the Jews; for himſelf ſaw one Eleazar a Jew in the preſence of Veſpaſian, his Sons and great Officers, cure Demoniacks by holding a Ring to their Noſe, under the Seal whereof was hid the Root of a certain Plant preſcrib'd by Solomon, at the ſcent whereof the Demon diſlodg'd preſently, whom the Exorciſt (reciting certain Charms ſaid to be made by Solomon) charg'd never to return. And to ſhew them, that he was really gone, he commanded the Demon as he went out, to overturn a Cup of Water, which he had cauſed to be ſet in the Room before them. The Cabaliſts ſecond ſort of Cabala may be fitly call'd a Grammatical kind of Cabala, being imploy'd about Grammatical Trifles, the Words, Letters, Points and Accents of their Law, (their Shapes, Abbreviatures, Combinations, Permutations, Numeral Powers) wherein they ſuppoſe, that certain Myſteries are couch'd, and their Modes or Artifices of finding them out are ſtil'd Gematria, Notaricon, Temurah. Their Pretenſion is, (w) that their Law hath a Body and a Soul, and a Soul of that Soul. The Miſhnah (or Oral Law of the Talmudiſts) is the Soul; but the Soul of that Soul is in the Cabaliſts Cabala. They that buſie themſelves in the Miſhnah are compar'd to Apothecaries that compound Medicines, whoſe Virtues they know not, but only follow the Preſcript of the Phyſician; but the Cabaliſts are the Doctors, that underſtand the Cauſes and Reaſons of what is preſcrib'd to the Sick. This Cabaliſtic Art (which is an Inſtitution of finding out Arcane and Myſtical Senſes of the Law by the Modes and Artifices before-mention'd) is ſuppos'd, to be a Cabala from Moſes, who receiv'd it from the Mouth of God; but is certainly an Invention of the later Rabbins, altogether unknown to the ancient Jews or Chriſtians. The laſt ſort of Cabala (the Philoſophical or Theological) is an Inſtitution of Myſtical and Arcane Philoſophy or Theology. (x) A recondite Learning myſtically and enigmatically propounded, touching things Divine, Angelical, Theological, Celeſtial, and Metaphyſical, concerning Angels and Spirits, involv'd in ſtrange Symbols and arcane ways of teaching. The principal matter of this Cabala is אילן הקבלה a Cabaliſtic Tree, conſiſting of ten Sephiroth (Numerations, Emanations or Genealogies) diſpos'd in form of a Tree, (y) one of which is Chochmah or Chochmoth (Sapience) which anſwereth to the νοῦς (Intellect) in the Pythagoric and Platonic Triad; which Cabaliſtic Term is doubtleſs the ſame with the Valentinians Achamoth (one of their thirty Æons, to which they attributed the making of the World;) whence it appeareth, that this Philoſophical Cabala is of conſiderable Antiquity, no late Invention of the Modern Rabbins, as the Grammatical Cabaliſm manifeſtly is. (z) But becauſe the Sublime Philoſophic Cabaliſts (in compariſon of whom the Miſnical Doctors are dull Theologers) uſe the Grammatical Cabaliſtic Artifices, and an Anagogic Expoſition of Scripture, to ſerve their purpoſe of ſublime Contemplation, hence theſe two ſorts of Cabala (the Grammatical and Philoſophical) are uſually confounded. From this laſt ſort of Cabala (the Philoſophical or Theoretic) the Pythagoric and Platonic Theology is ſuppos'd by ſome to be deriv'd: (a) Others ſuppoſe the contrary; that the Judaical Cabaliſts traduc'd their Sephiroth from the School of the Platoniſts (whence alſo the Valentinians and Gnoſticks had their Æons and their Combinations of them) as Grotius himſelf (b) hath diſcours'd; who hath alſo obſerv'd the like fabulous Genealogies in the Theology of the Perſian Magi. And that this was indeed the true ſtate of the Caſe, will appear when we come to conſider the Cabaliſtical Doctors notices of God.

Secondly, This Traduction from the Hebrews is believ'd without any good Hiſtorical Atteſtati-

(o) Coſri *p.*319,420. Fuller Miſc.in Append. Maimon. Mor. Nev. par. 2. c. 11.

(p) Buxt. *de Abbrev. p.*167,296. Simon. Hiſt. Crit. l. 1. c. 7.

(q) Cabaliſtica hæc doctrina abyſſus eſt imperſcrutabilis, labyrinthus inextricabilis, nec introitum oſtendens, nec exitum; fructus ejus nullus: Adeò ut non inepte quidam interrogatus quid de Cabala ſentiret? reſponderet, Idem quod de Fabula.

(r) Coſri p. 318. & p. 200.

(s) Buxt. Lex.Talm. col. 1954.

(t) Proleg. in Bibl.Polyglott. p. 53. Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 447.

(u) Antiqu. Jud. l. 8. c. 2.

(w) Menaſſ. ben Iſr. Qu. in Exod. p. 168, &c. Rittangel. Not. in lib. Jezirah. p. 27, &c.

(x) Scientia eſt arcana, myſticè & ænigmaticè quodammodò propoſita, de rebus divinis, angelicis, theologicis, cæleſtibus & metaphyſicis, de angelis & ſpiritibus, miris ſymbolis & arcanis docendi modis involuta. Buxt. Lex. Talm. ubi ſupr. de Abbreviat. p. 84, &c.

(y) Windet. de vit. funct. p 37. Hotting. Theſaur. Phil. p. 444.

(z) Reuchlin. de Art. Cab. l. 1. fol. 15.

(a) Hebræi Platonicis imbuti opinionibus, &c. Pareus in Heb. 2. 5.

(b) Not. in 1 Tim. 1. 4.

on. For the Sayings of the Jews and Chriſtians concerning it muſt be conſider'd as their Judgment or Opinion only: They pretend not to atteſt ſuch a matter of fact, nor can they ſay any thing of it upon their own knowledge; nor have they produc'd any creditable Heathen Author to atteſt it, or any creditable Pagan Hiſtory that reporteth it; the Reports of it produc'd (c) by a deſervedly great Name are not good Hiſtorical Atteſtations, but muſt be numbred with the fabulous Conceits and Narrations. For unleſs by the Jews we underſtand the Pythagoric Eſſens, thoſe Reports cannot be true, which parallel the Jews (who are a Theocracy, a Religious State and Government) with the Brachmans, which repreſent them as a Sect of Oriental Philoſophers, of a Philoſophic Inſtitution (whereas they were of an Unphiloſophic, that is, a Popular Religious Inſtitution) and their Wiſdom Natural Philoſophy; which ſuppoſe, that the Name Judæus ſignifyeth a Philoſopher, and that the Jews were renowned for their Philoſophic Wiſdom (which is ſaid to have drawn thoſe Grecanic Merchants, the Philoſophers, to trade with them) and that Ariſtotle had Commerce with them and diſcours'd of them. As Clearchus (a Diſciple of Ariſtotle) is ſuppos'd to ſay, that he ſaw a Jew, who was converſant with Ariſtotle; that Ariſtotle ſpake in his hearing of this Man's wonderful Philoſophy, and ſaid of him, (d) He communicated ſomewhat more than he receiv'd from Ariſtotle and his Fellow-Philoſophers; that in this Diſcourſe Ariſtotle ſpake of Jeruſalem and of the Jews, of whom he gave this account, (e) Theſe are the Progeny of the Indian Philoſophers. The Philoſophers amongſt the Indians (as 'tis ſaid) are named Callani, but amongſt the Syrians Jews, ſo denominated from the place. (f) Clearchus the ſuppos'd Author of theſe fabulous Reports is plainly Suppoſititious (as are alſo Ariſtobulus, Hecatæus, Ariſteus, and ſuch more), but the Report may be fabulous, although the Author be genuine, not ſuppoſititious; and ſuch is that Account of the Jews (unleſs it be underſtood of the Eſſens) which Clemens and Euſebius cite from an Ancient Hiſtorian Megaſthenes. (g) All that the Ancients have ſaid of Nature (Natural Philoſophy) is ſaid by them that philoſophize out of Greece: Amongſt the Indians by the Brachmans, and in Syria by thoſe that are call'd Jews. Of no better a Character is the Story from Hermippus touching Pythagoras; for we are told, that this Author reporteth, that Pythagoras ſaid, The Soul of one of his Friends (Calliphon the Crotonian who was dead) accompany'd him Day and Night, charging him, not to paſs by a place where an Aſs ſtumbleth or falleth upon his Knees, and to abſtain from Waters that cauſe Thirſt, and from all Contumelious Language. It is viſible, that this Story of a preaching Soul hath the Face of a Tale, and it is not probable, that Pythagoras ever related ſuch a Legend: Nor are thoſe Inſtitutes which the Soul is ſaid to give in charge, (though Learned Men ſuppoſe, (h) that the firſt of them had its riſe from Baalam's Aſs) either Hebraic or Pythagoric. Yet the Hiſtorian Hermippus addeth, as Joſephus ſaith, (i) Theſe things Pythagoras did and ſaid, imitating the Diſciplines of both the Jews and Thracians, which he transferr'd to himſelf: For that Man ſaith very true (as Joſephus inferreth) that he tranſlated many of the Judaical Inſtitutes into his Philoſophy. If Hermippus may be ſuppos'd to have written theſe Fabuloſities, I ſhould ſuſpect (the Indians being a much more agreeable Mate for the Thracians than the Jews) that he wrote Ἰνδῶν, Indians, not Ἰουδαίων, Jews. Howſoever that be, Joſephus's Inference is much larger than the Premiſes: But Origen hath enlarg'd it at the rate of a Rabbi. (k) Hermippus (ſaith he) is ſaid to report in his firſt Book of Legiſlators, Πυθαγόραν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ φιλοσοφίαν ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίων εἰς Ἕλληνας ἀγαγεῖν, that Pythagoras traduc'd his Philoſophy (all his Philoſophy, ſaith Mr. Selden) from the Jews to the Greeks. Origen is paid home in his own Coin by his Adverſary Celſus, who pretendeth, (l) that the Chriſtians traduc'd many of their Doctrines (which he inſtanceth in) from Plato, from the Pagan Theology and the Fables thereof (the Chriſtians miſunderſtanding or changing them) and that Chriſt himſelf took his Saying touching the difficulty of a Rich Man's Salvation from Plato. (m) So Amelius the Platoniſt (as Druſius ſaith) having read the beginning of the Goſpel of St. John, complain'd of him, that he had traduc'd into his Book his Maſter's Myſteries. As if the Pagan Theologers deſign'd to imitate the Chriſtian in extravagant Conceits touching the traduction of Matters of Learning and Theology! Of the extravagant Conceits of elder times there have been Learned Aſſertors in theſe later Ages, that have made conſiderable Improvements of them; for (to inſtance only in Pythagoras) Voſſius ſuppoſeth (n) that Pythagoras convers'd with thoſe that profeſs'd the Diſcipline of the Prophets Elias and Eliſha on Mount Carmel; others, (as Wendelin) are of Opinion, that he convers'd with the Prophet Daniel, and learned from him the Tetragrammaton; others ſuppoſe, that Zaratus Pythagoras's Maſter was the Prophet Ezekiel, and that Mochus the Sidonian Phyſiologer in Jamblichus (with whoſe Succeſſors Pythagoras convers'd) is Moſes. Theſe Learn'd Aſſertors of the old Extravagancies are the more culpable for their Credulity, becauſe ſome of them have ſo plainly convicted the Authors of them of groſs Fabuloſity, and becauſe their fabulous Reports ſo plainly confute one another, and ſometimes the Learned Aſſertors of them plainly confute themſelves: For Serranus ſaith, that Plato made no mention of the Jews, though he deriv'd his Wiſdom from them, becauſe their Name was odious amongſt all Nations; which is a ſelf-contradiction. For becauſe their Name was odious amongſt all Nations (as aſſuredly (o) it was) therefore Plato did not derive his Wiſdom from them. Joſephus reporteth touching the Seventh Day, that there is not any City of the Greeks or Barbarians, or any one Nation, where the cuſtom (or rite of obſerving) of the Seventh Day, on which we reſt, hath not come. In which words he confidently affirmeth theſe two things: (p) That in all Cities and Nations of the World there was an Obſervation of the Seventh Day (though they obſerv'd it not as the Jews) which was the Jews Sabbath: And that this their Obſervation of the Seventh Day had relation to the Jews Sabbath, and was a Propagation or Traduction from that Original; as both his words, and the ſcope and buſineſs of his whole Diſcourſe importeth. But there is more

(c) Selden. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 1. c. 2.

(d) Παρεδίδου τι μᾶλλον ὧν εἶχε.

(e) Οὗτοι εἰσιν ἀπόγονοι τῶν ἐν Ἰνδοῖς φιλοσόφων· καλοῦνται δὲ, ὥς φασιν, οἱ φιλόσοφοι παρὰ μὲν Ἰνδοῖς Κάλλανοι, παρὰ δὲ Σύροις Ἰουδαῖοι, τοὔνομα λαβόντες ἀπὸ τοῦ τόπου.

(f) Simon. Hiſt. Crit. l. 2. c. 2. l. 3. c. 23.

(g) Ἅπαντα μέν τοι τὰ περὶ φύσεως εἰρημένα παρὰ τοῖς ἀρχαίοις, λέγεται καὶ παρὰ τοῖς ἔξω τῆς Ἑλλάδος φιλοσοφοῦσι· τὰ μὲν παρὰ τοῖς Ἰνδοῖς ὑπὸ τῶν Βραχμάνων, τὰ δὲ ἐν Συρίᾳ ὑπὸ τῶν καλουμένων Ἰουδαίων.

(h) Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 78. ed. 2.

(i) Ταῦτα δὲ ἔπραττε καὶ ἔλεγε, καὶ Ἰουδαίων καὶ Θρακῶν δόξας μιμούμενος, καὶ μεταφέρων εἰς ἑαυτόν. λέγει γὰρ ὡς ἀληθῶς ὁ ἀνὴρ ἐκεῖνος πολλὰ τῶν Ἰουδαίοις νομίμων εἰς τὴν αὑτοῦ μετενεγκεῖν φιλοσοφίαν.

(k) c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 13.

(l) Ibid. l. 6. p. 286. l. 7. p. 370.

(m) Druſ. Not. in Joh. 1. 1.

(n) Voſ. de Sect. Phil. c. 6. ſ. 5. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 79. 397, 414. ed. 2. Selden. ubi ſupr.

(o) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. Diſſ. 1. c. 2. ſ. 2. & 5.

(p) Selden. ſupr. l. 3. c. 23.

more than enough diſcours'd by Mr. Selden, to (q) Ibid. c. 16. convict this Report of groſs Fabuloſity. (q) Ariſtobulus (who is follow'd by Clemens and Euſebius) ſaith of the Seventh Day; that Homer and Heſiod having tranſlated this out of our Books, plainly ſay, that it is holy. As if Homer's and Heſiod's holy Seventh Day was the ſame with the Judaical holy Seventh Day, which is altogether as remote from it as the Rod in the (r) Socrat. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 5. c. 17. Temple of Iſis from the Rod of Moſes, (r) or the Croſs in the Temple of Serapis from the Croſs of Chriſt. A Diſcourſe of this Author (Ariſtobulus) is recited in Euſebius, Pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 12. In the entrance thereof he pretendeth, that Plato follow'd the Inſtitutes of our Law, and it is manifeſt, that he ſearch'd into all the ſeveral Matters thereof; that Pythagoras ſelected and tranſlated many of our things into the Philoſophy of his Sect (the like he affirmeth of Socrates;) and to countenance this Fiction he reporteth, that there was a Tranſlation of the Scriptures into Greek before Demetrius Phalereus and the Empire of Alexander. The Body of this Diſcourſe is a recital of (pretendedly) Orphic Verſes, which (s) Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 187, 82, 85, 239. ed. 2. (s) a very learned Writer explodeth as Suppoſititious, the Figments of ſome Ancient Chriſtians and certain parcels of Scripture patch'd together: Yet this ſame Learned Writer ſuppoſeth, that the Entrance of this Author's Diſcourſe is genuine, that both the Pretenſions thereof are true, viz. that the Greek Philoſophers were converſant with the Jews, and ſearch'd the Scriptures, whence they deriv'd their Doctrine; and that there was a Tranſlation of the Scriptures (in part) into Greek before the Verſion of the Septuagint. But againſt this pretended Tranſlation of the Scriptures ſome other Learned Writers that ſuppoſe the Philoſophic Pagans, to have deriv'd the Matters of (t) Prolegom. in Bibl. Polyglot. 9. s. 6. their Wiſdom from the Hebrews (t) by way of Commerce and Tradition only (not from an acquaintance with the Scriptures) diſpute in this manner. There was no known Verſion of the Scriptures into Greek before Demetrius Phalereus; for he telleth King Ptolomæus, that none of the Greek Writers, Poets, or Hiſtorians dar'd to meddle with the Sacred Volumes, that they were far from making any mention of them, that Theopompus and (u) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 8. c. 3, 5. Theodectes (u) were puniſh'd by a Divine Hand for preſuming to meddle with them, and that the former of theſe having labour'd under a certain trouble of Mind for thirty Days, and pray'd to know the Cauſe, receiv'd this Anſwer in a Dream; It was becauſe he would ſearch too curiouſly into Divine Myſteries, and divulge them to common Men. Beſides, it is not reaſonable to think, that Ariſtotle would make uſe of an Hebrew Man, to interpret the Scriptures to him, as Clearchus reporteth (but no Man of common Wit and Sagacity can believe) if they had been tranſlated into Greek. It is manifeſt, that theſe Judaical Fabuloſities do not co- Lactant. here, (ea enim mendaciorum natura, ut cohærere non poſſint) that Judaical Writers fabulouſly report the Affairs of the Philoſophic Pagans, as the Pagans report Fabuloſities, when they write of the Affairs of the Jews. But we will ſuppoſe, that there is nothing of Fabuloſity in Porphyry's account of Pythagoras's reſort to the Jews; he reporteth from Diogenes, that Pythagoras went to the Egyptians, Arabians, Chaldeans and the Hebrews; but this Porphyry did not write, till the Jews were become famous for Philoſophy (their Philoſophic Paganizing had gain'd them a repute amongſt the Philoſophic Pagans) and then he had a mind, to do an Honour, not only to Pythagoras, but to the Jews, to whom alſo he might be willing to do an Honour out of ſpight to Chriſtianity (as either Porphyry, or the Devil, or both, were willing to do, (w) if thoſe Oracles that Euſebius hath cited from Porphyry, which rank the (w) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 9. c. 10. Hebrews amongſt the Nations eminent for Wiſdom and Religion, be not the Forgeries of ſome Jews or Chriſtians:) but allowing him (as we ought) the repute of a competent Witneſs touching the Affairs of Pythagoras; according to his Narration, Pythagoras became exact in the skill of Divination by Dreams amongſt the Hebrews. His Aſſociates (it ſhould ſeem) amongſt the Hebrews were certain Jews of his own Foot-mark, by whoſe Converſe (agreeably to the deſign of his Perigrination) he improv'd himſelf in that Branch of Theurgy (perhaps alſo in ſome * others, * Vid. Gale Not. in Jambl. p. 248, 249, 293. and he might learn amongſt them certain efficacious Names of great regard in Theurgy;) but the Pythagoric Philoſophy or Theology is not according to Porphyry a Deſcendent from the Hebrews. Porphyry and the Ancient Philoſophers ſuppos'd, that Egypt and the Oriental Magi were the Fountain of Philoſophy, not the Hebrews. The Roſicrucian Philoſophia Theologizata ſeemeth as credible as φιλοσοφία θεοπαράδοτος, a Philoſophy of Arcane Divine Tradition.

Thirdly, The Philoſophic-pagan kind of things are of no ſuch affinity with things Hebraical, that we may rationally ſuppoſe them Traductions from the Hebrews. The learned and holy Writers of the Primitive Church that ſuppoſe it, were far from conſidering the true Nature of the Hebrew Theology and Inſtitution; which overſight of theirs was the Origin (in ſeveral of them that were Philoſophical Men) of their extravagant Suppoſitions touching the Divine Original and Deſcent of the Wiſdom of the Philoſophic Pagans, of their groſs Miſrepreſentations of the Moſaic Theology, of their enormous Philoſophic paganizing the matters of the Chriſtian Theology (confounding things of Kind and Quality Pagan, with things of Kind and Quality Chriſtian,) of their great eſteem for ſuppoſititious Writings that were Philoſophic paganizing, of their extravagant Elogies of the Greek Philoſophy, their various Self-contradictions in diſcourſing of the Theology of the Philoſophic Pagans, and their inept Allegations to prove its Traduction from the Hebrews; which are too many Vices to be remark'd (if it could be avoided) in the Writings of learned and holy Men, that intentionally Diſpute for the Honour and Intereſt of Chriſtianity. (x) For that they (x) Baron. ad ann. 362. n. 256. might advance the Credit of it, reflect an Honour upon the Scriptures, and beat down the pride and boaſtings of the Heathen, therefore they Diſpute that their Philoſophers (and Poets alſo) traduc'd the Matters of their Wiſdom from the Hebrews. Not that the Greek Philoſophers traduc'd all their Wiſdom from thence; (y) Selden. ſupr. (y) but (as Clemens inculcateth) that they were generally Thieves, having taken their Principal Dogmata from Moſes and the Prophets without a thankful acknowledgement of them, (which is really an Argument that they had no acquaintance with them. The ſame Author ſaith of Plato, (z) I (z) Προτρεπτ. p.m. 34. ed. Lugd. Bat. know thy Maſters, though thou haſt a mind to conceal them. Thou learneſt Geometry from the Egyptians, Aſtronomy from the Babylonians, ſalutary Inchantments from the Thracians, and the Aſſyrians taught thee many things: But Laws ſo many as are true, and thy Opinion concerning God, theſe the Hebrews afforded thee. So Euſebius (who conceiveth, that Plato's Philoſophy is for the moſt part a Tranſlation as it were of the Scriptures into Greek) diſcourſeth; (a) That the Greeks had their Arts (Geometry, Muſick, Aſtronomy, Medicine, and many more) from the Barbarians, as alſo their Doctrine of many Gods, their Myſteries and ſacred Rites, and their fabulous Theology : But (as if thoſe Barbaric-pagan Nations could not afford them their Metaphyſicks as well as their other Learning) all that belongeth to the Religion of one Supream Deity, and ſuch things which concern thoſe great Enquiries that are for the bettering the Mind or the advantage of the Soul, are deriv'd from the Hebrews only. The ground of this Conceit is the great Affinity and Agreement, which the Philoſophic-pagan Theology is ſuppos'd to have with the Hebraical, which theſe Theologers of the Church pretend to demonſtrate by voluminous Collections out of the Writings of Plato eſpecially: But theſe voluminous Allegations are plainly inept for their purpoſe, the moſt of them plainly refute their Hypotheſis; the agreement of the Philoſophic-pagans with the Hebrews in any matter of Theology is nothing ſo great as the diſagreement; there is not any branch of their Theology that is a genuine Traduction from the Hebrews; the Similitude that is between certain Sayings of the Philoſophic Pagans and the Sayings of Holy Scripture (as between Plato's τὸ ὄν, That which is, and Ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ ὤν, I am he that is) is but in Words, not in Senſe; for the Philoſophic Pagans ſpeak of Philoſophic-pagan kind of things, whereas the Sayings of Holy Scripture are touching Holy-popular kind of things, (ſuch are the matters of the Hebrew Theology) which are of Nature and Character diametrically oppoſite to one another. From which account of their Difference it appeareth, that there is much of foul dealing in the Parallelіſms that are made between the Hebrew Theology and the Philoſophic Pagan, which is too viſible in ſome ancient Writers of the Church; for as Eraſmus complaineth, that ſince Men could not bring the World to Chriſtianity, they have brought Chriſtianity to the World : So to accommodate an Agreement between theſe two oppoſite Theologies, thoſe learned Writers have brought the Hebrew Theology to the Philoſophic Pagan. In imitation of Philo and the Philoſophic Pagans (who myſticiz'd and allegoriz'd their fabulous Theology) the beſt learn'd of them took up an humour of allegorizing away the true Senſe of the Scriptures. Inſtead of genuine and legitimate Notices of the Matters of the Chriſtian Theology, they have ſubſtituted Platoniſm, Philoniſm, Scholaſticiſm, which is much elder than our Schoolmen. To conform our Wiſdom to the Philoſophic Pagan, (b) S. Cyril maketh the Moſaic Philoſophy (as they call it) Bipartite, diſtinguiſhing it into Theoretic and Practic, (c) for what wiſe or worthy Diſcipline is there (ſaith he) that is not in Moſes's Diſcourſes ? Euſebius will have it Tripartite, and diſtributeth the Diſcipline of the Hebrews (d) into Ethical, Logical, Phyſiological. (e) Origen will have the diſtribution Quadripartite, which he ſuppoſeth Solomon to have compris'd in his Books; the Ethical in his Proverbs, the Phyſical in Eccleſiaſtes, the Theological in the Canticles, commixing the Logical with the other; and this diſtribution of Diſciplines he ſuppoſeth the Grecanic Wiſemen to have learn'd from Solomon, but to have arrogated the Invention to themſelves. The humour of Philoſophic-paganizing matters of Theology was the riſe of Origen's extravagant Conceits (which are commonly known and as ſeverely cenſur'd) in ſubſtituting the things of the Philoſophic-pagan Theology inſtead of the holy things of the Chriſtian Theology, or in turning the latter into the former (which one Error (f) is the Summ of Origen's Errors) he trod in the ſteps of his learned Inſtitutor Clemens (who is thought by S. Hierom the moſt learned of all the Ancients;) and although they differ in the Members of their diſtribution, yet they agree in making (g) a quadripartite diſtribution of the Moſaic Philoſophy, and their diſtribution is alike abſurd. For as it is an abſurdity in Origen, to make the Book of Eccleſiaſtes a Book of Phyſicks (or natural Philoſophy) ſo it is alike abſurd in Clemens, to make the Moſaic Sacrifices a matter of Phyſiology; to make one part of the Moſaic Philoſophy Hiſtorical (which cannot be Philoſophy) and another part of it Metaphyſical, which is not Scriptural Philoſophy. Of the Greeks Philoſophy, he ſaith, (h) They were made juſt by it in part (and in part only; for he ſaith, (i) they that were juſt according to Philoſophy, had need of Faith in our Lord and the abandoning of Idolatry, and therefore had the Goſpel preach'd to them in Hades;) (k) Philoſophy was given to the Greeks as their proper Teſtament, (l) and as the Law to the Jews until the coming of our Saviour, (m) is an Erudition preparative to the perfection, that is by Chriſt, (n) and as the Law the Hebrews, ſo Philoſophy pedagogiz'd the Greeks unto Chriſt; (o) As God would have the Jews ſaved, and therefore gave them Prophets, ſo the moſt excellent of the Greeks theſe he raiſed as their Prophets. The ſame God afforded both Teſtaments the Old and New, and was the donor of Philoſophy to the Greeks, whereby the Almighty is glorified by the Greeks. The Jews and the Greeks Teſtament are both Old: But the one only God is known by the Greeks Ethnically, by the Jews Judaically, by us newly and ſpiritually, as this Author diſcourſeth from a certain Book, The Preachment of S. Peter, to which he added a (pretended) ſaying of S Paul, that directeth us, (p) to conſult the Grecanic Books, the Sibyll and Hyſtaſpes. Agreeably to theſe Elogies of the Greek Philoſophy he confoundeth the true God with the Platoniſts Myſtic-Metaphyſical firſt Nature, (q) repreſenteth him as unknowable, innominable, undeclarable, as they do their Monad or T'Agathon, who is not to be worſhipp'd by Speech, but in Silence; and ſo Clemens ſaith of God, (r) who is not to be declar'd by Word or Speech, but to be ador'd and Worſhipp'd (being ſtruck with an holy admiration) with veneration and ſilence. (s) He ſuppoſeth, that the Region of God is χώρα ἰδεῶν, the Land of the Platonic Ideas, (t) that he who is converſant with the Forms or Ideas (which is a Philoſophic-pagan kind of heavenly mindedneſs) is already become as an Angel, or a God amongſt Men, and ſhall be with Chriſt being a Theoretic; (u) that Plato's City is ſeated in Heaven, (w) that the Abſtract Philoſophic Life deſcrib'd by Plato in his Theætetus is the Chriſtian Life; that the comprehenſion of the Ideas (x) which is the Platonic Nous is (y) the Logos of God; that the Logos of the Father of all is (z) the ſame with Reaſon, of which all Men participate; and that Philoſophy hath its Origin from this Platonic

Son

(a) Pr. ev. l. 13. proœm.

J. Mart. paræn. p. 19, 20. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 11.

(b) C. Jul. l 1. p. 14.

(c) Ποῖον γὰρ μάθημα σοφόντε καὶ ἀξιόληπτον τοῖς Μωσαϊκοῖς οὐκ ἔνεστι λόγοις;

(d) Pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 3, 4, &c.

(e) Hom. 1. in Cant. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 357. ed. 2.

(f) Petav. T. 1. proleg. c. 3. S. 6.

(g) Clem. Strom. l. 1. p. m. 259.

(h) Strom. l. 1. p. 234.

(i) l. 6. p. 459.

(k) p. 467.

(l) p. 497.

(m) p. 499.

(n) l. 1. p. 207.

(o) l. 6. p. 458.

(p) V. Spencer. not. in Orig. p. 70.

(q) Strom. l. 5. p. 422, 424, 428.

(r) Ὀυκ ἔτι φωνῇ παραδιδόμενον, σεβάσματι δὲ καὶ σιγῇ μετ᾽ ἐκπλήξεως ἁγίας σεβαστὸν καὶ σεπτόν. Strom. l. 7. p. 503.

(s) p. 425.

(t) l. 4. p. 391.

(u) p. 396.

(w) l. 5. p. 434.

(x) l. 4. p. 391.

(y) l. 5. p. 403.

(z) l. 1. p. 214. l. 5. p. 300. προλεγ. p. 46.

Son of God (a) diſtributing to all Greeks and Barbarians, according to their aptitude and capacity of receiving τοῖς μὲν ἐντολάς, τοῖς δὲ φιλοσοφίαν παραχών, having given Laws to the one, Philoſophy to the other. Thus the great Articles of the Chriſtian Theology are Philoſophic-paganiz'd by this learned Rhapſodiſt, who as he was impos'd upon by the Philoſophic-paganizing Gnoſticks (ſo called from their pretended arcane ſublime Knowledge) and their ſuppoſititious Writings, ſo the deſign of his Stromata is to deſcribe and form, not a genuine holy Man of the Chriſtian Inſtitution, but a Gnoſtick, that is (not a Theologus (b) as Petavius miſtaketh, but) a Philoſophic Perfectioniſt Chriſtiano-platonic-ſtoical, whoſe γνῶσις or Sapience is the perfection of Philoſophizing. I will not ſay, that this Idea is Heretical, as the Gnoſticks were, but (c) it aboundeth with extravagant Conceits. (For this Idea is conform'd to the Platoniſts and Stoicks deſcription of their Sapiens, or Philoſophic Perfectioniſt, Clemens's Gnoſtick is a Platonic Theoriſt and Stoical Apathiſt, his Habit or State of Apathy maketh him equal to the Angels and a a God in Fleſh; he is a Co-heir of the Lords and Gods (as this Author (d) ſpeaketh.) Other Chriſtians are ſuppoſed to be meer Servants, or but faithful Servants, the Gnoſtick is a Friend and Son of God; his Principle of Well-doing is not to gain Reward, or to avoid Puniſhment, γνῶσις, and to be in perpetual Contemplation, is his ſummum bonum; he would not only have Science as an Adjunct, but his aim is, to be it; he needeth not the cuſtody of Angels, nor needeth to Pray as others do, &c). Which extravagant Conceits being for the moſt part Philoſophic-pagan, they demonſtrate at what a rate the matters of the Chriſtian Religion have been (culpably) Philoſophic-paganiz'd by the learned Writers of the Church Primitive. The Philoſophic Pagans being of great renown, this humour of (criminal) Philoſophic-paganizing that ſo early invaded the Church, was thought a noble thing, and ſeem'd to make for the Honour and Intereſts of Chriſtianity: but becauſe it is oppoſite to the Nature and Deſign of the Chriſtian Religion, therefore the Fathers are forc'd to ſay and unſay the ſame things; they fall into many Self-contradictions in their account of the Pagan Theology, as might be prov'd by many Inſtances, but theſe following Inſtances may ſuffice. Clemens who hath diſcours'd ſo copiouſly for the Traduction of Grecanic Literature from the Hebrews, for the Grecanic notices of God, and who pretendeth to find the great things of the Chriſtian Theology in the Greek Philoſophy, and affirmeth, that the Hebrew or Moſaic Philoſophy is without Controverſie (e) the moſt ancient of any Wiſdom or Philoſophy, yet ſaith of Philoſophy, (f) It treateth not of the Son of God, for it was not acquainted with God's Religion, [(g) ſecular learning is a ſtrange Woman,] the Hereſies that are in the Barbaric Philoſophy ſpeak of one God, but invent another God. (h) The Greek Philoſophers although they name God, know not God; Homer ſpeaketh of the Father of Gods and Men, (i) μὴ εἰδὼς τίς ὁ πατὴρ, καὶ πῶς ὁ πατὴρ, not knowing who is the Father and how a Father. The Philoſophy which the Apoſtle calleth Secular or Mundane, is ſometimes interpreted (k) of the Gentile Philoſophy in general, (l) ſometimes of the Atheiſtic Epicurean Philoſophy only. Of Moſes, Clemens reporteth, (m) that he was taught the Arithmetic, Geometric, Rhythmic, Harmonic, Iatric and Muſic Learning by eminent Perſons amongſt the Egyptians; that he learned their Letters, and the Science of things Celeſtial from the Chaldeans and Egyptians; that they taught him the Philoſophy by Symbols or Hieroglyphicks; and that the Greeks in Egypt taught him (as being a regial Child) another Encyclopædy, as Philo ſaith in the Life of Moſes. But if he learn'd an Encyclopædy under Grecanic Maſters, how could he be the firſt wiſe Man, or his Philoſophy be the moſt ancient? How could the Grecanic Sages be but Children in reſpect of his Age, and derive their Learning from him? With the like inconſiſtence the Alexandrian Cyril writeth, (n) that the Greeks (their Wiſemen) were acquainted with the Dogmata of Moſes, and with the Holy Trinity of Moſes and the Prophets: Yet he not only denieth, (o) that Chriſtianiſm hath any thing in common with Greciſm; but he affirmeth alſo touching the Greeks, (p) they Mythologize many thouſands of Gods, τὸν ἕνα δὲ φύσει καὶ ἀληθῶς εἰσάπαν ἠγνοηκότες, but are totally ignorant of the one God really and truly ſuch. Theodoret writeth, (q) that Anaxagoras and Pythagoras (as alſo Plato) were converſant in Egypt with the Egyptian and Hebraic Wiſemen, from whom they gain'd the knowledge of the true God. But if they gain'd it from the Hebrews, they could not gain it from the Egyptians (for theſe were ſuch oppoſite kind of Religioniſts, that they could not agree to inſtitute the Greeks in the knowledge of one and the ſame kind of Deity;) and if theſe Philoſophers had the knowledge of the true God, that cannot be true, which this Author writeth of Homer and Heſiod, (r) παντάπασι τὸν τοῦ παντὸς ἠγνόησαν ποιητὴν they were altogether ignorant of the Maker of the World. Yet ſome affirm, (s) That Homer had read over all the Books of Moſes, as by places ſtollen thence almoſt word for word may appear; of which Juſtin Martyr remembreth many. (t) Others have obſerv'd, that Heſiod and Homer (in their Coſmogonia) follow a Moſaic Cabala, which Plato and Ariſtotle underſtood not, which implieth, that the Philoſophers were the greater ſtrangers to matters Hebraical. It is much, that learned Men ſhould entertain a Suppoſition, that the Poets and Philoſophers deriv'd their Doctrine from the Hebrews, and yet deſtroy the ground and reaſon of it. For J. Mart. tells the Greeks, (u) That nothing true in matters of Religion is to be learn'd from their Maſters. Theophilus ſaith, (w) That their Diſcourſe is vain and fooliſh, a multitude of Nugacities, not a particle of Truth is found in them; (for if they ſeem to ſay any thing that is true, it is as Honey or Wine mix'd with Poyſon;) and the Alexandr. Cyril (x) ſaith of Pythagoras and Plato, They were ſcarce able to ſteal a becoming Opinion likely to truth. If the Doctrine and Diſcourſes of the Heathen Writers are of ſo bad a Character, why are they thought a Traduction from the Hebrews? how is it, that the Wiſdom and Learning of the Hebrews is not to be found in them?

Fourthly, Many of the ſuppos'd Traductions from the Hebrews are independent and undeſign'd Coincidences and Correſpondences (in whole or in part) many of them are Traductions from another Original; and ſome of them are traduc'd not from the Hebrews, but by the Hebrews from the Pagans. (y) There is ſuch a Coincidence between the Exordium of Solomon's Divine Satyr (Vanity of Vanities, all is Vanity) and the beginning of Perſius's firſt Satyr (ô curas hominum! ô quantum eſt in rebus inane!) that if the Romans had been acquainted with the

(a) l. 7. p. 504.

(b) T. 1. proleg. c. 4.

(c) Strom. l. 4, 6, 7.

(d) Strom. l. 6. p. 483.

(e) Strom. l. 1. p. 234.

(f) l. 6 p. 486.

(g) l. 1. p. 207.

(h) l. 6. p. 495.

(i) p. 499.

(k) l. 1. p. 229.

(l) l. 6. p. 465, 467. l. 1. p. 216.

(m) l. 1. p. 252.

(n) C. Jul. l. 1. p. 14, 32. & l. 9. p. 294.

(o) l. 1. p. 7.

(p) l. 7. p. 232.

(q) Θεραπ. ſer. 1. & 2 p. 6, 24, 25, 27.

(r) ibid. p. 25.

(s) Sir W. Rawleigh Hiſt. l. 1. par 1. c. 6. S. 7.

(t) Dr. Cudw. Intell. ſyſt. p. 352.

(u) Paræn. p. 8.

(w) Ad Autol. l. 2. p. 91.

(x) c. Jul. l. 1. p. 7.

(y) Caſaub. com. ad Perſ. ſat. p. 36.

the Holy Books, as they were with the Grecanic Poets, who would have doubted of Perſius's borrowing his Exordium from Solomon? But this marvellous ξυνέμπτωσις (Coincidence) is fortuitous, ſaith Caſaubon. There is in great part (z) a Correſpondence between the Apologue of Er in Plato, and our Saviour's Parable touching Dives and Lazarus, which can be no Traduction, but a fortuitous Parallelìſm only; and there is alike undeſign'd Coincidence between the religious Forms of ſpeaking uſual in ancient Pagan Writers, and the religious Phraſeology of holy Men in Scripture, (God put it into my Heart, God deliver'd him into my Hand) as the Apologiſt for Herodotus (a) hath obſerv'd. (b) So there are ſome Laws of ancient Legiſlators (mention'd by Ariſtotle in his Politicks touching Eſtates and Inheritances, that are like the Moſaic Laws, but there is no appearance, that they were traduc'd from the Hebrews. Of this Nature (as ordinary Reaſon will pronounce) are thoſe Parallelìſms that are made (c) between the holy Writers of the Bible and the Prince of Grecanic Poets (Homer,) their Phraſes and forms of Speech, Hiſtorical Narrations and Moral Sentences; as alſo the Conformity which the Sentences of many other Greek Writers (d) are obſerv'd to have with the Scriptures, which are Teſtimonia animæ naturaliter Chriſtianæ (thoſe Sentences ſhew, that there are Notices and Principles of Religion in Humane Nature) no Hebraical Traductions. So there are many little correſpondences between the Hebrew Theology and the Diſcourſes of Plato touching the Origin of the Univerſe, the goodneſs of the Opificer, the Exiſtence of a Deity, particular Providence, the Juſtice of Providence, the Veracity of the Gods, the Duty of Belief, the Virtue of Fidelity, the Obſervance of Parents, the Neceſſity of good Education, and adherence to our Duty, and the diſtribution of his Citizens into Twelve Tribes; (e) and ſome few of Plato's Laws (who yet inſtituteth a Common-wealth as if he was inſtituting a Bawdy-houſe) are conſentaneous to the Moſaical: But all theſe little Correſpondences are plainly undeſign'd and independent upon the Hebrews, as is alſo that wild Imagination (diſcours'd of in Plato's Politicus) touching the inverted Revolution of the World from Weſt to Eaſt, (whereby the order of Nature is inverted, and old age runneth back into Childhood) which yet is alledg'd by Euſebius as one of the principal of the Dogma's which he deriv'd from the Moſaic Writings. There is nothing in Plato better than Pagan Theology, the Wit and Judgment of a learned Heathen may Philoſophize touching theſe matters to as good purpoſe, as Plato hath done without learning Hebrew or reading Moſes and the Prophets. A Conceit that had its riſe from that extravagant eſteem of Plato and his Theology (for want of underſtanding it aright) which hath ſometime poſſeſs'd the learned World. His extravagant Admirers ſuppoſe, (f) that he was more than a Man, that he ſpake by the afflation of the Holy Ghoſt, that he read the Divine Oracles (and traduc'd his Doctrine from them) wherewith he had no acquaintance. One thing that is thought, to argue his acquaintance with the Scriptures, or at leaſt with ſome Tradition of the Hebrew Theology, is the Platonic Logos and Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes (call'd by Proclus with reſpect to the Chaldaic Oracles, Θεοπαράδοτος Θεολογία, a Theology deliver'd by the Gods,) which is thought originally a Moſaic Cabala, a Triad conſonant to the Scriptures and the Holy Trinity of our Theology. But it will be found (in the ſequel of this Diſcourſe,) that there is little of real Conſonance (and that fortuitous) in this parallelìſm; that no ſuch thing as a Trinity is to be learned from the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament (for God, ſaith Theodoret, (g) did not openly reveal the Dogma of the Trinity in thoſe times;) that it is not a Cabala of the Old Teſtament, any further than the Meſſiah is a Cabala (which Meſſiah is Chriſt as deliver'd by the Prophets (h) whom no Infidels do receive;) that the Platonic Triad is a meer Philoſophic-Pagan Myſtery, of Nature and Character oppoſite to the matters of the Hebrew Theology; and as Learning is thought (i) to have had its riſe amongſt the Chaldeans and Egyptians (Philoſophy and the moſt ancient Learning of Aſtronomy) from whom alſo the Greeks had their Learning: So Grotius ſuppoſeth, (k) that Plato learn'd his Triad from the Chaldeans; doubtleſs, it is a deſcendent, not from the Hebrew Theiſm, but from Oriental Zabiiſm, from the ancient Magi, from whom the Egyptian Prieſts and the Greek Philoſophers deriv'd it, as Pletho affirmeth. And the ſame account muſt be given of the Platonic Philoſophers Doctrine touching Αὐγοειδὲς σῶμα, ψυχῆς λεπτὸν ὄχημα, ὄχημα αἰθέριον, the luciform Body, ſubtle Vehicle, etherial Vehicle of the Soul; that this was an eminent Branch of the ancient Philoſophic Theurgical Theology, which hath a meaſurable agreement with Chriſtianity (complicated with far greater diſagreement:) but in debating the buſineſs of a Cabala, we are not conſidering its Agreement with Chriſtianity, but with the Theology of the ancient Hebrews, who had (comparatively) very ſlender Notices of Eternal Life, or of an heavenly Glory and Immortality, and therefore cannot probably be thought, to have Philoſophiz'd touching the ſubtle Luciform Body, the Etherial Vehicle of the Soul. This may be called an ancient Philoſophic Cabala, but is no proof of a Divine Tradition or Cabala amongſt the Hebrews firſt, and from them communicated to the Egyptians and other Nations. Grotius ſaith (l) that many things came from the Chaldeans and Greeks to the later Hebrews; and diſcourſing of the viſibility of the Lucid Vehicle of the Soul, he ſaith, it may well be doubted, whether this was not one of them. From the ſame Original with this Philoſophic Cabala Numa deriv'd his Pythagoric Wiſdom, his never dying Fire, his Averſation from Images, which (together with innumerable other Rites in Paganiſm) are fortuitous undeſign'd Coincidences with the Moſaic Inſtitutes. For there is no reaſon to think that Numa had any Commerce with the Hebrews, but great reaſon to think that in Egypt he became acquainted with the Theology of the ancient Magi, which being (without doubt) the Origin of Pythagoras's Philoſophy or Theology, his Sentences and Inſtitutes, even thoſe which have ſome correſpondence with the Moſaical, may with greater probability be deriv'd from them than from the Hebrews. Such as (m) to abſtain from that which dyeth of it ſelf, (an Inſtitute not peculiar to the Hebrews, (n) amongſt the Pagans it was thought a Pollution, to Eat of that which dieth of it ſelf) Not to ingrave the form of a God upon a Ring, not to hurt or deſtroy an innocuous fruit-bearing Tree. He preſcrib'd the gaining of purity (o) by Expi- ations.

(z) Spencer. not. in Orig. c. Celſ. p. 36.

(a) H. Stephan. Apol. pro Herodot. p. 4.

(b) Cunæus de Rep. Hebr. l. 1. c. 4.

(c) Duport. Metaphr. Pſal. præfat.

(d) Grot. Dict. Poet. in proleg. Huet. dem. ev. p. 338, 346, 349, ed. 2.

(e) Spencer. not. in Orig. c. Celſ. p. 76.

(f) Spencer. ibid. p 28. Tiraquel. de nobil. c. 20. n. 137. Huet. dem. ev. p. 80. ed. 2.

(g) Θεραπ. Ser. 2. p. 30.

(h) Clem. Str. l. 6. p. 486.

(i) Jambl. vit. Pyth. c. 29. Sennert T. 1. p. 60. Bullialdus. proleg. ad Aſtr. phil. Grot. de V. R. C. l. 2. S. 9.

(k) Ibid. l. 4. S. 12.

(l) Not. in Matth. 28. 9.

(m) Idem de V. R. C. l. 1. S. 16. in Annot.

(n) Idem in Lev. 17. 15.

(o) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 1. c. 8. S 3. Grot. Not. in Matt 8. 22.

ations, Ablutions, Aſperſions, by being pure from the Pollution of dead Bodies, and Women in Child-birth, and abſtaining from theſe following Meats; that which dieth of it ſelf, Mulli, Melanuri, Eggs, Oviparous Animals and Beans, and other things which they injoin, that perform the ſacred Rites and Myſteries in the Temples. Theſe Rites of Purity are plainly the Inſtitutes of Theurgical Sanctity, that muſt be deriv'd from Oriental Zabiiſm; for ſeveral of them cannot be deriv'd from the Hebrews: Nor is it reaſonable with J. Mart. to derive the Pagans Cuſtom of putting off their Shooes in their Temples from thoſe words of the Lord to Moſes (out of the burning Buſh) put off thy Shooes from off thy Feet, which were (p) an Admonition only of the Divine Preſence, thereby commanding the Rite then accuſtomed in places hallowed. Such an imaginary Traduction from the Hebrews is that of Philo, (q) who will have the Philoſopher Zeno, to have deriv'd his Notion of Liberty and Servitude from the Jews Law: Whereas not Zeno from the Hebrews, but the Hebrews (ſuch as Philo) deriv'd from Zeno the Notion of Liberty and Servitude. From the various Opinions of the Jews touching our Saviour's Perſon (ſome ſaying that he was John the Baptiſt, ſome Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets, Matth. 16. 14.) it appeareth that they ſuppos'd a certain Metempſychoſis or Tranſmigration of the Soul (for they ſuppos'd, that the Soul of ſome one of their eminent holy Men deceas'd animated our Saviour's Body;) the Phariſees held a Tranſmigration of virtuous Souls out of one Body into another; the Cabaliſts amongſt the Jews agreeable to the Platoniſts aſſert גלגול הנפשות the rotation of Souls, therefore ſome of the learn'd conceive, (r) that the Hebrews anciently held ſuch an Opinion touching the Soul, and that the Pythagoric or Platonic παλιγγενεσία (the being born again into a new Body) is a Traduction from the Hebrews. But Euſebius who could find an Hebrew Original for almoſt every trifling conceit in Platoniſm, could find none for the Platonic Rotation of Souls; he affirmeth, (s) that the Dogma is not Hebraical, but that Plato traduc'd it from the Egyptians. Therefore (according to this Author) the Hebrews have traduc'd it from the Philoſophic Pagans. But this Author is not always alike happy in diſcerning matters Hebraical from things of Kind and Quality Philoſophic Pagan; as appeareth from that ignorant Conceit of his, (wherein yet he hath ſeveral Followers both of Ancient and Modern times) touching the Therapeutæ deſcrib'd by Philo (in his Book of Contemplative Life) who in ſeveral parts of the World, but chiefly in Egypt, liv'd the Life of Philoſophical Aſceticks, (not ſolitarily, but) in Religious Societies. Theſe Therapeutæ Euſebius peremptorily affirmeth, to have been Chriſtians converted by S. Mark, that embrac'd an Aſcetick Philoſophic Life. The abſurdity of this Conceit is demonſtrated by Scaliger, Valeſius, and a judicious Divine of our own (t), we will only obſerve, that their Wiſdom was the Theoretic part of Philoſophy (which, as Philo ſaith, is the moſt Divine of all other,) the Knowledge and Contemplation of Nature, and the Allegory of the Moſaic Law; that they Pythagoriz'd in their Diet, their ſilent Feaſt, and their veneration for numbers; that their deſcription ſpeaketh them Philoniſts, a Philoſophic Paganizing Sect (whether they may be called a Sect of Contemplative Eſſens, it is needleſs to diſpute.) one Reaſon of their Name is becauſe (u) from Nature and the Holy Laws they have learn'd to Worſhip the Being, or Him that truly is, who is alſo better than Goodneſs, more ſimple than Unity, more Archigenial than the Monad. In which deſcription of the Deity Philo is a Diſciple of the Philoſophic Pagans, and ſuch are alſo the Hebrew Doctors, who uſually derive their Dogmata from them. (w) They have deriv'd their Purgatory, or Gehenna Superior, where Souls are tormented and purg'd for Twelve Months, from Plato's Phædo (thoſe that ſeem to be guilty of great yet ſanable Offences, it is neceſſary that they fall into Tartarus; but the Surge there caſteth them out, after they have ſtay'd a Year, ſaith Plato,) whence Origen alſo had his Purgatory, which he introduc'd into the Church. What Plato ſubjoineth in his Phædo is almoſt word for word tranſcrib'd by the Talmudiſts. (x) Thoſe that are to be judged in the other World, the Jews rank and diſtribute in the ſame manner with Plato, who diſtributeth them into thoſe that have liv'd well (holily and juſtly) thoſe that have not ſo liv'd, and thoſe of a middle Order; which ſeverals have a like allotment from Plato and from the Hebrew Doctors. (y) Of the Eſſens Opinion touching a future State, Joſephus giveth an account tranſcribing the very words of Homer. (z) Their Opinion is the ſame with the Greeks, they allot an Elyſium of perpetual ſerenity and good temperature of Weather, and of gentle refreſhing breathings of Air, to good and vertuous Souls.

(p) Mr. Mede on Eccl. 5. 4. S. 3.

(q) Quod omn. prob. liber. p. 598. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(r) Grot. not. in Matth. 14. 2.

(s) Pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 16.

(t) D. Cave Life of S. Mark.

(u) Ἐκ φύσεως ᾗ τῶν ἱερῶν νόμων ἐπαιδεύθησαν θεραπεύειν τὸ ὂν, ὃ ᾗ ἀγαθοῦ κρεῖττόν ἐστι, καὶ ἑνὸς εἰλικρινέστερον, καὶ μονάδος ἀρχεγονώτερον.

(w) Windet. de vit. funct. p. 199. ed. 3.

(x) Ibid. p. 124.

(y) Ibid. p. 177. Marſham Can. Chron. p. 287. ed. Lipſ.

(z) Ταῖς μὲν ἀγαθαῖς (ψυχαῖς) ὁμοδοξοῦντες παισὶν Ἑλλήνων ἀποφαίνονται τὴν ὑπὲρ ὠκεανὸν δίαιταν ἀποκεῖσθαι, καὶ χῶρον οὔτε ὄμβροις, οὔτε νιφετοῖς, οὔτε καύμασι βαρυνόμενον, ἀλλ' ὃν ἐξ ὠκεανοῦ πρᾶυς ἀεὶ ζέφυρος ἐπιπνέων ἀναψύχει.

VII. This Diſcourſe againſt pretended Traductions from the Hebrews muſt be underſtood with ſome Diſtinctions, Reſtrictions and Limitations. For it is not my intention to ſay that there are no Traductions from the Hebrews amongſt the Pagans: But that the Pagans genuine or undoubted Traductions from the Hebrews are not many. That the Philoſophic Pagan Theology and the Philoſophic Pagan kind of things are no Traduction from the Hebrews; that Pythagoras and Plato (who are ſuppos'd to be חכמי חקבלה Wiſe-men of the Cabala, as the Jews ſpeak) had no better Notices of matters Hebraical than other Foreigners to the Hebrews Inſtitution; and that Joſephus's Elogies of the Law (which have obtain'd credit both amongſt the Ancient and Modern Writers of the Church) are intermix'd with very vain and romantick Conceits; namely, That the Inſtitutes of the Law ingendered in all Men a deſire of Emulation, that the Greek Philoſophers ſeem'd to obſerve their Country-inſtitutes, but in the matters of Practice and in Philoſophizing follow'd Moſes, ſymbolizing with him in their Sentiments touching God, teaching perfection (or frugality) of Life and mutual Communion; that in the vulgar ſort there was no ſmall, deſire of imitating afar off the Judaical Rites, nor is there any City or Nation, Greek or Barbarian, to which the Cuſtom of the Seventh Day (whereon the Jews reſt) hath not come; Faſts alſo and Lights, and many Obſervations touching Meats prohibited to us. They endeavour alſo (ſaith he) to imitate our mutual Concord, equal diſtribution of things, induſtry in Arts, and the tolerance or conſtancy to which we are driven for the Laws.

Joſeph. c. Apion. l. 2.

Laws. As God pervadeth the whole World, ſo the Law hath gone through all Men. This Author hath not told us by what means the Moſaic Law arriv'd at the notice of the Greek Philoſophers and of all Mankind; he hath not ſo much as mention'd Ariſtobulus's Verſion of the Scriptures into Greek before Demetrius Phalereus and the Empire of Alexander; which is an Argument, that he had no intelligence of any ſuch Author, or of his Greek Verſion. And the Greek Writers of thoſe elder times had as little; for whereas if there had been any ſuch Verſion, the Greeks could not have fail'd, to have been well acquainted with the Jews and their Affairs, they were ſo obſcurely known to Herodotus, that he calleth them, (a) the Syrians in Paleſtine. The Jews themſelves had no notice of any ſuch Verſion, as appeareth from their Calendar at the eighth Day of the Month Tebeth. (b) A Faſt. The Law was written in Greek in the Days of Ptolomee the King: Darkneſs for three Days throughout the World. But if we ſhould ſuppoſe a Verſion of the Scriptures into Greek before the Alexandrian, it would ſignifie little to the propagating the Moſaic Inſtitutes throughout the World; nor was the Jews Religion ſo well thought of in the Pagan World, as to ingender in them a deſire of Imitation (many Matters of the Law of the Jews paſs'd through the World, but not as Matters of their Law;) nor do the Greek Philoſophers follow Moſes ſymbolizing with him in their Sentiments touching God; nor is it poſſible, that the Greeks Philoſophy ſhould be a Traduction from the Hebrews Law and Religion. There is (doubtleſs) amongſt the Pagans a Traduction of ſome Hebrew Names and Phraſeologies (as Jao, Cabiri, and Bacchus's being born out of Jupiter's Thigh) the Hebrew Names Sabaoth, Adonai and ſuch more, were found to be of great efficacy in Theurgy; (c) for Men acknowledge (ſaith Clemens) that thoſe Prayers were more powerful which are ſpoken in a Barbaric Language. Beſides theſe undoubted Traductions from the Hebrews Villalpandus ſuppoſeth a Traduction of Architecture, (d) and others (with good reaſon) ſuppoſe, that ſome of the Attick Laws are traduc'd from the Moſaic. In the Phenician (Sanchoniathon's) account of the Origin of the World and the Egyptians account of it in Diodorus, and in ſeveral other Heathen Authors, there are various notices of things pertaining to the Coſmopœia (or Creation of this lower World) that are of great affinity with the Moſaical: Chaos, Tartarus, Erebus; ſo the Pythagoreans (e) Euryſus, Euryphamus, Archytas, have diſcourſed, that the Opificer himſelf was the Exemplar, conformably to which he made Man, conſonantly to the Moſaic Theology; but with no greater Conſonance thereto than is viſible in that of the Poet, Finxit in effigiem moderantum cuncta Deorum. In their notices touching Noah's Sons there is an appearance of Traduction from the Hebrews (but who can ſay, whether theſe Notices of the Pagans were the Remains of Ancient Tradition, or Traductions from the Hebrews by the Phenicians?) there is alſo an appearance, that ſome few of the Religious Rites and Inſtitutes of the Hebrews were propagated amongſt the Pagans; that the Bætulia or rude unpoliſh'd Stones which in ancient times were Symbols of the Gods, and were conſecrated by pouring Oyl upon them, had their Name from Jacob's fact at Bethel, Gen. 28. 18. As the Rite of Sacrifice was deriv'd from the Religion of Adam's Family: So the Rite of Circumciſion which was in uſe (f) amongſt the Egyptians, Ethiopians, Colchi, and other Heathen Nations (the Americans alſo (g) are ſaid to have us'd it) but with great difference from the Cuſtom of the Hebrews, might be a derivative from the Religion of Abraham's Family; and on the other Hand, an humourſome Rite of the Nations might be inſtituted by God into a Rite of Religion to Abraham and his Family. There is great likelihood, that the Proverb (h) τὰ καννάκȣ κλαύσω, I will lament with the Lamentation of Cannachus, had its Origin from Enoch or Hannoch and his Prophecy of the Deluge; there is a greater likelihood of Traduction from the Hebrews in the Heathens Mythology, for ſeveral of their Fables are plainly matters of Biblical Hiſtory diſguiz'd, which argueth either a Traduction from the Hebrews, or at leaſt certain Remains of Scripture-Hiſtory amongſt them. Sanchoniathon's Story, that Saturn, whom the Phenicians call Ἰλ or Ἰσραὴλ (who after his Death was conſecrated into a Star of the ſame Name) when he reigned in thoſe parts, and had an only Son call'd Jeoud of a Nymph called Anobret, being in great danger, did ſacrifice that Son of his, being cloathed with Royal Habit, is thought to be a Traduction from the Hiſtory of Abraham's ſacrificing his Son Iſaac: So Plato in his Sympoſium bringeth in Ariſtophanes diſcourſing a wild Conceit, which looketh like a Jewiſh Tradition; That there was anciently three ſorts of Mankind, Male, Female, and Androgynon compounded of both, (their Backs growing together) which Androgynon Jupiter afterwards divided into two, whence there is an innate love in Mankind to their ancient Nature, a propenſion to make one again of two. (i) This Conceit is ſuppos'd to have had its origin from the words of Moſes, Male and Female created he them; and becauſe Philo and the Rabbins have the ſame Conceit touching Adam and Eve (to countenance which the Rabbins cite Pſal. 139. 5. Ante & retrò formaſti me) ſome have ſtiled it a Jewiſh Cabala; but becauſe there is no probability, that Plato look'd upon it as a Cabala, but rather as a Fabula (for he bringeth in Ariſtophanes telling this ridiculous Story to make him ridiculous,) it ſeemeth more reaſonable, to ſuppoſe it one of the Rabbin's Traductions from Plato, rather than a Traduction from the Hebrews. But if this ſort of Traductions be acknowledg'd (as they ought to be) this will by no means infer a Traduction of the Philoſophy or Theology of the Philoſophic Pagans from the Hebrews. To ſuppoſe, that the Foreigners to the Hebrews Religious Inſtitution traduc'd from them fortuitouſly certain Hear-ſays and Reports, which (being intermix'd with fabulous Vanities) are no genuine Traductions, is no unreaſonable Suppoſition. But to ſuppoſe, That Foreigners and Adverſaries to the Hebrews Religious Inſtitution were the Wiſe Men of a Cabala of Hebrew Recondite Learning and Theology; that they ſtudiouſly and deſignedly traduc'd the principal Dogmata of the Hebrews; that a genuine Traduction of ſome of their principal Dogmata is to be found in Paganiſm; that Philoſophers traduc'd the Matters of a Philoſophic Inſtitution (properly ſuch) from the Inſtitution of the Hebrews which was Unphiloſophic, Unpopular Dogmata from Popular; Metaphyſicks and Arcane Philoſophy from Political Laws; Arcane Philoſophy whereby Life and Immortality was brought to light, before it was brought to light, Pagan Philoſophy from the Laws of true Religion: Theſe and ſuch more Conceits are no Learned nor Pious Opinions. Is it probable, that the

Greek

(a) l. 2. c. 104.

(b) Scalig. Can. Iſag. p. 42.

(c) Clem. Strom. l. 1. p. m. 248.

(d) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 1. S. 16. cum Annot. Selden. ſupr.

(e) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 2, 4. Jambl. περὶ βίȣ. p. 15.

Bochart. Chanaan. l. 2. c. 2.

(f) Spencer. in Orig. p. 16. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 226. ed. 2.

(g) Ibid. p. 149.

(h) D. Ham. Not. on Jude 14.

(i) Dr. Jackſon. Etern. Tr. of the Script. p. 56.

Greek Philoſophers were acquainted with the Hebrew Theology, who underſtood not the prime Article of it, The Unity of the Godhead; nor the prime Cabala, (k) as Reuchlin calleth it, The coming of the Meſſiah for the Salvation of Mankind; nor the Theopolity of the Hebrews, or of the Church of God? for they knew no other Theopolity but their Demonial Theopolity, which conſiſteth of ſeveral Orders and Diſtributions of Gods and Demons.

(k) De Art. Cabaliſt. fol. 9.

CHAP. II.

1. Of the Pagans Diſtributions of the Demonial Order. 2. Of their Diſtribution of it into Good and Evil, and of their Ditheiſm. 3. Of a late Hypotheſis touching the two Moſaic Expiation-Goats and Birds, with a Confutation of it. 4. Of the primary End of the Moſaic Rites. 5. Of the different Sentiments of the Pagan Theologers touching Evil Demons, and the different Senſes wherein they are ſo denominated. 6. Of the firſt Senſe, and of their Corporeity. 7. Of the ſecond Senſe, and of the Primitive Writers Philoſophic Paganizing. 8. Of the third Senſe, and of the Jews Sentiments touching Evil Demons. 9. Of the fourth Senſe, and of the Chriſtian Demonology.

I. THE Diſtributions which the Philoſophers make of the Middle or Demonial Order, have for the moſt part little that is remarkable, ſave only an Enormous Philoſophic Phantaſtry of theſe Theologers of the Kingdom of Darkneſs. (l) Some of them do not confine the Demonial Order to the Sublunary Regions, but diſtribute it into Celeſtial, Etherial (which often ſignifieth the ſame with Aerial) Aerial, and thoſe lower Ranks which they call περιγείους & ἐνύλους, terrene and material. There are according to Proclus theſe ſeveral Ranks of Beings one below another; Henades or Unities, Noes (Minds or Intellects) Souls, Natures; and below all theſe, Body or Matter. The Demons are accordingly diſtributed into five Ranks anſwerable to theſe ſeveral Ranks of Beings, and the higheſt kind of them (ſaith he) often carry the appearance of Gods, and are ſtiled θεῖοι or ἑνοειδεῖς, Divine or Heniform, the other νοεροὶ, Intellectual (which are ſometimes ſtil'd θεῖοι, Divine, alſo) ψυχικοὶ, Pſychical, and ſo downwards. Socrates's proper Demon was of the number of Divine Demons, and Plotinus's alſo; for there was an Egyptian Prieſt and Magician at Rome, that undertook to ſhew Plotinus's proper Demon, and perform'd the Invocation in the only pure place that he could find, the Iſeum (Temple of Iſis) and inſtead of a Demon a God ſtepp'd forth or a Divine Demon. Sometimes theſe Theologers content themſelves to ſay, that one Order of them are νοερώτεροι, more Intellectual, another λογικώτεροι, more Rational; a third are ἀλογώτεροι, ἐνυλότεροι, more Irrational, Brutal and Material; for according to the Theurgiſts, there are ἄλογοι δαίμονες, an irrational ſort of them, which ſome ſay, are wholly devoid of Intellect; others that they have ſome, but the laſt and leaſt Footſtep of it. (m) They are ridiculouſly diſtributed by Proclus into Maſculine and Feminine. And the Stoicks demonologize at the ſame rate, Singulis enim & Genium & Junonem dederunt, our Anceſtors (ſaith Seneca) were Stoicks, for they allotted to every one a Genius and a Juno. A like Phantaſtick is that Aſtrological and Planetary Diſtribution of Demons into Saturnian, Jovial, Mercurial, and ſuch more. In the ſame manner Humane Souls are differenc'd; (n) for αἱ ψυχαὶ σπειρόμεναι περὶ τὰ σύννομα ἄστρα, Souls diſſeminated about their ſocial Stars contract from thoſe their Leaders a propriety of Life, ſo that each Soul is not only a Soul, but ſuch a Soul, Martial, Jovial or Lunar. As the Orb or Sphere which Souls originally belong to, is more or leſs Sublime, ſo they are more or leſs Noble; and this is a Nobility (ſaith Proclus) wherein one may truly glory, not in any Nobility according to terrene Progenitors and Cities. But without ſoaring ſo high in Aſtrological Phantaſtry, the Pagan Theologers make ſeveral Diſtributions of the Demonial Order from the diverſity of their Tempers, Faculties, Offices, Reſidences and Preſidences. Οἱ μὲν ἰατροὶ νοσημάτων· οἱ δὲ τῶν ἀπόρων σύμβουλοι· Some of theſe officious Demons cure Diſeaſes, ſome give Counſel in difficult Caſes, ſome diſcover things hidden, ſome help Artificers, and ſome accompany on the way. (Into the ſimilitude of ſuch officious Demons the Theologers of the Church about the fourth Century transform'd the deceaſed Saints and Martyrs.) Some are Marine, ſome are Terreſtrial, ſome are Rural, and others reſide in Cities. The diverſity of their Temper is viſible in their Sacra; for ſome of theſe Gods delight in Diurnal, others in Nocturnal, ſome in open and ſome in ſecret, ſome in more cheerful, and ſome in more ſad Sacrifices and Rites, and there is great variety in their Pomp, the ſilence of their Myſteries, the Offices of their Prieſts (and the like) as Apuleius diſcourſeth.

(l) Ficin. Arg. in 10. de Rep. com. in Plotin. p. 93, 288, 290. procl. de An. & Dæm. Gale in Jambl. p. 258, 310. & alibi paſſim. Liv. Galant. compar. l. 15. p. 396.

(m) Procl. in Tim. p. 11, 15. Sen. Ep. 110. Pamel. in Tertul. de An. c. 39. n 448.

(n) Procl. in Tim. p. 290, 34. de An. & Dæm. p. 217. Syneſ. de pr v. p. 89. Ficin. Arg. in Apolog. M. Tyr. Diſſ. 26.

II. The only conſiderable Diſtribution of this Order (of great concern in Religion) is into Good and Evil, which is an uſual Diſtribution amongſt the Pagans. For their Vulgar Theology ſaith, (o) Some of the Gods are Good and others are bad (called Vejoves and mala numina) and of a more hurtful nature. The former are worſhipped that they may help, the other that they may not hurt. This Partition of Gods concerneth the Demonial Order, (p) which although it be univerſally bad (as Euſebius ſaith) yet they diſtribute it in two ſorts; εἴς τε τὸ βλαπτικὸν, καὶ εἰς τὸ ὠφελοῦν, the one helpful, the other hurtful, calling the one Good, the other Bad. (q) The generality of the Pagans (ſaith S. Hierom) are wont to worſhip ſome Demons, that they may not hurt, and they ſue to others, to afford them benefits; whence ſome of their Sacrifices were white, others of the ſad colour. Theſe two Parties of the Demonial Order are ſometimes differenc'd by the Theurgical Names of Light and Darkneſs; (r) for all that are of the better Nature are called Light, and in this comprehenſion God hath the chief Power; but that which is Evil (which hath no friendly Commerce with that

(o) Eſſe quoſdam ex Diis bonos, alios autem malos, & ad nocendi libidinem promptiores: illiſque ut proſint, his verò ne noceant, ſacrorum ſolennia miniſtrari. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 7. p. 228. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 19.

(p) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 5. c. 3.

(q) Solent plerique Gentilium Dæmones alios colere, ne noceant, & alios exorare, ut præſtent beneficia: unde & illud Virgilianum eſt, Nigram hyemi pecudem, Zephyris felicibus albam. Com. in Jerem. 10.

(r) Euſeb. ſupr. l. 4. c. 5.

which is Good, and hath the chief Power throughout the nature of things contrary to Good) ruleth over the worſe, τοῦτο δὲ μοχθηρῶν δαιμόνων γένος, which is the kind of improbous Demons. This Diſtribution of things deſcendeth from the ancient Perſian and Chaldean Magi, and is as ancient as their Philoſophic Theurgical Theology; a ſort of Theology of very great conſonance with the Chriſtian Theology complicated with extream Diſſonance. (s) For ſuch is the Hypotheſis of a good God and an evil, independent on each other, or that there are two Principles and Archical Cauſes of things, the one lucid (like unto Light) the other tenebricoſe; and that there are two oppoſite parties of things in the World, whereof the one appertaineth to the party and preſidency of the Imperial Principle of Light called Oromaſdes, the other to the Imperial Principle of Darkneſs called Arimanius. To the one of theſe Imperial Powers (that of Light) Zoroaſter taught them, to offer ſuch Sacrifices as were εὐκταῖα ϗ χαριστήρια, for the obtaining of Good and Euchariſtical: to the other, ἀποτρόπαια ϗ σκυθρωπά, ſuch as were ſad and for the averting of Evil. And in ſacrificing (as Plutarch relateth their Theurgy) they invok'd Hades and Darkneſs, making uſe of a certain Herb Omomi, wherewith they mix'd the Blood of a Wolf, and which afterward they carry'd out and caſt into a dark place, where the Sun-beams came not. This Magical Ditheiſm of the Perſians (or their Althanawiah, that there are two Imperial Principles of things, Light and Darkneſs,) had partly its origin from the Phænomenon of Evil, which is intermix'd with good in every thing, and cannot be ſalv'd without a Principle of Evil, as Plutarch diſputeth. (t) For if nothing can be without a Cauſe, and that which is Good cannot be the cauſe of Evil, there muſt be in Nature a proper Principle of Evil and a production thereof, as well as of Good. And thus the moſt and wiſeſt think. (u) But ſome make account (ſaith he) that there are two Gods, contrary Artificers as it were, the one the maker of all Good, the other the maker of all Evil; but others call only the better Principle a God, the other a Demon, as Zoroaſter the Perſian Philoſopher. In this account of the Perſian Ditheiſm Plutarch is a better Moraliſt than Theurgiſt; for there is great reaſon to think, that the ancient Magi introduc'd their Imperial Principle of Evil, not only upon account of the common Phænomenon of Evil intermix'd with Good in the World, but upon account of certain Arcane Phænomena obſervable in their Theurgical Operations.

For the Evil Principle or Demon was look'd upon by the Magi, not only as a Principle of Evils in the World, but as a Principle inimical to their Theurgical Sanctity and Beatitude; therefore they wore (w) a white ſhining Garment againſt Hades or Darkneſs (the ſame with Arimanius;) and Theopompus reporteth, that according to the Magi, the two oppoſite Gods ſhall conflict and fight with one another for ſome thouſands of Years, τέλος δὲ ἀπολείπεσθαι τὸν ᾅδην, but in the iſſue Hades will ceaſe or be deſtroy'd, and that then Mankind ſhall be happy, neither needing Food nor cauſing Shadow. Which happy ſtate of Mankind will emerge upon the deſtruction of Hades in the Chaldeans Notion, this God being (x) the Prince or Chieftain of the Circumterraneous Prefecture, upon whoſe Deſtruction the Souls of Men will have a Reduction to the Supernal Regions, a Liberation from Geniture, from Evils, and from being under Fate. But as the Magi look'd upon Hades as inimical to their Beatitude, ſo they look'd upon this God as inimical to their Theurgical Sanctity. For they could not be ignorant of that νεῖκος or Contrariety of Operation, (y) which is ſaid to be in Theurgy: nor of thoſe Antithei or Anti-Gods, which the Theurgiſts uſually met with in their Operation, and which they grievouſly complain of as diſturbing or fruſtrating them. Sometimes they were fruſtrated by a Diviner Power intervening, (z) too hard for their Demons and Inchantments (as in Baalam's caſe:) But that which the Theurgiſts complain of, is not a Diſturbance or Fruſtration in their Theurgy from the Interpoſition of any Superiour Powers, but from an inferiour ſort of Demons, which (as they ſay) are inimical to their Theurgical Sanctity, and which obtruded themſelves inſtead of thoſe Gods which they were calling for, making ſhew that they were thoſe Gods. (a) We find (ſaith Proclus) that in Expiations and Religious Rites every where ſome of the worſer ſort put on the garb and ſhew of the better and more perfect, thereby to entice imperfect and unskilful Souls to themſelves, and to divert them from the Superiour Gods. (b) Before the God himſelf cometh, certain Terrene Demons occur, and ſights which trouble and diſtract thoſe that are expiated, drawing them downward from the incontaminate Goods to the Matter. The Chalday Oracles charge the Theurgical Saintiſt, to take heed of them, and to fortifie himſelf by the Forces and Virtues of the Theurgic Conſecrations. (c) You muſt beware of beholding them till you be expiated as to the Body and purg'd by the Sacra. They are always ſeducing Souls from the Sacred Myſteries. Theſe impure Demons that peſter'd the Theurgical Saintiſts (they are ſaid (d) παρενοχλεῖν τοῖς θεουργοῖς, to moleſt and trouble the Theurgiſts) were certainly known to the ancient Magi, as appeareth from what Min. Felix (e) reporteth of one of the famous Magi, Hoſtanes (for though Minucius Felix's account of his Doctrine is not wholly true and genuine, yet this Branch of his account is plainly a Branch of the Philoſophic Theurgical Theology) Dæmonas prodidit terrenos, vagos, humanitatis oſores; He declar'd, that there are Terrene Demons, wanderers, haters of Mankind. The Magi being acquainted with this Phænomenon, and meeting with (f) δαίμονες πονηροὶ ἀντὶ θεῶν, improbous Demons inſtead of the Gods they were calling for, (which improbous Demons are called Anti-Gods from the Theology of Zoroaſter, as ſome ſay) they could not but ſuppoſe an Imperial Head or Principle, to whoſe Party and Preſidency thoſe troubleſom Demons belong'd. For thus Porphyry believing the Exiſtence of evil Demons ſuppoſeth, (g) that they have an Imperial Head preſiding over them, which he calleth Sarapis, the ſame with Pluto, which (as alſo Hades, Orcus, Diſpater, the Infernal Jupiter) is one of the Names of the Perſian Arimanius. Thus in the Egyptian Theology there is a Typhon (whence that proverbial Speech in Plato's Phædrus τυφῶνος πολυπλοκώτερον θηρίον, a more multifarious Beaſt than Typhon,) who

(s) Plutar. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 369. Eugub. de Per. phil. l. 8. c. 34.

(t) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 369.

(u) Νομίζουσι γὰρ οἱ μὲν θεοὺς εἶναι δύο, καθάπερ ἀντιτέχνους· τὸν μὲν ἀγαθῶν, τὸν δὲ φαύλων δημιουργόν· οἱ δὲ τὸν μὲν ἀμείνονα θεὸν, τὸν δὲ ἕτερον δαίμονα καλοῦσιν· ὥσπερ Ζωροάστρης ὁ μάγος.

(w) Plutarch. Qu. Rom. p. 270. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 370.

(x) Τῆς ὑλαίας ϗ περιγείου λήξεως ἀρχηγός. Niceph. in Syne. p. 385.

(y) V. Gale in Jambl. p. 256, 253, 252, 232.

(z) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 46.

(a) Compertum habemus in expiationibus atque ſacris ubique ex deterioribus aliquid induere perfectioris imaginem, per quam animas nondum perfectas alliciat ad ſeipſum, à ſuperioribuſque divertat. De An. & Dæm. p. 185.

(b) Καὶ ὄψεις ἐκταράττουσαι τοὺς τελουμένους, ϗ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀχράντων ἀγαθῶν εἰς τὴν ὕλην προσκαλούμεναι. Gale ſupr.

(c) Οὐ γὰρ χρὴ κείνους σε βλέπειν, πρὶν σῶμα τελεσθῇς, τὰς ψυχὰς θέλγοντες ἀεὶ τελετῶν ἀπάγουσι. Ibid. p. 210, 211, 254.

(d) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 47.

(e) p. 270.

(f) Gale ſupr. p. 253.

(g) De Abſt. l. 2. S. 42. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 22, 23.

who is the head of the Typhonian Demons; and (h) the Egyptian Fablers ſay (which ſheweth what kindneſs they had for the Hebrews,) that Typhon begat two Sons Hieroſolymus and Judæus. Thus Pherecydes Syrus (i) Theologizing in the fabulous way, and talking of two oppoſite Armies and their various Conflicts with one another (upon this condition, that the party which ſhould be caſt into Ogenus, ſhould be reputed vanquiſh'd; and the other party that drave them out and vanquiſh'd them, ſhould be Poſſeſſors of Heaven) maketh Saturn the Head and Chieftain of the one Party, and Ophioneus of the other, Ὀφιωνεὺς Θεὸς, the God Ophioneus, who is ſometimes called Ὀφίων, Ophion, and is ſaid to be Superior to all the Giants. Agreeably to this Mode of Theologizing the ancient Magi introduc'd Arimanius an evil God, as ſuppoſing that there is a Prince or Chieftain of their evil Demons.

III. From theſe two contrary Principles and Oppoſite-kind of Gods (k) a Divine of our own (who hath abandon'd the common Opinion touching the Traduction of the Rites of Paganiſm from Judaiſm, and is of Opinion, that not a few of the Moſaic Rites are traduc'd from the Pagans) hath given an account of the two Expiation-Goats in the Feaſt of Expiation, whereof the one was killed, the other ſet at Liberty, Lev. 16. 5, 10. He ſuppoſeth, "That the Judaical Rites of Expiation had their Origin from Pagan Rites (but ſomewhat transform'd and amended,) which were the cauſe of their Inſtitution, that the two Expiation-Goats have reſpect to the Pagans two Principles, or two kind of Gods; for the Lot of one was for the Lord, the other was diſmiſs'd or ſent away unto Azazel, that is, the Devil (for he ſaith, that Bochartus proveth from the Etymology of the word, that it cannot ſignifie a Goat) into the Wilderneſs the Manſion of the Devil, and was there left alive in honour of the God to whom he was devoted, as the Heathens had their ſacred Animals, which they diſmiſs'd to range freely in honour of thoſe Deities to whom they were conſecrated. This Inſtitution of two Expiation-Goats hath reſpect alſo to thoſe two kinds of Oblations before mention'd (the one touching the obtaining of Good, the other the averting of Evil) which Zoroaſter taught the Perſians, and which agreeably to their two kind of Gods were in uſe among the Pagans. For one of theſe Expiation-Goats (that of Mactation) is ſuppos'd to be Propitiatory, for the taking away the Guilt of Sin; Cathartic, and for the obtaining of good: The other Expiation-Goat (that of Diſmiſſion) was ἀποπομπαῖος for the averting of Evil and taking away the puniſhment of Sin. Theſe two Expiation-Goats God would have offered and conſecrated to him at once, at the Door of the Tabernacle, in oppoſition to the Pagans Ditheiſm, (to reprove and aboliſh it,) that the Jews by theſe Rites might acknowledge him alone the Author of all Goods and the averter of all Evils, not Azazel, whom the Jews propitiated for the averting of Evils, looking upon him as the principle or cauſe of them. A like account is given of the purgation of a leprous Perſon or Houſe, Lev. 14. by two Birds, the one killed, the other ſet at liberty into the open Air. This Rite of purgation is ſuppos'd to have been inſtituted in Oppoſition to a ſuppos'd Heathen Cuſtom of killing of ſome Birds in honour of the inferior Gods, and ſetting others at liberty in honour of the ſupernal Gods. And that by theſe ſymbolic Actions the Leprous Perſon might make Profeſſion, that he worſhipped one God Lord of Heaven and Earth, and that he ow'd his Purgation to his Grace, not to any inferior or ſupernal Heathen Deity." This account of theſe Judaical Rites of Expiation, like its Author, in ſome reſpect deſerveth a great Character; but it hath not a few infirm Parts in it, that prejudice its Entertainment. For there is no appearance that the Jews propitiated the Devil as the principle of their Evils (that he might not hurt, and for the averting of Evils:) Nor is there any probability that the name Azazel ſignifieth the Devil. For whereas it is argu'd from Bochartus, that Azazel cannot be the name of a Goat, becauſe its Etymology cannot be עזאזל, the one being of the Maſculine, the other of the Feminine Gender; this Argument is of no validity; for if we ſuppoſe the name Azazel, to be deriv'd from עז a Goat, and אֹזֶל the Subſtantive (as we read of הָאֶבֶן הָאֹזֶל, Lapis Itionis vel Abitionis, 1 Sam. 20. 19.) the name will ſignifie the Scape-Goat, and this Etymology will be unexceptionable in point of Grammar. If the name Azazel is not the name of a Goat, whence is it, that throughout the Bible it is never us'd ſave only in the Law touching the two Expiation-Goats? In that Law it is uſed (l) as a known Name and of familiar uſe: But as a name of the Devil it was not of familiar uſe; therefore it is the name of a Goat, of ſuch a Goat which is an Inhabitant of the Wilderneſs (after the ſending away the firſt Scape-Goat;) whence in the Language of the Law, Lev. 16. 21, 22, 26. to ſend away or let go the Goat into the Wilderneſs, (m) and unto Azazel, or to be the Scape-Goat, is the ſame thing. But that the Wilderneſs ſhould be conſider'd as the Devil's Manſion, that to ſend away or diſmiſs one unto the Wilderneſs, the Wilderneſs of Judea (which was the Manſion of John the holy Baptiſt, and to ſend away to the Devil are the ſame thing, of this there is no appearance in the Law, nor in the whole Bible (though Deſart Places are often ſaid to be the Haunts of unclean Spirits;) nor is the Wilderneſs conſider'd in this Law of Expiation in any other Notion than as a Land not inhabited, as is plain from the Text, Lev. 16. 22. upon which account the Hermits or Anachorites preferr'd it (as more remote from the Devil's Neighbourhood) before the populous Cities, and God himſelf upon the ſame account made choice of it for the publication of his Law. (n) The Law was given in places uncultivated or not inhabited (ſaith Grotius,) that ſo the people being remote from the contagion of Cities, and purg'd by Hardſhips, and taught by Miracles to depend on God, not on created things, might be prepar'd for that Republick which God deſign'd.

The ſending away a live-Goat to the Devil is an Inſtitution, of which it is not imaginable, that there could be any cauſe in the Moſaic Oeconomy; it is a Rite that hath no Parallel, there is nothing like it in any Religion; it neceſſarily bordereth upon Demonolatry and tendeth to promote it (though in ſome reſpects it might be oppoſite thereto;) had ſuch a Rite been inſtituted, the Jews would certainly have underſtood it as an Inſtitution of Demonolatry. For thus (o) the Jewiſh Doctors (and Origen amongſt

(h) Plutarch. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 363.

(i) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 303. Spencer. Not. Gale. in Jambl. p. 258.

(k) D. Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. diſſ. 8.

(l) D. Spencer. ſupr. p. 498. ed. 2.

(m) Ibid. p. 4[illegible]1. The Devils have thoſe places allotted to them, ἔνθα ἐρημία ἐςὶ γνώσεως Θεȣ̃. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 399.

(n) Grot. explicat. Decal. non procul ab initio.

(o) D. Spencer ſupr. p. 457, 459. Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 21. ſub fin.

amongſt the Chriſtians) who by the name of Azazel underſtand the Devil; ſuppoſe, that the Law injoineth Demonolatry, according to that trite ſaying of theirs, Date munus ipſi Samael in die Expiationis, make a preſent to Samael (the Devil) himſelf on the day of Expiation. This is the Conſequence of ſuppoſing Azazel to be the Devil; the Goat will be thought devote and ſeparate to the Devil in ſuch ſort as the ſacred Animals were devote to the Heathen Deities, as this learned Author himſelf ſometimes ſeemeth to ſay. For thus he diſcourſeth (p) The Goat that fell to Azazel by Lot, was ſent forth into the Wilderneſs, perhaps becauſe it was the Cuſtom of ancient times, that every Animal devoted or deſtinated to any Numen ſhould be ſent away to the Seat and Territories of that Numen. Veteres nullum animal ſacrum in finibus ſuis eſſe patiebantur, ſed abigebant ad fines Deorum quibus eſſet ſacrum. The Ancients (ſaith Macrobius) ſuffer'd no conſecrate Animal to remain in their Territories but drove it away to the Territories of the Gods to whom it was ſacred. To this Cuſtom (at leaſt to Reaſon) it was agreeable, that the Goat deſtinated by lot to God and his Altar ſhould be brought to his Territories, as it were the Altar and Sanctuary: But the Goat devoted and ſeparated to the Devil ſhould be driven away without the Borders of Iſrael, to the Devils Territories as it were the Deſart Places. Here the Goat is ſaid to be ſent away into the Wilderneſs, becauſe he was devote and ſeparate to the Devil: He is alſo ſuppos'd (q) to be left alive there in Honour of the God to whom he is devoted; which if it be underſtood of the Devil, it is downright Demonolatry; if it be underſtood of God, then the Goat was left alive, and diſmiſs'd to range freely in the Devils Territories in Honour of God (which is contrary to Macrobius,) and the God of Iſrael is ſuppos'd to be honour'd after the Mode of the Pagan Deities, by conſecrate Animals diſmiſs'd to range abroad. We will ſuppoſe for the preſent (in compliance with this learn'd Author,) that this is a true account of the Diſmiſſion of the live-Goat; which implieth, that he was diſmiſs'd or ſent away to be kept alive, not deſtroy'd: But this ſame learned Author diſcourſeth, that this live-Goat was ſent away to the Devil, (not as an Honorary Preſent, but) as (r) a thing Devote and an Anathema; (s) that he was ſent away devoted to the publick Nemeſis, and they heap'd upon him all their Execrations; (t) that he was diſmiſs'd with an Imprecation, that all the Evil impendent upon the People might light upon his Head; (u) that he was ſent away to the Devil, to denote that Sinners are his Portion; all which unavoidably inferreth, that he was ſent away to the Devil in order to his Deſtruction. Which account of his Diſmiſſion is inconſiſtent with the former, and contrary to the intention of the Law: For doubtleſs the Law (w) deſigneth not the deſtruction of the Scape-Goat, but the contrary; and the Jews that talk of (x) devoting him, throwing him down a Rock, and other methods of deſtroying him, that pluck'd him, prick'd him, ſpit on him, and loaded him with contumelies, have extreamly miſtaken the nature of this Moſaic Inſtitution. But although we have been willing to ſuppoſe that the Scape-Goat was diſmiſs'd to range abroad freely in Honour of God, yet no ſuch Rite ought to be ſuppos'd in the Jews Religion. For if the God of Iſrael had inſtituted ſuch a Right of honouring him, it muſt have been expreſs'd in his Law, the Jews muſt have been taught, that a live Animal was diſmiſs'd as a mode of religious honouring their God: So if God would have both the Expiation-Goats preſented to him at once, that by this Rite the Jews might acknowledge him alone, to be the Author of all Goods and the averter of all Evils; the Jews muſt have been taught that this was the meaning, deſign and intention of that Religious Rite; for unleſs they had ſuch an intention in the uſe of that Rite, no ſuch act of Piety could be done. Wherefore there is no appearance that the Inſtitution of the two Expiation-Goats hath any reſpect to the Pagans Ditheiſm, or to their two ſorts of Oblations (εὐκταῖα ϗ χαριστήρια, for the obtaining of Good and Euchariſtical, ἀποτρόπαια ϗ σκυθρωπὰ, ſuch as were ſad and for the averting of Evil,) nor are the diſtinctions which this learned Author hath framed, to difference the piacular uſe of the two Expiation-Goats, allowable or tolerable diſtinctions. For if we ſay with him, (y) that one of the Expiation-Goats was ἱλαστικὸν, Propitiatory, the other, ἀποτρόπαιον, depulſory of Evils; that the one was καθάρσιον, Cathartic, the other ἀποπομπαῖον, for the uſe of averting Evils; that the one was to take away the guilt of Sin, the other the puniſhment of Sin, what do we but make diſtinctions without difference? The account which he hath given of the Purgation of a Leprous Perſon, is of the ſame extraordinary Character, but liable to the ſame exceptions with his account of the two Expiation-Goats. Moreover, (z) it ſuppoſeth, but doth not prove an Heathen Cuſtom of killing ſome Birds in Honour to the inferior Gods, and diſmiſſing others in Honour of the ſupernal Gods; and that the God of Iſrael was to be honour'd by the diſmiſſion of the live Bird (after the Mode of the Pagan Deities,) which was ting'd with the Blood of the Bird that was killed, that it might be diſtinguiſh'd from any other Bird, which was diſmiſs'd in Honour of an Heathen God.

IV. Agreeably to the grand Pretenſion of his excellently learned Volume (that the primary end of the Hebrew-Rite was, to be Medicinal to the Iſraelites Idolatry and Proneneſs to Heatheniſm) the Origin of theſe Rites of Expiation is thus repreſented by this Author. (a) The Superſtitition of the Gentiles having produc'd Luſtrations and Expiations publick and private without meaſure, and burthened the Life of Man and Religious Worſhip with multifarious Rites and Kinds of Expiation; God traduc'd ſome Expiatory Rites into his Law, partly that he might exerciſe the ritual Genius of the Jewiſh Nation, and that Judaiſm might not be thought to afford leſs Security than Gentiliſm from the Conſcience of Sin, or the fear of ſome impending Evil; partly alſo that he might confine the luxuriant Rites of Expiation within ſome certain bounds, and might reſtore the Minds of Men labouring under the Burden of thoſe Rites to a juſt Liberty. Something of Truth there is in this Account of the Origin of theſe Rites; for it is reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that God would not have Judaiſm thought inferiour to Gentiliſm in Expiations: But the primary end of the Hebrew Rites is of ſeveral Notions, and muſt be contemplated in ſome other Notions than this learned Author hath pitch'd upon, or elſe the true Notices of things will be diſtorted and miſrepreſented, the Wiſdom and Sanctity that is in the Hebrew-ritualities will be overlook'd, the Wiſdom, Sanctity and Deſign of the Moſaic Oeconomy will be diſparag'd to ſerve an Hypotheſis. For it is certain, and plainly demonſtrable,

(p) p. 462.

(q) Ibid. p. 464.

(r) Ibid. p. 458, 479.

(s) p. 484.

(t) p. 478, 481.

(u) p. 460.

(w) Dr. Outram de Sacrific. l. 1. c. 8. p. 84.

(x) Spencer. ſupr. p. 481, 471, 475.

(y) Ibid. p. 478, 480, 493, 500.

(z) Ibid. p. 488. 489, 492.

(a) l. 3. p. 472. ed. 2.

ble, that the primary end of the Moſaic Law and Hebrew-ritualities was, That God and his People might live together in holy Society, according to that of the Book Coſri, (b) We are bound to obſerve the Law, becauſe of his bringing us out of Egypt, והתחברות כבודו אלינו and becauſe of the Society of his Glory which adjoin'd it ſelf unto us; whence we are called a Peculium amongſt Men. And as to be in Judaiſm, (c) is to be בקדושה in Sanctity: So the Hebrew-Rites muſt be contemplated as the Matters of Judaical Sanctity or God-Society, the matters of the holy popular Commonwealth ſymbolically ſo. Wherefore the Origin of the Rites of Expiation is deducible from that Maxim in Theology. (d) We ought being pure and cleans'd from Sin ſo to appear before God. For thus the Law expreſſeth the Deſign and Uſe of the two Expiation-Goats (and other Rites) on the day of Expiation, Lev. 16. 30. That you may be clean from all your Sins before the Lord. The two Expiation-Goats (which cannot be traduc'd from the Pagans, there being no ſuch Rite of Expiation amongſt them) concur to this Effect as two diſtinct ſort of Sin-bearers, The one by way of Portation, the other by way of Deportation. The Goat of Mactation was a Sin-bearer by way of Portation, as an Expiatory and Propitiatory Sacrifice: But the Scape-Goat was a Bearer of Sins by way of ſolemn Deportation and carrying them away. As after the Expiatory and Propitiatory Sacrifices there followeth in the Law a donation of Forgiveneſs of Sins, Numb. 15. 28. Lev. 4. 20. and ch. 5. 13, 18. (e) Expiation and Remiſſion of Sin are uſually conjoined: So on the day of Expiation, after the Expiatory and Propitiatory Sacrifices (the Goat and the Bullock) there ſucceedeth a Deportation or carrying away of Sins, (into a Land not inhabited) by the Scape-Goat, which was a ſort of formal Diſcharge from them, that they might be clean from all their Sins before the Lord, and that they might never more come into his Sight. Agreeably to this Notion of the Scape-Goat and his Expiation, it is obſerv'd, (f) that this Goat was properly no Sacrifice, nor did he Expiate Sin, as the Expiatory Sacrifices did: But he muſt be brought as an Oblation unto God, becauſe he muſt be his Sin-bearer; and becauſe he muſt be of his appointment, therefore it muſt be determin'd by Lot, which of the Goats ſhall be the Scape-Goat. The other Law of Judaical God-Society touching the Purgation of a Leprous Perſon by two Birds, Lev. 14. is of a like explication. (g) For the two Birds, ſaith Origen, (he calleth them Hens) ſeem to me, to have a certain Similitude with the two Goats, of which one is offer'd to the Lord, the other is ſent away into the Wilderneſs: So here of the two Birds one is ſacrific'd (but not properly) the other is diſmiſs'd into the Field. The diſmiſſion of the living Bird into the open Field is nothing like the ſending away the live Goat to the Devil; which is an Argument, that no ſuch thing was intended in the Law of the two Expiation-Goats: Nor was the Leprous Perſon taught, that the meaning of that Rite the diſmiſſing the living Bird, was to make Profeſſion, that he worſhipp'd one God Lord of Heaven and Earth; and therefore he could have no ſuch meaning in the uſe of it. But as in the legal Purifications the Blood of the Sacrifices was not only ſhed, but ſprinkled; not only ſprinkled by way of Sacrifical Oblation, but by way of Sacrifical Ablution alſo: So in the Ceremonial Purgation of a Leprous Perſon (or Houſe) the Blood of the Bird of Mactation muſt not only be ſhed, but ſprinkled alſo upon the Leprous Party by Cedar-wood, Scarlet, Hyſſop, and a living Bird. After which Expiation, that which is analogous to Remiſſion of Sins, or the Donation of Forgiveneſs ſucceedeth, namely, The letting looſe the living Bird into the open Field. For this Symbolical Rite was a formal Diſcharge or ritual Abſolution of the Leprous Party from his סגירות recluſive or ſecluſive Leproſy, a ſolemn Diſmiſſion or Liberation of the Priſoner from his penal Confinement, a reſtauration to his native Liberty and Denizonſhip (as Abarbanel and Chaskuni (b) underſtand it;) and therefore it was a perfecting this Purgation. The Rite of diſmiſſing a Bird might be materially traduc'd from the Heathen, who diſmiſſed Birds in Honour of their Gods: But God inſtituted it to another purpoſe. And thus a fair Account may be given of the Rites of Expiation by two Birds and Goats, without ſuppoſing them to relate to the Pagans Ditheiſm, of which the Law taketh no notice.

V. We have ſeen, that the Doctrine of evil Demons is at leaſt as ancient as Zoroaſter, who us'd the name Demon, to ſignifie in an evil ſenſe; Plutarch alſo and Porphyry vouch the old Theologers for their notices of evil Demons (to ſay nothing of the ancient Stories of Giants and Titans (i) which Plutarch interpreteth of evil Demons:) The Doctrine therefore of evil Demons amongſt the Pagans is of great Antiquity. But touching the univerſality of this Doctrine Origen expreſſeth himſelf with ſome Caution and Reſtriction. (k) It is not we only that ſay there are evil Demons, but almoſt all that hold the Exiſtence of Demons. In the Heatheniſm which at this day over-ſpreadeth a great part of the Earth (as it is reported to us) there are many notices of evil Spirits, of an evil Numen, of a punitive hurtful Potentate in the inviſible World, which are worſhipp'd, as other noxious things are, that they may not hurt. But it is not our deſign to give an account of the Heathen Theology of later times: Of ancient times Origen reporteth, that a certain Pythagorean writing concerning things allegorical in Homer, ſaith, that the words of Chryſes to Apollo, and Apollo's Peſtilence ſent by him upon the Grecians ſhew, (l) that Homer knew there are evil Demons, that are gratified with Nidours and Sacrifices, and reward their Worſhippers with the Miſchief and Deſtruction of others, if they pray for it. (m) In S. Auſtin's time the name Demon was a name of Horror amongſt the Pagans, which that Father imputeth to the Light of Chriſtianity, that had ſhone upon the World: But from a Paſſage in Tertullian, it ſeemeth more probable, that the name was of an evil Senſe amongſt the Popular Pagans before the times of Chriſtianity: (n) A Follower of Chryſippus mocketh at evil Demons: But that they exiſt and are had in Abomination, thy Execrations ſhew. Amongſt the illiterate Vulgar

(b) p. 19. ed. Buxt.

(c) Selden. de J. Nat. & G. l. 2. c. 4.

(d) Ὅτι χρὴ καθαροὺς ϗ ἐκνενιμμένους τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, παρίστασθαι τῷ Θεῷ. S. Cyr. de Ador. in Sp. & Ver. l. 15. vid. Buxt. Syn. Jud. c. 21. ſub fin.

(e) Paſſim conjunguntur iſta, Expiatio & Remiſſio. Grot. de ſatisf. Chriſt. c 10. p. m. 185. D. Spencer. ſupr. p. 483.

(f) D. Outram. de Sacrif. p. 83.

(g) Ap. Bochart. de An. Sacr. par. 2. l. 1. c. 16.

(h) Ap. Sim. de Muis var. Sacr. Ainſworth in Lev. 14. 7.

(i) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 360.

(k) Φαύλους δὲ δαίμονας οὐ μόνον λέγομεν ἡμεῖς, ἀλλὰ ϗ σχεδὸν πάντες ὅσοι δαίμονας τιθέασιν εἶναι. C. Celſ. l. 7. p. 377.

(l) Ὅτι ἠπίστατο ὅμηρος πονηρούς τινας δαίμονας χαίροντας ταῖς κνίσσαις ϗ ταῖς θυσίαις. C. Celſ. l. 7. p. 335.

(m) De C. D. l. 8. c. 14. & l. 9. c. 19.

(n) Aliqui Chryſippi adſentator inludit ea; at eſſe, & abominationem ſuſtinere, execrationes tuæ reſpondent. Etiam vulgus indoctum in uſum maledicti frequentat. de Teſt. an. c. 3. Apolog. c. 22.

the uſe of them is frequent in Execrations. Chryſippus who is here repreſented by Tertullian as a Maſter-derider of evil Demons, is by Plutarch (o) reckon'd amongſt thoſe Philoſophers, which he ſuppoſeth, to have acknowledg'd their Exiſtence, Pythagoras (the Pythagoreans thought Typhon a δαιμονικὴ δύναμις, Demonical Power) Empedocles, Xenocrates, Plato alſo, and Democritus, εὐχόμενος εὐλόγχων εἰδώλων τυγχάνειν, who becauſe he made it his Prayer or wiſh, that he might meet with good or happy Apparitions, (which he ſuppos'd to be Native and Mortal,) it is plain, that he acknowledg'd there were others δυστράπελα καὶ μοχθηρὰ, ill natured and improbous. This and ſome other Sayings of that Atheiſtic Philoſopher demonſtrate (p) that notwithſtanding his Atheiſm he acknowledg'd a ſort of evil Demons: But the School of the Stoicks notwithſtanding their Theiſm and Demonology alſo, their loud pretenſions to Virtue, and fierce declamations againſt Vice, is no friend to the Hypotheſis of improbous Demons. There is ſcarce any mention of them in any of their Writings; and although ſome of that Sect (q) ſeem to acknowledge Erynnes or Furies for the puniſhment of Delinquents, yet the principal Leaders of it, Epictetus and Seneca, acknowledge no ſuch Beings, but explode and deride the puniſhments of another Life. (r) There is no Hell, no Acheron, no Cocytus, no Pyriphlegethon: But all things are full of Gods and Demons. It is not certain, whether Ariſtotle acknowledg'd any Demons or not: Nor is it certain, that Plato (the grand Demonologiſt) held the Exiſtence of evil Demons. He is repreſented by Plutarch (s) as an Aſſerter of his Ditheiſtick Hypotheſis, and conſequently of a ψυχὴ ἄνους ϗ κακοποιὸς, an irrational and maleficent Soul, a furious and irrational mover of the matter unmade and coexiſting with God and the matter. And it muſt be acknowledg'd, that there are ſome Paſſages in Plato, which ſound like ſuch an Hypotheſis; as this noted one in his Tenth of Laws; that the Soul of the Heavens or World is twofold, beneficent and the contrary; and there is a like paſſage in his Epinomis. But becauſe theſe Paſſages in Plato are ſomewhat obſcure, and may be interpreted of the ſame Soul conſider'd with and without Intellect (as Ficinus underſtandeth them,) therefore to infer from them, that he was an Aſſerter of Plutarch's Principle of Evils, would be great Raſhneſs and Folly. And it would be far greater Raſhneſs and Folly to infer that he ſuppoſed ſuch a Principle of Evils, as the Scripture-Theology calleth the Devil; yet to this Senſe ſeveral learned Writers of the Primitive Church have interpreted ſeveral Paſſages in Plato. For thus Clemens: (t) Plato in his Tenth of Laws ſaith, The Devil ſo much ſpoken of in the Barbaric Philoſophy, the Prince of Demons, is a maleficent Soul. Moreover in that Tenth of Laws (ſaith Clemens) Plato plainly expreſſeth that of the Apoſtle, We Wreſtle not againſt Fleſh and Blood, but againſt Principalities, againſt Powers, againſt ſuch Spirituals as are in the Heavens, writing thus; (u) Heaven (or the World) being full of Goods, and alſo of the Contraries, ſuch a State of things is an immortal War, and needeth a wonderful Guard or Cuſtody. In this War againſt the Evils that are in the World, the Pagan Demons are according to Plato, the Guard and Aſſiſtants to Mankind. (w) The Gods and Demons (ſaith he) are our Coadjutors, we are the Poſſeſſion of the Gods and Demons, (which they ſollicitouſly look after.) The War therefore in Plato is a Demon-Confederacy, not the Chriſtian kind of Warfare againſt the Demonial Powers, (for the ruin of Demonolatry) as Clemens pretendeth. But thus ſeveral of the learned Writers of the Primitive Church pretending to find the matters of Sanctity and Divinity of Religion in profane Authors (Plato eſpecially,) and confounding two oppoſite kind of Theologies, the Pagan and Chriſtian, have made very foul work with both Theologies. Beſides the above cited Paſſages from Plato (which are alſo produc'd by Euſebius (x) as inſtances of Concord and Conſent between the Hebraic and Platonic Theology) Clemens and Theodoret (y) have produc'd another from Plato's Phædrus, which they are willing to underſtand in the Senſe of our Theology. (z) There are alſo other Evils, but ſome Demon hath mix'd with the moſt a preſent Pleaſure: as in a flattering direful Beaſt and grievous hurt Nature hath mix'd a Pleaſure. But from this Paſſage of the Philoſopher (wherein Nature doth not ſignifie any thing that is Evil, nor is the name Demon to be underſtood in an evil Senſe,) it doth not appear, that he acknowledg'd any evil Demons. On the contrary, Eugubinus affirmeth (deſtructively to his own Hypotheſis of a Perennis Philoſophia, that the Philoſophic Pagan and the Chriſtian Theology are the ſame) that Plato (a) maketh no diſtribution of Demons into good and bad, but all are good with him. Moreover, according to him All Demons are to be worſhipp'd; therefore in his Opinion they are all morally Good; for if they were not good, they ought not to be worſhipp'd, nor could they be Gods according to the Tenour of Plato's Doctrine, of which S. Auſtin hath taken notice, (b) and from thence argueth againſt the Worſhip of evil Gods. Wherefore a judicious Writer rightly ſaith of Plato; when he ſpeaketh of Demons who afflict Men, he is to be interpreted rather of good Spirits executing Juſtice, than of evil Spirits or Angels venting their Malice. But although Plato in the whole comprehenſion of Demons could find none improbous and evil, yet his Followers abound with expreſs Notices and acknowledgments of evil Demons; and amongſt the reſt Celſus the foul Philoſopher, who was certainly a very Orthodox Platoniſt (the Diſpute between Origen and Celſus, is between a Chriſtian and a Pagan Platoniſt;) but he is repreſented by Origen as an Epicurean, who alſo ſaith of him, (c) that he acknowledg'd no evil Demons. Whereas there are in Origen's own Book ſeveral plain acknowledgments that Celſus hath made of evil Demons. For in his allegorical interpretation of certain Verſes in Homer (d) he diſcourſeth of God's puniſhing the terrene material Demons ὅσοι ὑβρισταὶ, ſo many of them as are contumelious. He mentioneth alſo (from Pherecydes Syrus) the Tartarian Portion or Region, which is ſaid to be kept by the Daughters of Boreas, the Harpies and Thyella, (e) if any of the Gods be contumelious,

(o) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 360. & de Def. or. p. 419.

(p) Niceph. in Syneſ. p. 378. Voſſ. de Sect. phil. c. 4. p. 22. Viger. in Eu*ſeb. p.* 18.

(q) Phornut. de nat. Deor. p. 16.

(r) Οὐδεὶς Ἅδης, οὐδ' Ἀχέρων, οὐδὲ Κωκυτὸς, οὐδὲ Πυριφλεγέθων· ἀλλὰ πάντα θεῶν μεστὰ ϗ δαιμόνων. Epict. diſſ. l. 3. c. 13.

(s) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 370.

(t) Τὸν θρυλλούμενον διάβολον, τὸν τῶν δαιμόνων ἄρχοντα, κακόεργον εἶναι ψυχήν. Clem. ſtr. l. 5. p. m. 432, 433, Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. p. 670. Liv. Gallant. comp. l. 15. p. 400.

(u) Τὸν οὐρανὸν πολλῶν μεστὸν ἀγαθῶν, εἶναι δὲ ϗ τῶν ἐναντίων· μάχη δὴ φαμὲν ἀθάνατός ἐσθ' ἡ τοιαύτη, ϗ φυλακῆς θαυμαστῆς δεομένη.

(w) Ξύμμαχοι δὲ ἡμῖν θεοί τε ἅμα καὶ δαίμονες, ἡμεῖς δ' αὖ κτήματα θεῶν καὶ δαιμόνων.

(x) Pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 26. p. 549.

(y) Θεραπ. Ser. 3.

(z) Ἔστι μὲν δὴ ϗ ἄλλα κακά· ἀλλά τις δαίμων ἔμιξε τοῖς πλείστοις ἐν τῷ παραυτίκα ἡδονήν.

(a) Dæmonas ſolum bonos tradidit. Platoni nunquam mali. De per. Phil. l. 8. c. 33, 20, 23.

(b) De C. D. l. 8. c. 13.

(c) l. 8. p. 403.

(d) Ibid. l. 6. p. 303, 304.

(e) Ἔνθα Ζεὺς ἐκβάλλει θεῶν ὅταν τις ἐξυβρίσῃ.

ous thither he is caſt by Jupiter. And he addeth, that in Minerva's Peplum (Pall or Embroider'd Veſt) the Victory of that chaſt Goddeſs without a Mother over the Giants was repreſented. It is poſſible, that Origen might remember this Diſcourſe of Celſus, when he ſaith of him, that he acknowledged no Evil Demons: for in ſo ſaying Origen might mean, that although Celſus in ſome ſort acknowledged Evil Demons, yet (becauſe that impure Pagan explodeth the Satanas of our Theology) he did not acknowledge the Evil Demons which the Chriſtian Theology ſuppoſeth. And whether any of the Pagan Theologers did ſo, and how far they did ſo, may be underſtood from this following compendious account of their Doctrine of Evil Demons.

VI. Firſt, Becauſe of the lowneſs or infimouſneſs (rather) of their Nature and Condition ſome ſorts of theſe Genii are call'd Bad by the Pagan Theologers; as in Greek Authors the abject and ignoble ſort of Men are uſually call'd κακοὶ and φαῦλοι, the bad ſort, becauſe what is abject and ignoble, is in reſpect of rank not well. In this Notion the Chalday Oracles and the Platoniſts uſually ſpeak of bad Demons; (f) for it is the inferiour, meaner and viler ſort of theſe Genii (the Terrene and Material) which they call bad; the ſuperiour or higher ſorts of them, the Etherial, Igneous, and Aereal (which are alſo called by other Names) theſe are all good. Socrates, ſaith Proclus, (g) was to Alcibiades as a good Demon; the reſt of his Lovers as Material and Terrene Demons. Theſe roll and tumble themſelves in Terrene Matter (and are involv'd in it) and have Bodies or Vehicles of ſo groſs a Material Conſiſtence, that as ſeveral Demonologiſts report, (h) they may be beaten and feel pain, and cut with a Sword or Knife, and in Conjuration they are ſaid to wear ſuch Weapons, to fright the Demons from leaping on them to their hurt. The Chalday Oracles call them θῆρες χθονὸς, the ferine Beaſts of the Earth, and ſay of them, that they poſſeſs the feculent Bodies of Men and make them their Habitation. Σὸν ἀγγεῖον θῆρες χθονὸς οἰκήσουσιν, the ferine Beaſts of the Earth will inhabit thy Veſſel, as the Apoſtle (i) agreeably to Heathen Authors calleth the Body, 1 Theſſ. 4. 4. They are deſcrib'd by Syneſius a Biſhop of the Chriſtian Church, but no Chriſtian Theologer (for his Theology is the Chalday Theurgical Theology, Ἕλλην ϗ οὗτος τῇ δόξῃ ὤν, (k) being in his Sentiment a Greek) as the natural Iſſue and Progeny of the Terreſtrial Hyle, which is, (l) the Sink of Nature that produceth the Rabble of Demons; the Chieftain of whom he Theurgically calls (m) κύνα τὸν χθόνιον, δαίμονα γαίας, the Terreſtrial Dog, the Demon of the Earth, and ſometimes (n) Δαίμων ὕλας, the Demon of the Matter. Arnobius therefore thus repreſenteth the Senſe of the Theurgical Theologers, (o) that there are certain Anti-Gods, which are Spirits conſiſting of craſs Matter, that feign themſelves to be Gods; and Origen ſpeaking his own Senſe (which is agreeable to the Theurgiſts) ſtileth them (p) Craſſitudes from the Earth. Their craſs materialneſs rendreth them inept for the Theurgiſts purpoſe; for according to the Chalday Oracles and thoſe that follow them, (q) they are remote from Intellectual Contemplation, full of tenebricoſe Matter, rude and illiterate, and unable to give true Intelligence in matters of Divination. To which Demonology of the Chalday Oracles we will annex Porphyry's Deſcription of his Evil Demons, which he repreſenteth (r) as circumterraneous in reſpect of their Aboad and Converſe, delighting in what is Mortal and Material, taking pleaſure (and epicurizing as it were) in the Steams and Nidours of Sacrifices, δι' ὧν αὐτῶν τὸ πνευματικὸν πιαίνεται, by which their Spirital Body is fatted; for this liveth and is nouriſhed by Vapours and Suffumigations. Theſe notices of the Evil Genii repreſent them as of inferiour Rank and Condition; but in Plutarch certain evil Genii are repreſented as of great Rank and Power; whence it appeareth, that a Learned Man hath committed a miſtake in ſaying, (s) that the old Philoſophers did not conceive any evil Angels to be in the Air. (t) For Xenocrates was of Opinion, that ſeveral Rites of the Pagan Religion (ſuch as unlucky Days, and the Holy Days wherein certain Modes of beating and lamenting, faſtings, bad words and obſcene ſpeeches were us'd) were not agreeable to the Worſhip of the Gods or of good Demons, (u) but that there are in the Air certain great and potent Natures, ſad, and ſurly, and ill-natur'd, that take pleaſure in ſuch things, and enjoying them proceed to nothing worſe. Plutarch himſelf (w) is of the ſame Opinion with Xenocrates, that the forementioned Rites of their Religion with ſeveral others, Antic, Barbarous and Bloody, are not the worſhip of any of the Gods, but of Evil Demons that are ἰσχυροὶ ϗ βίαιοι, valid and violent. Moreover, the Calamitous Tranſactions which the vulgar Theology reporteth of the Gods, are according to Plutarch, (x) the Calamities, μεγάλων δαιμόνων, of certain great Demons. Which Suppoſition of great and potent evil Demons is a great approach to the Demonology of the Holy Scriptures; but it ſpeaketh the Author of it a better Moraliſt than Theurgiſt, as is before obſerv'd.

From the Theurgical Theologers notices of the bad ſort of Demons, it appeareth, that they did not ſuppoſe the Demons to be naked Minds, or abſtract Forms and ſeparate Intelligences, as the Schools of Chriſtendom and ſeveral of the Hebrew Doctors conceive of Angels; but they ſuppos'd them to have Bodies, and ſome of them Bodies of ſo craſs a Conſiſtence, that they might be cut and wounded with a Sword. From which Conceit of the Magicians of ancient Times (y) a Learned Divine hath given an account of a Magical Rite mention'd by the Prophet, Ezek. 33. 26. ye ſtand upon your Swords: For they had their Swords in readineſs drawn and glittering, to keep the Ghoſts and Demons in awe, which they had rais'd up by Conjuration. As rude and unſkilful as this Conceit of the ancient Magicians may ſeem, it cannot be thought more rude and unphiloſophical than that Conceit of ſeveral of the Hebrew Doctors, (z) that the Aereal Demons eat and drink, generate and die as Men: Nor than that Conceit of ſeveral of the Fathers, (a) J. Mart. Athenagoras, Clemens Al. Tertullian, Cyprian, Lactantius, Methodius, Euſebius, Ambroſius, that the fall of Angels was their falling in love with Women, and having unclean Commerce with them; whence the Giants were begotten, as ſome of them ſay; others (as J. Mart. and Lactantius) affirm, that Demons were generated. Theſe ancient Theogers of the Church, (as alſo Philo and Joſephus, who entertain the ſame Conceit) ſuppoſe the Angels material or corporeal at an extravagant

---

(f) Gale in Jambl. p. 258, 253.

(g) De An. & Dæm. p. 188.

(h) Niceph. in Syneſ. p. 394, 399, 411, 412. J. Bapt. Criſp. de Ethn. Phil. Quin. 1. p. 444. Arn. adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 12, 13. Pſell. de Dæm. c. ult.

(i) M. Anton. l. 3. S. 3.

(k) Nicep. in Syneſ. p. 358.

(l) Ἵνα δαιμόνων ὅμιλον φύσις ἰζάνουσα τίκτει. Hymn 2.

(m) Hymn. 4.

(n) Hymn. 3.

(o) Antitheos eſſe quoſdam materiis ex craſſioribus ſpiritus, qui Deos ſe fingunt. L. 4. p. 134.

(p) Αἱ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς παχύτητες. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 132.

(q) Gale in Jambl. p. 238. Niceph. ſupr. p. 399.

(r) De Abſt. l. 2. p. 86, 83.

(s) Windet. de vit. funct. p. 261. ed. 3.

(t) Plutar. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 361.

(u) Ἀλλ' εἶναι φύσεις ἐν τῷ περιέχοντι μεγάλας μὲν ϗ ἰσχυρὰς, δυστρόπους δὲ ϗ σκυθρωπὰς, &c.

(w) De Def. Orac. p. 417.

(x) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 360.

(y) D. Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 2. c. 11. p. 299. ed. 2.

(z) Munſter. Not. in Lev. 17. 7.

(a) Petav. T. 3. l. 1. c. 2. & l. 3. c. 2. Viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 15. c. 23. Eugub. de per. Phil. l. 8. c. 32. Spencer. ſupr. p. 407. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 20

rate; and not a few others of the ancient Writers without the intermixture of ſuch an Extravagance, ſuppoſe, that the Angels have Bodies (which is an Opinion, that ſome think next door to Hereſie, and that it wanteth nothing but the plain and clear Definition of the Church to make it ſuch;) for this is the Opinion of Origen, Baſil, Macarius, the Alexandrian Cyril, Cæſarius, Joannes Theſſalonicenſis (whoſe Dialogue was read in the ſecond Nicene Synod) Auguſtin, Rupertus, Claudianus, Mamertus, Fulgentius, Caſſian, Anaſtaſius Sinaita, and ſome others. (b) Touching the Heathen Demons the ancient Theologers of the Church generally (J. Mart. Tatianus, Athenagoras, Clemens, Origen, Tertullian, Jul. Firmicus, Lactantius, Minuc. Felix, Cyprian, Euſebius, Baſil, Hierom, Chryſoſtom) are of Opinion, that they have their Compoſition and Conſiſtence of Matter (σύμπηξιν ἐξ ὕλης,) that their Bodies are Aerial, but craſs and feculent, that they are in ſome ſort nouriſh'd by the Blood, and Nidors, and Fumes of the Sacrifices, and that they take delight to dabble in them: And this thoſe ancient Theologers account a grand Diſparagement to the Material and Bloody Sacrifices; They are things whereby the evil Demons are principally gratify'd. Agreeably to thoſe ancient Theologers the ancient Zabii demonologiz'd, (c) as is viſible in their Rites, the Rites of Magical Demonolatry. For they ſuppoſed (as Maimonides diſcourſeth) that Blood was food to the Demons; therefore they kill'd Animals in honour of them, and poured the Blood upon the Ground, or into a Ditch, as an allective to the Demons to come, themſelves banquetting about the Blood upon the Sacrifice, that ſo they might gain the Friendſhip and Society of the Demons, and the faculty of Divination. In oppoſition to which Magical Rites of the ancient Zabii the Children of Iſrael are forbidden to eat על הדם which probably ſignifieth upon, or over, or by the Blood, Lev. 19. 26. They are commanded to bring the Animals which they kill'd, unto the Door of the Tabernacle of the Congregation, and their Blood was to be ſprinkled upon the Altar, that the Children of Iſrael might no more offer their Sacrifices לשעירם Dæmonibus τραγομόρφοις, to the Goat-like Demons, Lev. 17. 3–7. whence it is manifeſt, that theſe Demons call'd in Scripture שעירם the Ragged or Hairy, becauſe they uſually appear'd in the ſhape of Hairy Goats (whence one ſort of the Heathen Gods were Ægipanes or Capripedes Panes, Fawns, Goat-footed Satyrs and Sileni, as the elder ſort of Satyrs were called) are ſuch as the Theurgical Theologers above-mention'd account the bad ſort of Demons. Agreeably whereunto the Stone μνιζουρὶν (which the Chalday Oracles preſcribe to be ſacrificed, to drive away the bad ſort of Demons) is thought to have its Name from (d) Menos Sebirim, which ſignifieth its virtue of driving away the Ragged or Hairy; and Procopius (e) calleth the Sebirim, ἔνυλον ϗ ἐσκοτισμένον δαίμονα, a material and tenebricoſe ſort of Demon. But although the Sebirim to which the Iſraelites ſacrificed, were of that ſort of Demons which the Theurgical Theologers accounted bad Demons; yet the Egyptianizing Iſraelites accounted them good Demons, as is evident from the mighty Veneration and Affection, which the Egyptians had for Goats. (f) They religiouſly abſtain'd from killing them, and certain of their Women thought it Religion, to proſtitute their Bodies to the Sacred Goats. They put the Name Mendes (a Goat) upon the God Pan, and the Mendeſians (a People of Egypt) thought it a matter of Honour to bear the Name of Mendes: They erected Statues in the Temples in Honour of them, τὸν τράγον ἀπεθέωσαν, they deify'd the Goat, and were ſo madly addicted to the Goat-Religion, that the Prieſts who ſucceeded their Fathers in the Prieſthood, were firſt of all to be initiated unto this God; and Maimonides ſaith of this and ſome other Animals, They were of higheſt eſteem amongſt Idolaters. The Iſraelites therefore that ſacrificed in the Wilderneſs to the Sebirim, did not account them evil Demons: In ſacrificing to thoſe Demons they did not deſign to propitiate the Devil under the Name of Azazel, as the principle and cauſe of their Evils: had they ſuppos'd Azazel the Prince and Chieftain of them, they could not have ſuppos'd him to be the Devil.

VII. Secondly, The evil Genii are ſo denominated by ſome of the later Platoniſts, (who probably improv'd their Notices touching evil Demons from the Chriſtian Theology) becauſe of the Vitioſity of their Nature and Practice. Which ſort of Evil Demons are of a threefold Origination; ſome are the Souls of evil Men, others are good Demons degenerate, and others are by Nature (the Natural Conſtitution of the Univerſe) evil Demons. For although the Suppoſition of Evil Demons by the Natural Conſtitution of the Univerſe doth plainly infer the Perſian Ditheiſm, (becauſe ſuch Evil Demons cannot iſſue from a good Principle) yet it is not imaginable, that the Terrene Material Demons of the Theurgical Theologers have any other Original but Nature, whence they are call'd by Jamblichus, (g) οἱ φύσει πονηροὶ δαίμονες, Evil Demons that are ſuch by Nature. The Souls of Men are Demons factive; (h) if good, they are Lares; if evil, Lemures or Larvæ. Evil Demons are alſo ſuppos'd (as Evil Men) to make themſelves Evil. (i) For the Gods are neceſſarily good (ſay the Platoniſts) and cannot loſe their Virtue; but the Demonial Tribe is diſtinguiſh'd from the Gods, φαυλότητος ὂν ϗ μοχθηρίας δεκτικὸν, being capable of Badneſs and Improbity and of a change to the worſe. (k) There are differences of Virtue and Vice amongſt Demons, as amongſt Men. So according to Porphyry (the beſt of the Pagan Demonologiſts) the Demons which adminiſter the Sublunary parts of the World degenerate into Diſorder and Vitioſity, and this is the origin of Evil Demons. (l) Of thoſe Souls (the progeny of the Univerſal Soul) that adminiſter the ſublunary parts of the World, ſo many as rule their Spirital Body, which is their Vehicle, according to reaſon, theſe are good Demons; but thoſe Souls that do not rule over, but are for the moſt part under the Rule and Maſtery of their Vehicle, and are agitated very much, and carry'd according to the Irritation and Impetuoſity of the iraſcible and concupiſcible of their Vehicle, theſe Souls are Demons indeed, but maleficent ones. The principal Vitioſities of this ſort of Demons are (m) their faſtuous Pride, remark'd by Proclus, Julian and Porphyry, by whom they are denominated πλήρεις τύφου, full of Faſtuoſity. (n) The practice of Deceit, Lying and Impoſture ſubſervient to their Pride. For they are ſaid to be ἀπατηλῆς φύσεως, of a fallacious or deceitful nature, τὸ ψεῦδος τούτοις οἰκεῖον, the practice of Lying is proper unto theſe, the Terrene Demons are ψευδεῖς κατὰ τὴν φύσιν, naturally Lying, ſaith Pſellus according to the Mind of the Chalday Oracles. (o) The Black or hurtful Magick (commonly call'd Goety) is attributed to their Agency; and they are call'd by Plutarch in the Life of Dio, τὰ φαῦλα δαιμόνια ϗ βάσκανα, evil and

(b) Petav. ſupr. l. 3. c. 1. Dr. Cud. Intell. Syſt. p. 811, &c. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 6.

(c) Spenc. ſupr. l. 2. c. 11. Ficin. com. in Plotin. p. 289.

(d) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 8.

(e) Ap. Bochart. de Anim. p. 1. l. 2. c. 53.

(f) Spenc. ſupr. l. 3. p. 474, 475, 477. Outram de ſacrific. l. 1. c. 9. p. 100. Marſham. Can. Chron. p. 65. ed. Lipſ.

(g) De Myſt. p. 111.

(h) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 9. c. 11.

(i) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 15.

(k) Plutar. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 360.

(l) De Abſt. l. 2. p. 81.

(m) Gale in Jambl. p. 275. S. Cyr. C. Jul. p. 224. & p. 125. Porphyr. de Abſtin. l. 2. p. 86.

(n) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 53. Porph. ubi ſupr. orac. mag. p. 108.

(o) Porph. ibid. p. 85. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 19.

and envious Demons (envying Man's Happineſs being one of their eminent Vitioſities) whence Syneſius ſaith, (p) the Calamities of the Nations are a Banquet for Evil Demons. In the Life of Galba the ſame Author (Plutarch) relateth the Speech of a Military Officer to his Soldiers (then about to revolt from the Emperour) wherein he reproacheth their Mutability, that chang'd ſo oft in ſo ſhort a time, not upon any rational Conſideration, ἀλλὰ δαίμονος τινὸς ἐλαύνοντος, but by the impulſe of ſome Demon, that hurry'd them from one Treaſon to another. The evil influence of certain Demons upon the minds of Men was a common notice amongſt the Pagans, and (probably) the vulgar Pagans thought thoſe Demons, from whom ſuch extraordinary impulſes to bad were ſuppos'd to come, morally evil agreeably to the ſenſe of the Platoniſts, who attribute to their evil Genii an evil influence upon the minds and manners of men, (q) the Tragedies of Melancholy (ſome being agitated by evil Demons, ſaith Julian, haunt Wilderneſſes inſtead of Cities) the hindring men from virtue, the inflaming mens minds ἔρωτι ϗ πόθοις πλούτων, with the love and deſire of riches and potentacies and pleaſures, as alſo vain-glories, whence ſeditions and wars ariſe; for all intemperance and deſire of riches and glory is from their influence. Jamblichus reporteth, (r) that Epimenides (the Diſciple of Pythagoras and therefore a Theurgiſt) having invok'd the Erynnes ϗ τοὺς τιμωροὺς θεοὺς, and the punitive Gods, made his Inſidiators that were about to kill him, to kill themſelves. (s) Himerius complaineth, that one of theſe malificent Genii ſtrangled his Son Rufinus. They are ſuppos'd therefore, to have (t) a miſchievous influence upon the external affairs of mankind. They variouſly infeſt mankind (ſaith Porphyry) and are the Authors of circumterraneous calamities, ſuch as peſtilences, earthquakes, droughts, ſterilities; and this Philoſopher will by no means allow, that the beneficent Gods are the cauſes of theſe Calamities (ὅτι τὸ ἀγαθὸν οὐ βλάπτει ποτε, becauſe what is good never doth hurt; for it is not the property of heat to cauſe cold, but of the contrary, as Plato ſaith:) But ſome of his Platonic School ſay, that the Gods make uſe of the material Demons, to produce ſuch calamities. Theſe evil Demons they generally call (u) ἀκαθάρτους, impure and unclean, which aſſociate with and infeſt the impure; for theſe by congeniality attract theſe evil ſpirits to themſelves, and are by them impell'd πρὸς κακίαν πᾶσαν, to all manner of wickedneſs. Purity therefore is a neceſſary amulet againſt their incurſions and moleſtations, and is neceſſary to qualify for the Converſe of the Incontaminate Spirits. For in Vulgar Paganiſm (w) oftentimes ſomething appeareth, ὃ ταράττει τὸ ἱεροσκόπον, that troubleth the Prieſt or Soothſayer (who maketh Divination from the Entrals of Beaſts) becauſe ſome that are there are impure. Wherefore the Prieſts and Soothſayers charge both themſelves and others, to abſtain from Sepulchres, from unholy Men, Menſtruous Impurities and Venereal Congreſſes, from ſeeing ſuch ſights that are foul and lugubrous, and hearing ſuch things that excite Paſſion. Such a Self-inconſiſtence there is in the Pagan Deities, (x) they require, that their Worſhippers ſhould be juſt, yet themſelves if required thereto, refuſe not to do unjuſt things. They will not hear one that invoketh them, becauſe impure by things Venereous, yet themſelves make no demur (as in Love-effaſcinations) to inſtigate εἰς παράνομα ἀφροδίσια, to unlawful Venery. But theſe foul Inſtigations are ſuppos'd to be the doings of the Evil Demons (which are acknowledged to be Maleficent Genii, yet Cities and the Popular Societies of Men (y) are ſuppos'd to be under a neceſſity of averting their Diſpleaſure and courting their Favour) and in them we muſt remark another principal Vitioſity, (z) which is (agreeably to Terrene Material Demons) the hindring the aſcent of Souls and drawing them down to the Matter. Τὴν ψυχὴν ἐπὶ τὴν φύσιν καθέλκουσι, They draw down the Soul into inferiour Nature, and ſuch as are haſting to the intelligible Fire they detain in this low place. (a) So the War between the Athenians and Atlanticks in Plato is ſaid to ſignifie the conflict between the Souls that are aſcending upwards, and the Demons deducing them into Generation; that the loweſt and material kind of them conflict with Souls in their aſcent and deſcent; and as Plato's Atlantis was ſituate in the Weſt, ſo the Weſt (ſaith Proclus) according to the Egyptians, τόπος ἐστὶ δαιμόνων κακωτικῶν, is the place of the noxious Demons. The Material Genii (contradiſtinct to the ἄϋλοι, Immaterial) therefore concern themſelves to withdraw Souls from the Teletæ or Sacred Rites and Myſteries, becauſe the Teleſtick Buſineſs is deſign'd (b) πρὸς τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀναγωγὴν, in order to the reduction or ſubvecſion of the Soul; whereas the Material Genii make it their Buſineſs, to hinder the aſcent of Souls, and to immerſe them into Hyle or the Terreſtrial Matter.

Hyle is extreamly infamous amongſt this ſort of Theologers (whoſe Life and Happineſs is that of Abſtract, Myſtic-metaphyſical or Theurgical Intellectualiſts and Immaterialiſts) and it is from their Demonology, (c) that Syneſius borroweth his Δαίμων ὕλας, Demon of the Matter. From the ſame Fountain Minucius Felix deriveth his Deſcription of Demons; (d) à cœlo deorſum gravant, & à Deo vero ad materiam avocant, Their motion is an heavy ſinking from Heaven downwards, and they withdraw from the true God to the Matter. Athenagoras diſcourſeth, (e) that when the Angels were created, the things of the Creation were committed to their care, and the Prince of the Apoſtate Angels was originally ὁ τῆς ὕλης ϗ τῶν ἐν αὐτῇ εἰδῶν ἄρχων, the Ruler and Preſident of the Matter, and of the Forms that are in it. He ſuppoſeth, that this Rule and Preſidency is ſtill continued; for he calleth him ſeveral times τὸν ἄρχοντα τῆς ὕλης, the ruler of the Matter, and τὸ περὶ τὴν ὕλην ἔχον πνεῦμα, the Circum-material Spirit that oppoſeth God's Goodneſs. Lipſius is of Opinion, (f) that in this account of the Prince of Apoſtate Angels, he hath reſpect to the Ditheiſts malificent Soul of the Matter: whether ſo or otherwiſe, it is an inſtance of that irreligious Humour, which very early invaded the Church, the Philoſophic paganizing the Matters of the Chriſtian Theology. What then ſhall we ſay, that the Devil is? ſaith Methodius, (g) πνεῦμα περὶ τὴν ὕλην ἔχον, a Spirit converſant about the matter, as Athenagoras ſaid. Theſe Notices are deſcendents from the Chaldeans Magick, whence Manes (the Father of the Manichees) is ſaid, to have learn'd (h) Διάβολον eſſe ἄρχοντα τῆς ὕλης, that the Devil is the preſidentiary ruler of the matter. So the counterfeit Dionyſius ſtileth the Rabble of Demons πρόσυλον, adhering to the matter; and Tatianus J. Martyr's Scholar (ſpeaking not the Chriſtian, but the Philoſophic-pagan Language) giveth us this rule touching the Evil Demons; (i) He that would overcome them, τὴν ὕλην παραιτησάσθω, let him repudiate the matter. Agreeably to Athenagoras's account of the Prince of Apoſtate Angels (k) Gr. Nyſſen and J. Damaſcen. ſuppoſe, that when the

---

(p) Συμφοραὶ γὰρ ἐθνῶν εὐωχία φαύλων δαιμόνων. De provid. p. 97.

(q) Gale in Jambl. p. 228. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 19. Porphyr. ſupr. & Ep. ad Aneb.

(r) De Vit. Pythag. p. 188.

(s) Phot. cod. 243.

(t) Porph. ſupr. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 5. c. 8. Eugubin. de per. phil. l. 8. c. 35. Procl. in Tim. p. 35.

(u) Porph. ſupr. p. 86, 89, 90. Jambl. de myſt. p. 103. Niceph. in Syneſ. p. 363.

(w) Porph. ſupr. p. 87, 91.

(x) Jambl. de myſt. p. 108, 114.

(y) Porph. ſupr. p. 86.

(z) Gale in Jambl. p. 210, 211.

(a) Procl. in Tim. p. 24. Ficin. com. in Tim. c. 4.

(b) Orac. mag. p. 26. ed. op. Sop.

(c) Hymn. 3.

(d) p. 248.

(e) Apol. p. 27, 28.

(f) Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 20.

(g) Ap. Petav. T. 2. Præfat. c. 3. S. 3.

(h) Gale in Jambl. p. 208.

(i) p. 155.

(k) Petav. T. 3. l. 3. c. 2. S. 8, 9. c. 3. S. 5. Vid. Eugub. de per. phil. l. 8. c. 38.

World was created, the ſeveral parts of it were committed to ſeveral Orders of Angels; that he who is now the Devil, was the Prefect of the Terrene Order, having the Preſidency over the Earth, and the Adminiſtration of terrene things; and that his Sin was, He envied and could not brook the Dignity beſtow'd upon Man. Which Conceit of theirs, that Envy was the Devil's Sin, is entertain'd by ſeveral other Theologers of the Primitive Church.

Inſignis pars Intelligentiarum quæ diſpoſitioni materiali mundi præeſt, malorum & inferiorum dæmonum nomine vocata eſt. Poſtell. de orig. Etrur. p. 181.

VIII. Thirdly, As in the Vulgar Theology the Pagans diſtributed their Gods into Good and Evil, (l) one ſort of them were call'd Mala Numina, (which according to Labeo muſt be appeas'd and ſweeten'd by ſad and cruentous Sacrifices) becauſe unfriendly to them: So there are (according to the Pagan Theologers) Demons of a punitive nature and practice, which as ſuch without any reſpect to their Vitioſity are denominated Evil. So according to ſome Expoſitors, the Evil Angels ſpoken of, Pſal. 78. 49. were not morally evil, but are denominated evil, as being Angels of Puniſhment. Of this nature are (m) the δαίμονες παλαμναῖοι χθονιοί τε, direful, punitive and terreſtrial Demons, which together with Nemeſis the Supream God hath made Overſeers of Humane Affairs. Of this Number are the Greeks Alaſtores, (n) the Furies, revenging Diræ (the Telchines alſo ſeem to be of this number) and thoſe ſtrange horrible Deities which Atteius call'd upon and nam'd, when he curs'd Craſſus, as Plutarch relateth in his Life. The Terreſtrial Dogs alſo in the Chalday Oracles are denominated Ferine Beaſts, (o) to ſignify their ferity and cruelty, and that they are punitive tormentors of Souls. The Greeks ſuppoſe (as Pſellus repreſenteth their Demonology) that but a ſmall part of the Demons are bad, and that theſe are bad, not by choice or lapſe, but originally for the torture of delinquent Souls. When theſe appear (in Theurgy) they ſhew the ſeveral Puniſhments which they inflict, (p) as a principal Theurgiſt affirmeth; who alſo calleth them, (q) certain ferine Beaſts, noxious, truculent and ſanguivorous. If ſuch Sanguivorous Beaſts do really exiſt in the Kingdom of Darkneſs, if they were not ludicrous appearances (as ſeveral of the Phænomena in Theurgy manifeſtly are) wherewith the impoſtorous Demons abus'd the Theurgiſts, the ancient Zabii were not out in their Suppoſition, that Blood is the Food of Demons. Some of theſe (r) οἱ τιμωροὶ ἢ καθάρτικοι δαίμονες, Punitive or Cathartic Demons go about to puniſh proud and great Injuſtices in this World; and the Buſineſs of puniſhing theſe Theologers of the Platonic School appropriate to their Demonial Order, (s) accounting it incongruous and incompetible to the Gods, ἐριννυῶδες ϗ δαιμονικὸν, proper and agreeable only to Erynnes and Demons, as Plutarch ſuppoſeth it. Yet thus far he ſuppoſeth it competible to the Gods; They make uſe of the Demons as their Executioners. For inquiring the reaſon, why the Romans cloathed their Lares or Domeſtic Gods with Dogs-skins, he maketh this Conjecture. (t) As Chryſippus ſuppoſeth, that certain evil Genii go about, which the Gods make uſe of to do the work of Executioners upon impious and unjuſt Men: So the Lares may be thought certain direful and punitive Genii. In this Author's Deſcription of the Puniſhments of another Life, (u) certain Lakes are ſaid to be there, καί τινας ἐφεστῶτας δαίμονας, and certain Demons ſtand by, which plunge Souls in, and draw them out: As in the Apologue of Er in Plato there are ἄνδρες ἄγριοι ϗ διάπυροι ἰδεῖν, Men ferine and of igneous Aſpect, the tormentors of Souls. This ſort of Evil Demons is acknowledged by Plato; and one of his School (who acknowledgeth no Demons morally evil, yet) affirmeth, (w) that there are Demons which puniſh Souls, that the Sins of Men make the Gods their Enemies, (not that the Gods are angry, but) they ſeparate them from the Gods, and joyn them δαίμοσι κολαστικοῖς, to the punitive Demons; that the Souls of the Flagitious after their departure from the Body are tormented by them, and that there are for ſeparate Souls, θεοὶ καθάρσιοι, ϗ δαίμονες ἁμαρτημάτων καθαίρουσι, expiatory Gods, and the Demons purge from Sins. Doubtleſs, it was this ſort of Demons that are punitively bad, which the Pagans ſuppoſed the Maleficent Magicians to hold Correſpondence with, and which they call'd (x) Impios Deos, Erynnyes, Hecate, Proſerpina.

(l) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 5. l. 8. *c.*18. Windet. de Vit. funct. p. 116. Eugub. ſupr. l. 10. c. 23. & l. 8. c. 28, 31.

(m) Tim. Locr. de An. Mundi in fine.

(n) Αἱ ποιναὶ μερόπων ἀγκτεισαι, The Vindictive Furies do the work of Executioners unto Men.

(o) Gale in Jambl. p. 212. Pſell. de Dæm. of Ficin. tranſlation, p. 357.

(p) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 48.

(q) Θηρία τινὰ βλαβερὰ ϗ αἱμοβόρα ϗ ἄγρια.

(r) Procl. in Tim. p. 35. Plut. de Def. or. p. 417.

(s) Eugubin. ſupr. l. 8. c. 35. l. 10. c. 26.

(t) Καθάπερ οἱ περὶ Χρύσιππον οἴονται φιλόσοφοι φαῦλα δαιμόνια περινοστεῖν, οἷς οἱ θεοὶ δημίοις χρῶνται κολασταῖς ἐπὶ τοὺς ἀνοσίους ϗ ἀδίκους ἀνθρώπους· οὕτως οἱ Λάρητες ἐριννυώδεις τινές εἰσι ϗ ποίνιμοι δαίμονες.

(u) De his qui ſero pun. p. 567.

(w) Salluſt. de D. & mund. c. 12, 14, 19. How the Demons purge, v. Syneſ. Ep. 44.

(x) Tacit. An. l. 16. p. 301. Lucian. in Menippo, p. 63.

The Jews are ſaid by a very learned Writer (y) to acknowledge only Dæmones tortores non peccatores, Demons the Tormentors, not Demons the Sinners. "For they ſay nothing (ſaith he) of "the lapſe of Evil Spirits, but they teach, "that they are ſuch as they were created by "God in and together with Hell. In this manner they conſtitute three Claſſes of Angels: "In the firſt and higheſt they place שכלים "הנבדלים ſeparate Intelligences, that is, the Angels ſo called, becauſe they appear not in a "Corporeal Form, nor can they be comprehended by Bodily Senſes, but only by Prophetic Viſion; and theſe incompaſs the Throne "of the Divine Majeſty, ſuch as Michael, Gabriel, Raphael. The Second Claſſis are the "מלאכי השרת Angels of Miniſtry, created by "God for the miniſtry and welfare of Men. "The third Claſſis are the מלאכי חבלה or "מלאכי מות Angels of Deſtruction, Miſchief and "Death, that poſſeſs the Sublunary and Infernal Manſions; and theſe are deſtinated for "inflicting Death and all manner of Calamities "upon Mankind for their Sins. Yet the Jews "cannot deny, that beſides this ſort of Angels "there are Spirits, that are formally and morally evil; but theſe they place not in any "of the three Claſſes, nor do they ſuppoſe them "to be created by God, nor that they fell from "God by any lapſe; but they ſuppoſe them generated by an impure and carnal commixtion "with Mankind, whence they fable many things "touching Lilith Adam's firſt Wife, that afterwards degenerated into an evil Spirit. This laſt Clauſe of this learned Man's Account of the Jews Demonology agreeth with a Tradition of theirs reported by Maimonides, (z) that for the ſpace of 130 Years intire in which Adam was rejected, he begot meer Demons. That other Branch of this account of the Jews Demonology touching מלאכי חבלה Angels of Puniſhment or Torment, is doubtleſs agreeable to the Senſe of the Hebrew Writers. (a) For they ſuppoſe, that ſome of their prefect Angels are good and others are bad; the Name which they give to the good Angels is מלאכי שרת Angels of Miniſtry, bad Angels they call מלאכי חבלה Angels of Puniſhment or Torment; and the Head of this ſort of Angels is Samael, מלאך המות the Angel of Death (as the (b) Jews call him) who is ſuppos'd to kill Mankind and other Animals.

(y) Hulſ. Theol. Jud. P. 1. l. 1. p. 71, 72.

(z) Buxt. Lex. Talm. col. 237. Hotting. Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 3. p. 16. ed. 1.

(a) L'Emper. in Jachiad. in Dan. p. 146.

(b) Lightfoot Hor. in 1 Cor. 10. 10.

But this punitive ſort of Angels is conſider'd by the Jews, not as Tormentors only, but as Tempters alſo of Mankind. For they diſcourſe, that Mankind Sin (c) by the ſeduction of the Serpent, (d) that Samael rode upon the Serpent for bigneſs like a Camel, when he tempted Eve (which is one of their portentous Conceits,) that Satan hath his name (e) from שָׂטָה, for he it is, that cauſeth Man to decline from the way of Truth. Aſmodeus (whom the Jews ſuppoſe the King or Head of Demons) is in all probability deriv'd (f) from the Perſic ازمود (Azmoud) tentavit, ad malum ſolicitavit, he tempted or ſolicited to Evil, and therefore ſignifieth the Tempter. So (g) שֵׁדִים mention'd by Moſes, Deut. 32. 17. which the Jews ſuppoſe to be evil Spirits that come out of the Waters, are ſaid to have their name from devaſtating or deſtroying, becauſe they devaſtate a good Mind with bad Opinions and Affections. In ſome ſenſe therefore the Jews acknowledge not only Demons the Tormentors, but Demons the Sinners; for they acknowledge Demons the Tempters. And although Trypho the Jew plainly denieth the lapſe of Angels, and for this Reaſon objecteth Blaſphemy againſt J. Mart. (h) ἀγγέλους γὰρ πονηρευσαμένους καὶ ἀποστάντας τοῦ θεοῦ λέγεις, thou affirmeſt, that Angels have ſinned and apoſtatiz'd from God; yet there are ſeveral Paſſages cited from the Hebrew Theologers, that are plain acknowledgments of the lapſe of Angels, and ſome others that ſound that way. Of this Nature (i) are certain ſayings of R. Eleaſar; The evil Angels were driven out of Heaven בשבט אש אל by an igneous Sceptre, Samael and his Armies God caſt them out of Heaven, Aza and Azael were two Angels that accus'd their Lord, and God caſt them headlong out of the holy place. The Cabaliſtical Book Zohar treating of lapſed Angels ſaith; God threw them down headlong bound and enchained; theſe were Aza and Azael. And in another ancient Book (of the death of Moſes) it is ſaid of them, deſcending from Heaven they corrupted their way. So in Jonathan's Targum Samchazai and Uziel (the ſame with Aza and Azael) are ſaid to have fallen from Heaven, and are ſuppos'd to have begotten Giants. In ſome degree therefore the lapſe of Angels is notic'd and acknowledg'd in the Hebrews Theology, as may be farther underſtood from this Rabbinical Name of the Prince and Head of them (k) מָרוֹד which ſignifieth an Apoſtate, and therefore is an acknowledgment of the lapſe of Angels. Which is alſo implied in ſeveral other Rabbinical Names of the Head of them; as (l) שׂראל גהינם, the Prince of Hell, ראש כל השטנין, the Head of all the Satanæ, as theſe evil Angels are call'd by the Talmudiſts. שרו של רומי the Prince of Rome, as R. Bechai calleth Samael, agreeably to the Senſe of the Apocalypſe; for Samael is nothing elſe but Satan himſelf, as Maimonides ſaith (of whom as alſo of A. Ezra a learned Writer reporteth, (m) that he is of Opinion, that there are no Demons.) To ſignifie, that he is Aerial and the Prince of the Air, one of the Targums ſaith of Samael, that he flyeth as a Bird, and he is ſaid to have cauſed Death to all the World, agreeably to his Rabbinical Name, the Angel of Death. To theſe Rabbinical Names I will ſubjoin (with deſign to illuſtrate it) the name of Beelzebub, or rather Beelzebul, which is now no Rabbinical name, but was in our Saviour's time of ordinary and familiar uſe amongſt the Jews, to ſignifie The Prince of Devils. Touching the Reaſon of this Name, the beſt learned profeſs themſelves ignorant (n) and are unſatisfied with the uſual accounts; I will therefore propoſe this Conjecture. As the Jews in and before our Saviour's time Philoſophic Paganiz'd in ſeveral of their Notices: So Beelzebul, ſeemeth to be the ſame with ἄρχων τῆς ὕλης, or Δαίμων ὕλας, the preſidentiary Ruler of the matter, (which Notion of the Devil Athenagoras probably deriv'd from the Jews;) for זבול Zebul is the ſame with κόπρος, which in the Orphic Verſes ſignifieth the matter.

Ζεῦ κύδιστε, μέγιστε Θεῶν, εἰλυμένε κόπρῳ.
Jupiter moſt Illuſtrious, the greateſt of the Gods,
Involv'd in Dung or the Matter.

IX. Fourthly, As amongſt the Rabbins, ſo amongſt the Pagan Theologers a lapſe of Demons from Heaven is in ſome degree acknowledg'd; for ſome of them diſcourſe of a ſort of evil Genii paſſively and penally ſuch, which are called by Plutarch (o) Οἱ θεήλατοι καὶ οὐρανοπετεῖς ἐκεῖνοι τοῦ Ἐμπεδοκλέους δαίμονες, Thoſe God-agitated and Heaven-fallen Demons of Empedocles. The penal Condition which Empedocles allotteth to his criminal Genii, is a reſtleſs Condition, to be toſs'd (as the rejectaneous Outcaſts of univerſal Nature) from one Region of the Univerſe to another, till being expiated and purg'd by theſe Puniſhments they regain their former natural Place and Station.

Αἰθέριον μὲν γάρ σφε μένος πόντον δὲ διώκει.
Πόντος δ᾽ ἐς χθονὸς οὖδας ἀπέπτυσε, γαῖα δ᾽ ἐσαῦθις
Ἠελίου ἀκάμαντος: ὁ δ᾽ αἰθέρος ἔμβαλε δίναις.
Ἄλλος δ᾽ ἐξ ἄλλου δέχεται, στυγέουσι δὲ πάντες.

From the Etherial Region down
Into the Sea in rage they're thrown.
The raging Sea rejects this rout
Unto the Land, and ſpews them out.
The Land unto the Sun them hurles,
The Sun into the Ether's whirles.
*Thus they are toſs'd (the Outlaws * Fate)*
By Univerſal Nature's Hate.

Theſe Heaven-fallen Demons of Empedocles purſu'd by the Vengeance of the Gods (although they are an approach to the Chriſtian Demonology, yet) cannot reaſonably be thought a Traduction from the Hebrews: Nor is there any thing of that Nature throughout this whole Syſtem of Pagan Demonology, unleſs the Ophioneus of Pherecydes Syrus may be thought the Satanas of our Theology turn'd into a Fable. So Origen affirmeth (p) that Pherecydes Ophioneus had its riſe from the Serpent in Moſes: But Philo out of Sanchoniathon ſaith (q) From the Phenicians Pherecydes took occaſion to Theologize touching the God called by him Ophioneus, and touching the Ophionidæ. He ſuppoſeth, that the Phenicians Theologizing much about Serpents (of great veneration amongſt the Pagans) Pherecydes took occaſion from thence, to entitle a certain God of his Ophioneus or Ophion, as from the ſuppoſed Wiſdom of Serpents the moſt ancient of the Diviners (r) had the name Ophion. Probably therefore no Traduction from the Hebrews is to be found in this Syſtem of Pagan Demonology, which yet in theſe following (and many other) reſpects greatly befriendeth the Demonology of the Chriſtian Religion. (1.) The Heaven-fallen Demons of Empedocles befriend the common Hypotheſis

(c) Hulſ. ſupr. p. 169.

(d) Maimon. mor. nev. P. 2. c. 30.

(e) Ibid. P. 3. c. 22.

(f) Grav. Annot. in Perſ. Evangel. verſ. not. in Matth. 4. 1.

(g) P. Fagius Annot. ad Deut. 32. 17.

(h) Dial. cum Tryph. p. 305.

(i) Windet. de vit. funct. S. 13. Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. diſſ. 8. p. 457. ed. 2. Buxt. Lex. Talm. col. 1593. 2444. Hoornbeck. c. Jud. l. 4. c. 1. p. 309.

(k) Schindler. Lex. col. 1036. Spencer. ſupr. p. 455.

(l) Windet. ſupr. p. 116. Buxtorf. ſupr. col. 1495.

(m) Dion. Voſſ. in Maim. de Idol. c. 11. ſub fin.

(n) Selden. de D. Syr. Synt. 2. c. 6.

(o) De vit. ære al. p. 830. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 361.

* The Saxons call an Outlaw a Friendleſs Man, none may ſhelter or receive him. V. Cowel's Interpreter, Friendleſs Man.

(p) C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 304.

(q) Παρὰ φοινίκων δὲ καὶ Φερεκύδης λαβὼν τὰς ἀφορμὰς, ἐθεολόγησε περὶ τοῦ παρ᾽ αὐτῷ λεγομένου Ὀφιωνέως θεοῦ, καὶ τῶν Ὀφιονιδῶν. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 10.

(r) Bochart. de Anim. P. 1. l. 1. c. 3. col. 22.

potheſis of the lapſe of Angels from Heaven; which muſt be called the Chriſtian Hypotheſis, although ſome Eccleſiaſtic Writers (s) oppoſe it, and ſome thus diſpute againſt it. (t) The Devil and his Angels were originally the prefect-tutelar Angels of the Air and Earth, but were never in Heaven, nor enjoyed the beatific Viſion there. For Heaven is a reward; therefore the Angels in their firſt Eſtate were not the Poſſeſſors of it: But were created (as Mankind was) in ſuch a condition, that they might acquire it by their Piety and Obedience, the faileur whereof was the loſs of it. But from Heaven they could not fall; becauſe Heaven is not the Portion of thoſe that can fall into Sin, but of thoſe only that are firm and rooted in piety: Nor could they Sin in the place and ſtate of Perfection. Had they been Poſſeſſors of Heaven, the beatific Viſion muſt neceſſarily have repleniſhed them with Wiſdom and Beatitude; it would have drawn their deſires towards it immutably, they could not have deſired any thing elſe. But theſe are ſlender appearances of Reaſon, that ſuppoſe a conſequence, for which there is no appearance of Reaſon; that becauſe Heaven is to us a Reward, and a State of unchangeable Felicity by the Goſpel-ſettlement of things, therefore it was ſuch to the Angels in the original Conſtitution of the Kingdom of God; and becauſe (u) ſome holy Men attain to an immutable eſtate of Grace antecedently to their heavenly Reward, therefore none were ever Inhabitants of Heaven, ſave only thoſe that were arriv'd at that confirmed State, and were ἄπτωτοι εἰς κακίαν, undeclinably good. The Angels height of Perfection and Felicity (in their Celeſtial Condition) was ſo far from ſecuring them from a Fall, that it might occaſion it; (w) as Origen ſuppoſeth, that Satan being a Crown of Pulchritude in the Paradiſe of God periſhed by a fulneſs of Goods: Or as we commonly ſuppoſe, that he fell by Elation (priding himſelf againſt God,) φιλαυτία, Self-admiration and Self-love, and by affecting a Domination not ſubject (or not duly ſubject) unto God, agreeably to the Heads of Empire which he ſetteth up in the World, that uſually affect an unſubject and unbounded Liberty. And that himſelf in Conſort with his Fellow-rebels ſhould be like-minded, and therefore ſhould chuſe to make a total Revolt from God and their Duty, was not incompetible to their Celeſtial Condition, nor is it at all incredible, the like prodigiouſly frantick Enormities being no rarities amongſt intelligent Agents. For in our own Nation a young Gentleman (not naturally craz'd in his Underſtanding) choſe to leave his Father's Houſe and a fair Eſtate, to Ramble about with the Gypſies. Wherefore the uſual Theology is unexceptionable, which is clearly enough expreſs'd in holy Scripture. For according to the Scriptures the holy Angels are originally the Inhabitants of Heaven, Matth. 22. 30. Luc. 20. 36. Heb. 12. 22. and the lapſed Angels were originally of the number of the holy Angels, 2 Pet. 2. 5. Jud. 6. (2.) The Pagan Demonology thus far befriendeth the Chriſtian Hypotheſis of an Imperial Polity and Kingdom of evil Angels. It ſheweth, that this is the true and reaſonable Hypotheſis, for the Pagan Demonologiſts ſuppoſe, that the evil Demons have an Imperial Head over them; therefore in conſiſtence with themſelves, they ought to have ſuppoſed, that there is a diſtinct Imperial Polity and Kingdom of Evil Demons, as Chriſtianity aſſerteth. But they have ſo paganically qualified their Doctrine of evil Demons, as to make it no contradiction to their Doctrine of the Unity of the Mundane City and Monarchy (for their evil Demons are of their Theopolity, of their City of God, and are Gods alſo;) and there is a monſtrous abſurdity and impiety in their account of the Polity of the Univerſe, as alſo in the Hypotheſis of certain Deiſts, That the Catholick Church is of the ſame extent with the World of Rationals; for according to this Hypotheſis the evil Demons are Church-Members. This with Deiſts will be counted a ſmall matter; but if they have any veneration for God, they will not count it a ſmall matter to deify evil Demons and to pay them religious Worſhip: Yet this Demonolatry was the Religion of Pagan Cities and Popular Societies, as ſome of the Pagan Demonologiſts plainly acknowledge (x) thereby giving a great Atteſtation to the truth of the Chriſtian Religion (which chargeth upon Paganiſm an horrendous Demonolatry, the Sacrificing unto and having Fellowſhip with Devils,) and to the peculiar excellency of the Chriſtian Learning, which alone to the purpoſe diſcovereth Satan and maketh him known. For both Jews and Pagans (notwithſtanding their ſlender Notices of evil Angels) are far from knowing him as they ought, and ſo far as is needful to the purpoſe of Piety and Sanctity, as Tertullian (ſpeaking of Socrates's Demon) ſaith,

(y) As yet there were none of the Documents of the Chriſtian Power, which alone traduceth that moſt pernicious Power, that is never good, the Artificer of old Error, and the turner away from all Truth. The Chriſtian alone knoweth Satan. Yet both in Ancient and Modern Paganiſm (obſcure) notices of evil Demons are ſo far diffus'd, that we may juſtly ſay, as the ſame Author (Tertullian) doth. Dæmonium ubique, & maledictio Dæmonii ubique. The Devil was notic'd every where and had in execration every where. (3.) The Pagan Demonology greatly befriendeth the Chriſtian by aſſerting and aſcertaining (in Conſort with it) the Exiſtence of evil Demons. For it appeareth from Heathen Authors to have been from the moſt ancient times the general Senſe of the Heathen World of Mankind, that there are evil Demons and evil Gods. They were aſſured of their Exiſtence from their Operations and Effects (of which many will be hereafter enumerated;) and from this Hypotheſis Plutarch giveth an account of the Apparitions to Brutus and Dio (the Truth whereof (z) a late pretending Demonologiſt hath endeavour'd to ſlur and diſparage.) If Brutus and Dio (ſaith he) Philoſophical Men, of great ſtrength of Mind, and not apt to fancy horrible Appearances, were put into ſuch commotion by Apparitions, that they ſolicitouſly related them to their Friends; perhaps we may be forc'd to embrace that (ſeemingly) moſt abſurd Opinion of the Ancients, that there are evil and envious Demons, that envying good Men and withſtanding their Actions, raiſe fears and troubles to them, to ſhake and overthrow their Virtue, leſt if they ſhould perſiſt ſtedfaſt and uncorrupted in good, they ſhould after their deceaſe enjoy a better Condition than theirs. Plato who in his Tenth of Laws would have thoſe ſeverely puniſh'd, that by Sacrifices, Prayers, and Inchantments, endeavour to deſtroy private Men, whole Houſes and Cities, had great reaſon to believe the Exiſtence of evil Demons. And the Laws of Pagan Commonwealths (as that of the XII Tables) condemning

(s) Rupert. ap. Petav. T. 3. p. 93, 902.

(t) Eugubin. de per. phil. l. 8. c. 38.

(u) The Collect. of Dr. Jackſon's Works B. 10. c. 37.

(w) C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 306.

(x) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 43. 58. Gale in Jambl. p. 270. Plutarch. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 360, 361. de Def. or. p. 417.

(y) Nondum Chriſtianæ poteſtatis documenta proceſſerant, quæ vim illam pernicioſiſſimam nec nunquam bonam, antiqui erroris artificem omnis veritatis avocatricem, ſola traducit. Solus Chriſtianus novit Satanam. De An. c. 1. de Teſt. An. c. 3.

(z) P. Gaſſend. Eth. l. 3. p. 856.

ning and puniſhing ſuch maleficent Magick acknowledge their Exiſtence, the Theurgical Theologers report, that they ſaw them (in Theurgy,) and theſe were very learn'd Philoſophers, who cannot be ſuppoſed, to have been impos'd upon by meer Fancy and Imagination. And who can doubt, but that thoſe learned Pagan Demonologiſts are in the right, who ſuppoſe the antic and barbarous Rites of their Religion, to be the Worſhip of potent evil Demons? For the Pagan Religion is a (no leſs than Mathematical) demonſtration of the Exiſtence of evil Demons, becauſe it cannot be ſuppoſed, that any Power but a Diabolical, did ſubdue and ſubject the World of Mankind (for many Ages) to ſuch an Inſtitution as Paganiſm is. Nor can unprejudic'd Reaſon refuſe this ſound Philoſophical Reaſoning of the Pagan Demonologiſts, whereby they prove the Exiſtence of Aerial Demons. (a) Would Nature, that hath repleniſh'd all other Regions with Inhabitants, ſuffer the ſpacious Element of the Air, to be a Waſt and Deſart devoid of Inhabitants? The Hebrew Doctors therefore and the Chriſtian Theologers alſo, agree with the Pagan Demonologiſts, that the Univerſe is full, and that the Air is repleniſh'd with Animals and Rationals. R. Joſeph ſaith, (b) From the Earth to the Firmament there is no place empty, but all is full with Multitudes, (or Spectres) of which ſome are Pure, of Beneficence and Mercy. But beneath are many Creatures Impure, Hurtful and Accuſers. And all of them have their abode and flee in the Air; ſo that no place from the Earth to the Firmament is empty, but all is Multitudes, ſome inſtigating to Peace, others to War; ſome to Good, Others to Evil; ſome to Life, others to Death. (c) Two other Hebrew Authors (one a Commentator on Pirke Aboth, the other מנחה חדשה munus novum) ſay, All the ſpace between the Earth and Firmament is full of Troops and Prefects. The Senſe of the Chriſtian Theologers may be underſtood from that of S. Hierom; (d) Hæc omnium Doctorum opinio eſt, This is the Opinion of all the Doctors, that the Air between Heaven and Earth, which is looked upon as a vacuity, is full of contrary Powers. But the Air is not properly the Manſion and Habitation of contrary Powers; for all the Aerial Demons are notic'd in Scripture to be evil Demons, whence the evil Demons are called by S. Auſtin, (e) Aerea Animalia, Aerial Animals, and the Chieftain of them is called by the Apoſtle, The Prince of the Power of the Air (that Imperial Power;) the Rulers of his Empire are called Spiritual Wickedneſs, ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, in the (Aerial) Heavenlies above; to ſignifie, that they are Men-ſuperiorities, the Supernal Aerial Potentates. But this Branch of Scripture-demonology muſt be underſtood with Limitation; for the Aerial Demons are ſometimes under Penal Confinement to the ſqualid and horrid Subterraneous Regions, as that Petition of theirs implieth. Luc. 8. 31. They beſought him, that he would not command them, to go into the Deep, or Abyſs. An excellent Divine for want of interpoſing this Limitation, hath diſcours'd upon this Argument inconſiſtently with himſelf: (f) Sometimes affirming, That the evil Spirits are exiled from Heaven no farther than the Air; and ſometimes diſcourſing, That the old Giants wail under the Waters with their Fellow-inhabitants, the reſt of the damned.

(a) Hoc ſolum quartum elementum aeris, quod tanto ſpatio interpoſitum eſt, caſſum ab omnibus deſertumque à cultoribus ſuis natura pateretur? Apulei. de Deo Socrat.

(b) Ap. Reuchlin. de Arte Cab. l. 3. fol. 77. Windet. de vit. funct. S. 13.

(c) Druſ. in Eph. 2. 2. & 6. 12.

(d) Com. in Epheſ. 6.

(e) Petav. T. 3. l. 3. c. 1.

(f) Mr. Mede on 2 Pet. 2. 4. and on Prov. 21. 16.

CHAP. III.

1. Of the Guardian-Angel. 2. Plato had it not from the Hebrews, more probably from the Egyptians. 3. The true Origin of it was the Pagans Polity and Government of the Univerſe. 4. Of their Demonolatry 5. Of the Senſe of the Jews touching the Polity and Government of the Univerſe. 6. Of the Senſe of the Fathers. 7. The Scripture's Notices of the Holy Angels do not imply their Subordinate Mundane Magiſtracy, nor the Guardian-Angel. The firſt Notice doth not. 8. Nor the ſecond Notice. 9. Arguments againſt their Subordinate Mundane Magiſtracy and the Guardian-Angel. 10. Of the Gnoſticks, Angelitæ, and their Demonolatry.

I. THE Pagan Theologers agree, that the beneficent ſort of Demons are Guardian-Genii, which are certain Tutelar or Patron Lord-preſidents of Men (though Servitors to the Gods) of particular Perſons and Societies of things and places (Regions, Provinces, Houſes, Cities, Towns, Colledges,) according to that of Servius, (g) Genium dicebant antiqui naturalem Deum uniuſcujuſque loci, vel rei aut hominis. The Genius according to the Senſe of the Ancients is the natural God of every place, or thing or perſon. Hence we read of δαίμονες κατέχοντες τοῦτον τὸν τόπον, Local-guardian Genii, and that ancient Inſcription ſpeaketh the Senſe of the Ancients, Jovi Op. Max. & Genio loci, To Jupiter the beſt and greateſt and to the Genius of the place. The Genius of the Roman People (diſtinct from the tutelar God of the City, whoſe Name was kept ſecret) called by Ammianus the publick Genius, is uſual in ancient Coins; and the Lares were look'd upon as the proper Guardian Genii of their Houſes, whence they were ſtiled Præſtites, (as being προεστῶτες) and cloathed with Dogs Skins. Among the Perſonal Guardian Genii that of the Prince was thought far more auguſt than other Mens, (h) whence aroſe a Cuſtom amongſt the Romans of ſwearing by Cæſar's Genius, which if any did forſwear by in a ſuit, his puniſhment was Fuſtigatio (ῥοπαλισμὸς) Baſtinadoing, whereas if the Perjury was committed againſt the Name of God, no Puniſhment follow'd by their Cuſtoms (they ſuppoſing that God would ſufficiently avenge the abuſe of his Deity,) whence Tertullian thus upbraideth them (i) with you Men ſooner forſwear by all the Gods than by the Genius of Cæſar. (k) The Platoniſts ſuppoſe, that every Nation hath a tutelar Deity, to preſide over it with an Angel or Demon under him; and of theſe Demons they ſay, ſome Preſide over larger Regions, ſome over narrower Territories and Cities, and ſome have the Government of particular Men; namely, Thoſe which deſcending Souls, according to

(g) Elmenh. in Arnob. p. 23. Herald. in Arnob. p. 28, 153. Lipſ. phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 19. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 8. c. 18.

(h) Selden, Titles Par. 1. c. 4. Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 6.

(i) Citius apud vos per omnes Deos quam per unum Genium Cæſaris pejeratur.

(k) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 4. p. 143. Ficin. Arg. in Apolog. Socr.

the Life which they make choice of, acquire to themſelves which are thenceforth the Guides and Inſpectors and Judges of their Life.

But the Pagan Theologers are not agreed touching the Prefectſhip of the maleficent Genii; (l) for ſome of them affirm, that theſe have no ἡγεμονικὴν λῆξιν, or Prefecture, with every one at the time of his Nativity a proper Genius (called by Pindar δαίμων γενέθλιος,) aſſociateth, to be the Maſter and Guide of his Life, ſaith Menander; a good Genius; for it is not to be ſuppoſed, that there is a bad Genius hurtful to good Life. But this ſolitary Genius is rejected by ſome (m) that prefer Empedocles's Conceit before it, which is the ſame with that of the Poet, Quiſque ſuos patimur manes, every one at his Birth hath two Fates or Genii; one inclining to Good, the other to Evil; one Friendly, the other Adverſe. To this Adverſe ſort of Genii, the Magi (probably) directed certain Prayers (mention'd by Arnobius) on behalf of Souls departed. (n) For they pretended by ſome Commendatory Prayers, to mitigate and ſweeten certain adverſe Powers, that they ſhould not hinder the Souls departed from returning to their Native Country. Agreeably to the Pagan Theologers (o) the Jews ſay (but Maimonides interpreteth their Saying to a Moral Senſe, touching the good and evil figment in Man,) that every Man hath two Angels, one on the Right-hand, the other on the Left. And this Opinion which attributeth a good and bad Angel to every Man, is entertain'd by the Pontifician Divines. Muhammed hath alſo receiv'd it into his Religion (for he ſuppoſeth, that every one hath a good and bad Angel, that they ſit upon Men's Shoulders with Table-Books in their Hands, the one writing down all the good that a Man doth, the other all the evil) and ſome few of the Theologers of the Primitive Church, Origen, Gr. Nyſſen, with ſome others, were of this Opinion (Origen, moreover ſuppoſeth, that the ſeveral Vices in Man have their ſeveral Preſident Demons, that there is a Spirit of Pride, of Fornication, of Paſſion, Covetouſneſs and ſuch more:) But although this Conceit hath ſome great names to Countenance it, I do not ſuppoſe it worth the while to examine it, we will therefore content our ſelves to examine the Pagan Theologers Dogma, περὶ τοῦ εἰληχότος ἡμᾶς δαίμονος, touching that one ſingular Demon whoſe allotment we are.

II. Of the Eximious Powers, good Offices and Benefits and the Religious Worſhip of this Guardian Numen Apuleius hath diſcours'd; of whoſe diſcourſe one of the Pontifician party ſaith (p) It ought not to be over-look'd, ſeeing nothing can be more conſentaneous to thoſe things which we are taught according to ſacred Religion. Of the diſcourſe of Ammianus touching this Dogma another of them ſaith, (q) Some few things excepted the Chriſtian Religion is conſentaneous thereto. (r) Who doubts (ſaith one of our own,) but the good Genius of the Heathen, and the Chriſtians Angel Guardian, are one and the ſame thing? If theſe things are ſo, if there is in the Chriſtian Religion a Guardian-Angel ſo fully agreeable to the Pagan Dogma, there is great reaſon to think it originally a Traduction from the Hebrews, as ſome in ancient times have ſuppos'd it. Iſidore the Son and Diſciple of Baſilides (as Clemens reporteth) deduc'd it from this Origin; his words are, (s) Ariſtotle ſaith that all Men have Demons, which become their Aſſociates, when they put on the Body; which Opinion he took from the Prophets, and inſerted it into his Books, not confeſſing whence he had it. Clemens himſelf affirmeth, that the Opinion is of Hebrew original, and he findeth (or maketh) a Paralleliſm betwixt Chriſt's little ones with their Guardian-Angels, and the Pagan Infants with their Guardian-Demons, for thus he diſcourſeth of Plato. (t) Pointing at the Angels of the little ones and of the leaſt, ſuch as ſee God, as alſo ſhewing the Providence and Overſight which reacheth unto us by Preſident-Angels, he doubted not to write thus. When all the Souls had choſen their ſort of Life, as their Lot was to make their Choice, they come in order to Lacheſis; ſhe according to every ones choice ſendeth a Demon with him, to be the Guardian of his Life, and to execute or fulfil the things which he had choſen. This diſcourſe of Plato cited by Clemens is touching the ſeveral Lives and Demons which Souls make choice of, and the Fates which confirm their choice. The ſeveral Lives which Souls that (in ſome one of their various Circuits and Revolutions) are to enter into the Body, have liberty to chuſe, are (u) ſeveral primary Lives and ſeveral ſecundary Lives. They may chuſe the Life of a Swan, a Lion, a Nightingale, or an Human Life, and that either of a Man or a Woman; theſe are the primary Lives. If they chuſe an Humane Life, they may chuſe that of a Soldier, or a Magiſtrate, or a private Man; theſe are the ſecondary Lives. So in the Apologue of Er in Plato Orpheus's Soul being to come again into a Body, choſe rather the Life of a Swan than to be born of a Woman and to live an Human Life, out of hatred to Woman-kind, becauſe he was torn in pieces by Women. (w) A Swan alſo choſe an Human Life. Agamemnon's Soul out of diſlike to Mankind becauſe of his Toil and Grievances, choſe the Life of an Eagle. Ulyſſes (who was to chuſe in the laſt place) remembring his former Labours, and now no more Ambitious, ſought a great while for the Life of a private Man free from Buſineſs, and at length having found it (neglected by others) made choice of it, profeſſing, that if his Lot had been to have choſen in the firſt place, he would have choſen no other Life. The Souls having thus made choice of their proper Life, they come in order to Lacheſis (ſaith Plato) who ſendeth with every one the Demon that he hath choſen. This Guardian Prefect or Captain-Demon firſt carrieth the Soul to Clotho (confirming under her Hand or Revolution, the Lot and Portion which the Soul made choice of,) next to Atropos, from thence he leadeth her under Ἀνάγκης θρόνος, Neceſſity's Throne, and thence to the Field of Lethe and the River Amelita, which whoſo drinketh of, forgetteth all things. This Platonic deſcription of the return of Souls from the other Life (of which the Platoniſts (x) make different interpretations) is in the whole of it ſo Poetical and Phantaſtic, ſo Alien both from ſound Philoſophy and true Religion, that Iſidore and Clemens muſt be thought extreamly blind and undiſcerning in theſe Matters,

---

(l) Jambl. de myſt. p. 170. Plutarch. de ſto. repugn. p. 1051.

(m) Plutarch. de An. tranq. p. 474. Gale in Jambl. p. 317. Herald. in Arnob p. 73.

(n) Quid illi ſibi volunt ſecretarum artium ritus, quibus affamini neſcio quas poteſtates, ut ſint vobis placidæ, neque ad ſedes remeantibus patriis obſtacula impeditionis opponant.

(o) Maimon. mor. Nev. P. 3. c. 22. Grot. Not. in Matth. 18. 10. Petav. T. 3. l. 2 c. 6.

(p) Cùm nihil eſſe poſſit iis, quæ juxta ſacram Religionem docemur, magis conſentaneum. Gaſſend. Eth. l. 3. p. 852.

(q) Quibus, paucis quibuſdam demptis concordat Chriſtiana Religio. Baron. ad Ann. 361. n. 17.

(r) Dingley the Deput. of Angels. p. 45.

(s) Spencer. Not. in Orig. p. 91.

(t) Τῶν μικρῶν δὲ κατὰ τὴν γραφὴν καὶ ἐλαχίστων τοὺς ἀγγέλους τοὺς ὁρῶντας τὸν θεόν. πρὸς δὲ, καὶ τὴν εἰς ἡμᾶς δι' ἀγγέλων τῶν ἐφεστώτων ἥκουσαν ἐπισκοπὴν ἐμφαίνων, οὐκ ὀκνεῖ γράφειν. Ἐπειδὴ πάσας τὰς ψυχὰς τοὺς βίους ᾑρῆσθαι, ὥσπερ ἔλαχον, ἐν τάξει προσιέναι πρὸς τὴν Λάχεσιν· ἐκείνην δὲ ἑκάστῳ ὃν εἵλετο δαίμονα, τοῦτον φύλακα συμπέμπειν τοῦ βίου, καὶ ἀποπληρωτὴν τῶν αἱρεθέντων. Strom. l. 5. p. m. 432.

(u) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 201, &c.

(w) J. Bapt. Criſp. Quin. prim. p. 433.

(x) Stob. ſupr. Procl. Theol. plat. l. 6. c. 23.

ters, that ſuppos'd it (in whole or in part) a Traduction from the Hebrews. Porphyry much more probably affirmeth, (y) that Plato deriv'd his Notices touching the diverſity of Lives and of Genii from the Egyptians, but he thought it requiſite to recede from ſome of their Notions. For according to the Egyptians the Lives which Souls live in Bodies are neceſſarily conformable to the Zodiac, the Horoſcope, the Poſition and Diſpoſition of the Stars at the Nativity; whereas Plato alloweth Souls a liberty of choice. Beſides, according to the Egyptians, the proper Demon is given by the οἰκοδεσπότης, Lord of the geniture (a Conceit that Porphyry favoureth) is adjoyn'd to every one at theHour of Nativity, (z) and they look'd only at the Horoſcope without enquiring any further; which mode of Aſtrologizing is ſomewhat alien from the Mind of Plato, but is agreeable to that piece of Platoniſm (ſo call'd by Ficinus) That every one hath a certain Demon, the Keeper and Guardian of his Life, appointed by his Star. The uſual way was (a) to derive the proper Demon from the Decani, the Stars, Animals of the Zodiac and other parts of the Heavens (according to the Egyptians, the proper Demon deſcendeth by ſome ſign of the Zodiac, and partaketh of the Quality thereof) and the Poets that ſpeak the Language of the Mathematical and Aſtrological Fataliſts, Aſtrologize after the Egyptian mode.

> —— —— —— Geminos Horoſcope varo
> Producis Genio — —— Perſ. Sat. 6.
> The Horoſcope produceth Twins of great diverſity of Genius.

In Platoniſm there are (b) ſeveral other Magical and Aſtrological-Magical Conceits touching the Guardian Genius, which have their origin from ſomewhat elſe than the Scripture-Theology.

III. The immediate Origin of the Pagans Dogma touching the Guardian-Genius is their Polity and Government of the Univerſe, of which the Guardian-Genius is an eminent Branch. For their Theology diſtinguiſheth the Mundane Magiſtracy (or Rectorſhip of the World) into Sovereign and Subordinate; and the Subordinate Mundane Magiſtracy it attributeth to the Heavenly Bodies (the Stars) and unto tutelar Spirits (Gods and Demons) who are ſuppos'd to be the Lord-preſidents and Rulers over ſeveral Prefectures, Precincts, Places, Things and Perſons. The Univerſality of Pagan Religioniſts agree in the acknowledgment of theſe two fundamental Points, (c) one Providence adminiſtring theſe things, and (many) ſubordinate Powers ſet over all. Of the Demiurgus Julian ſaith, (d) We have better Opinions concerning him (than the Jews) who ſuppoſe him to be the common Lord of all; but that there are other Governours of Nations and Countries under him, which are as ὕπαρχοι, the Subrectors (Under-rulers) of the King. Theſe are diſtinguiſh'd by their various Faculties and Offices, and by their various Prefectures and Preſidences over the Parts of the Univerſe; ſo that all things in Nature and Providence are adminiſter'd by certain Preſidentiary Deities of various Faculties and Offices. (e) In the Father (ſaith he) all things are perfect, and All is one; but the particular Deities excell in ſeveral Faculties and Powers: Mars adminiſtreth the matters of War, Minerva thoſe of War with Prudence, Mercury the things that are matter of Wit rather than of Boldneſs. The Muſes with Æſculapius and Apollo and eloquent Mercury indoctrinate our Souls, Mars and Bellona are aſſociate helpers in War; what appertaineth to Mechanic Arts Vulcan aſſigneth and diſtributeth. (f) They that ſay, there is but one God, ἁμαρτάνοντι, are deceiv'd, ſaith Onatus the Pythagorean. It ſeemeth to me, that there is not one onely God, but one the greateſt and ſupream governing the Univerſe, οἱ δ' ἄλλοι πολλοὶ διαφέροντες κατὰ δύναμιν, but there are many others that are of different Powers. They are alſo of different Prefectures and Preſidences over the Parts of the Univerſe, whence they are call'd by Plato in his Politicus, (g) the Gods that are the Prefects of the ſeveral Regions the Collegues of the greateſt God. (h) In a Diſcourſe of Proclus touching the Lots or Prefectures of the Gods and Demons there are various Diſtributions of the Univerſe into Prefectures. One is a Diſtribution into three (which M. Tyrius calleth (i) a Juſt and Philoſophical Diſtribution) the Prefectures of that Triumvirate of Gods, amongſt whom Homer ſhareth the Government of the Univerſe. The Sea is Neptune's Lot, the dark infernal Region Pluto's, but Heaven is Jupiter's. The Univerſe is alſo diſtributed into five parts, agreeably to ſeveral ſorts of Preſidentiary Deities, Celeſtial, Igneous, Aerial, Aqueous, Terreſtrial; all which keep in Conſiſtence their ſeveral Prefectures, and govern the Affairs of them. (k) From the beginning (ſaith Celſus) a Diſtribution was made of the ſeveral parts of the Earth to ſeveral (ἐπόπταις) Overſeers, and being divided into ſeveral Prefectures they are in this manner govern'd. And (l) becauſe the Demonial kind every where accompanieth the Gods as their followers, there are Demons that adminiſter the matters of this Region of Generation: Some have preſidency and rule over whole Elements, ſome are tutelar of Climes, ſome are Rulers of Nations, and ſome of Cities; ſome are Inſpectors of whole kinds, and others of ſingulars. (m) The Aereal Demons have the ſeveral parts of the World for their divided Provinces, which they keep in eternal unchangeable Conſiſtence. Such a Demonial or Angelical Superintendency and Government Mankind are ſuppos'd to be next and immediately under; and Celſus ſheweth from the Egyptians, (n) that even the leaſt things have their Preſidents, every part of the World, and of the Body of Man hath ſome Genius to preſide over it. So Plato diſcourſing, that the Providence of the Gods taketh care of the leaſt things, ſaith of all the parts of the Univerſe, (o) every one of theſe have their Prefects ſet over them. So Symmachus ſaith of Cities, (p) the Divine Mind diſtributeth to all Cities various Tutelar or Guardian Preſidents. To theſe Tutelar Spirits the Literati or thoſe of the Sect of Confucio in China (q) erect their Temples (acknowledging one Supream God, but how far, Relations do not agree) and to theſe Patron or Tutelar Spirits the Ancient Pagans pay'd their Religious Homage, as in this Inſcription, (r)

> Mercurio & Minervæ Dis Tutelaribus.
> To the Tutelar Deities Mercury and Minerva.

The Pagans Polity of the Univerſe therefore conſiſteth of a Supream Deity and of Tutelar

---

(y) Ap. Stob. ſupr.

(z) Gale in Jambl. p. 312. Ficin. de Vit. l. 3. c. 23. Com. in Plotin. p. 132.

(a) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 165. Gale Not. p. 313.

(b) Gale ibid. Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 201, 217, 218. Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 41. de Fato, p. 24, 26, 20. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 170. Apulei. de Deo Socrat.

(c) Μιᾶς προνοίας ταῦτα ἐπιτροπευούσης, καὶ δυνάμεων ὑπουργῶν ἐπὶ πάντας τεταγμένων. Plutarch. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 377.

(d) S. Cyr. C. Jul. l. 4. p. 148.

(e) Ibid. p. 115. & l. 7. p. 235.

(f) Stob. Ecl. phyſ. l. 1. c. 3.

(g) Οἱ κατὰ τόπους συνάρχοντες τῷ μεγίστῳ δαίμονι θεοί.

(h) In Tim. p. 42.

(i) Diſſ. 16.

(k) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 257.

(l) Procl. in Tim. p. 43, 287.

(m) Οἱ κατὰ μέρη διῃρημένοι δαίμονες, οἱ φυλάττοντες τὰ μέρη τοῦ παντός. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 148.

(n) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 416.

(o) Τούτοις δὲ εἰσὶν Ἄρχοντες προστεταγμένοι ἑκάστοις. Ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. p. 633.

(p) Varios cuſtodes urbibus cunctis mens divina diſtribuit. l. 10. Ep. 54.

(q) Semedo Hiſt. P. 1. c. 18.

(r) Elm. in Arnob. p. 119.

Spirits or Patron-Ghoſts of ſubordinate Rank, (ſome of higher, ſome of lower Rank) and of Mankind their Clients and Suppliants. So Lactantius expreſſeth the Senſe of the Pagans touching the Gods; (s) They ſay, that their Gods ſo preſide over the ſeveral things and parts of the World, as that yet there is one Eximious Rector. And the Supream Deity is ſo the Head and Rector of this Political Mundane Syſtem, as that there are (t) many Gods, the Sons of God, Co-reigners and Co-governours with God. Such are the Stars, which Philo (ſpeaking the Senſe of the Platoniſts) calleth (u) certain Rulers of the Univerſe, Sub-rectors of the Father of it. Agreeably to theſe Notices of the Polity of the Univerſe, the Heathen Idolaters in an ancient Author thus plead for their Religion. (w) We likewiſe acknowledge one God, who is Lord over all, but yet the other are Gods too; as there is but one Cæſar who hath many Officers under him, as Prefects, Conſuls, Tribunes, and other Magiſtrates: after the ſame manner we ſuppoſe, when there is but one Supream God, he hath many other Inferiour Gods as ſo many Officers under him, who are all ſubject to him, but yet over us.

IV. From this Account of the Polity and Government of the Univerſe it appeareth, that the Religion of the Gentiles is of this Character: It is a Piety, Devotion and Religion of Patron-Ghoſts (or Tutelar Spirits) and of their Clients; this is their way and inſtitution of Religion. Their Theopolity conſiſteth of Tutelar Spirits or Patron-Ghoſts, to whom they attribute (not the Supremacy, yet) ſuch Excellence, Power, Officiary Dignity, Faculties, Offices and ſuperiour relation to Men, that are ſufficient to make thoſe, that are the Religioniſts of their Theopolity, the Religioniſts of ſuch a way of Piety, Devotion and Religion; which is fitly called Demonolatry. For the Name Demon in the Pagan Theology is ſometimes of the largeſt Acceptation, ſometimes of the ſtricteſt Acceptation, and ſometimes of a middle Acceptation. In the largeſt Acceptation it is ſynonymous with the word Θεός, (x) as Plutarch obſerveth, that Homer calleth the Gods Demons; and the Pagans ſay of S. Paul, Act. 17.18. He ſeemeth to be a ſetter forth ξένων δαιμονίων, of ſtrange Gods. So τὸ δαιμόνιον (the Demonium) ſometimes ſignifieth the Divinity or the party of the Gods in contradiſtinction to Mankind. In the ſtricteſt Acceptation the Name Demon ſignifieth, that inferiour Rank of inviſible Powers the middle Order (or middling Gods) diſtinguiſh'd from the Gods, of which Acceptation of the word we have had many Inſtances in this Diſcourſe. In the Theology of the Stoicks the Name Demon is of a middle Acceptation; for they compriſe the whole Order of ſubordinate inviſible Gods, (y) under the Name of Demons and Genii, all which inferiour Gods they ſuppoſe to be generate and corruptible, and that in the World's Conflagration they will be deſtroy'd and extinguiſh'd. So by the Name Rationals they intend to ſignify God, the Demons and Men, (z) ſaith Caſaubon. So the Philoſopher Thales thought God the Mind of the World, (a) that the Univerſe was animated and alſo full of Demons. Where the Name Demons includeth the ſubordinate inviſible Gods. Agreeably to that other Saying of Thales cited by Ariſtotle (b) all things are full of Gods. So the ſubordinate inviſible Gods that follow Jupiter agitating his winged Chariot, have the Name of δαίμονες, Demons, (c) in Macrobius; and in Plato (who diſtinguiſheth the Order of the ſubordinate inviſible Gods from that of Demons, and will have Love not a God but a Demon) there is an appearance of this Notion of the Name, for in his Politicus and his fourth of Laws he ſaith of Saturn, He did not ſet Humane Kings and Rulers over our Cities, (d) but ſuch as were of a diviner and better kind, the Demons. If this Saying of Plato (e) muſt be underſtood according to the tenour of the Platonic Theology (which ſuppoſeth, not Demons alone, but Gods attended with Demons, to preſide over the greater Communities of Mankind) we muſt ſuppoſe, that the word Demons includeth the Order of the ſubordinate inviſible Gods. But whether this be Plato's Senſe or not, it is manifeſt, that the Name Demons is of a middle Acceptation (f) in Celſus the Platoniſt; that in his Acceptation the Supream God is not included in the Name; but the Name includeth the Supra-demonial Order on this ſide the Supream God and the Order of Demons ſtrictly ſo call'd; to which we muſt add the Heroes (whom the Stoicks uſually diſtinguiſh from Demons, but are) commonly call'd Demons by the Pagan Theologers. Now, if the Name Demons hath an indifferent Senſe in Heathen Authors (as is commonly known) if in a middle Acceptation it ſignifieth the Comprehenſion of inviſible Powers or tutelar Spirits (for all things act and move (g) ſub tutelaribus divis, under the tutelar Deities) diſtinct from and on this ſide the Supream God, than the Worſhip of any inviſible Powers that are of the ſubordinate Rank, or a Piety, Devotion and Religion of Tutelar Spirits and their Clients, may juſtly and unexceptionably be called Demonolatry or Demon-worſhip. Therefore the Name of Demonolatry admitteth of a narrower and larger Acceptation, for it may be confined to the worſhip of the Order of Demons ſtrictly ſo called in the Platonic Theology; and it may be extended, to ſignifie the Pagans Worſhip of any inviſible Powers (real or imaginary) that are of the Subordinate Rank; which they conſider'd as their Patron Superiorities.

V. The Jews ſymbolize with the Pagan Theologers in their impure Phantaſtry touching the Polity and Government of the Univerſe. For they ſuppoſe, (h) that their Nation alſo hath a Guardian Angel, but with this difference; The Divine Providence is their Curator, and their Angel-Guardian doth nothing without leave: But the reſt of the World they ſubject to Angels and the Celeſtial Orbs; they ſuppoſe, that all other Nations are neglected by God, and are govern'd by Stars and Angels, to whom God hath committed the care of them; and theſe Preſident Angels are their Gods, and operate upon them as Gods; whence in the Talmud the Iſraelites are often oppos'd to עובדי כוכבים ומזלות the Servitors of the Stars and Planets. Touching the Angelical Adminiſtration of Things, the Number and Offices of Angels (which they call Animalia Sanctitatis, the Animals of Sanctity) they have prodigious Conceits. (i) To the parts and things of Nature they have aſſign'd Preſident Angels; as Nekid is the Preſident Tutelar Angel of Bread and Food; Aſariel is the Preſident Angel of the Waters, (that they overflow not their Bounds and cover the

---

(s) Ita vos præſſe ſingulis rebus ac partibus dicunt, ut tamen unus ſit Rector eximius. Lib. 1. c. 3.

(t) Πολλοὶ θεοί, παῖδες Θεοῦ, συνάρχοντες Θεῷ. M. Tyr. diſſ. 1.

(u) Ἄρχοντας τινὰς ὑπάρχους τῷ πάντων πατέρος. Ap. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 30.

(w) Clem. Recogn. l. 5. n. 19.

(x) Ap. Eugub. de per. phil. l. 8. c. 20.

(y) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 18, 19. Plutarch. adv. Stoic. p. 1075.

(z) Com. in Perſ. p. 291. Gat. in Ant. p. 95.

(a) Τὸ δὲ πᾶν ἔμψυχον ἅμα καὶ δαιμόνων πλῆρες. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 2.

(b) Πάντα θεῶν πλήρη. De Animal. l. 1. c. 8.

(c) Saturn. l. 1. c. 23.

(d) Ἀλλὰ γένους θειοτέρου καὶ ἀμείνονος δαίμονας.

(e) Eugub. ſupr. c. 23.

(f) V. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 385, 393, 400.

(g) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 3. p. 114. l. 4. p. 133.

(h) Jacchi. ad. in Dan. p. 207, 208. cum Annot.

(i) Vorſt. in Maimon. de fund. Leg. p. 16, 17. Reuchlin. de Art. Cab. fol. 17. Buxt. Lex. Talm. de his Angel. nominibus.

Earth;) Gabriel is the Preſident of Fire, who is alſo to take care of Fruits, that they be brought to maturity; another is the Preſident of Hail, another of Winds, or as one of their Doctors ſaith, four Angels were created, which preſide over the four Winds Day and Night. They have alſo aſſign'd (k) ſeven Preſident Angels to the ſeven Days of the Week, and twelve Preſident Angels to the twelve Months in the Year, and four Preſident Angels (with their Auxiliaries) to the four Quarters of the Year. The Jewiſh Aſtrologians ſavouring of Gentiliſm (as Mr. Mede (l) diſcourſeth) make the ſeven Archangels the Prefects of the ſeven Planets, which they ſeem to have learned in part from the Greek Philoſophy. (m) Having imbib'd Platonic Opinions, they ſuppos'd Angels the Governours of the World. A. Ezra ſaith, (n) that it appear'd by Experiments, that every Nation and every City (except the People of Iſrael) hath its particular Planet to which it is ſubject. Alſo with alluſion to the Government of the Nations by Angels in Stars and Conſtellations, and not by immediate Providence, the Jews in their Liturgy give to God the Name of the King of Kings; that is, the King of thoſe Angelical Powers, who rule over the Potentates of the Earth. (o) They are of Opinion, that the number of Nations and Languages upon Earth is 70, that the 70 Nations have 70 tutelar prefect Angels, and that the diviſion of Languages was made by thoſe 70 Angels, as Jonathan ſaith in his Paraphraſe, Gen. 11. 7, 8. This Opinion of theirs is viſible in the Septuagint's Tranſlation of Deut. 32. 8. When the moſt High divided the Nations, when he ſeparated the Sons of Adam, he ſet the Bounds of the People [κατ᾽ ἀριθμὸν Ἀγγέλων Θεοῦ] according to the Number [not of the Children of Iſrael, as the Hebrew hath it, but according to the Number] of the Angels of God, which are 70, (as they ſay) and whom they call the Sanedrim above. This Opinion (p) Siracides may ſeem to favour, Eccluſ. 17. 17. In the diviſion of the Nations of the whole Earth he ſet a Ruler over every People, but Iſrael is the Lord's Portion. But the wiſeſt Expoſitors (q) do not ſuppoſe, that the Son of Sirach ſpeaketh of an Angel-Ruler, but of a Man-Ruler ſet over every People, whereas the Government of the Jews was a Theocracy. And becauſe there is nothing in the Scripture-Theology that favoureth this Conceit of the Septuagint touching 70 Prefect Angels, it is reaſonable to think, (r) that the Number of the Angels of God was ſubſtituted in that Tranſlation inſtead of the Number of the Children of Iſrael, out of deſign to gratifie the Egyptians, and in compliance with a Conceit of theirs reported by Horus Apollo, (that of ancient times the Regions of the Earth inhabited were 72:) And conſequently the Jews Opinion touching 70 Nations with their 70 Prefect Angels is originally a Paganical Conceit. And it is the more groſly Paganical, becauſe it implyeth, that the Tutelar Deities of the Pagans were Holy Angels; and probably they were thought ſuch by that famous pair of Philoſophic Paganizing Jews, Joſephus and Philo. (s) for Joſephus in his account of the Moſaic Laws reckoneth this for one (Romanis haud dubie blandiens, ſaith Grotius) βλασφημείτω δὲ μηδεὶς θεοὺς οὓς πόλεις ἄλλαι νομίζουσι θεούς, Let none blaſpheme the Gods, which other Cities account Gods. And Philo ſaith, that Moſes forbiddeth the reviling the Gods, οὓς ἕτεροι νομίζουσι θεοὺς εἶναι, that others ſuppoſe to be Gods, which groſs Miſrepreſentation of the Senſe of Moſes ſpeaketh too great a kindneſs for the Gentiles Demonolatry, that had its riſe from the ſuppoſed (Subordinate) Magiſtracy, Rectorſhip, Guardianſhip and Curatorſhip of their Genii in the Polity and Government of this World. For ſo (t) Celſus compareth them to the Satrapæ, Preſidents, Commanders and Procurators of the Perſian or Roman Emperour; ſtileth them the Aerial and Terreſtrial Satrapæ; and thence inferreth, that they have power to hurt, if contumeliouſly treated, and that we ought to pray to them, that they may be favourable to us. On this account the Pagan Religioniſts religiouſly worſhipp'd their ſeveral proper Guardian Demons, that they might be favourable and beneficent Patrons to them; (u) for according to the propriety of their Nature (ſaith Proclus) they are every one of them beneficent Patrons to their Clients in order to a bleſſed Life.

VI. The Ancient Theologers of the Chriſtian Church, our Modern Schoolmen, and ſome Philoſophic Writers unhappily ſymbolize with the Pagan Theologers in their extravagant Conceits touching the Polity and Government of the Univerſe; they transform the holy Angels into Pagan Gods and Demons, and ſet up a Pagan-like Mundane Polity. (w) For the Generation, Adminiſtration and Safeguard of things, God himſelf in this Mundane Republick hath ſet Prefect Angels (ſaith Bodinus) over all things Celeſtial, Elementary, Animals, Plants, Minerals, Cities, Provinces, Families, and every particular Man. Which Paganical Conceit of Prefect Tutelar Angels over their ſeveral Prefectures, Provinces and Guardianſhips by way of a Subordinate Mundane Rectorſhip and Magiſtracy, manifeſtly transformeth the Univerſe into a Pagan-like Republick, and the holy Angels into Pagan Gods and Demons. But thus our Modern Schoolmen ſuppoſe an Angelical Prefecture and Superintendency, not only over us Men and our Affairs, but over the ſeveral Species of Things, over Animals, Fruits, Winds (and ſuch more) over all the parts and things of Sublunary Nature (which they diſpence;) for theſe Maxims they have receiv'd from S. Auſtin and Gregor. M. (x) every viſible thing in this World (the Species of things) hath an Angelical Preſident. Nothing in this viſible World can be diſpos'd of, (or adminiſtred) but by an inviſible Creature. So far Origen and Celſus agree; for the one of them inſiſting, that we have our Bread and Fruit, Wine, Water and Air from ſome of the Demons, to whom the care of them is committed by way of Diſtribution; the other granteth, that we have none of theſe goods of Life, (y) χωρὶς προστασίας ἀοράτων, without the preſidency of ſome inviſible Powers; but Celſus diſputeth, that Mankind hath all theſe Goods, χαριζομένων δαιμόνων, as good turns of the Demons, that adminiſter Nature, and to whom the diſpenſing them is committed: Origen on the contrary aſſerteth, that the care of theſe things is not committed to thoſe Demonial Superintendents, but θείοις ἀγγέλοις, to Divine Angels, which he oppoſeth to the Demons of the Pagan Theology. So we have ſeen before, that Gr. Nyſſen (k) Seld. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 4. c. 7.

(l) On Zech. 4. 10.

(m) Hebræi Platonicis imbuti opinionibus Angelos mundi gubernatores eſſe putabant. Pareus in Heb. 2. 5.

(n) Dr. Teniſon of Idol. p. 106.

(o) Ibid. p. 105. Bochart. phaleg. l. 1. c. 15.

(p) Dr. Gell Ser. on Deut. 32. 8, 9. p. 10.

(q) Grot. Druſ. aliique.

(r) Gale Not. in Jambl. p. 279.

(s) Selden. ubi ſupr. l. 2. c. 13. Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 3. c. 5.

(t) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 400, 393.

(u) Secundum eorum ſubſtantiam ſinguli clientibus ſuis ad beatam vitam patrocinantur. Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 210.

(w) In hac republica mundana Deus ipſe ad rerum generationem, procurationem ac tutelam, Angelos locis omnibus cœleſtibus, elementaribus, animantibus, ſtirpibus, foſſilibus, civitatibus, provinciis, familiis, ſingulis hominibus, principes ac moderatores collocavit. Bodin. Natur. Theatr. ſub fin.

(x) Unamquamque rem viſibilem in hoc mundo habere angelicam poteſtatem ſibi præpoſitam. In hoc mundo viſibili nihil niſi per creaturam inviſibilem diſponi poteſt. Aquin. 1. par. Qu. 110. Art. 1. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 12. c. 24. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 7. c. 7.

(y) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 398, &c.

and Jo. Damaſcen. ſuppoſe, that when the World was created, the ſeveral Parts of it were committed to ſeveral Orders of Angels (which ſpeaketh their Pagan-like ſubordinate Magiſtracy in the Polity of the Univerſe, and that the Univerſe was divided into various Angelical Cures and Prefectures, as the Pagan Theologers ſuppoſe;) and that he who is now the Devil was the Prefect of the Terrene Order, having together with his Angels the Preſidency over the Earth, and the Adminiſtration of Terrene Things. Gr. Nyſſen calleth him a certain Power conſtituted to keep in conſiſtence and to govern the Circumterraneous Place. So Lactantius (who was certainly of the ſame Opinion with Gr. Nyſſen) ſtileth the Devil, (z) That Dominator of the Earth, to whom God from the beginning had given the power of the Earth. So J. Mart. repreſenteth the Polity of the World in its original Conſtitution by God; (a) He deliver'd the governing Providence of Men and of the things that are under Heaven unto Angels, which he ſet over theſe things. (b) Athenagoras and (c) Methodius diſcourſe, that God created Angels, ἐπὶ προνοίᾳ, for a governing Providence of the things which he had made; that his Providence is general, the governing Providence of the whole Univerſe of things, τὴν δὲ ἐπὶ μέρους, οἱ ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ταχθέντες ἄγγελοι, but particular Providence, or the Providence over particular things, this the Angels which are ſet over them exerciſe (therefore Satan and his Angels were originally κοσμοκράτορες, the Rulers of this World, as theſe Authors ſuppoſe;) the Ruler and Preſident of the Matter and of the Forms that are in it became wicked in his Adminiſtration, and other Angels fell by falling in love with Women. With reſpect to which Opinion (that the Devils in their original ſtate were uti minores Dii & Mundo regendo præfecti, as minor Gods and Prefects for governing the World, as Eugubinus (d) expreſſeth this Opinion) Anaſtaſius Sinaita from a certain Doctor ſaith, (e) That when this viſible World was made, the Devil thought, that God deſign'd to conſtitute him βασιλέα καὶ κύριον τῆς ὁρατῆς κτίσεως, King and Lord of the viſible Creation.

But this Original Rule and Domination of Satan over this lower World is too extravagant a Conceit, to be univerſally entertain'd by the Ancient Fathers: It hath not gain'd ſuch a general reception as the Septuagint's Conceit, Deut. 32. 8. When the moſt High divided the Nations, when he ſeparated the Sons of Adam he ſet the Bounds of the People according to the Number of the Angels of God. Taking this groundleſs Conceit for their ground, the Fathers affirm, (f) that as particular Perſons, ſo the ſeveral Nations have their Angel-Patron or Curator (their ἄρχων, Prince or Ruler;) but the Tutelar Angels of Nations are Archangels, as ſome ſuppoſe; and ſome ſay, that the Hebrew Nation had the Son of God for their Prefect. Cities alſo as well as Nations are certain Angelical Prefectures, as Clemens expreſſeth the Senſe of the Ancients; There is a Diſtribution of the Prefectures of Angels by Nations and Cities. S. Chryſoſtom ſaith, (g) God hath ſet Angels according to the Climes of the World, one adminiſtring each one, as Moſes ſaith, one of every Nation, and he hath ſet them, to keep within due Bounds the inanimate Creation, the Sun, and Moon, and Sea, and Earth, and the things that are in them, that they may ſerve the uſe of Man. This ſuppoſed Prefecture of Angels over Cities, Nations, and the Parts of the World muſt be call'd their Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy, as ſeveral of the Ancient Theologers repreſent it; (h) for S. Hierom ſaith, Provinces for them to govern were committed to the Angels, as to Judges by the Emperour. God from the beginning (ſaith Ruffinus) when he had made the World, conſtituted certain Powers of the Heavenly Virtues the Prefects of it, to govern Mankind and diſpenſe their Affairs. Euſebius ſaith, That Mankind upon Earth might not be like the Irrational Animals without any Rulers and Governours ſet over them, therefore the God of all conſtituted the Divine Angels their Prefects and Curators, as certain Herdſmen and Paſtors. This mode of Theologizing is viſibly an Imitation of Plato; in imitation of Philo the ſame Author ſuppoſeth, that God conſtituted his only begotten and firſt begotten Logos, the Prefect of all theſe Prefect Angels and of the whole Univerſe, and that the Nation of the Hebrews was aſſign'd to him for his peculiar Lot or Prefecture; which is alſo the Senſe of Origen, of whom we muſt add, (i) that (as the Jews) he ſuppoſeth, that ſeveral Angels were the Authors of ſeveral Languages to their ſeveral Provinces. Theodoret is of Opinion, that the Dominions, Principalities and Powers (ſo call'd in Scripture) are this ſort of Prefect Angels, to which the Nations are ſubjected; and a Book that beareth his Name, ſaith of Plato, (k) He called thoſe Beings Gods and Demons which we call Angels. If the holy Angels of our Theology are the ſame with the Gods and Demons of the Platonic Theology, there is great reaſon, that the Pagans ſhould argue againſt the Chriſtians in this manner; (l) You affirm, that there are certain inviſible Powers, which you call Angels and Archangels, Principalities and Powers, Dominions and Thrones, and certain others alſo called in Hebrew Cherubim and Seraphim; why then are you angry at us, who after Him that always is, and is unchangeable, ſuppoſe and venerate certain Gods, that are ſecondary and very much inferiour to him? To this ſtrenuous Argumentation of the Pagans Theodoret maketh anſwer; That we do not call them Gods (as if we did not call them Elohim;) we do not diſtribute the Divine Worſhip unto God who is truly ſuch, and unto theſe (but the contrary appeareth from (m) this Author's account of the Honours done to the Martyrs in his time;) we ſay, that they are more honourable than Men, but our Fellow-Servants; (ſo the Gods and Demons are ſaid by Plato, (n) to be the Miniſters of the Supream God;) we do not divide the Incorporeal Nature into Maſculine and Feminine; as if the Saint-Worſhippers of the Chriſtian Church had not their He and She Saints. It is much for the Credit of the Pagans Religion, that their Gods and Demons ſhould be thought the ſame with the Holy Angels of our Theology; therefore they plead for themſelves, (o) We do not worſhip evil Demons. Angels which you call ſo, thoſe we alſo worſhip, the Virtues of the great God, and the Miniſteries of the great God.

The confounding therefore the Holy Angels with Plato's Gods and Demons is a groſs ſymbolizing with the Senſe of the Pagans in contradiction to the Chriſtian Religion. And it ſheweth, at what a rate the Humour of Philoſophic Paganizing the matters of Theology invaded the Chriſtian Church in ancient times; the Fa-

(z) Dominator ille terræ, cui ab initio terræ dederat poteſtatem Deus. l. 2 c. 15.

(a) Τὴν μὲν τῶν ἀνθρώπων καὶ τῶν ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν πρόνοιαν ἀγγέλοις, οὓς ἐπὶ τούτοις ἔταξε, παρέδωκεν. Apol. 1. p. 44. & v. Ep. ad Diognet. p. 498.

(b) Apol. p. 27.

(c) Ap. Phot. cod. 22.

(d) De per. Phil. l. 8. c. 38.

(e) Petav. *T.*3. l. 3. c. 2. *S.*10.

(f) Petav. ibid. l. 2. c. 7.

(g) Ἔστησεν ὁ Θεὸς ἀγγέλους κατὰ τὰ κλίματα τῆς οἰκουμένης ἕνα ἕκαστον ἐπιτροπεύειν, ὡς καὶ Μωσῆς λέγει, ἑνὸς ἑκάστου ἔθνους· ἔστησε δὲ, ἵνα τὴν ἄψυχον κτίσιν χαλινώσωσιν, ἥλιον καὶ σελήνην, καὶ θάλασσαν καὶ γῆν, καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς, ὑπηρετεῖν τῇ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἀπολαύσει. Ap. Phot. cod. 277.

(h) Petav. ubi ſupr.

(i) Spencer. Not.in Orig.*p.*19, 20, 89.

(k) Θεραπ. Ser. 4. p. 61.

(l) Ibid. Ser. 3. p. 52.

(m) Ibid. Ser. 8.

(n) Ibid. Ser. 4. p. 62.

(o) Non colimus mala dæmonia: Angelos quos dicitis, ipſos & nos colimus, virtutes Dei magni & miniſteria Dei magni. S. Aug. in Pſal. 96.

thers as by a general conſent) aſcribing to the holy Angels a Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy, and making them of the ſame condition with the Platoniſts in-mundane Gods, (p) that fill this ſenſible World, κατὰ μέρη διειλόμενοι τὸ πᾶν, ſharing it amongſt them and having their Diſtricts or Prefectures in it. So Tertullian ſuppoſeth, (q) That an Angelical Power adminiſtreth the Conception and Formation of Man in the Womb, agreeably to the Pagans, (r) who ſuppos'd the Genius of every Man, to be his Generation-Curator, which rude Paganical Conceit (neither agreeable to Philoſophy, nor ſound Theology) is of the ſame Authority with the other Sayings of the Fathers touching every Mans Guardian-Angel, and the Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy of the holy Angels, nor can we reaſonably ſuppoſe, that an Opinion of theirs touching the mundane Magiſtracy of the holy Angels grounded upon a Miſtake in the Septuagints Tranſlation is of any greater Authority than that other Opinion of theirs touching the Fall of Angels by falling in Love with Women, which was grounded upon a miſtaken Tranſlation and Interpretation of that place in Scripture, Gen. 6. 2. The Sons of God ſaw the Daughters of Men.

VII. The Sayings of the Fathers touching the Guardianſhip and mundane Magiſtracy of Angels being of no Authority, the only Authority that we can ſafely rely upon, and which alone can afford us certain notices of the Holy Angels, is that of the Holy Scriptures, which deſcribe ſome of the Holy Angels as a ſort of Supernal Potentates and Providential Superintendents, but not as ſublunary Prefects of various Faculties and Offices reſiding upon and appropriate to their ſeveral Cures and Prefectures. The Jews ſay (s) That God doth not any thing, without having before conſulted about it בפמליא של מעלה with the Family above: Wherever it is ſaid in Scripture, Et Dominus (And the Lord,) there we are to underſtand himſelf ובית דינו and his Houſe of Judgment or Sanhedrin above. In favour of theſe Maxims they alledge, Dan. 4. 17. This matter (the Judgment upon Nebuchadnezzar) is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand (or ordinance) by the word of the holy ones. The holy Angels have the name of the Watchers, as Expoſitors ſuppoſe, from their vigilant Nature, which is igneous and ethereous, not obnoxious to drowſineſs and ſleep (they are not clogg'd with dull Fleſh, as we Mortals are;) as an ancient Writer of the Church defining an Angel ſtileth him a reaſonable Creature, but ἄϋπνον, one that liveth without ſleep. They are alſo the holy kind of Watchers (Watchers as to matters of Piety and Sanctity,) to which Clemens ſeemeth to have reſpect, when he injoineth us, (t) oft to riſe out of our Bed in the Night-time, to praiſe God, aſſimilating our ſelves to the Angels, (who attend to the matters of Piety without ſleep) οὓς ἐγρηγόρους καλοῦμεν, whom we call the Watchers. But in a Prophecy touching future Events (doubtleſs) the name of Watchers is principally deſign'd to ſignifie that the Angelical Powers are the Providential kind of Watchers, that watch over and ſuperintend Human Affairs, and are certain Eyes of inſpection and ſuperintendence over them (as will appear preſently,) which is an Office and Miniſtry that they perform to Gods governing Providence. Touching theſe Providential ſuperintendents the Angel (which reveal'd to Nebuchadnezzar his Dream) ſaith; This matter is by the decree of the Watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy Ones, which is a mode of expreſſing God's decree. But the Phraſeology of the Angel hath ſeduc'd Expoſitors (both Jewiſh and Chriſtian) into multitudes of vain Imaginations; That the Buſineſs of Nebuchadnezzar's Judgment was determin'd by the Sentence and Decree of the holy Angels after ſome deliberation about it; that God is here repreſented as acting by the Counſel of the Senate; that the Angels are adjoyn'd to God as his Counſellors, and are ſaid to Decree together with God, and that they ſubſcribe to his Judgment; that they Decree by God's Preſcript, and that the Decree of God is called theirs, becauſe they approve what God judgeth and decreeth; that the Preſident-angels of the Babylonian Monarchy decreed the matter at the Petition of the tutelar Angels of the ſeveral Provinces, who complain'd of Nebuchadnezzar's Tyranny; that the greater Angels made this Decree at the Requeſt of the inferior Angels. Others to avoid theſe Abſurdities, ſuppoſe, That the Decree of the Watchers ſignifieth not a Decree which they made, but which was made to them; and others ſuppoſe; That the Watchers here are the three Perſons of the Trinity. But there is no neceſſity of excogitating ſuch Subterfuges; the Text will be clearly enough intelligible, if we conſider, that when the Angel ſaith, This matter is by the Decree of the Watchers, and the demand by the Word of the holy Ones, his intention is to ſay, This matter is by more than Human appointment, it is by nothing leſs than the Decree of the moſt High. For thus the Prophet (in his Interpretation of the Dream) interpreteth the Angels ſaying, v. 24. This is the Decree of the moſt High, which is come upon my Lord the King. Therefore the Angels Saying is a mode of expreſſing the Decree of the moſt High. If we ſay in the ſingular number, This matter is by the Decree of a Watcher, and by the Word of an Holy One (as it is in the 13. Verſe of this Chapter, where a Watcher and an holy One cometh down from Heaven, and crieth, hew down the Tree,) in ſo ſaying we affirm, That this matter is by much more than Human appointment (for it is by the Decree of a Watcher.) It is by nothing leſs than Gods Decree and Word; for the Decree of a Watcher and Word of an Holy One is not his own Decree and Word, but God's whoſe Agent he is. Such is the Senſe of the Angel ſpeaking in the Plural Number; therefore in this illuſtrious Scripture there is no foundation for that Judaical Notion of God's conſulting with his Sanhedrin above: But here is a clear expreſs Teſtimony for the Providential Superintendence of the Holy Angels. So the elect Angels are conſider'd by the Apoſtle as the Spectators of our Actions, and as one ſupernal providential ſuperintendence (or ſuperintending Party) with God and Chriſt. 1 Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee before God and the Lord Jeſus and the elect Angels. And agreeably to the name of Vigils in Daniel we read (in the Divine Apocalyptic Viſions) of ſeven Lamps of fire burning before the Throne of God, which are the ſeven Spirits of God; of ſeven Angels which are and ſtand before the Throne; of the ſeven Horns and ſeven Eyes of the Lamb, which are the ſeven Spirits of God ſent forth into all the Earth. So in the Prophet Zechariah as Interpreters (u) have obſerv'd and diſcours'd) ſeven Angels are repreſented by the Candleſtick of ſeven Lamps, which burn'd continually in the Temple; and thoſe ſeven Angels (becauſe appointed to exerciſe both in Heaven and in this World an Inſpection and Superintendence over us and our Affairs) are ſtiled the ſeven Eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro

Apoc. 1. 4. 4. 5. 5. 6. 8. 2.

(p) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 6. c. 15.

(q) De Anim. c. 37.

(r) Herald. in Arnob. p. 119.

(s) Maimon. mor. Nev. P. 2. c. 6. v. Hotting. de Creat. p. 253, 254.

(t) Pædag. l. 2. c. 9.

(u) Mr. Mede on Zech. 4. 10.

fro through the whole Earth. The Scripture therefore deſcribeth the Court of Heaven conformably to the Perſian Court, where there were ſeven Princes, who ſaw the Kings face and ſate firſt in the Kingdom, (to be Officers of the Preſence, ſuch as ſee the King's face, denoteth the principal Perſons at Court, Jer. 52. 25.) who are ſometimes ſtiled the King's ſeven Councellors. And becauſe theſe ſeven Angels in the Court of Heaven are plainly Analogical to the ſeven Princes in the Perſian Court, becauſe we read of Angelical chief Princes, Dan. 10. 13. Therefore ſome of the holy Angels are conſider'd by the Prophets as (w) αἱ ἄνω δυνάμεις, a ſort of ſupernal Potentates agreeably to the ſtile of the New Teſtament.

For in the New Teſtament ſome of the holy Angels are uſually intituled Authorities, Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers, 1 Pet. 3. 22. Eph 1. 21. Col. 1. 16. S. Paul therefore ſuppoſeth, that there are Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers in the Univerſe; contemplating theſe Sublimities and Chriſt as their Head he affirmeth of them, Col. 1. 16. that whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities and Powers, all things were created by him. Where it is manifeſt, that the Apoſtle maketh ſome diſtinction between Thrones, Dominions, Principalities, and Powers: But the difference which he maketh between them is no greater, than this; he conſidereth them as the ſeveral (general Names and Notions of the moſt eminent (created) Sublimities or Potentates in the Univerſe. For his intention is to ſay, That all things were created by Chriſt, Viſible and Inviſible, without exception of any the moſt eminent (created) Sublimities, whether they be Thrones (of ſuch Celſitude and Eminence,) or Dominions (of ſuch height of Dignity,) or Principalities or Powers (of ſuch Eminence and Sublimity,) all which are Potentates of the higheſt Rank conſider'd under thoſe ſeveral Names and Notions. Thrones are the higheſt Rank of Potentates according to the beſt Expoſitors, and as will appear to any that underſtand the Word (therefore all thoſe imaginary Orders of Angels which ſeveral ancient Writers ſuppoſe to be above Thrones, are Figments and Chimæra's;) the word κυριότητες, Dominions ſignifieth thoſe that are in the higheſt Honours, Jude 8. (x) in the ſame ſignification the word occurreth, Eph. 1. 21. and the Sublimity of that Honorary Name may be further underſtood from that Divine Attribute, 1 Tim. 6. 15. Rex Regum & Dominus Dominorum vel Dominantium; where the Apoſtle manifeſtly conſidereth Dominions as the higheſt Rank of created Potentates. Thoſe other great Names of Principalities and Powers in the ſtile of S. Paul uſually and undeniably ſignifie the higheſt Rank of (created) Potentates. Tit. 3. 1. Rom. 8. 38. Eph. 1. 21. Col. 2. 10. Eph. 3. 10. So the higheſt Rank of Potentates in Satan's Kingdom are called by the Name of Principalities and Powers. Eph. 6. 12. Col. 2. 15. From which account of the uſe of the words in S Paul's Epiſtles we may ſafely infer, that he meaneth by Thrones the moſt eminent (created) Sublimities conſider'd under that Name and Notion; Dominions are the moſt eminent (created) Sublimities conſider'd under that Name and Notion, and the ſame account muſt be given of Principalities and Powers. Wherefore it is a great miſtake (y) in ſeveral of the ancient Writers of the Church (as alſo in Modern Interpreters,) to ſuppoſe, that the Apoſtle maketh a diſtribution of the holy Angels into four Subordinate Ranks, Orders and Claſſes, which are ſignified by four Names; that the firſt and higheſt Rank or Claſſis is that of Thrones; the next Dominions, the third Principalities, the laſt and loweſt Powers. Such an Interpretation quite recedeth from St. Paul's uſe of the words, is not at all agreeable to the Apoſtles ſtile, his raiſed Devotional way of expreſſing Chriſt's Tranſcendency in other places (as Eph. 1. 21. he ſetteth him far above all Principality and Power, and Might and Dominion, and every Name that is named, not only in this World, but alſo in that which is to come,) which are not to be underſtood as diſtributions of Human or Angelical Authorities into ſeveral higher and lower Degrees and Claſſes: But the Apoſtle ſpeaketh by way of Expolition ἐπιμονὴ and Amplification. Nor hath he any occaſion, to deſcend to a diſtinction of Humane or Angelical Authorities into ſeveral Ranks and Degrees; a general conſideration of (Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers,) whatever is high and eminent in Polity is ſufficient for his purpoſe, which is to ſet forth Chriſt's Tranſcendency. Had the Apoſtle made a diſtribution of Human or Angelical Authority into ſeveral ſubordinate Ranks and Degrees, he muſt have noted thoſe Subordinate Ranks and Degrees by proper diſtinctive Names: But will any Maſters of Language, any that underſtand Policy and Government, any that underſtand Nobility-learning or Titles of Honor, allow, that Dominions, Principalities and Powers are the proper diſtinctive Names of ſeveral ſubordinate Ranks of Authority? Do Thrones and Dominions, Principalities and Powers look like a diſtribution, the parts whereof muſt not be Coincident? Whereas Thrones are Dominions, Principalities and Powers, Dominions, Principalities and Powers are Thrones. (z) How thoſe four Names wherein the Apoſtle ſeemeth to have compriſed the whole celeſtial Society, are differenc'd from one another, let them ſay that can, if they can prove what they ſay; I confeſs my ſelf ignorant of thoſe things, ſaith S. Auſtin. He miſtaketh in ſuppoſing, that the whole Celeſtial Society is compris'd under theſe Honorary Names; the Conſequence whereof is a Suppoſition, that theſe Honorary Names denote certain ſubordinate Ranks and Claſſes of Angels, which is another Miſtake: But I do not therefore deny a Subordination of Dignity and Order amongſt them. We read of the heavenly Hoſts moving under their Leaders (as Apoc. 12. 7. Michael and his Angels,) and we have ſeen, that the Scriptures mention ſeven Archangels, according to the Senſe of the Jews and that of Clemens, (a) There are ſeven of the greateſt Power, the Primogenit Princes of Angels. Theſe are ſupernal Potentates in the Polity of Angels, but there is no appearance, that they are Magiſtrates of our Mundane Polity.

VIII. In the holy Scriptures the holy Angels are repreſented as the occaſional Miſſionary Miniſters of God's governing Providence, and the Works thereof are repreſented as done by their Miniſtery according to that of Theodoret; the Works of the holy Angels (b) is lauding the Creator, and alſo their ſubſervient Miniſteries to the Divine Will, being ſent by the God of all. This their Miniſtry is viſible

---

Eſther 1. 14.
Ezra 7. 14.

(w) S. Chryſoſt. in Col. 1.

(x) Vid. Grot. Not. in Jude 8.

(y) V. Gale. Not. in Jambl. p. 206, 207. Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c 1.

(z) Quid inter ſe diſtant quatuor illa vocabula, quibus univerſam ipſam cæleſtem ſocietatem videtur Apoſtolus eſſe complexus, dicant qui poſſunt, ſi tamen poſſunt probare quod dicunt; ego me iſta ignorare fateor.

(a) Ἑπτὰ μέν εἰσιν οἱ τὴν μεγίστην δύναμιν ἔχοντες, πρωτόγονοι ἀγγέλων ἄρχοντες. Srom. l. 6. p. m. 493.

(b) Θεραπ. Ser. 3. p. 52.

ble in their Name (for thoſe immortal glorious Spirits have their Name, becauſe they are Meſſengers,) and there are innumerable Teſtimonies and Inſtances in Scripture, which ſhew that they are imployed in God's appearances, in making Revelations and bringing Meſſages to Mankind, in guiding, ſuccouring and defending the Juſt, in oppoſing the Enemies of the Church and the Malice of evil Spirits, in diſpenſing Benefits and executing Judgments upon the World, and at the end of the World they are the reapers. (c)It is acknowledg'd by all Divines, that the Works of Divine Providence and Gubernation are done by the adminiſtration of Angels. But this their Miniſtry is far remote from a Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy of the holy Angels, nor doth it infer an Angel-Guardian in the Senſe of the Ancients, nor have theſe Conceits of the Ancients any foundation in holy Scripture, as will appear from a diſtinct view of all the places alledg'd on behalf of them.

(c) Joſ. Med.Com. Apocalyp. ad. c. 8. v. 6. per miniſtros more potentiſſimi regis omnia facit. Bonavent.

The Septuagints Tranſlation of Deut. 32. 8. which hath given credit to the Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy of holy Angels, is really a diſcredit to that Paganical Conceit; for whereas in the Hebrew the Senſe is clear and eaſily intelligible (that the moſt High in ſharing the Earth amongſt the Nations, allotted ſo much Ground to the Canaanites, as might ſuffice for a commodious Habitation to the Children of Iſrael, who were to ſucceed in their room) no tolerable Senſe can be made of the Septuagints Tranſlation. (d) For what do they mean, when they ſay, that the moſt High ſet the Bounds of the People according to the number of the Angels of God? Are there no more Angels than People, Regions or Provinces? Or is it only certain principal People whom they mean, that certain principal Angels are their Curators? Or do they ſuppoſe, that ſeveral Troops of Angels preſide over ſeveral People, and that there is a Partition of Angels into Troops according to the number of the People? This ſort of Theology is viſibly a piece of Phantaſtry; and ſuch is alſo that unaccountable Conceit, (e) which ſome of the ancient Writers have entertain'd, that the Preſident-Angels of Nations were deſign'd to induce them to the Knowledge and Worſhip of the true God as much as in them lay. Agreeably whereunto (f) the proper Guardian-Angels of particular Perſons are ſtiled by the Fathers, παιδαγωγοί, παιδονόμοι, τῶν ἀνθρώπων διδάσκαλοι, Paſtores, Paſtors, Pædagogues, Inſtitutors of Children, Preceptors of Men. (Origen ſuppoſeth, that theſe Guardian Angels are accountable for their Charge, that they are puniſhed, if thoſe that are committed to their Care miſcarry, fall into Sin and Ruin:) So the Judaical Cabaliſts have a Conceit (g) that the Patriarchs of the eldeſt times had Angels for their Preceptors. Adam had Raziel, Sem Jethiel, Abraham Zedechiel, Iſaac Raphael, (to others they allot the like Preceptors,) and that every one of theſe Angels deliver'd by word of Mouth a Cabala to his Scholar. To recite ſuch extravagant Conceits as theſe touching the Paſtorſhip and Mundane Magiſtracy of holy Angels, is ſufficient to refute them; they palpably betray the Phantaſtry of their Authors.

(d) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 7. S. 9.

(e) Ibid. S. 4, 5, 7.

(f) Ibid. c. 6.

(g) Simon. Hiſt. Crit. l. 1. c. 7. Reuchlin de Art. Cab. fol. 10.

Nor is the Opinion of the Guardian Angel (a Branch of the mundane Magiſtracy of Angels) of a better Character; there is no Footſtep of it, to be found in the Bible, not in that known place Act. 12. 15. where the Chriſtians at Jeruſalem ſay of Peter knocking at the Gate, It is his Angel. (h) Some good Expoſitors render the words not his Angel, but his Meſſenger (becauſe they cannot ſuppoſe the Faithful ſo ignorant, as to think that an Angel would not come in without knocking, or having the Doors open'd,) or one that came from him and made uſe of his Name. Others conceive, that it is S. Peter's Angel-Guardian (in the uſual Senſe) which the Chriſtians at Jeruſalem mean by his Angel; and this Interpretation hath ſomething to recommend it; for the Jews (as is before obſerv'd) in the latter times of their Commonwealth Philoſophic Paganiz'd in their Notices of things. If we ſuppoſe, that this was the Senſe of the Jews and Jewiſh Converts in the Apoſtle's time (which yet doth not appear,) they that Argue in this manner; The Opinion of the Guardian Angel in the uſual Notion is therefore the Senſe of Scripture, becauſe it was the Opinion of the Jews and the Jewiſh Converts, and the holy Pen-men have recorded it without the addition of any diſlike, are bound by their own Rule, to ſuppoſe the Præ-exiſtence of Human Souls to be the Senſe of Scripture, for this was the Opinion of the Jews and of Jewiſh Converts, and the holy Pen-men have recorded it without any diſlike, Joh. 9. 2. But whatever truth there may be in the Theory of Præ-exiſtence, it is manifeſt from the Story of S. Peter's deliverance out of Priſon by an Angel ſent to him, and which departed from him, Act. 12. 10, 11. that the Angel-Guardian in the uſual Notion is a meer Imagination. For what need was there, that an Angel ſhould be ſent to deliver St. Peter out of Priſon, or St. Paul from Shipwrack, or to ſtrengthen our Lord in his Agony, if an Angel-Guardian was their inſeparable Attendant? If the ſaying of the Chriſtians touching Peter, It is his Angel, be underſtood (not of ſome Miſſionary of his, but) of an Angel, yet there is no neceſſity of ſuppoſing the Angel-Guardian, becauſe their ſaying admitteth a commodious Senſe without it. For they thinking it incredible, that Peter ſhould be at the Gate (which the Damſel Rhoda confidently affirm'd,) ſuppos'd, that it was an Angelical appearance in his ſtead and likeneſs (that perſonated him,) which the Damſel miſtook for St. Peter; and this ſuppos'd Angelical appearance they ſtiled his Angel (as a judicious Commentator (i) expoundeth the place:) But that this ſuppos'd Angelical appearance was thought St. Peter's Angel-Guardian, or that Guardian-Angels were thought to appear in the likeneſs of the Perſon that was their Charge, of this there is no indication in the Text. Nor is there any Indication in our Saviour's Text, that his words, Matth. 18. 10. are meant of the Angel-Guardian. Take heed, that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones; for I ſay unto you, that in Heaven their Angels do always behold the face of my Father, which is in Heaven. Our Saviour ſheweth, that the Sin and danger of deſpiſing his littles ones is not little; becauſe although they be little in the Eye of the World, yet really they are of great Quality, of ſuch precioſity, that their Angels (the Spirits that Miniſter unto them) always behold the face of his Father in Heaven, which ſpeaketh the height of Dignity. This Name their Angels doth not ſignifie here their Guardian-Angels in the uſual Notion (which the Church hath learned from the Pagans, but the Scripture hath no acquaintance with it) but it certainly ſignifieth in the Scripture-notion their λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα, the Spirits that Miniſter to them (which is the Apoſtles Notion of Angels, Heb. 1. 13.) this place alſo ſpeaketh not of the inferiour Angels, but of the Angels of Preſence, ſuch as the Jews Metatron (whom they call שר הפנים the Prince of Faces, becauſe he ſtandeth before the Face of God ;) which Angels of Preſence are analogous to the Proceres Regni, who alone are priviledg'd to ſee the Kings face : But it cannot be thought that every one of the univerſality of pious Perſons hath one of theſe eminent Angels for his Attendant in the nature and quality of a Pagan-like Angel-Guardian ; therefore our Saviour ſpeaketh not of ſuch Guardian-Angels.

(h) Dr. Hammond Iſidor. Clar.

(i) Dr Lightfoot.

From the Patriarch Jacob's Wiſh or Prayer, Gen. 48. 16. The Angel which redeemed me from all Evil, bleſs the Lads. S. Baſil proveth, that an Angel is preſent with every one of the Faithful, as a Pædagogue and Paſtor ordering and directing his Life. And to the ſame purpoſe, to prove the Guardian-Angel that of the Preacher is alledg'd, Eccl. 5. 6. Neither ſay thou before the Angel, that it was an error: Wherefore ſhould God be angry at thy voice, and deſtroy the work of thine hands? The Preſence of the holy Angels and their Inſpection of our Ways and Actions is indeed a great Conſideration in order to an holy Life. (It ſhould awe us into all manner of Piety in our Behaviour, and reſtrain us from doing any thing ſinful or unſeemly :) But I do not acknowledge, that the Angel which the Preacher ſpeaketh of, is either the Angel-Guardian, or any meer Angel or Creature, but the Angel of his Name and Preſence, whoſe Name is the Name of more than created Power and Authority. The difference between the Angel of the Name of God and a meer Angel is viſible in the Iſraelites Caſe, who before their Idolatry of the Calf had an Angel to conduct them, of whom God ſaith, Exod. 23. 21 My Name is in him. But after that Idolatry of theirs God threatneth, Exod. 33.2,3. That he will ſend an Angel before them, but himſelf will not go up in the midſt of them. As the Angel of the Name of God, ſo the Angel of his Preſence tranſcendeth a meer Angel ; for Moſes would not be ſatisfied with the Guardianſhip of a meer Angel, but petitioneth for the continuance of Gods Preſence, Exod. 33. 15. The Angel of his Preſence, Iſa. 63. 9. which is manifeſtly the ſame with the Angel of Gods Name. Such an Angel (becauſe God's Name is in him) is of more than Creature-power and Authority ; and therefore great Charge is given to the Iſraelites, to revere and obey him. Exod. 23. 21. In the preſence and appearance of ſuch an Angel God exhibiteth his preſence and an appearance of himſelf (for ſo holy People of Old ſometimes look'd upon the appearances of Angels as Gods appearances,) and a declaration of his Mind by the Angels Voice ; the Angel beareth the Name, ſuſtaineth the Perſon of God, carrieth it, ſpeaketh and is ſpoken to as God (as appeareth from many inſtances in the Old Teſtament.) becauſe in his preſence and appearance, the preſence and appearance of God is exhibited. And becauſe this Angel is not a meer Angel, but he is (or there is in him) a complication of God and the Angel, his Idea is this Total, God as exhibiting himſelf by an Angel ; therefore the Name of God is in him. For the ſame Reaſon God may be fitly ſtiled the Angel ; becauſe God as exhibiting his preſence and an appearance of himſelf by an Angel (that Total) is this Angel, and this Angel that Total. For this Reaſon this Name the Angel may fitly be one of the Names of God, and may ſignifie God (not ſimply, but) as exhibiting himſelf by an Angel. And if this mode of ſpeaking is congruous and unexceptionable, it is but reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that ſome Inſtances of it may be found in ſome places of Scripture ; and ſuch are thoſe places which we have now under Conſideration. For the Angel mention'd by the Patriarch Jacob, Gen. 48. 16. and by the Preacher, Eccl. 5. 6. is (plainly enough) the Angel of Gods Name, Preſence and Appearance (the viſible Glory or Schekinah) uſual in ancient times. And becauſe this Angel is not the meer Angel, but God as exhibiting his preſence and an appearance of himſelf by an Angel (that Total is this Angel and this Angel is that Total) therefore this Name the Angel in theſe places ſignifieth God in the Senſe but now mention'd. And as that ſaying in Daniel, This matter is by the Decree of the Watchers, is a mode of expreſſing God's Decree : So (becauſe God uſually in the times of the Old Teſtament exhibited himſelf by an Angel) the Preacher uſeth this Phraſeology before the Angel inſtead of that other before God, as a mode of expreſſing Gods Inſpection. That this is the Preacher's Senſe appeareth from the Contexture of his words ; Neither ſay thou before the Angel, that it was an error ; wherefore ſhould God be angry at thy voice? The 70. alſo (k) render that which is in the Hebrew before the Angel, πρὸ προσώπου τοῦ θεοῦ, before the face or in the ſight of God ; and Gregory in his Metaphraſe of the Book of Eccleſiaſtes thus rendreth the place. We ought by all means to eſchew the flowing of any bad words from us, ὡς ἀκουσαμένου θεοῦ, becauſe God heareth. Agreeably hereunto, when Jehovah or the Lord is ſaid to do any thing, the Arabic Verſion ſubſtituteth inſtead of it that other Phraſeology, and ſaith, the Angel of the Lord did ſuch a thing.

Some Prophetic parts of Holy Writ are alledg'd in favour of the Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy of the holy Angels. In the Prophet Zech. 6. 1. there is a Quadripartition of the Angelical Hoſt (concern'd in the Affairs of the World) into four Chariots (as in ancient times their Hoſts conſiſted of Chariots,) as the Jews ſay in all their Medraſhoth, (l) Quatuor ſunt exercitus vel caſtra Angelorum, There are four Hoſts or Squadrons of Angels. This Quaternio of Angelical Warriours are ſaid to come out from between two Mountains, to go forth from ſtanding before the Lord of the whole Earth, into the four quarters of the World, to execute God's Judgments, v. 1. 5. Yet S. Hierom againſt all Reaſon ſuppoſeth, (m) that they are four Angelical Powers, to which the principal Kingdoms are committed according to that of Deut. 32. 8. When the moſt High divided the Nations, &c. Touching theſe four Chariots the Prophet maketh enquiry, What are theſe my Lord? The Angel anſwereth, Theſe are the four רוחות Winds of Heaven, (n) like that of the Apocalypſe ch. 7. 1. where there is mention of four Angels at the four Corners of the Earth, holding the four Winds of the Earth, that they ſhould not blow on the Earth nor on the Sea. The Name of Winds given to the Angels denoteth their Subtilty and Agility according to the Pſalmiſts deſcription of them, Pſal. 104. 4. Who maketh his Angels (Meſſengers) רוחות Winds or Spirits : his Miniſters a flaming fire. It denoteth alſo their activity in the Commotions and Mutations of the Affairs of Men, in raiſing new Empires and demoliſhing the old ; for that the (k) Heinſ. Ariſt. Sac. c. 21. v. Knatchbul. Not. in 1 Cor. 11. 10.

(l) Maimon. mor. nev. p. 2. c. 10.

(m) Com. in Dan. 7.

(n) Dr. H. More Expoſ. of Dan. 7. 2.

great things in the viciſſitude of Kingdoms and Empires are done by the Angels is an Hypotheſis, that both Daniel and the Apocalypſe plainly ſuppoſeth.

This plain Hypotheſis will inable us to form a true Notion of the Prince of Perſia and Grecia, which are Parties in that conflict of the Angelical Powers ſpoken of in Dan. 10. 13, 20, 21. as Michael there (the Jews Prince) is an Angel: So doubtleſs the Prince of Perſia and Grecia are Angels alſo, not evil, but good Angels: For the Angel that ſpeaketh to Daniel, looketh upon them as an adverſe Party, but of the number of good Angels (*v.*21. There is none that holdeth with me in theſe things, but Michael your Prince,) and theſe Angels conflict with each other (o) as oppoſite Parties at Court, that have an Intereſt there. Here is therefore an appearance, that the Court of Heaven reſembleth the Court of Rome, where ſeveral Nations have their ſeveral Cardinal-Protectors as their Patron and Tutelar Angels; of this (in the Prophets Viſion) there is much more appearance than of a Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy of holy Angels, (p) that all Kingdoms and Nations have their Reſident, Preſident, or Prefect tutelar Angels. Yet becauſe Michael is uſually thought the Preſidentiary Angel of the Jewiſh Nation, and becauſe the Prince of the Kingdom of Perſia is certainly an Angel, hence many learned Writers infer, It is plain, that there are Preſidentiary Angels of all Kingdoms, Nations and Countries, which are ſuppoſed to have a ſettled Prefecture over them. Whereas it is plainly incongruous to ſuppoſe, that the Nations of Greece uſually at War with one another, and not united into one Eſtate, are the Prefecture of one Angel; and that the holy Angels bandy againſt, and conflict with each other on behalf of their ſeveral Nations and Countries; which is as unlikely, as that they ſhould fight with each other, when thoſe Nations fight. It is incongruous alſo, to ſuppoſe, that two great Pagan Nations have two Angelical Princes (or Chieftain Angels) for their Prefects, unleſs all ſuch other Pagan Nations have the like; and to ſuppoſe holy Angels the Prefects of unholy Pagan Nations is incongruous; and it is much more incongruous to infer this from the Names of Perſia and Grecia in the Prophecy. For theſe Names in the Prophecy do not ſignifie two meer Countries or Nations, but two great Monarchies, ſuch Monarchies wherein the Fates of God's People were involv'd. The Prince of Grecia and Perſia (underſtood according to the Hypotheſis before mention'd) are the Angelical Agents of raiſing thoſe two Empires (as the Archangel Michael is by Divine appointment the Agent of the Jews deliverance out of Captivity and of raiſing or re-erecting their Government;) which Imperial Adminiſtration of theirs maketh them adverſe and punitive to the Jews, and accordingly they are ſomewhat inimically and punitively affected towards them; for the Prince of the Kingdom of Perſia withſtandeth the Jews deliverance out of Captivity (probably pleading the demerit of their Crimes,) and withſtandeth the Angel that ſpake to Daniel One and Twenty Days. To this account of theſe Angelical Princes it is requiſite to add; that as the ſeven Archangels or ſeven Eyes of the Lord Zech. 4. 10. are uſually imploy'd in the Affairs of the ſeveral Parts of the World (inſpecting, ſuperintending, adminiſtring them, Zech. 1. 10.) as occaſional Miſſionaries of Providence only, without being conſtituted the Preſidentiary Angels of any Parts of the World (in the uſual Notion) without preſiding over them in the nature and quality of ſuch a mundane Magiſtracy; and as the Angel Gabriel is uſually imploy'd in the Affairs of Prophecy and of the Prophets as an occaſional Miſſionary of Providence only, without being conſtituted the Preſidentiary Angel of Prophecy and of Prophets (like an Heathen Præſes Eloquentiæ, Preſident of Eloquence:) So we may reaſonably ſuppoſe, that the Prince of Perſia and his Angels (which are thought to have the Name of מלכים Kings or Dukes, Dan. 10. 13.) were uſually imploy'd in the Affairs of Perſia, that Michael and his Angels were imploy'd in the Affairs of the Jews, without being conſtituted the Preſidents or Prefects over Perſia and the Jewiſh Nation; they were no more than * occaſional Miſſionaries of Providence (Gods Meſſengers and Miniſters that do nothing but by his Command) Angels imploy'd in ſuch an Imperial or National Adminiſtration. Having thus illuſtrated the Notion of the Angelical Princes in the Prophet Daniel, we will remark nothing more in the Prophetic part of Holy Writ touching the Miniſtery of Angels, ſave only this in the Book of the Apocalypſe, the Name Angels is ſometimes taken Metaphorically. For Ch. 1. 10. the Paſtors of the ſeven Churches repreſented by ſeven Stars (which denote illuſtrious Apoſtolic Governments) are ſtiled ſeven Angels, becauſe their Function maketh them reſemble מלאכי שרת the Angels of Miniſtery, and Ch. 9. 14. four Turkiſh Sultanies or Tetrarchies are ſtiled four Angels (which four Angels are thought by Epiphanius (q) the Preſident Angels of four Nations, the Aſſyrians, Babylonians, Medes and Perſians,) becauſe they were the Miſſionaries of Providence for executing God's Judgments.

(o) V. Grot. *Not. in v.*13, & 20.

(p) Dr. H. More ſupr. p. 144, 158.

* In this Notion Cyrenius is called Governour of Syria. Dr. Ham. on Luc. 2. 2.

(o) Har. 51. ſub. fin.

IX. The holy Angels belong not to the Polity of this World, nor are they Citizens of this mundane City; and therefore they are no mundane City Magiſtrates; which if they were, this World would be the City of God and his Republick. They are occaſional Miſſionaries (Miniſtring Spirits ſent forth, Heb. 1. 14.) no Pagan-like mundane Rectors and Prefects, nor Guardian Angels (in the Senſe of the Ancients) that are fix'd and ſettled, and reſide upon their ſeveral Cures and Prefectures. Their Dwelling and Abode is in this World; the Guardian-Angel in the Senſe of the Ancients is a Reſident-preſident Angel, a vigilant Aſſociate, an inſeparable Concomitant, always at hand and in attendance upon Men all their Days (whence a Biſhop of our Church pretendeth, (r) that he can ſee no Impiety in this Addreſs, Sancte Angele cuſtos ora pro me, holy Guardian Angel pray for me:) But the holy Angels are the Angels of God in Heaven (Matth. 22. 30. Luc. 15. 10.) they are the Courtiers and Citizens of Heaven; and ſuch are the Guardian-Angels which our Saviour ſpeaketh of; that always (ſave only when they are ſent abroad) behold his Father's Face in Heaven, and have their abode and dwelling there. the Jews are known to Entitle their Phyſiology Bereſhith, and their more recondite ſublime Theology touching God and Angels Mercavah from the Viſion, Ezek. 1. and 10. wherein the holy Angels (which are ſignified by the Hieroglyphic Forms and Figures of Cherubims) are repreſented as the Imperial Chariot of the God of Iſrael. This Notion of the Holy Angels importeth, that the God of Iſrael is their Imperator tor, and that he rideth in Imperial Proweſs and Puiſſance through their Miniſterial Proweſs and Puiſſance; he flyeth (as a great Commander once ſaid to his Soldiers) upon their Wings. Agreeably to which Notion of the holy Angels (s) the God of Iſrael is uſually in Scripture deſcribed as ſitting upon the Cherubims, dwelling between the Cherubims, and the holy Angels are repreſented as his regial Seat or Throne; the poſture of the Cherubims in the Tabernacle and Temple was ſtanding, they were furniſh'd with Wings, and their Faces were towards the Mercy Seat; all which Notices of the holy Angels (and many more, repreſent thoſe glorious immortal Spirits as the Miniſters of the heavenly Sanctuary, and the conſtant attendants upon the Divine Majeſty; not as ſublunary mundane Magiſtrates, that have the Government of this World ſhar'd amongſt them, and conſtantly reſide and attend upon their Cures.

(r) Montague Invocat. of Saints p. 97, 98.

To live out of Society, Holy Society, is againſt Nature and againſt Grace; inconſiſtent both with Civil and Religious Duty and Happineſs; our State would be friendleſs, helpleſs, ſafeleſs, loveleſs, lifeleſs, if we did not live in the Love and Enjoyment of one another. There is no Honour, no Comfort, no Glory, no Joy, no Solace, no Refreſhment, no intercourſe nor delightful variety of Things, no Friendſhip, no doing nor receiving nor enjoying good out of Society. God hath therefore ordain'd in Nature, that Men ſhould live in Society, in Cluſters, Families, Cities and Common-wealths under their ſeveral Leaders and Governours, and even the Brute-animals are ſociable, and generally they live together in Flocks and Herds. As in Nature, ſo in Grace God hath ordain'd, that his People ſhould live in holy Society under the guidance of publick Officers; they muſt combine and aſſociate and hold Aſſemblies, and live as Fellow-members of that great Body Politick the Church. Agreeably whereunto the inviſible World is conſtituted; for the holy Angels are Sons of the Divine Family, and live in Society as other Families do. Eph. 3. 15. They are Members of the Church Triumphant, and live in Communion with it as Church-Members, Heb. 12. 22, 23. They are Members of that ſupernal City the heavenly Jeruſalem (having Domicilium in Urbe,) where they bear Offices and enjoy Honours, and live as Citizens in Society with their Fellow-Citizens. How elſe can they Conſtitute a Family, a City, a Church? They are an Hoſt, and an heavenly Hoſt; therefore they live in Angelical Society reſiding in Heaven; which is deſtructive to their Pagan-like mundane Magiſtracy, and the Hypotheſis of the Guardian Angel (in the Senſe of the Ancients;) for ſuch an Angel liveth out of Angelical Society. The Monks that are ſaid to live an Angelical Life, (t) are ſome of them Solivagant Hermits or Anachorites, that live alone; others are Cœnobites, that live in Society: and ſuch are the holy Angels, as the Bonds of Duty and the Intereſt of Felicity oblige them. They are no Solitaries, nor ſcatter'd Regiment, nor Solivagant Animals, as (in reſpect of Angelical Society) the Guardian-Angels of the Ancients are.

The Angels which miniſter to the Welfare of the Juſt, uſually go forth (like the Locuſts) by Troops and Bands. Luc. 2. 13. Suddenly there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly Hoſt. 1 Cor. 11. 10. A Woman ought to have Power over her Head becauſe of the Angels. Matth. 13. 41. At the end of the World the Son of Man ſhall ſend forth his Angels. Apoc. 12. 7. Michael and his Angels fought. Pſal. 91. 11. He ſhall give his Angels charge over thee. Pſal. 34. 7. The Angel of the Lord encampeth about them that fear him. In this laſt place, The Angel (as ſome Expoſitors obſerve) is not to be underſtood of one ſole individual Angel, but of that Species; or as the Hebrew uſually putteth one for a multitude, Ship for Ships, Spear for Spears, Bird for Birds, Chariot for Chariots, Frog for Frogs, Tree for Trees, Quail for Quails: So the Angel of the Lord (as the Phraſe of encamping ſheweth) muſt be plurally underſtood of a Party or Troop of Angels; or the Angel may be ſaid to ſignifie the Captain of that Angelical Troop, as the Angel ſignifieth, Act. 7. 38. agreeably to what is obſerv'd touching the Angelical appearances (u) The Chieftain Angels are uſually accompany'd with Attendants. So the Chieftain Angels which according to our Saviour are concern'd in the Welfare of his People, have their Attendants; for whereas according to Plato (w) every ones proper Demon is ἐις ᾅδȣ ἡγεμὼν, the Companion and Captain of his departing Soul into Hades; Chriſtianity allotteth a Convoy of Angels for the departing Soul of one pious Man (Lazarus,) whom S. Chryſoſtom calleth ἀγγέλȣς δορυφόρȣς, Guard-Angels, that (having the Office of Mercury amongſt the Poets) conduct Souls to Paradiſe. The Jews ſuppoſe, that pious Souls departed are conducted by Michael and his Officers (Michael according to them is הכהן העליון the High Prieſt that offereth the Souls of the Juſt,) and R. Eleaſar ſaith, (x) When a Juſt Man is diſmiſs'd out of the World three Troops of the Angels of Miniſtery go forth to meet him. One ſaith to him, He entreth into Peace; another ſaith, Whoſo walketh in his Uprightneſs (Iſa. 57. 2.) a third ſaith, He ſhall enter into Peace, they ſhall reſt in their Beds. If the holy Angels go forth in Bands and Troops for the Guardianſhip and Reception of the Saints departed into the other World, the Inference is but reaſonable, that doubtleſs they go forth in Bands and Troops, to miniſter to their Welfare in this Life; and (though they ſometimes upon occaſion go alone, yet) they live in Angelical Societies. Numbers of them Aſſociate with the Juſt (for like muſt neceſſarily Aſſociate with like;) they Aſſociate with us in our Aſſemblies, and are Inſpectors of our Behaviour there. 1 Cor. 11. 10. Prayer raiſeth us up to the Inhabitants of Heaven (therein we unite our Souls and Voices (y) with the Celeſtial Choire,) and it bringeth down the Inhabitants of Heaven unto us, they join with us in our holy Adorations and Praiſes. Origen is bold to ſay, (z) When good People Pray, innumerable holy Powers of their own accord Pray with them. When the Jews were the holy People, the holy Angels in ſome ſort reſided amongſt them, to which ſome refer (a) that of Pſal. 68. 10. חַיָּתְךָ יָשְׁבוּ בָהּ thine Animals or Angels dwelt therein, viz. (in thine Inheritance;) and that voice which was heard in the Temple immediately before its Deſtruction, μεταβαίνωμεν ἐντεῦθεν let us go hence, (which may be underſtood of the Angels of the Schekinah or Majeſtatick Preſence,) is reaſonably enough underſtood of the Jews Aſſociate Tutelar Angels. The Jews were then left naked and expos'd to all Calamities, that ſometimes enjoyed the Society and Guardianſhip of the Angelical Powers, according to that Cabaliſtic

Maxim

(s) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. diſſ. 5. c. 3, 5, 7.

(t) Theodoret. Θεραπ. Ser. 3. p. 53.

1 King. 19. 22. 2 Chron. 9. 21. 2 King. 11. 10. 2 Chron. 23. 9. Pſal. 8. 8. and 20. 7. and 68. 17. and 78. 45. and 105. 33. 40.

(u) Grot. Explic. Exod. 20. 1.

(w) Winde. de vit. funct. p. 116. 119, 120. ed. 2.

(x) L'Emper. Annot. in Cod. Mid. c. 3. S. 1. p. 99.

(y) S. Chryſoſt. T. 6. p. 754. Clem. Str. l. 7. p. m. 523, 536.

(z) Μυρίαι ὅσαι ἄκλητοι συνεύχονται δυνάμεις ἱεραί. C. Celſ. l. 8. p. 420.

(a) Joſ. Med. Com. Apoc. ad c. 4. 1. Spencer. de Leg. Heb. l. 3. diſſ. 5. c. 4. p. 242. ed. 2. Hammond in loc, Maxim or Aphoriſm of theirs; (b) The Terreſtrial Militia is not to be humbled, unleſs the Celeſtial Militia be firſt humbled.

The Company and Cuſtody of the Holy Angels is (according to the Scriptures) a principal Privilege of God's People, and a Privilege is an uncommon Right; this Principle therefore deſtroyeth the Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy of the Holy Angels, and refuteth much of that impure Phantaſtry (touching the Curatorſhip of Angels) which occurreth in ſeveral of the Ancient Writers of the Church, namely, (c) that the Holy Angels are Generation-Curators, that the Angel-Guardian is common to all Mankind for the ſafety of Humane Life; that they have an Angel-Guardian aſſign'd them from the time of their Birth; and that great is the Dignity of Humane Souls, every one from his Birth having an Angel delegated for his Cuſtody. This Philoſophic Pagan Conceit touching the Dignity of Man appeareth from Origen himſelf, to be perfectly Heatheniſh and Unchriſtian; for he hath ſhew'd, (d) that Mankind in the time of their Sins and Infidelity, born of Infidel Parents are under the Angels of Satan. S. Baſil diſcourſeth, that the fetid Scent of Sin and Wickedneſs driveth away the Angel-Guardian of our Life, (e) as Smoak driveth away Bees, and an evil ſmell the Doves. An Heathen Theologer and a Platoniſt (that believeth no Evil Demons) diſcourſeth, (f) that although there are as many ſeveral ſorts of Demons, as there are different Tempers of Men, yet an improbous Soul hath none to inhabit it, no Curator to preſide over it. But that we may not ſerve an Hypotheſis to the prejudice of the Truth, and by eſchewing one extream run into a worſe (by fleeing the Smoak fall into the Fire, (g) as the Greek Proverb hath it) we will acknowledge the Holy Angels general Guardianſhip of Mankind in general, and conſequently, that there is ſome truth in Theodoret's Diſcourſe, (h) That Mankind are committed to the cuſtody of Preſident Angels by the Creator, that their Adverſary inviſibly ſetting upon them may not by force and tyranny ſecurely deſtroy them. The Evil Demons are under Laws and Government; God is the Founder and Providential Governour of this lower World. As he hath an Univerſal Dominion and Sovereignty, ſo he exerciſeth and maketh uſe of that right in a Superintendency and Superviſorſhip of all as the Sovereign Diſpoſer of the private and publick Affairs of Men. In which Providential Government and Adminiſtration of things the Holy Angels are employ'd (Chieftain-Angels in the Adminiſtration of ſuch Polities as are beforemention'd) which are defenſative to Mankind in general, to publick Perſons and the publick Societies of Men, which are not (unleſs ſometimes for their Puniſhment) wholly abandon'd to the Will of Satan and his Partiſans, according to that wild Opinion of ſome in S. Chryſoſtom's time, (i) ὅτι δαίμονες τὰ ἀνθρώπινα διοικοῦσι, that the Demons adminiſter Humane Affairs.

If we ſuppoſe the Holy Angels to be Pagan-like Mundane Rectors and Magiſtrates, κοσμοκράτορες, Lords and Rulers of the World in their ſeveral Provinces, to whom Mankind are rightfully ſubjected; if the diſpoſal of our Affairs is committed to their Care and Government; if they adminiſter and diſpoſe of them as the ſettled Prefects and Lord-Preſidents of Provinces ſet over Mankind; if our Goods and Evils, the concerns of our Weal and Punitive Woe are in their Hands to diſpenſe: This is that which the Pagan Theology ſuppoſeth, (k) a delegate vicarious Providence, whereby the World is govern'd; Whereas the Providence which the Scripture Theology ſuppoſeth and treateth of (and which is the Foundation of true Piety) is God's own unvicarious exerciſe of Providence in his Divine Ordinations or Decrees and the executions of them, in the Conſervation and Gubernation of all things, guiding and managing the Affairs of the World, ſo that his wiſe Counſels are fulfilled, ordering all things ſo as is the beſt, and for the good of his Choſen. The Scripture Theology repreſenteth God as the Inſpector and Curator of all (to the meaneſt Sparrow) the univerſal Proviſor, Protector and Benefactor; the ſole Arbiter of our Fate, upon whoſe Pleaſure our well or ill being entirely dependeth. Pious Men ſubmit to Afflictions as God's Hand, give thanks for Mercies as his Gifts, in Wants and Dangers they truſt to his Aid, and in all their Ways and Enterprizes the Eye of their Obſervance and Regard is upon him alone (Famulus ejus qui eum ſolum obſervo, (l) I am his Servant obſervant of him alone) and their Service is to this their ſole Lord, Prov. 3. 6. Pſal. 16. 8. Gen. 15. 1. The Works of Providence are his Ordination, Operation, Diſpenſation, Command, Hand and Counſel, of his Agency and Influence, his Tradition, ſending, directing, judging, rewarding, puniſhing, or ſparing and forgiving; to ſave and deſtroy, to diſpenſe Light and Darkneſs (Proſperity and Adverſity) to change the Scene of things, to be the Author of our Weal or Punitive Woe (our Helper or our Hurter) are his Royal Prerogatives, the holy Angels are ſent to execute his Commands, and hearken to the Voice of his Word; Iſa. 26. 12. and 45. 7. and 5. 12. Pſal. 44. 4. and 75. 7. and 62. 11. and 119. 11. 1 Sam. 2. 7. 2 Sam. 16. 11. 1 King. 8. 24. Exod. 21. 13. Gen. 24. 7. and 18. 25. Dan. 2. 21. and 4. 35. Amos 5. 8. Ezek. 14. 19. Jer. 20. 23. and 32. 19. Prov. 19. 21. and 29. 26. and 16. 1. and 20. 24. Act. 4. 28. 1 Cor. 16. 2. Jam. 4. 12. Job 34. 29. Pſal. 103. 20. The Gubernation of Providence is God's own unvicarious exerciſe of Providence, (m) ut omnis timor noſter & devotio atque obſervatio ad Deum convertatur, that all our Fear, Devotion and Obſervance may be turn'd towards God.

If the Holy Angels are the Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtrates and Rectors, they are to Mankind Patron Superiorities and governing Authoritative Powers (accordingly Euſebius ſaith, (n) that Mankind might not be ἄναρχοι ϗ ἀνεπιστάτητοι, without any Rulers and Governours over them like the irrational Animals, therefore God conſtituted the Divine Angels their Prefects:) They muſt reſemble Kings and Civil Governours, as Kings are God's Vicegerents by which he governeth the World, but excel them in Dignity, (o) as the Catechiſm of the Council of Trent argueth; there muſt be Societies conſiſting of the Holy Angels as the Regent-party, and of Mankind as the Subject-party, and the Societies of the World muſt be ſuch Societies; Mankind muſt owe to theſe Angelical κοσμοκράτορες, (Rulers of the World) all ſuch Duties as Subjects owe to their Princes, but of an higher kind, and muſt in conjunction with them conſtitute Societies of an higher kind than Civil Societies; for theſe Angelical Prefects are more than Humane or Civil Authoritative Powers. But of ſuch Political Societies the Holy Scriptures know nothing (unleſs we ſuppoſe

---

(b) Non humiliabitur militia terreſtris in terra, niſi prius humilietur militia cæleſtis in cælo. Gaulmin. in lib. de Vit. & Mort. Moſ. Not. l. 1.

(c) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 6, 7.

(d) Spencer. Not. in Orig. p. 82.

(e) Ὡς τὰς μελίσσας καπνὸς φυγαδεύει, ϗ τὰς περιςερὰς δυσωδία ἐξελαύνει. In Pſal. 33. p. 220.

(f) M. Tyr. diſſ. 26.

(g) Theodor. Θεραπ. Ser. 3. p. 46.

(h) Ibid. p. 54.

(i) T. 6. p. 680.

(k) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 4. p. 115, 143. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 247.

(l) Tertul. Apol. c. 30.

(m) S. Cyp. de orat. dom. p. m. 159.

(n) Ap. Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 7. S. 3.

(o) P. 424, 425. ed. an. 1567.

them in the Kingdom of Darkneſs, which conſiſteth of Heathen Mankind and of the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World) nor are theſe Political Societies conſiſtent with true Religion; for they manifeſtly imply and introduce Idolatry and Demonolatry. If Mankind make themſelves the Subjects and Servitors of certain Creatures of the Inviſible World, they practiſe Idolatry, aſcribing to thoſe Creatures the Divine Attributes and doing to them appropriate God-ſervice. If they make themſelves the Subject-ſervient Party to them in more than Civil Society, they make themſelves their Subjects and Servants in Society of Religion (God-ſervice) which is to make them Gods. And it would be agreeable to make them ſuch, if they were the Pagan-like Mundane Rectors. All Men would be prone to make their Prayers and Addreſſes to them, to ſeek their Favour, to depend upon them, to honour them with Religious Honour and Obſervance, and to ſay as the Heathen did, The Gods are made to be the Curators of Men, and Men to be the Subjects and Servitors, the Clients and Suppliants of theſe Gods. Mankind would be taken off from immediate Addreſſes to God, and would direct their Dependance and Addreſſes to the Subordinate Mundane Rectors, if theſe had their Concerns in their Hand and Diſpoſal.

X. Yet it muſt be acknowledg'd, that although a Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy of the Holy Angels was entertain'd by ſeveral of the Learned Theologers of the three firſt Ages of the Church, yet no ſuch thing as Church-Demonolatry appeareth in thoſe early Days, ſave only amongſt the Simonian Gnoſticks and the ancient Angelici or Angelitæ condemn'd by S. Paul (Col. 2. 18) which I ſuppoſe to have been a diſtinct ſort of Gnoſticks from the Simonian, who had their origin from Simon Magus. For although the ancient Writers of the Church affirm, (p) that all thoſe who adulterate the Truth are the Scholars and Succeſſors of Simon Magus, and therefore they have reported to us no other Gnoſticks but the Simonian, yet from the Scriptures it appeareth, that there is a neceſſity of diſtinguiſhing two oppoſite ſorts of Gnoſticks, which had their oppoſite ſorts of Cabala's or Recondite Theologies (the Gnoſticks univerſally pretended to a Recondite Theology, and had their Name from their Pretenſion to a Sublime Recondite Knowledge) the one Judaical, the other Anti-Judaical. The Recondite Theology of the Simonian Gnoſticks was deſignedly Anti-Judaical, oppoſite to the God and Law of the Jews, denying the onely Lord God, Jude 4. (q) They ſubvert many by a pretence of Recondite Knowledge, withdrawing them from the Creator, as having ſomething higher and greater to ſhew than God, who made Heaven and Earth, and all things that are in them, as Irenæus relateth their Dogma. There is great variety of Schemes amongſt theſe Heretical Theologers (each one ſetting up for a Doctor:) but they univerſally pretended to a Myſtical Theology, to an unknown Power or God-head, ſuperior to the Power or Powers that made and governeth the World, (to which they profeſs'd themſelves Adverſaries, and therefore Adverſaries to the Conſtitution and good Order of Nature and laudable Humanity) from the Dominion whereof they pretended to deliver Mankind, and that in order to that End the coming of a Saviour was neceſſary. The Doctrine of Si[illegible] Magus was of this ſtrain, (r) that the World was made by Angels (who had their origin from an Ennœa or Conceit of his) which govern'd it amiſs, and that he was come for the Emendation of things; that thoſe Angels or Powers, by their Laws, had made a difference between Good and Evil, but that his Partiſans ſhould be free from their Dominion; that the Prophets had their Inſpirations from thoſe Angels (the Makers of the World) and ought not to be of any regard among his Believers. So Menander his Succeſſor pretended, that the World was made by Angels, that the firſt Power was unknown to all, that himſelf was the Saviour ſent by the inviſible Powers for the Salvation of Men, and taught a Knowledge, whereby the Angels that made the World might be overcome; (s) and that the End of his coming was to ſave ſome from Servitude under the Principalities and Powers. Agreeably to Menander Saturninus pretended, (t) to make known one unknown Father, who made Angels, Archangels, Principalities and Powers, ſeven of which Angels making a Defection from the unknown Father made the World; that the God of the Jews was one of theſe Angels, and that the Saviour came for the Deſtruction of him; that Matrimony and Generation were from Satan, and Propheſies partly from the Angels Opificers of the World, and partly from Satan. Baſilides's Supream Deity is ſtiled (u) Abraxas or Abraſax, from whom Nun was born, from Nun Logos, from Logos Phroneſis, from Phroneſis Sophia and Dynamis, from Dynamis and Sophia the Principalities, Powers and Angels, that made the Heavens and preſide over them, and are of ſeveral Ranks and Orders agreeably to the Celeſtial Orbs which they preſide over. The loweſt Rank of theſe Opificer-Angels he ſuppoſed the Creators of this lower World, which have the ſeveral parts of the Earth and the ſeveral Nations of Mankind for their Prefectures; the Chieftain of which loweſt Rank of Angels is (according to this Heretical Theology) The God of the Jews, the God of the Law and the Prophets. whoſe Lot or Prefecture is the Seed of Abraham. The other Prefect-Angels bandying againſt this Prefect-Angel of the Jews, and Factions ariſing amongſt them, the innominate Father ſent his primogenit Nun, who is the Chriſt, for the liberation of his Believers from the power of thoſe that made the World; but Chriſt crucify'd is not to be acknowledg'd; for he that confeſſeth the crucify'd is of Servile Condition, and under the power of thoſe that made the Body, to which this Theology promiſeth no Salvation, but to the Soul only. The other Simonian Gnoſtick Cabala's or Recondite Theologies, (the Valentinian, Cerinthian, Carpocratian, and ſuch more) are alike Anti-Judaical with theſe, that we have repreſented an account of, and therefore it is needleſs to take a view of them. We will only take notice of the Heretick Marcion's Antitheſes (which he wrote) the Contrarieties between the Old and New Teſtament. His Pretenſions were, that there are two Gods, a Good and an Evil; that the World was created by the Evil God, who was alſo the Author of the old Law. Which portentous Conceit of his is in Epiphanius (w) imputed to Simon Magus; for he is ſaid to have taught, That the Law and the Prophets were not from a good God, but a ſiniſter Virtue, and that Death is the portion of every one that believeth the Old Teſtament.

If the profeſſion of the Simonian Gnoſticks was Anti-Judaical, it is not poſſible, that they ſhould Judaize in Doctrine and Practice any otherwiſe than by diſſembling their Profeſſion to ſerve a turn; (x) but there was a Party of ſeducing Teachers in the Apoſtles Days, who made Judaiſm

(p) Iren. adv. Hær. l. 1. c. 30.

(q) Idem in Proœm.

(r) Ibid. l. 1. c. 20, 21.

(s) Epiph. Hær. 22.

(t) Iren. l. 1. c. 22. Epiphan. Hær. 23.

(u) Iren. l. 1. c. 23. Tertul. de præſcr. c. 46.

(w) Hær. 21.

(x) Euſeb. H. E. l. 4. c. 22.

daiſm their conſtant Profeſſion, to ſerve the Intereſts of Profit, Safety and Worldly Glory. They were Jews originally, and pretended to be Chriſt's Apoſtles, 2 Cor. 11. 13, 22, 23. They were therefore in ſome ſort the profeſs'd Teachers of Chriſtianity, but it was of ſuch Chriſtianity, which was Chriſtiano-Judaiſm. Phil. 3. 2.--5. They have the Character of Dogs, Evil workers, the Conciſion, the Circumciſion-Religioniſts, that made the Moſaic Rites and Judaical Prerogatives their Confidence and their Glory, and their way of Religionizing was a truſting in the Fleſh (what is of party and quality the Fleſh) the things of Carnality and Unregeneracy of Religion; Tit. 1. 10, 11. There are many unruly and vain-talkers, and deceivers, eſpecially they of the Circumciſion. They of the Circumciſion were certainly a Gang of Judaical Impoſtors, whom S. Chryſoſtom thus deſcribeth; (y) There were ſome that the Apoſtle denoteth in all his Epiſtles, filthy and abominable Jews, addicted to filthy Lucre and Domination, who deſigning to ſeduce many of the Believers, preached both Chriſtianiſm and Judaiſm, perverting the Goſpel. Not the Simonian Gnoſticks, but theſe Judaical Impoſtors ſeduc'd the Galatians to Judaiſm, as appeareth from their Name, Gal. 6. 13. οἱ περιτεμνόμενοι, (which place a Learned Expoſitor (z) hath plainly diſtorted) which muſt be underſtood to ſignifie thoſe that are circumciſed, the Circumciſion-Religioniſts. Not that they were Conſcientious Circumciſion-Religioniſts, or car'd for a Religious obſervance of the Law; but theſe Pſeudo-Apoſtolical Teachers made Judaiſm in part their Profeſſion, leſt they ſhould ſuffer Perſecution, v. 12. and they perſwaded the Galatians to be circumcis'd, that amongſt the Jews they might have this glory, They had made the Galatians in ſome ſort Proſelytes to Judaiſm, v. 13.

As the Seducers of the Galatians were no Simonian Gnoſticks; ſo the Seducers of the Coloſſians were doubtleſs of another Character, Chriſtiano-Judaical Pythagoriſts and Cabaliſts. That their Profeſſion was Judaical, appeareth from the Antitheſis which the Apoſtle maketh to the Moſaic and Phariſaic Rites and Inſtitutes, Col. 2. 11. In Chriſt ye are circumcis'd with the Circumciſion made without Hands, v. 14. blotting out the Handwriting of Ordinances, v. 16. Let no Man judge you in Meat, or in Drink, or in reſpect of an Holy Day, or of the New Moon, or of the Sabbath-days, v. 17. which are a Shadow of things to come, but the Body is of Chriſt, v. 20. If ye be dead with Chriſt from the Rudiments of the World (the Inſtitutes of Mundane kind of Religioniſts) why as though living in the World (that is, as if ye were not dead) are ye ſubject to Ordinances? If this Diſcourſe touching the Judaical Rites had been deſign'd againſt the Simonian Gnoſticks (whoſe Profeſſion was Anti-Judaical) it had been a grand Impertinence: Nor doth the Apoſtle in this Diſcourſe to the Coloſſians make uſe of any but ſoft terms of Language (of the Simonian Gnoſticks, the Apoſtles ſpeak in a ſeverer Dialect;) for whereas both the Jews and the Pythagoreans had their Inſtitutes of touch not, taſt not, handle not, which are all to periſh with the uſing (redound to no Fruit) touching theſe and ſuch more Inſtitutes wherewith the Seducers of the Coloſſians ſought to corrupt them, the Apoſtle expreſſeth his Epicriſis in no harder terms than theſe, v. 23. which things have a ſhew of Wiſdom (of Philoſophy and a Philoſophic Life) in Will-worſhip (voluntary Worſhip) and Humility, and neglect of the Body (Auſterity to it) not in any honour (regard to it) to the ſatisfying of the Fleſh. Agreeably to this account of the Coloſſians Seducers and their Dogmata, Theodoret ſaith, (a) Thoſe who maintain'd an obſervance of the Law together with the Goſpel, taught alſo, that Angels were to be worſhipp'd, ſaying, that the Law was given by them. So S. Hierom ad Algaſiam is of Opinion, that the Religioniſts of Angels which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, were Jews; and perhaps hence it was, (b) that Celſus counteth the Jews worſhippers of Angels. For theſe reaſons it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the Seducers of the Coloſſians were Chriſtiano-Judaical Pythagoriſts (or Eſſens) that taught them a medly of Philoſophy and Jewiſh Rites, and that their Cabala was Judaical.

That they ſeduc'd the Coloſſians to a Medly of Philoſophy and Jewiſh Rites is manifeſt from Col. 2. 8. Beware leſt any Man ſpoil you through Philoſophy and vain Deceit, after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Chriſt. The things that are after Chriſt, which conſtitute Chriſtian and Divine Kind of Religioniſts, are by the Apoſtle oppos'd to Humane Traditions and Mundane Rudiments, that are originally, of kind and quality ſuch. The Moſaic Rites abſtracted from Chriſt are of kind and quality ſuch; the Phariſaic Inſtitutes, the Doctrine and Inſtitutes of Secular Philoſophy are both originally and of kind and quality ſuch; although they pretend to be Θεοπαράδοτα, Traditions originally Divine, they have * nothing of that which is of God in them. But out of theſe riff-raff Materials theſe Seducers compos'd their Inſtitution, which being manifeſtly and certainly Judaical, the Cabala of this ſort of Gnoſticks (for that they had a Cabala and were Gnoſticks appeareth plainly from their pretenſions to Philoſophy and Wiſdom and from their intruding into things not ſeen) muſt neceſſarily be of the ſame Character. Their Cabala therefore was the ſame with the Fables and endleſs Genealogies, 1 Tim. 1. 4. which Grotius rightly interpreteth of the Judaical Cabaliſts Emanations.

כתר Corona
בינה ἔννοια Intelligence חכמות Ἀχαμὼθ Sapience.
פחד vel גבורה Fear or Strength נרולה vel חסד Magnificence or Mercy.
תפארת Pulchritude.
הוד Majeſty נצח Victory.
יסוד the Foundation which is alſo כל all things.
מלכות Kingdom, which is alſo שכינה the preſence of God.

Although theſe Emanations of the Judaical Cabaliſts and the Cabala of the Simonian Gnoſticks have ſome agreement in their Nature and alſo in their Original (for both are Derivatives from the School of the Platoniſts and Pythagoreans) yet the manner of holding them was extreamly diſſonant; for the Judaical Cabaliſts held to the Law and God of the Jews, which the Simonian Gnoſticks renounc'd, whence we infer, that the Seducers of the Coloſſians were not Simonian Gnoſticks, but a Generation of Judaical Pythagoriſts and Cabaliſts, that foul'd the pure Waters of Chriſtianity with their Heterogeneous Mixtures. So the above-mention'd Expoſitor thinketh it moſt probable, (c) That the Inſtitute and Way of the ancient Angelici was the ſame with the Judaical Cabaliſts, who (as he ſheweth from Joſ. Albus) agree with the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts, and ſuppoſe, that by inferiour Angels Men ought to be recommended to the ſuperiour, and ſo by degrees to the higheſt, allotting to the Angels ſeveral Names, Offices, and Faculties of diſpenſing Benefits. Many

Curioſities

(y) In Ep. ad Philip. λογ. 1.

(z) Dr. Ham. Diſſert. 4. c. 3. S. 18. Diſſ. proœmial.

(a) In loc.

(b) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 20.

* Has non aliunde accipientes, ſed ex affectione hominum. Iren. l. 2. c. 47.

(c) Grot. Explicat. Decal. ad Exod. 20. 3.

Curioſities theſe Cabaliſts have about Angels and pretenſions to acquaintance with them; for they pretend, (d) that every Angel hath his Root and Foundation in one of the Emanations; that all the Names of the Superiour Prefects depend upon the Emanations; that where the Scripture mentioneth any thing touching the Divine Eſſence, the Divine Name of ſome Angel deputed to this or that Office may be found expreſs'd in that place, and they have their Cabaliſtic Methods of finding it out. They have alſo an Aſtrological Method of finding out the Angels Name, that is to be the Preſident of any Buſineſs, (e) and if any one would make uſe of any Angel's Names in Prayer, he ought to learn them from ſome Cabaliſt, who hath receiv'd the knowledge of thoſe matters by Tradition from ſome other Cabaliſt, ſaith Joſ. Albus. Theſe their Conceits touching Angels may juſtly denominate their Cabaliſtic Diſcipline an Inſtitution of Angelici or Angelitæ; and therefore it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the old Angelici condemn'd by the Apoſtle were of their Footmark. In the Damnatory Sentence which the Apoſtle hath pronounc'd againſt thoſe Angelici, he hath condemn'd ſimply, abſolutely and univerſally all ſuch mode of Religionizing as the worſhip of Angels; which he would not, ought not to have done if any ſuch Mode had been allowable: Nor have the Pontificians any thing to ſay for themſelves, which the old Angelici might not have pleaded as well as they, whoſe way of Religion is a worſhipping Saints and Angels with all the Branches of Religious Worſhip in an inferiour degree, which we will call Church-Demonolatry.

CHAP. IV.

1. Of a fundamental Hypotheſis of Church-Demonolatry, that the Saints departed are the Patron Superiorities of Mankind. 2. Of the ways of gaining their Patronage. 3. Of their Knowledge and Preſence. 4. Of their twofold Power, their Interceſſional and Authoritative Operative Power. 5. Of their Power in general. 6. Of the ground of their Interceſſional Power. 7. Of their Goodneſs and Beneficialneſs. 8. Of the Senſe of the Ancient Church-Demonolatriſts, and of Demonolatry in the fouleſt Senſe. 9. Of the Colledge of Supernal Powers and of the Mother of God. 10. Of her honorary Attributions and Paralleliſm to Minerva. 11. Of the Devotional Service to her and to the other Saints.

I. AS innumerable Religious Inſtitutes of the degenerate Chriſtian Church were traduc'd from and ſubſtituted in the ſtead of the Pagans Religious Inſtitutes; and as the ten-horned Beaſt or Pagano-Chriſtian Empire is the Image and Subſtitute of the Draconic Beaſt according to the Divine Apocalyptic Viſion (ch. 13.) ſo the Pagano-Chriſtian Saint-worſhip is the Image and Subſtitute of the Pagans Demonolatry, and the deceas'd Saints and Martyrs uſually ſtiled (f) Dii, Divi, Superi, Cœleſtes, Cœlites, Cœlites Tutelares, are made the Surrogates, Subſtitutes and Succeſſors of the Pagan Gods and Demons in that Officiary Dignity of theirs, The Subordinate Mundane Magiſtracy or Patron-Superiority over Mankind. For the Pagano-Chriſtians have a particular Saint for every thing, as the Heathens had a God; their ſeveral Countries and Cities have Saints for their ſpecial Patrons and Protectors, as alſo the ſeveral Profeſſions, Occupations and Conditions of Men, and the ſeveral ſorts of Cattle. As the Pagan Gods are of ſeveral Faculties and Offices (whence Varro counteth the knowledge of the Gods requiſite, (g) that we may direct our Petitions to them aright, and not ask Water from the God of Wine, or Wine from the Goddeſs of Water:) ſo the Saints are appropriated to particular Offices, have their ſeveral Gifts and Faculties, and are famous for affording ſpecial aid and aſſiſtance in ſeveral Caſes. But theſe Specific Vertues of Patron-Saints were (like the Specific Virtues of many Medicines) unknown till later times; the Theologers of the Church that liv'd at the riſe of Church-Demonolatry were not ſo far learn'd; but they are not ſparing in ſetting forth the Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtracy of the deceas'd Saints and Martyrs (their Rulerſhip in the Affairs of Men) nor in making mighty Elogies thereof. (h) As the Angels are Prefects (ſaith S. Ambroſe) ſo are they that have merited the Life of Angels: (i) For thoſe are the Martyrs of God, our Prelates, the Inſpectors of our Life and Actions. (k) The Martyrs are always with us (ſaith Maximus Taurinenſis) they ſtay (or make their abode) with us; while we live in the Body they guard us, and when we depart, they receive us. At the riſe of Church-Demonolatry Paralleliſms were made between our Theology and the Demonology of Plato (which ſhew, that the Humour of extravagant Philoſophic Paganizing which early invaded the Church, was a principal Source of Church-Demonolatry;) for to ſhew, that Plato in his Diſcourſes is conſentaneous to the Hebrew Theology, and deriv'd his Philoſophy from it, Euſebius citeth this celebrated Paſſage. (l) Plato would have the Souls of the Military Virtuoſo's accounted Demons after Death, and their Coffins and Sepulchres to be venerated and ador'd as the Sepulchres of Demons. The Alexandrian Cyril proveth againſt Julian the unexceptionableneſs of honouring the Saints, becauſe Plato would have Men that liv'd moſt excellently and dy'd generouſly, to be worſhipped as Demons or Salutary Genii. (m) Which Example of Gentile Superſtition (ſaith a Pontifician Dogmatiſt) did not at all deter, either the Chriſtians from giving to the Martyrs ſome like worſhip on this ſide the ſupream worſhip peculiar unto God; or Cyril from approving it by his Sentence and Authority. Theodoret (a Tranſcriber of Euſebius) ſuppoſeth, (n) That the Souls of the Saints departed take care of humane things, and that the Martyrs obtain this Honour or Reward agreeably to Heſiod and Plato. They are ſtiled by this Author, (o) Tutelar Preſidents of Cities and Guardians, Captains of Men, and Propugnators, and Auxiliators, and Averters of Evils,

(d) Rittangel. not. in lib. Jezirah. p. 14, 16.

(e) Menaſſ. Ben Iſr. Qu. in Gen. p. 86, 87.

(f) Dallæus de rel. cult. Object. l. 3. c. 30. Chamier. Panſtrat. T. 2. l. 19. c. 1.

(g) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 22.

(h) Sicut Angeli præſunt, ita & hi qui vitam meruerint Angelorum.

(i) Iſti enim ſunt Dei Martyres, noſtri præſules, ſpeculatores vitæ actuumque noſtrorum. Ap. Bellarm. de ſanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 18. Petav. T. 4. Par. 2. l. 14. c. 10. S. 7.

(k) Semper nobiſcum ſunt, nobiſcum morantur; hoc eſt, & in corpore nos viventes cuſtodiunt, & de corpore recedentes excipiunt. Ibid.

(l) Pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 9. & l. 12. c. 3.

(m) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 8. p. 147. & T. 4. p. 2. l. 14. c. 14.

(n) Θεραπ. Ser. 8.

(o) Πολιοῦχοι καὶ φύλακες, πρόμοι ἀνθρώπων καὶ πρόμαχοι καὶ ἐπίκουροι, καὶ τῶν κακῶν ἀποτρόπαιοι, τὰς ὑπὸ τῶν δαιμόνων ἐπιφερομένας ἀποδιοπομπούμενοι βλάβας.

vils, that drive away the Miſchiefs, which come from evil Demons. (p) Cities and Villages (ſaith he) divide the Bodies of the Saints amongſt them. They ſtile them Saviours both of their Souls and Bodies, and Phyſicians, and venerate them as the Tutelar-preſidents of Cities and Guardians. So they are ſtiled by others (q) our Propugnators and Defenſors, (r) δορυφόροι καὶ ὑπερασπισταί, Guardmen and Protectors, (s) Patroni mundi quos precantes ambiant, the Patrons of the World whom they that pray may make ſuit unto. So the Pontifician Theologers diſpute, (t) that the Faithful in this Life are rul'd and govern'd, not by Angels only, but alſo by the Spirits of bleſſed Men; that they are (præpoſiti Eccleſiæ) the Prefects of the Church, (præſunt nobis & rerum noſtrarum curam gerunt) they Preſide over us, and take care of our Affairs, that the Saints reigning with Chriſt take care of and adminiſter Terrene things; that Authority is given them, to reſtrain and puniſh the impious, and to deliver the pious out of their hands; that they are ſet over the Goods of their Lord, and are Adminiſtrators of them; what Kings can do by their Power (profligate Enemies) the Rich by their Wealth (relieve the Indigent,) Phyſicians by their Art (Cure the Sick,) that the glorified Saints can do, no leſs than the Holy Angels. A late Romiſh Catechiſt thus repreſenteth the Senſe of his Church. (u) Q. How prove you, that the Saints have any Power to do us good? A. Out of Apoc. ch. 2. 26, 27. Where Chriſt hath promis'd them Power over us. To him (ſaid he) that ſhall overcome and keep my words to the end, to him will I give Power over the Nations, and he ſhall rule them in that Rod of Iron. Agreeably to this mode of expounding the Apocalypſe, when the Saints are ſaid, to ſit with Chriſt in his Throne, Apoc. 3. 21. the meaning is ſaid to be, (w) that they Preſide together with him over the whole World, and Rule and Govern the Church. Such a Conceit is that of Plato; (x) The Soul of Man rais'd to Perfection and reduc'd to God, is converſant on high, and adminiſtreth the whole World.

So great a reſemblance have the Pagano-Chriſtians Saints and Martyrs to the Pagans Tutelar Gods and Demons, that the Manichean Fauſtus look'd upon the degenerate Chriſtians of his time (y) as a Sect of the Gentiles (differing in nothing but that they held different Aſſemblies,) that had turn'd the Idol-Gods into Martyrs. Maximus Madaurenſis alſo ſuppoſeth, that the Chriſtians ſubſtituted the Martyrs inſtead of the Pagan-Gods. And Eunapius inveigheth againſt the Chriſtians for impoſing upon Mankind, (z) the Worſhip of Slaves (the Martyrs) inſtead of the intelligible Gods. This was thought by Manicheans and by Pagans one of the fouleſt Reproaches that could be caſt upon the Chriſtian Church, which ſeveral of her Theologers are ſo far from diſowning, that they openly confeſs the Fact and glory in it. For ſo (a) ſome of the Pontifician Theologers are not aſham'd to Diſcourſe; that the Martyrs ſucceeded in the room of the Pagan Gods, and the Worſhip of the Martyrs was ſubſtituted inſtead of the Worſhip of the Gods according to Theodoret. (b) For our Lord (ſaith he) hath ſubſtituted (or introduc'd into the Temples) his dead Men inſtead of your Gods; thoſe he hath rendred evanid, but their Honour or Reward he hath given to the Martyrs. Agreeably to which Conceit the Pontifician Writers often call, the Saints and Martyrs Deities, Tutelar Deities. (c) Divus Lazarus eſt numen tutelare Heduorum; S. Lazarus is the Tutelar Deity of the Hedui, the Patron, Protector and Conſervator of our City. (d) S. Quintin is mine and my Church's or Pariſh's Patron and Tutelar Deity. So the Pontificians make Inſcriptions in this form; (e) Petrus, Helena, Maſtidia, Tutelaria Trecenſium numina. In the Hiſtories of Paulus Jovius, I remember to have read Deos Tutelares (f) ſaith Chamier. The Maſter of Controverſies ſometimes pretendeth, (g) that he never approv'd of the uſual application of the Names Divus and Diva to the Saints, becauſe amongſt the Heathens thoſe Names ſignifie Gods; yet himſelf (more than once) calleth them (h) Dii per participationem, Deities by Participation. So P. Bembus ſaith in his Venetian Hiſtory as Acontius affirmeth, (i) that S. Francis was in Deorum numerum relatus, put into the number of the Gods. The Papal Canonization of Saints anſwereth to the Apotheoſis of the Pagan Deities, they are alike Tutelar Spirits, Prefects and Deities, and Mankind are alike (k) their Clientes, Alumni, Famuli, Cultores, Servi, Supplices, The Clients, Nurſlings, Servitors, Worſhippers, Servants, Suppliants, of theſe Patron-Ghoſts; as S. Ambroſe repreſenteth the Relation between Kings on Earth and the Saints in Heaven, (l) Illi fiunt Supplices, hi Patroni, Thoſe are made the Suppliants, Theſe the Patrons. The Conformity is ſo great between the Pagans and the Pagano-Chriſtians in the Worſhip of one Supreme Deity and many ſubordinate Tutelar Spirits, that Trigautius conceiveth Hope of the ancient Chineſe, (m) that not a few of them found Salvation in the Law of Nature.

II. The fundamental Hypotheſis of Church-Demonolatry, that the Saints departed are the Pagan-like Patron-ſuperiorities of Mankind, involveth a Suppoſition, that Mankind for the gaining and keeping their Patronage, muſt become their devotional Clients and Suppliants. We Pray to the Saints, to take us into their Patronage, (n) ſaith the Tridentine Catechiſm. They are ſuppos'd (o) to help their ſedulous Worſhippers; with God's Domeſticks you have ſo much Interceſſion, as you beſtow Veneration. But at the riſe of Church-Demonolatry, they did not content themſelves with Prayers and Addreſſes, which may be made to the Martyrs in all places, and whereby their Patronage may every where be obtain'd: but to entitle themſelves, their Churches, Cities and Countries to their ſpecial Patronage, their Method was the having, keeping, enſhrining, honouring their Reliques; (with immenſe Veneration,) which are called by the Pontifician Theologers (p) Sacra Pignora Patronorum noſtrorum, the ſacred Pledges of our Patrons. (q) For this Reaſon the City of Rome was ſuppos'd to be entituled to the Special Patronage of S. Peter, becauſe his Body was entomb'd there; for the ſame Reaſon the City Millain was ſuppos'd, to have the Special Guardianſhip of S. Ambroſe's Martyrs (or Giants rather; for he repreſenteth them as Giants, and the Giants and the Martyrs as Coætaneous;) and for the ſame Reaſon the ſeveral Cities, Nations and Provinces were ſuppos'd to have their ſeveral Patron-Saints aſſign'd them by Divine Providence, to be their Tutelar Prefects; as Nola (Paulinus's City) had the Patronſhip of S. Felix having his ſacred Aſhes.

(p) Σωτῆρας καὶ ψυχῶν καὶ σωμάτων καὶ ἰατροὺς ὀνομάζουσι, καὶ ὡς πολιούχους τιμῶσι καὶ φύλακας. Ap. Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 14. c. 11. S. 16.

(q) Ambroſ. l. 10. Ep. 85.

(r) Gr. Nyſſen. in 40. Mart. or. 2.

(s) Prudent. de Mart. Calagur.

(t) Bellarm. de Sanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 18, 20. v. Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 364, 366.

(u) H. T. Abridg. of Chriſt. Doctr. p. 38.

(w) Bellarm. ſupr.

(x) Simplic. in Epict. p. 217. ed. Lond.

(y) S. Aug. c. Fauſt. l. 20. & Ep. 43.

(z) In vit. Ædes.

(a) Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 15. c. 13. p. 584.

(b) Τοὺς γὰρ οἰκείους νεκροὺς ὁ Δεσπότης ἀντεισῆξε τοῖς ὑμετέροις θεοῖς, καὶ τοὺς μὲν φρούδους ἀπέφηνε, τούτοις δὲ τὰ ἐκείνων ἀπένειμε γέρα.

(c) Caſſanæus Catal. glor. mund. P. 3. fol. 92.

(d) Ibid. P. 12. fol. 302.

(e) Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 379.

(f) Panſtrat. T. 2. l. 19. c. 1. p. 771.

(g) Amam. Antib. Bibl. l. 2. p. 323.

(h) De cult. ſanct. l. 2. c. 9.

(i) Stratagem. p. 345. ed. an. 1664.

(k) Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 14. c. 9.

(l) Ibid. c. 10. S. 6.

(m) Sinic. l. 1. c. 10. p. 104.

(n) P. 561.

(o) Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 14. c. 11. S. 17.

(p) Bellarm. de reliqu. Sanct. c. 2.

(q) Petav. ſupr. c. 11. S. 18. 13. & c. 10. S. 13. S. Ambroſ. l. 10. Ep. 85.

Inclyta cine ſacro, Cœleſti firma Patrono.

Which Conceit had its Origin from the Pagans Theology, who deify’d their dead Men, (r) placed in their Temples the Coffins of the Dead, ſuppoſing that Soul-Demons ought to be worſhipped, as having by Divine Providence receiv’d Power for the Service of Men, to be converſant about the Earth, and that ſome Souls are naturally tied by the Body. They ſuppoſe the Preſences and Powers of Demons at their Coffins and Sepulchres, and that there is a natural Tye between the Souls departed and their Reliques, and therefore they built Temples to them there, where their Bodies and Aſhes were entomb’d; whence the Chriſtian Apologiſts (not imagining, that the Chriſtians would have done the ſame thing) often upbraid them, that their Temples were nothing better than the Sepulchres of dead Men. But this Branch of Heatheniſm the degenerate Chriſtians not only tranſcrib’d, but improv’d, counting the Martyrs Bodies (s) as Walls, Towers, Rampires, Rocks and Fortreſſes to their Cities, which not only repell’d viſible Enemies, but defeated alſo the Ambuſcado’s of inviſible Fiends; and if God be angry becauſe of our Sins, ſetting before us theſe Bodies (ſay they,) we may ſoon reconcile him to the City. They ſuppos’d, That the Bones of the Martyrs are of great Efficacy and Power, (t) that both their Bodies and their Sepulchres are repleniſh’d with Spiritual Grace, and that by touching them with Faith they might attract from them very great Virtue (in Sanctis divinitus inſita Membris;) that there is a vivificative Virtue in their Bodies as in Eliſha’s, (u) and ſuch a ſanative Virtue as in the Handkerchiefs and Aprons brought from Paul’s Body, which they communicate to the Garments that touch them; that if any one toucheth the Martyrs Bones, he becometh partaker of ſome Sanctification or Benediction from the Grace reſiding in them, and that the Martyrs Bodies alone can do as much as their holy Souls. They pretend, that they do not worſhip Images for any Divinity or Power inherent in them, or repoſing any Truſt in them, thereby to excuſe themſelves from the Charge of Idolatry: But their worſhip of Reliques is not thus excuſable, therein thoſe Salvo’s can have no place. For the Reliques of the Martyrs have been from the elder Times ador’d, not only becauſe of their near Relation to them, nor only to gain their Special Favour and Patronage, but becauſe they were ſuppos’d to be of Superlative Sanctity, and that a Supernatural ſanctifying, and beneficial Miracle-working Virtue and Power (w) reſided in the Reliques and Sepulchres of the Martyrs. The touching, kiſſing or embracing them was thought to increaſe Sanctity and Charity. No Churches might be built without Reliques, which were thought to Sanctifie them and ſuch as reſorted thither for Devotion; none were thought to touch their Bones or Coffin without ſome ſignal Benediction; or if it was thought (as at Rome) intolerable and ſacrilegious, to look upon or touch the Body of a Martyr otherwiſe than by ſome Napkin, Handkerchief or Veil (called Sanctuarium or Brandeum,) this was ſuppos’d to imbibe from it a Divine and Wonder-working Virtue. If the Garments of the Sick, or Deceas’d were laid upon the Sacred Altars, where the Reliques of the Martyrs were, they had the Virtue of healing the Sick, and raiſing the Dead; the Duſt alſo and Mouldineſs about the Martyrs Sepulchres, and the Oil of the Lamps that were lighted about their Sepulchres, were endowed with ſuch miraculous Virtue, that they raiſed the Dead to Life. Innumerable Miracles of all ſorts (curing Diſeaſes, raiſing the Dead, ſilencing and expelling Devils, feeding the Hungry, clothing the Naked, and ſuch more) are ſaid to have been wrought at the Martyrs Sepulchres on behalf of ſuch as made their Supplication there. Hither Mankind reſorted in vaſt concourſe to pay their Devotions to the Martyrs for the Relief of their own Neceſſitics and the ſetting forth their Glory; here they preſented their Oblations of Silver and Gold to obtain their Requeſts, and here they hung up their Donaria to the Martyrs in thankfulneſs for their Benefits; the Sepulchre of a Martyr was ſtiled a publick Phyſic-ſhop, a relief of the afflicted, the ſhelter of the Calamitous, the Table of the Hungry, a common Propitiatory of the whole Earth. A new Scene of Miracles was requiſite for the founding and introducing the new Religion of Church-Demonolatry; (x) for ſo the Heathens were ſeduc’d to worſhip their Heroes by Miracles wrought at the Monuments of the Dead. And becauſe the ſacred Reliques were found to be of Celeſtial Virtue and Divine Wonder-working Power, the main of the Piety and Devotion of ſome Ages (eſpecially the Fifth and Sixth Centuries) was a raking up Reliques, collecting them from remote Countries, diſtributing them to ſeveral Provinces, diſperſing them far and near, richly adorning theſe Celeſtial Gemms and Precioſities (with Silk, Silver, Gold,) tranſlating them to more honourable Places with magnificent Pomp, Pſalmody and all expreſſions of Joy, vowing and making Pilgrimages to viſit the Repoſitories of them, making their Prayers * at or before them; carrying them about in Golden Chariots; lighting Lamps and ſetting up Tapers before them; not only building Churches where the Martyrs Bodies lay (for conſerving their Memory,) but building the moſt magnificent Churches in honour of their Reliques and for the conſerving them; placing them under the Altars, which were called by their Names; preſerving them as their grand Defenſatives, and carrying about them Handkerchiefs (or other things) which had touch’d the Reliques, as Amulets and Antidotes againſt all Evils; kiſſing them and touching their Eyes (or other Parts of their Body) with them; anointing with Oil their Septs and Sepulchres; (y) the Prieſts doing Service to the ſacred Aſhes by duly frequent Pſalmody (which is Idolatry to the pitch of Madneſs) and both Prieſt and People paying their holy Worſhip to things inanimate, the Martyrs Altars, Bodies, Sepulchres. Agreeably to the Church-Demonolatriſts of elder Times the Pontificians have an Idolatrous Opinion of an Idolatrous Paſſion of Veneration for, and various Modes of venerating the holy Reliques. They profeſs (z) to give the worſhip of Dulia and Adoration to the Saints and their Reliques. And although their Doctors Diſpute, (a) whether the Reliques may be ſeparately worſhipped, or only in mental Conjunction with the Saints whoſe Reliques they are (ſo worſhipping the Saints in them,) yet it is paſt diſpute, that as the Church practiſeth, and her Theologers teach, the fragments of the Croſs, the Thorns, Spear, Sponge and Nails of the Croſs, the Blood which Chriſt is ſaid to have left behind him upon Earth, and is ſolemnly worſhipped at Rome upon Eaſter-day (with ſuch more Reliques) are conſecrated and ſanctified

(r) Clem Strom. l 6. p.m. 455. v. Baron. ad an. 55. n. 15.

(s) V. Mr. Mede Apoſt. of the lat. times P. 1. ſub. fin. Petav. ſupr. c. 11. S. 10.

(t) Ibid. S. 8, & 13.

(u) Ibid. S. 2, & 3.

(w) Ibid. c. 11, 12, 13. Baron. ad an. 55. n. 12, 13, 14. ad an. 461. n. 5. ad an. 560. n. 7, 8. ad an. 594. n. 21, 22. & ad an. 552. n. 22. Cochlæus de Reliqu. c. Calvin. c. 7. v. Maimbourg. Hiſt. of the League. p. 338.

(x) Selden de D Syr. proleg. c. 3.

* To add Efficacy to their Prayers.

(y) Concil. Epaunenſ. ap. Petav. ſupr. c. 12. S. 14.

(z) Cochlæus de Reliqu. c. 5. S. 9.

(a) Vaſqu. in 3. Par. Th. Diſp. 113.

ctified at ſuch a rate, that they muſt be worſhipped with Latria the ſupreme Adoration. (b) They ſpeak to, and pray as formally and addreſs their Petitions to the Veronica, as if they were ſpeaking to Chriſt himſelf. They ſwear by their Reliques in the moſt ſolemn Oaths, thoſe which the Pope exacteth from the Emperor. They pretend to Worſhip them, that they may derive from them (c) gratiam aliquam & ſalutem, ſome ſalutary Grace; they rub upon them their Roſaries (or other Trinkets,) to imbibe a Divine Virtue from them; almoſt every Papiſt poor or rich, young or old, hath his Reliquiary (ſome Relique ſet in Gold, Silver, or Silk,) which he weareth as a mighty Amulet and Defenſative; they ſay, (d) that Conſtantine incloſ'd in his Statue at Conſtantinople a Particle of the true Croſs, ſuppoſing that the City would be kept in ſafety by it, ſo making Reliques the Teleſms of Chriſtendom; they carry them in pompous Proceſſion (the People expreſſing the greateſt Devotion imaginable towards them,) expect Rain and fair Weather from them, ſuppoſe them the moſt preſent Remedies againſt Calamities, and agreeably to that idolatrous Truſt which they repoſe in them, they pretend to work all ſorts of Miracles by them, (e) to ſtill Tempeſts, ſave from Shipwrack, cure Diſeaſes, profligate Devils. In every Portatile Altar ſome Relique muſt be incloſ'd; they place them upon the Altars (there the Reliques are now inthron'd) fall down and adore them; and when the Reliques are by way of Proceſſion (with ſeveral antic Rites) brought from ſome other place into a new Church, to Conſecrate it, the Biſhop and Clergy Sing (f) Riſe up ye Saints of God from your Habitations, ſanctifie the place, bleſs the People, and keep us ſinful Men in Peace. The Rites of Adoration which the Papacy accounteth due to the Places and Reliques of the Saints, (g) Proceſſions, Genuflections, bowing the Body, Thurifications, Deoſculations, burnings of Lights and Pilgrimages, far tranſcend the Romans Adoration of their Ancilia (which they ſuppoſ'd Pledges of Empire,) the Roman Soldiers Adoration of their Military Enſigns, and the Jews Adoration of that ſacred Relique the Brazen Serpent. And if it was Pagan Idolatry to Worſhip the deceas'd Heathen Virtuoſo's, their Sepulchres and Reliques as the Guardians of Mankind, according to Plato, ſhall it not be thought Pagano-Chriſtian Idolatry, to Worſhip the deceas'd Chriſtian Virtuoſo's, their Sepulchres and Reliques under the ſame Notion? But in the Worſhip of Reliques degenerate Chriſtendom hath quite outdone ancient Paganiſm; which is one of the greateſt Victories that the Kingdom of Darkneſs hath gain'd upon Chriſtianity, to have lapſed the Chriſtian Church into the Worſhip of dead Men's Bodies, and rotten Bones, and Hair and Nails, and old Shooes and Clouts.

Although the venerating the Saints Reliques is an uſeful Method for gaining their Patronage; yet their ſpecial Patronage (as the Pontificians ſuppoſe) may be gain'd without Reliques. For in the Papacy (h) many Churches are dedicated to the Bl. Virgin and to Angels (who have left no dead Bodies behind them) in ſuch places where they have appear'd, or done ſome miraculous thing. (i) There is a Feſtival in the Church of Rome call'd the Apparition of S. Michael, which is in Memory of his miraculous Apparition on Mount Garganus, where by his own appointment (as they ſay) a Temple was dedicated to him in Pope Gelaſius's time. He is ſaid alſo (k) to have appear'd in France at a place called Tumba, charging the Biſhop of the place to build a Church there, and promiſing to inhabit it and to keep the Realm in ſafety. Of Churches or Chappels thus dedicated to the Bl. Virgin and the Holy Angels they are ſuppoſ'd to be the Patrons; their Images ſet up in theſe Churches are look'd upon as their Symbolical Preſence, whereby they are repreſented and where they are preſentiated. Their Churches or Chappels and Images (l) are thought the ſacred Seats of their Preſence, beneficent Virtue and Power; where they are eſpecially preſent, to receive Honour and Worſhip, Addreſſes and Oblations, to hear Prayers, grant Petitions, relieve the needs of Men by their Salutary aid, work Prodigies and miraculous Cures (as appeareth from the great Fame of the Lady of Loretto, Diva Virgo Hallenſis (m) S. James of Compoſtella and ſuch more;) and to theſe Symbolical Preſences of the Bl. Virgin and other Saints, the doating Devotioniſts of Chriſtendom reſort and make Pilgrimages now, as in the elder times of Church-Demonolatry (before Images were introduc'd) they reſorted to the Sepulchres of the Martyrs, that were then look'd upon as the places of their Reſidence and Special Preſence. Without Reliques the Saints as well as the Holy Angels may be conſtituted Patrons of Churches; (n) For if a Church be built to any Saint in the place where he dwelt, or did any great thing, or if his Image be ſet up in it, or if be only dedicated to him, he becometh the Patron thereof. But of the Churches thus erected and Dedicated the Saints departed are more than the meer Tutelar Patrons, they are ſuppoſ'd to be the Proprietors of them (as alſo of thoſe Oblations and Donaria that are conſecrated to them;) for the Dedication of them to the Saints and the Vows that are made to them import nothing elſe. (o) As when Laurentius Almeida before he engag'd in Battel, Ædem Mariæ Virgini victrici vovit, vowed a Church to Mary the victorious Virgin, his Dedication and Vow importeth, that the Bl. Virgin was intitled to it, as the proper Owner thereof. So the ſeveral Monaſteries and their Appurtenances are ſtiled (p) the Inheritances and conſecrated Goods of the Divi Cœlites, or Canoniz'd Saints, that were the Founders of the ſeveral Monaſtick Orders. Whence it is manifeſt, that the Patron-Saints in the Papacy are ſuppoſ'd to be ſubordinate rerum Domini Lords of Places and Eſtates in this lower World at the ſame rate with thoſe Pagan Genii, which were worſhipped as ſubordinate Lords of the place, according to that Inſcription before cited.

JOVI OP. MAX. ET GENIO LOCI.

As Churches, ſo Cities and Nations, the ſeveral Profeſſions and Occupations of Men are ſuppoſ'd to be entitled to the Special Patronage of particular Saints (whom they have in ſingular Veneration and to whom they peculiarly recommend themſelves) without Reliques. The Saints of particular Cure in the Papacy are conſtituted ſuch by the choice of their Clients and Suppliants. So the Maſters of Spiritual Inſtitution direct their devout People, (q) to chuſe and ſelect one or more out of the number of Saints as their Patrons, through their hands to offer daily all their Works to God, to commend themſelves to their Protection Morning and Evening and at other times, eſpecially in Difficulties and Tentations, and to uſe them as

Witneſſes

(b) V. Curcell. Inſtitut. l. 7. c. 19. S. 14.

(c) Baron. ad ad. 55. n. 9.

(d) Bellarm. de Reliqu. l. 2. c. 27. Arg. 4.

(e) V. Dallæum. de rel. cult. object. l. 1. c. 10.

(f) Ibid. l. 4. c. 9.

(g) Spelman. Concil. T. 2. p. 653, 666.

(h) Bellarm. de cult. ſanct. c. 4.

(i) H. T. Abridgm. of Chriſt. Doctr. p. 215. v. Baron. ad an. 493. n. 43, 44.

(k) Caſſan. Catal. Glor. mund. P. 2. fol. 84.

(l) Saul and Sam. at Endor. p. 337, 338, 362, &c.

(m) In majori veneratione eſt corpus ejus quam alicujus Apoſtoli. Caſſan. ſupr. p. 3. fol. 89.

(n) Bellarm. ſupr.

(o) Maffeius Indic. l. 3. p. 117.

(p) Alphonſ. de Vargas de Stratagem Jeſuit. p. 88, 93, 114.

(q) Horſt. parad. Anim. Sect. 2. p. 100.

Witneſſes and Directors of their Actions. Agreeably to which groundleſs enormous Phantaſtry (which ſuppoſeth that Mankind have the priviledge of allotting to Saints and Angels their ſeveral Provinces and Patronſhips without asking their Conſent and without Divine appointment) in the elder times of Church-Demonolatry (r) ſome Saints were particularly honour'd in this or that Province, not in others; every Biſhop by Cuſtom might have injoin'd his Flock, to do Homage unto Saints of his own Erection: But Alexander the Third, and Innocent the Third diſguſted this Licence, and made a Decree, that none after their times ſhould be enroll'd in the Catalogue of Saints or publickly worſhipp'd (leaving Men at Liberty to chuſe their private Patron-Saints) without the Approbation of their Succeſſors.

III. They that ſuppoſe thoſe reigning Superi the Saints departed, to be the * Pagan-like Patron-Superiorities to Mankind, ſuppoſe them qualified with a ſufficiency of Wiſdom and Knowledge, of Preſence, Power and Goodneſs for ſo great an officiary Dignity. Every Patron-Saint knoweth all his Suppliants, knoweth them all at once, knoweth all their Circumſtances, heareth all their Petitions, (heareth them all at once,) that in the numberleſs Places, Churches, Regions vaſt and vaſtly diſtant (at the Earth's Diameter's diſtance from one another) and in innumerable Exigences by Sea and Land, are addreſs'd to him at the ſame time, heareth all their tacit mental Prayers, and therefore knoweth all their Hearts (at once,) their Virtues and their Vices, and what they are worthy of; knoweth all that is ſaid, thought or done by Mankind for his Honour, taketh ſpecial Care of his Suppliants, provideth for them and affordeth them ſalutary Aid and Relief (by his Intereſt at Court or otherwiſe) in all parts of the World according to their various needs. Such a vaſt unlimited Science, Preſence, Providence the Hypotheſis of Patron-Saints capacitated for Invocation and for an univerſal unlimited Patronage, neceſſarily implieth. And this the Pontifician Theologers diſpute for, when they maintain, (s) That the Saints have ſuch a knowledge of us and our Affairs, as capacitateth them for Invocation unconfin'd as to time and place. But of this they have no Aſſurance, and therefore their Demonolatry cannot be wiſe or reaſonable (for ought they know they Pray to them that cannot hear;) nor are they able to ſalve the Phænomenon, to give an account how their Patron-ſuperiorities become capacitated for unlimited Patronage and Invocation. For this pretenſion, That the Saints underſtand not their Suppliants Prayers without Divine Revelation, or the Looking-glaſs of the Divine Eſſence, wherein all things are repreſented (which is a mode of Revelation) is inconſiſtent with the Saints Symbolical Preſences, and with this other Principle, (t) That the Prefect-Tutelar Saints vigilantly inſpect the Places which they preſide over. It is Inconſiſtent with their Suppoſition, that the Saints attend to their Prayers (u) are propitious to them in hearing and helping them, and with their deſire to find Favour in their Patrons Eyes. (w) For becauſe S. Martin attendeth to the Prayers of the Faithful, giving all ſalutary things, therefore his Suppliants ſeek (invenire gratiam coram expetito Patrono) to find Grace or Favour before their deſir'd Patron. It's manifeſtly Inconſiſtent with their pathetic ſtrains and forms of Addreſs in all their Prayers to the Saints; ſuch as (x) Turn thy merciful Eyes towards us, look upon us, with Commiſeration look upon us, hear the Prayers of thy Suppliant-ſervants that implore thine aid; Hear, O Lady, be preſent with thy Suppliants and Propitious, apply the Ears of thy Piety to our Prayers, benignly admit them within the (ſacrarium exauditionis) ſacred place of hearing, accept what we offer. O thou moſt benign Hearer! favourably accept and hear this Supplication, and deſpiſe not our Prayers, Te rogamus, audi nos. In their Miſſal they make their Prayers to S. Sebaſtian in this Form. (y) Regard thy Family, which prayeth with bended Knees. Hear thy praying Servants, O Martyr Sebaſtian. They never Pray unto God, to ſhew or expoſe their Prayers to the Saints; therefore they ſuppoſe either that ſuch a Revelation is no Favour, or that the Saints have no need of it. They manifeſtly recede from the Senſe of the ancient Theologers at the riſe of Church-Demonolatry (to whoſe Hypotheſis the Stile of their Prayers is accommodated;) for thoſe Theologers ſuppos'd, (z) that the Saints and Martyrs (like the holy Angels of the Pagan Demons) perform'd the Office of Legation, and carry'd the Prayers of their Suppliants to the Divine Majeſty: But they do not (S. Gregory only excepted) Theologize after the Pontifician mode touching the Saints ſeeing all things in a Divine Looking-glaſs, or that God performeth the Office of Legation to the Saints, revealeth to them the Prayers of their Suppliants, and telleth them all their Errands, that they may tell them to him again; ſuch antic Rounds and Turns are Inconſiſtent with the Saints interceſſional imploy, and can be nothing better than irreligious and ridiculous Foolery. Thoſe ancient Theologers ſuppos'd, (a) that the Saints and Martyrs of themſelves without Divine Revelation heard the Prayers of their Suppliants. (b) S. Hierom and Maximus Taurinenſis ſay, that the Saints are every where. (c) S. Baſil ſaith, that they ſee every where. (d) P. Leo M. ſaith, that S. Peter extendeth the Care of his Piety every where to the People of God. Theſe ancient Theologers attributed to all the Saints Ubiquity or Omnipreſence, Omniſcience, Univerſal Providence, whereby they ſuppos'd them capacitated for hearing and helping all their Suppliants. And if the Church-Demonolatry was once Idolatry, as it manifeſtly was in thoſe elder times, when thoſe Divine Attributes were aſcrib'd to the Saints, which the Pontifician Theologers will not allow them, they might do well, to inform the World, when it ceas'd to be ſo. The Patron-Saints in the elder times were Superiorities in Rule and Government, that had much of Deity (God-propriety) aſcrib'd to them; therefore they were the Pagano-Chriſtians Deities.

Of the Pontifician Hypotheſis (that the Saints underſtand their Suppliants Prayers by Divine Revelation) there are two remarkable Branches: The one is, that a God-intelligence reſideth in the Patron-Saints; the other is, that it reſideth in them in ſuch meaſure and manner, as to capacitate them for Invocation and in order to that end. The firſt Branch is a plain acknowledgment, that the Buſineſs of Invocation is proper to ſuch a Nature, which tranſcendeth meer created intelligent Nature (which ſpoileth the Parallel between their ora pro nobis, and the asking an holy Man on Earth to pray for us,) for with-

---

(r) Bellarm. de ſanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 8. Dr. Jackſon Origin. of Unbelief. ch. 39.

* Suum cuique propugnaculo ab cœleſtibus patronis indiderant nomen. Maffeius Indic. p. 558.

(s) Petav. ſupr. l. 14. c. 17. Bellarm. de ſanct. Beat. c. 20.

(t) Fel. Fab. Hiſt. Suev. l. 2. c. 17.

(u) Luſitani ſanctum Jacobum appellant. Audiit Apoſtolus voces, ac ſuis de more propitius hoſti metum incuſſit. Maffeius Indic. p. 328.

(w) Baron. ad an. 560. n. 8.

(x) Petav. ſupr. c. 9. S. 13. c. 10. S. 13, 14. Chemnic. Exam. Conc. Trident. P. 3. p. 581, 583, &c.

(y) Dallæus de rel. cult. object. p. 401.

(z) Petav. ſupr. c. 10. S. 4, 9, &c.

(a) Chemnic. ſupr. p. 642, 647.

(b) Petav. ſupr. c. 10. S. 15. & c. 17. S. 6.

(c) T. 1. p. 741.

(d) Petav. ſupr. c. 11. S. 18.

out Divine Revelation whereby they are rais'd beyond the Pitch and Limits of meer created intelligent Natures, whereby there reſideth in them an Intelligence of a Superiour Rank (or a God-intelligence) they are not (according to theſe Theologers) capacitated for Invocation. This appeareth in their Argumentation for tacit mental Prayers to Saints. (e) Although they have not by Nature the power of beholding our ſecret Thoughts, yet God's Omnipotent Goodneſs may beſtow it upon them. What is more proper to God, than to foreknow and foretel Futurities? yet this Intelligence is communicated to the Prophets. And who will dare to deny, that God can tell the Saints our ſecret Thoughts? Such inept Argumentations may not ineptly be reproved by Celſus a Pagan Demonolatriſt arguing againſt the Chriſtians. (f) Having nothing to anſwer, they betake themſelves εἰς ἀτοπωτάτην ἀναχώρησιν, to the abſurdeſt Refuge, the Divine Omnipotency: but certainly God can do no filthy things; nor if any Man deſireth any flagitious thing, can that be done by God. (g) For God is not the Leader or Conducter of Inordinate Deſire and Diſorder, but of the right and juſt ſtate of things in Nature. This generous Philoſophy out of the Mouth of a Varlet reflecteth upon, not Chriſtianity (as its impure Author deſign'd) but the Religion of the Church of Rome, which putteth God upon a continual working the moſt prodigious Miracles, and upon the continual making new Revelations, and thoſe ſuch as are manifeſt diſorder, oppoſite to the right and juſt ſtate of things. It allotteth alſo unto God the Place and Office of an Intelligencer, to ſerve the Romaniſts in their Demonolatry (all which are things filthy and flagitious;) and which is ſtill worſe, there is a ſecond Branch of their Hypotheſis, that the God-intelligence reſideth in them, ſo as to capacitate them for Invocation, which implyeth, that the Intelligence of the Secrets of all their Suppliants Hearts reſideth in them conſtantly and unfailingly; that an unlimited Intelligence reſideth in them permanently and uninterruptedly for the purpoſe of capacitating them for Invocation; and therefore they are raiſed to God-graduality, the Rank and Condition of Deities. If God appointeth Prophets, it is neceſſary, that he furniſh them with a Prophet-conſtitutive Intelligence, they muſt have Revelations; but theſe are tranſient by way of extraordinary Viſitation, for a certain time and of ſome few things only. This doth not capacitate a Prophet for Invocation; to capacitate him for Invocation, an unlimited God-Intelligence muſt reſide in him permanently and uninterruptedly, which elevateth him to the Rank and Condition of a Deity. So if God appointeth Patron-Saints of unlimited Patronage and Invocation, and that Mankind ſhall be their Suppliants, it is neceſſary, that he be unto them a ſtanding, continual, perpetual, all-informing Intelligencer; they muſt be rais'd to ſuch a Perfection and vaſtneſs of Intelligence, that if the Saints have it by vertue of an Intelligent Faculty or Power imparted to them, the God-intelligent Nature is imparted; if they have it by way of Revelation only, the God-graduality of Intelligence is imparted (and they are made God-Intelligences;) nothing leſs will ſuffice to qualify the Saints for their Patronſhip and Worſhip, and conſequently they are made Deities.

IV. The Power that hath been attributed to the Celeſtial Patron-Saints ever ſince the riſe of Church-Demonolatry, is both an Interceſſional and an Authoritative-operative Power, ſuch as that of the Holy Angels, whom none ſuppoſe, to be meer Interceſſors for Mankind. The Church of Rome is ſo far from ſuppoſing them ſuch, that ſhe calleth them (h) Magiſtrates (the Pagan-like Mundane Magiſtrates) and will have Honours done them, ſuch as Subjects owe to their Princes (but at an higher rate) ſuch as Clients owe to (i) their Lord-Patrons, agreeably to her Maxim, Angelus nobis datus eſt Patronus, an Angel is given us to be our Patron. She hath appointed a Feaſt of the Angels Guardian, and an Office or Devotional Service call'd Officium Angeli cuſtodis (the Office of the Angel-Guardian) is a Branch of her Religion, which in great part (notwithſtanding the expreſs Prohibitions of Scripture) is the worſhip of Tutelar Spirits and Patron Ghoſts after the manner of the Heathen. In this Office ſhe teacheth her Devotioniſts to pray to the Angel-Guardian of the Country for Soundneſs of Mind and for External Peace; and to all their Guardian Angels, to defend them in Battel. To their particular Angel-Guardian (as his daily Service) they pray (k) for Illumination, Cuſtody and Government, (l) and they are taught to repoſe a Religious Truſt in him.

Angele Dei, qui cuſtos es mei, me tibi commiſſum pietate ſuperna
Hodie illumina, cuſtodi, rege & guberna.

From which devotional Addreſſes to the Guardian-Angels (and ſuch more) a Judgment may be made of that uſual pretenſion of the Pontificians, that there is nothing more in their Invocation of Saints than an Ora pro nobis, a deſiring them to pray to God for us, which may as well be done to the Saints deceas'd as to the Saints alive: And doubtleſs they are not miſtaken in their Suppoſition of a parity in the Caſe. If we inveſt any Saint alive with the ſame Officiary Dignity, wherewith they inveſt a Saint departed; if we aſcribe to him no leſs Divinity or Deity than they aſcribe to a Canoniz'd Saint; if the World of Mankind be the Clients and Suppliants of ſuch a Saint alive, at the ſame rate, that they are now the Clients and Suppliants of ſuch a Saint departed, the Invocation of him will be of the ſame criminal Character with the Romiſh Invocation of Saints (the Roman Emperours were idolatrouſly worſhipp'd alive as well as dead,) and the Ora pro nobis of the Clients and Suppliants of ſuch a Patron-Saint alive will be of the ſame Vitioſity with that which is in uſe amongſt the Church-Demonolatriſts. But the Ora pro nobis uſual amongſt Chriſtians is of another kind; it is not a Prayer of Clients and Suppliants to their Lord-Patrons (ſanctis debetur honor duliæ tanquam Dominis, (m) ſaith Vaſquez;) nor is it any part of their Devotional Service, nor do they chant it out in Churches in the midſt of their ſolemn God-ſervice (with the ſame ſigns of Obſervance and Devotion wherewith they worſhip God,) nor do we attribute any thing of Deity to the Perſon whoſe Prayers we deſire, or idolize his Patronage (having ſuch a regard and eſteem for it as we ought to have for God's only;) ſo frivolous a Triviality is this Plea for the Romaniſts Invocation of Saints, allowing the truth of their Pretenſion, that there is nothing more in it than an Ora pro nobis. But the falſity of this Pretenſion is viſible in the Prayers that are made to Guardian-Angels for mighty Benefits. For when they (n) pray to Michael

(e) Petav. ſupr. c. 17. ſub. fin.

(f) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 240, & v. p. 246, 247.

(g) Ὀυ γὰρ τῆς πλημμελοῦς ὀρέξεως, οὐδὲ τῆς πεπλανημένης ἀκοσμίας, ἀλλὰ τῆς ὀρθῆς καὶ δικαίας φύσεως θεός ἐστιν ἀρχηγέτης.

(h) Catechiſm. ex decr. Concil. Trid. p. 424, 425.

(i) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 3. Caniſ. Catechiſm. p. 169.

(k) Caniſ. ſupr. p. 171.

(l) Curcel. Inſtit. p. 513. Vid. Caſſan. Catal. glor. mund. P. 2. fol. 50.

(m) In 3. Th. Diſp. 108. Qu. 25. Art. 3. c. 4.

(n) Breviar. Rom. in Feſt. Apparit. S. Michael. Archang.

the Archangel, to come to the help of the People of God (as the Church prayeth;) to Gabriel (o) to proſtrate their Enemies, to Raphael, to bring a Medicine to the Sick; when in their Manuals they pray to all good Angels, (p) to exerciſe their Offices of Charity towards themſelves, their City, and Country, Parents, Friends and Benefactors, directing all their Thoughts, Words and Deeds to the Salvation of their Souls; when they pray to their Angel-Guardian, (q) that he would continually protect and guard them from all the Incurſions of the Devil, drive from them the Power of Satan, and when they decline from the Path of Virtue to Vice, endeavour to bring them back by the Path of Juſtice to their Saviour; and when they die, not to ſuffer their Souls to be terrify'd by malignant Spirits, or carry'd into the Pit of Deſperation: Nothing of this uſual Angel-worſhip is praying to the Angels for Interceſſion. They manifeſtly pray to them as unto great Authoritative Operative Powers for the benefits of their Miniſtration, which they are ſuppos'd operatively (in the Execution of their Prefectſhip and Patronſhip) to have power to beſtow upon them; not for the procuring but the diſpenſing Bleſſings. The meaning of theſe their Prayers may be underſtood from a Dogmatiſt of their own thus diſcourſing touching the Invocation of Angels. (r) The help which they afford the Faithful of their own accord, why may we not lawfully deſire it of them? and if we may deſire it of them, why may we not ask it of them? which is done by Imploration and Invocation. There might be ſome colour for their Pretenſion, that they pray to the reigning Saints for nothing more than Interceſſion, if they ſuppos'd them furniſh'd with no other Power, whereby they may benefit their Suppliants ſave only an Interceſſional Power. But they that make this Reſtriction and Limitation of the Senſe of their Prayers, (s) diſpute for (the Pagan-like) Mundane Magiſtracy of the Saints, ſuppoſe them great Authoritative-Operative Powers, and that a wonder-working Power reſideth in their very Bodies and Reliques. The Bl. Virgin (t) is ſaid (by the Jeſuit Coſterus) to avert Evils and beſtow Goods by her Prayers, Merits, Authority and Power. There are Stories innumerable in this Church of the Bl. Virgin's and other Patron-Saints appearing on behalf of their Clients, and for their defence and deliverance in times of danger; and Revelations not a few touching thoſe, whoſe Souls the Bl. Virgin hath deliver'd from Devils, and brought them to Heaven by her Authoritative-Operative Power. So at the riſe of Church-Demonolatry the Saints departed were ſuppos'd, to be the Tutelar Prefects of Cities and Guardians, to preſide over the World, to take care of and adminiſter terrene things. The Souls of the Martyrs were ſuppos'd (u) to be preſent at their Memorials or Martyria, the places where their Bodies were laid (which were the Churches, to which the Chriſtians did commonly reſort) and elſewhere in the World; to hear the Prayers of their Suppliants, and as Legates to carry them to the Divine Majeſty; and not only to obtain for their Suitors a grant of their Petitions, and to impetrate for them (as Advocates) all ſorts of Benefits and Salutary Helps, but theſe Benefits and Salutary Helps were ſuppos'd to come (w) from their ἐπιφάνεια. beneficent Preſence and Virtue. Many Stories we have of their preſence and the apparition of their Perſons, (x) ſometimes to give order about the diſpoſal of their Reliques, (y) ſometimes to ſignify where their Bodies lay, (z) ſometimes to aſſure Men, that they had pray'd for the pardon of their Sins, and that their Sins were forgiven; (a) ſometimes to diſpenſe Mercies and Benefits, the cure of Diſeaſes, the protection of Cities. The Miracles that are ſaid to have been wrought at the Tombs of the Martyrs, were attributed to their Preſence (ἐπιφάνεια) and their Power (the Patriarch of Jeruſalem prayed to one of the Martyrs in this form, (b) ut innoteſcat gentibus potentia tua;) they deſire to be intermix'd with Humane Affairs, and are delighted with the Converſation of Men, (c) as Procopius affirmeth; they preſide over us, govern us, are Witneſſes of our Actions, our Aſſociates in travel; we have the Company and Cuſtody of thoſe Tutelar Spirits, as Theodoret and not a few of the Theologers of thoſe elder times have diſcours'd. Much of their Senſe may be underſtood from S. Baſil's Panegyrical Oration upon the Martyr Mamas. Be mindful of the Martyr as many of you as have enjoy'd him by Dreams; as many of you as coming to this place have had him an helper to your praying; as many as to whom being called by Name, he ſhew'd himſelf preſent by his Works; as many Travellers as he hath brought back again (they that return in ſafety, give thanks to the Martyrs, ſaith Theodoret;) as many as he hath rais'd from Sickneſs; as many as he hath reſtor'd their Children unto being now dead; as many as by his means have receiv'd a longer term of Life. (d) Having obtain'd miraculous (or wonder-working) Grace the Saints are as Channels of it from the moſt Supernal and Divine Fountain, and beſtow it upon thoſe that petition for it, ſaith another S. Baſil. (e) How wonderful is the Power of God's Mother (ſaith the ſame Author) and how far doth it tranſcend ſo many Saints, whom we venerate? for if Chriſt gave his Servants ſuch Grace, as not only to cure the Sick by the touch, but alſo to do the ſame by their Shadows, what Virtue ought we to ſuppoſe in the Mother? muſt it not be much greater than that of the Subjects? as is manifeſt to all. And what wonder is it, if the Saints alive wrought Miracles, ſeeing when they are dead their Power is not dead and buried, but although Stones cover their Bodies, they are able to ſave the calamitous, if they worthily approach them? If to theſe he hath given the Grace of working ſuch wonders, how great τερφεῖα. hath he given to his Mother, and with what Gifts hath he made her reſplendent? According to theſe Ancient Theologers the Patron-Saints are not only Interceſſional Powers, but Wonder-working, Authoritative, Operative Powers: And as the Bl. Virgin is by the preſent Church ſuppos'd to be the Diſpenſatreſs of Grace, ſo ſome ſay, (f) The Saints are the Members of Chriſt, by whom many times he beſtoweth his Gifts upon us, as a pious Man giveth a Penny to an Indigent Perſon by his Hand, and Counſel by his Tongue, and relieveth the neceſſity of the Indigent by the other Members of his Body: ſo Chriſt by his Members, that is the Saints, giveth Grace.

The Patron-Saints anſwer to the Heathen (Subordinate) Deities and Demons, and are ſuppos'd (as well as they) to be the Tutelar Preſidents of Places, Things and Perſons; nor are they leſs than the Angelical Powers; therefore they diſpenſe Favours and Bleſſings to their Suppliants * in a way of Authoritative Operative Power, as well as procure them by their Interceſſional. Their Religioniſts chuſe them for their Tutelar Guardians in the ſame Notion with the Guardian-Angels (uſing them as Witnesses

(o) Ap. Chemnic. p. 599.

(p) Manual of Prayers and Lit. printed at Antwerp An. 1656. p. 141.

(q) Key of Paradiſe, p. 356.

(r) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 9. S. 4.

(s) Bellar. de Sanct. Beat. & de Reliqu.

(t) Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 367.

(u) Chemnic. ſupr. p. 642.

(w) Petav. ſupr. c. 11. S. 4. Baron. ad an. 561. n. 15.

(x) Baron. ad an. 262. n. 68. & ad an. 598. n. 26.

(y) Petav. ſupr. c. 13. S. 2.

(z) Baron. ad an. 560. n. 3.

(a) Id. ad an. 461. n. 6. S. Aug. de cur. pro mort. c. 16.

(b) Baron. ad an. 566. n. 28.

(c) Idem ad an. 552. n. 22.

(d) Baſil. Seleuc. de mirac. S. Thecl. p. 281.

(e) Idem orat. 39. p. 218.

(f) Conrad. Klingii loc. com. l. 4. c. 45.

* Saluti fuit ſuppliciter invocatum B. Virginis auxilium, ejus præſenti ope, deſperatis jam rebus, nullo nautarum miniſterio ſuam in ſedem carina rediit, ita fluctus exhauſti. Votiva dein caſus effigies Goæ in ejuſdem Dei matris templo ſuſpenſa. Maffeius Indic. p. 708.

neſſes and Directors of their Actions, recommending themſelves to their Guidance and Protection, truſting in their Cuſtody and Aid, ſuppoſing that they are preſent with them in their Difficulties, Dangers, and in the Hour of Death;) As great Authoritative Powers they have their Symbolical Preſences, where they are thought to relieve the Needs of Men by their Salutary Aid, and to work Miracles, and a certain Sovereign Authority is attributed to the Bl. Virgin the Queen of Heaven. Now, if the Church, her Theologers, and the Populace of her Communion do ſuppoſe, that the Patron-Saints are not only Interceſſional, but great Authoritative-operative Powers, what ſhould hinder them from making their Prayers to them (for Bleſſings Temporal or Spiritual) in that Notion and Capacity? from praying to their Guardian Saints as they pray to their Guardian Angels? And ought not their Prayers to be interpreted agreeably to their Hypotheſis, eſpecially when the Terms are incapable of any other Conſtruction? For as Authoritative-operative Powers they are ſuppoſed to be Patrons and Patroneſſes to their Clients, and as ſuch they act in the Affairs of the World, and of the Church, and in the Affairs of their Suppliants; and if it is reaſonable, to ſay an Ora pro nobis to the Saints in Heaven, becauſe we do ſo to our Brethren on Earth: It is as juſtifiable, to crave an Alms, Help and Deliverance from the Saints in Heaven by way of Operative Power, becauſe we crave ſuch Benefits and Favours from our Brethren on Earth. Agreeably to which Hypotheſis, in the elder times of Church-Demonolatry Prayers were made to the Patron Saints, not only as to Interceſſional, but as to great Authoritative-operative Powers, as Gregor. M. in his Epiſtle to Leontia the Empreſs thus addreſſeth to S. Peter; (g) May he be the Guardian of your Empire, a Protector to you on Earth, and an Interceſſor for you in Heaven. He ſuppoſeth, that his Preſents to Princes (h) were accompany'd with S. Peter's Benediction, (i) that S. Peter was able to beſtow great things in this Life, and Eternal Benefits with God Almighty. He wiſheth, that this mighty Patron of his, (k) may happily conduct his Viſitants to his Temple; and writing to the Queen of France, he maketh this addreſs to him, (l) May he grant your Excellency to rejoyce in your Off-ſpring here, and after the term of many Years, may he make you to be found perfectly free from all Evils before the Face of the Eternal Judge. The Stile of theſe Gregorian Devotions demonſtrateth, that in the elder times of Church-Demonolatry the Saints were pray'd to, both as Interceſſional Powers and as Tutelar Spirits of great Authoritative-operative Power. Such were thoſe Spirits, to which Syneſius pray'd, and which he look'd upon as ſubordinate Gods. (m) I made my Supplication to the Servitor Deities, ſo many as preſide over the Thracian and oppoſite Chalcedonian Soil; thy Sacred Miniſters, O King, whom thou haſt crown'd with Angelical Glories. Thoſe Bleſſed Spirits help'd my Prayers and aſſiſted my many Labours. Gr. Naz. (in whoſe Days the Invocation of Saints was far from its height) thus addreſſeth to S. Cyprian, (n) Look down upon us propitiouſly from above, and direct our Word and Life, and feed or co-feed this Sacred Flock, driving away the grievous Wolves, vouchſafing us a more perfect and brighter ſhine of the Holy Trinity. (o) Do thou behold us from above (ſaith he to S. Baſil) and that Thorn of the Fleſh given by God for our Diſcipline, either put a ſtop to by thy Interceſſions, or perſwade the bearing it with Fortitude; and direct our whole Life to what is moſt advantageous. But if we depart this Life, receive us from hence into thy Tabernacles. S. Athanaſius he thus beſpeaketh; (p) Look on us propitiouſly from above, O Sacred Head, and guide this People; if Times be peaceable, keep me here and govern the Flock with me; but in caſe of War or Trouble, reduce or aſſume me, and place me with thy ſelf. So the Seleucian Baſil prayeth to the Holy Virgin; (q) Propitiouſly behold us from above, rule us now to lead our lives in peace, and bringing us before the Throne of Judgment without Shame, make us partakers of the Station on the Right-hand. The preſent Church prayeth to the Bl. Virgin, (r) Do thou protect us from the Enemy, and receive us at the Hour of Death; Let Mary and her Son bleſs us. (s) Vouchſafe me to praiſe thee, holy Virgin, give me Strength againſt thine Enemies; which is plainly an Addreſs to the Bl. Virgin as to a great Authority in the firſt part of it, and as to a Diſpenſatreſs of Grace in the ſecond. Nor is this following Prayer of (t) the maſter of Controverſies otherwiſe intelligible: Oh bleſſed Mary, how intirely did you love your Son Jeſus! Oh cauſe me to love him, to ſerve him, and that nothing in the World may ever ſeparate me from his Holy Grace! (u) When they devote themſelves to follow and ſerve her diligently, and ſo to behave themſelves in all their Thoughts, Words and Actions, as never to do any thing diſpleaſing in her or her Son's Eyes, they ſuppoſe her an Authoritative Inſpector of their Actions (without Divine Revelation;) and when in their dying Hour they cry, Jeſu Maria, deſiring to die in their bleſſed Arms, they conſider her as an Authoritative Receiver of their Souls: And when they pray to her, (w) O bleſſed Virgin, be graciouſly pleas'd to pour forth that Grace of which thou art full, (x) make haſt and come to my help in my Straits and Neceſſities; come thou high Lady Mary, do thou viſit us, enlighten our diſeaſed Minds by the holy Gifts of Life, by viſiting the People remove the danger of Puniſhment; benignly ſtretch forth thine Hand and direct our Life; in my laſt Day irradiate me with thy ſplendid Face; they pray for ſomewhat elſe than Interceſſion. In the ſame Stile in former Ages they uſually pray'd to the other Patron-Saints, nor have they alter'd their Stile of Prayer in this preſent Age (for the Sham of new Popery is of no regard;) They pray to thoſe Tutelar Spirits as unto great Authorities and Tutelar Operative Powers, (y) to take them into their faithful Cuſtody and Patronage, and the Boſom of their Mercy; to keep them under their Protection from all Evils; to guide them and govern their Sences by their Regency; to be with them in Tribulations and Temptations; to viſit them in Weakneſs, and in the end of their Life to come to their help againſt all Enemies; to be preſent with them and receive them at the Hour of Death, and to carry their Souls to Eternal Joys. The Aid and Interceſſion are uſually conjoyn'd in their Devotions as things diſtinct (ſo the Council of Trent reckoneth them;) as when they pray to the holy Mother of God, (z) at the Hour of Death I beſeech thee depart not from me, that by thy Prayers and Protection I may be ſafe. The extravagant Authority which for ſeveral Ages hath been attributed to S. Peter in the Weſtern Church involveth a Suppoſition, that

(g) Ipſe ſit veſtri cuſtos imperii, ſit vobis protector in terra, ſit pro vobis interceſſor in cœlo. Ep. l. 11. c. 44.

(h) Ibid. l. 9. c. 60.

(i) l. 8. c. 31.

(k) l. 7. c. 77.

(l) Hic excellentiam veſtram in ſobole gaudere concedat, & poſt multorum annorum curricula, à malis omnibus abſolutam ante conſpectum æterni faciat Judicis inveniri. L. 5. c. 105.

(m) Ἱκέτευσα θεὺς Δρηστῆρας ὅσοι γόνιμον Θρήκης κατέχουσι πέδον, &c. Hymn. 3. n. 460.

(n) Orat. 18. in fin.

(o) Or. 20. in fin.

(p) Or. 21. in fin.

(q) Orat. 39. in fin.

(r) Offic. parv. B. Mar.

(s) Offic. B. Mar. in Sabbat.

(t) Bellarm. Catech. p. 75.

(u) Key of Paradiſe, p. 476, 477.

(w) Horſt. Parad. An. Sect. 7. p. 446.

(x) Chemnic. ſupr. Par. 3. p. 586, 589, &c.

(y) Chemnic. Ibid.

(z) Manual of Pray. and Lit. printed at Antwerp. 1658. p. 140.

that he ſtill retaineth his Apoſtolic Authority and Principality upon Earth; and upon the founding his Church at Weſtminſter (a) he is ſaid to have appeared to a Fiſherman, telling him; That he had dedicated the Church in his own Name, and prevented the Epiſcopal Benediction by the Authority of his own Sanctification; that he would often viſit the place and afford his Preſence to the Prayers of the Faithful, and open the Gate of Heaven to ſuch as liv'd ſoberly, piouſly and juſtly in this World. Agreeably to this conceit of ſenſleſs Superſtition (b) the Church prayeth to St. Peter and to the Apoſtles in common, to looſe us from our Sins, to heal us of our Spiritual Diſeaſes, to open Heaven to us, by their Command, Precept and Authoritative-Power, expreſſing the Notion of their Apoſtolic Authority (as plainly as words can ſpeak it,) which ſhe ſuppoſeth them ſtill to retain and exerciſe.

V. In Church-Demonolatry the reigning Saints are addreſs'd to as Supernal Powers, that can be ſuch powerful Patrons to their Suppliants as none but God can be to his. (c) The Mountains from whence their help cometh, (d) the Walls, Bulwarks, Fortreſſes, Towers, Protectors, Guardians and Defenders of their Cities and Countries; (e) the conjoin'd Towers that ſecure their Country from the Incurſion of Enemies; (f) the Pillars, Rocks and Towers of the Church (becauſe they Protect and Support it,) their Saviours and Phyſicians (as we have ſeen from Theodoret,) ſuch Supernal Powers which can fulfil the Petitions and Deſires of their Suppliants, and actually anſwer their Prayers, as Prudentius ſaith, (g) in his Hymn touching S. Laurence. Their Honorary Names denote the tranſcendent greatneſs of their Power (and who would Pray to them that cannot Save, or invoke their aid that cannot Help?) which tranſcendency of Power is in the Bl. Virgin Singular and Supereminent; whence ſhe is intituled (h) the Mountain of Mountains, the ſwift invincible Defence; the Hope, Safeguard and Sanctuary of Chriſtians, as the Greeks ſtile her in their Preces Horariæ, and in this manner invoke her Aid. (i) O thou Virgin Mother of God, thou impregnable Wall, thou Fortreſs of Salvation! A mighty Confidence may reaſonably be repos'd in their Protection, that can be ſuch an impregnable Safeguard to their Clients; and it muſt be acknowledg'd, that if they can be ſuch Patrons, Proviſors, Protectors, Phyſicians, Guardians, Saviours, Rocks and Bulwarks to their Suppliants, to all their Suppliants throughout the World; If they can anſwer all their Prayers, perform all their Requeſts, furniſh all their Wants, and do all manner of good Turns for them; if they can work Miracles, and Effect for their Suppliants whatever they pleaſe (as the Maſter of the Sentences ſaith, (k) If they will, God willeth,) they are potent Patrons at an immenſe rate of Power, nothing leſs than Omnipotent, which if we ſuppoſe, there can be no incongruity in the ſtile of the Church-Demonolatriſts Prayers, we may Pray to them for all ſorts of Bleſſings with great Reaſon and Congruity, as the Church ſuppoſeth in her Exhortation from S. Bernard. (l) Let us embrace the footſteps of Mary, and let us caſt our ſelves at her bleſſed Feet with moſt Devout Supplication, let us hold her and not let her go, till ſhe Bleſs us, for ſhe is able. The Church-Demonolatriſts therefore ſuppoſe, that in praying to Saints they pray to ſuch Supernal Powers, which are able to furniſh them with the Bleſſings which they Pray for; whence they court their Favour in the moſt pathetic Strains; they make their Prayers and lift up their Cries to them, as unto thoſe that have Power to do the Deed for them, and effect the thing deſir'd; they Pray to them for all ſorts of Bleſſings, and they Pray in the Phraſe of the Church-Demonolatriſts of the elder times, (m) Redona quod rogamus, give us back what we ask. They ſuppoſe therefore, that the Saints can be in ſome Senſe the Donors of all ſorts of Bleſſings to them; as appeareth alſo from the Expoſition which they make of the Church's Senſe in her Prayers. (n) It is lawful to ſay, S. Peter have Mercy on me, ſave me, open to me the Gate of Heaven, give me health of Body, give me Patience, give me Fortitude, provided we underſtand it thus; Salva me & miſerere mei orando pro me; Da mihi hoc & illud tuis precibus & meritis: Save me and have Mercy on me by praying for me; give me this and that by thy Prayers and Merits. This mode of expounding the Church's Senſe ſuppoſeth, that they are Donors of the Bleſſings pray'd for, not by proper formal Donation, but by their meritorious Mediation effective of the proper formal Donation. It aſcribeth to the Saints the Power of doing the Effect, but without the Authoritative-operative Power; ſo that a Suppliant prayeth to his Patron-Saint, to give him Chaſtity, Patience, or other Celeſtial Gifts, not ſuppoſing, that he can give it to him as having the Authoritative-operative Power of proper formal Donation, but ſuppoſing that he can do the Deed or Effect for him (the thing which he deſireth) make him Chaſt and Patient, by his meritorious Interceſſional Power, which is ſo ſurely and ſo potently Effective of the proper formal Donation, that in juſt computation it is as much as a proper formal Donation of the Bleſſing deſir'd, and therefore is uſually ſo expreſs'd (as if it was the proper formal Donation) in the Church-Demonolatriſts Prayers. (o) Dona Confer Cæleſtia, give Celeſtial Gifts, mites fac & caſtos, make us Meek and Chaſt. This mode of expounding the Church's Prayers is not allowable in many Inſtances (as when they beg (p) the Bl. Virgins Preſence, and pray to the Sweet Lady, to come and take away their Evils; they cannot be ſuppos'd to deſire, that ſhe would be preſent and come to take away their Evils by her Merits and her Prayers; (for ſo to take away their Evils, is a work to be done in Heaven, not by coming and being preſent here on Earth;) but allowing this Expoſition of the Church's Prayers, to be true and genuine (in ſeveral Inſtances;) it manifeſtly containeth an acknowledgment of this Principle, that the Saints can be Donors of all manner of Bleſſings to their Suppliants (for they that can be Donors of all manner of Bleſſings to their Suppliants by their Merits and Prayers, can be Donors of all manner of Bleſſings to them;) they can be Donors of all manner of Bleſſings to their Suppliants either by an Authoritative-operative Power of proper formal Donation, or by a Power (their meritorious Interceſſional Power) which as to all the purpoſes of a Suppliant is equivalent thereto; for it is the having the benefit, not the mode of its Donation, which is the Suppliants concern. As to the Suppliants concern, this Principle aſcribeth to the Patron-Saints no leſs Power, than if they were ſuppos'd the great Lords of Affairs; for they can effect what they pleaſe (whence the Jeſuits in Germany pleaded, (q) that S. Benedict had

(a) Baron. ad annu 610. n. 11.

(b) Breviar. Rom. in Feſt. Cathedr. S. Petr. & in Commun. Apoſtol.

(c) Petav. ſupr. c. 9. S. 13, 14.

(d) V. Mr. Mede Apoſt. of the lat. times p. 1. ſub fin

(e) S. Baſil. Hom. 20 *p.*533.

(f) S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. p. 536.

(g) Quæ ſit poteſtas credita, & muneris quantum datum, probant Quiritum gaudia quibus rogatus annuis.

(h) Petav. ſupr.

(i) Mr. Mede ſupr.

(k) l. 4. diſt. 45.

(l) Offic. B. Mar. in Sabbat.

(m) Brev. Rom. ſec. Die infr. Octav. Nativ. B. Mar.

(n) Bellarm. de ſanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 17.

(o) Offic. parv. B. Mar.

(p) Ibid.

(q) Alphonſ. de Vargas Stratagem Jeſuit. p. 57.

had loſt all Right to thoſe Monaſteries of his, that were taken from him by the Hereticks, and were ſince regained from them, becauſe he ſuffer'd them to be taken from him; whereas he might have obtained of God what he would by his Prayers;) it aſcribeth to them the incommunicable Glories and Excellencies of God (making them equivalent to God, praying to them in ſuch form of words which as to the form of words is a making them Gods;) it maketh them of no leſs uſe to their Suppliants than God is to his (furniſhing them with what they want, Life, Health, Pardon, Grace, Glory;) And it entitleth the Patron-Saints to all manner of Religious Worſhip and Service. For upon this account, becauſe the Saints can furniſh their Suppliants with all things which they want, or can be Donors of all manner of Bleſſings to them (by their Merits and Prayers or otherwiſe) Mankind (not without Reaſon) become their Clients and Suppliants, ſeeking them with Faith and Hope, placing their Affiance in them, and exerciſing their dependence upon them with Love and Gratitude, having recourſe to them in all their Wants and Dangers, making Vows to them in their Diſtreſs, recommending themſelves to their Protection, devoting themſelves to their Service, reſigning up their All to them, making their Prayers to them for the furniſhing their Wants, the Donation of all Goods and deliverance from all ſorts of Evils, giving thanks to them as to the Authors of their Bleſſings communicating to them Gods Prerogatives (making them their Rocks, Mountains, Fortreſſes, Saviours,) and ſerving them with the other Branches of Religious Worſhip. The Pontificians therefore condemn themſelves by their Apology for their Saint-Invocation (excuſando exprobramus, we condemn our ſelves by our Excuſes:) Nor have they better ſerv'd their cauſe by the diſtinctions which they have fram'd, deceiving themſelves by Equivocation of words. (r) That we ought not to Pray to the Saints abſolutely and ultimately, as we Pray to God, as if what we ask was to be impetrated of them and fulfilled by them. (s) Prayer may be directed to one two ways: One way to have impletion by him, another way to be impetrated by him. But if what we ask is not to be impetrated of the Saints, why do they pray them to give it (to give it by their Merits and Prayers?) If effectual Impetration is that which they mean by Donation, then their Prayer is directed to the Saints, to have Impletion by them; and if they pray to the Saints to do the Deed for them (by their Mediatory Power) what is this but Impletion? Doubtleſs, their meaning is, they impetrate all manner of Bleſſings at the Saints Hands, as well as at God's Hands, but not upon the ſame account, nor in the ſame way. They impetrate them at God's Hands upon the account of his Authoritative-operative Power of proper formal Donation, and in the way of diſpenſing them: But they impetrate them at the Saints Hands (whom they call (t) the Senators of the Celeſtial Court) only upon account of their Intereſt at Court and in the way of procuring them. As if a Criminal ſhould kneel down to a potent Favourite at Court, and pray to the Courtier to give him his Pardon, Life and Safety, not meaning by a proper formal Donation, but by his Intereſt at Court. But if any ſhould pray to a Courtier in ſuch a ſtile, the ſtile of his Prayers would be thought much more than a begging his Interceſſion, it would be thought a making that Courtier King: So the Stile of the Church-Demonolatriſts Prayers muſt be thought much more than an ora pro nobis; it is a making the Saints Gods and cannot be excus'd from Blaſphemy and Idolatry.

VI. The Prayers of Patron-Saints are ſaid to have their Power and Prevalency upon the account of their great Merits (which therefore are a Branch of their Power,) whereby they are ſuppos'd to be qualified both to be Mediators of Interceſſion themſelves, and alſo to have their Merits and Interceſſion made uſe of in our Prayers. For (u) Sinners being deficient in Merit are taught to have recourſe to the Interceſſion and Merits of the Saints; they flee to the Saints to be ſaved by their Prayers and Merits; and the Saints are ſaid to offer their Prayers and Merits for the obtaining our Salvation, ſo that God is mercifully reconcil'd to us becauſe of their Prayers and Merits (w) and giveth us many Benefits by their Merit and Favour. The Church repoſeth ſuch Affiance in their Merits, that ſhe prayeth for all her Bleſſings Secular and Spiritual through their Merits and Interceſſion, and the Prayers of this Form every where occur in her publick Service. (x) By the Prayers and Merits of B. Mary always a Virgin and all the Saints let the Lord bring us to the Kingdom of Heaven. Sometimes ſhe prayeth, to have them her Interceſſors and Defenſors (as touching S. Ambroſe; (y) Grant us to have him our Interceſſor in Heaven;) which ſheweth, that ſhe looketh upon them as Interceſſors by Divine Conſtitution and appointment. Sometimes ſhe expreſſeth the mighty Truſt which ſhe repoſeth in their Interceſſion; as, Let thy Church rejoice, O God, which truſteth in the Suffrages of B. Agapetus the Martyr. Sometimes ſhe maketh acknowledgment, that the Benefits which ſhe hath obtained (as help out of Tribulation) are from the Merits of the Saints whom ſhe commemorateth; and oftentimes ſhe prayeth, that her Oblations (even the Sacrifice of the Maſs) may be accepted by the Prayers and Merits of the Saints. Agreeably to her Senſe one of her Divines ſaith; (z) Becauſe we are apt to be afraid of God, and therefore of the Divine Majeſty of the Son, he would have us to have a Mother, whoſe Love is wont to be more tender, to be our Advocate, to reconcile us to her Son, and by whom our Prayers and Sacrifices might be offer'd, that by this Ladder we might go unto God without trembling fear, by the Mother to the Son, and by the Son to the Father. So the Greek Church prayeth agreeably to the Senſe of the Latin Church, (a) Thou, O God, art holy, holy, holy; for the ſake of the Mother of God have Mercy upon us. (b) The Hebrews us'd to pray, that God would be beneficent to the People for the Fathers ſake, Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob and David: But now a new way of praying is taught, through Chriſt. Joh. 14. 13. Such is the new and Chriſtian way of praying: But the Church-Demonolatriſts have excogitated another new way of praying, for the ſake of the Mother of God, whom they account their paramount Advocatreſs (the Advocatreſs of Sinners, and in Conſort with her they have introduc'd into Religion ſwarms of Courtier-Mediators and Advocates beſides the Royal Mediator Chriſt Jeſus. Which Hypotheſis of theirs communicateth to the Patron-Saints not a few of the incommunicable Prerogatives of our Royal Mediator. For the Name of Patron, Mediator, (r) Fran. à Sanct. Clara probl. 37.

(s) Aquin. 22. Qu. 83. Art. 4.

(t) Petav. ſupr. l. 14. c. 9. S. 14.

(u) Chemnic. ſupr. p. 578, &c.

(w) Catechiſm. ex Decr. Concil. Triden. p. 426.

(x) Precibus & meritis B. Mariæ ſemper Virginis & omnium ſanctorum, perducat nos Dominus ad regna cælorum. Offic. B. Mar. in Sabbato.

(y) Dallæus de rel. cult. object. p 402, 403, &c.

(z) Biel in Feſt. Aſſumpt. Ser. 2. & in Feſt. Nativ. Ser. 2.

(a) Mr. Smith's Account. p. 232

(b) Grot. Not. in Joh. 14. 13.

Advocate and Interceſſor, denoteth an Officiary Dignity; and if the Bl. Virgin and the other Saints are Patrons and Mediators by Divine Conſtitution and Appointment, they muſt neceſſarily be ſuch in the Nature and Notion of an Officiary Dignity, which is the incommunicable Prerogative of the Son of God. And as none but Chriſt can have the Officiary Dignity of Mediator and Advocate, ſo to reſide at Court in the Quality and Condition of ſuch an Officiary Dignity is another incommunicable property of our Royal Mediator; for it belongeth not to any He or She-Saint, to appear in the Preſence of God for us as our Patron and Advocate, and by his Patronage to recommend us to God. Chriſt is alſo robb'd of his ſole Mediatorſhip, and his Mediatorſhip is diſparag'd as inſufficient by introducing a Fry of Potent Mediators, which are as much Saviours of Interceſſion (tho' not of Redemption) as Chriſt himſelf is. For as they have their Clients and Suppliants in common with Chriſt, ſo there is nothing which Chriſt as a Saviour of Interceſſion doth or can do for his Clients, but the Patron-Saints do and can do the ſame for theirs; and therefore they make them no leſs than Magnificent Interceſſional Saviours. They make them their Saviours at ſuch a rate, as is an heinous violation of our Saviour's Honour; and the enormous Affiance and Hope which theſe blind Superſtitioniſts repoſe in the Patronage, Court-intereſt, Merits and Interceſſion of their imaginary Patrons (to which they have recourſe in all Wants and Dangers Secular and Spiritual; to which they aſcribe the Benefits that they receive, and on which they place their Dependence; promiſing themſelves (c) that the Saints will obtain for thoſe that recommend themſelves to their Patronage Remiſſion of Sins and Salvation) can be nothing leſs than the Crime of Idolatry. A like Criminal and Oppoſite to the very Frame of our Religion is their extravagant Conceit, that every Patron-Saint is Merit, Righteouſneſs, Acceptation with God to his Client. (d) That the Bl. Virgins Virtue and Grace compenſateth our Faults and Vices, (e) her Integrity excuſeth with her Son the fault of our Corruption, her acceptable Humility impetrateth Pardon for our Vanity, her copious Charity covereth the multitude of our Sins, and her glorious Fecundity conferreth upon us a Fecundity of Merits. The Church (as the ſtile of her Prayers demonſtrateth) hath recourſe to her Patron-Saints for Merit, Righteouſneſs, Acceptation with God; which implieth, that Chriſt is not ſufficient to furniſh her; and if theſe may be had in the Saints, they are raiſed to a Chriſt-like Excellency and Tranſcendency. As if they were Mediatory Heads of their People, the various Honours which are done them and their Reliques, are ſaid to be deſign'd for this end, (f) that their Clients may Conſociate with their Merits, and ſhare in them, which was one of the Conceits of the elder times; for S. Auſtin reporteth, (g) that in his Days at the Feſtival Commemoration of the Martyrs many brought their Meats to be ſanctified by the Martyrs Merits. Beſides the Phantaſtry and Sillineſs which is viſible in theſe Conceits, and their injurioufneſs to the Souls of Men (which are deluded with falſe Reliances,) they are intolerably injurious to our Saviour; for if the Merits and Interceſſion of the Patron-Saints are made the Ground and Reaſon of the acceptance of our Perſons and Services with God, of the audience of our Prayers and of his Donation of Benefits, are they not ſubſtituted in Chriſts ſtead? Which is plainly demonſtrable from one ſort of thoſe Prayers, which the Church maketh for Bleſſings, through the Merits and Interceſſion of the Saints. The Prayers of this kind are ſome of them made to God the Father, at the end of which the Church ſubjoineth (per Dominum) through our Lord. As in the Canon of the Maſs; communicating and reverencing the Memory of all thy Saints, by whoſe Merits and Prayers grant that in all things we may be guarded by thy Protection and Help through Chriſt our Lord. Another ſort of theſe Prayers are made, not through, but to Chriſt our Lord; and ſo the Church prayeth, (h) That by the aid of S. Peter's Interceſſion we may be freed from the Bond of our Sins, and that by the Merits of S. Peter and S. Paul we may obtain the Glory of Eternity. The Prayers of the firſt ſort Aſſociate Courtier-Mediators with the Royal Mediator, and rob him of his ſole Mediatorſhip; the Prayers of the ſecond ſort put him out of the place of Mediator; his place in this Religion of Church-Demonolatry is the place of God the Father (whoſe Propriety it is, not to be acceſſible but by a meritorious and interceſſional Mediator,) and the Courtier-Mediators are introduc'd into and ſubſtituted in his place, according to that Maxim of S. Bernard; opus eſt Mediatore ad Mediatorem, there needeth a Mediator to the Mediator. In Simeon Metaphraſtes there are ſeveral Prayers of the Martyrs (forg'd by thoſe abominable Lyars, the Eccleſiaſtic Legendaries,) wherein they Pray to Chriſt, that whoſoever ſhould Pray unto him in their Names, or ask Salvation and Mercy through them, or Worſhip the Tabernacle of their Body, might obtain whatever they ask; and Chriſt is ſaid to have come down and ſpoken to thoſe new Mediators, the Martyrs, and to have aſſur'd them, that what they deſir'd ſhould be done. So in an ancient Saxon Manuſcript S. George at his Martyrdom is ſaid to have pray'd to the Lord, (i) that whoſoever ſhall in any Danger either by Sea or elſewhere, uſe my Name, thou wilt be merciful to him. Then came a Voice from Heaven ſaying, come thou bleſſed, and whoſoever ſhall in any Danger or Place call on my Name through thee, him will I hear. To authorize this ſort of Praying (through the Merits of the Saints) the Church-Demonolatriſts argue; that Moſes prayeth * alledging the Merits of Saints deceas'd; Remember Abraham, Iſaac and Iſrael thy Servants. God promiſeth to Protect Jeruſalem for his Servant David's Sake, and ſheweth Mercy unto Thouſands of them that Love him. But theſe places of Scripture which they alledge, are impertinent to their Caſe, for they concern only Temporal Bleſſings, in reſpect of which Concernments God (uſually) conſidereth Men, and proceedeth with them, not meerly in their Perſonal, but in their Politic and Relative Capacity (their Family or National Capacity;) the Seed of the Righteous are bleſs'd for their ſake, a ſort of Righteouſneſs accrueth to them from their Parents; and the Poſterity of Evil-doers fare the worſe for their ſake, a ſort of Criminality accrueth to them from their Parents. But there is no ſuch Relation between the Saints Religioniſts and their fictitious Patrons: nor doth God conſider and proceed with Men in ſuch Politic Relative Capacity in reſpect of their Spiritual and Eternal Intereſts.

VII. The

(c) Manual of Pray. and Lit. printed at Antwerp An. 1658. p. 352.

(d) Biel in Feſt.Nativ. Ser. 1.

(e) Laurent. Surii Homil. in Feſt. Annunciat. Ser. 3.

(f) Caſſandr. conſult. de ven. Reliqu.

(g) De C. D. l. 8. c. ult.

(h) Brev. Rom. in Feſt. & in Octav.S.S. Apoſt. Petr. & Paul.

(i) Selden. Titles of Hon. P. 2. p. 673. ed. 3.

* Bellarm. de ſanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 19. Fr. à ſanct. clar. probl. 37.

VII. The Goodneſs or Beneficialneſs for which the Patron-Saints are celebrated in Church-Demonolatry, is the operative Goodneſs of their Nature, the immenſity of their good Works, the beneficialneſs of their Patronage, and unbounded Beneficence to their Suppliants. They are ſaid (k) to have a Commiſeration for Sinners, to incline to our Prayers with a favourable Piety, and to receive us into their Bowels, ſo often as we knock at their Door with a worthy Intention. (l) It is lawful to Pray to the Saints, to have Mercy or Commiſeration upon us, for they are moſt merciful; therefore we may Pray them, that being mov'd with the Miſery of our Condition, they help us by their Favour with God and Deprecation. So frail and weariſom Mortality mindful of its own infirm Condition (as Pliny ſpeaketh) is taught in its Neceſſities (m) to flee to the Grace, the help and aid of the Saints; and more eſpecially to flee for refuge to the Bl. Virgin (n) under thy Patronage we flee, holy Mother of God: Deſpiſe not our Prayers in our Neceſſities, but always deliver us from all Dangers, O glorious and bleſſed Virgin. This Patronage of the Saints is אליל nothing, as an Idol is; for by the Inſtitution of God-Society (or Saint-Society) we are to live in Society with the Saints as Fellow-Citizens and Fellow-Servants, with God and our Redeemer as our ſole beneficent Patron-ſuperiority. The Church-Demonolatry therefore hath erected an Idol by ſetting up the Patronage of the Saints: A Patronage that muſt be gain'd by Offices of Piety towards them, as the Divine Patronage muſt be gain'd by Piety towards God; a Patronage that ingageth Men to diligence in the Service of the Saints, as pious People are diligent in the Service of God; a Patronage which is ſuppos'd to be All-beneficial, nor can God's own Clients expect more from his Patronage, than the Saints Religioniſts expect and promiſe themſelves from theirs, and therefore muſt be thought not leſs deſerving Affiance, Love and Gratitude, nor leſs deſirable than that of God and Chriſt, as being no leſs beneficial. For the Church (communicating a principal Divine attribute to a Creature) intituleth the Bl. Virgin with Reſpect to her Patronage (o) omnia omnibus, All unto All. If a Saint is a beneficent Patroneſs to all her Suppliants throughout the World and relieveth all their needs (whether by her Mediatory Power or otherwiſe, ſhe is of immenſe Goodneſs and Beneficialneſs,) as the Ave-Mary Religioniſts uſually ſay of their Patroneſs, (p) The Earth is full of her Mercy. The ſame immenſity of good Works a Greek Marianolatriſt aſcribeth to the Saints in general, (q) Although their Reliques are circumſcrib'd in their Sepulchres, yet their Salutary Virtue is not circumſcrib'd under Heaven. Such ſuperlative Beneficence is viſible in thoſe Miracles, which are ſaid, to have been wrought at the Monuments of the Martyrs in the elder times (which firſt begat a Perſwaſion in the Minds of Men, that the Matyrs were willing and able to help them; for the Devotioniſts of thoſe times that in vaſt concourſe frequented the Tombs of the Martyrs, (r) prayed for and obtain'd Safety for themſelves and their Cattel; the Sepulchres of the Martyrs were a Refuge for the calamitous, an Haven of Tranquility in the troubles and tempeſts of Life, where penuries were relieved, Diſeaſes were healed, minacious Rulers were placated, and the Devils (neither ſcar'd nor hurt) were made to roar. The Petitions of the Pagano-Chriſtians of thoſe elder times were of the ſame Nature with the popular Pagans Religion (whoſe principal Deſign in their God-ſervice was worldly Proſperity and to be deliver'd from worldly Calamities,) as they are deſcrib'd by S. Baſil and Theodoret to this Senſe: (s) They that are in Health and Proſperity betake themſelves to the Martyrs for the Conſervation of it; they that conflict with a Diſeaſe or any Affliction flee to them for Deliverance. The Religious Woman prayeth to the Forty Martyrs for her Children, her Husbands return from a Journey, his Health in Sickneſs. They that are barren and ſuch as have no Children, pray to have them; and they that have them pray to have them kept ſafe and ſound. And they that have a Journey to go, pray the Marytrs to be their Companions and Guides, who are ſaid to have been ſo officious to their Clients in thoſe days, (t) that none of them made his Prayer in vain. Such a Fame ſpread abroad touching the Beneficence and Salutary aids of the Saints and Martyrs, could not fail to attract Suppliants innumerable, and effectually lapſe the Church into Demonolatry. But as the Pagans over-officious Demons were not always alike officious, their Suppliants were ſometimes forc'd (u) to treat them minaciouſly, (that if they deny'd their Requeſts, they would rend the Heavens, divulge the Secrets of Iſis, or that in Abydos, ſtop Baris, diſperſe the Members of Oſiris to Typhon: So thoſe impure Demons that play'd their Pranks, and wrought counterfeit Miracles under the Name of Chriſtian Martyrs, were ſometimes threatned into compliance by their Clients and Suppliants. As when the Church of S. Metrias was robb'd by a potent Courtier and his Accomplices, the Biſhop of the Church thus beſpeaketh the Patron-Saint. (w) No Candle ſhall be lighted here (at the Sepulchre,) nor ſhall there be any ſinging of Pſalms, moſt glorious Saint, unleſs thou firſt avenge thy Servants of their Enemies, and reſtore to thy Holy Church the things that are violently taken away. Such minacious forms of ſupplicating the Patron-Saints (x) are not unuſual in the Church of Rome: But uſually in the elder times the Church-Demonolatriſts met with ſuch officious Spirits that eaſily gratify'd their Deſires touching ſecular Intereſts though never ſo fooliſh and unreaſonable (a Sign that they were no good Spirits;) which becauſe they ſuppos'd the Spirits of the Martyrs, and that all the great things that were done for their Suppliants, (y) were the Benefits of the Martyrs, done by their Powers, they preſum'd that ſuch Beneficent Supernal Powers were not unable to Patronize their Suppliants as to their Spiritual and Eternal Intereſts. And therefore they promis'd themſelves from their Patronage (z) Remiſſion of Sins, Reconciliation with God, Safety from the capital Sentence, Victory over Temptation, Succour in Tribulation; to be commended to God, to have audience of Prayer, Defence and Protection at the Day of Judgment, and to be Partakers of the Martyrs beatitude.

Agreeably to which Conceits of the elder times the preſent Church's Books of Devotion are fill'd with Prayers to Saints for all ſorts of Benefits Publick and Private, Secular and Spritual, (To grant their Suppliants deliverance from Diſeaſes, Dangers, ſudden Death, from impure Thoughts, Scandal, Mortal Sin, from the Frands of the Devil and all Evils ghoſtly and bodily;

(k) Petav. ſupr. c. 11. S. 18.

(l) Catechiſm. ex decret. Concil. Trid. p. 561.

(m) Ad Sanctorum gratiam, opem auxiliumque confugere. Catechiſm. Ibid. p. 427.

(n) Sub tuum præſidium confugimus ſancta Dei Genetrix, noſtras Deprecationes ne deſpicias in neceſſitatibus, ſed à periculis cunctis libera nos ſemper, Virgo glorioſa & Benedicta. Offic. parv. B. Mar.

(o) V. Caſſian. Catal. Glor. mund. P. 3. fol. 78.

(p) Bellarm. controv. T. 4. l. 1. c. 15. de orat.

(q) Proclus orat. 5.

(r) Petav. ſupr. c. 10. S. 9. c. 11. S. 14. c. 13. S. 3.

(s) Ibid. c. 10. S. 4, 16.

(t) Ibid. c. 11. S. 14, c. 13. S. 3.

(u) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 147.

(w) Baron. ad an. 579. n. 15, 16.

(x) Dallæus de rel. cult object p. 95. 522.

(y) Petav. ſupr. c. 10. S. 16. & c. 11. S. 11.

(z) Ibid. & c. 11. S. 18.

dily; to give them Pardon of Sin and all Virtues and increaſe of Grace; to give them the Everlaſting Kingdom, and to increaſe the Church's Glory;) God and the Saints are pray'd to in the ſame form of words, in the ſame form of words that the Heathens pray'd to their Deities (although ſome (a) have the confidence to deny it;) for it muſt be ſaid, that ever ſince the riſe of Church-Demonolatry the Patron-Saints have been look'd upon as δωτῆρες ἑάων, the Donors of Goods (of miraculous Relief and Salutary Benefits to their Suppliants) as well as the Heathen Deities, and have been pray'd to accordingly. The innumerable Miracles which are ſaid to have been wrought for the relief of the Suppliants of Saints and Martyrs, are uſually called their Works, Gifts, Benefits. Illinc pia dona dat patronus, from the ſupernal Region the Patron giveth pious gifts, ſaith Prudentius in his Hymn touching S. Cyprian. S. Martin is ſaid (b) petita donaſſe, to have given what his Suppliant ask'd. The Saints are ſaid (c) to anſwer their Suppliants Prayers, to be with them in Tribulation, (d) to be propitious to them when their Prayers prevail, and they acknowledge the Saints the Donors of their Bleſſings, for they pay their Thankſgivings and Thank-offerings to thoſe pretended Patrons. All this is acknowledg'd by the Church-Demonolatriſts, but their Pretenſion is, that they ſuppoſe the Saints to be only a meritorious and interceſſional ſort of Donors. Which Pretenſion is not true, and if it was true, it is not to the purpoſe; for ſuch a ſort of Donors may be as Beneficent Patrons to their Suppliants; Mankind may be as obſervant of them, as dependant upon them, as thankful to them, and as great Religioniſts towards them, as if they had a Subordinate Authoritative-Operative Power of formal Donation of Benefits. The beneficent Patronage of the Saints which the Church-Demonolatriſts have erected, is their great Idol, and all their foul Demonolatry (which is Idolatry) is the legitimate and neceſſary conſequence of it. Thereby alſo their method of Religion is agreeable to the method of the Ancient Religion, as Ficinus calleth it; (e) which was, to proceed orderly and gradually downwards and upwards; downwards from the Supream Deity by the Gods and Demons; and upwards, by the Demons and the Gods to the Supream Deity. So in the Religion of Church-Demonolatry, (f) The Law of God is, to bring the loweſt by the middle to the Supream; but as to the Gifts of Grace the Saints are medioxumous between God and us Viators; the Divine Benefits therefore deſcend to us by the Mediating Angels and Holy Souls.

VIII. Becauſe the preſent Church and her Theologers are not the Inventors and Founders of Church-Demonolatry, the beſt Method of underſtanding the true Nature of it and of the Miracles that authoris'd it (which many Learned Men ſuppoſe to be true Divine Miracles) is, to conſult the Senſe of the Church-Demonolatriſts of the elder times, of which the beſt Account that I know, is the Seleucian Baſil's Narrative of the Miracles of S. Thecla, an exact Parallel for the Romaniſts Queen of Heaven and Mother of Mercy. (g) “For to the Temple of this Patron-Saint (a publick Phyſick-ſhop and the common Propitiatory of the whole Earth) both Citizens and Strangers reſorted in vaſt numbers, partly for Prayer, doing Honour, and making their Oblations and Conſecrations to her; and partly to be help'd againſt their Ailments and heal'd of their Diſeaſes (as now the Pilgrims reſort to Loretto to be cur'd of all Diſeaſes:) Nor did any complain of Fruſtration, but return'd bleſſing and praiſing, the Miracles and Cures exceeded their Hopes. One Woman that was hurt by a Fall, being carry'd to her Temple, (h) beſought the Martyr with Tears and Lamentations, many and ſufficient to ſweeten the Virgin, and was cur'd within leſs than three Days. Scrape the filthy ſtuff (ſaid the Martyr) that is about my Apartment, and lay it to the part affected, and it will preſently remove the Pain. To a Noble Woman that was almoſt conſtantly with the Martyr, and continually urgent with her, ſhe gave a miraculous Refreſhment, dipping her Finger in a Baſon of Water and beſprinkling her. Another that had an Huſband extravagantly addicted to the love of other Women, betook her ſelf to the Martyr crying and curſing the Women; the Martyr was not averſe from her Supplication, but gave her this benefit, on a ſudden ſhe chang'd the Manners of her Huſband. The Nurſe of a Child that by overmuch crying was likely to loſe one of his Eyes, aſcendeth the Temple, and there continueth with Lamentations, Supplications and Tears, offereth the Child to the Martyr, ſheweth her the Hurt, prayeth her not to over-look the Child, whoſe Viſage was ſo deform'd; the Martyr ſaid nothing to the Nurſe, but a Bird (by the Martyr's command) leap'd upon the Child, and inſtead of picking out his Eye let out the ſuperfluous Humour. A Noble Woman (Calliſte) that had her Face very much deform'd by certain Artifices of Poyſon, which an Harlot of her Huſband made uſe of, fleeth to the Martyr, relateth her own Miſfortune, and the Harlot's Maleficence, prayeth for a Cure, that ſhe might recover her Beauty again and her Huſband's Affection. Theſe things the Martyr heareth, and was much mov'd at the Calamity (for the Woman ſent forth Rivers of Tears with her Words; plenty of Tears pour'd out from the bottom of the Soul being the beſt Condiment of Prayer) and preſently ſignifieth and preſcribeth a Remedy. Take (ſaid the Martyr) the Sweepings or Scrapings that are ſold before the Door of this Temple, and having wetted them with Wine, waſh thy Viſage with them, and thou ſhalt preſently waſh away the Deformity thereof. At a ſumptuous Wedding of the Daughter of one Paula an Arch-Thief, Eurybatus, ſtole a Girdle of great Precioſity, and hid it under Ground, which damp'd all their Mirth and chang'd it into Mourning. The Martyr ſeeing and obſerving all things, the Thief, Mourners, and the Wedding diſgrac'd, went to Paula and made a diſcovery of the Thief and of the place where his Prey was hid, whereby ſhe put an end to their Mourning and reſtor'd their Mirth. One ſtole a Croſs that was conſecrated to her, and hid it, which was an occaſion of Laughter to the Martyr, that the Thieves ſhould not hold their Hands from her, as if they could eſcape her τὸ πανδερκὲς ϗ θεῖον ὄμμα, omni-vident and Divine Eye. This Theft ſhe reveal'd to one of her Servitors and Attendants, and reſtor'd the Holy Croſs to its place. The Citizens of Seleucia being one Sum“ mer

(a) Ibid. c. 16. S. 13.

(b) Baron. ad an. 825. n. 25.

(c) Petav. ſupr. c. 10. S. 17.

(d) Baron. ad an. 560. n. 9.

(e) Argum. in Dial. 7. de Leg.

(f) Lex Deitatis eſt, infima per media ad ſuprema adducere: quantum verò ad dona gratiæ, Beati ſunt medii inter Deum & viatores. Divina igitur beneficia ad nos deſcendunt mediantibus Angelis & animabus ſanctis. Alex. Halenſ. P. 3. Tit. 3.

(g) De vit. S. Thecl. p. 276, 277.

(h) Mirac. 2. 3, 4, 8, 28, 5, 6, 21.

mer univerſally troubled with a Diſtemper of the Eyes, wherein methods of Phyſick had no place, the Martyr in the Night-time bade one of them, that they ſhould make uſe of the Water of her Temple, which being impregnated by the Martyr's Virtue, was found a Sovereign Remedy. They were afraid, that the Water ſhould have fail'd them, but there was no failure in the Martyr's Grace and Beneficence: She receiv'd them and ſent them back heal'd; (i) her Grace and Beneficence is an ever-flowing Fountain of Miracles and Curations. In another Summer exceſſively hot the Cattle dy'd of an unknown Diſeaſe; but the Martyr was not wanting in Benignity or Power, had compaſſion on them and provided a Remedy; a new Fountain of Water flowing out of a Cave (a delectable place, where the Martyr is thought to reſide for the moſt part, and a place commodious for Prayer, to obtain what one deſireth by Prayer from the Martyr) oppoſite to her Temple, where there is a Church or Chapel of hers. (k) Agreeably to the Mother of Mercy this Patron-Saint is ſaid to take care of calamitous and injur'd Perſons; and (as an inſtance of her Care) ſhe appear'd in a Dream to one Pappus, that cheated his Partner's Children, and denounc'd (from Chriſt) the Sentence of Death upon him. And as that infinitely ambitious Ghoſt, the Romaniſt's Queen, concerneth her ſelf in the Affairs of her Service and Worſhip, for her Honour reſenteth Affronts and Injuries at the higheſt rate, and is pleas'd extreamly with her own Vain-glorious Praiſes: “So this Patron-Ghoſt injoyned the People of the City Silenus, to build a Temple to her which ſhould be a defenſative againſt their Enemies: Such Power (which is ſo great (l) that all are healed by it) the Martyr demonſtrateth; by a little Temple ſhe turneth away furious Armies. S. Paul is ſaid to remove from Rome to Tarſus once a Year, * to be there, when his Feſtival is celebrated; thereby ſhewing his Honourers, that he is pleas'd with their Feſtival, and accepteth the Sacred Honours that are done him: S. Thecla in like manner once a Year removeth from Seleucia, to viſit her Temple at Daliſandus (a place for Air and Water, Herbs and Trees ſuperlatively pleaſant, and therefore the Martyr loveth it extreamly and taketh delight in it) at the time when her publick Feſtival is celebrated there ſumptuouſly and with great concourſe. They that watch the Night before her Feſtival, ſee her yearly at that time driving a Fiery Chariot in the Air in her remove to Daliſandus. Where having finiſh'd the Feſtival, and given her uſual Gifts to thoſe that come thither, ſhe returneth to Seleucia: Not as having left this her Temple; for the Eye of the Saints is not reſtrain'd or hinder'd from pervading all things always, what Regions, Nations and Cities they pleaſe, and when they pleaſe. So great is her regard for the Honour of her Temple, that when ſome attempted to bury a Corps in one of the Porches of it, the Martyr came upon them, chiding, reprehending their Boldneſs, and commanding them to be gone; and when they attempted it again a ſecond time, ſhe came upon them again with ſuch an angry look (the Martyr is terrible, not only when ſhe exerteth her Power, but if occaſion be, in her Looks) as made them ſhake and tremble in every Joynt, and had well nigh ſtruck them dead. Her concern is no leſs for the reputation of her Power; for when Dexianus (the Prefect of thoſe that look'd to her Temple) had carry'd the Silver and Golden Ornaments of her Temple into the City (Seleucia) to ſecure them from ſome Neighbouring Robbers, at Night the Temple was fill'd with Noiſe, Tumult and Clamour, the Virgin running up and down and crying, that Dexianus her Attendant had treated her as an Enemy, deſpoiled her of her Ornaments, and thought her weak and ungenerous, not able to protect her Temple and aid her Servitors. How highly this Magiſterial Goddeſs reſenteth Affronts and Injuries, (m) is viſible in her treatment of two drunken Men (which ſhould be a warning to others, to abſtain from things unworthy of the Martyr's Eyes) that in her Garden under her Eyes, had got one of her Virgins with deſign to defile her; but falling aſleep before the fact, the Martyr came upon them, with this ſevere Reprimand; Why is it, O ye moſt Improbous, that ye have taken my Dove out of mine Houſe, and would corrupt her? I will take care, that ye ſuffer condign Puniſhment for ſo audacious a crime; which accordingly came to paſs. (n) For the Martyr knoweth how to be beneficial to thoſe that do well, and how to puniſh the Impious. The Revengeful Humour of this Ghoſt is viſible in the Inſtance of Marianus Biſhop of Tarſus, who out of ſpight to the Biſhop of Seleucia forbad the Cilicians to reſort to the Martyrs Feſtival (ſo to rob her of her Praiſes;) “whereupon one Caſtor ſaw a Virgin with a fierce Countenance running all about the City, frequently clapping her Hands, crying out of Marianus, and the Injury done her, and threatning to puniſh him; which was ſpeedily done; for he ſurviv'd his Temerity not above five or ſix Days. Her Careſſes of Kindneſs are as extravagant as her Punitive Severity; (o) for ſhe is a lover of Oratory and Poeſy, and continually delighteth in thoſe that more oratorially ſet forth her Praiſes. “When this Author was writing her Miracles, and grew weary of his Labour, he telleth us; The Martyr (that us'd to appear to him at other times) ſeem'd to ſit by me in in my ſight, where I was wont to be at my Book, and to take the Quaternion out of my Hand, in which I tranſcrib'd theſe things out of my Table-Book, yea, and ſhe ſeem'd to read it, and to rejoyce and to ſmile, and to ſhew unto me by her Aſpect, that ſhe was pleas'd with the things that were written, and that I ought to finiſh this Labour. The Martyr (ſaith he) is ſuch a lover of Learning, and taketh ſuch delight in theſe Oratorial Praiſes, that I will tell ſomewhat of thoſe things that were done to my ſelf, and for my ſelf, which the Martyr that did it, knoweth to have been done, and that I do not lye. When her Anniverſary Feſtival was to be celebrated, and I had made a ſmall Oration to the praiſe of it (that I might gain ſome Favour from the Martyr; for thoſe that honour her but a little, ſhe knoweth to reward with the greateſt things;) the Day before it was to be pronounc'd, a grievous Pain in the Ear befell me, ſo that I deſpair'd of pronouncing my Oration, and I began to be aſham'd, becauſe the moſt would think, that I had flinch'd from my Work. But at Night the Martyr ſtood by me, and ſhaking mine Ear took all the Pain away, and gave me ſuch

(i) De vit. S. Thecl. p. 276. Mirac. S. Thecl. p. 312.

(k) Mirac. 20, 11, 10, 15, 17.

(l) Mirac. 26.

* The Heathen Gods were thought to viſit their Cities at their Solemn Feſtivals. V. Marſham Can. Chron. p. 54. ed. Lipſ.

(m) Mirac. 19, 13, 14.

(n) Mirac. 12.

(o) Mirac. 24, 27, 16.

“ Force and ſuch a Grace, that I ſpoke to the greateſt Admiration. Alypius the Grammarian betook himſelf to the Martyr, to be cur'd of a dangerous Diſeaſe; becauſe of her love to Secular Learning, ſhe made haſt, to do his Buſineſs for him. At Night ſhe appear'd to him (in her Temple) ask'd him what his Malady was, and what he deſir'd? He anſwer'd her in the words of Achilles in Homer to his Mother Thetis (thereby ſhewing his Art and gaining the Martyr's Favour by ſo apt a Verſe.)

Οἶσθα, τίη τοι ταῦτ᾽ εἰδυίῃ πάντ᾽ ἀγορεύω.

Thou knoweſt, why ſhould I tell it thee, that knoweſt all?

“ The Martyr ſmiling at it, and being delighted partly with the Man and partly with the Verſe, and admiring that he had anſwer'd ſo aptly, reach'd to him a fine Stone, which had the Power of profligating his Diſeaſe, becauſe, as I ſuppoſe, the Martyr's Hand had touch'd it.

This portentous Narrative I have compendiouſly but faithfully tranſlated, not with deſign to debate the Matters of Fact (which are agreeable to the lewd Conceits and loud Lyes of other Eccleſiaſtic Writers touching the Glories and Miracles of the Martyrs;) but to repreſent the true Nature of Church-Demonolatry from the riſe of it; how lamentable a ſtate the Chriſtian Church hath been in ever ſince thoſe times; and how intolerable the Communion of the Church of Rome is, that retaineth and improveth the Inſtitutes (Idolatrous and Demonolatrous) of thoſe elder times. The Church Demonolatry of thoſe times will appear to any that are not Sots and Superſtitioniſts, the Image and Subſtitute of the Pagan Demonolatry; It was plainly a Religion, or an Inſtitution of Religious Service to the Saints and Martyrs; they were worſhipp'd, not only as Interceſſional, but as great Authoritative-operative Powers; innumerable Miracles are ſaid to have been wrought by S. Thecla's wonder-working Goodneſs and Power (as the other S. Baſil ſaith of S. Julitta; (p) That when her Reliques were brought to a certain place, that wanted Water, preſently a Fountain of ſweet Water flow'd out of the Earth; ſo that that Saint might ſeem as a Mother, or Common Nurſe, to nouriſh that whole Region with her Milk;) the indigent World made her their Refuge in all the Exigencies of Humane Life, had recourſe to her Temple for doing her Honour and making their Oblations; the Prayers which they made to her were abſolute Prayer, ſhe anſwer'd the Prayers of her Suppliants, was the Donor of their Benefits, and ſeverely puniſh'd Offences againſt her Ladiſhip. (q) Her Suppliants communicated to her the Divine Attributes at a great rate, in ſuch reſpect ſhe was made nothing leſs than a Subordinate Pagan Deity, and agreeably to the Pagan Deities ſhe had her Churches or Chappels dedicated to her, her Temple wherein ſhe reſided, the Furniture of it was her Goods, the Officers of it her Officers, the Virgins were her Virgins, and the Croſs her Croſs. She had her Feſtival Solemnity for her Honour and Service, and was delighted with her own vain-glorious Praiſes, was a lover of the Pagan Learning, of the fine things and Vanities of the World, and was in all reſpects conformable to the Genius and Humour, the Follies and Vitioſities of the Pagan Deities. And like an imperious impoſtorous Demon (that contemneth Mankind, and delighteth to put ſhams and abuſes upon them) ſhe would have the very filth and naſtineſs of her Houſe reputed Sacred Stuff, and made uſe of as of ſovereign wonder-working Virtue. Whence it is manifeſt, that if her Story is not meer legend and fable, if there is any thing of conſiderable truth in it, the Church-Demonolatry in the elder times was Demonolatry in the foul Senſe, by her Saint-worſhip the Church relaps'd in great degree under the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World, and worſhipp'd impure Demons under the Names of Patron-Saints and Martyrs. Something of this nature is acknowledg'd by the Pontifician Theologers; for they ſay, (r) without Canonization (which is not infallible) the People may eaſily miſtake, and worſhip damn'd Ghoſts inſtead of Saints. (s) It is not certain and of Faith, that all whom they venerate are real Saints. It is probable, that in enrolling a vaſt number of Saints (forty or fifty thouſand) ſome may have paſt the Muſter, that belong to another Cenſus, and the Lives of many of them demonſtrate, that they were Perſons of another Character: For even Card. Beſſarion living at Rome found, (t) that many were ſainted by the Church, whoſe Lives and Actions were not approvable. Themſelves tell us, (u) that at a place not far from Evora in Portugal call'd the Cave of Martyrs, a Biſhop and Martyr famous for miraculous Cures was worſhipped by the Name of Viarius, whom a Learned Man of their Church diſcover'd (by an Inſcription) to have been nothing better than a Pagan Overſeer of the Highways (viarum curandarum;) that Pope Alexander the Third (w) rebuked ſome in his time for worſhipping one as an holy Martyr, who had been kill'd in a drunken fray; that Sulpitius reporteth of a certain People, that they worſhipp'd a certain dead Man for a Martyr, and that at the Prayer of S. Martin (who ſuſpected their Religion, becauſe he had no certain account of any ſuch Saint from his Anceſtors) the Soul of this pretended Martyr appear'd to him, and confeſs'd, that it was the Soul of a certain Robber, who had ſuffered capital Puniſhment for his Crimes. If the Souls of improbous dead Men ſubſtitute themſelves in the place of Saints and Martyrs, is it not reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that improbous Demons play the ſame pranks? The Miracles and Oracles in Paganiſm were the Operations of impure Spirits, that counterfeited the Souls of the Dead, and were call'd by their Names; and as Tertullian ſaith of that Evil Power which the Pagans ador'd, (x) lurking under the Names and Images of the Dead, by certain Signs, Miracles and Oracles it gaineth a belief of its Divinity: So the Church Demonolatry was introduc'd by Viſions, Revelations, Apparitions, Miracles, wrought by impure Spirits, that counterfeited deceas'd Saints and Martyrs, and were call'd by their Names. For Viſions, Revelations, Apparitions and Miracles which contradict God's Religion eſtabliſh'd upon uncontrollable Miracles, are certainly the Artifices of Improbous Demons (Lying Wonders, 2 Theſſ. 2. 9.) as Caſſander complaineth. (y) By the Craft and Illuſion of the Devil abuſing the Superſtition of Men in Dreams and Viſions new Reliques were reveal'd, and by his Operation ſeeming Miracles were wrought. The Viſions and Revelations which Egwin of Worceſter (about the Year 712.) pretended to have receiv'd, whereby he was enjoyn'd, to ſet up in his Dioceſs (of Worceſter) the Image of the Bl. Virgin for the People to worſhip, were either forged Lyes or the Illuſions of Devils. And ſuch are thoſe Ghoſts or Spirits that appear and work

(p) Orat. in S. Julit.

(q) De Mirac. S. Thecl. p. 281.

(r) Bellar. de ſanct. Beat. l. 1. c. 7.

(s) Vaſqu. in 3. Th. T. 1. Diſp. 97. c. 3.

(t) Bodin. Meth. Hiſt. c. 4.

(u) Reſſen. Ep. ad Barthol. Kebed p. 168.

(w) Bellar. ſupr.

(x) Apologet. c. 22.

(y) Conſult. de vener. Reliqu.

work Miracles in the Names of the Martyrs, that inhabit their Temples and animate their Images, furniſhing them with all ſorts of vital Motions (Sweating, Speaking, removing themſelves from place to place;) theſe are both the Thieves and the Receivers of the Church-Demonolatriſts Worſhip. For both in the Greek and Latin Church they worſhip the inviſible Prefects or Preſidents of Wells and Fountains, of Kingdoms, Provinces and Cities; which inviſible Prefects were anciently the Pagan Demons; and if the Church-Demonolatriſts have not diſpoſſeſs'd thoſe Demons, and ſhar'd their Provinces amongſt their Canoniz'd Saints (which aſſuredly they have not been able to do) thoſe Pagan Demons* ſtill continue in poſſeſſion, and conſequently they are the Receivers of the Church-Demonolatriſts Worſhip, which is directed to thoſe inviſible Prefects. When our Anceſtors worſhipp'd, (z) the Prefect or Preſident of War, ſeeing Chriſtianity knoweth no Preſident of War, that Pagan Demon the old Heathen Mars muſt neceſſarily be thought the Receiver of their Worſhip. Nor muſt this heavy charge upon the Church-Demonolatriſts be thought over-heavy, ſeeing the holy Oracles have laid this Burden upon them. Apoc. 9. 20. And the reſt of the Men which were not killed by theſe Plagues (that is, the Weſtern part of the Roman Empire, that was only afflicted, not kill'd by the Turks or Euphratean Horſemen) yet repented not of the Works of their Hands, that they ſhould not worſhip Devils, and Idols of Gold and Silver. Τὰ δαιμόνια is rightly render'd by our Tranſlation Devils, although in the Writings of the Pagans it ſignifieth in a good or indifferent ſenſe the middle inviſible Powers; and thus ſome of the Learned ſuppoſe it to ſignifie in this place; but this is not the Scriptural Notion of the word: And in this Apocalyptic Deſcription of Idol-worſhip it is moſt agreeable to underſtand it in the ſame Senſe as the Apoſtle uſeth it in his Deſcription of the Gentiles Idolatry, where it certainly ſignifieth Devils, 1 Cor. 10. 20. The things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to Devils.

IX. The Pagan Theologers look upon the Powers above (a) as one Colledge or θεῖον σύστημα, Divine Syſtem: So the Pontifician Theologers conſider God and the reigning Saints as one Syſtem of Supernal Powers (ſo far are they from obſerving a due diſtance between God and Creatures) as appeareth from the Paganical Language of their Learned Writers. For to a Syſtem of Supernal Powers they aſcribe their Aid and the Succeſs of their Affairs, (b) Chriſt and thoſe above favouring (Chriſto ſuperiſque faventibus) by the manifeſt aid of God and thoſe above, (evidenti plane Dei ſuperumque auxilio:) To this Supernal Syſtem they make their Prayers and pay their Thankſgivings, (c) may God and all the Supernals take notice of ſuch a Wickedneſs, (Deus ac ſuperi omnes tale flagitium advertant) having made his Prayers to God, and ſuppliantly implor'd the aid of all the Celeſtials (ſuis ad Deum precibus & Cæleſtium univerſorum opè ſuppliciter implorata) having given thanks to Chriſt the Lord and thoſe above, (Chriſto Domino ſuperiſque gratulatus,) firſt of all they give praiſe and thanks to God and thoſe above, and chiefly to their Patron S. James (primum omnium Deo ſuperiſque ac patrono præſertim Divo Jacobo laudes grateſque agunt:) This Supernal Syſtem is the Object of their Piety and Religion, (d) a Man of excellent Piety and Religion towards God and thoſe above (vir excellenti in Deum ſuperoſque pietate ac religione:) Their Piety is (e) in Deum & ſuperos omnes ac beatam præcipue Dei matrem obſervantia, a religious regard towards God and all the Supernal Powers, chiefly the Bl. Mother of God; and accordingly they make their Prayers, (f) earneſtly imploring help of God and the Celeſtials, eſpecially of the Virgin Mother of God, that the moſt gracious Queen of Heaven would not neglect the Concerns of Chriſtians commended to her by Chriſt her Son. In this Supernal Syſtem the Bl. Virgin is of Supereminent Condition, and of diſtinct Conſideration from meer Saints. The ſwelling Titles and Attributes which the Pontificians have heap'd upon her, and the extravagant Honours that are done her in their Religion, amount to nothing leſs than Divinity, are nothing leſs than Immenſity; yet the Habeſſines are ſaid (g) to bear ſuch an affectionate Reverence to the moſt holy Virgin, that they think whatever the Church of Rome hath invented to her Honour, all too little. When they were in a Rage againſt thoſe of the Roman Religion, and purſu'd them in their Fury with Sticks and Stones, they cry'd out kill, kill; whoever is not an Enemy of Mary, let him take up a Stone to ſtone her Enemies to Death. Some of thoſe ſwelling Titles and Attributes which the Marianolatriſts have invented, and to which they endeavour to make new Additions (the Names of prodigious Phantaſtry) are Attributes of Greatneſs, and others are properly Attributes of Goodneſs; in both ſorts of Attributes their μεγαλυσμοὶ, or Doxologies, tranſcend all Dimenſions, and are too numerous to be recounted; but the ſummary comprehenſion of them all is that famous honorary Attribute of θεοτόκος, or θεομήτωρ, the Mother of God. So the Church ſpake in the Days of Neſtorius (who quarrell'd with this Attribute upon erroneous grounds) Μαριὰμ θεοτόκος, Mary the Mother of God. And it muſt be acknowledg'd, that this Attribute, if underſtood with due Diſtinction, Limitation and Abatement of Senſe (not without it) may admit of a true and good Senſe; which yet doth not hinder, but that in the natural ſignification of it, and as it is underſtood in Marianolatry, it is an Attribute extreamly ſinful and erroneous, blaſphemous and idolatrous. For,

(1.) This Honourary Title in the natural ſignification of it and as it is underſtood in Marianolatry, denoteth the Bl. Virgin to be the Mother of God definitively and abſolutely ſo, of the Perſon of Almighty God. But although our Bl. Saviour is truly God, yet he is not God definitively and abſolutely (to be underſtood without Limitation) nor the Perſon of God; for in the Chriſtian Trinity there is but one, that is the Perſon of God, and the Father alone is He, as will be copiouſly diſcours'd hereafter. Agreeably whereto a grand Marianolatriſt giveth this account of the Name which the Angel gave our Saviour. (h) He ſhall be called, not God (although truly God) but the Son of God, to make a Diſcrimination of our Saviour conceiv'd in the Womb from the Father and the Holy Spirit. The Son is the Son of God, and the Holy Spirit is the Spirit of God, and this is the ordinary and uſual Language of Religion. Therefore ſpeaking according to the ordinary and uſual Language of Religion, it is abſurd and irreligious to ſay, that any one is the Father of God; and it cannot be leſs abſurd and irreligious to ſay, that any one is the Mother of God. To make this Title the Mother of God, the ordinary and uſual Language of our Religion, is to make the ordinary and uſual Language of our Religion contradictory to it ſelf. And (which is a far greater incongruity) there is a real groſs Contradiction to Religion in the Marianolatriſts Senſe of this their Title the Mother of God; for in their Senſe of it and in the Natural ſignification of it, it denoteth the Mother of the Perſon of Almighty God, which none is but God the Father. That this is their Senſe of it, appeareth from their creating Doctors (i) ad laudem & gloriam omnipotentis Dei, & glorioſiſſimæ ejus Matris Mariæ Virginis, to the Praiſe and Glory of Almighty God and of his moſt glorious Mother the Virgin Mary.

---

* Recte obſervavit Servius topicos Deos ad alias regiones nunquam tranſire. Cambd. Britan. p. 563.

(z) Heylin of S. George, p. 246.

(a) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 28.

(b) Maffeius Indic. p. 168, 482.

(c) Ibid. p. 157, 429, 431, 567.

(d) Ibid. p. 427.

(e) Ibid. p. 6.

(f) Ibid. p. 128.

(g) Ludolph. Hiſt. of Ethiop. l. 3. c. 5. p. m. 279.

(h) Vocabitur non Deus (quamvis verè Deus) ſed Filius Dei, ut notetur diſcretio concepti ſalvatoris à patre & ſpiritu ſancto. Biel. in Feſt. Annunciat. Ser. 1. in Luc. 1. 35.

(2.) This Honorary Title in the Natural ſignification of it and in the Senſe of the Marianolatriſts denoteth the Bl. Virgin, to be of God-productive Virtue, as other Mothers are of Man-productive Virtue: Every Man hath much of his Humanity (his being Man) from his Mother, who is of Man-procreative and propagative Quality and Virtue; and ſo the Mother of our Bl. Saviour was only of Man-productive Quality and Virtue; for our Saviour had nothing of his Divinity (his being God) from her. But as the Father of our Lord, the Father of Glory, the Father of Lights, ſpeaketh one that is of Virtue productive of our Lord, of Glory, and of the luminous kind of things: So this Name the Mother of God ſignifieth one that is of Virtue productive of God, and ſo the Marianolatriſts underſtand it when they ſay (k) An infinite goodneſs in the Fruit ſheweth in ſome ſort an infinite goodneſs in the Tree. (l) The Virgin the Mother of God is the Stem (or Rod,) her Son is the Flower thereof. (m) O the Tree of Life indeed, which was alone worthy to bear the ſalutiferous Fruit! The Mother of God is ſuppos'd, to be productive of God her Son, as a Tree is of its Fruit, as a Branch is of its Flower; and the infinite goodneſs of the Fruit is ſaid to demonſtrate a ſort of infinite goodneſs in the Tree; therefore the Mother of God is ſuppos'd, to be of God-productive Virtue. Which alſo appeareth from theſe other ſayings of the Marianolatriſts. (n) As a Star is productive of a Ray, ſo is the Virgin of her Son. (o) She was the Light of the Morning, which produc'd out of her ſelf that Sun. (p) The Marianitæ or Marian Religioniſts of the elder times (as the Arabic Writers Elmacinus and Patricides report) ſuppos'd, that Chriſt and Mary were two Gods beſides God; and Abunazar ſaith of the Melkites, They believe three Gods, Mary, Iſa and God. So the beſt learned in the Church of Rome, and ſome of greateſt Authority (the Pope himſelf) have intituled the Bl. Virgin Goddeſs, our Goddeſs, our Lady Goddeſs. They ſeem to ſuppoſe the Mother of God of the ſame Species with God, as other Mothers are with Man, and that God's being generated of her was ſuch a Propagation of the Species as is in Univocal Generation.

(3.) This Honorary Title in the Natural ſignification of it and in the Senſe of the Marianolatriſts denoteth the Bl. Virgin, to be the Mother of God incarnate (in the Plenary Senſe,) ſo as to be the Mother of his Incarnation. His Incarnation is ſaid to have been deferr'd ſo long, (q) becauſe it was requiſite to ſtay till there was a Woman of ſo great Sanctity, as to equalize ſo great a Dignity, whoſe Grace and infinite opulency of Virtues (r) drew down God to her, and induc'd him to take her Fleſh; the Spikenard of her Graces ſent forth its Odour, and attracted him from the Boſom of the Father into the Virginal Womb. So the Church renowneth her (s) as worthy of the Lord's reſpect, that the King ſhould deſire her Beauty, and be drawn down by her moſt ſweet Odour from his eternal lying in the Boſom of the Father; and generally they hold, (t) that by her Sanctity and Virtue ſhe merited ex congruo the infinite Dignity of being the Mother of God. Her Name alſo (the Mother of God) importeth, that ſhe was qualify'd for ſo great a Dignity; and to qualifie her for it, ſhe is ſaid to have receiv'd (u) the whole treaſure of Sanctification, infinite Grace, Grace it ſelf, to others by parts, but to Mary in intire fulneſs, to water plenteouſly the whole Creature. So the Church ſaith; (w) who will affirm her devoid of Grace, whom the Angel in his Salutation calleth full of Grace? Nor is this All, but he ſaith alſo, that the Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon her (ſuperventurum,) to what purpoſe, but that he may ſuper-fill her? To what purpoſe, but that the Holy Spirit being now advenient, ſhe may be full to her ſelf, the ſame being ſupervenient (nobis quoque Superplena & ſuper effluens fiat) ſhe may be ſuper-full and running over unto us. The Church therefore and her Theologers ſuppoſe her the overflowing Diſpenſatreſs of Gifts and Graces; (x) for of her fulneſs we all receive Grace for Grace. By influential Virtue (Virtute influxiva as Gerſon ſpeaketh) ſhe deriveth upon all her Lovers the copious Rivulets of Grace. (y) The Aqueduct of Grace is part of her ſtile (as alſo the Neck and the Moon,) and God hath made her his Repoſitory, and would have us to have nothing but what paſſeth through her Hands, as not a few of the Marian Theologers diſcourſe.

(4.) This Honorary Title in the Natural ſignification of it and as it is underſtood by the Marianolatriſts, denoteth the Bl. Virgin, to be the Mother of God-Redeemer (in the plenary Senſe,) ſo as to be the Mother of Redemption and of the mighty Benefits thereof. Accordingly ſhe is intituled (z) The Reparatrix of our Parents, the Vivificatrix of their Poſterity, the Mother of Redemption, the Mother of Life, the beginning of Spiritual Regeneration by Chriſt her Son, the Key of David that open'd the Gate of Paradiſe; the Medicine of our Vices, the Morning-ſtar of Grace and Salvation, the Reſtauration of Mankind, the holy Leaven prepared by God whence the whole Maſs of Mankind is leavened, the Reparatrix of the loſt World by her Merits (for Men have gain'd Redemption, Salvation and all manner of Goods by her Merits,) that hath recover'd loſt Salvation, loos'd the Bonds of Death from off Mankind, deliver'd Eve from ſhame, Adam from the Commination, deſpoil'd the Devil of his Principality, caſt him out of his Tyranny, and thrown him down; the Mother of Regeneration that made us paſs from Sin into Grace, as Eve made us paſs from Grace into Sin. So the Church ſaith (a) Thou reſtoreſt what Eve took away; ſhe giveth thanks to the Bl. Virgin and celebrateth her Praiſes for ſuccouring the loſt World by her ſingular Aſſent, ſaving the World by her Suffrage, and finding out the way of recovering Life by her Commerce; for diſſolving the Miſchiefs of our firſt Mother, aboliſhing the old Hand-writing of Diabolical Sedition, and opening the Kingdom of Heaven, agreeably to her Verſion of Gen. 3. 15. She ſhall bruiſe thy Head.

The

(i) Selden Titles of Hon. p. 333. ed. 3.

(k) Infinita Bonitas in Fructu oſtendit quodammodo infinitam in arbore Bonitatem. Albert. ap. Biel in Feſt. viſit. Ser. 2.

(l) Virgo Dei genetrix Virga eſt, Flos filius ejus. Baſil. Seleuc. orat. 39. p. 215.

(m) O verè lignum vitæ, quod ſolum fuit dignum portare fructum Salutis! Laurent. Surii Hom. in Feſt. Annunciat. Ser. 3.

(n) Sicut Sydus radium profert Virgo Filium. Breviar. Sariſbur. in Feſt. purificat.

(o) Fuit Aurora, quæ de ſe ſolem illum produxit. Biel in Feſt. Concept. Ser. 4.

(p) Hotting. Hiſt. or. l. 2. c. 2. ed. 1.

(q) Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 14. c. 8. S. 2.

(r) Biel in Feſt. Concept. Ser. 3. & in Feſt. Aſſumpt. Ser. 4.

(s) In octav. Aſſumpt.

(t) Petav. ſupr.

(u) Ibid. S. 6, 7, &c.

(w) In octav. Aſſumpt.

(x) Biel in Feſt. Nativ. Ser. 2. & in Feſt. Aſſumpt. Ser. 1.

(y) Ibid. & vid. Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 369. Anſw. to the Jeſ. Chall. p. 431, &c.

(z) Petav. ſupr. c. 9. Biel in Feſt. Concept. Ser. 1. & 3. in Feſt. viſit. Ser. 1. Caniſ. Catech. p. 168. Laur. Surii Hom. in Feſt. Aſſumpt. Ser. ult. Breviar. Rom. in Feſt. Nativ.

(a) Ibid. & Brev. Sariſbur. in Servit. B. Mar.

The Marianolatriſts have made her a She-Redeemer and She-Saviour to us, (b) our Mediatreſs and Reconciliatreſs in the buſineſs of our Redemption, (c) the Propitiatreſs of Sinners, the Conquereſs of Hell, and the World is ſaid to be (new) founded upon a Woman. They ſay (d) that Salvation is given us as the Reward of her Womb; (e) all our Salvation and Redemption was accompliſh'd by her, for our Redeemer was conceiv'd, born and educated by her, (f) ſhe deplor'd the miſerable Condition of Mankind, and pray'd importunately for our Redemption, (g) her Mercy obtain'd the Reparation of the whole World, (h) ſhe conſtrain'd our Redeemer to come down from Heaven to the Earth, and therefore doubtleſs ſhe can do all things for Men and raiſe them unto Heaven. When ſhe was made the Mother of God, ſhe was rais'd (i) to be a Mother to the whole Creation (the Lady of the World of Creatures, the Empreſs of Angels and Reparatreſs of Men,) a publick Perſon, the Mother of Redemption, that whom Chriſt was the Father of by Redemption, ſhe by co-operating thereto might be their Mother. (k) And becauſe ſhe procureth the Salvation of Believers with great Solicitude, and Chriſt's Brethren muſt have the ſame Parents with himſelf, and becauſe Believers are Regenerate by her Grace, ſhe is intituled the Mother of Believers and of the Regenerate, the Mother of the Church. (l) The Mother of Redemption was to pour out her Soul under the Croſs; her Soul penally dy'd with Chriſt dying, by the Merit of which Compatiency ſhe co-operated to the Redemption of many. Much of this Nature the Marian Theologers ſay of the Bl. Virgin (ſome ſay things of an higher Nature, (m) that ſhe offer'd up Chriſt to God the Father, and truly and properly gave the price of our Redemption, having the Parental Power of her Son:) But if we enquire into the ground of theſe extravagant Attributions, they have nothing to ſay ſave only (n) a vulgar Maxim which muſt be underſtood with Limitation) Cauſa Cauſæ eſt etiam Cauſa Cauſati, and this place of Irenæus. (o) Mary was perſwaded to be obedient to God, that ſhe might be the Virgin Eve's Advocate (Eve was helped out by her;) that Mankind might be loos'd by a Virgin, as it was bound over to Death by a Virgin, for what the Virgin Eve bound by incredulity, the Virgin Mary looſed by Faith; the Virgin yielding Obedience was made the cauſe of Salvation both to her ſelf and all Mankind. To ſatisfie this Allegation from Irenæus (which is the Marianolatriſts ſtrength,) we will acknowledge, that in a plain and obvious Senſe the Bl. Virgin may be rightly denominated the Mother of Salvation, Mother of Redemption both to her ſelf and to Mankind. We may ſpeak the Language of the Ave-Mary Religioniſts in an extremely diſſonant Senſe and Notion. The Mother of our Saviour and Redeemer is by being ſuch, the Mother of Salvation and Redemption both to her ſelf and to Mankind: As Nero's Mother by being ſuch, was the Mother of Deſtruction both to her ſelf and to Mankind; and Hippocrates's Mother by being ſuch, was the Mother of Health (Mater Salutis) both to her ſelf and to Mankind. Nero's Mother was productive of Deſtruction both to her ſelf and to Mankind, and therefore is rightly denominated the Cauſe of it; for the word Cauſe (an ambiguous word, which is ſometimes taken in a large Senſe; as ſome have defin'd it, Cauſa eſt ad quod aliquid ſequitur) ſignifieth Productive: So the Bl. Virgin is the cauſe of Salvation in a Senſe coincident with that other Title the Mother of Salvation. And as Nero's Mother was the cauſe (or productive) of Deſtruction both to her ſelf and to Mankind by her Maternal Production, whereby ſhe became Productive (or the Cauſe) of the Event, not of the Effect (for it was not her doing, nor ought it to be attributed to her,) in the ſame Senſe the Bl. Virgin is denominated the Cauſe of Salvation both to her ſelf and to Mankind by Irenæus. And as it is no contradiction to ſay that Nero's Mother was the cauſe of Deſtruction both to her ſelf and to Mankind, without being the cauſe of Deſtruction either to her ſelf or to Mankind; She was ſo Productive of it, as not to be at all Effective of it; eventually not effectively Productive of it: So the Bl. Virgin was in ſuch Senſe the cauſe of Salvation, as not to be at all the cauſe of Salvation to her ſelf or to Mankind; ſhe unloos'd (by her Faith and Obedience) what was bound by incredulity, without her unlooſing it, without her being at all the Unlooſer of it. Her dutiful obediential Faith qualify'd her to be Productive of the Unlooſer of it; ſhe was imploy'd by God, to be naturally Parental to him that redeem'd us from the Curſe: But this was not her doing, nor did ſhe contribute any thing towards it, that may juſtly denominate her at all effective of it. Thus the words of Irenæus (and other Fathers that Symbolize with him) are clearly expounded to a Senſe hugely diſſonant from the Marianolatriſts.

(5.) This Honorary Title in the natural ſignification of it and in the Senſe of the Marianolatriſts denoteth the Bl. Virgin, to be no leſs than the Queen-Mother in Divinis, and the Feminine Sovereignty of the Church and of the World. For as the true Idea of God and the Son of God is an holy Imperial Honour and Dignity: So the Marianolatriſts underſtand by the Mother of God an holy Imperial Honour and Dignity conjunct with the Deity. They ſuppoſe her as a Queen-Mother of the King, an Empreſs-Mother of the Emperor, or as if we ſhould ſuppoſe ſuch an Eccleſiaſtic Imperial Honour as the Queen-Mother of Chriſt's Vicar conjunct with the Papacy, that ſo the Roman Catholic Church might be furniſh'd with a viſible Soveraign Lady as well as a viſible Soveraign Lord. So her Title the Mother of God is ſaid to import (o) an infinite Majeſty, that ſhe is the Queen of Heaven, the Lady and Dominatreſs of all Creatures, the ſupreme Lady and ſole Dominatreſs of Heaven and Earth, that ſhe outſhineth all the Martyrs as the Sun doth the Stars and as the Mother the Subjects. The Throne of the moſt bleſſed Virgin was prepar'd before the Conſtitution of the World, and ſhe is ſeated on the Right-hand of the Majeſty. As God is the Father and God of all by creating all things by his Power: So the Bl. Mother of God, becauſe ſhe hath repair'd and re-eſtabliſhed all things by her Merits, is the Mother and Lady of all things. The Church in her Devotions repreſenteth her as a Divine Imperial Lady; (p) O glorious Lady high above the Stars, in thy Pulchritude go on proſperouſly and Reign (ſpecie tua & Pulchritudine tua, intende, proſperè procede & Regna;) her uſual devotional Salutation is Salve Regina (Hail O Queen.) agreeably whereto the Litanies that are uſually Sung in the Holy Houſe at Loretto chant the Praiſes of the Bl. Virgin. (q) Queen of Angels, Queen of Patri-

(b) Petav. ſupr. c. 9. S. 2, 3.
(c) Biel in Feſt. Aſſump. Ser. 2, 3.
(d) Petav. ſupr. S. 5.
(e) Biel in Feſt. viſit. Ser. 3.
(f) Idem in Feſt. Nat. Ser. 4
(g) Bernard. in Aſſump. B. Mar. Ser. 4.
(h) Biel in Feſt. viſit. Ser. 3.
(i) Ibid. Ser. 1.
(k) Idem in Feſt. viſit. Ser. 2, 3, 4. in Feſt. Aſſump. Ser. 1. Laur. Surii Hom. in Feſt. Purif. Ser. 4
(l) Biel in Feſt. viſ. Ser. 1. in Feſt. Aſſump. Ser. 2.
(m) Salazar. in Prov. 8. 19.
(n) Petav. ſupr. c. 8. & 9.
(o) Petav. ſupr. c. 8. 9 Baſil. Seleuc. orat. 39. p. 218.
(p) Offic. parv. B. Mar.
(q) Caniſ. Catech. p. 153.

(o) Maria ſuaſa eſt obedire Deo, uti Virginis Evæ fieret Advocata; ut quemadmodum adſtrictum eſt morti genus humanum per Virginem, ſolvatur per Virginem. Quod enim alligavit Virgo Heva per incredulitatem, hoc Virgo Maria ſolvit per fidem; Virgo obaudiens & ſibi & univerſo generi humano cauſa facta eſt Salutis. Iren. l. 5. c. 19.

archs, Queen of Prophets, Queen of Apoſtles, Queen of Martyrs, Queen of Confeſſors, Queen of Virgins, Queen of all Saints. Innumerable Attributes of Imperial Dignity, Majeſty, Pomp and Power the Marianolatriſts have inſtated upon the humble Virgin; ſuch as God's dear Daughter (which ſpeaketh her a Spiritual Princeſs, as God's dear Son is a Spiritual Prince, the Spouſe of God, his Lady, Queen, Empreſs, and therefore the Lady, Queen and Empreſs of his Kingdom and Empire (ſuch fanatic and idolatrous Imaginations this Honorary Title the Mother of God is apt to excite in the Minds of Men,) the Empreſs of Heaven and Earth, to whom God delivered the Empire of the World and of all things therein contain'd, and all Power in Heaven and Earth; the excellent Monarcheſs and Governeſs of the whole World, the Aſſociate of Divine Majeſty and Power, the ſole Dominatreſs and Princeſs of all Creatures, that beareth Rule in Heaven, the World and Hell, whom all Creatures ſerve (Saints, Angels and Archangels are her Courtiers, Officers and Servants,) whom God hath highly exalted, and given her the Name of Mary (Domina,) which is above all Names, that at this Name every Knee ſhould bow; the glorious Queen, whoſe brightneſs enlightneth the whole Celeſtial World, as the Sun enlightneth the Day and the World, the refulgent Morning Star, which is the Star of Empire. Such Elogies her Devoto's pour out ὅλῳ θυλάκῳ, by whole Sack-fulls, (of which the learned have made ample Collections;) and ſome of them raiſe Debates touching the right placing her in Heaven. (r) For ſeeing the Angels are in the Eleventh Heaven, and the Virgin Mary is exalted above the Choires of Angels, it ſeemeth agreeable to place her in the Twelfth Heaven which belongeth to the Trinity. For ſhe is called Deipara, and we Celebrate the Holy Virgin as truly and properly the Parent and Mother of God; and ſuppoſe, that he is true God that is born of her, ſo that the true Mother of God generated the true God incarnate of her. If therefore ſhe be the Genetrix and Mother of God, ſhe ought to be plac'd at the Right-hand of the Son, as the Mother is to be plac'd, and not under the Son. It ſeemeth therefore agreeable, that the Virgin Mary be plac'd in the Twelfth Heaven where God is. Some ſay (s) ſhe is rais'd to ſuch Sublimity, whither Human Nature may not come, that of her ſelf ſhe maketh a diſtinct Hierarchy, the next to the Trinity; ſhe is uſually intituled totius Trinitatis complementum, the accompliſhment of the whole Trinity; and not a few of them ſuppoſe a Communication of the Deity to her and her Identity with God. She muſt be Creature-tranſcendent, if J. Damaſcen ſaith well; (t) It is fitting, that this Mother of God ſhould enjoy that which belongeth to her Son, and therefore the Glory of being ador'd by all Men.

(6.) By ſtiling her the Mother of God the Bl. Virgin is made to be of all ſuch Excellency, as this her Title in any Natural ſignification and Senſe of the Marianolatriſts doth imply. In ſuch Senſe her Honour-Title doth imply (u) a certain infinite Dignity, an Excellency parallel to her Son; and accordingly her Devoto's have rais'd her to a Chriſt-like Excellency and Tranſcendency by their Hypotheſis of her fulneſs of Grace and Merit, her Mother-hood of Redemption, Regeneration and of the Church, her Imperial Dignity and Rank in the Heavenly Regions, and by their Romantic Conceits and Devotional Celebrations of her immaculate Conception, miraculous Aſſumption, and Exaltation above all the Hierarchies of Angels, of whoſe joyful Congratulations and Celebrations of her Honour at her arrival (w) the Marian Theologers have given a particular account. Intoxicated with blind Conceits, an idolatrous Eſtimation and Love-paſſion for the Holy Lady, they make no ſcruple, to communicate to her the proper Honorary Attributions of the Lord Meſſiah, ſuch as (x) Abraham rejoiced to ſee my Day, I was ſet up from Everlaſting, in whom dwelt all the fulneſs of the God-head bodily, the very Ark of God, the Ark of the Propitiatory, the Mercy-ſeat, the Tabernacle, the Rod out of the Stem of Jeſſe, the erected Aſylum, the Gate of Heaven, that opened Paradiſe, and deliver'd the Souls of Men from Hell, (y) the noble Star of Jacob. (z) None can ſufficiently praiſe her, though all his Members were turn'd into Tongues; they that ſay of her all excellent and illuſtrious things, yet praiſe her below her Dignity, though they ſtile her the Paradiſe of God, the Wood of Life, the Temple of the Living God, the Hall of the Eternal King, the Temple of the Trinity, (the Mother of the whole Trinity) the Throne of God, the Orient Light of Nazareth, the Glory of Jeruſalem, the joy of Iſrael, the Glory and Joy of Angels, the Glory of the World, the Nobility of the Chriſtian People, the Light of the Church, Light of Lights, (a) Thou art moſt worthy of all Praiſe; So the Church Doxologizeth. (b) Hail the inexhauſted Ocean of Joy! Hail the ſole Levamen of Troubles! Hail the Medicine of all the Griefs of the Heart! Hail Mother, Heaven (becauſe Chriſt is the Sun, therefore the Church ſtileth the Virgin Heaven) Maid, Virgin, Throne, the Grace, Glory, Stabiliment of our Church! The Abyſs of Grace, the inextinguiſhable Lamp, the Sceptre of the Orthodox Faith, the indiſſoluble Temple, ſo the Church renowneth her; and her Sepulchre ſhe ſtileth a Divine Temple, which ſpeaketh her nothing leſs than a Goddeſs. Agreeably whereto Pſalters and Bibles alſo (Biblia Mariæ) are compos'd for her Honour, and what is of Pulchritude and Precioſity throughout the Bible or in the World (c) the Sun, Moon, Stars, Earth, the rutilant Morning, the Cedar of Lebanon, the Cypreſs, Palm, Olive, the Aromatic Spices, Cinnamon, Myrrhe and Balm, the Waters of Paradiſe, the Ark of Noah, the Rainbow of Heaven, the Ladder of Jacob, the Buſh of Moſes and Table of the Law, the Rod of Aaron that budded, the Fleece of Gideon, the Honey-comb of Samſon, Sion, Jeruſalem, the Throne of Solomon, the Houſe of Wiſdom with Seven Pillars, the Mountain in Daniel whence the Stone is cut, the Gate in Ezekiel that muſt be always ſhut, the Garden ſhut up and the Fountain ſealed (with ſuch more) her Religioniſts have made Typical and Repreſentative of her, and with ſuch Elogies in their Mouths they make their Court to her. All the Pulchritudes, Pomps and Delicacies of the Spouſe in the Canticles the Church (d) hath apply'd to the Queen of the World, the Queen at the King's Right-hand in clothing of Gold, clad about with divers Colours; and ſhe is uſually intituled the Woman clothed with the Sun Crown'd with Twelve Stars, that hath the Moon under her Feet. Which extravagant Elogies may ſeem to raiſe her to no higher pitch than a co-equality with the Church: But the Marianolatriſts have more Seraphic Notions of her Glories; for they affirm (e) That the Moon under her Feet is the Church, which ſhe hath under her Defence and Protection, and lying at her Feet praying to be ſav'd by her, till ſhe did deduce her to eternal Peace; and that every faithful Soul and the univerſal Church her ſelf is the Handmaid of the Virgin. (f) None of the Patriarchs, Prophets, Apoſtles, Evangeliſts, Doctors, may compare with her perſpicacity of Light and Knowledge (becauſe

(r) Caſſan. Catal. Glor. Mund. par. 12. fol. 285.

(s) Biel in Feſt. Aſſump. Ser. 3.

(t) 1. De Nativ. & 2. de Aſſump.

(u) Aquin. 1. Qu. 25. Art. 6. ad 4.

(w) Biel in Feſt. Aſſump. Ser. 4.

(x) Idem de Feſt. Div. Virg.

(y) Bernard. ſuper Miſſus eſt Hom. 2.

(z) Petav. ſupr. c. 9. S. 12. Breviar. Sariſbur. in ſerv. B. M. Laur. Sur. 1. de Nativ.

(a) Offic. parv. B. M.

(b) Breviar. Rom. in Aſſump. & Nat. B. M.

(c) Biel 2. de Nativ. Laur. Sur. 2. de Aſſumpt.

(d) Breviar. Rom. in Aſſump. B. M. & in Feſt. Concept.

(e) Biel 4. de Concept. & de B. Virg. Ser. gener Bonavent. in Specul. c. 1.

(f) Biel 4. de Aſſumpt. Petav. T. 4. P. 2. in fin.

cauſe ſhe penetrated the Abyſs of Divine Wiſdom, when the fulneſs of the Deity inhabited her;) ſhe hath rais'd the Sublimity of her Merits unto the Throne of the Deity (g) the Monarchy of the World devolveth upon Chriſt as being her Son. (h) All the Inhabitants of Heaven and thoſe that are in Hell, we and thoſe that have gone before us, muſt look unto her as to the Center (ſicut ad rerum cauſam, ſicut ad negotium ſeculorum) as to the cauſe of things, as to the buſineſs of all Ages.

(g) Ildelphonſ. Ser. de Aſſumpt.
(h) Bernard. In Feſt. Pentecoſt. Ser. 2.

(7.) This Honorary Title in the Natural ſignification of it and in the Senſe of (the leſs as well as the more extravagant) Marianolatriſts denoteth the Bl. Virgin, to have ſuch a Superiority over God, as other Mothers have righfully over their Sons. It cannot be imagin'd, that in a vaſt Body of Men all ſhould be Marianolatriſts at the ſame rate; bodily Diſeaſes affect one part more than another: So ſome are more and others are leſs extravagant Marianolatriſts. The more extravagant ſort of Marianolatriſts (from whom I have tranſcrib'd nothing,) ſtick not to ſay, (i) That the Mother of God is Superior to her Son, that he ought to Honour and Obey her, that ſhe hath an Authority and Dominion over him, that he is ſubject to her and ſerveth her, and that ſhe hath plac'd her Throne above the Throne of God. The other ſort of Marianolatriſts are more ſparing in their Expreſſions; yet theſe (the Church's genuine Children, Doctors, Saints, that deviate not from her Senſe, but ſpeak their Mothers Tongue that procreated them and taught them their Marianolatry) even theſe are bold to ſay of the Mother of God; (k) That ſhe hath as it were an Authority and Natural Dominion as to the Lord of the whole World, and much more as to all that is ſubject to this Lord: So that in her Name all things bow in Heaven and in Earth and in Hell, and Miracles are ſhew'd. She cometh before the Golden Altar of Human Reconciliation, not intreating only, but commanding, a Miſtreſs, not a Servant. It is not poſſible, but ſhe muſt be heard in all her Requeſts, becauſe God is obedient to her as to his true and immaculate Mother. And now it is not hard to determine, whether the Bl. Virgin (who was but an Human Mother of her Divine Lord) may have this Title of Honour (which is without diſtinction, reſtriction or abatement of Senſe) lawfully given to her the Mother of God. And it is eaſie to make a Judgment touching the Wiſdom and Piety of thoſe elder times of the Church, that introduc'd this Honour-Title.

(i) Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 368.
(k) Petav. ſupr. c. 8. S. 5. &c. 9. S. 13, 14.

(10.) The phantaſtry of the Marianolatriſts in their Elogies of the Bl. Virgin hath no exact Parallel in Paganiſm: But a conſiderable Paralleliſm there is between their Virgin-Goddeſs and the Pagans Minerva, which is diſcourſed by one of their own Writers. (l) Cum primum illuxit & invaluit ſplendor Chriſtianæ Pietatis, Toloſani proceres tectorio inaurato ſpecioſum fanum, antea palladi dedicatum, Mariæ Virgini conſultiſſimè tranſcripſerunt: Tum quia pallas Virgo ex Jovis Parentis cerebro nata fingatur, tum quia conſilio & opibus abundè fortunet mortales, & Maria Virginitatem naturæ obſtupendam retinuit, & in Dei Opt. Max. mente ante ſolem & tempora verſabatur, & auream nobis Ætatem prorſus reduxit, ac partu mirifico miſeros ægroſque proſperavit. Beſides that this Pagan Goddeſs is famous for Virginity, (and is intituled (m) κόρη, a pure Virgin) ſhe is the Daughter of Jupiter: As the Marianolatriſts have intituled their Virgin-Goddeſs the beloved Daughter of the eternal Father. And as they (uſually) ſuppoſe, that their She-God hath her Throne on the King's Right hand (n) being made ſo much better than the Angels, as ſhe hath obtain'd a more excellent Name than they, the Name of Mother: So Minerva (as Ariſtides diſcourſeth from Pindar,) ſitting at the Right-hand of her Father there receiveth Commands from him to be deliver'd to the Gods. For ſhe is greater than the Angels, and commandeth them ſome one thing and ſome another, accordingly as ſhe had firſt received of her Father, ſhe performing the Office of an Interpreter and Introducer to the Gods, when it is requiſite. Minerva in (o) Proclus and Plato hath the Honorary Epithet of Δέσποινα, Lady, ἡ Δέσποινα ἡμῶν, our Lady, which is the Marianolatriſts uſual Name for their Goddeſs. And as the Pagan Pallas is a Warrioureſs renown'd by her Military Proweſs in killing a Giant, and Pauſanias ſpeaketh of (p) the Altar of the Martial Minerva: So the Pagano-Chriſtians have ſtiled our Lady (q) noſtra Bellatrix, our Warriowreſs, that bruiſed the Serpents Head by her Fortitude; that hath the Power of Hoſts and Military Virtues, and is conjoyned with the Lord of Hoſts; that is the Tower of David, whereon there hang a thouſand Bucklers of Defence, the confidence of thoſe that are valiant in Fight, terrible to her Enemies as an Army with Banners (ſhe went out furniſh'd with all the Armature of the Mighty againſt the Princes of Darkneſs, (r) ſhe alone hath ſlain all the Hereſies in the World;) whence Philip of Valois having obtain'd a great Victory over the Rebels in Flanders, conſecrated his Horſe and Arms to that Martial Pallas the Virgin-Goddeſs of the Pontificians. But although they have an Idea of their Goddeſs, which is of great Affinity with a Martial Pallas, yet their uſual Idea and Elogies of her ſuperlative Goodneſs, and the uſual tenour of their Marian Devotions, ſpeak her rather an indulgent Mother of Children; for her ſuperlative Goodneſs is a Womaniſh Facility and Tenderneſs of Nature. (s) The Name of Mary is moſt ſweet, in ſome ſort more tender than the Name of Jeſus, which is as it were a a proud Name, and too Potent. If any one is afraid of the Severity of the Deity or Virile Sex in Jeſus, let him have recourſe to Mary, in whom nothing of theſe is to be ſuſpected. Mary is a Womans Name carrying a ſhew of and commending Manſuetude. (t) Why is our Frailty afraid of coming to Mary? There is nothing Auſtere in her, nothing Terrible: She is altogether Sweet, offering to all Milk and Wooll (ſoft Effeminate things,) ſhe openeth the Boſom of her Mercy to all, that all may receive of her Fulneſs, the captive Redemption, the Sick curation, the ſorrowful Conſolation, the Sinner Pardon, the juſt Grace, an Angel joy, the whole Trinity Glory, the Perſon of the Son, (which is a great Favour) the ſubſtance of Human Fleſh, ſo that there is nothing hid from her heat. Her Devotioniſts ſuppoſe her, not only the Mother of God, but (u) a Mother unto us (which ſpeaketh both her Maternal Authority and Diſpoſition the common Mother and Nurſe of Cities and Provinces, yea of all Mankind, the Mother of Orphans, Mother of the Miſerable, the Mother of Grace, Mother of Mercy, the Hope and Comfort of the afflicted, the Chancelareſs in the Court of Heaven, the Throne of Grace, the Pacificatory of God towards Men, that reigneth not by Juſtice but by Mercy; (w) they celebrate the Longitude and Latitude, the Sublimity and Profundity of her Mercy; and the Church in her Devotions celebrateth her (x) as the Queen of Mercy and our Advocate and the only Hope of Sinners.

(l) Forcatul. l. 1. p. 32. vid. Dr. Jackſon Origin. of Unbelief. c. 38. p. 355.
(m) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 5. c. 35.
(n) Biel 4. de Aſſump.
(o) Procl. ſupr. l. 6. c. 11. p. 372.
(p) P. 52. Ara Ἀθηνᾶς ἀρείας Minervæ martiæ.
(q) Laur. Sur. 1. de Nativ. Biel 4. de Aſſump. Le Blanc Theſ. p. 367.
(r) Offic. parv. B. Mar.
(s) Biel 4. de Concept.
(t) Bernard. de B. Virg. Ser. 2. in Apocal. 12. 1.
(u) Biel 4. de Aſſumpt. Petav. ſupr. c. 9. S. 1, 9. Anſw. to the Jeſ. Challenge p. 483, 484.
(w) Biel 3. de Nativ.
(x) Petav. ſupr. S. 11, 13.

The relief of Sinners is well provided for in this Marian Religion; for none is ſaid (y) to patronize Sinners at ſuch a rate as this their Indulgent Mother and Advocate, (z) in whom the Sinner may find Pardon, the Juſt inceaſe of Grace, and the Angels Joy to Eternity. Theophilus (who by an Hand-writing had given himſelf to the Devil, but had it given back again by the Bl. Virgin) is an Inſtance, that the greateſt of Sinners may find Pardon in her, who is paramount to our Saviour in Goodneſs and Tenderneſs, (for ſhe is not a Judge, (a) ſhe doth not diſcuſs Mens Merits in time paſt, but is exorable to all, moſt gentle to all, and compaſſionateth the Neceſſities of all with a moſt ample affection;) becauſe of her Feminine Paſſivity and Motherly Tenderneſs of Nature the Church hath made her the Mediatrix to the Mediator, (b) to appear in the ſight of her Son (the Judge) for Sinners; whom they repreſent (c) as a tremendous Judge, terrible to us, and vibrating over us the Sword of his Anger, but to her ſweet and affording all Grace; and therefore they bow to her glorious Majeſty and bend their Neck before the Glory of her Celſitude, ſending up their Cries and Snſpirious Prayers to her to mitigate her Son's Anger towards us, ſo to be a Savioureſs from the only Saviour. And as her Clients promiſe themſelves the Pardon of their Sins in her; ſo they promiſe themſelves Salvation, becauſe they are her Devoto's; (d) for without doubt we ſhall have Salvation, if we truly worſhip her, through whom Salvation aroſe unto all. Suppoſe, we are not qualify'd for Pardon and Salvation, yet (e) ſome rare holy Men have ſeen in Viſion, that certain whom Chriſt would have condemn'd, yet in regard they were her Servants, by her Interceſſion have been abſolv'd; whence it followeth, that the Marian Religion is an eaſier way to Salvation than the Chriſtian; her Goodneſs being of ſuch tranſcendency, that (f) ſhe will not permit any to have an evil End, who ſtudieth reverently to make her Crown (to repeat the Roſary of Prayers made for her worſhip;) The old Serpent is under her Feet and cannot approach her, nor thoſe that invoke her. The Elogies of her Goodneſs and Beneficence are a great part of her Style; ſuch as (g) The Reconciliatreſs of Sinners, the Advocatreſs of the Poor, (h) the Refuge of Sinners, the Help of Chriſtians, the Comfortreſs of the Afflicted, (i) the Haven of ſuch as are in Tempeſts, the Delivereſs of the Impriſoned, the Redemption of the Captives, the Exultation of the Sick, the Peace, Solace and Health of the World, (k) the Expeller of our Darkneſs, the moſt potent ſubduer of our Adverſaries, (becauſe the Lady) the Ark of thoſe that are to be ſav'd, the Staff of the Weak, the Wall of the whole World, the moſt compatient Reliever of our Miſeries, (l) the Star of the Sea (ſo they perverſly interpret the Name Miriam) to defend us from Rocks and Pirates, pluck us out of the Waves, and the Shipwreck'd from the Jaws of Death, and to traduce us to the Port of Eternal Salvation; (m) for all that are ſav'd ſhe begetteth by Faith, nouriſheth by Charity, defendeth by continual Interceſſion. Such a fam'd Beneficence (n) draweth ſuch a throng of Suppliants, that the Bl. Virgin complaineth in Eraſmus, tantum non enecant, ſhe hath much adoe to live.

XI. The Honourary Aſcriptions and Attributions of the Bl. Virgin which we have recounted, (which are no leſs than the eminent Attributes of God, his incommunicable Prerogatives and our Bl. Saviour's, his peculiar Works of Providence, Patronage and Redemption, and which would certainly put Paul and Barnabas into a ſecond Conſternation, if they were alive) are but certain Fragments of her Praiſes, and thoſe Praiſes are but a Branch of her Service, of ſo great a Bulk and ſo high a Strain is the Church-Marianolatry. Theſe Elogies ſpeak the Humour of the times of Marianolatry; they ſhew the height of the Diſeaſe, at what a rate Marianolatry hath prevail'd; they ſerve (amongſt other things) to demonſtrate, that the Principles and great Eſſentials of Marianolatry, the prevailing Senſe and Practice of the Church are of a tranſcendent ſtrain; and that the Current of Marianolatry hath run ſo high in the Church, that nothing can be more apparent, than that ſhe is deeply laps'd into Idolatry and Demonolatry upon the account of it. The reſt of the Marianolatriſts devotional Services are of the ſame elevated Strain with their Honourary Aſcriptions and Attributions; for this Queen Regent of the Church and of the World is worſhipp'd by her Religioniſts (o) with the fulneſs of their Devotional Affection, (p) with the moſt profound Reverences, (q) with their whole Deſire and with all their Praiſes. They joyn her with God in their Doxologies and Forms of Bleſſing, their Sermons are begun with an Ave-Mary for a Bleſſing upon their Work, and they uſually conclude their Books with praiſe to God and the Bleſſed Virgin. They devote themſelves to her Service, (r) reſign themſelves to her Will and Pleaſure, give up their Soul, Body, Eſtate, and their All to her at the moſt ſuperlative rate (nothing more can be done to God;) * where one prayeth before the Crucifix, two before her Image; where one voweth to Chriſt, ten vow unto her; where one faſteth on Friday, many faſt the Saturday in devotion to her; and in all outward Actions the Honour which they do her, is for the moſt part double unto that which they do our Saviour. Her numerous and ſtately Churches and Altars, the Vows, Pilgrimages and Oblations (rich and in great abundance) that are made to her, the many Feſtivals for her Honour and Service, the multitude of her Ave's (the very Bell that calleth them to their daily Prayers hath the name of the Ave-Mary Bell,) their making the Ave-Mary a Fundamental of Religion, a Principle in their Catechiſms; their Devotional Salutations of her, and their Recommendations of themſelves (Soul and Body now and evermore) to her Protection and Guidance; The Sodalities inſtituted to her Honour, the mighty Piety and Devotion uſually expreſs'd to her Image, her Roſary, proper Maſſes, Litanies, Canonical Hours, great and ſmall Offices (with other Branches of Marianolatry)

(y) Ibid. S. 13.

(z) Biel 4. de concept.

(a) Bern. Ser. 2. de B. Virg. in Apoc. 12. 1.

(b) Petav. ſupr. S. 11.

(c) Laur. Sur. 1. de Nativ. & in Aſſumpt. Ser. ult.

(d) Biel 1. de Aſſumpt.

(e) Europ. Spec. p. 9.

(f) Anſw. to the Jeſ. challenge, p. 488. Biel 4. de Aſſumpt.

(g) Biel. 3. de Nativ.

(h) Caniſ. Catech. p. 168.

(i) Bellar. Controv. T. 4. l. 1. c. 15. de orat.

(k) Biel 2. de Aſſump. 4. de Nativ.

(l) Idem 4. de Concep.

(m) Ibid. Ser. 1.

(n) The Attributes of her Goodneſs and Beneficence are abridg'd in this following Leſſon of a Roman Breviary. Beatiſſima virgo Dei genetrix Maria à ſuis primordiis Domino conſecrata, propter beneficia ejus inaudita exhibita populo invocanti, omnes in neceſſitate conſtituti ad eam confugiunt, tanquam ad ſingulare remedium, ubi humanum ſubſidium non ſufficit requiſitum. Diſponit namque omnia inferiora ſua ſapientia, providentia & induſtria propulſata. Ipſa enim ex abundantia gratiæ ſibi data eſt cura curarum, cùm ſit viſitatrix, nutrix, genetrixque bonorum. Gaudet autem Deus & latatur per ſecula, quando regina Cœli cuncta debitè ſunt ſubjecta. Vbi enim eſt Gubernatrix provida cœlicæ & terrenæ poteſtatis? in Maria. Vbi mater miſericordiæ & Impetratrix veniæ? in Maria. Vbi Mediatrix ad Deum pro crimine? in Maria. Vbi Reparatrix ſperandæ gratiæ? in Maria. Vbi mater militantis Eccleſiæ? in Maria. Vbi Advocata ſeculi? in Maria. Ipſa ſiquidem eſt advocata mundi, patrona peculii, viſitatio periculi, ſpes ſalutis populi Chriſtiani. Ipſa miſerorum miſeratio, afflictorum relevatio, deſolatorum conſolatio, peccatorum viſitatio, diſcordantium redintegratio cum triumpho. Breviar. Roman. ex ſacra potiſſimum ſcriptura & probatis ſanctorum hiſtoriis confectum. Antwerpiæ in ædibus Joannis Steelſii 1563. Fol. 362.

(o) Totis medullis cordis, totis præcordiorum affectibus. Biel 1. de Annunciat.

(p) Profundiſſimis reverentiis. Le Blanc. Theſ. p. 362.

(q) Totis deſideriis, totiſque præconiis. Breviar. Sarisbur. in ſervit. B. M.

(r) P. Damian. Ep. 14. l. 2.

* Europ. Spec. p. 6, 7.

latry) demonſtrate the immenſe Devotion of her Servitors towards her, that a principal part of the Pontifician Piety is the Marian Devotion (whence a mighty Devotion to the Bl. Virgin is the uſual Character of a mighty Pietiſt) that the Church of Rome maketh it her Deſign to promote Devotion towards the Holy Virgin, and that Marianolatry is ſubſtituted in the place of Chriſtianity and Godlineſs. (s) In our Lady's Office, why do we end every Leſſon, ſaying, But thou, O Lord, have mercy on us? ſaith a late Catechiſt. A. To beg, that the Praiſes and Virtues of the Bl. Virgin which we have there read, may be deeply ſettled in our Hearts, and that God would pardon our former Negligence both in his and her Service. S. Gerard Biſhop of Canade in Hungary is ſaid to have promoted her Service to ſuch a pitch of Extravagance, (t) that it became cuſtomary in that Country, when they heard the Name of our Lady pronounc'd, they fell on their Knees, and bowed their Heads to the Earth. In a Church which he built, he dedicated a Chappel to her Honour, and having there ſet up her Statue, he daily offer'd Incenſe to it, and ordain'd, that her Altar ſhould never be without fine Odours upon it, which ſhould continually ſmoke to her Honour. Nor is the Greek Church without Prodigies of Marianolatry; for ſuch are her Marian μεγαλυσμοὶ, or Doxologies, her Hymns call'd θεοτόκια (directed to the Mother of God,) her Oblation of the Particle at the Euchariſt in honour of our Lady (called παναγία, All-holy) and the Kaloirs celebration of a Mock-Sacrament for her Honour.

Notwithſtanding the Marianolatriſts Doctrine de finibus regundis (that God muſt be worſhipp'd with Latria, the higheſt degree of worſhip; the Bl. Virgin with Hyperdulia, an honourary Service next to God; and the other Saints with Dulia;) it is not probable, that themſelves underſtand how far they may go, and where they muſt ſtop in theſe ſeveral Stages of Religious Worſhip; or that in doing their Devotions they always obſerve their Bounds ſo punctually and critically, as never to make an Hyperdulia inſtead of doing Dulia only; nor ever aſcending to Latria, when they ought to ſtop at Hyperdulia. But whether they rightly obſerve their Stops or otherwiſe; this their diſtinction of Worſhip is Paganical; for the Pagans gave not Divine Honour to their Heroes in the fulleſt height of it. (u) They pretended not to give them the Honour of Sacrifice, although they lighted Tapers about their Statues and burned Incenſe unto them: So the Pagano-Chriſtians that do the ſame things to the Saints departed, yet pretend not to give them the Honour of Sacrifice. The Pagans made a diſtinction between the Divine Worſhip or God-Service ſtrictly ſo called (the worſhip of the Gods in a ſtrict acceptation) and their Religious Heroic Worſhip: So the Pagano-Chriſtians make a diſtinction between the Divine Worſhip or God-ſervice, ſtrictly ſo call'd (Latria) and their Religious Saint-worſhip; but the Worſhip which both Parties give to their Heroes, is the God-ſervice and Worſhip in a larger ſenſe; both becauſe it conſtituteth them a ſort of Religioniſts or Devotioniſts (in contradiſtinction to Atheiſts;) and becauſe the ſeveral Modes or particular Acts of it belong not to the Man-honourary Service and Worſhip, and therefore are the appropriate Modes of God's Service and Worſhip, and the proper Acts of it. For by the Man-honourary Service and Worſhip we are to underſtand, That which is on this ſide the making a God, a Religion, or one a Religioniſt to another; and in ſuch Senſe Tertullian ſaith moſt truly, (w) what is ultra humani honoris modum, beyond the Modes and Meaſures of the Man-honourary Service and Worſhip, is part of God's holy Worſhip, as being the God-honourary Service and Worſhip. Such is the Worſhip which the Pagano-Chriſtians (agreeably to the Pagans) pay to their Men-Superiorities, that are not God. Such are their Devotional Attributions, their aſcribing to the Saints ſuch Patronage, Providence, Protection, Redemption, Salvation, Omniſcience, Omnipotence, Greatneſs, Beneficialneſs, Mediatorſhip, Imperial Dignity, Plenitude of Grace, Pulchritude and Pretioſity of Perſon, as is proper to God and the Son of God. Such are their Devotional Affections, their idolizing the Saints and their Patronage in their Eſtimation and Regard, their idolatrous love for them (being more affected (x) towards ſome certain Saint than towards our Lord,) their ſeeking them with Faith and Hope, their Religious Truſt in them, Dependence upon them, (y) and making them their only Refuge and Confidence; as alſo their Soul-ſubmiſſions, Subjections, Reſignations, and Dedications of themſelves at a ſuperlative rate. Such are theſe their various modes of doing Honour and Service to the Saints; their Devotional Salutations, Recommendations, Forms of Addreſs, Homages, Congratulations; their ſerving them with Prayers, Supplications, Litanies, Praiſes, Doxologies, Thankſgivings, making Vows to them and ſwearing by their Names; their making Confeſſion of their Sins to them, diſmiſſing departing Souls in their Names, contradicting and adjuring Evil Spirits by their Virtue, making their ſolemn Excommunications and Abſolutions in the Name and by the Authority of S. Peter and S. Paul (together with God) conſecrating Churches and Altars in their Names, inſtituting Sodalities and Feſtivals for their Honour and Service, and making Oblations to them at their Shrines and Altars; Offices and Forms of Devotion, Hours, the Myſteries and Contemplations of the Roſary. Their building Temples and conſecrating Altars to the Saints as Patrons of them, and for their publick Invocation and Worſhip: Their offering Sacrifice to their Honour (and receiving the Sacrament to their Honour;) their erecting the Symbolical Preſences of the Saints, ſolemn Invocation of them in their Temples, paying them (in the geſture of their Mind and Body) the Religious Adoration, praying to them with all the ſolemn uſages of Devotion wherewith they pray unto God, bowing their Bodies and bending their Knees to them, as ſuppoſing themſelves in their preſence; ſinging Laudatory Hymns to them, offering and burning Incenſe to them, conſecrating their Images and Reliques, which they richly adorn, Temple, place upon their Altars, ſet up for Publick Worſhip, making their Genuflexions and Proſtrations to them (putting up their Prayers and Supplications with Hands and Eyes devoutly lifted up to their Images (making Vows, Oblations and Pilgrimages to them, offering and burning Lamps and Tapers to them, carrying them in pompous Proceſſion, placing their Hope and Confidence in them, expecting Gifts and Graces from them, and attributing all ſorts of Miracles to them. The Pagans worſhipp'd their Divi as the Sons and Friends of God, his near Relatives (as appeareth from M. Tyrius and others) not principally, but only ſecondarily and relatively (although they worſhipp'd them with abſolute Prayer:) So the Pagano-Chriſtians religiouſly worſhip their Divi, not principally, but ſecondarily and relatively, as the Servants and Friends of God, (z) as themſelves ſay.

(s) H. T. Abridgment of Chriſt. Doctr. p. 205.

(t) Aug. Wichman. Sabbat. Mar. c. 7.

(u) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 12. Ld. Herb. de Rel. Gentil. p. 101, 106, 112. Selden. de Synedr. l. 3. p. 438.

(w) De Idolatr. c. 15.

(x) Alex. de Hales ſumm. Par. 4. qu. 26. membr. 3. Art. 5.

(y) Bellar. Controv. T. 4. l. 1. c. 15. de orat.

(z) Petav. T. 4. P. 2. l. 15. c. 5. S. 1.

CHAP. V.

1. An Idea of the Nature of the Philoſophic-Pagans Theology. Sect. 1. Of the Philoſophic-Pagans Theology as Phyſical. Sect. 2. Of the Philoſophic-Pagans Theology as Metaphyſical. 1. Their Theology was their Metaphyſicks. 2. The things confronted and oppos'd in the Metaphyſical Platonic Theology. 3. A diſparagement of generate corruptible Nature. Sect. 3. Of the Philoſophic-Pagans Theology as Myſtic-Metaphyſical. 1. Of the ſeveral Platonic Modes of Theologizing. 2. An Inference from the firſt Mode. 3 An Inference from the ſecond Mode. 4. An Inference from the third Mode, and of the Pythagoric Tetractys. 5. Of the Philoſophic Pagans hidden Theology. 6. Of the Platonic Theamatiſts. 7. Of the ſeveral parts of the Platonic Theology. Sect. 4. Of the Philoſophic Pagans Theology as Arcane-Theurgical. 1. Of the Nature of Theurgy. 2. Of the Extent of it. 3. Of the Perſian Magick. 4. Of the Origin of the Theology of the Perſian Magi. 5. Of the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology of their Inſtitution. 6. Of their Myſtic-Metaphyſical and Myſtic-Theurgical Sanctity. 7. Of the grand Theory fundamental to their Inſtitution and the principal matters involv'd therein. 8. Of the Tranſmigration of the Soul. 9. Of the Vehicles of the Soul. 10. Of the Purgation of the Vehicle. 11. Of the Purgation of the Soul and the Deſign of it. 12. Of the Philoſophic-Pagans method of the Soul's Liberation and Reduction. 13. Of the Sublimity that is in the Pagan Theology. Sect. 5. Of the Philoſophic-Pagans Theology as Aſtrological and Aſtrological-Magical. 1. The Philoſophic-Pagans Aſtrologize in their Theology. 2. Much of their Learning lay in Aſtrology. 3. Much of the Pagans Magick was complicated with Aſtrology. 4. Of certain Operations in Paganiſm that are Aſtrological-Magical. 5. Aſtrology complicated with Magick in the Teleſmatical Artifice. 6. Of the Ancient and Modern Zabii.

I. WE have conſider'd the Pagan Syſtem of the Univerſe of Rationals, ſo far as it is a Polity of Demons, and ſhould now (going on directly) proceed, to conſider it, as it is a Polity of the Gods in the ſtrict Acceptation: But theſe Gods (which will be ſufficiently notic'd in conſidering the Pagan Syſtem of the Univerſe of Gods) were in great degree unknown to the Popular Pagans, and peculiarly belong to the Philoſophic Pagans Theology; they are therefore not clearly intelligible without underſtanding it; for which reaſon we will repreſent an Account of the Nature and Properties of it in the ſeveral Sections of this Chapter. A conſiderable notice of the Nature of it we have in that Diſtribution, which Scævola (the Learned Pontifex) hath made, of the Pagan Deities (a) into the Poetical, Philoſophical and Political. Which Diſtribution of Gods is the ſame in ſenſe with Varro's Diſtribution of Theology into three kinds: (b) the Mythical or Fabulous, the Phyſical or Natural, the Civil or Political; for the ſecond kind of Theology in this Diſtribution is call'd by Varro (Phyſicon quo philoſophi utuntur) the Philoſophical. But from the Account which theſe Learned Pagans have given of this ſort of Theology, it appeareth, that they look'd upon it as in part only ſtrictly Philſophical and Unpopular; as S. Auſtin ſaith of Varro; when he diſtinguiſh'd the Civil Theology from the Fabulous, and the Phyſical as of it ſelf a third kind of Theology, he would have it underſtood, to be compos'd of both temper'd together rather than ſeparate from both; for he ſaith, that in the Poetic Theology there is too little, and in the Philoſophic Theology too much for the People, which are ſo diſtant from one another, as that yet many things are taken from both into the Civil Theology. He ſuppoſeth therefore, that the Philoſophic Theology was in part Popular (common to the People and the Philoſophers) and in part ſtrictly Philoſophical and Unpopular, as containing many things not expedient for the People to know, above the Capacity of Vulgar Citizens, and containing many Queſtions about the Gods, (c) which are more tolerably diſcours'd within the Walls of the Schools than without in the Forum, that is, amongſt the People. Of this Theology of the Philoſophic Pagans contradiſtinct to their Fabulous and Civil Theology, and in great degree Scholaſtical and remote from the People, there are five eminent Deſcriptive Notices; for it is of kind and quality Phyſical (Phyſical Theory) Metaphyſical, Myſtic-Metaphyſical, Arcane-Theurgical, Aſtrological-Magical. And theſe Notices of it imply, that the Philoſophic-Pagan Theiſm is in great part that which is of kind, quality and ſpecific Comprehenſion Sorcery and Wizzardiſm.

SECT. 1. Of the Philoſophic-Pagan Theology, as it is Phyſical (Phyſical Theory.)

THE Philoſophic-Pagans are diſſonant from the Hebrews (from whom they are thought to have deriv'd their Wiſdom) in the Diſtribution that they make of Wiſdom or Philoſophy. (d) For the Hebrews diſtribute it into the Ethical, the Phyſical, the Theological; but the Philoſophers (uſually) do not thus diſtinguiſh the Phyſical and Theological, for they compriſe the Theological under the Phyſical, and their Theology is a Branch of their Mundane Phyſical Theory, or Phyſiology of the Mundane Syſtem. The School of the Stoicks and that of Plato agree (e) in diſtributing Philoſophy into three parts or kinds; the Logical, Ethical, Phyſical; and the Stoicks ſay, (f) in the Phyſical part the Doctrine of the Gods (or Theology) ought to have the laſt place. So of Plato's Tripartite Diſtribution of Philoſophy (Philoſophy Tripartite is ſaid (g) to come from Plato) one part is the Mundane Phyſical, ἡ περὶ τῶν ὅλων φιλοσοφία, or περὶ τῆς τοῦ παντὸς φύσεως, touching Univerſal Mundane Nature; and to this part of Philoſophy, ἡ τῶν θείων ἐπιστήμη, the Science of the Gods and the things Divine appertaineth. With theſe Pagan Sages φιλοσοφία φυσικὴ, the Philoſophy of Nature, or Phyſiology is the ſame with (h) Ontology or

---

(a) *S.*Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 27.

(b) Ibid. l. 6. c. 5. Plutarch. de placit. phil. l. 1. c. 6.

(c) Quæ facilius intra parietes in ſchola, quàm extra in foro ferre poſſunt aures.

(d) Grot. Not. in Prov. 22. 2c. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 357. ed. 2.

(e) Plutarch. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1035. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 2, 3.

(f) Τῶν δὲ φυσικῶν ἔσχατος εἶναι ὁ περὶ τῶν θεῶν λόγος.

(g) Cic. Academ. Qu. l. 1.

(h) Alcin. de Doctr. Plat. c. 3.

or γνῶσις τῶν ὄντων, the knowledge of Beings (which is the uſual definition of Contemplative Philoſophy) the ſame with (i) φιλόσοφος θεωρία τῶν ὄντων, the Philoſophic Contemplation of the Univerſe of Beings; their Philoſophy of Nature is of ſo large an Acceptation, that it compriſeth their Metaphyſicks, and is divided into (k) the Theory of Senſibles and Incorporeals. (l) Nature alſo is divided into two Principles of things; the one efficient, the other paſſive and material; (m) for Plato affirm'd two Principles of all things, θεὸν ϗ ὕλην, God and the Matter. The Writer de placitis philoſophorum (n) thus expreſſeth the Senſe of the Ancient Phyſiologers (whoſe Phyſiology was principally an Account of the Origin of the Univerſe;) It is impoſſible that Matter alone ſhould be the Principle of all things, but we muſt ſuppoſe alſo an Active or Efficient Cauſe. As Silver alone is not ſufficient to make a Cup, unleſs there be an Artificer to work upon it. And the ſame is to be ſaid concerning Braſs, Wood, and other Matter. Inquiring whence it is that Mankind have a Notion of God? He anſwereth, (o) That the Pulchritude of the Phænomena of the Univerſe firſt ſuggeſted the Notion of God; for no Pulchritude is by chance, but the effect of Art and Skill. For theſe reaſons (and ſuch more) theſe Ancients ſuppos'd two Principles of this Univerſe of things, both of them called Nature (Mundane Nature) τὸ πάσχον, Mundane Corporeal Paſſive Nature, and τὸ ποιοῦν, Mundane Intelligent Active Nature (a Principle of Mind and Counſel in the World, which they called God;) And becauſe the Univerſe conſiſteth of both theſe, their Mundane Phyſiologicals neceſſarily compriſe their Theologicals: Which Porphyry alſo intimateth in his Account of the Theology of the Zoroaſtrian Magi; that Pythagoras converſing with Zabratus (p) learned of him the Doctrine of Univerſal Nature, and the knowledge of the Principles or Archical Cauſes in the Mundane Syſtem of Beings. For theſe ancient Phyſiologers having (in their Theory of the Univerſe) inveſtigated a Principle of Mind and Counſel in the World, which they called God: In the next place they conſider'd the ſeveral Species, Ranks and Orders of Natures and of Beings that conſtitute the Univerſe, calling the Primary and Archical God and Gods; as the Phyſiologizing Atheiſtic Pagans called that which is Primary and Archical in the Univerſe of things (according to their Hypotheſis) by the Name of God and Gods. (q) Anaximander called infinite ſenceleſs Matter τὸ θεῖον, or God; certain Atheiſtic Theologers in Ariſtotle call'd the inanimate Elements Gods, θεοὶ δὲ ϗ ταῦτα, theſe are alſo Gods; and Apollonius Tyanæus (a Theiſt) calleth the firſt Matter (r) Θεὸν ἀΐδιον (Eternal God) attributing Deity and Eternity to the Matter or Chaos (as many of the Ancient Greeks did,) becauſe Primary and Archical in Nature. For this reaſon the Ancients called the firſt or primary Subſtances the Gods, (s) as Ariſtotle affirmeth: And the ſame Notion of the Name uſually occurreth in Platoniſm. (t) All that ever dealt with Theology call ſuch as are the firſt or primary according to nature Gods, and ſay, that the Theological Science is converſant about theſe. Some (ſaith Proclus) appropriate Eſſence or Being to Bodily Subſtance, and ſuppoſe, that all kinds of Incorporeals are as to Eſſence or Being Secondary, that the Principles of Beings are Corporeous, and the Faculty in us which diſcerneth them. Others make all Bodies dependents upon Incorporeals, ſuppoſing, that the firſt and primary Subſiſtence is in Soul and Soul-faculties, and they proceed no further. Theſe, I ſuppoſe, call the moſt excellent Souls Gods, and Science aſcending thus far, and being the the knowledge of theſe, they call Theology. But they that ſuppoſe, that the multitude of Souls are produc'd by a ſenior Principle, and that Mind or Intellect is the prime leader of all; theſe ſay, that the chief end is the union of Soul with Mind, that the intellectual kind of Life excelleth all other; and they make Theology the ſame with the Doctrine of Intellectual Subſtance or Eſſence. Wherefore the Primary Principles of Beings (the Primary and Archical Beings) and the moſt ſelf-ſufficient all Men call Gods, and the Science of theſe Theology. (u) Theology exhibiteth the Doctrine τῶν κυριωτάτων ϗ πρώτων οὐσιῶν, of the moſt principal and primary Subſtances. (w) They that firſt impos'd the Name (Gods) called the Stars Θεοί, (Gods) from the ſwiftneſs of their motion, but afterwards raiſed it, to ſignifie the Incorporeal Intelligible Cauſes of things, and the one Principle and Cauſe of all.

This account of Theology and of the Name Θεοί, Gods (a Name of various Notions in the Pagan Theology) is as a Key to the Platonic Theology, not ſo much to open the Senſe of it as to open the Origin of it. For Plato in his mode of Phyſiologizing (x) rejecteth with diſdain all Corporeals from being Primary and Archical; becauſe whatever is Corporeal, can neither produce, nor conſerve it ſelf, but its Being, Agency and Patiency is by Soul. He demonſtrateth, that Pſychical Eſſence (or Soul) is Senior to Bodies, which Pſychical Eſſence is dependent upon the Intellectual. Having found that Mind or Intellect is the Cauſe and Parent of Souls and Bodies, he proceedeth to another Principle altogether exempt from Intellect, more incorporeal and ineffable, and tranſcendent to Eſſence, whence he deriveth the ſubſiſtence of all Beings. For there muſt be ſuch a Principle tranſcendent to Eſſence and to Intellect, becauſe (y) before multitude there muſt be one (or henotety,) whence multitude proceedeth, and which is the cauſe of Intellect. The Platonic Reaſon having thus inveſtigated the Principle of Principles in the Univerſe, a Principle Senior to Mind ἐν ἀβάτοις ἀποκεκρυμμένην, inacceſſibly bidden and recondite (ſaith Proclus) there are τρεῖς ἀρχικαὶ ὑποστάσεις, three Archical Hypoſtaſes (Principles in the Univerſe) above Bodies in the Platonic Phyſiology. Such a mode of Theologizing is but a ſort of mundane Phyſiologizing, for which Reaſon their mundane Phyſiology is their Theology; as alſo becauſe the World in their Philoſophy is a World of Gods. (z) The whole World is called Jove (ſaith Porphyry,) an Animal conſiſting of Animals and a God of Gods. So the Coſmogonia or Generation of the World is in their Philoſophy a Theogonia or Generation of a World of Gods. Whence Plato's Timæus, which all Men ſay, is a Book of Nature, and Proclus ſaith, (a) τὴν φυσιολογίαν ἔχει σκοπὸν, (the whole of it aimeth at Phyſiology,) is neceſſarily a Book of Pagan Theology. So Pherecydes Syrus, who was ſtiled ὁ θεολόγος, the Theologer, (b) is ſaid to be the firſt amongſt the Grecians, that wrote περὶ φύσεως ϗ θεῶν, of Nature and of the Gods.

SECT.

(i) Procl. plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 28. p. 69.

(k) Euſeb. ſupr. c. 1.

(l) Cic. ſupr.

(m) Laert. in Platon.

(n) l. 1. c. 3.

(o) Ibid. c. 6.

(p) Τόν τε περὶ φύσεως λόγον ἤκουσε, ϗ τίνες αἱ τῶν ὅλων ἀρχαί. De Vit. Pythag. p. 185.

(q) Dr. Cudw. Intell. Syſt. p. 195.

(r) Windet. de vit. Funct. p. p. 34. ed. 3.

(s) Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 1.

(t) Ἅπαντες οὖν, ὅσοι πώποτε θεολογίας εἰσὶν ἡμμένοι, τὰ πρῶτα κατὰ φύσιν θεοὺς ἐπονομάζοντες, περὶ ταῦτα τὴν θεολογικὴν ἐπιστήμην πραγματεύεσθαι φασί. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 3. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 1.

(u) Jambl. προτρεπτ. p. 12.

(w) Simpl. in Epict. p. 200.

(x) Procl. ſupr. & l. 3. c. 21. p. 158. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 1. En. 6. l. 9. c. 5.

(y) Δεῖται πρὸ πολλοῦ τὸ ἓν εἶναι, ἀφ' οὗ ϗ τὸ πολύ. Plotin. En. l. 3. c. 12.

(z) Ζεὺς οὖν ὁ πᾶς κόσμος, ζῶον ἐκ ζώων, καὶ θεὸς ἐκ θεῶν. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 1.

(a) In Tim. p. 1.

(b) Laert. in Pherecyd.

SECT. 2. Of the Philoſophic Pagans Theology as Metaphyſical.

I. IN the Schools of Chriſtendom there is a Two-fold Metaphyſical Theology: For the Science of Metaphyſicks is intituled a (Theologia Naturalis) ſort of Theology which Natural Light furniſheth; and beſides this the Scholaſtic Theology (commonly ſo called) is a Metaphyſical kind of Theology. Such is the Muhammedans Learning called the Science Al Calam, which literally ſignifieth the Science of Speech; but the Name is us'd to ſignifie, and is render'd by Lexicographers and other learned Men (c) Metaphyſica, Theologia Philoſophica, Theologia Scholaſtica, Metaphyſic, Philoſophic and Scholaſtic Theology. The Name Al Calam is moſt agreeable to Logick, but is us'd to ſignifie the Learning of Metaphyſicks (or rather a ſort of Learning that is a medley of Logic and Metaphyſic,) as the Metaphyſicks in Plato are called Dialectica. The Hebrews call this ſort of Learning חכמת דברים The learning of Words, and the diſputacious Pretenders to it are known by the Name of Loquentes; becauſe as ſome ſay, they are idlely talkative: (d) according to others, becauſe they diſpute Dialectically, Metaphyſically and Scholaſtically. And becauſe theſe Scholaſtic Metaphyſicks are a Theology, the word Θεόλογοι in a Latin Verſion of Ariſtotle's Metaphyſicks with Averroes's Commentary is render'd Loquentes. But with this brangling kind of Metaphyſical Theology the old Metaphyſical Theology of the Philoſophic Pagans hath ſmall Affinity; for (agreeably to the Science of Metaphyſicks) it is the Speculation of their ſublime Incorporeals. And becauſe the Stoicks know no ſuch Speculation of ſublime Incorporeals, their Theology is a low and flat mundane Phyſiology, that deſerveth not the Name of Metaphyſicks, nor have they the Name of the Metaphyſical Theologers: But the Name is appropriate to thoſe other Philoſophers, that in their Phyſiology of the mundane Syſtem aſcended to the Speculation of their high Archical Intelligibles and Immaterials; and to theſe Abul-pharagius alſo appropriateth the Name of Theologi, which denoteth a Divine ſort of Philoſophers. (e) He deſtributeth the Philoſophers into three Sorts: The Secular, the Natural and the Theologers. The Secular deny'd any Creator of the World, and affirm'd, that the World always was, as now it is. The Natural (or Naturaliſts) conſider'd the Actions and Paſſions that are in Nature, the Properties of Plants, Animals, and acknowledg'd the Power and Wiſdom of God, but they deny'd the Immortality of the Soul. The Theologers are the later Greek Philoſophers, ſuch as Socrates Plato's Maſter, and Plato Ariſtotle's Maſter, but Ariſtotle is the Man ſaith he,) that reduc'd theſe Sciences into Order and Method. Ariſtotle's Theology is a Branch of his Phyſiology of the mundane Syſtem; for his Gods (called by him ἀρχαὶ, Principles in the Univerſe) are the Intelligences of the ſeveral Celeſtial Spheres, and his ſupreme Deity is τὸ πρῶτον κινοῦν ἀκίνητον, the firſt immovable Mover, or the mover of the primum Mobile. His Metaphyſicks or prime Philoſophy is ſtiled by him θεολογικὴ ἐπιστήμη, the Theological Science, and is thus diſtinguiſh'd from Phyſiology in a narrow Acceptation. (f) There are three Speculative Sciences (according to this Philoſopher;) Phyſice or Phyſiology, the Mathematicks and Theology or the Metaphyſicks. And as the Speculative Sciences in general are more Noble and Excellent than the other, ſo is Theology or Metaphyſicks the moſt honourable of all the Speculatives. This third and laſt is converſant περὶ χωριστὰ ϗ ἀκίνητα, about the things both immovable (which are always the ſame immovably) and ſeparate from matter. If there were no other ſubſtance (ſaith he) beſides theſe Natural things, which are material and movable, then would Phyſiology be the firſt Science: But if there be any immovable Subſtance, the Philoſophy thereof muſt needs in order of Nature be before the other. This prime Philoſophy of his ſublime Incorporeals is uſually called by Ariſtotle Sapience as well as Theology. And ſo the Pythagoreans place their Wiſdom in their Metaphyſical Sapience; for according to Pythagoras Wiſdom is (g) The Science of Beings that are properly ſuch (ὄντως ὄντα, Beings indeed) not equivocally ſo called. Thoſe of an higher ſort of Nature, the Incorporeal and Metaphyſical (h) the immaterial and ſempiternal and ſole active, that is, the incorporeous, Pythagoras called ὄντα Beings; other things are equivocally ſo called, and by Participation of theſe, (i) the Corporeous and Material, which are the things of Generation and Corruption, and therefore ſuch as are not (ſubſiſtent) Beings. Philoſophy (the prime Philoſophy) is τῶν καλλίστων θεωρία, the Contemplation of the things moſt excellent; It is converſant (k) about the primary excellent things, the Divine, Immortal, and always the ſame. In theſe tranſcendent Speculations the celebrated Philoſophy of the School of Plato mainly conſiſteth; the Wiſdom of thoſe ſublime Philoſophers * was their Metaphyſical Sapience, and this their Metaphyſical Sapience is the ancient Scholaſtic-Theology.

II. The Platonic Metaphyſical Theology confronteth and oppoſeth (τὸ ἀεὶ ὄν) the Nature which always is to generate corruptible Nature. It is the proper Genius of Philoſophers (ſaith Plato in his Sixth de Rep.) they always love that Diſcipline, which layeth open the Knowledge (l) of Nature or Eſſence which ſempiternally is, and is not chang'd by Generation and Corruption. This Diſcipline is Plato's Dialectica, which he ſaith (in his Seventh de Rep.) is the ſupreme of all other, and the end of other Diſciplines; and he thinketh it requiſite, that Youth ſhould not be admitted to it till Thirty Years of Age, at which time they are to be try'd, if they can aſcend ἐπ' αὐτὸ τὸ ὂν μετ' ἀληθείας, to that which indeed is (or Being it ſelf) with Truth. For this Platonic Ontology is an aſcent of the Mind, ἀπὸ τοῦ γιγνομένου ἐπὶ τὸ ὄν, from what is generated to that which is. Whence Celſus in Origen repreſenteth and highly recommendeth this Summary of the Platonic Theology, wherein are confronted and oppoſed (m) Eſſence and Generation, intelligible and ſenſible. Truth is with Eſſence, Falſity with Generation. Of Truth there is Science, of the other but Opinion. Let any Man read this Diſcourſe more at large in Origen, and then let him try, if he can believe Origen, that his Adverſary was an Epicurean; for he may be ſatisfied from this one Diſcourſe, that no Man admir'd Plato more than Celſus, or more rightly repreſented his Senſe; which was the ſame with that of Parmenides; who ſaid, that there are two Doctrines: The one of Theological and Metaphyſical things, called by him ἀλήθεια, Truth; the other of Phyſical and Corporeal things called by him δόξα, Opinion. So Plato in the beginning of his Timæus, to prove the Origin of (the ſenſible) World, diſtinguiſheth in this manner. (n) We ought in the firſt place according to my Opinion, to make a diſtinction betwixt that which always is, and hath no Generation; and that which is generated, but never truly is. The former of which is comprehenſible by Intellection with Reaſon, being always the ſame and like it ſelf. The latter of them that which is generated and periſheth, but never truly is, is the object of Opinion only (opinable only) together with irrational Senſe. Now every thing that is generated, is neceſſarily generated by ſome Cauſe. In this Diſcourſe Plato is ſuppos'd by a learned Author (o) very carefully to diſtinguiſh betwixt God and the Creature, determining the bounds between them. But this is not imaginable, ſeeing the ſenſible World is with Plato a generated God. Seeing the inviſible Subordinate Gods according to Plato are cauſed to exiſt but without Geneſis; ſeeing according to Plato's way of arguing incorporeal Souls are not generated, nor are Creatures, but muſt exiſt from Eternity. The Pagan Theologers never confront and oppoſe God and the Creature (as ſuch,) nor doth Plato in this Diſcourſe: But the Antitheſis which he maketh, is between τὸ ἀεὶ ὄν (that which ſempiternally is) and generate-corruptible Nature; betweeen τοῦ ὄντος χώρα, the Region of that which truly is, (p) and τῆς γενέσεως χώρα, the Region of Generation which ſtandeth againſt it. Thus he repreſenteth his own Senſe. (q) We have made the diviſion before into two kinds: One is the Paradigm or Exemplar, which is intelligible only and always the ſame; the other is the imitamen and reſemblance thereof, Generate and Viſible. Afterwards diſcourſing of the Forms or Species of Fire, Water, Earth and Air, and of the difference between Knowledge and Opinion, he inferreth. It muſt be acknowledg'd, that there is Species always the ſame, not ſubject to Generation or Corruption, neither receiving any thing into it ſelf from elſewhere, nor removing it ſelf to any thing elſe, inviſible and imperceptible by any bodily Senſe, and intelligible only. There is a ſecond thing of the ſame Name with the Species but equivocally ſo called, the Similitude of it, Senſible, Generate, always carried about, riſing and periſhing, comprehenſible by Opinion with Senſe.

(c) Pocock. Spec. p. 195, 198. Lex. Heptaglott. col. 1735.

(d) Coſri p. 360. ed. Buxtorf.

(e) Hiſt. Dynaſt. p. 60.

(f) Metaph. l. 6. c. 1.

(g) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 29. Porphyr. de vit. Pythag. p. 202.

(h) Τὰ ἄυλα ϗ ἀΐδια ϗ μονοδραστικά, ὅπερ ἐστὶ τὰ ἀσώματα.

(i) Σωματικὰ ἤδη καὶ ὑλικά. γεννητά τε καὶ φθαρτά, ϗ ὄντως οὐδέποτε ὄντα.

(k) Περὶ τὰ καλά, πρῶτα ϗ θεῖα, ϗ ἀκήρατα καὶ ἀεὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ ϗ ὡσαύτως ἔχοντα. Jambl. ſupr. c. 12.

* Alii Metaphyſicam, Platonici auguſtiore nomine Theologiam dixere. L. Holſtein. de Vit. & Script. Porphyr. c. 9.

(l) Τῆς οὐσίας τῆς ἀεὶ οὔσης καὶ μὴ πλανωμένης ὑπὸ γενέσεως ϗ φθορᾶς.

(m) Οὐσία ϗ γένεσις, νοητὸν, ὁρατόν· μετ' οὐσίας μὲν ἀλήθεια, μετὰ δὲ γενέσεως πλάνη. Περὶ ἀλήθειαν μὲν οὖν ἐπιστήμη, περὶ δὲ θάτερον δόξα. Or. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 362, 363.

The Platonic Metaphyſical Theology therefore confronteth and oppoſeth the intelligible and ſenſible World, the intelligible (Platonic) Ideas with our Corporeals and Senſibles (r) which cannot be the Objects of Science, becauſe being ſingulars and unſtable they are incapable of firmitude and ſtability of Science, nor can there be any definitions of them, nor are they the true things but their Images. For the true things are the intelligible Ideal Natures of things, which are Univerſal, Eternal and Immutable, (s) incorporeal and intelligible, permanent and always the ſame, and the things themſelves moſt primarily ſo, the cauſes alſo that others are ſuch as they are according to their likeneſs to thoſe Ideas. Ariſtotle explodeth as Nugacities theſe ſublime Incorporeals; But the height and upſhot of Plato's Philoſophemes (as Atticus ſaith) is touching this intelligible and eternal Eſſence of the Ideas. He that reacheth hither is ſurely Happy: But he that falleth ſhort and can be no Contemplator here, is left altogether deſtitute of Felicity. The popular ſort of Mankind therefore, becauſe they can be no Centemplators of theſe Sublimities, muſt be deſtitute of Happineſs; and for the ſame Reaſon they muſt be deſtitute of Knowledge, as Plato repreſenteth them in his Fifth de Rep. to this Senſe. “They have great curioſity about ſenſible things, to gain a ſort of Knowledge of them, being φιλοθεάμονες καὶ φιλήκοοι, greedy of beholding and hearing fair and delectable ſights and ſounds, and they are very much delighted with them, becauſe of their Pulchritude; but to the Nature of Pulchritude it ſelf their cogitation cannot reach: Whereas true Philoſophers are τῆς ἀληθείας φιλοθεάμονες, ſtudious of beholding what is Truth. The Philoſopher only is awake, the popular ſort that are delighted with the Pulchritude of fair ſights and ſounds, but think not of Pulchritude it ſelf, nor is it poſſible to conduct them to the knowledge of it, live in a Dream. For he dreameth, that taketh the Similitude of a thing, not for the Similitude, but the thing it ſelf. The Philoſophers contemplate αὐτὰ ἕκαστα, every it ſelf (ipſa quæque;) they behold αὐτὸ τὸ καλὸν, fair it ſelf, and diſtinguiſh it from the things that participate of it, not thinking that it is they, or they are it. The popular ſort behold πολλὰ καλὰ, πολλὰ δίκαια, many fair and many juſt things, but αὐτὸ τὸ καλὸν, αὐτὸ τὸ δίκαιον, fair it ſelf, juſt it ſelf, they ſee not, nor are they capable of being guided to the knowledge of it. Now theſe many Fairs many Juſts are in part ſuch, in part not ſuch, and therefore are in the middle between Ens and non Ens. Wherefore they are the object not of Knowledge, but of Opinion, which is in the middle between Ignorance and Knowledge; and conſequently the popular ſort are not Men of Knowledge but of Opinion. In this Diſcourſe of Plato we may contemplate the Origin of his Metaphyſical Deities; for his Metaphyſic is buſied about his Intelligibles (ſupra-ſenſibiles) and Incorporeals, that are agreeably to the great Buſineſs of his Dialogues (which is the purſuit of Abſtract Ideas) certain Abſtract Platonic Metaphyſical Ideas or Species; wherefore his Metaphyſical Deities (the ſublime Intelligibles and Incorporeals of his Theology) are certain Abſtract Platonic Metaphyſical Ideas. Such is his firſt and higheſt Deity (which the Platoniſts ſay, is above all Species and Ideas) ipſum unum, one it ſelf, or τὸ μόνως ἕν, that is only one, nothing more than one, (which is an Idea of greateſt ſimplicity poſſible) ipſum bonum, good it ſelf, or ἰδέα τ' ἀγαθοῦ, the Idea of

(n) Ἔστιν οὖν δὴ κατ' ἐμὴν δόξαν πρῶτον διαιρετέον τάδε· τί τὸ ὂν μὲν ἀεὶ, γένεσιν δὲ οὐκ ἔχον· καὶ τί τὸ γιγνόμενον μὲν, ὂν δὲ οὐδέποτε. τὸ μὲν δὴ νοήσει μετὰ λόγου περιληπτὸν, ἀεὶ κατὰ ταὐτὰ ὄν. τὸ δ' αὖ δόξῃ μετ' αἰσθήσεως ἀλόγου δοξαστὸν, γιγνόμενον καὶ ἀπολλύμενον, ὄντως δὲ οὐδέποτε ὄν. Πᾶν δὲ αὖ τὸ γιγνόμενον ὑπ' αἰτίου τινὸς ἐξ ἀνάγκης γίγνεσθαι.

(o) Dr. Cudw. Intell. Syſt. p. 570.

(p) Procl. in Tim. p. 69. The Separation of the Soul from the Body is ἐκ γενέσεως φεύγειν εἰς οὐσίαν, to flee from Generation to Eſſence. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 6.

(q) Δύο εἴδη διειλόμεθα· ἓν μὲν ὡς παραδείγματος εἶδος ὑποτεθὲν νοητὸν, καὶ ἀεὶ κατὰ ταὐτὰ ὄν· μίμημα δὲ παραδείγματος δεύτερον, γένεσιν ἔχον καὶ ὁρατόν.

(r) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 29.

(s) Ἀσώματα καὶ νοητὰ, κατὰ ταὐτὰ καὶ ὡσαύτως ἔχοντα ἀεὶ, καὶ μάλιστα μὲν πρώτως αὐτὰ ὄντα, παραίτια δὲ καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις τοῦ εἶναι τοιαῦτα ἕκαστα οἷάπερ ἐστι, κατὰ τὴν πρὸς αὐτὰ ὁμοιότητα. Attic. ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 15. c. 13.

good. His ſecond Deity is (t) the firſt Fair and Pulchritude it ſelf, in which are contained the things that are indeed and all the Eſſences of all Beings. This Deity is κοσμὸς νοητὸς, the intelligible World, (or World of Intelligibles,) κόσμος ἰδανικὸς, (as Plato ſpeaketh) the Ideal mundane Syſtem.

Theſe two Worlds confronted in Platoniſm are alſo two Animals, the comprehenſions of Animals, and two Gods the comprehenſions of Gods. For the ſenſible World is a θεὸς γεννητὸς, generated God (as Plato calleth it ;) and it is (u) θεὸς ἐκ θεῶν, a God that is a Comprehenſion of Gods. The intelligible World is ſometimes of a larger and ſometimes of a narrower acceptation in Platoniſm. In the narrower acceptation as it ſignifieth the Paradigm, the Archetypal world, it is a God the intelligible God, (according to that of Plato in the concluſion of his Timæus, εἰκὼν τοῦ νοητοῦ θεοῦ αἰσθητὸς, and this ſenſible World is the Image of the intelligible God ;) and this intelligible God is a comprehenſion of Gods, according to that of Plotinus ; (w) remove all bulk, place and all imagination of Matter, then pray the God to come, and he will come bringing his World with him, μετὰ πάντων τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ θεῶν, with all the Gods that are in him. This Deity alſo (as the ſenſible World is (x) Ζῶον ἐκ Ζώων, an Animal, a comprehenſion of Animals) is call'd by Plato in the beginning of his Timæus, Ζῶον ἀΐδιον, a ſempiternal Animal, and is ſaid to contain in it τὰ νοητὰ ζῶα πάντα, all the intelligible Animals, as this ſenſible World doth us and other ſenſible Animals. The ſenſible mundane Animal is an Image of the eternal mundane Animal, and the moveable time which belongeth to the one, is according to Plato an Image of the ſtanding Eternity of the other. And becauſe he attributeth to it a ſtanding Eternity, and calleth it τὸ ὂν μὲν ἀεὶ, γένεσιν δὲ οὐκ ἔχον, That which always is and hath no Generation, hence (y) J. Mart. Euſebius, and many other Theologers of the Church will have this Branch of Platoniſm deriv'd from and coincident with that Branch of holy Scriptural Theiſm, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ὁ ὢν, I am he that is. The vanity of which Paralleliſm will be ſufficiently confuted by obſerving only, that the ſublime Attribute ὁ ὢν, he that is, (as it is underſtood by theſe Theologers of the Church) belongeth to every one of the intelligible Ideas ; every one of theſe intelligible Animals (ſuch as ipſe Homo, ipſe Equus, the Ideal Man or Horſe) may ſpeak in the Language and Stile of a Deity, Ἐγὼ εἰμὶ ὁ ὢν, I am he that is.

III. But in this Branch of Platonic Ontology there is ſomething of ſolid truth, that is uſeful to the purpoſe of holy Living ; for it importeth an elegant diſparagement of Generate-corruptible Nature, as Plutarch diſcourſeth. (z) “We do not participate any thing of Being truly and indeed ſo. All Mortal Nature, it is between Generation and Corruption, φάσμα παρέχων καὶ δόκησιν ἀμυδρὰν ϗ ἀβέβαιον αὐτῆς, it exhibiteth only a ſlender appearance and matter of unſtable Opinion. If a Man fixeth his Mind upon it, thinking to take hold of it, it fareth with him as in graſping an handful of Water ; while he graſpeth it and compreſſeth it, it glideth away and is gone. Our Reaſon purſuing an evident clearneſs in contemplating any of theſe Paſſibles and Changeables, unſteddily wandereth to here it's riſing, there it's periſhing, not being able to take hold of any thing Permanent, nor that truly is. For no Man can go twice into the ſame River, according to Heraclitus, nor twice touch any mortal Subſtance in Conſiſtence ; but with a quickneſs and celerity of Change it diſſipateth and congregateth again : Or rather, not again, nor afterwards, but at the ſame time and at once it is conſtituted and periſheth, and hath an acceſs and receſs. Hence the Origin of it doth not terminate in Being ; for its Geneſis doth not ceaſe, nor ſtand at a ſtay, but is always changing, from the Seed to make an Embryo, then an Infant, then a Boy, next a Youth, then a young Man, then a Man, an elderly Man, an old Man, deſtroying the former Geneſes and Ages by the ſucceeding. But we ridiculouſly are afraid of one death, having dy'd ſo many, and yet dying. For not only, as Heraclitus ſaid, the death of Fire is the generation of Air, and the death of Air the generation of Water, but this may be more clearly exemplify'd in Men. For when the old Man is generated, the Man is dead ; the young Man died into the Man, the Boy into the young Man, the Infant into the Boy, Yeſterday's Man died into this Day's, and this Days Man dieth into to Morrow's. No one is permanent, nor is one, but the Matter whirling and being circum-agitated about one Phantaſm, one common expreſs Species or Similitude (that appearance which every Man is) and ſliding away, we become various and many. For how do we continue the ſame, ſeeing other things pleaſe us now than formerly, we love and hate, admire and diſparage Contrarieties, we uſe other Speeches, have other Paſſions, not retaining the ſame Aſpect, the ſame Form, nor the ſame Mind. For none can ſuffer Alterities without a Change, nor changing can he be the ſame. And if the ſame is not, neither is he ; but he is changing himſelf, and becoming ſtill another after another. It is the Fallacy of Senſe through Ignorance of what truly is, to ſuppoſe that which appeareth to be. Τί οὖν ὄντως ὂν ἐστι ; What then is that which truly is ? (a) That which is Sempiternal, not Generate, not Corruptible, wherein time maketh no Change.

But theſe ſublime Attributes being incompetible to Soul, it can neither be ſo high as that which truly is, nor yet is it ſo low as Generate-corruptible Nature. The Platoniſts therefore (b) count it of an intermediate Nature between both, ἀγέννητον ἄρα ϗ γέννητον, αἰώνιόν τε ϗ οὐκ αἰώνιον, not Generate and Generate, Sempiternal and not Sempiternal. So Geneſis is ſaid to be (c) incompetible to the Gods, although their Exiſtence be ἀπ' αἰτίας, from a cauſe. Uſually they call the matter (d) τὸ μὴ ὂν, which ſignifieth Non-entity ; οὔτε γιγνόμενον, nor is it that which is generated or made, ſaith Proclus ; yet this Platoniſt denieth the Self-exiſtence or improduction of the matter. Platonic Language muſt be underſtood with Caution ; and it is as eaſie, to make Lexicons (which Joſ. Scaliger ſaith, is the worſt of Labours) as to interpret the meaning of it.

SECT. 3. Of the Philoſophic Pagan Theology as it is Myſtic-Metaphyſical.

I. THE Platoniſts Metaphyſical Theology is not meer Cyclical Metaphyſicks, much of

(t) Τὸ πρώτως καλὸν ϗ αὐτόκαλον, ἐν ᾧ τὰ ὄντως ὄντα ϗ ἡ πᾶσα οὐσία τῶν ὄντων. Porphyr. ap. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 1. p. 32.

(u) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 1.

(w) En. 5. l. 8. c. 9.

(x) Stob. ubi ſupr.

(y) J. Mart. Paræn. p. 19, 20. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 9. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 11. Eugub. de per. phil. l. 3. c. 7. Huet. Dem. Ev. p. 4. c. 2. S. 13. Theodoret. Θεραπ. Ser. 2.

(z) De Ei ap. Delph. v. Viv. in Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 11. Διώκομεν τὸ φεῦγον ἀεὶ κινούμενον. Procl. in Tim. p. 339.

(a) Τὸ ἀΐδιον, ϗ ἀγέννητον, ϗ ἄφθαρτον ᾧ χρόνος οὐδεὶς μεταβολὴν ἐπάγει.

(b) Liv. Galant. compar. l. 12. p. 320. Procl. in Tim. p. 69, 72.

(c) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 28.

(d) Ficin. Arg. in Tim. c. 7. & Arg. in 5. de Rep.

of it is Myſtic-Metaphyſical; for (e) according to the Diſcipline of the Pythagoreans it is their way, to be Sublime, Intellectual, Entheal, annexing all things to the Intelligibles as dependent upon them, to be Myſtical, Symbolical, Reductive (or Subvective) in all things they treat of. At this rate they Phyſiologize, treating of the matters of Natural Philoſophy in their Theological mode, which is agreeable to the Genius of their Maſter, of whom they ſay, (f) Plato teacheth us, τὰ μυστικὰ περὶ τῶν θείων νοήματα, Myſtical Notions touching Divine things. In teaching theſe Myſtical Notions he doth not always obſerve the ſame Method of Diſcipline; for ſometimes he teacheth ἐνθεαστικῶς, Entheaſtically or Enthuſiaſtically, like a Myſtic-Metaphyſical Devotioniſt; as in his Phædrus; (g) being in a tranſport from Divine Afflation, in ſuch a madneſs which is better than Human Intelligence, he is ſaid to teach Arcane Doctrines touching ſeveral ſorts of Gods. Sometimes Plato teacheth διαλεκτικῶς ἢ ἐπιστημονικῶς, dialectically or in the way of Science (like a Myſtic-Metaphyſical Scholaſtick; as in his Sophiſta he treateth dialectically, (h) touching Ens or Being, and the ſeparate Nature of the Monad from the comprehenſion of Beings. Beſides theſe Modes of Theologizing (the Entheaſtical and Dialectical) Plato uſeth a veiled and Cryptic way of teaching (i) Symbolically and Mythically or by Images. As Orpheus repreſented his Myſteries and Arcane pieces of Wiſdom by Tales and Fables; and the Pythagoreans attributed ſeveral Numbers and Geometrical Figures to ſeveral Gods, which they made ſacred to them. Some diſtinguiſh the Orphic from the Pythagoric mode of teaching; others ſay, (k) the Pythagoric Mode is the ſame with the Orphic, and was deriv'd from it; for Orpheus taught the eternal Nature of Number is the primary Principle of the whole Heaven and Earth and the intermediate Nature; and alſo the root of the things Divine and of the Gods and Demons.

II. From the firſt of the Platoniſts θεολογίας τύποι, (Modes of Theologizing) we learn, that their ſublime Metaphyſicals are (in part at leaſt) ſo Myſtick and Arcane, that they could not be known without Divine Revelation, Inſpiration, and Arcane Tradition; and that the Pagan Metaphyſical Myſticks pretend to Theologize by Inſpiration; (l) as Proclus is ſaid to have written his Book of the Mother of the Gods by Divine Inſpiration, themſelves call their Philoſophy ἔνθεος φιλοσοφία, Entheal or Inſpiration-Philoſophy: And becauſe Ariſtotle's Philoſophy is Technical, not Entheal, Iſidore the Platoniſt deſpis'd and rejected it; for he affirm'd, that a good Ingeny, Sagacity of Mind and Quickneſs of Phancy are not the principal cauſe of Knowledge, (m) but that there is a Divine Correption and Occupation, which ſedately openeth and purgeth the Eyes of the Soul, irradiating her with intellectual Light for the beholding and diſcerning of Truth and Falſhood; without which all other Endowments are of no avail; which is agreeable to the Pythagoric Rule, (n) ſpeak not of the Pythagoric Divine things without Light; and to what Jamblichus reporteth of Pythagoras, (o) that after a divine manner be heal'd and purg'd the Soul, and exſuſcitated that which is Divine in her, and carry'd, ἐπὶ τὸ νοητὸν τὸ θεῖον ὄμμα, to that which is intelligible the Divine Eye, which according to Plato, is of more importance to be preſerv'd than Millions of Fleſhly Eyes. There was great reaſon for this Sollicitude about the Divine Eye (which I ſuppoſe, (p) is that third Eye, which Plato ſeem'd to himſelf to have) becauſe by this only ἡ περὶ τῶν ὄντων ἁπάντων ἀλήθεια, the truth touching the univerſality of Beings is diſcern'd. But beſides this ſedate kind of Inſpiration (intellectual Irradiation) which the Platoniſts pretend to, they Theologize alſo from a Bacchical ſort of Enthuſiaſm, Extaſie (Alienation of Mind) Rapture, Divine Fury, which is the ſame Principle, whence the Pagan Poets Theologiz'd (whom Plato in his Io accounteth Divine Enthuſiaſts and Interpreters of the Gods) as alſo the Delphic Pythia, the Dodonean Prieſteſſes, and Sibylla, as Plato diſcourſeth in his Phædrus. Proclus uſually ſaith of himſelf and his Fellow-Platoniſts, that they were acted by Enthuſiaſms; and he calleth his Maſter (q) τὸν ὡς ἀληθῶς Βάκχον, the true Bacchus or Bacchical Enthuſiaſt, who being ſuperlatively Entheal in Platoniſm, made the light of that wonder and aſtoniſhment, the Platonic Theory, to ſhine even unto us. And that we may not ſuppoſe Platonic Enthuſiaſm, to be nothing more than ſome Emotion of an impaſſionated Mind, we are told, that ſuch as Theologize Entheaſtically, are (r) ὑπ' αὐτῶν κινούμενοι θεῶν, moved and acted by the Gods themſelves. If the Platoniſts did not believe themſelves or their Maſters inſpir'd Men, it is much that they ſhould believe their own Theology touching ſuch Platonic Sublimities, that are manifeſtly beyond the reach of all Humane Cognizance; ſuch as (s) the ſuper-celeſtial place, where there is the true Eſſence, the Field of Truth, and the Meadow, the Kingdom of Adraſtia, and the Divine Chorus of the Virtues, and where Souls are fed with the Divine Ideas. Their Syſtem of Theology ſtandeth upon the Credit of certain Pagan Enthuſiaſts of the elder times, from whom (as themſelves ſay) they receiv'd it by way of Myſtery and Arcane Tradition. (t) For all the Greek Theology is the Progeny of the Orphic Myſtagogy (Arcane Diſcipline.) Pythagoras being firſt taught by Aglaophemus the Orgia or Myſteries touching the Gods, Plato was the next, that receiv'd the perfect knowledge of theſe things both from the Pythagoric and Orphic Writings. The Philoſophy of Pythagoras is ſaid to be (u) originally a Tradition from the Gods; and the Chalday Oracles (that are accounted by the Platoniſts genuine Divine Oracles) are called by Proclus (w) θεοπαράδοτος μυσταγωγία, the Myſtagogy or Arcane Diſcipline deliver'd by the Gods. From theſe Oracles a Party of Theologers in the Church of Rome have deriv'd much of their Myſtical Divinity, that is hugely agreeable to the Genius of the Platoniſts, who were a Sect of Myſtic-Metaphyſical Devoto's and Inſpirado's.

III. From the ſecond Mode of Platonic Theologizing we learn, that there is a certain Paralleliſm between thoſe two Dialogues of Plato his Sophiſta and his Parmenides. For he muſt be ſuppos'd, to teach, not Entheaſtically or Symbolically in his Parmenides, but Dialectically, as he teacheth in his Sophiſta. Both theſe Dialogues muſt be ſuppos'd, to be Books of Platonic Scholaſticiſm; and as his Sophiſta is a Metaphy-

(c) Ex Pythagoreorum inſtituto Τὸ ὑψηλόνουν, τὸ νοερὸν, τὸ ἔνθεον, τὸ ἀπὸ τῶν νοητῶν πάντα ἐξάπτειν, τὸ μυστικῶς τὰ πράγματα καὶ συμβολικῶς ἐνδεικνύμενον, τὸ ἀνάγωγον, ubique adhibent. L. Holſten. de Vit. & Scr. Porphyr. c. 9.

(f) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 4.

(g) Νυμφόληπτος γενόμενος, καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης νοήσεως τὴν κρείττονα μανίαν ἀλλαξάμενος.

(h) Περὶ τοῦ ὄντος, καὶ τῆς τοῦ ἑνὸς ἀπὸ τῶν ὄντων χωριστῆς ὑποστάσεως.

(i) Συμβολικῶς καὶ μυθικῶς ἢ δι' εἰκόνων.

(k) Jambl. *de vit. Pythag. c.*28. p. 135.

(l) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 54.

(m) Phot. cod. 242. col. 1034.

(n) Περὶ πυθαγορείων ἄνευ φωτὸς μὴ λάλει.

(o) *De Vit. Pythag. c.*16. p. 76.

(p) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 28.

V. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 92.

(q) Theol. Plat. l. 4. p. 215.

(r) Ibid. l. 1. c. 4.

(s) Ibid. l. 4. c. 4.

(t) Ibid. l. 1. c. 5. & in Tim. p. 289.

(u) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 1.

(w) Gale in Jambl. p. 203.

Metaphyſical Altercation de Ente, ſo his Parmenides is a Metaphyſical Debate de Uno. As in his Sophiſta he treateth, (x) touching Ens or Eſſence and the ſeparate nature of the Monad (or Henotety) from the Comprehenſion of Entia: So in his Parmenides he demonſtrateth, (y) The Proceſſes of Eſſence from the Monad, and the Eminence or Tranſcendence of the Henotety. Agreeably to the Nature of the Platonic Scholaſticiſm this Platonic Dialogue is Myſtic beyond all parallel; both becauſe the Philoſopher (as Atticus in Euſebius ſaith of Ariſtotle comparing him to the Cuttle-fiſh) hideth himſelf in his own Ink: And becauſe the Subject-matter of it tranſcendeth the Faculty of Underſtanding and the Region of Intelligibility. The Subject-matter of this Enigmatical Dialogue is (together with the Platonic Idea's) Ipſum Unum, One it ſelf, which (as Ipſum magnum, Magnitude it ſelf,) is an Idea. Touching this Unum one (which is in no reſpect multa or more than one) the Parmenides pretendeth to demonſtrate ſuch a ſort of Attributes, as Plutarch imputeth to the Stoicks Univerſe; (z) that it is Non Ens, can neither do nor ſuffer any thing, nor be in a place; neither remain in a poſture, nor be in motion, neither be light nor heavy, animate or inanimate. For ſuppoſing Ipſum Unum to be, the Parmenides pretendeth to demonſtrate, it is neither whole nor part, can neither ſtand nor move; is neither the ſame with, nor different from it ſelf; is neither like nor unlike to it ſelf nor any other; is no where, nor in any Time: And becauſe it is above Eſſence, (a) it is of no Name, nor is it the Object of Speech, or Science, or Senſe, or Opinion. There is no Congruity, no Proportion between the firſt Principle and Underſtanding; it tranſcendeth the kind of things intelligible, as Ficinus ſaith, (b) principium rerum non habens cum intellectu proportionem, ſupereminet Genus intelligibile. Without the Vice and Crime of ſpeaking evil of things we underſtand not, one may ſafely pronounce, that Plato's Myſtical Parmenides can be nothing better than a ſublime Platonic Crotchet, a Metaphyſical Griphus, or as Plato himſelf calleth the Diſpute there πραγματειώδης παιδιά, a troubleſome Sport.

IV. From the third Mode of Platonic Theologizing we learn, that the Pythagoric Theology is (c) κατ' ἀριθμὸν θεολογία, a Number-kind of Theology. The Pythagoreans made uſe of Numbers for Devotion, Divination and Contemplation. Their ſtudy was about Numbers and Lines, and of theſe for the moſt part (d) they made Oblations to the Gods; calling one Number Minerva, another Diana, and another Apollo; as alſo one Number they called Juſtice, and another Temperance; ſo Geometrical Figures alſo. And by theſe Firſt-Fruits and Oblations they ſo pleas'd the Gods, that calling any of them by their Name, they had them and the benefit of uſing them for Divination and the finding of things. (e) Abaris buſied himſelf about Sacrifices, thoſe of Cocks eſpecially, to make Preſages. Pythagoras would not take him off from his ſearch after what is true, but he counted a Cock ſacred to the Sun, and taught him a ſafer way of finding what is true than by Blood; for he did the Buſineſs by Arithmetical Learning. He made by Numbers καὶ θαυμασίαν πρόγνωσιν καὶ θεραπείαν τῶν θεῶν, both a wonderful preſagiency and ſervice of the Gods.

The other uſe of Numbers amongſt the Pythagoreans hath reſpect to Contemplation; for by the ſtudy of Numbers (and of the Mathematicks in general) their Minds were prepared for the Contemplation of (f) τὰ ὄντως ὄντα, the things that truly are, the Incorporeal Forms and Primary Archical Cauſes. And they made ſeveral Numbers the Symbols of thoſe things, which were thought to be of like nature with thoſe Numbers; ſuppoſing, that all things were like to certain Numbers according to that great Principle of theirs, —ἀριθμῷ δέ τε πάντ' ἐπέοικεν. This Number-kind of Philoſophy or Theology produc'd that celebrated Myſtic-Metaphyſical Maxim of Parmenides, Xenophanes, Meliſſus, and other Ancients, of which Ariſtotle ſaith, (g) This ſeemeth to be an ancient Opinion, That an Unit is the Principle. So the Pythagoreans ſay, that a Monad is the Principle of all things (which Monad or Unit theſe Pagan Sages count τὸν ὑπεράνω θεόν, the higheſt God;) and the Platoniſts are known to hold, that (h) a Monad is the Root of all. As their Number-kind of Theologizing produc'd their firſt Principle, ſo the reſt of their Triad iſſu'd from the ſame Fountain; for their Triad is τὸ πρῶτον ἕν, the firſt Unite, ἓν πολλά, one-many, ἓν καὶ πολλά, one and many. Their Theological Theorems and Raciocinations are thoſe of the Number-kind of Theology; ſuch as that of the Pythagoreans (i) Numbers, (the intelligible Ideas) are the cauſes of Eſſence to other things. Porphyry proveth, (k) that Mind is not the Principle of All, πολλὰ γάρ ἐστιν ὁ νοῦς, for Mind or Intellect is many, now one muſt neceſſarily be before many; which is a Number-kind of Theologizing; ſo Plotinus argueth, that Intellect and Underſtanding is incompetible to the firſt Principle, (l) πολλὰ ἄρα καὶ οὐχ ἓν τὸ νοεῖν, Underſtanding is Multitude, not One; therefore where there is no Multitude, there is no Intellection. And as the Pythagoric Theology, ſo the Phyſiology alſo of that Sect of Philoſophers was of the Number-kind; as appeareth from Plato's Compoſition of the Soul of the World (for it is compos'd of Numbers;) from Pythagoras's firſt Principles of things, a Monad and a Dyad, or an Unit and a Binary; and from his celebrated Tetractys or Quaternary.

For that the famous Tetractys was (amongſt other things) a Phyſiological Symbol, the moſt of the Learned Pagans that treat of theſe matters do agree; (m) Plutarch, Porphyry, Proclus. Themiſtius alſo ſaith, (n) that the Pythagoreans made Numbers the Principles of all Senſibles; and Sextus Empiricus ſaith, The Pythagoreans ſuppos'd, that Univerſal Nature was adminiſtred according to Numbers. And Philo diſcourſeth Pythagorically, that the Quaternary is the firſt Number, which ſheweth the nature of a Solid, the foregoing Numbers being dedicated to Incorporeals. And that Heaven was made in perfect Number, for ſuch is the Tetrad. Agreeably to theſe Notices of the Pythagoric Phyſiology the Number Four was thought by the Pythagoreans, τῶν φυσικῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων πηγή, the Fountain of natural Effects, and was call'd, (o) The World, Body, Harmony, the exciter of Divine Rapture, (denoting the enraviſhingly harmonious Conſtitution of the Univerſe) the Key-bearer of Nature. And becauſe it is the Root-number in Nature and Phyſiology, and denoted the four Elementary Natures (Fire, Water, Earth and Air) the Golden Verſes call it, (p) The Fountain, containing the Roots

(x) Περὶ τοῦ ὄντος καὶ τοῦ ἑνὸς ἀπὸ τῶν ὄντων χωριστῆς ὑποστάσεως.

(y) Τάς τε τοῦ ὄντος ἀπὸ τοῦ ἑνὸς προόδους καὶ τὴν τοῦ ἑνὸς ὑπεροχήν. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 4.

(z) Adv. Stoic. p. 1073, 1074.

(a) Οὐδ' ὄνομά ἐστιν αὐτῷ, οὐδὲ λόγος, οὐδέ τις ἐπιστήμη, οὐδὲ αἴσθησις, οὐδὲ δόξα.

(b) Com. in Plotin. p. 525.

(c) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 28. p. 134.

(d) Porph. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 36.

(e) Jambl. ſupr. p. 94. 95. 136.

(f) Porph. de vit. Pythag. p. 202, 203. Voſſ. de Philoſ. Sect. c. 6.

(g) Ἔοικε παλαιὰ εἶναι, αὕτη ἡ δόξα, ὅτι, τὸ ἓν ἀρχή. Eugubin. de per. Phil. l. 3. c. 5, 6.

(h) Ἡ μονὰς ῥίζα τῶν ἁπάντων.

(i) Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 4. c. 29.

(k) Sentent. p. 223.

(l) En. 5. l. 6. c. 6.

(m) Plut. de Iſid. p. 382. Porp. de vit. Pythag. p. 189. Procl. in Tim. p. 155.

(n) Meurſ. Den. Pythag. p. 47, 51, 60, 55, 58, 59.

(o) Κόσμος, σῶμα, Ἁρμονία, Βακχασμὸν ἀνεγείρων, κλειδοῦχος τῆς φύσεως.

(p) Παγὰν ἀενάου φύσεως ῥιζώματ' ἔχουσαν.

Roots of ever-flowing Nature. For theſe Roots of ever-flowing Nature in the Golden Verſes are (in all probability) the ſame with thoſe of Empedocles (q);

Τέσσαρα γὰρ πάντων ῥιζώματα πρῶτον ἄκουε.

Firſt learn that there are four Roots or Principles of all things, the four Elements.

(q) V. Selden. de D. Syr. p. 135. D. Teniſon of Idolatry, p. 405.

That this is a true Interpretation of the Pythagoric Tetractys, appeareth from Heſychius (who ſaith, that the Tetractys ſignifieth the four Elements, and from the Pythagoric Hymn (r) Divine Number proceedeth from the Receſs of the Monad to the Divine Tetrad, which ſignifieth the four Elements, as may be ſeen in Proclus. But although this Interpretation of the Pythagoric Tetractys is not refuſable (it is ſometimes the genuine meaning of the Tetractys;) yet I am far from thinking it a juſt and adequate account of ſo great and ſacred a Pythagoric Myſtery. The celebrated Tetractys was (I ſuppoſe) the comprehenſion of the four firſt Numbers, 1, 2, 3, 4. which Comprehenſion of Numbers is the All of Number (for all Number is no more than ten, as is commonly known;) wherefore the Tetractys of the Pythagoreans denoteth the whole Comprehenſion of their Number-kind of Philoſophy, the All of their Recondite Wiſdom. As this Account of the Tetractys repreſenteth it as a very venerable Pythagoric Myſtery: So it appeareth from Jamblichus, (s) that Pythagoras was celebrated amongſt his Diſciples as the Inventor and Teacher of the Tetractys; which cannot reaſonably be thought, to ſignifie any thing leſs than the whole of their myſtic kind of Philoſophy. And it appeareth from ſeveral Teſtimonies (t) that the Pythagoreans called the Univerſality of Number Tetractys; therefore the Tetractys (being the Comprehenſion of the Univerſality of Number) is the Comprehenſion of their Number-kind of Phyſiology and Theology. Now, ſeeing the whole Frame and Compoſition of the Pythagoric Philoſophy is of the Myſtic-number-kind; this will certainly infer, that the Tetractys is Pythagoric-Number-kind of Myſtery, as all the ancient Writers repreſent it. Therefore this Conceit of ſome Learned Men, that the Pythagoric Tetractys is the ſame with the Hebrew Tetragrammaton is without all colour of probability. Nor is there any Name, which the Pythagoreans have given their Tetractys, that hath any relation to the Tetragrammaton: Nor was the Hebrew Tetragrammaton any ſuch Recondite Myſtery in Pythagoras's days, as the later Jews have made it; nor was Pythagoras any pretender to the God of the Hebrews, to his Theology or Religion. Moreover according to the uſual Paralleliſms that are made between the Pagan and Scriptural Theology, not the Tetrad of Pythagoras, but his Monad (which ſeemeth to be the Number call'd by the Pythagoreans (u) ἀριθμὸς ἀριθμῶν, the Number of Numbers) is coincident with the Hebrew Tetragrammaton.

(r) Προϊὼν ὁ θεῖος ἀριθμὸς, μονάδος ἐκ κευθμῶνος τετράδ᾽ ἐπὶ ζαθέην. Procl. in Tim. p. 96. 155.

(s) De vit. Pythag. p. 138, 147.

(t) Ap. Meurſ. Den. Pythag. p. 55, 56.

(u) Hierocl. *in Car.p.*225.

V. If the Tetractys might be thought the ſame with the myſterious Tetragrammaton (which all Reaſon refuſeth) yet Pythagoras could not be ſaid, to reveal it to the Gentiles (as ſome ſuppoſe) but rather to conceal it from them. For (w) the Pythagoreans involv'd the Matters of their Diſcipline in a Symbolic kind of Expreſſion, to conceal them from vulgar People. Pythagoras together with his Recondite Learning, deriv'd from Egypt the unpopular Humour of keeping it Arcane and Recondite: (x) For the Egyptians did not reveal their Religious Myſteries promiſcuouſly to all, nor communicate them to the Profane, but only to the (qualify'd) Prieſts, and to ſuch as are to ſucceed in the Kingdom. When a King was choſen out of the Military Order, he was brought to the Prieſts, and by them inſtructed in that Arcane Philoſophy, which concealeth myſterious Truths under obſcure Fables and Allegories; therefore they plac'd Sphinges before their Temples, to ſignify (ſaith Plutarch) that their (fabulous) Theology contained a certain Arcane and Enigmatical Wiſdom in it. (y) This was the way of Orpheus and of thoſe that firſt wrote of the Gods, to repreſent the Matters of their Wiſdom under Fables and Allegories agreeably to the Egyptians vulgar Theology; and their Sphinges intimated the Enigmatical Nature of it. Beſides theſe Sphinges they had in their Temples Harpocrates and Sigalions, which plainly intimated Silence, and that as (in the Eleuſinian Myſteries) the Rites of their Religion ſhould not be communicated to the Prophane. They had alſo (z) their ἱερὰ γράμματα and ἱερατικοὺς χαρακτῆρας, Sacred and Sacerdotal Characters, unknown to the ordinary ſort of Men, and peculiar to their Prieſts, amongſt whom was kept ſecret the Learning of their Philoſophy and Theology, their ἄῤῥητος and ἀπόῤῥητος θεολογία, Arcane and Myſterious Theology, which was twofold; for in great part their Arcane Theology was only the Myſteries of their Exoterical Theology (Myſteries that were involv'd in it) and in part it was their Philoſophic Acroamatical Theology, which was Myſtic-Metaphyſical. For the firſt Principle and ſupream Deity of the Philoſophic Egyptian Pagans was called by them, (a) σκότος ἄγνωστον, σκότος ὑπὲρ πᾶσαν νόησιν unknown Darkneſs, Darkneſs beyond all ken (they did not amiſs to keep ſuch Deities in the dark;) but this Supream Deity was no Deity of the Egyptians Exoterical Theology, or of the Popular Egyptian Pagans. On the contrary, the Goddeſs Iſis was a Deity of the Popular Egyptiam Pagans Religion, and of their Exoterical Theology; and the Arcane Interpretations which they made of this Goddeſs and of that Inſcription to her, Tibi Una quæ es omnia (to thee who being one art all things,) theſe were properly Myſteries of their Exoterical Theology. Agreeably to which Account of the Egyptians Arcane Theology the ἄῤῥητος θεολογία, Arcane and Myſterious Theology of the Perſians, Syrians, Indians (and other Philoſophic Pagan Nations) muſt be diſtinguiſh'd; as alſo the Arcane Theology of thoſe ancient Barbaric Sects, the Magi, Brachmans, and Druids, who beſides their Exoterical Theology and the Myſteries thereof had a Myſtic-Metaphyſical and Theurgical Diſcipline and Inſtitution. Pythagoras form'd an Inſtitution of the ſame nature, an Inſtitution of Philoſophic and Theurgic Myſticks, who beſides their ſilence for certain Years, were injoyn'd a perpetual ſilence, never to reveal the Matters of their Learning to Aliens that were not of their Society (call'd ἀμύητοι, ἀτέλεστοι, θυραῖοι, ἐξωτερικοὶ, βέβηλοι, the not initiated, the exotericks, thoſe without, the profane,) which one of the Pythagoric Women (Timycha the Wife of Myllias) ſo religiouſly obſerv'd, (b) that being tortur'd by Dionyſius, to force her to declare the reaſon of their Religious Abſtinence from Beans, ſhe, biting off her Tongue with her Teeth, and ſpitting it out upon the Tyrant, declar'd thereby her invincible adherence to ſilence. (c) The Gods were thought to be very angry with one that

(w) Meurſ. ſupr. p. 59.

(x) Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 413. Plutarch. de Iſ. p. 354, 378.

(y) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 4.

(z) Boch. Canaan. l. 2. c. 17.

(a) Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 2. c. 6.

(b) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. p. 169.

(c) Ibid. p. 226.

divulg'd a Pythagoric Secret (for he was drown'd in the Sea;) It is certain the Pythagoreans themſelves were ſo. For Hipparchus is known to have been baniſh'd their School, and a κενοτάφιον, or empty Coffin was ſet in his place (as a Perſon dead and loſt) becauſe he went about to proſtitute their Arcana. On this account, and becauſe they were rigid Separatiſts, excluding all Exortericks (except their Parents) from their Friendſhip and Converſation, the whole of the Inſtitution of the Pythagoric Saintiſts is ſaid to be ἰδιότροπος καὶ συμβολική: their way of Life was private and peculiar to themſelves, alien from others; their mode of Doctrine alſo was uncouth, myſtic and ſymbolic. (d) A mode of Doctrine that was deſign'd to keep off the unworthy and unlearned, nor were any qualify'd for the Pythagoric Inſtitution, but thoſe that were learned in Secular Sciences. (e) When J. Mart. betook himſelf to a famous Pythagorean, to be indoctrinated in Philoſophy, Have you been converſant (ſaid the Pythagorean) in Muſic, Aſtronomy and Geometry? do you think to ſee any thing that conduceth to Beatitude, unleſs you have firſt learned theſe things, which withdraw the Soul from Senſibles, and render her adapt for the Intelligibles, ὥστε αὐτὸ κατιδεῖν τὸ καλόν, καὶ αὐτὸ ὅ ἐστιν ἀγαθόν; ſo as to behold Fair it ſelf (or the firſt Fair) and Good it ſelf, or the firſt Good?

VI. The Pythagoreans and Platoniſts were a Sect (both of Theurgical and) of Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theamatiſts, (f) as Iſidore's ſublimate Soul is ſaid to aſcend upon any ſmall occaſion from theſe Inferiour Senſibles, ἐπὶ τὰ πρεσβύτατα τῶν θεαμάτων, to the moſt noble and excellent ſights; and Proclus wrote his Platonic Theology, (g) that he might leave to Poſterity a Monument τῶν μακαρίων θεαμάτων, of thoſe bleſſed ſights, which himſelf and his Aſſociates were the Beholders of. Such as the firſt Fair, (h) where the greateſt and ultimate Conflict is propos'd to Souls, for the ſake of which no labour is to be ſpar'd, that we fail not of the beſt ſight, which whoſo attaineth, is happy, ὄψιν μακαρίαν τεθεαμένος, beholding the Beatific Viſion; but he is unhappy that faileth of it. For not he that faileth of beholding beauteous Colours and Bodies, nor he that faileth of Power, Principalities and a Kingdom, is unhappy; but he that is without the poſſeſſion of this, of this alone; for the gaining whereof, the Kingdoms and Principalities of the whole Earth, and Sea, and Heaven are to be thrown away. To qualifie and prepare one, to be ſuch a Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theamatiſt, the Maſters of this Inſtitution require ſeveral reſemblances of Sanctity, with a mixture of groſs Platonic Phantaſtry. (i) For he that is a beholder of this Pulchritude, muſt no more look at any bodily Pulchritudes; but knowing, that they are Images, and Footſteps, and Shadows, muſt flee to that whoſe Images they are: For if any one purſueth bodily Pulchritude thinking to take hold of it as true, it is as a fair Image in the Water, which when one would lay hold of, (as a Fable ſignifieth) he drowned himſelf in the River. Φεύγωμεν δὴ φίλην εἰς πατρίδα, let us flee to our pleaſing Country, not with our Feet, nor need we Horſes, or to provide Ships to carry us; but all theſe things you muſt diſmiſs, and not ſeeing, but ſhutting as it were the bodily ſight, exſuſcitate inſtead thereof another ſight, which all have, but few uſe. (k) What then doth this Internal Eye behold? upon the firſt Exſuſcitation of it, it is not able to look at things that are very bright. Wherefore the Soul muſt be inur'd, firſt to behold fair Studies, next fair Works; not the Works of Art, but of Men that are called Good; next inſpect the Soul of thoſe that do thoſe fair Works. But becauſe it is not eaſie, to inſpect the fair Souls of others, the Theamatiſt is better adviſ'd, to make fair his own Soul. (l) As the Statuary cutteth off, and ſhaveth, and ſmootheth, and poliſheth, till a fair Face appeareth in his Statue; ſo do thou pare off Superfluities, rectifie Obliquities, brighten what is Tenebricoſe, and give not over poliſhing thy Statue, till the deiform pulchritude of Virtue ſhine forth to thee: εἰ γέγονας τοῦτο καὶ εἶδες αὐτὸ, if being become this, thou behold thy ſelf, being now become ſight, take Confidence concerning thy ſelf, and being now aſcended hither, that thou needeſt no more any Guide to ſhew thee, fix thy ſight and behold; for this Eye alone beholdeth the great Pulchritude. But if one goeth to the Spectacle λημῶν κακίαις καὶ οὐ κεκαθαρμένος, having his Eyes ſordify'd with Vices and not purg'd, or be timid and unable to look upon what is very bright, he ſeeth nothing, though another ſhew him a preſent Object that may be ſeen. The Spectator muſt be made congenial and like to the Spectacle, before he aſſayeth to be a Theamatiſt. For the Eye hath never ſeen the Sun ἡλιοειδὴς μὴ γεγενημένος, without being Sun-like; nor can the Soul which is not become fair behold the Fair. Let every one become deiform and fair, that intendeth to behold God and the Fair. Aſcending, he will come firſt unto Intellect, and there he will ſee the fair Species, and he will ſay, that this Pulchritude is the Idea's. But above this is the Nature of the Good having the Fair projected before it. In this method of conducting the Mind, to ſee the Platonic Deity Plotinus hath glanc'd at ſeveral Qualifications, requiſite to furniſh a Platonic Theamatiſt; Mathematical Contemplation, Illumination, Purgation, Transformation, χωρισμὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος, ſeparation from the Body; to which for the beholding the firſt Good the Platonic Faith muſt be added. (m) What is it, that will unite us to T'Agathon and ſurceaſe our Action and Motion? And what is it that conjoyneth all the Divine kinds to the firſt and ineffable Henotety of Goodneſs? It is the Faith of the Gods. (n) For T'Agathon is not to be inquir'd after knowingly (in a way of Knowledge and Underſtanding) which is an imperfect way; but giving our ſelves up to the Divine Light, and ſhutting our Eyes, we muſt in this manner be ſeated in the unknowable and hidden Henad of Beings. For this kind of Faith is more ancient and excellent than the knowledge-kind of Operation, not only in us, but with the Gods themſelves alſo, and by this all the Gods are together united about one Center. The Platoniſts therefore contemplate the firſt Nature, (o) μεμυκόσι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς, with their Eyes ſhut, tranſcending Intellection and all that is Intelligible (which is groſs Platonic Phantaſtry) and therefore ſhutting the Eyes of their Underſtanding as well as their Bodily Sight.

(n) Δεῖ γὰρ οὐ γνωστικῶς οὐδ' ἀτελῶς τὸ ἀγαθὸν ἐπιζητεῖν, ἀλλ' ἐπιδόντας ἑαυτοὺς τῷ θείῳ φωτί, καὶ μύσαντας, οὕτως ἐνιδρύεσθαι τῇ ἀγνώστῳ καὶ κρυφίῳ τῶν ὄντων ἑνάδι.

VII. Agreeably to the general nature of the Platonic Theology (which is ſtiled (p) ἡ περὶ τῶν θείων μυστικὴ ἀλήθεια, the Myſtic Verity touching things Divine,) the ſeveral parts of it are Myſtic-Metaphyſical; for almoſt every Branch of it is repreſented by Proclus as ἄῤῥητος, ἄφραστος, ἀπόῤῥητος, ἄγνωστος, ineffable, indeclarable, arcane, unknowable. This Humour pervadeth the Body of the Platonic Philoſophy; uſually the particular Theories of it are ſmutted with ſomething (more or leſs) of an impure Myſtic-Metaphyſical Phantaſtry. For inſtance; the Theory of the Humane Soul in (d) Clem. Strom. l. 5. p.m. 419.

(e) Dial. cum Tryph. p. 219. v. Plotin. En. 1. l. 3.

(f) Phot. Cod. 242.

(g) Theol. Plat. p. 2.

(h) Plotin. En. 1. l. 6. c. 7.

(i) Ibid. c. 8.

(k) Ibid. c. 9.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 1. c. 25.

(o) Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 2. c. 11. & l. 1. c. 3.

(p) Ibid. p. 2.

in Platoniſm is Myſtic-Metaphyſical. For the Platoniſts ſay, (q) that the Rational Soul is produc'd by Mind or Intellect, and is the Image thereof. They place Intellect above Reaſon, which belongeth to Soul, making two Intellects in a Man, the one ſtable, the other diſcurſive. In the Platonic νοῦς καθαρὸς, pure Intellect, which (according to Plotinus) is always in ſtable Act or Operation beholding the Platonic Intelligibles, are the Ideal Forms of things; and above this Intellect there is an Henotety or Unity, which the Oracles call νοῦ ἄνθος, the Flower of the Mind; for the Flower of the Mind is ἡ ἑνιαία τῆς ψυχῆς δύναμις, the Heniadic Power of the Soul, as Pſellus ſaith. So Plotinus argueth (r) from the Reaſonings of the Soul (as when ſhe inquireth, whether this be juſt, or that be fair?) that there is neceſſarily ſome ſtanding or ſtable Juſt; wherefore (s) there muſt be Intellect in us, as alſo the Principle of Intellect, and the cauſe of it, and God, that is the Henotety. As the Theory of the Humane Soul in Platoniſm, ſo the Theory of her Virtues is Myſtic-Metaphyſical. For the Platoniſts have excogitated four ſeveral kinds of Virtues. The Political or Practic, the Cathartic or Purgative, the Soul-intellectual, and the Paradigmatical or Exemplar. (t) For Juſtice it ſelf, Temperance it ſelf is not properly Virtue, but is as the Exemplar; that which is from it in the Soul is Virtue. Of all theſe ſeveral kinds of Virtue one only is Moral Virtue, which the Platoniſts account rather a Preparation for Virtue than Virtue, and ſay of it, (u) αἱ δὲ πολιτικαὶ τὸν θνητὸν ἄνθρωπον κατακοσμοῦσαι, the Political Virtues are ornamental to the Mortal Man. The reſt are pure Myſtic-Metaphyſical Virtue peculiar to the Inſtitution of οἱ θεωρητικοί, the Theoretic Men, or the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theamatiſts (they are call'd in Macrobius, (w) Virtutes otioſorum, the Virtues of ſuch as ſequeſter themſelves from ſecular Buſineſs) who alone pretend to Aſſimilation unto God, or to Deification, as they ſpeak. For the Purgative ſort of Virtue is only to prepare the Theoriſt who after Purgation is to be furniſh'd with the Soul intellectual ſort of Virtue (the Virtue of the Soul νοερῶς καὶ πρὸς τὸν νοῦν ἐνεργούσης, operating intellectually, directing her Acts unto Intellect, being turn'd to it, form'd and repleniſh'd by it,) which is deriv'd from the Paradigmatical. And as the Theory of the Human Soul and that of her Virtues in Platoniſm is Myſtic-Metaphyſical: So the Platonic Beatitude or the Felicity of the Soul is of the ſame Note. For ſometimes they diſcourſe, (x) that Intellect is the height of Life, the true and perfect Life, and that other lives are imperfect and but Images of life; that their Felicity conſiſteth ἐν νοερᾷ ζωῇ or ἐν τῷ ζῆν κατὰ νοῦν, in intellectual Life, in living according to Intellect (the Platoniſts intellectual form of Life,) in the Felicitative intellectual Theory, in being ſegregate from ſenſibles, and in a Life that is ἀφάνταστος καὶ ἀπαθής, devoid of Phancy and Paſſion as much as may be (the Soul in a Philoſophic way diveſteth her ſelf of the ſenſible Nature which ſhe hath aſſum'd, and of ſenſitive Propenſion, ſeparateth from the bodily Senſe, phantaſie and the irrational Nature and the Paſſions that are in it, as things Alien from her Nature and primitive intellectual State; enjoyeth the Theory of the intelligibles, and reduceth her ſelf to an Incorporealneſs of Life conformable to them, and becometh as much as may be a ſeparate purely intellectual Soul;) that the Rational Nature (y) obtaineth Beatitude of Life, when it is turn'd to Intellect and form'd by it, and liveth by its Life (which Intellect is always in conjunction with the Divine Intellect and form'd by it) becometh totally Intellect and an Intellectual World. Sometimes they diſcourſe, that the height of their Beatitude is tranſcendent to Intellect; (z) that the Soul having put off all that Multitude, which is in Imagination, Reaſon and Intellection, becometh only her own Henotety or Unity (changing her Intellectual form into that of the Unity) and being thus one like the firſt Unity, ſhe gaineth the ſight of the firſt Unity, and is united therewith (ὥσπερ κέντρῳ κέντρον συνάψας, conjoyning as it were Center with Center, the Center of the Soul with the Center of the Univerſe,) and being one with God is God, (a) ſaith Plotinus. (On this account the Platoniſts have furniſh'd Souls both with an Intellect and an Unity, that they might be capable of conjunction both with the firſt Intellect and the firſt Unity.) Διὸ καὶ δύσφραστον τὸ θέαμα, wherefore the Spectacle or Sight here is hard to be declar'd, becauſe of the Union that is here; (b) which Union (Rapture and Extaſie) is οἷον ἐπαφή, a tactual kind of Union; for the Attingency of the firſt Principle is not by way of Reaſon and Intellection (becauſe there is ποικίλον τι, ſeveralty there) but by expelling all multiplicity, diſcurſive, compounding and diſtinguiſhing Reaſon out of the Mind, (c) and Intellect muſt as it were diſmiſs it ſelf, μὴ πάντη νοῦν εἶναι, wholly ceaſe to be Intellect, to behold the firſt Nature. Theſe things are matter of copious Diſcourſe; but thus much may ſuffice to demonſtrate, that the Theories of the Platonic Philoſophy are Myſtic-Metaphyſical, the Theory of the firſt Nature in Platoniſm is eminently and beyond all parallel ſuch. It is a Philoſophic-Pagan Myſtic-Metaphyſical Nature to the height of being ſo, and therefore a ſuperlative Myſtic-Metaphyſical Deity. (d) Touching the ſimple Unite above Intellect many things are diſcours'd in the way of Underſtanding, but it is better contemplated by a neſcience or not underſtanding than by underſtanding; becauſe it is γνωστοῦ ὁμοίωσις, an Aſſimilation to to the Object, to be devoid of Reaſon and Underſtanding. When the Mind betaketh her ſelf to Knowledge, ſhe departeth from Uniteneſs and from the Principle.

(q) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 279, 497. 25, 27. Porphyr. Sentent. p. 221.

(r) En. 5. l. 1. c. 11.

(s) Δεῖ νοῦν ἐν ἡμῖν εἶναι, εἶναι δὲ καὶ τὴν νοῦ ἀρχὴν, καὶ αἰτίαν, καὶ θεόν.

(t) Οὐδὲ γὰρ αὐτὸ δικαιοσύνη ἡ ἐνταῦθα ἀρετὴ, ἀλλ' οἷον παράδειγμα. Plotin. En. 1. l. 2. c. 6.

(u) Porph. Sent. p. 235, 237.

(w) In Somn. Scip. l. 1. c. 8. V. Salmaſ. in Epict. p. 16, 18.

(x) Plotin. En. 1. l. 4. Porphyr. de Abſtin. l. 1. S. 29, 30, 31. l. 2. S. 43. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 205.

(y) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 10, 25, 354, 727.

(z) Ibid. p. 768.

(a) En. 6. l. 9. c. 8, 9, 10.

(b) Ibid. l. 7. c. 39.

(c) Ibid. En. 3. l. 8. c. 8. Ficin. Com. p. 515, 527.

(d) Περὶ τοῦ ἐπέκεινα νοῦ, κατὰ μὲν νόησιν πολλὰ λέγεται· θεωρεῖται δὲ ἀνοησίᾳ κρεῖττον νοήσεως. Porphyr. Sent. p. 229.

SECT. 4. Of the Philoſophic Pagans Theology as it is the Arcane Theurgical.

I. THeurgy is conſider'd by the Writers of Magick as a Species of Art Magick (or of the Magical Skill and Operation,) which is more than Natural Operation, ſo as to be Diabolical Operation. (e) The Hebrew Doctors will have Aſtrology, to be an ingredient of its definition, ſuppoſing it to be built upon Aſtrology, becauſe the Oriental Magicians were of Opinion, that no Magical Operation can be done without reſpect had to the Stars; for they ſuppos'd, that every Plant hath his Star, and all Animals and Metals in like manner. This (no doubt) was the ground of the Aſtrological Magick of the Zabii (and the Cabaliſts Magick (f) is of the ſame Character,) which although Maimonides explodeth and condemneth, yet himſelf and his Fellow Rabbins manitain the ground of it. For they ſuppoſe, that this inferiour World of Generables

(e) Maimon. Mor. Nev. Par. 3. c. 37.

(f) Rittangel. in l. Jezir. p. 14.

nerables and Corruptibles is govern'd by the Virtues and Influences of the Celeſtial Spheres, according to that Maxim of theirs, (g) There is not any Herb here below, which hath not its מזל Planet or Star above in the Firmament, which ſtriketh it and ſaith unto it Grow. But how Rabbinical and Romantick ſoever theſe Aſtrologizing Conceits of the Rabbins may ſeem, yet thus far they rightly repreſent the Notion of Magick; they count it more than Natural Operation in the foul Senſe. They have given it an accommodate Name, and this their Maxim concerning it is worth remarking. In quocunque eſt aliquid de Medicina, in eo nihil eſt de via Amoræorum. Whereby they mean; that in things of Natural Operation there is nothing of Magick, which they call the way of the Amorites. Therefore the recondite wonder-working Artifice by the Virtues and Powers of natural Agents only, commonly call'd Natural Magick, is not ſuch Magick as we ſpeak of; nor is any meer Human juggling Illuſion or Impoſture ſuch Magick; nor any thing that is not more than Natural Operation, not any thing on this ſide the dealing with the evil Demons in the foul Senſe. But although Magick ſignifieth in a black and criminal Senſe, yet the diſtribution of it (h) into Theurgy and Goety (or white and black Magick) may be an allowable diſtinction, if by Theurgy we underſtand the good Angel-kind of Magick ſo reputed, (i) either by private Magicians (who pretend by certain Solemnities and Ceremonies to draw down Divine Virtues,) or by the Pagan Theologers, whoſe Magick was of the black and criminal kind, yet they repute it Theurgy. (k) The Prieſts (ſaith Proclus) by theſe things of Nature that are near convok'd the Demons into Preſence; from the Demons they proceeded to the Gods, aſcending to the proper underſtanding of them, partly by the inſtruction of the Demons, and partly through their own induſtry interpreting their agreeable Symbols; and laſtly, leaving behind them natural things and actions, and in great part the Demons, they came into Conſortſhip with the Gods. Such is the Magic of the Pagan Theologers, which they account Theurgy. By which Name they call their Sanctimony or Religion-Magick, their God-Society-Magick, (l) ἡ τῶν ἱερῶν τέχνη, the Art of their Sacra (m) their ἱερατικὴ ἀπεργησία, Prieſt-religious Operation, their Theoſophy Practic. (n) Their Theurgy is thus defin'd by Jamblichus (that grand Theurgiſt, who for his eminence in Theurgy and Pagan Sanctity is call'd by Simplicius and others Divus,) ἡ τῶν θείων ἔργων τέχνη, the Art of the Divine Operations (which ſignifieth both ſuch Operations that are converſant about the Gods, and alſo ſuch as are the Work of the Gods,) and his account of it compriſeth the Worſhip of the Gods, the Prayers and Sacrifices of their Worſhippers with their Magical Efficacy, their Magical Trinkets of Names, Characters, Herbs, Stones, Charms, the variegated Garments of the Prieſts, and all the Symbols of the Gods, their arts of adapting matter for the reception of the Gods, their Oracles and various modes of Divination, of Expiations, Luſtration, Purgation and perfecting the Soul, their Myſtic Union with the Gods, their Magical threats and modes of compelling the Gods, their θεαγωγία, Evocation of the Gods, and Theophania (appearances of the Gods,) their Theurgical Virtue and way to felicity by hieratic Theurgy, their modes of driving away evil Demons, the uſe of ſacred Animals, the Arcana of Iſis and Oſiris, their Divine Illuminations and Inſpirations; and to ſpeak Summarily, their Diſcipline of Theurgy compriſeth (o) the Sanctimonies of the Gods, the Communion between the Gods and Men. Mantice, (the Diſcipline of Divination) in Plato's Sympoſium ſeemeth to be of the ſame ſignification with Theurgy. For the thing that it preſideth over (ſaith he) is (p) the Communion and Society between the Gods and Men. Mantice is the Maker of Friendſhip between the Gods and Men.

II. It appeareth from the Notion of Theurgy, that it is not to be confin'd to any private Technical ſort of Magick; for the Pagans Sacerdotal Inſtitution, their Religious Inſtitution in general, their ſeveral Inſtitutions of Myſtic-religious Society, and the Arcane Philoſophic Theology of the ancient Magi, are Theurgy. Multitudes of private Men amongſt the Heathen (Philoſophers and others) had their Theurgic Arts; as Theoſebius (q) becauſe his Wife brought him no Child, he gave her a Ring of Continence (as before he had given her a Wedding Ring,) and ſhe liv'd with him in Continence ever after. Certain Magical Phyſicians of Thrace, the Followers of Zamolxis, were Phyſicians both of Soul and Body (as Plato in his Charmides diſcourſeth;) they pretended, that the Diſeaſes of the Body are not to be cur'd, unleſs the Diſeaſes of the Soul be cur'd; and that the Diſeaſes of the Soul are to be cur'd by certain Charms or Inchantments. (r) So the Pythagoreans are ſaid, to have uſually cur'd bodily Diſeaſes by Inchantments, Pythagoras the Diſeaſes both of Soul and Body. Proclus, that Divine Man, as Marinus calleth him, obſerv'd his private Faſting-days becauſe of Theurgical Apparitions. And many others of the Philoſophic Family, Empedocles, Porphyrius, Jamblichus, Julianus the Theurgiſt, Appuleius, Apollonius Tyanæus, Maximus, Libanins, Amelius, Sopater, Ædeſius, Chryſanthius, were plainly Men of Theurgic Artifices and Correſpondences. But beſides that multitudes of private Men amongſt the Heathen had their Theurgic Arts, and publick Perſons alſo practis'd a private kind of Theurgy (as Numa and Julian the Emperor;) the Prieſts of the Pagan Religion practis'd a publick Theurgy, and were οἱ θεουργοί, the Theurgical Magicians. Their Hieratic Books, Magical Prayers and calling of the Gods, the Laws and Rites of their Sacra, their Enthuſiaſms, modes of Sacrificing and Divination with the reſt of (s) their ἱερατικὴ μυσταγωγία, Hieratic Arcane Diſcipline and Sacerdotal Operation (before recited from Jamblichus) were the buſineſs of their Theurgy (their Magical kind of Sanctimony and Religion) intermixt with much of Human Cheat and Impoſture. The Pagans Religious Inſtitution in general deriveth it ſelf from Magick, according to that Principle of the Pythagoreans, (t) thoſe things are to be done, which are pleaſing to God; but the knowledge of them is to be gain'd διὰ τέχνης θείας, by the Divine Art. Hence Magick is called by Appuleius (u) The learning that appointeth the Sacra of the Gods, and is skilful of their Worſhip. So Pliny ſaith, the Art Magick was in greateſt Dignity among the Ancients, becauſe it compriſeth the three eminent Arts: Phyſick, the Mathematical Arts and Religion. And

---

(g) Maimon. ſupr. par. 2. c. 10. Inſtructa eſt magia multum Aſtronomica facultate, plurimaque per ipſam peragit. Pſellus de Dæmon.

(h) Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 9. Nonn. in Gr. Naz. n. 67. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 8. Perer. de magia. c. 9.

(i) Corn. Agrip. de van. ſcient. c. 46.

(k) Procl. de magia v. Gale in Jambl. p. 277, 286.

(l) Procl. in polit. p. 370.

(m) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 107, 138. Gale not. p. 222.

(n) Ibid. p. 18.

(o) Τὰς τῶν θεῶν ἁγιστείας, τὴν κοινωνίαν θεῶν ϗ ἀνθρώπων. Jambl. ſupr. p. 140.

(p) Ἡ περὶ θεοὺς τε καὶ ἀνθρώπους πρὸς ἀλλήλους κοινωνία. ἐστὶν αὖ ἡ μαντικὴ φιλίας θεῶν ϗ ἀνθρώπων δημιουργός.

(q) Phot. cod. 242. col. 1074.

(r) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 126. Tiraquell. de Nobil. p. 321. Appul. Apol. p. 433, 474.

(s) Jambl. de myſt. p. 20.

(t) Idem de vit. Pythag. p. 129.

(u) Cælitum Antiſtita, colendique eos ac venerandi gnara. Beroald. in Appulei. de aur. Aſ. præfat. Gale in Jambl. p. 279.

S. Auſtin ſaith of the Jews, when they fell to the Worſhip of ſtrange Gods, (w) they were Magicis Artibus ſeducti, ſeduced by Magic Arts. As the Pagans Religious Inſtitution in general is Theurgy; ſo the ſeveral Myſtic-Religious Inſtitutions in Paganiſm (popular Myſtic-Religious Inſtitutions) the Mithraic, Iſiac, Eleuſinian, Samo Thracian (and ſuch more) were certain Inſtitutions of Myſtic-Theurgical God-Society, Sanctimony and Beatitude. According to that of Jamblichus; (x) To make the Gods remote from the Earth, is an Opinion deſtructive of the ſacred Sanctimony and the Theurgical Communion which Men have with the Gods. The Myſtæ or Intrinſicks of theſe Inſtitutions (after certain Rites of Initiation and Purgation) were conſider'd as God-Society-Men according to that of Plato in his Phædo. A Soul that mindeth the Buſineſs of Philoſophizing (the Meditation of Death) is after this Life in ſuch a State, (y) as they that are initiated into the Religious Myſteries are ſaid to be in, the remainder of her time is a living with the Gods indeed. Theſe God-Society-Men were not only admitted (z) to the ſight of thoſe occult myſterious things that might not be divulg'd (which were ſhew'd and explain'd by the Hierophantæ,) but there were alſo θεάματα τοῖς μύσταις, Viſions and Apparitions to the Myſtæ, Lightning, ſhining Fire, ſhakings of the Ground, and other ſtrange appearances in their Theurgy (as the Pagan Theologers report,) the ſigns of the Preſence of their Gods; and the ἐπόπται in theſe Inſtitutions were θεόπται, Theurgical Theamatiſts, that ſaw the appearances of their Deities. The Gods being delighted with their Symbols, ſaith Proclus, readily come at call, (a) and exhibite intire and immote and ſimple Spectacles to the Myſtæ to behold. Theſe Popular-myſtic Religious Inſtitutions in Paganiſm are of great Conſideration, to illuſtrate the Chriſtian Religion (as will hereafter appear:) But of all the Inſtitutions in Paganiſm there is none ſo conſiderable as the Arcane Philoſophic Theology of the ancient Magi Perſian and Chaldean; which was alſo the Theology of the Egyptian Prieſts, the Gymnoſophiſts, Druids, the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts. This is the Theology, which ſeveral learned Men ſuppoſe to be a Divine Cabala; and it muſt be ſuppos'd (as we have ſaid before) a Theology of very great Conſonance with the Chriſtian Religion complicated with extreme Diſſonance. Which extreme Diſſonance is viſible in the true Name of it; for as being the Arcane Philoſophic Theology of the Perſian Magi, it muſt be denominated the Arcane Philoſophic Theurgical Theology.

III. The account which the learned Author of the true intellectual Syſtem of the Univerſe hath given of this Theology, and of the Perſian Magick and Theurgy, is agreeable to the Air and Humour of his learned Volum (which Philoſophic-paganizeth the matters of the Chriſtian Theology,) and to that unwarrantable Liberty which ſometimes he taketh to himſelf, to miſrepreſent the Senſe of the Pagan Theologers. For thus this learned Author diſcourſeth (b) Zoroaſter's Polytheiſm is intimated by Plato, where his Magick is defin'd to have been nothing elſe but θεῶν θεραπεία, the Worſhip of the Gods. Whence by the way we may learn alſo, that the word μαγεία, or Magick, was firſt taken in a good Senſe, which is confirmed by Porphyrius; παρά γε τοῖς Πέρσαις, οἱ περὶ τὸ θεῖον σοφοὶ, ϗ τȣ́τȣ θεραπεύοντες, Μάγοι μὲν προσαγορεύονται. Amongſt the Perſians thoſe who were skilful in the knowledge of the Deity, and Religious Worſhippers of the ſame, were called Magi. And as Magick is commonly conceived to be founded in a certain vital Sympathy that is in the Univerſe, ſo did theſe ancient Perſian Magi and Chaldeans (as Pſellus tells us) ſuppoſe συμπαθῆ εἶναι τὰ ἄνω τοῖς κάτω, that there was a Sympathy betwixt the Superiour and Inferiour Beings; but it ſeems, the only way at firſt by them approved, of attracting the Influence and Aſſiſtance of thoſe ſuperiour inviſible Powers, was by Piety, Devotion and Religious Rites: Nevertheleſs their Devotion was not carried out only to one Omnipotent God, but alſo to many Gods; neither is it to be queſtioned but this Divine Magick of Zoroaſter ſhortly after degenerated in many of his Followers into the Theurgical Magick, and at length into γοητεία, downright Sorcery and Witchcraft, the only thing which is now vulgarly called Magick. If we ſuppoſe (as this learned Author obſerveth in the firſt place,) that the Perſian Magick is defin'd by Plato θεῶν θεραπεία, the Worſhip of the Gods and nothing elſe (though Plato doth not ſay all this) This will not infer, that there was no Theurgic Magick in the Religion of the ancient Magi, but the contrary. For Plato's and the Pagan Theologers θεῶν θεραπεία, (Worſhip of the Gods) is the ſame with their θεȣργία, Theurgy, the Magick of their Sacra or Theoſophy-Practic. Jamblichus ſaith of Pythagoras (c) he conjoined τὴν θείαν φιλοσοφίαν καὶ θεραπείαν, Divine Philoſophy and Worſhip, that is, θεολογίαν ϗ θεȣργίαν, Theology and Theurgy, as himſelf ſpeaketh elſewhere. Agreeably hereunto the Diſcipline of the Magi is called by Plato Magagiſtia or Magachagiſtia (not Machagiſtia as Ammianus hath it,) which is the ſame with μαγικὴ ἁγιστεία, the Magical Sanctimony, as is obſerv'd by (d) Huetius. Moreover, θεῶν θεραπεία, the Worſhip of the Gods, or μαγεία, Magick, ſignifieth in Plato, not only the Sacra of the Pagans Religious Worſhip, but the Art or Skill alſo which inſtituted thoſe Sacra, and the Diſcipline which govern'd them, as (e) Ammianus (f) and Appuleius underſtand Plato and the Perſian Magick, which Appuleius calleth piam & Divina ſcientem, pious and skilful of Divine things. So Plato ſufficiently explaineth his own Senſe, when in his Sympoſium he ſaith of the Order of Demons, (g) By this Order all vaticination cometh to Men, and the Sacerdotal Art about Sacrifices, the Religious Myſtic Rites and Inchantments, and all Divination and Goety. Plato deriveth the Pagans Sacra from the Inſtitution of Demons; therefore the ancient Perſian Magick which inſtituted their Sacra, was Art Magick in the foul Senſe. And this will be paſt doubt unto any, that conſider the accounts which are given us of the Zoroaſtrian Magi, (h) of their Mantice or Divination (that was their Profeſſion, and a Diſcipline that was πατροπαράδοτος, deliver'd from Father to Son,) their πυραθεῖα, Septs or incloſures for fire, their Magical Rods for ſtirring it, and mode of Divination by Rods, the Charm which they ſang in their ſacred Miniſtration, their Magical Rites of ſacrificing to the Water (deſcrib'd by Strabo,) and to the principle of Light and of Darkneſs (mixing the Blood of a Wolf

---

(w) De C. D. l. 4. c. 34.

(x) Τῆς ἱερᾶς ἁγιστείας ϗ τῆς θεȣργικῆς κοινωνίας θεῶν πρὸς ἀνθρώπȣς. De Myſt. p. 15.

(y) Ὥσπερ λέγεται κατὰ τῶν μεμυημένων, ὡς ἀληθῶς τὸν λοιπὸν χρόνον μετὰ θεῶν διάγȣσα.

(z) Herald. in Arnob. p. 215. Gothofred. exercit. in 1 Tim. 3. 15, 16.

(a) Καὶ ὁλόκληρα καὶ ἀτρεμῆ ϗ ἁπλᾶ θεάματα τοῖς μύσταις προξενȣ͂σι καθορᾶν. In Polit. p. 372.

(b) Intellect. Syſt. p. 285, 286.

(c) De vit. Pythag. p. 139.

(d) Dem. Ev. prop. 4. c. 5.

(e) l. 23.

(f) Apol. 1.

(g) Διὰ τȣ́τȣ καὶ ἡ μαντικὴ πᾶσα χωρεῖ, καὶ ἡ τῶν ἱερέων τέχνη τῶν τε περὶ τὰς θυσίας καὶ τὰς τελετὰς καὶ τὰς ἐπῳδὰς καὶ τὴν μαντείαν πᾶσαν καὶ γοητείαν.

(h) V. Seld. de D. Syr. p. 243, &c. Montacut. Orig. Eccleſ. T. 1. p. 174. Gale in Jambl. p. 238. L. Holſten. de vit. & Scr. Porphyr. p. 57.

with the Herb Omomi, as is before ſaid,) which mode of ſacrificing was taught them by Zoroaſter, as Plutarch ſaith; their boaſts that the Gods appear'd to them (as Clitarchus in Laertius relateth,) the nature of the Mithraic Inſtitution, and that of Arnobius; Age nunc veniat quis ſuper igneam zonam Magus interiore ab orbe Zoroaſtres, &c. Theſe things with other of like Nature are plain and certain Indications, that the ancient Perſian * Magiſm was ſuperlative Sorcery and Wizzardiſm.

* The Name Magus ex duabus Perſiſis vocibus conflatum eſt, quæ nihil ad Religionem ſpectans ſignificant, ſed Hominem breves aures habentem notant, qualem primum Diſciplinæ hujus Authorem fuiſſe perhibent. Th. Grav. Annot. in Perſic. Evang. Verſ. Not. ad Matth. 2. 1.

But as if there was nothing of Sorcery and Witchcraft in the ancient Perſian Magiſm, this learned Author proceedeth to obſerve, that the word μαγεία, Magick, was firſt taken in a good Senſe. If it was firſt taken in a good Senſe, it ſignified ſome good thing: But ſuch is not θεῶν θεραπεία, the Worſhip of the Gods amongſt Chriſtian Theologers. If his meaning be, that the word μαγεία (Magick) was firſt taken in the Heathen Theologers good Senſe, both his diſcurſive Reaſon and his Language needeth emendation. And indeed the Language of his learned Volume needeth great emendation. For it is not a Divine Monarchy which the Pagans aſſerted, nor was Plato a Divine Theogoniſt, nor Pythagoras and Plato Divine Philoſophers, as this learned Author loveth to ſpeak: But theſe things and Perſons (and ſuch more) are Pagan-Divine, as Alien from what is truly Divine, as Polytheiſm and Idolatry is from true Religion. If Polytheiſm in their good Senſe is the Sin of Idolatry, why ſhould not Magick in their good Senſe be the Sin of Witchcraft? This learned Author might have obſerv'd, that γοητεία, (Goety) is ſometimes taken in the Pagan Theologers good Senſe, as well as μαγεία, (Magick) particularly in Plato's Sympoſium above cited, (i) and in Plotinus. Yet Goety taken in ſuch good Senſe is nothing better than Witchcraft: Nor is Magick taken in ſuch good Senſe any thing better than Sorcery. And this appeareth from this learned Author's deſcription of Zoroaſter's Divine Magick, which he maketh a diſtinct Species of Magick from Theurgy and Goety. For the Pagans Art Magick (k) pretendeth for the ground of it, συμπαθῆ εἶναι τὰ ἄνω τοῖς κάτω, that there is a Sympathy between the things above and the things below. And an ἕνωσις ϗ συμπάθεια τοῦ παντὸς, Union and Sympathy betwixt the parts and things of the Univerſe. That by Virtue of Similitude, Cognation and Sympathy the things below are attractive of the things above and of their Influences, and ſeveral Natures are attractive of ſeveral Natures (thus the Philtra operate, ſaith Ficinus; and if the Hearts of Crows, Moles or Hawks be ſwallowed, they attract the Souls of thoſe Animals, which inable for Divination, ſaith Porphyry.) It pretendeth to ſearch out the Nature, Powers and Qualities of the Elements and their Parts (ſaith Pſellus) of Animals and all Plants, of Seeds, Stones and Herbs, and all the things of Nature, and inveſtigateth the Agreement and Diſſonancy of things; for the Similitude of things is cauſe ſufficient to link them together, (l) as Proclus affirmeth. The Obſervation of this Similitude and Sympathy of things was the Origin of the Pagans Sacerdotal-Religious Rites. But the Authors of the Inſtitution of the ancient Prieſthood (ſaith Proclus) diſcern'd, that things ſimple and uncompounded are of the Propriety of a God (as ſome things, Herbs, Stones, Animals, are of Order and Propriety Solar, others Lunar, and the like; (yet that ſingly they were inſufficient for their purpoſe, to call the God to them, * and to procure the Preſence of a Divine Power; wherefore they mix'd ſeveral things together, and by this commixture attracted influxes upon us. But ſometimes one Herb or Stone is ſufficient for the Divine Operation, to procure the ſudden appearance of a God, as alſo for the keeping of him. (m) The Theurgic Art often compoundeth together Stones, Herbs, Animals, ſacred and perfect and deiform Species, and of all theſe maketh a perfect and pure receptacle for the Gods. (n) And the Sacrifice of ſuch matter exciteth the Gods to appear. A taſt of this unſavoury Theurgical Magick is enough to ſatisfie them that can taſt, that Zoroaſter's Divine Magick did not degenerate into the Theurgical Magick and Goety (and that in ſome of his Followers only, as our learned Author pretendeth,) but was Originally and Natively ſuch.

(i) Gale in Jambl. p. 256.

(k) Gale ibid. p. 236, 260, 261. 191, 193, 266, 248, 250, 199. 234.

(l) De Sacrific. & Magia.

* Vid S. Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 24.

(m) Jambl. de myſt. p. 138, 139.

(n) Ibid. v. Syneſ. de Inſomn. p. 134.

IV. The Theology of the Zoroaſtrian Magi ſeemeth to be a Native of their own, no derivative from Egypt, though ſome of the learned (that have a peculiar fondneſs of deriving every thing from Egypt) ſay. (o) Whatever Conceits Zoroaſter the Magician and the Perſians had touching Oromazes the lucid God, and Arimanius the Tenebricoſe; the Chaldeans touching the Planets, their Beneficent and Maleficent Deities; the Philoſophers touching contrary Principles; all theſe had their Origin from the moſt ancient Theology of the Egyptians. This account of the Origin of the Theology of the Zoroaſtrian Magi is againſt the uſual Senſe of the Learned, the reports of moſt of the ancient Writers, it pretendeth to nothing of Reaſon, is againſt very plain and evident Reaſon. For (although much of Antiquity as well as Futurity is ἄδηλον, in the Dark, yet) theſe two things ſeem very plain and evident: That the ancient Magi were orignally Perſian or Chaldean; and that their Theology was of their own growth, no Foreign Ware. Becauſe the Name Magus is originally Perſic, and was the Perſians Name for their Sages or Sacerdotal Philoſophers, (p) as all Authors agree; though there might be Pagan Sages before the Perſian, yet there could be no Magi before them. But although their Name ſpeaketh them Perſian, they are not the leſs Chaldean Magi. (The Babylonians (q) are called Perſians, and Babylon a Perſian City; (r) in Nonnus's Collections the Chaldeans are ſaid to be a Perſian Nation;) for whoſe Theology and Religion Jamblichus perſonating an Egyptian Prieſt hath ſo great Reſpect, (s) that he preferreth it before the Egyptian, (t) and ſetteth the Chaldean Wiſe-men before the Egyptian Prophets as their Seniors. Ariſtotle is alſo cited (u) by Laertius for the Seniority of the Magi (that they were the Egyptians Seniors;) there is great reaſon to think the ancient Zabii (w) of Name and Original Chaldean; and becauſe the Zoroaſtrian Magi were the firſt (x) that inſtituted a Den for their Initiations and their Sacra, it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe them the Authors of their Myſtical Philoſophy of Light and Darkneſs, and conſequently, that the Ditheiſtick Doctrine touching a Lucid and Tenebricoſe Deity was originally theirs; and accordingly, the dark Principle beareth the Name of ὁ πονηρὸς δαίμων Περσῶν, the evil Demon of the Perſians. The Arcane Philoſophic Theurgical Theology was thought in ancient

(o) Marſham Can. Chron. p. 205. ed. Lipſ.

(p Huet. Dem. ev. p. 133. ed. 2.

(q) Seld. de D. Syr. p. 112.

(r) In Naz. n. 67.

(s) De Myſt. p. 149.

(t) Ibid. p. 2.

(u) In proœm.

(w) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 2. c. 1. S. 1. & 2.

(x) Porphyr. de antro p. 253, 254.

ancient times originally Chaldaic, as appeareth from the Name of the Chalday Oracles; and becauſe it is Fire-Theology (whereas had it been originally Egyptian, it muſt have been Water-Theology,) it is originally Perſian-Chaldean; the Egyptians (y) according to Pletho deriv'd it from Zoroaſter; and that the Theology of the Magi was look'd upon as the prime Original Theology, appeareth from Porphyry's account of Pythagoras. (z) The most ſay, that he learned the Mathematical Sciences from the Egyptians, Chaldeans and Phenicians. For the Egyptians of old time minded Geometry, the Phenicians Arithmetic, the Chaldeans Aſtronomy. (a) But the Sanctimonies of the Gods and the other Inſtitutes of Life he receiv'd (as 'tis ſaid) from the Magi. Agreeably hereunto the Orientals are in Scripture celebrated for their Wiſdom, 1 King. 4. 30. And with great conſent ancient Writers (b) aſcribe the beginning of Magick (which denoteth ſome Magical kind of Religion) to Zoroaſter; which agreeth with the report of Patricides and Elmacinus touching the Religion of the Zabii, (c) that Zoroaſter was the Founder of it. The Arabic Writers are not agreed, whether he was the Founder or only the Reformer of the Religion of the Magi: But they that ſuppoſe him the Founder of the Religion of the Zabii, muſt neceſſarily look upon his Theology as the prime leading Theology of the Oriental Pagans (and conſequently of the Occidental, which was deriv'd from the other;) as Abul-pharagius ſaith of the Egyptians (d) they received Wiſdom and Learning from the Chaldeans. The aſcription of the beginning of Magick to Zoroaſter, and the reports of Fame ſpeak him of great Antiquity, (e) which is acknowledg'd by the moſt judicious in theſe Affairs: But touching his Antiquity it is not eaſie to make a better Judgment than Pletho hath done. Plutarch among the reſt reporteth, that he liv'd five Thouſand years before the Trojan Wars; which if it ſeem incredible, yet he is certainly the moſt ancient of all fam'd Wiſe-men and Law-givers. There is nothing objected (f) againſt his ſuppos'd Antiquity, which may not be objected againſt the Antiquity of the Egyptian Thoth or Hermes (for ſome have queſtion'd, whether ever there was ſuch a Perſon, becauſe of the diſſonant and uncertain Accounts that are given of him;) the fabuloſity of his Age and the diſagreement of ancient Writers about it ſpeaketh his great Antiquity, and ought not to be objected to the prejudice of the repute thereof. We will therefore ſuppoſe, (g) that Pletho hath given a true Account of the Origin of the Arcane Philoſophic-Theurgical Theology. Plato's Philoſophy, (ſaith he) is not a private Philoſophy of his own Inveſtigation, but that which deſcended to him from Zoroaſter by the Pythagoreans. Pythagoras learn'd it from the Magi, that deſcended from Zoroaſter, being converſant with them in Aſia. Chiefly, the Dogmata of Zoroaſter were received by the Prieſts of Egypt, which got them a great Fame. To repreſent an Idea of this Zoroaſtrian Theology, ſometimes we muſt have recourſe to the Magic or Chalday Oracles, not as ſuppoſing them ſo ancient as the ancient Magi, but becauſe they contain ſeveral undoubted remains of their Theology, and becauſe they ſpeak the Senſe of thoſe Philoſophic Pagans (the Platoniſts,) that acknowledge them for true and genuine, and with Syneſius (a Philoſophic-paganizing Biſhop of the Chriſtian Church) account them ἱερὰ λόγια, Holy Oracles.

V. This Arcane Philoſophic Zoroaſtrian Inſtitution is an Inſtitution of the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology complicate with Theurgy. For whereas the true God is the Creator of the World, who is notic'd to all Men by the Light of Nature, this Theology pretendeth (with the Gnoſticks) that there is an higher Deity than the Creator, ſuch a Myſtic-Metaphyſical Deity that Mankind know nothing of him: So the Oracles ſay, (h) The Father or the firſt Deity perfected all things (the intelligible Idea's) and delivered them to the ſecond Mind, who is He, whom all Mankind call the firſt God. Plato therefore upbraided all Mankind with Ignorance of the firſt God, (i) O ye Men, the Opificer of the World whom you account the firſt God, is not the firſt, but there is one before him. (k) The Father or firſt God was not known to Mankind (ſaith Eugubinus) they knew no further than the Creator of the World. Philo, Nu*menius* and Plotinus ſay, That the Father was not known to Mankind, inſomuch that the Hebrews (ſaith he) knew not the Father. They know and celebrate the Creator of the World, this is he whom they worſhip in their Synagogues; but this is the Son of God. The Father dwelt ἐν ἀβάτοις, or was inacceſſibly recondite; and alike recondite and unknowable are the Sublimities of his Myſtic-Metaphyſical Devotioniſts, which are no other than the Myſtic Theology famous in the Church of Rome, which is thus defin'd by one of that Communion. (l) The Myſtic Theology is the moſt ſecret Collocution of the Mind with God, the Intuition of the Divine Darkneſs, and a climbing up to God by the more ſecret and admirable methods, whereby through Contemplation one is rais'd to Unity it ſelf (the Henotety) by approaching more unto God, having left things ſenſible and the intellectual. So ſaith Plotinus. (m) As the Matter muſt be devoid of Form, to be receptive of the Forms of all things: So the Mind muſt be devoid of all Species, to be illuminated and repleniſh'd with the firſt Nature, and therefore muſt be ſegregate from all Externals, and intirely turn'd to that which is within, and muſt become ἀνοήσαντα τὰ πάντα, ἀγνοήσαντα δὲ καὶ αὐτόν, unknowing of all things even of it ſelf, to be capable of this Viſion and Converſe. (n) As Senſe and Motion muſt be laid aſleep for the vigorous exerciſe of Imagination, and Imagination for the vigorous exerciſe of Underſtanding: So he that would reach what is above Intellectual and Intelligible Nature, muſt perfectly paſs beyond what is intelligible, and leave behind his own Underſtanding, and ſilence all Intellection, that being reduc'd into the Primity (Unity) of himſelf, he may enjoy the Primity of the Univerſe. All Motion, multiplicity and determinate Conception muſt be expell'd out of the Mind; (o) πῶς δ' ἂν τοῦτο γένοιτο; ἄφελε πάντα, how may this be accompliſh'd? obliterate all things. Of Plotinus Porphyry reporteth (in his Life) That God who hath neither Form nor Idea, but is ſeated above Intellect and all that is Intelligible, ſometimes appear'd to him, agreeably to his End and Scope, which was to be united and conjoyned with the God above all (to be one and the ſame with God, as Plotinus ſpeaketh:) but there is no attaining the ſight and fruition of this Deity by

(y) Ap. Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 1. c. 25.

(z) De vit. Pythag. p. 182.

(a) Περὶ δὲ τὰς τῶν θεῶν ἁγιστείας, καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ περὶ τὸν βίον ἐπιτηδευμάτων παρὰ τῶν Μάγων φησὶ διακοῦσαί τε καὶ λαβεῖν.

(b) Huet. ſupr. Montacut. orig. Eccl. T. 1. p. 195.

(c) Selden. de J. nat. & G. l. 2. c. 7. Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 53, 54. Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 8. ed. 1.

(d) Hiſt. Dynaſt. p. 41.

(e) Selden. ſupr. l. 3. c. 19. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 5. Gale in Jambl. p. 184.

(f) Marſham. ſupr. p. 144.

(g) Ap. Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 1. c. 25.

(h) Πάντα γὰρ ἐξετέλεσε πατὴρ καὶ νῷ παρέδωκε Δευτέρῳ, ὃν πρῶτον κλήζετ' ἅπαν γένος ἀνδρῶν.

(i) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 18. Gale in Jambl. p. 297.

(k) Eugub. de Per. Phil. p. 8, 68, 70, 75, 104.

(l) Myſtica Theologia eſt ſecretiſſima mentis cum Deo loquutio, divinæ caliginis intuitio, & ad Deum per ſecretiora & admirabiliora ſcanſio, qua per contemplationem quis erigitur uſque ad ipſam unitatem, Deo magis appropinquando, relictis ſenſualibus & intellectualibus. Syntax. Art. Mirabil. l. 6. c. 4.

(m) En. 6. l. 9. c. 7.

(n) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 342, 527.

(o) Plotin. En. 5 l. 3. c. 17.

by the Underſtanding, but only (as the Oracles ſpeak) by the flower of the Mind (the Henotety or Heniadic Power of the Soul) which is that which the Myſticks of the Church of Rome call The Fund of the Spirit. (p) Their Union with God in the Fund of the Spirit, their Deiformity, their abſtracted and ſupereſſential Life, their contemplative Life in the ſtate of Quieſcency (wherein all the Actions of the Soul are ſuſpended) their internal and external Solitude, Viſions, Raptures (with other Matters of their Myſtical Divinity) are no other than ſo many Branches of this Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology of the Oracles (that ſpeak of abſtracting from the Body, and of the Soul's being inebriated by God, which Pſellus expoundeth of Divine Illumination and Extaſies) and of the Platoniſts their Admirers and Followers.

But in this Zoroaſtrian Inſtitution the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology is complicate with Theurgy, according to that of the Oracles.

——Ἱερῷ λόγῳ ἔργον ἑνώσας.

Conjoyning ſacred Word and Work.

The holy Work is the Teleſtick Buſineſs, ſaith Pletho. The Oracle meaneth, that to the Sacred Doctrine the uſe of the Sacred Rites and Myſteries muſt be adjoyned πρὸς τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀναγωγὴν, for the Reduction (or Subvection) of the Soul. Pſellus thus explaineth the Oracle; The Vehicle of the Soul muſt be corroborated by the material Myſtic Rites. The Oracle ſuppoſeth the Soul to be purg'd by Stones, Herbs and Charms, ϗ εὔλεγχον τὸ πρὸς τὴν ἀνάβασιν, and ſo to become agile and nimble for her aſcent. In every Religion both its Inſtitutes and its δογματικὰ θεωρήματα, or Doctrines muſt be conſider'd: So in this Inſtitution the Religious Rites and Inſtitutes which are θεουργία (Theurgy) are conjoyn'd with (q) θεολογία, Theology Doctrinal.

VI. By this Zoroaſtrian Inſtitution therefore the Philoſophic Pagans were inſtituted both Myſtic-Metaphyſical and Myſtic-Theurgical Saintiſts. For it is an Inſtitution of Arcane God-Society, Sanctity and Beatitude, that by its Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology inſtituted them, to be Myſtic-Metaphyſical Saintiſts: And by its Theurgy inſtituted them, to be Myſtic-Theurgical Saintiſts. So in Hierocles there is a two-fold Reduction of the Soul: The one is the Myſtic-Metaphyſical, (r) the reductive Solution is the Metaphyſical Contemplation of the things that truly are; the other is the Myſtic-Theurgical, (s) the Hieratic method of Reduction. Upon account of theſe two Salutary Methods the Family of the Platoniſts was divided into Philoſophi & Hieratici, (t) thoſe of the Philoſophic and thoſe of the Hieratic way. Thoſe that will have Union with the Gods and Beatitude acquir'd by Philoſophy alone as ſufficient, are Philoſophi ſtrictly ſo called (ſuch as Plotinus and Porphyrius;) which are contradiſtinguiſh'd to the Hieratici (ſuch as Jamblichus, Syrianus and Proclus) whoſe way is, to conduct Men to Union with the Gods and Beatitude by the Sacred Symbols, Rites and Myſteries in the Theurgical way. But as the two Methods of the Reduction of the Soul, ſo theſe two ways of attaining Union with the Gods and Beatitude are not ſo oppoſite, but that they are very well conſiſtent; and ſo are theſe two methods of purging the Soul, the one the Myſtic-Metaphyſical, the other the Myſtic-Theurgical. The former of theſe chiefly conſiſteth (u) in a Receſs from material Cogitations, a Repleniſhment from Intellect and that which truly is (w) in the Soul's collecting her ſelf from the Body into her ſelf, and in an Apathy as to the Body; by which Apathy (being purg'd from Sympathy with the Body) ſhe gaineth another Apathy, becometh devoid of the Bodily Paſſions, wholly an intellectual Soul. Such is Plato's method of purging the Soul (when the Soul forſaketh the Body, and will not communicate with it, but live by her ſelf as much as is poſſible; this is call'd in his Phædo κάθαρσις, λύσις ϗ χωρισμὸς ψυχῆς, the Purgation, Solution and Separation of the Soul) which is contradiſtinct to the Myſtic-Theurgical method of Teleſtick Purgations by Rites and Symbols. The Teletæ or Theurgic Conſecrations which (x) S. Auſtin diſcourſeth of from Porphyry, are ſaid to have the virtue of purging the Soul and rendring her fit to ſee the Gods, thoſe φάσματα θεῖα, Divine Apparitions, μακάρια θεάματα, Beatific ſights, (y) that are in Theurgy; the Gifts and Effects whereof are ſaid to be Health of Body, Purity of Mind, Virtue of the Soul, and the Reduction of all things in us to their proper Principles, Divine Love, Incredible Joy, Truth, Power, excellent Performances, and the Gifts of the greateſt Goods. (z) It is generally acknowledg'd, that the Myſteries and the Teletæ reduce and raiſe Souls from the in-material and mortal kind of Life, and conjoyn them with the Gods. Great Effects are aſcrib'd to the Teletæ (the Teletæ of the Sun, Moon, Mithras, and Bacchus) inſomuch that Syneſius ſaith of them, (a) we may not disbelieve the Teletæ ſo well known. They are ſo well known indeed, that they are rightly call'd by Theodoret (b) τῶν δαιμόνων τελεταί, the myſterious Rites of the evil Demons and their worſhip.

VII. The grand Theory fundamental to this Inſtitution of Theurgical Sanctity is the Deſcent and Reaſcent of Souls. For the Buſineſs of the Theology and Religion of the ancient Magi, as the Arabic Writers relate, was (c) the magnifying Light and the eſchewing Darkneſs; (Plutarch ſaith, They wore a white and ſhining Garment againſt Hades and Darkneſs,) all their Diſputations were about two Fundamentals: The firſt is, a Declaration of the cauſe of the mixture of the Light and the Darkneſs; the ſecond is, a Declaration of the cauſe of the Liberation of the Light from the Darkneſs; and that mixture they call (Initium) the Entrance, that Liberation, the Return. The Arabic word מברא which D. Pocock rendreth Initium, I have render'd the Entrance (according that of Varro, (d) when Soul and Body in unum ineunt, this is call'd Initia) with reſpect to the Soul's entrance into the Body. For this Theology of the Magi is Enigmatical and Symbolical, and is thus rightly explain'd. (e) The Magi diſputed touching the deſcent of the Soul into the Body, which they call'd the mixture of the Light and the Darkneſs, but the Greeks κάθοδον, the Deſcent; and touching the Liberation of the Light from the Darkneſs, which the Greeks call ἄνοδον, the Re-aſcent. (f) So the Perſians (ſaith Porphyry) myſtically ſignifying the deſcent of Souls and their egreſs back again, they call the place into which Souls deſcend, a Den. Zoroaſter having firſt of all (as Eubulus hath related) conſecrated a native Den or Cave adorn'd with Flowers and water'd with Fountains in the Mountains near Perſis, to the honour of Mithras the Maker and Father of all things; this Cave or Den being to him an Image of the World which Mithras made. The lively Lineaments of this Zoroaſtrian

(p) V. Caſaubon of Enthuſiaſm c.3. *p.*113, &c. Dr. Stillingfl. Anſw. to Creſſy's *Ep. Apol. p.*126, &c.

(q) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 174, &c.

(r) Ἀνάγωγος λύσις ἡ διαλεκτικὴ τῶν ὄντων ἐποπτεία.

(s) Ἡ ἱερατικὴ ἀναγωγή. In Aur. Carm. p. 305.

(t) Gale in Jambl. p. 213, 252.

(u) Stob. *Ecl. Phyſ. p.*143. Salmaſ. in Epict. *p.*16.

(w) Porph. Sent. p. 239, 240. Ficin. in Plot. *p.*10.

(x) De C. D. l. 10. c. 9.

(y) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 23, 47, 51, 53.

(z) Procl. in Polit. p. 369.

(a) Οὐ θέμις ἀπιστεῖν ἐγνωσμένων τῶν τελετῶν. *De Inſ. p.*140.

(b) Θερ. π. p. 7.

(c) Pocock. Specim. p. 146. & Plutarch. Qu. Rom. p. 270.

(d) De L.L. p. 17.

(e) Gale Not. in Jambl. p. 185.

(f) De Antro. p. 253, 254. vid. Procl. in Tim. p. 101, 102. Plotin. En. 4. *l.*8. *c.*1.

Zoroaſtrian Inſtitution appear in the Mithraic Inſtitution, (which was in honour of Mithras, (g) and a Den or Cave was the μυστικὸς οἶκος, Myſtic Houſe of the Mithraicks, wherein they had their Initiation into their horrendous ſacra) which therefore doubtleſs is a Deſcendent from the ancient Magi. Such was alſo the Pythagoric Inſtitution, as we have ſeen from Porphyry, (h) from whom alſo it appeareth, that the ancient Magi were great Aſceticks, not eating nor killing Animals, and that the chief of the Magi continu'd this Abſtinence in after-times; that Pythagoras learned his Abſtinence from his Maſter Zabratus, and had his Den near Samos in imitation of the Magi. His Doctrine of the Soul's Immortality and of the Tranſmigration of Souls was deriv'd from the Magi, as alſo that other of the periodical Revolution of all things, and that there is nothing new; as Theopompus reporteth the Doctrine of the Magi; that men ſhould live again and become immortal, and that all things having their Circuits and Revolutions there is a permanency and continuance of all things. (i) Moſt Men accounted him a Follower of Zoroaſter, and he is thought to have learn'd from his Maſter Zabratus (by whom he was purg'd from all the filth of his former life) the Teleſtic Purgations and Hieratic Method of the Reduction of the Soul, which were one part of his Inſtitution, according to that of Hierocles, (k) Philoſophy is conjoyn'd with the Art of Sacred Inſtitutes. The deſign of this Compoſition of Philoſophy and Theurgy was, (l) the Reduction (or Subvection) of the Soul to the true Goods, and to ſet her free from the troubles that are here, as out of a Den of in-material Life; which is manifeſtly the ſame deſign with that of the ancient Magi, and of the Egyptians alſo in their Philoſophic Inſtitution of Theurgy. For the Theurgiſts did not trouble the Divine Mind about little things, (m) but about the things that concern the Purgation, Solution, and Salvation of the Soul. (n) The Scope of the Religious Myſteries is, to reduce Souls to that final ſtate, which was original to them, and from which they made their deſcent. It is thought (o) that Homer was inſtructed in the Egyptians Theurgical Theology, and underſtood this grand Theory, which ſuppoſeth, (p) Souls to deſcend from on high, to ſerve in the Body for ſome time, and then to return again; that his Antrum Nympharum repreſenteth and ſignifieth this inferiour Orb of Corruption into which Souls (which are the Nymphs) deſcend; and that by the two Gates thereof, the one Northern the other Southern, they deſcend and re-aſcend (q).

—— —— —— —— Janua duplex
Hæc Boream ſpectans homines admittit, at illa
Reſpiciens Auſtrum divinior, invia prorſus
Eſt homini, præbetque viam immortalibus unis.

The principal matters of this grand Theory as Proclus ſuppoſeth, (r) are compriz'd by him in ten Demiurgic Laws or Laws of Fate (in great part Laws of Fancy) which he collecteth from Plato's Timæus. The Demiurgus having compos'd the Soul of the World of a certain mixture of Number-Ingredients, and particular Souls * out of the remains of it (according to Plato's fanciful way of philoſophizing) Theſe Souls in their immaterial or ethereal Vehicles are diſtributed and diſſeminated about their ſocial Stars. There is one Deſcent common to all Souls in every periodical Circumvolution of the Univerſe. The Soul which deſcendeth, in the firſt Generation, deſcendeth into a Religious Animal. The Soul which deſcendeth into Humane Nature, firſt deſcendeth into the Geniture of a Man. The Soul in the Body (s) is conjoyn'd with the material Lives, which have their Origin from the Soul. The Soul which maſtereth the material Life (of Senſe and Paſſion) is juſt and liveth juſtly; but if maſter'd thereby, is unjuſt. The juſt returneth to the ſocial Star. He that is unjuſt or criminal deſcendeth again in a ſecond Generation into a Woman's Nature, (which implyeth, (t) that Women have their origin from the Putrefaction of Men, from their degenerate, timid, unjuſt, intemperate Souls.) If that Criminality of his continueth during the ſecond Generation, he muſt be chang'd into ſuch a Brute as he reſembleth in Manners. The laſt and principal of the Demiurgic Laws is; There is no other way, to ſave the Soul, to put an end to her Troubles, and ceaſe the Circuit of wandring in Generation, but by a Life reductive of the Soul to her Priſtine Habit. In which Demiurgic Laws and Platonic Salvation (wherein the Souls (u) called Ἄχραντοι ψυχαί, impollute Souls, have no concern; for theſe deſcend to declare the Gods, for the welfare of this lower Region, to purifie and perfect the things that are here, are unprejudic'd by their deſcent and are free from the Evils of Generation,) there is nothing of true and ſaving Religion, nothing of a Divine Cabala, nor any Traduction from the Hebrew Theology, nor do they ſufficiently illuſtrate the grand Theory touching the deſcent and reaſcent of Souls; for the due illuſtration whereof theſe four things (compris'd in it) are of good obſervation.

(1.) The original ſublime condition of the Soul agreeable to the tenour of the Pagan Theology in general, which deriveth Souls from Heaven and the Stars; (w) for noſtros animos deduci e cœlo, reduci in cœlum, that our Souls come from Heaven and return thither, was the uſual maxim. The Stoicks thus far agree with the Platoniſts and the Chaldaic Theology; they ſuppoſe, that the Humane Soul is of a luminous fiery nature, a Deſcendent from Heaven, the Gods and Stars, and thither ſome of them return it after ſeparation from the Body. Theſe ſublime Speculations touching the Origin of the Humane Soul (which otherwiſe would deſerve an applauſe) the Pagan Theologers have intermix'd with much of enormous Phantaſtry and Extravagance. For as the Stoicks derive the Soul or Animative Principle even of Brute-Animals from Heaven: So it appeareth from ſeveral paſſages in Plato, (x) that he ſuppos'd the Souls of Brutes, to be diſtributed and diſſeminated about their Social Stars as well as the Humane Souls; and according to this Philoſopher, the Swans ſing moſt, when they diſcern their approaching death, becauſe they preſage, that they ſhall ſpeedily go to that God (Apollo) whoſe Family they are of. The condition of the Humane Soul in her Original State (according to this Philoſopher,) is that of a Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theamatiſt, (y) aſcending to the top of Heaven, and beholding in the ſupercœleſtial place (which Origen thinketh, Plato traduc'd from the Hebrews) the ſights of the happy Theamatiſts. So in his Phædrus in a ſtrain of Poetic

(g) Beyer. addit. ad Selden. p. 272, &c.

(h) De Abſt. l. 4. S. 16. de vit. Pythag. p. 184. L. Holſten. de vit. & Scr. Porphyr. p. 73, 74, 80, 81.

(i) Seld. de D. Syr. p. 137, 150. Lil. Gyral. Pythag. Symb. p. 92.

(k) Συνάπτεται τῇ τῶν ἱερῶν τέχνῃ ἡ φιλοσοφία. In aur. Carm. p. 306.

(l) Ἀναγαγεῖν πρὸς τὰ ὄντως καλά· ἀπολῦσαι ἢ τῶν τῇδε πόνων, ὡς ἐκ τινὸς καταγείου σπηλαίου τῆς ἐνύλου ζωῆς. Ibid. p. 310.

(m) Ἀλλὰ περὶ τῶν εἰς ψυχῆς κάθαρσιν καὶ ἀπόλυσιν καὶ σωτηρίαν ἀνηκόντων. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 178.

(n) Σκοπὸς τῶν τελετῶν ἐστιν, εἰς τέλος ἀναγαγεῖν τὰς ψυχὰς ἐκεῖνο, ἀφ᾽ οὗ τὴν πρώτην ἐποιήσαντο κάθοδον ὡς ἀπ᾽ ἀρχῆς. Martin. Lex. in voce Myſterium.

(o) Marſham. Can. Chron. p. 270. ed. Lipſ.

(p) Orac. Mag. p. 25.

(q) Odyſſ. 13. v. 109.

(r) In Tim. p. 331.

* Plato elſewhere ſuppoſeth Souls exiſtent from Eternity.

(s) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 1-7.

(t) J. Bapt. Criſp. Quin. prin. p. 353, &c.

(u) Gale in Jambl. p. 271.

(w) Macr. in Somn. Scip. l. 1. c. 9. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 3. Diſſ. 8, 9, 14 Gaſſen. T. 2. p. 239.

(x) J. Bapt. Criſp. p. 123, 435.

(y) Πεφυκείας ἀναβαίνειν ἐπὶ τὴν ἁψῖδα τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ ἐν τῷ ὑπερουρανίῳ τόπῳ θεωρεῖν τὰ τῶν εὐδαιμόνων θεατῶν θεάματα. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 159. & l. 6. p. 288.

Phancy (z) he repreſenteth Jupiter agitating a winged Chariot conducting an Army of Gods aud Demons, and follow'd by Souls to the Felicitative Viſion of the Super-celeſtial place (where is the Field of what is Truth and the Meadow, and where they behold Juſtice it ſelf, Temperance and Science, the Intelligible Pulchritude and the Divine Idea's;) which happy Viſion he calleth a Banquet (the Nutriment and Feſtivity of Souls,) an agreeable Repaſt for Platonic Theoriſts, and for ſuch is Plato's Heaven and for none other.

(2.) The Cauſe of the Soul's deſcent (touching which (a) the Platoniſts have very various Sentiments) which according to Plato in his Phædrus is a failure of the Platonic Viſion and an Ineptitude thereto. The Law of Adraſtia is this (ſaith he;) that every Soul which accompanying the God to the Banquet ſhall behold ſomething of the things that are true, remain unprejudic'd till the next Circuit of the Heavens, and if ſhe can always do this, that ſhe always remain unhurt. But when ſhe is impotent and cannot reach, but faileth of the Viſion, and having ſuſtained ſome miſhap, and being replete with Oblivion and Pravity is become heavy, and in this unwieldineſs her Wings fall off, and ſhe falleth to the Earth, then the Law is, that ſuch a Soul ſhall not go into any Brutal Nature in the firſt Generation; but a Soul that hath been the greateſt Theamatiſt, muſt be the Soul of a Philoſopher, or a lover of Beauty, or a Muſical and Amatorious Perſon. A ſecondary Soul muſt be the Soul of a legitimate King or of a Man of War: And alike diſpoſal he maketh of other Souls in a way of ludicrous toying rather than of ſolid ſerious philoſophizing. But if the cauſe of the Soul's deſcent be (b) λήθη καὶ πτερορρύησις, obliviouſneſs and her Wings falling off, her deſcent was a miſchance: If her deſcent was (c) διὰ τὴν αὐτεξούσιον ῥοπὴν, by her autexouſious Propenſion and (d) αὐτοθελῶς, ſelf-choſen, it was her Crime; if Souls are (e) ἐπὶ δίκῃ καὶ κρίσει, judicially ſent down hither, and the Body be their Priſon, Sepulchre, and the Bonds of the Soul, her Deſcent was her Puniſhment. But as ſometimes this Philoſopher (Plato) conſidereth not the Body as a Priſon or Sepulchre, nor the World as a Den, but as a beautiful Fabrick: So he ſometimes waveth the conſideration of other cauſes of the deſcent of Souls, and repreſenteth it as (f) an effect of the Divine Goodneſs and Providence for the Ornament and Perfection of the World of Animals, and becauſe thoſe kinds of Animals which are in the Intelligible World ought to be in the Senſible. The deſcent of Souls is ſaid to be requiſite alſo (g) for the exerciſe of their lower Powers, and the diſplay of them in the matter, that they might have experience of Evil, take care of things Mortal, do ſervice for the generation of the things of Nature, and for variety ſake there muſt be aſcending and deſcending; for κάματός ἐστι τοῖς αὐτοῖς μοχθεῖν, it is one ſort of Defatigation to be tir'd with the ſame things, as Heraclitus ſaith. The deſcent of Souls therefore (h) ſubſerveth the wiſe and good Ends of Providence, whether it proceeds from Neceſſity or Liberty, Fate or Choice, or (as Plotinus ſuppoſeth) a Mixture and Complication of both theſe, from an impotency of converſing always with the Intelligibles, a defect and obliviouſneſs of the Soul; from an innate Inſtinct and Propenſion to the Body, or an affectionate Inclination to that particular Animal which every Man is; or whether they be drawn down ἴυγγι τινὶ φυσικῇ, by ſome natural Inticement, or a Pleaſure which they take in Generation; for (according to Heraclitus) theſe Naiades delight to dabble in Humidity. The Pythagoreans complain of the Soul's deſcent as hugely Criminal in it ſelf and Penal in its Conſequences. For Man falleth from the happy Region, (i) by being a Fugitive and Wanderer from God (the Platonic Divine Intellect) complying with a mad kind of Strife or Contention, that of the lower part of the Soul againſt the higher, whence Heraclitus ſaith, (k) πόλεμος πατὴρ πάντων, War or Strife is the Father of all things, becauſe it is the Origin of Generation. But the Pythagoreans and the old Theologers did not only ſuppoſe the deſcent of Souls, to be penal in its Conſequences, but formally and in it ſelf penal; for Empedocles's Doctrine was, (l) that there is a Law, that ſinning Souls ſhould deſcend hither. And theſe have Bodies and all the Circumſtances of Life allotted to them agreeably to their Merits. (m) Thoſe of the elder times ſay, that the Soul ſuffereth Puniſhment, and that we live in a ſtate of Chaſtiſement for ſome great Sins. The Doctrine of the ancient Magi appeareth from the Account (n) which Abu Ali Ebn Sennæ giveth of the Arabians Doctrine; ſubſcribing to the Judgment of the Magi they are of Opinion, that the Retention and Incarceration of the Soul in this Elementary World is her Penal and Calamitous State. (o) This was the Doctrine of the Ancient Theologers and Diviners (as Philolaus the Pythagorean affirmeth) and therefore of the ancient Magi. If the old Theologers the Inſtitutors of the Sacred Ceremonies in divers Nations acknowledg'd no other Infernal Region ſave only the Body, as Macrobius affirmeth, (p) the original and principal deſign of the Pagans in their Inſtitution of Religion was the liberation and reduction of the Soul. Agreeably to thoſe old Theologers the Chalday Oracles repreſent the Circumterraneous Region and the Terreſtrial Hyle as the Infernal Region (q).

Μηδὲ κάτω νεύσῃς εἰς τὸν μελαναυγέα κόσμον
Ὧ βυθὸς αἰὲν ἄπιστος, ὑπέστρωται τε καὶ ἅδης.

Do not bend downwards to this every way tenebricoſe World, whoſe bottom is profoundity always unſtable (that is the matter) and Hades.

(3.) The Evils conſequent upon the Souls deſcent, which are a vaſt Tragedy of Human Folly, Pravity, Ignobleneſs and Infelicity, (r) ταραχῆς ἐνύλου καὶ τῶν ἐν τῇ γενέσει πόνων, of in-material Perturbation and the toils and troubles in Generation, and in the World (call'd by Plato ἀνομοιότητος τόπος, the place of diſſimilitude) the Region of Ate (s) where there are Sholes of all ſorts of Miſchiefs. (t) It is not natural to the Soul, to live with Bodies and in Generation: But on the contrary a ſeparate, immaterial, incorporeal Life is rather agreeable to Souls. When they live in Generation therefore they are like to Men, that dwell in a Peſtilent Region: But when they live out of Generation, as Plato ſaith, they are like thoſe that dwell in Meadows. As therefore it is not to be admir'd, if ſuch as inhabit Peſtilent places be moſt of them unhealthful, and but few conſerve their natural Health: So neither ought you to wonder, that Souls in Generation are moſt of them bad and obnoxious to Paſſions. The deſcent of the Soul into the Body hath ſeparated her from thoſe

(z) Plotin. En. 5. l. 8. c. 10. Souls conſiſt of the ſacred Forms and the Divine Symbols, ſaith Pſellus. Orac. mag. p. 106.

(a) Plotin. En. 4. l. 8. c. 1. Gale in Jambl. p. 193. Celſ. ap. Orig. l. 8. p. 412.

(b) Procl. in Tim. p. 339.

(c) Ibid. p. 338.

(d) Simpl. in Epict. c. 34.

(e) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 113, 114.

(f) Plotin. ſupr. J. B. Criſp. p. 134. Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 9. c. 29.

(g) Liv. Galant. Compar. p. 328. Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 193. Niceph. Schol. in Syneſ. p. 386. Plotin. ſupr.

(h) Plotin. ibid. c. 5. Procl. in Tim. p. 324. Ficin. in Plotin. p. 17, 70. Wander. de vit. funct. S. 5. Porphyr. de Antr. p. 256, 261.

(i) Φυγὰς θεόθεν καὶ ἀλήτης, νείκει μαινομένῳ πίσυνος. Empedocl. ap. Hierocl. in Aur. Carm. p. 254.

(k) Procl. in Tim. p. 54.

(l) Ἁμαρτανούσαις νόμον εἶναι ταῖς ψυχαῖς πεσεῖν ἐνταῦθα. Plotin. ſupr. c. 1. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 26.

(m) Jambl. προτρεπ. p. 53.

(n) Windet. ſupr.

(o) Clem. Str. l. 3. p. m. 316.

(p) Hoc animæ ſepulchrum, hoc Ditis concava, hoc Inferos vocaverunt. In ſomn. Scip. l. 1. c. 10.

(q) Syneſ. de Inſomn. p. 140.

(r) Procl. in Tim. p. 338.

(s) Ἔνθα φόνος τε κότος τε καὶ ἄλλων ἔθνεα κηρῶν. Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 254.

(t) Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 250, 238.

Divine Minds, by whom ſhe was repleniſh'd with Intelligence, Power and Purity; but hath conjoyn'd her to Generation and Nature, and to material things, by which ſhe is imbu'd with Oblivion, Error and Ignorance. (u) What is it that hath cauſed Souls to forget God (the Platonic Divine Intellect) and being originally Divine and wholly his, to be ignorant both of themſelves and of him? The beginning of Evil to them is Audaciouſneſs, Geneſis, their firſt Diverſity or Segregation, and becauſe they would be by themſelves and their own. Having made a great departure, they are become ignorant, that their Original is from thence, as Children that are preſently taken from their Parents, and educated for a long time a great way off, neither know themſelves nor their Parents; undervaluing and making themſelves mean ἀγνοίᾳ τοῦ γένους, through their ignorance of the nobleneſs of their Pedigree, and honouring and admiring thoſe inferior things. (w) Their Propenſion to the Earth ſheweth, that their departure from God hath hurt their Intellectuals; for the moſt are bad, under the Power of the ſenſitive Propenſion, φρενοβλαβεῖς, ἀνόητοι, ſottiſh, delirous and ſuch as are fallen into madneſs (devoid of the principal Operations of Mind and Intellect.) The deſcent of Souls importeth the loſs (x) of their νοερὰ εὐζωΐα, intellectual happy Life (the Platonic Contemplation) perfect ignorance of that which truly is, obtenebration and infantility followeth upon their deſcent into Generation (which beſmeareth them with humidity) and the Soul is ſaid to fall (y) εἰς βόρβορον σκοτεινόν, into the tenebricoſe Dirt. (z) The Soul is inveloped in darkneſs by the Body, which he that ſhall call the River Ameleta, or the Water of Lethe, or Ignorance and Madneſs, or the Bonds of the Soul, or the Privation of Life, or any other Evil, doth not ſufficiently expreſs the incongruity of it. So Plato in his Phædo enumerating the calamitous things, which imbodied Souls are incumbred with, complaineth of (a) the loſs of Intellect and the inordinacy of Animal Paſſions (b) of Error and Madneſs, of Fears and wild kind Loves and other Human Evils; and the material Conſiſtence (the Body) is call'd by this Philoſopher (c) πόντος ϗ θάλασσα ϗ κλύδων, a tumultous Sea. The Animal Nature is ſaid to be (d) an Alien Animal, that accrueth to us from Generation, which ſome call a many headed Beaſt, (Plotinus calleth it θηρίον ζωωθὲν, a wild Beaſt enliven'd,) ſome the Mortal kind of life, others the Generation-kind of Nature, the Pythagoric Verſes call it connate Strife or Contention. (e) Becauſe the Body is inimical to Philoſophic Theory (by the various impoſtures of Senſe and Diſturbances from thence, the various Paſſions of it, which fill the mind with all ſorts of Phantaſms and Nugacities, by the multifarious needs and concerns of it, which bring upon us μυρίας ἀσχολίας, innumerable Buſineſſes, as Plato ſaith,) the goodly things of Human Life are a meer Sciagraphy or Adumbration of the things that truly are, and becauſe the Soul is here in a State of Puniſhment, the Conjunction of Soul and Body is like the device of the Tyrant Mezentius, a tying the living and dead together. The Poet ſpeaketh the Philoſophers Senſe, when he ſaith, that (f) Obtenebration and Animal Paſſion accrueth to imbodied Souls.

Hinc metuunt, cupiuntque, dolent, gaudentque, nec auras
Suſpiciunt, clauſæ tenebris & carcere cæco.

(4.) The Sanctity of the Philoſophic Pagans viſible in this ſtrain of Philoſophy; for much of it conſiſteth in a Philoſophic Averſation from Terreſtrial Matter and Body, the Generation-kind of Nature, and an Affectation of Incorporealneſs, Immaterialiſm and Intellectualiſm. (g) Philoſophy deſigneth the Purgation of the Soul from Corporeity; for if the Soul departeth pure, carrying along with her nothing of the Body (having in the time of Life disjoin'd her ſelf from Commerce with it) ſhe goeth to what is like her ſelf, Divine, Immortal and Wiſe: But if the Soul departeth polluted and not clean from the Body, ſhe carryeth with her what is heavy and terrene (ſaith Plato,) and is drawn again into this viſible place. (h) That the Soul may return to her own things, ſhe muſt put off πᾶν τὸ ὑλικὸν καὶ θνητὸν, whatever is Material and Mortal and diveſt her ſelf of all things of the mortal Nature which ſhe hath aſſum'd, together with her Propenſion towards theſe things, which was cauſal of her deſcent. The Scope and Buſineſs of Philoſophy (the Myſtic-Metaphyſical and Myſtic-Theurgical is, (i) to undertake the Celeſtial Journey, to be conjoin'd to the intellectual Gods, to be ſegregate from Material Nature, and to be carryed to an immaterial and pure Life. The Philoſophers concern is for the Mind, not to Symbolize or Sympathize with the Body; he is not taken with Precioſities of Apparel, nor followeth bodily Pleaſure, which as it were προσηλοῖ αὐτὴν καὶ προσπερονᾷ, naileth and affixeth her to the Body, (as Plato ſpeaketh) maketh her corporeous, of a bodily Genius and full of the bodily Nature. (k) He ſtudieth to be unlike the bad Men and Genii that take delight in what is Mortal and Material. And his Cathartic Virtues (l) intirely ſeparate and looſen the Soul from the truly plumbeous Weights of Generation, ſo that ſhe may fly from the things that here without let or impediment. So the Buſineſs of Syneſius's Piety, the Summ of his Prayers and the burden of his Song is, (m) That he may flee from the miſchief of the Body, and being purged from the Matter (which theſe Philoſophers (n) ſuppos'd the Origin of Evil) and avoiding the voracious Barkings of the Matter, he may take a ſwift leap to the Manſions of the Father, whence the Soul iſſueth. Agreeably to this their Averſation from Material (Innocent) Nature and Philoſophic Affectation of Immaterialiſm, the Platoniſts ſuppos'd, that nothing ſenſible ought to be offer'd to the God over all, (o) for there is nothing Material, which is not impure and unclean to that which is Immaterial. Euſebius alſo in his humour of Philoſophic-Paganizing and in compliance with theſe Metaphyſical Immaterialiſts, although he could not but know, that the Crown of our Religious Worſhip is the Holy Euchariſt, yet he pretendeth, that in our Chriſtian Worſhip (p) we bring nothing that is Terrene and Dead, nor any thing of corruptible and material Subſtance. The like extravagant Im-

---

(u) Ἀρχὴ μὲν αὐτοῖς τοῦ κακοῦ, ἡ τόλμα καὶ ἡ γένεσις, ϗ ἡ πρώτη ἑτερότης. Plotin. En. 5. l. 1. c. 1.

(w) Hierocl. ſupr. p. 261.

(x) Ibid. p. 253. Porphyr. Sentent. n. 32.

(y) Plotin. En. 1. l. 8. c. 13.

(z) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 86. vid. Gale not. p. 242.

(a) V. Plotin. En. 4. l. 8. c. 2.

(b) Πλάνης καὶ ἀνοίας, καὶ φόβων ϗ ἀγρίων ἐρώτων.

(c) Porph. de Antr. p. 271.

(d) Τὸ παραπεφυκὸς ἡμῖν ἀλλότριον ζῶον, ὅπερ οἱ μὲν πολυκέφαλον θηρίον, οἱ δὲ θνητὸν ζωῆς εἶδος, ἄλλοι δὲ φύσιν γενεσιουργὸν καλοῦσιν, ἐνταῦθα δὲ ἔριν σύμφυλον ἐπωνόμασαν. Jambl. προτρ. p. 9. Plotin. En. 1. l. 1. c. 10.

(e) Jambl. προτρεπτ. c. 13. & 8. Plutarch. conſol. ad Apollon. p. 108.

(f) Virgil Æneid. 6.

(g) Jambl. προτρεπτ. c 13. Plotin. En. 1. l. 6. c. 5. Theodor. Marcil. com. in carm. Pythag. p. 382, 383.

(h) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 1. S. 30.

(i) Τῆς οὐρανίας πορείας ἀντέχεσθαι ϗ τοῖς νοεροῖς θεοῖς συνάπτεσθαι, τῆς τε ἐνύλου φύσεως χωρίζεσθαι, ϗ περιάγεσθαι πρὸς τὴν ἄϋλον ϗ καθαρὰν ζωήν. Jambl. ſupr. p. 139, & c. 13.

(k) Porphyr. de Abſt. l 2. S. 43.

( ) Marin. in vit. Procl.

(m) Δός με φυγοῖσαν σώματος ἄταν, θεὸν ἅλμα βαλεῖν ἐπὶ σὰς αὐλάς. Hymn. 3 Ὡς ἐξ ὕλας φοιβαθεὶς. Hymn. 5. Μάκαρ ὅστις βορὸν ὕλας προφυγὼν ὕλαγμα. Hymn. 1.

(n) Windet. de vit. funct. S. 3.

(o) Οὐδὲν γάρ ἐστιν ἔνυλον, ὃ μὴ τῷ ἀΰλῳ εὐθύς ἐστιν ἀκάθαρτον. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 10, 11.

(p) Οὐδὲν μὲν γεῶδες ϗ νεκρὸν, οὐδὲ τῆς φθαρτῆς ϗ ὑλικῆς οὐσίας. Ibid.

materialiſm is viſible in the Philoſophic Affectation of a Life (q) devoid of Phancy and Paſſion, (r) in pretending to the height of Apathy, not to limit or meaſure the Paſſions, but to be wholly and intirely devoid of them. (s) The purged Soul collecteth her ſelf into her ſelf, and not ſympathizing with the Body or the Motions and Paſſions in the irrational Nature, is pure from them and ſinneth not: But her aim is, οὐκ ἔξω ἁμαρτίας εἶναι, ἀλλὰ θεὸν εἶναι, not only to be without Sin, but (the Paſſions being extinguiſh'd) to tranſcend a Demon, and to be a God. Porphyry was ſo delirous an Immaterialiſt, that Eunapius ſaith of him, He hated his being a Man. Plotinus alſo (as Porphyry ſaith in his Life) was as one aſhamed, that he was in the Body. And the true Reſurrection in his Philoſophy is (t) to riſe intirely from all Bodies, which are of an oppoſite Nature to the Soul; to riſe with the Body, is but to paſs ἐξ ἄλλου εἰς ἄλλον ὕπνον, from one Sleep to another. The matter alſo in his Philoſophy (u) is the firſt and chief Evil, bad it ſelf; and the Platoniſts ſuppoſe (as the Poet Virgil before-cited repreſenteth their Hypotheſis,) that the Body as it is a terrene material Subſtance, infecteth the Soul with vicious Motions and inordinate Paſſions, and is the Origin of them. Which is a Branch of extravagant Immaterialiſm deſervedly reprov'd by S. Auſtin. (w) There is a carnal Affectation of the Nature of the Soul, and a carnal Averſation from the Fleſh; as when the one is magnified as the chief good, and the Nature and Subſtance of the other is accus'd as Evil. Such a Sentiment is not from Divine Verity, but Human Philoſophic Vanity.

Such Philoſophic Vanity uſually occurreth in the Theology (or Metaphyſicks) of the Hebrew Doctors, who ſuppoſe, (x) that ſpeculative Science is Mans higheſt Perfection, and the only cauſe of perpetual and eternal Life. (y) The matter is as a Partition-wall and a Veil hindring the true apprehenſion of the abſtract Intelligence. And this is every where hinted in all the Books of the Prophets, that there is a Veil ſeparating between us and God. As when it is ſaid, he is hidden to us in a Cloud, in Obſcurity, in thick Darkneſs, a thick Cloud or the like; becauſe in reſpect of the Matter we are too imperfect to apprehend him. (z) Man may follow his Intellect and be as the Supernals: Or his Matter and be as a Beaſt or Animal. And as our Rabbins ſay, אםימות יחיה ואם יחיה ימות if he dyeth, he ſhall live; and if he liveth he ſhall die. That is, if he ſlayeth his Matter, his Intellect ſhall live: But if his Matter liveth, he killeth the Faculty of Intellect. This Rabbinical mode of Theologizing is a Deſcendent from the Philoſophic Pagans, who are undoubtedly the Origin of it: Yet Clemens will have the Philoſophic-Pagan Immaterialiſm a Deſcendent from Moſes. (a) Philoſophy is defin'd by Socrates the Meditation of Death; for he that without uſing his Eyes or any other Senſe applieth the pure Mind to the things, Philoſophizeth aright. Pythagoras alſo injoin'd his Diſciples, that abſtracting from things ſenſible, they ſhould Contemplate God with the naked Mind. Theſe things the chief of the Greek Philoſophers traduc'd from Moſes. For he commandeth, that having taken off the Skins of the Holocauſts, they ſhould divide them into parts; becauſe the cognitive or contemplative Soul if ſhe be denudate of the material Skin (or covering of matter,) if ſhe be without the bodily Nugacity and all Paſſions, and have put off all carnal Concupiſcences, muſt neceſſarily be conſecrated to Light.

VIII. The grand Theory touching the Deſcent and Re-aſcent of Souls is complicated with ſome other Theories touching the Tranſmigration of the Soul (both that which is into and that which is in Generation) her Circuit and Rotation. Theſe Theories are diſcourſed in the Writings of Plato, but without any tolerable Self-conſiſtence (as Euſebius (b) and others have noted,) and with the intermixture of ſuch ridiculous Phantaſtry (as in making harmleſs Men paſs into Birds and deriving the Origin of creeping Animals from ſuch Men that do not Philoſophize, but follow the lower parts of the Soul,) that ſome have thought his Diſcourſes jocular not ſerious. But theſe Circuits and Rotations of the Soul are doubtleſs Theories of his Philoſophy, and they are agreeable to certain Philoſophic Maxims, (c) That there is a periodical Revolution of all things, that the Souls of Men and Brutes are congenial, That all Souls are fitted with Bodies agreeable to their former Life; and ſome of the Platoniſts argue; (d) If there be not a return of Souls into Bodies, the number of Souls muſt be infinite, or God muſt always make new Souls. Touching the firſt Tranſinigration-Circuit (which is into Generation) Plato and his Followers ſuppoſe a Deſcent and Re-aſcent of the Soul upwards and downwards in endleſs Rotations and Viciſſitudes. As Plotinus ſaith of the Soul, (e) that according to Plato, when ſhe is aſcended, certain Circuits (of the Heavens) bring her thither again. Syneſius fearing ſuch a diſaſtrous Circuit maketh it his Prayer, (f) that his Soul elapſed from the Body may relapſe no more into the Evils of the Earth. Not only from above, but from beneath alſo there is a Tranſinigration into Generation; (g) for the Subterraneous Souls are ſuppos'd (by the Platoniſts) to Re-aſcend and to live in Human Bodies; and Proclus calleth the Soul (h) the multifarious Wanderer, deſcending to Tartarus and rais'd up to her former Altitude again. But as ſome Souls that are incurably bad, never come out of Tartarus (as Plato (i) ſometimes diſcourſeth:) So the Pythagoric Verſes promiſe an happy Immortality to all purged Souls without a relapſe into Generation. (k) If upon leaving the Body thou come to live in the free Ether, thou ſhalt be a God Immortal, Mortal no more. So Epicharmus ſaith, (l) A pious Mind ſuffereth no evil by Death. The Spirit remaineth in Heaven the Supernal Region. So Empedocles promiſeth a perpetuity of felicity to the Juſt. (m) They ſhall live in Conſortſhip with other Immortals, without Human Miſeries, Immortal and Impaſſible. Theſe truly noble Sentiments as they are inconſiſtent with a Platonic Rotation of Souls upwards and downwards in endleſs Viciſſitudes, ſo they are not peculiar to the Philoſophic Pagans; for the Prieſts and Saintiſts of

(q) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 1. S. 30.

(r) Marin. in vit. Procl.

(s) Plotin. En. 1. l. 2. c. 5, 6.

(t) En. 3. l. 6. c. 6.

(u) En. 1. l. 8. v. Ficin. in loc.

(w) Qui velut ſummum bonum laudat animæ naturam, & tanquam malum naturam carnis accuſat, profecto & animam carnaliter appetit, & carnem carnaliter fugit. Quoniam id vanitate ſentit humana, non veritate divina. De C. D. l. 14. c. 3, 5.

(x) Maimon. mor. nev. Par. 2. c. 27.

(y) Ibid. Par. 3. c. 9. V. Windet. de vit. funct. S. 3.

(z) Abarbinel. ap. Hotting. de creat. p. 263.

(a) Strom. l. 5. p. m. 523.

(b) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 13. c. 16. J. Bapt. Criſp. Quin. 1. Diſtr. 3. l. 1.

(c) L. Holſten. de vit. & Scr. Porphyr. p. 81, 82. Spencer. not. in Orig. p. 27, 64. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 41.

(d) Salluſt. de D. & mundo c. 20.

(e) Περίοδοι αὐτὴν ἀνελθοῦσαν πάλιν φέρουσι τῇδε. En. 4. l. 8. c. 1.

(f) Νεῦσον δὲ πάτερ Σῶμα φυγοῖσαν, Μηκέτι δῦναι ἐς χθονὸς ἄταν. Hymn. 3.

(g) J. B. Criſp. p. 520, 522.

(h) Τὸ πολυπλανὲς, καὶ μέχρι τοῦ ταρτάρου κάτιον καὶ αὖθις ἀναγειρόμενον. In Tim. p. 318. Inſtit. Theol. c. 205.

(i) Marſh. Can. Chr. p. 283. ed. Lipſ.

(k) Ἢν δ' ἀπολείψας σῶμα ἐς αἰθέρ' ἐλεύθερον ἔλθῃς Ἔσσεαι ἀθάνατος θεὸς, ἄμβροτος οὐκέτι θνητός.

(l) Εὐσεβὴς τὸν νοῦν πεφυκὼς οὐ πάθῃς γ' οὐδὲν κακὸν κατθανών. Ἄνω τὸ πνεῦμα διαμένει κατ' οὐρανόν. Ap. Grot. Proleg. ad Dict. Poet.

(m) Ἀθανάτοις ἄλλοισιν ὁμέστιοι, ἔν τε τραπέζαις Εὔνιες ἀνδρείων ἀχέων, ἀπόκηροι, ἀτειρεῖς. Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 442.

of Cybele (and other popular Pagan Deities) promiſ'd themſelves a perpetuity of Felicity after this Life, (n) and that they ſhould live for ever with thoſe Deities, whoſe Myſtæ they were without relapſing into Generation. The Egyptians alſo at their Funerals ſpake the Praiſes of the dead Man, (o) as of one that was to ſpend Eternity in Hades (which comprehendeth both Tartara and Elyſium) with the pious. And this Principle of Theology is uſual in the Writings both of the Popular and Philoſophic Pagans (in Plato himſelf,) That Rewards and Puniſhments are allotted to the Souls of Men upon their departure from their Body, in another World; that pure Souls go to a State of Celeſtial or Elyſian happineſs, and the impure ſuffer infernal puniſhments. Which is a Principle manifeſtly inconſiſtent with the latter of the above-mentioned Rotations (that which is in Generation,) which Herodotus aſcribeth to the Egyptians. (p) They held, that the Soul of Man is Immortal, and that the Body dying it entreth ſome other Animal that is always generated, and after it hath gone about through all the Terreſtrial and Marine Animals and the Birds, there is a remigration of it into ſome Human Body that is generated, and that this Circuit is finiſh'd in three Thouſand Years. So in Benjamin's Itinerarium, p. 34. The Dogziin are ſaid to hold, that a Soul which goeth out of the Body of a good Man, entreth the Body of a little Child, which is born at the time of that Soul's departure: But the Soul which goeth out of the Body of a bad Man, entreth the Body of a Dog or Beaſt.

(n) Gale in Jambl. p. 252.

(o) Marſham ſupr. p. 274, 278, 284.

(p) V. Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 324. &c. Herbert. de Rel Gentil. p. 203. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 10. l. 3. c. 41. de Philoſ. Sect. c. 6. Gaſſend. T. 2. p. 261. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 10. c. 30.

This Tranſmigration of Human Souls into the Bodies of Brutes (whether by a Tranſmigration into or in Generation) which was of old and is at this day an Opinion in the Eaſtern parts, was thought abſurd by Timæus Locrus, Jamblichus and Porphyrius; S. Auſtin alſo noteth, that Porphyry diſſenteth from his Maſter Plato touching the Rotation of the Soul upwards and downwards; for he is of Opinion, that the purged Soul which returneth to the Father, deſcendeth no more into the Evils of this World. Some of the Platonic Family (as Proclus) ſuppoſe, that the Human Soul tranſmigrateth into ſuch Brutes as ſhe reſembleth in manners, (q) but that thoſe Brutes have their own Soul and Life, wherein they ſuppoſe the Human Soul οἷον ἐποχουμένην, ſeated as it were and carry'd and bound to it by Sympathy. Others of the Platoniſts and Pythagoreans (as Empedocles and Plotinus) ſuppoſe a Tranſmigration of the Human Soul (r) not only into Brutes, but Plants alſo, and that the Human Soul becometh a Plantal Soul. For they that keep themſelves Men, are again born Men (ſaith Plotinus;) They that live by Senſe only, Animals; if by Senſe with Paſſion, wild Animals: if with Concupiſcence and Pleaſure, ſalacious Animals; if immoderately Philomuſical (and not otherwiſe deprav'd,) Muſical Animals; if irrational Kings (without any other pravity,) Eagles; if ſuch as ſoar high without Wiſdom, Birds; if of civil Virtue, Men; if ſuch as live not by Sence ſo much as by a degeneracy of Sence, Plants. From whence the Platonic Hypotheſis raiſes them (ἀπηλλαγμένας τῆς γενέσεως, diſentangled from Generation) to their original ſublime Condition. But becauſe it was thought the grand infelicity of the Soul, to be toſs'd about and wander in the Region of Generation, the Pythagoric Inſtitution injoineth Abſtinence from Beans, making the Bean a Symbol (s) of direct continued Generation without any reflexion or return; becauſe of ſpermatic Plants the Bean in a manner only is perforated and hollow throughout, without any internodial obſtructions, Knots or Joynts in the Stalk. Upon which account the Bean was alſo ſaid to reſemble the Gate of Hades, which is always open and never barr'd to Souls deſcending into Generation. Abſtinence from Beans (wherein there is no ſtop) therefore was deſign'd, to ſignifie to Pythagoras's Scholars, that a ſtop muſt be put to the continued Progreſs of Generation, and that they ſhould endeavour a return to the ſupernal Regions, a liberation from the Body and Generation. But touching the time when they might expect a liberation from the Body and Generation, Plato in his Phædrus determineth, that Souls do not regain their Wings in leſs ſpace than ten Thouſand Years, except the Souls of Philoſophers and Philoſophic Lovers of Beauty; for theſe regain theirs within the ſpace of three Thouſand Years, if (in the Tranſmigration Circuit) they thrice make choice of that Life. Having regain'd their Wings (t) they re-aſcend πρὸς αὐτὸ τὸ νοητὸν, to the ſame ſublime Intelligible whence they made their deſcent, which is an higher reaſcent than that other to their Social Star. To the Social Star they may re-aſcend in a leſs ſpace of time, the ſpace of a Thouſand Years: Or as S. Auſtin repreſenteth the Platoniſts Senſe (u) the Souls of the wiſe after death are carried to the Stars, the Souls of the fooliſh to ſuch Bodies as are due to their Merits. But what their determinate Opinion was touching this matter or whether they had any, is not ſafe to determine. One thing we may ſafely determine, (w) that the Jews and their Cabaliſts have deriv'd their Doctrine of the Tranſmigration of Souls (which ſome of them attribute to the Patriarch Abraham) from the Schools of the Pagans. And as in Pindar thoſe that for three Tranſmigrations are able to keep themſelves from Injuſtice and Zicioſity, go the way of Jove to the City of Saturn (enjoy the Golden Age of Saturn and the higheſt Felicity in Elyſium:) So the Cabaliſts think, that every Soul muſt be at leaſt conjoined with three Bodies, leaſt they ſhould have this excuſe for themſelves before the Supreme Judge, that they were joined to a Body, which was not ſo fit for Virtue. And R. Simeon in Zoar ſuppoſeth, that at the third Turn there is a ſtop put to Tranſmigration, it doth not proceed to the fourth, becauſe of the words of the Prophet Amos 1. 3.

(q) L. Holſten. ubi ſupr.

(r) Nemeſ. de Nat. Hom cum Annot. Plotin. En. 3. l. 4. c. 3. En. 4. l. 3. c. 15.

(s) Porph. de Antr. p. 202.

(t) Procl. in Tim. p. 328.

(u) De C. D. l. 13. c. 19.

(w) Windet. de vit. funct. S. 5. & 11. Witſii Ægyptiac. p. 15.

IX. The grand Theory of the deſcent and reaſcent of Souls is complicated with another Theory touching the Souls Vehicles, of which there are no leſs than three in Platoniſm: (x) The Connate, the Second and the Oſtreaceous. The Connate Vehicle maketh the Soul a Citizen of the World, the Second a Citizen of Generation, the Oſtreaceous, maketh her Terreſtrial. Each of theſe Vehicles hath its proper life (whence ſome infer, that there muſt be three Animals in one Man:) But in the firſt Vehicle is there no number of Sences, and Sence is there without Paſſion. In the ſecond there is no number of Sences, but Sence is there with Paſſion. In the third there is Paſſion with a number of Sences. The ſecond of theſe Vehicles is ſuppos'd to accrue to the Soul in her gradual deſcent into this groſs Vehicle (the earthly Body) from the Elements commonly ſo called, and is ſaid to be Mortal; for the Soul diveſteth her ſelf of it in her re-aſcent. But of the firſt Vehicle of the Soul (τὸ συμφυὲς ὄχημα) ſome Pla-

(x) Procl. in Tim. p. 330, 311, 312. J. Bapt. Criſp. p. 175, 177. Gale in Jambl. p. 263.

toniſts ſay, It is Connate to the Soul and Immortal, and ſhe never diveſteth her ſelf of it. Others ſuppoſe, that it accrueth to the deſcending Soul from the Spheres, that there is a refuſion of it back again, and that the Soul diveſteth her ſelf of all Vehicles in her re-aſcent. This Vehicle of the Soul is of a noble Nature and of great uſe in Theurgical Operation; for the Platoniſts uſually ſtile it φωτεινὸν, αὐγοειδὲς, ἀστροειδὲς, Lucid, Luminous, Aſtral, and the Poet calleth it (y)

Æthereum Senſum atque aurai ſimplicis ignem.

Upon the Conjunction of Soul and Body this Vehicle is ſaid, to take up its Seat in the Brain, and it is called by Syneſius (z) τὸ φανταστικὸν πνεῦμα, the Spirit of the Phantaſy (that is the Phantaſy.) which he maketh the Faculty of Divination, pretending to introduce God into it, and to have the ſight of God in the Phantaſy, and that the buſineſs of Divination may be perform'd by it. Jamblichus alſo deſcribeth (a) a ſort of Divination by the Phantaſy, which he calleth φωτὸς ἀγωγὴν, the Introduction of Light, (b) it illuſtrateth the Etherial and ſplendid Vehicle, which inveſts the Soul with Divine Light, whence Divine Phantaſms ariſe (that take hold of our Imagination,) which are moved by the Will of the Gods. Great things (as 'tis pretended) may be done by the ſubtil Sence of the Vehicle, (c) converſing with Demons and hearing the Harmony of the Spheres; and in ſeeing a God or Spirit (which may be ſeen ſeveral ways; by Intelligence, by the imaginary Vehicle of the Soul, and by the bodily Eyes) the lucid Vehicle is of principal concern. For the appearances of the Gods (in Theurgy) are ſeen (d) τοῖς αὐγοειδέσι τῶν ψυχῶν περιβλήμασι, by the luminous induments of Souls. But becauſe the thickneſs and foulneſs of the Vehicle rendreth it inept for ſuch ſublime Operations, care muſt be taken, to clarify and ſubtilize it by an intellectual Life, and by the Teletæ or Theurgical Conſecrations, which (according to Porphyry in S. Auſtin before cited) were deſign'd to purge the Spirital (not the Intellectual) part of the Soul, to make it fit for the reception of Spirits, and to ſee the Gods. Of the Spirit of the Phantaſy Syneſius ſaith, (e) καθαιρόμενον διὰ τελετῶν ἔνθεον γίνεται, being purged by the Teletæ it becometh Divine. By the goodneſs or intellectual Life of the Soul the Vehicle is ſubtiliz'd and rendered Etherial: But if the Soul degenerateth to badneſs (or propendeth to corporeal Affections and to the matter,) it becometh thick and terrene. The Chalday Oracles injoin the Theurgick Saintiſt Μὴ πνεῦμα μολύνῃς, μηδὲ βαθύνῃς τὸ ἐπίπεδον.

Do not pollute the Spirit, nor make an addition of profundity to that which is a plane or ſuperficies. Which Pſellus thus interpreteth. The Chaldeans put upon the Soul two Veſts. The one they called the Spirital, which is adjoyn'd to her from the ſenſible World: The other, the luminous, tenuious and intangible, which is nam'd the Plane or Superficies (to ſignifie the great ſubtilty of it ſaith Pletho.) Therefore it is ſaid, neither pollute the Spirital Veſt of the Soul by the impurity of the Paſſions, nor make her Superficies profound by certain material Additaments.

X. The Purgation of the Vehicle is a principal Branch of that Purgation of the Soul, which is requiſite to her Liberation and Reduction. For the Philoſophers (f) deduce the Soul being Divine into this World as into a place of puniſhment: But it is requiſite according to them, that imbodied Souls ſhould be purged. And ſome ſay (g) the Souls exile from the Gods and her various Tranſmigrations are for her Purgation. Which is of ſo great Concern and Efficacy in her Liberation, (h) that the Cathartic Virtue alone is to be called Salvific of Souls, which cutteth off, and conſumeth utterly the material Natures, and the Paſſions which accrue to us from Generation: But ſeparateth the Soul and carrieth her to Intellect, leaving the Veſts which ſhe hath put on to the Earth. The neceſſity of purging the Soul in order to her Liberation and Reduction is viſible in the Rites and Inſtitutes of the popular Pagans; for their Teletæ or Initiations into Religious Myſteries were deſigned for the Purgation of the Soul; as appeareth from the Rites of Bacchus, the Nature of which was ſignify'd by the Symbol —— Myſtica Vannus Iacchi. (i) In the Myſteries of Bacchus there was a Corn-Sieve (in which Country-Men purge their Corn,) becauſe his holy Rites are Purgative of the Soul, as Corn is purged by a Sieve (ſaith Servius:) Whence he hath the Name of Liber from Liberation. The Cuſtom of burning the Dead is with great reaſon thought to have had its Origin from an Opinion, that, as the Orator ſaith, (k) The Soul muſt firſt be purged with fire before it could re-aſcend to the Stars. The Inſtitution of the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Philoſophy ſuppoſeth alſo a neceſſity of purging the Soul in order to her Liberation and Reduction. It deſigneth, to turn the Mind upwards, to draw off the Soul from the Body (the Sences, Paſſions and Concerns of the Body,) and to collect her into her ſelf, that the Soul may be pure from all Stain and Contagion of the Body. It pretendeth, that this Abſtraction from the Body is her Purgation, and that by this Method the Inſtitution of Philoſophy affordeth (l) a Liberation from the Human Bonds, and a Solution of Generation, a carrying the Soul to that which truly is, and the knowledge of that which is truth indeed, and the Purgation of Souls. But ſome of the Philoſophic Family repreſent theſe matters otherwiſe; for they look upon the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Contemplation, not as the Purgation, but as the Perfection of the Soul. So Hierocles (having defin'd Philoſophy to be (m) the Purgation and Perfection of the Life of Man; the Purgation from the material irrationality and the mortal Body; the Perfection, the recovery of our proper happy Life, which reudceth to the Divine Similitude) maketh a diſtribution of Philoſophy into three Parts; Theoretic, Moral and Teleſtic. And the Purgation is ſaid to be made by Moral Virtue (Ethical and Political) and by the Moral part of Philoſophy: But the Perfection conſiſteth in the Theorctical Virtue (which is

(y) Gale ſupr. p. 229.

(z) De Inſomn. p. 137, 130.

(a) De Myſt. p. 27. & v. p. 73. Gale not. p. 240.

(b) Αὐτὴ δέ πως τὸ περικείμενον τῇ ψυχῇ αἰθερῶδες ϗ αὐγοειδὲς ὄχημα ἐπιλάμπει θείῳ φωτί.

(c) J. Bapt. Criſp. p. 176. Gale ſupr. p. 232. Pſell. in Naz. or. 42. n. 15.

(d) Procl. in Polit. p. 359.

(e) Ubi ſupr. p. 138, 139. Niceph. Schol. p. 391.

(f) Clem. Str. l. 3. p. m. 315.

(g) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 4 2. Gaſſ. T. 2. p. 622.

(h) Μόνην ἄρα τὴν καθαρτικὴν ἀρετὴν σώτειραν προσρητέον τῶν ψυχῶν ἀποκόπτουσαν μὲν καὶ ἀφανίζουσαν ἄρδην τὰς ἐνύλους φύσεις καὶ τὰ ἐκ τῆς γενέσεως ἡμῖν προσφύτα πάθη, χωρίζουσαν δὲ τὴν ψυχὴν, ϗ ἐπὶ τὸν νοῦν περιάγουσαν, ϗ τοὺς χιτῶνας οὓς ἐνεδύσατο καταλείπουσαν εἰς γῆν. Procl. in Tim. p. 330.

(i) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 14.

(k) Animam quoties exonerata membris mortalibus levi ſe igne luſtraverit, petere ſedes inter aſtra. Quintil. Decl. 10. Holyday on Juv. p. 17. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 249. Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 4. S. 18.

(l) Ἀπαλλαγὴν τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων δεσμῶν, ϗ λύσιν τῆς γενέσεως, ϗ περιαγωγὴν ἐπὶ τὸ ὂν ϗ γνῶσιν τῆς ὄντως ἀληθείας, ϗ κάθαρσιν ταῖς ψυχαῖς. Jambl. προτρεπτ. c. 13, 16.

(m) Ζωῆς ἀνθρωπίνης κάθαρσις ϗ τελειότης· κάθαρσις μὲν ἀπὸ τῆς ὑλικῆς ἀλογίας ϗ τοῦ θνητοειδοῦς σώματος. Τελειότης δὲ τῆς οἰκείας εὐζωΐας ἀνάληψις, πρὸς τὴν θείαν ὁμοίωσιν ἐπανάγουσα. In aur. Car. p. 2. & 309.

is the Platonic Science and Contemplation) which aſſimilateth the Theoretical Man to God, and is the Divine Virtue, whereas the Moral is but the Humane Virtue; (n) πρῶτον ἄνθρωπον δεῖ γενέσθαι, καὶ τότε θεόν, firſt become a Man (one of the Ethical and Political Virtue, that hath brought into order his Irrationality) then a God. Simplicius thus diſtinguiſheth a Man of the Cathartic and Theoretic Virtue. (o) The former fleeth from the Body and from the Bodily Paſſions, propendeth into himſelf. The latter (the Theoretic Man) tranſcending his own Rational Life tendeth wholly to the Divine Beings. But the Perfection which this Philoſophy pretendeth to, is imperfect, without the addition of a third part of Philoſophy (falſly ſo called) the Teleſtick Operation. (p) The Teleſtick Operation is the Purgation, which purgeth the lucid Vehicle from the material Feculencies and Pollutions and ſympathy with the Mortal Body; prepareth it for the Converſation of pure Spirits, corroborateth and invigorateth it, and rendreth it winged for the Celeſtial Journey. In the Teleſtic Purgation abſtinence from certain Meats was requir'd, which were thought prejudicial to Purity and to the Solution of the Soul (ſuch as the Pythagoric Inſtitution forbiddeth, ἔν τε καθαρμοῖς, ἔν τε λύσει ψυχῆς, in the Rites of Purgation and the Solution of the Soul) Watchings alſo (q) Prayer, Luſtrations and other Theurgic Rites were injoyned; but Fire was thought of Principal Efficacy and Cathartic Virtue. As by the Fire of the Gods (in Theurgy) that which is material is cut away, ſaith Proclus: So the Teleſtic Operation by Divine Fire conſumeth all the Spots from Generation, and all that Foreign and Irrational Nature, which the Vehicle of the Soul hath attracted. The Teleſtic καθαρμοί, or Rites of Purgation (r) were ſo highly eſteemed by the chief Philoſophers, that they trotted up and down the World, to be initiated into all the Religious Myſteries of the Gods, ſuppoſing that the Mind by ſo many Purgations became more pure from the Contagion of things Mortal, and fit for the Contemplation of the things Divine; and ſome of them pretend, (s) that the Theurgical Operations purge, not the Vehicle only, but the upper Soul alſo; that the Method of Theurgy maketh a Man a God, and raiſeth him to the Divine Similitude (not only a God but a Theopator alſo, that maketh others Gods) and that the Soul by virtue thereof (t) may diſmiſs her Vehicle, when it depreſſeth her by its heavineſs, and aſcend on high purely immaterial.

XI. The Purgation of the Soul is deſign'd to reſtore her to her ancient intellectual Form, which is requiſite to her Reduction according to Plato's (abovemention'd) tenth Demiurgic Law. (u) The one only Salvation of the Soul, that ſetteth her free from the Circuit of Generation and multifarious wandring, and an endleſs Life, is to return to the intellectual Form of Soul, and to flee from all things that adhere to us from Generation. Otherwiſe ſhe is unqualify'd for ſo ſublime a Condition as Philoſophy promiſeth. (w) None may be admitted into the Kind or Order of the Gods, ſave only he that hath the Contemplative Truth (the Theoretic Virtue) and the Practic Virtue in his Soul, and Pureneſs in the Lucid Vehicle thereof (which is here called Spirital;) for ſo being become ſound and intire, he is reſtor'd to the form of his ancient Habit. (x) The purgation which reſtoreth the Soul to her ancient intellectual Form is of the whole Man; which univerſal Purgation compriſeth that Theoretic Virtue oppos'd by Hieorocles to the Purgation of the Soul ſtrictly ſo called (which is by Moral Virtue) and which he calleth the height of Philoſophy and the perfection of the Soul: Which Notions of his are diſſonant from the general Senſe of the Platoniſts, who place the height of Philoſophy and the perfection of the Soul in union with the Father and in the Unity of the Soul. (y) Plato and Pythagoras bid to flee Multitude, the Multitude external, which diſtracteth and deceiveth, and the Multitude within us, which diſtracteth and deceiveth much more. Firſt therefore flee the Multitude of Affections, Senſes, Imaginations and Opinions, in which Multitude there is Contrariety, and betake your ſelf to the Sciences, in which Multitude there is no contrariety. After the ſtudy of Science it is requiſite to lay aſide Compoſitions and Diviſions, and multiform Diſcourſes, and to aſcend to an intellectual Life, ſimple Intuitions and Perceptions; for Science is not the higheſt knowledge, but Intellect is above it. Aſcending to Intellect, we may contemplate the intelligible Eſſence: After which it is requiſite, that we excite the Height and Flower of the Soul, our Unity, to reach and have conjunction with the Divine Unity. This Unity and Operation by it is the Height of our Actions, by this we are made Divine. Nothing ſhort of the height of Unity is the height of the Number-kind of Theology. (z) Reduction muſt be made unto one without any addition; not moving at all, fearing to recede from it; not going in the leaſt to two.

XII. To repreſent a ſummary account of the Philoſophic Pagan method of Liberation and Reduction of the Soul, (which is alſo called (a) The ſolution of the Soul from the Body, from Evils and from under Fate, the looſing of her Bonds, and her liberation from Geniture, her getting out of the Den wherein ſhe is fetter'd and confin'd, her reſtitution into the Nature of the Univerſe, and the freeing her from living in a ſtrange place;) the primary Rule of it is an ἀναδρομή, the method of the Soul's deſcent inverted, a running back again. By this Method the Pythagoric Virtue is ſaid to be (b) an eſchewing the impious Strife (the Principle leading to Geneſis, called by Heraclitus πόλεμος καὶ ἔρις, War and Strife, by Empedocles Strife and Contention) the Salvation of the Soul, her Purgation from the mad Contention and the Revocation of her flight from God. For as the lapſe of the Soul downwards was (c) νοῦ ἀποβολή, the caſting away the Intellectual Operation (the Platonic Contemplation;) ſo the Theoretic Virtue and the Contemplative Life is in part a Reduction of the Soul now; (d) for it conciliateth her to the converſe of the Superiour Natures; (e) and when ſhe turneth

to

(n) Ibid. p. 6.

(o) Φεύγειν ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος βούλεται καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν σωματικῶν παθῶν εἰς ἑαυτὸν συννεύειν. Ἄνθρωπος θεωρητικὸς τὴν ἑαυτοῦ λογικὴν ζωὴν ὑπερέχων, ὅλως εἶναι βούλεται τῶν κρειττόνων. Com. in Epictet. p. 4.

(p) Τελεστικὴν δὲ ἐνέργειαν λέγω τὴν τοῦ αὐγοειδοῦς καθαρτικὴν δύναμιν. Hierocl. ſupr. p. 306, 309, 289, &c.

(q) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 128. Gale Not. p. 269. Procl. in Tim. p. 331. Porphyr. de Antr. p. 260.

(r) L. Holſten. de vit. & ſer. Porphyr. c. 8.

(s) Gale ſupr. p. 199, 206, 264, 308.

(t) Niceph. in Syneſ. p. 383.

(u) Μία σωτηρία τῆς ψυχῆς τοῦ κύκλου τῆς γενέσεως ἀπαλλάττουσα, καὶ τῆς πολλῆς πλάνης, καὶ τῆς ἀνηνύτου ζωῆς, ἡ πρὸς τὸ νοερὸν εἶδος τῆς ψυχῆς ἀναδρομή, καὶ ἡ φυγὴ πάντων τῶν ἐκ τῆς γενέσεως ἡμῖν προσπεφυκότων. Procl. in Tim. p. 330.

(w) Εἰς γένος θεῶν οὐ θέμις ἀφικνεῖσθαι ἄλλῳ, ἢ τῷ κτησαμένῳ ἀλήθειαν μὲν καὶ ἀρετὴν ἐν ψυχῇ, καθαρότητα δὲ ἐν τῷ πνευματικῷ αὐτῆς ὀχήματι· οὕτω γὰρ ὑγιής τις καὶ ὁλόκληρος γενόμενος εἰς τὸ τῆς ἀρχαίας ἕξεως εἶδος ἀποκαθίσταται. Hierocl. ſupr. p. 310, 313.

(x) Hierocl. ibid. p. 294, 297, 305, 309.

(y) Procl. de An. & Dæm. p. 244, &c.

(z) Δεῖ τὴν ἀναγωγὴν ποιήσασθαι εἰς ἕν, καὶ μηδὲν αὐτῷ ἔτι προσθεῖναι· ἀλλὰ στῆναι παντελῶς, δεδιότα αὐτοῦ ἀποστῆσαι· μηδὲ τοὐλάχιστον, μηδὲ εἰς δύο προελθεῖν. Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 4.

(a) Λύσις ἀπὸ σώματος, ἀπαλλαγὴ τῶν καταδεσμῶν, ἀπαλλαγὴ γενέσεως, λύσις τῆς εἱμαρμένης, λύσις κακῶν, χωρισμὸς ἐκ τοῦ σπηλαίου, εἰς φύσιν ἀποκατάστασις, ἐλευθερία τῆς ἐν ἀλλοτρίῳ τόπῳ διαγωγῆς. Simplic. in Epict. p. 85.

(b) Τῆς ἀθέου ἔριδος ἀποφυγή, καὶ σωτηρία ψυχῆς, καὶ ἀποκάθαρσις τοῦ μαινομένου νείκους, καὶ ἀνάκλησις τῆς θεόθεν φυγῆς. Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 256.

(c) Ibid. p. 258.

(d) Ibid. p. 218.

(e) Plotin. En. 4. l. 9. c. 4.

to Intelligence and to contemplate the things that are true, ſhe beginneth to be looſed from her Bonds and to aſcend. (f) As the wandring flight from God and the (πτερορρύησις) falling off of thoſe Feathers of the Soul whereby we were raiſed to the things Supernal, brought us into the Region of things mortal, which are attended with Evils : ſo (ἡ τῆς θνητῆς προσπαθείας ἀποβολή) the caſting away the propenſe affection to things mortal, and the pullulation of Virtues as of certain Wings of the Soul will reduce us to the Region pure from Evils, unto a divine and happy Life. So in Empedocles's Philoſophy, (g) The Fugitive and Wanderer from God aſcendeth again and re-aſſumeth the ancient Habit by fleeing from terrene things and the unpleaſant place.

Εἰ φεύξει τὰ περὶ γῆν, καὶ τὸ ἀτερπέα χῶρον.

Becauſe the Soul's propenſion to the Earth (which ſeparated her from the Divine Chorus) is to be cur'd by an averſation from things Terrene; and her wandring flight hither by fleeing from the things that are here, (h) τὴν θνητὴν φύσιν πρῶτον ἀποστραφῆναι δεῖ, the thing that is to be done in the firſt place, is an Averſation from Mortal Nature, to be pure from the Body and to live ſeparate from it, (i) not to be inveigled with kindneſs to the Body and the Gifts of the Matter (as Syneſius calleth things pleaſant to ſenſe;) for this ὑλικὴ προσπάθεια, material propenſe Affection is the grand impediment to the return of the Soul. Averſation from the Body is of ſuch importance to the reduction of the Soul, that the Chalday Oracles affirm, thoſe Souls are moſt pure which leave the Body by a violent Death, becauſe they abominate this Life, and hate a return to the Body, and go rejoycing to the Supernal Regions; (k) for which reaſon the ancient Greeks commended dying in the Wars; they that die of a Diſeaſe are uſually effeminate, and deſirous of Life; their Soul goeth forth not pure, but carrieth along with it certain plumbeous deſires. (l) We ought to flee from hence, and ſeparate our ſelves from thoſe things, that are adjoyned to us in Generation, and not to be this compound thing, an animated Body, in which the nature of Body moſt prevaileth.

As the flight of the Soul hither is to be cur'd by a flight from hence; (m) ſo καταγωγὸς ῥοπὴ ἀναγώγῳ δυνάμει, the propenſion which ſinketh her downwards by her ſubvective Power, which is called by Syneſius (n) Ἀναγώγιος τις ἀλκά, a certain reductive force. (o) Although the Soul by inſinuating her ſelf into another Soul (the θεοπτικὴ ψυχὴ, God-ſeeing Soul inſinuating it ſelf into the lower Soul, which is accompany'd with the Humane Shape) is become fetter'd under Fate and Neceſſity, yet by her intellectual Operation, which is free and unſubject to the motion of the Univerſe (or Aſtrological Fate) ſhe may recede from the things generated, may reach that which is Intelligible and Divine, and have conjunction therewith, and union with the Gods, and tranſcend the Mundane Order, and partake of Eternal Life, and the Energy of the Supra-mundane Gods. The Oracles pretend, that in all Souls there is a Principle of Reduction (p) certain latent συνθήματα, Tokens or Impreſſions from the Father of Souls, whereby they are often mov'd, to make a return. They have provided a Magical (q) Fountain of Virtue for Souls (in the Cavities of Hecate's left ſide) and certain Deities call'd ἀμείλικτοι (not to be ſweetned) as being rigid and inconvertible to the things that are here, and which are the cauſe that Souls are not allur'd by ſweet inticing Affections. They have alſo furniſh'd the Univerſe with Gods and Demons, whoſe ſpecial Faculty and Operation it is, to be Ἀνάγωγοι, reductive to the Soul. Souls are ſaid to be diſſeminated about the viſible Gods their ſocial Stars, (r) that they may have thoſe Gods to be their Saviours from wandring about Generation, and may invoke them as their proper Preſidents. So ſome that were initiated into the Myſteries of Bacchus and Ceres Daughter, pray'd to thoſe Deities, κύκλου τ' ἂν λῆξαι καὶ ἀναπνεῦσαι κακότητος, that they might ceaſe the round and breath from trouble; for that time wherein the Soul is out of the Body and Generation, they look'd upon (s) as the time of her repoſe and vacation from doing ſervice. But there are ſeveral higher ſorts of Deities, in whom (t) the Theurgiſts place their hope of Salvation.

XIII. Having thus repreſented an Idea of the Arcane, Philoſophic, Theurgical Theology, we will infer from it, that there are ſeveral ſorts of Heatheniſm of Mind and Life, of Theology and Religion. For the Popular Pagan Saintiſts of the Myſtic Religious Inſtitutions, the Pagan Saintiſts of a Philoſophic Inſtitution (ſuch as the Stoicks) and the Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts of the Arcane Theology, ſuch as the Magi, the Egyptian Prieſts, Brachmans, Druids, Pythagoreans, Platoniſts, are manifeſtly diſtinguiſh'd from the Heathen-generality characteriz'd by our Saviour, Matth. 6. 32. After theſe things do the Gentiles ſeek. Although the common Heathen Inſtitution of Religion and the generality of the Heathen themſelves in their Life and Religion had mainly reſpect to the Goods and Evils of this Animal Senſitive Life, yet it appeareth from this Idea, that certain Inſtitutions in Paganiſm and the Myſtæ of thoſe Inſtitutions, had mainly reſpect (not to the Goods and Evils of this Animal Senſitive Life, but) to the Purgation, Sublimation and Perfection of the Soul, her ſeparation from the Body, Material Nature and Geneſis; her elevation to, acquaintance and union with the Supra-mundane Gods; her Heights of Sanctity, Virtue and Beatitude; her Liberation from the Evils of this Mortal Life and Reduction to her Original State. What greater Sublimities is any Inſtitution capable of, than theſe Pagan Inſtitutions pretend to? whence a Judgment may be made of that new and (as it is called) unanſwerable charge, which an excellent Perſon of our own hath produc'd againſt Paganiſm, (u) That Paganiſm reach'd no further than the Animal Life. Another of the ſame Character (w) from the Heathens Deities, Sacrifices, Feſtivals, and certain Sayings of theirs inferreth, That the Gentiles had their Belly for their God. And this is ſuppos'd to have been the reaſon, why God gave the Iſraelites a Law containing only Carnal Rites and promiſing only Carnal Temporal Goods, that thereby he might accommodate himſelf to the Genius of that Age and People. The Religion of old every where receiv'd, and to which the Hebrews in Egypt had been accuſtom'd, reſpected only Temporal Goods. nor did it extend hope or care beyond this Animal Life. This Account of Univerſal Paganiſm in great degree bereaveth true Religion of that ſupport, which Natural Light, the Conſent of Nations, and the Theology of the Gentiles are ſuppos'd to afford it; which is an Indication, that it is a miſtake; and it will appear to be a great miſtake, not only by confronting to it the ancient Theurgical Inſtitutions in Paganiſm and the ancient Pagan Theologers ſublime Principles, but alſo by confronting to (f) Hieroc. p. 257.

(g) Ibid. p. 254.

(h) Ibid. p. 257.

(i) Niceph. in Syneſ. p. 386, 389.

(k) Clem. Str. l. 4. p. m. 350.

(l) Φεύγειν ἐντεῦθεν δεῖ, καὶ χωρίζειν αὑτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν προσγεγενημένων, καὶ μὴ τὸ σύνθετον εἶναι σῶμα ἐμψυχούμενον, ἐν ᾧ κρατεῖ μᾶλλον ἡ σώματος φύσις. Plotin. En. 2. l. 2. c. 10.

(m) Hier. ſupr. p. 266.

(n) Hymn 1.

(o) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 162, 176. Stob. Eclog. Phyſ. p. 204.

(p) Gale ſupr. p. 310.

(q) Λαιῆς ἐν λαγόσιν Ἑκάτης ἀρετῆς πέλε πηγή.

(r) Procl. in Tim. p. 325, 330.

(s) Plotin. En. 4. l. 3. c. 12. Herald. in Arnob. p. 73.

(t) Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 4. c. 9.

(u) Dr. H. More Myſt. of Godlin. B. 3. ch. 6, 7.

(w) Spencer. de. Leg. Hebr. l. 1. c. 3. p. 13, 14. ed. 2.

to it thoſe ancient, currant, famous Notices in Paganiſm touching the Soul's Immortality, (x) the Rewards and Puniſhments of another Life, touching Hades, Elyſium, Beatorum Inſulæ, Orcus, Erebus, Tartarus, Mercurius ψυχοπομπὸς (the Soul-carrier) the Judges and Rivers of Hell, and the reſt of the Infernal Apparatus, which are called by Seneca (a Stoick) perſuaſio publica, the publick Belief, becauſe they were the Notices of Vulgar Paganiſm, and without them Natural Religion (y) would be γέλως πλατὺς, a great Ridicule, as Athenagoras ſpeaketh. All Men have a common Notion touching the Inferi, as of the Gods, (z) ſaith S. Empiricus. It is an Article of Natural Religion, which is antecedent to any Inſtitution of Paganiſm, Judaiſm, Chriſtianiſm. And the Chriſtian Doctrine touching the Rewards and Puniſhments of a Future Life is ſo connatural to the Mind of Man (which hath the Conſcience of Good and Evil) ſo conſentaneous to his Reaſon and his Notices of a God and Providence, that it meeteth with this hearty approbation from that virulent Pagan (but no Epicurean) Celſus, (a) Let not the Chriſtians nor any Man elſe ever depart from this Dogma. So much of this Dogma was entertain'd by the Eleuſinian Saintiſts, that they gain'd by their Inſtitution (which was a Deſcendent from Egypt) as Cicero ſaith, (b) not only the way of living joyouſly, but of dying with better hope. In vulgar Paganiſm there was a Conceit (as appeareth from the Story of Cleobis and Biton) that Death was better than Life. (c) Clemens diſcourſeth againſt them for praiſing Death and diſpraiſing Generation. In the generality of the Pagan Religioniſts there was alway (ſo far as any Memoirs will inform us) a great Opinion of the Nobleneſs of the Mind and Soul of Man. They ſtile it Divine, of kin to the Gods, a God, a part and particle of God, our Preſident Demon and venerable Ingeny; they deduce it from Heaven and reduce it thither again. Their Religion ſwarmeth with Dii Animales (Soul-Deities) they worſhipp'd their Heroes and Benefactors, promoted them to Demonſhip, (d) rais'd them to Celeſtial Condition, conſecrated them in the Stars. All which implieth, that their Religion had this generous Sentiment in it, which Cicero accounteth one of its Principles; (e) that Virtue and Piety are things, propter quæ datur homini aſcenſus in cœlum, which raiſe Men unto Heaven. The Egyptians are (f) particularly fam'd for their Dogma of the Soul's Immortality and the Rewards of the Pious in another Life, (and probably they thought the Tranſmigration of Souls a kind of Purgatory:) But at what a rate they theologiz'd in their popular Theology touching the Soul and a Future Life, and how far they were from making their Belly their God, may beſt appear from a Funeral Rite of theirs recorded by Porphyry, and which deſerveth an eternal Memory. When they embalm'd one of their Nobles, they took out the Belly, put it into a Cheſt, which they held up to the Sun, one of the Embalmers making this Oration for the dead Man. (g) O Lord the Sun, and all ye Gods that give Life to Men, receive me and tranſmit me into Conſortſhip with the Eternal Gods; for ſo long as I liv'd in the World, I piouſly worſhipp'd the Gods, whom my Parents ſhew'd me; thoſe that generated my Body I always honour'd; I neither kill'd any Man, nor defrauded any of what was committed to my truſt, nor have I done any thing elſe of an atrocious nature. If in my life-time I committed any offence in eating and drinking what was not lawful, the offence was not done by my ſelf, but by thoſe, pointing at or ſhewing the Cheſt wherein the Belly was. And having ſo ſaid, he threw it into the River. The reſt of the Body was embalm'd as pure.

SECT. 5. Of the Philoſophic Pagan Theology, as it is Aſtrological and Aſtrological-Magical.

I. THE Philoſophic Pagans muſt be conſider'd as of one Religion with the Popular Pagans (whoſe Religion was Coſmolatry, Uranolatry, Aſtrolatry) and conſequently they Aſtrologize in their Theology, ſuppoſing the Divinity of the Heavens, Spheres, Sun, Moon and Stars (both fix'd and erratick) their Magiſtracy and Preſidency in the Mundane Polity, and the Conſequence thereof the Aſtrological Fate. In Cicero's dream of Scipio (h) the higheſt Orb or Sphere is intituled ſummus Deus, the higheſt God, with reſpect to thoſe leſſer Spheres or Gods which it containeth. (i) The Stars, both thoſe that are in the inferiour Spheres and thoſe that are in the higheſt Sphere, διὰ τί οὐ θεοί; for what reaſon can we deny them to be Gods? ſaith Plotinus. So Plato in his Epinomis, having enumerated the Celeſtial Spheres, ſubjoineth (k) with great aſſurance let theſe things be eſtabliſh'd by Law; for it is madneſs to think, that things Divine are not to be venerated, or that theſe are not things Divine. The Stars muſt be ſaid to be the viſible Gods, the greateſt and chiefly to be venerated, of piercing ſight and diſcernment every where, the principal Gods. The Divinity of the Stars being a currant Notion in the Platonic Theology, it is much, (l) that Voſſius with ſome others ſhould be of Opinion, that when Plato calleth the World, Sun and Stars, God, or the Ether, Air, Water, Earth, he ſpeaketh not his own Senſe but the Senſe of others, and that for fear of the People he ſacrific'd to their Gods: Which aſſuredly is a groſs miſrepreſentation of Plato's Sentiments, who was a very ſerious and zealous Pagan Religioniſt, and whoſe great concern in all his Diſputes for Religion, is not for his Myſtic-Metaphyſical Deities, but for the Godſhip of the Heavens and the Heavenly Bodies (of which any Man may be ſatisfy'd from his * Tenth of Laws and his Epinomis; and thoſe that were injurious to their Godſhip (ſo heartily is he ingag'd in the Cauſe) he uſually chargeth with Madneſs, Impiety and Atheiſm. A like miſtake Voſſius committeth in his Account of Philo; (m) That he ſuppos'd the Stars pure Minds and intelligent Animals agreeably to Plato, but did not ſuppoſe them Gods. Whereas Philo in ſeveral places of his Works ſpeaketh of the Divinity or Godſhip of the Stars after the Platonic mode, and expreſly ſtileth them Deities, ſubordinate and miniſterial Deities, not Sovereign and Imperial.

(x) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 1. S. 22. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 10. Eugubin. de Per. Phil. l. 9. 10. Herbert de Rel. Gent. p. 203.

(y) Athenag. de reſur. p. 62.

(z) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 3. diſſ. 14.

(a) Τούτου δὲ τοῦ δόγματος μήθ᾽ οὗτοι μήτ᾽ ἄλλοι ἀνθρώπων μηδεὶς ποτὲ ἀποστῇ. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 409.

(b) Non ſolum cum lætitia vivendi rationem, ſed etiam cum ſpe meliore moriendi. De Leg. l. 1.

(c) Strom. l. 3. p. m. 315.

(d) Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 78, 79.

(e) De Leg. 2.

(f) Marſham. can. chr. p. 269. ed. Lipſ.

(g) Ὦ δέσποτα ἥλιε, καὶ θεοὶ πάντες, οἱ τὴν ζωὴν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις δόντες προσδέξασθέ με, καὶ παράδοτε τοῖς ἀϊδίοις θεοῖς σύνοικον. ἐγὼ γὰρ τοὺς θεοὺς, οὓς οἱ γονεῖς μοι παρέδειξαν, εὐσεβῶν διετέλουν, ὅσον χρόνον ἐν τῷ ἐκείνῳ αἰῶνι τὸν βίον εἶχον, τούς τε τὸ σῶμά μου γεννήσαντας ἐτίμων ἀεί· τῶν τε ἄλλων ἀνθρώπων οὔτε ἀπέκτεινα, οὔτε παρακαταθήκην ἀπεστέρησα, οὔτε ἄλλο οὐδὲν ἀνήκεστον διεπραξάμην· εἰ δέ τι ἄρα κατὰ τὸν ἐμαυτοῦ βίον ἥμαρτον, ἢ φαγὼν, ἢ πιὼν ὧν μὴ θεμιτὸν ἦν, οὐ δι᾽ ἐμαυτὸν ἥμαρτον, ἀλλὰ διὰ ταῦτα, δείξας τὴν κιβωτὸν, ἐν ᾗ ἡ γαστὴρ ἦν. καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν εἰς τὸν ποταμὸν ἀφίησι. Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 4. S. 10.

(h) Macrob. l. 1. c. 17.

(i) Plotin. En. 2 l. 9. c. 8.

(k) Θαῤῥοῦντας χρὴ ταῦτα εἰς νόμους θέσθαι· τὸ γὰρ μὴ τίμια τὰ θεῖα εἶναι, ἢ τάδε μὴ θεῖα, σαφῶς οὐκ ἐμφρόνων. θεοὺς δὴ τοὺς ὁρατοὺς, μεγίστους καὶ τιμιωτάτους καὶ ὀξύτατον ὁρῶντας πάντη, τοὺς πρώτους, τὴν τῶν ἄστρων φύσιν λεκτέον.

(l) De Idol. l. 1. c. 2, & 41.

* V. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 18.

(m) Ubi ſupr. l. 2. c. 30.

He diſcourſeth againſt the Aſtrological Chaldeans, of whom he ſaith, (n) they being great Students in Aſtronomy, and attributing all things to the motions of the Stars, by which Powers they ſuppos'd the things of the World to be adminiſtred, worſhipp'd the viſible Subſtance, having no Cogitation of the inviſible and intelligible. Theſe worſhipp'd the viſible Subſtance, and therefore were a ſort of Theiſts and Religioniſts, but were Atheiſts as to an Inviſible Supream Deity; and of theſe Philo ſaith, (o) Some have ſuppos'd the Sun and Moon and the other Stars θεοὺς αὐτοκράτορας, Self-imperial Gods, to whom they referr'd the Cauſes of all things that come to paſs; but Moſes ſuppoſeth the World to be generated, and alſo to be like a great City, that hath Rulers and Subjects; that the Rulers are all the Celeſtial Stars fix'd and erratic; the Subjects, the Sublunary and Circum-terreſtrial Natures in the Air; that the Rulers ſo called are not Autexouſious (Self-ſovereign) but the Sub-rulers of one Father of all, whoſe Prefectſhip they imitate juſtly and according to Law adminiſtring all things. (p) Therefore all the viſible Gods in Heaven muſt not be thought Self-imperial, having the Order of Sub-prefects; he that is inviſible and only perceptible by Mind, θεὸς θεῶν ἐστι νοητῶν τε καὶ αἰσθητῶν, is the God of Gods both of the intelligible and of the viſible. The Stars are called Gods by Philo, but he reproveth the immenſe error of thoſe, who ſuppoſe μόνους εἶναι τούτους θεοὺς, that theſe are the only Gods; and in this Senſe he ſpeaketh, when he calleth it Error, to entertain thoſe above-ſaid things as Gods (Self-imperial Deities.) In another place diſcourſing of two Worlds agreeably to Plato (the one the Intelligible World conſiſting of inviſible Idea's, the other of viſible Bodies) this Author ſaith, (q) Some being ſtruck with admiration of the Nature of both theſe Worlds, have not only deify'd the whole of them, but alſo the moſt excellent parts in them, the Sun, Moon and the whole Heaven, which they without Scruple have called Gods. This Notion of theirs was underſtood by Moſes, and therefore he ſaith, κύριε, κύριε, βασιλεῦ τῶν θεῶν, Lord, O Lord, the King of Gods, to ſhew the precellency of the Ruler above the Subjects. As Philo not only ſuppoſeth the Stars rational and intelligent (a Conceit that Origen (r) deriv'd from the School of Plato, and which the Rabbinical Doctors (s) have deriv'd from the School of Ariſtotle) but he entitleth them Gods after the Platonic mode: So Joſephus alſo ſaith of the Judaical Zealots, that their Inhumanity was ſuch (in hindring the burial of dead Bodies) as if they had made an agreement, to deſtroy the Laws of Nature together with their Country-Laws, (t) and together with their Injuſtices towards Men, to pollute the Divinity, they left the Dead rotting under the Sun. Where it ſeemeth very plain, that Joſephus attributeth Divinity to the Sun, (as in his Account of the Eſſens he calleth the Sun-beams the Rays of God;) which may proceed, not from a Pagan Principle of Aſtrolatry, but from an extravagant affectation of conformity of Speech to the Pagans, in whoſe Theology the Divinity of the Heavens and the Heavenly Bodies was the grand Fundamental. Whence their Aſtrology is neceſſarily complicate with their Theology, and the Pagan Aſtrologians uſually Theologize (as when they ſtile the Days of the Week, which have their Names from the Planets, (u) ἡμέραι τῶν θεῶν, the Days of the Gods;) and they conſider themſelves, not as bare Aſtrologians, but as Men of the moſt Sacred and Divine Science, Maſters in Religion and Theology; for ſo Jul. Firmicus calleth Necepſus and Petoſyris, (w) divinos viros ac ſanctiſſimæ religionis antiſtites, Divine Men and Prefects of moſt holy Religion. Their holy Religion (agreeably to Philo) ſuppoſeth the Stars the Mundane-City Magiſtrates: (x) And according to the Phenician Theology the Sun is Beelſamen, the Lord or King of Heaven, the Moon Βαάλτεια Βῆλθις, the Queen of Heaven; the Egyptians compar'd the Sun to a King, the Moon to a Queen, and the twelve Signs of the Zodiac (as they ſuppos'd) were θεοὶ βουλαῖοι, Conciliary Gods, and the five Planets were ῥαβδοφόροι, Serjeants to attend upon the Sun and Moon. So the Stoicks ſay, (y) The World is a City, and the Stars are Rulers or Magiſtrates. Theſe Mundane-City Magiſtrates are ſuppos'd to exerciſe (z) an Aſtrological kind of Rule and Gubernation in the World, as Jul. Firmicus ſaith of the Decani. (a) The Decani are of great Divinity and Power, for by them all proſperous and adverſe Events are decreed. So Seneca ſaith, (b) The Fortunes of the People, the greateſt and the leaſt things depend upon the motion of the five Planets, and as the Stars are auſpicious or inauſpicious. Not as if the Stars were Sovereign and Self-imperial, but they are Sub-rulers only, and (as the Egyptians Doctrine is repreſented (c) in Stobæus) are ὄργανον εἱμαρμένης, the Inſtrument of Fate, which is a Law inevitable, according to which all things are order'd.

In ſuch Senſe ſome of the Stoicks Seneca, Manilius, Firmicus (are great Aſſerters of the Mathematical or Aſtrological Fate without a due regard to the Liberty of Human Agency; as appeareth from that of Manilius, (d) Criminals are to be hated the more, becauſe deſtin'd to their Sin and Puniſhment. The Platoniſts are alſo Aſſertors of an Aſtrological Fate, but with great regard to Human Liberty of Agency. As Plotinus having repreſented Plato's Doctrine, that the lower Soul with the Paſſions thereof is given us by the Stars, repreſenteth alſo and anſwereth this Conſequence of it: (e) By this Doctrine we are not at Liberty from, but bound to the Stars, receiving our Soul from them, and it maketh us ſubject to Fate and Neceſſity that deſcend hither. Our Manners alſo or Temper is from them, and according thereto our Actions and Paſſions. But we are ſomething beſides all this, κατ᾽ ἀλήθειαν ἡμᾶς, our true ſelves, to whom Nature hath given Rule and Domination over the Paſſions. Several ancient Writers have charg'd the Egyptians with this Aſtrological Fataliſm, they ſubjected all Human Liberty to the motion of the Stars. To avoid which abſurdity, ſome of the School of Plato, pretending to follow the Egyptians Doctrine, (f) diſtinguiſh two Souls in Man: The one from the circuition of the Celeſtial Worlds, which is obſequious to their Motions; the other from the firſt Intelligible, which is beyond the Orb of Geniture. They are Solicitous for Human Liberty, yet ſome of the Maxims of their School touching Aſtrological Fate, eſpecially their Periodical Revolution of all things by the (n) Περὶ Ἀβραάμ, p. 244. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(o) Περὶ μοναρχ. l. 1. initio.

(p) Πάντας οὖν τοὺς κατ᾽ οὐρανὸν οὓς αἴσθησις ἐπισκοπεῖ θεοὺς, οὐκ αὐτοκρατεῖς νομιστέον.

(q) Περὶ συγχύσ. διαλεκτ. p. 233. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(r) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 238.

(s) Maimon. Mor. Nev. Par. 2. c. 4, 5.

(t) Ἅμα τε τοῖς εἰς ἀνθρώπους ἀδικήμασι συμμιᾶναι καὶ τὸ θεῖον, ὑφ᾽ ἡλίῳ τοὺς νεκροὺς μυδῶντας ἀπέλιπον. De Bell. Jud. l. 5. c. 2.

(u) Selden. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 3. c. 19, 20.

(w) P. Crinit. de hon. Diſc. l. 15. c. 13.

(x) Selden. ſupr. c. 21. & D. de Syr. proleg. c. 2.

(y) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 7.

(z) Maimon. ſupr. c. 5.

(a) Sunt Decani magni numinis & poteſtatis, quòd omnia proſpera per ipſos, & omnia infortunia decernuntur. Apud P. Crinit. ſupr.

(b) Ex ſiderum quinque leviſſimis motibus fortunæ populorum dependent, & maxima ac minima proinde formantur, prout æquum iniquumve ſidus inceſſit. Lipſ. ſupr. diſſ. 14.

(c) Ecl. Phyſ. p. 13.

(d) Nocentes oderimus magis, in pœnam culpamque creatos.

(e) Οὗτοι οἱ λόγοι συνδέουσιν ἡμᾶς τοῖς ἄστροις, παρ᾽ αὐτῶν ψυχὴν κομιζομένους, καὶ ὑποτάττουσι τῇ ἀνάγκῃ. En. 2. l. 2. c. 9.

(f) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 161, 162.

Stars, prejudice it at a great rate. (g) For the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts ſay, that when the Stars according to certain ſtated Periods ſhall have the ſame Configuration, and reſpect to one another, which they had before, all things on Earth will be in the ſame State, which they were in before, when that Poſition of the Stars was in Being. It is neceſſary according to this Doctrine, that when the Stars after a long Period of Time come to have the ſame reſpect to one another, which they had in the time of Socrates, Socrates muſt be born again of the ſame Parents, and ſuffer the ſame things, being accus'd by Anytus and Melitus and condemned by the Areopagites. Phalaris muſt alſo act the Tyrant again, and his Brazen Bull muſt bellow with the Voices of the ſame inclos'd Men, that were condemn'd in the former Period. And Alexander Phæreus muſt Tyrannize with the ſame Tyranny upon the ſame Men whom he condemn'd before. But as the Platoniſts notwithſtanding their Aſtrological Fataliſm were laudably Solicitous for Human Liberty : So Joſephus ſaith of the Phariſees, (h) they attributed all things that are done to Fate (Aſtrological and Planetary,) yet not ſo as to Deprive Man of Liberty of Will. In thoſe days and in ſucceeding Ages (i) the Jews have been great Aſtrologians (and as themſelves boaſt, have gain'd a great renown by it,) following the Vanities of the Gentiles in Aſtrology, (k) as Epiphanius ſaith of them; and accordingly their Maxim is הכל תלוי במזל all things depend upon Fate, or are ſubject to the Rule and Domination of the Stars. They Symbolize with the Pagan Aſtrologers (l) in allotting the ſeveral Climates to the Dominion of ſeveral Planets, which are ſuppos'd to preſide over them. The Heavens and their Stars are ſaid by Jacchiades, (m) to make Conſtitutions touching the Affairs of the World; and although Iſrael is not ſuppos'd to be under the Domination of the Stars and Planets, as other Nations are, yet they have מזל קשה בשמים an afflictive Planet or Star in the Heavens, that decreeth upon them Depreſſion and Miſery : But when they fear God, he deſtroyeth thoſe Conſtitutions of the Heavens. Therefore they ſay, there is no Planet to Iſrael. They that adhere to the Precepts, are above the Planets.

II. Agreeably to their Theology much of the Learning of the Philoſophic Pagans lay in Aſtrology (Apoteleſmatica illa divinatrix, judiciary Aſtrology,) as will appear, if we take a view of the Learning of the ancient Philoſophic-Pagan Nations, the Egyptian Literature, and that of the ancient Perſian and Chaldean Magi, whom I ſuppoſe (contrary to a late Egyptian Antiquary,) to be the Egyptians Seniors in the Aſtrological Learning and Theology. For ſeeing the Aſtrologers (n) are called Chaldeans, the Art it ſelf χαλδαϊκὴ Chaldaic, and the Aſtrological Fate is intituled Babylonian by ancient Writers, this ſheweth, that the Chaldeans were reputed the Inventors of Aſtrology, and were the moſt famous pretenders to it. (o) They were moſt of all addicted to Aſtrology, and made Obſervations (ſaith Porphyry) before the Egyptians. (p) Our Egyptian Antiquary acknowledgeth, that the moſt ancient Celeſtial Obſervations which we read of, are thoſe which Calliſthenes Ariſtotle's Scholar tranſmitted from Babylon into Greece; which Celeſtial Obſervations were not barely Aſtronomical, but Aſtrological alſo; for the Chaldeans are ſaid, (q) to have made Obſervation for two Thouſand Years (before Alexander took Babylon) what Effects follow'd the riſing of every Star. (r) The Babylonians in Suidas are ſaid to have firſt found out Aſtronomy by Zoroaſter; and if Arts flouriſh'd with Empire (as is moſt likely,) they will be found beforehand with the Egyptians in Arts; for according to the expreſs Teſtimony of Scripture (which is not to be confronted (s) by a few weak Surmiſes) Nimrod's Empire was the firſt after the Flood. He began to be a mighty one in the Earth. And the beginning of his Kingdom was Babel, and Erech, and Accad, and Calneh, in the Land of Shinar. Gen. 10. 8, 10. Thoſe alluſions that are made to Babylon in the Book of the Apocalypſe, ſpeak both its Grandeur and Antiquity; for that City is conſider'd by the Spirit of Prophecy as (the Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth) the Metropolis of ancient idolatrous Paganiſm. The Chaldeans are alſo particularly renown'd by the Prophet as an ancient Nation, Jer. 5. 15. which becauſe it is acknowledg'd by all ancient Writers (whether good Hiſtorians or Fabulous) our Engliſh Tranſlation of that difficult place, Iſa. 23. 13. (which is the Senſe (t) that our Egyptian Antiquary hath pitch'd upon) is not to be entertain'd. Behold the Land of the Chaldeans; this people was not, till the Aſſyrian founded it for them that dwell in the Wilderneſs : They ſet up the Towers thereof, they rais'd up the Houſes thereof, he ſet it to ruin. It cannot be true, that the Chaldeans were no Nation, nor Babylon a City, till the Aſſyrian Nabonaſſar founded it; nor hath this Senſe any coherence with the Context, nor is it pertinent to the Prophets Buſineſs, to Prophecy the ruin of Babylon, who is foretelling the Deſtruction of Tyre, and deſcribing her Condition without Succour or Refuge, v. 12. Ariſe, paſs over to Chittim, there alſo ſhalt thou have no reſt v. 13. הֵן אֶרֶץ כַּשְׂדִּים זֶה הָעָם לֹא הָיָה אַשּׁוּר יְסָדָהּ לְצִיִּים Behold the Land of the Chaldeans that People; Aſſyria is not (being devour'd by the Chaldeans, and therefore Tyre might rationally expect no better Quarter from them:) He hath founded it (Tyre) for Ships, they ſet up the Towers thereof, they rais'd up the Houſes thereof, he hath ſet it to ruin. This ſeemeth to be the beſt Verſion of this otherwiſe unintelligible place; which if it ſaith nothing of the building of Babylon, or the founding the Chaldean Nation, there is nothing in Scripture, to countenance the Pre-antiquity of Egypt or that of the Poet

> Quique Magos docuit Myſteria vana Necepſis
> The Magi (the Chaldeans) were taught their vain
> Myſteries (Aſtrology) by Necepſis.

But it is certain, that Egypt was the chief School of Literature to the Greeks, and that the Learning of the Egyptian Prieſts and Prophets was of the ſame Character with the Chaldean; (u) for they were חכמי תולדות or Aſtrologers. Calaſiris the Egyptian in Heliodorus (w) giveth this account of them. There is a twofold Wiſdom of the Egyptians : One vulgar, which is Necyomanty; another Divine, which is true Wiſdom. (x) Which we Prieſts and the Progeny of Prophets are converſant in from our Youth, which ſpeculateth the Celeſtials, aſſociateth with the Gods, participateth of the ſuperiour Natures, inveſtigateth the motion of the Stars, and gaineth us the knowledge of future Events. Clemens ſaith (y) the Egyptians were the firſt Inventors of Aſtrology, the like is ſaid of the Chal-

deans

(g) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 245. v. Plutarch. de Fato. p. 539.

(h) Druſ. de 3. Sect. l. 2. c. 14, 21.

(i) Ibid. & vid. Annot. in Nemeſ. de Nat. Hom. p. 39. L'Emper. not. in Abraban. com. in Iſa. 30. p. 61.

(k) Baron. Apparat. n. 8.

(l) Selden. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 3. c. 20. Menaſ. Ben. Iſr. in Deut. Qu. 2. p. 222.

(m) In Dan. c. 10. v. 22.

(n) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 47. Hotting. Hexaem. p. 129.

(o) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 1. p. 17. Procl. in Tim. p. 277.

(p) D. Marſham. Can. Chron. p. 504. ed. Lipſ.

(q) Voſſ. ſupr.

(r) Marſham ſupr. p. 477.

(s) Ibid. p. 417, 508, 509.

(t) p. 509.

(u) Hotting. Hexaem. p. 130.

(w) l. 3.

(x) Ἣν ἱερεῖς καὶ προφητικὸν γένος ἐκ νέων ἀσκοῦμεν, ἄνω πρὸς τὰ οὐράνια βλέπουσαν, θεῶν συνόμιλον, καὶ φύσεως κρειττόνων μέτοχον, ἀστέρων κίνησιν ἐρευνῶσαν, καὶ μελλόντων πρόγνωσιν κερδαίνουσαν.

(y) Strom. l. 1. p. m. 224.

deans. (z) The Chaldeans and Egyptians (ſaith an anonymous Author) the followers of Zoroaſter and Hyſtapes recounted the days of the Week from the number of the Planets.

(a) Other Authors (Herodotus and Dio Caſſius) report, that the conſecrating the ſeven Days of the Week to the ſeven Planets was an invention of the Egyptians, which paſs'd among all Men. That they found out the Month and the Day of every one of the Gods (the Planets) and that on what Day every one was Born, and what Fortune he ſhould have, what Death he ſhould die, and what kind of Perſon he ſhould be, which things the Grecanic Poets made uſe of. Theſe Aſtrological Crotchets were by Foreigners thought their nobleſt Inventions, and by themſelves their divine and true Wiſdom, inſomuch that they that condemn Aſtrology, (b) are by Ptolomy look'd upon as Atheiſts. The Egyptian Prieſt Chæremon accounted it the only Divine Wiſdom; for he is ſaid (c) to acknowledge no higher Cauſes of mundane things than the Planets, Zodiac, Decani, Horoſcopes and the Stars which they call τὺς κραταιὺς ϗ ἡγεμόνας, the robuſt Princes. The Names of theſe were inſerted into their Almanacks together with the times of their Riſing and Setting, and the Prognoſticks of future Events from them. The Wiſdom of an Almanack was their Divine Wiſdom (which therefore was a principal part of their Literature;) and it appeareth from the Memorials which yet remain of their ancient Learning, that in great part it conſiſted of Aſtrological Conceits. (d) For in the Sepulchre of Oſymandis a Theban King there was a Golden Circle, one Cubit thick, in compaſs 365 Cubits, whereon the Days of the Year divided into ſo many Cubits were inſcrib'd, with the Notation of the natural Riſing and Setting of the Stars, and of their Significations according to the Egyptian Theologers. The Egyptian Hermes is ſaid (e) to have taught, that according to the ſeven Stars the Generation of Men conſiſteth; and the Books of Hermes (f) Hermetis γενικὰ, Hermaic & Diataxes were Aſtrological Diſcourſes. Abul-Pharagius ſaith, (g) It is reported of the firſt Hermes, that he preſcrib'd Men Religious Worſhip, Faſting, Prayer, and Alms, and that they ſhould obſerve Feſtival Days, when the Planets deſcended into their Houſes and aſcended, and alſo every new Moon, and as oft as the Sun entred any of the twelve Signs. Maimonides ſaith, (h) the Egyptians worſhipped the Conſtellation Aries, and therefore abominated the ſacrificing Sheep; ſhall we Sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians? Exod. 8. 26. They worſhipped Animals as Symbols or living Images of their Gods; of which their Symbolical Religion and Theology Lucian de Aſtrologiâ (i) hath given this Aſtrological account. Some of the Conſtellations or Parts of the Heavens were us'd by ſome of the Egyptians in Divination, other Parts by others. The Worſhippers of the Celeſtial Aries worſhipped that Animal a Ram. Others in honour of the Celeſtial Taurus pay'd their Veneration to a Bull, and the like account is given of the reſt. (k) The Conſtellation Aries is probably thought, to have the firſt place, amongſt the Signs of the Zodiac, and Taurus the ſecond, by the appointment of the Egyptians, who worſhipp'd Cham or Hammon in Aries and his Son Miſraim in Taurus. And as in great part their Religion and Divine Learning was Aſtrological; ſo (doubtleſs) they were Aſtrological kind of Phyſicians; for (l) they compounded together and taught, not ſeparately and apart, but conjunctly and together as things coherent τὰ ἀςρολογικὰ, τὰ ἰατρικὰ, ϗ τὰ τελεςικὰ, the Aſtrologicks, Iatricks, Teleſticks. The impure Phantaſtry of Aſtrology pervadeth alſo the Body of the Egyptians more recondite Philoſophy, their choiceſt Theories are ſmutted with it, and the Greek Philoſophy being a Deſcendent from Egypt is of the ſame Complexion. (m) Souls deſcend by the Zodiac and the twelve Signs thereof (and therefore partake of the qualities of thoſe Signs) according to the Egyptians, (n) Homer's Antrum Nympharum (beforemention'd) hath two Gates, the Northern and Southern, which are ſaid to be the two Tropicks of Cancer and Capricorn: By the one Souls are ſuppos'd to deſcend into Bodies, by the other they re-aſcend. Which Aſtrological Conceit is ſo far entertained by Origen, (o) he ſuppoſeth ſome ſuch thing is intimated in the Viſion of Jacob's Ladder, agreeably to Philo's Interpretation, (p) that the Angels deſcending and aſcending (on the Ladder) are Souls deſcending and re-aſcending, ſome of which re-aſcending Souls flee quite away, and return no more, others deſirous of the things of Life return into Bodies again.

A like commixture of Aſtrological Conceit is viſible in the Philoſophy of the ancient Perſian Magi; for in the Mithraic Sacra (q) there was a κλίμαξ ὑψίπυλος, Gradation or Aſcent of ſeven Gates one above another repreſentative of the Planets by which Souls deſcend. Which Branch of the Perſian Theology is the more obſervable, becauſe the very ſame Aſtrological Conceit occurreth in the Zoroaſtrian or Chalday Oracles (and therefore doubtleſs they are thus far genuine, they contain much of the ancient Perſic-Chaldean Arcane Theurgical Theology;) for the Oracles ſpeak of the Deſcent of Souls by the ἑπτάπορος βαθμὶς, or Gradation of ſeven Paſſages, under which —— Ἀνάγκης θρόνος ἐςὶ, there is the Region, where Neceſſity or Fate hath its Seat and Throne. (r) The Gradation of ſeven Paſſages ſo call'd by the Oracles (ſaith Pletho) is the Planetary Fate, under which there is an horrendous inflexible Neceſſity. Agreeably to the Egyptian Prieſts and Prophets theſe oriental Sages the Perſian Magi are known to have been חכמי המולות the Wiſe-men of the Stars. As Aſtrology was commix'd with their Religion (the Perſians gave the Names of their Gods (s) to their Months and Days, believing that their Gods did preſide over them,) ſo Divination was their Profeſſion of Learning. (t) The ſeveral Diſciplines of Divination paſs'd from Father to Son by way of Inheritance and of Cabala, every one of the Magi deriv'd them to Poſterity in the Line of his Family (ſaith Ammianus,) of which Diſciplines Aſtrological Divination is the principal. So the Indian Sages foretel things to come; by obſerving the Celeſtials and their ſignifications they make certain Prognoſticks, (u) as Clemens ſuppoſeth. But the vanity of Aſtrology (which for many ages (t) prevail'd in the whole World) was in Proceſs of time diſcern'd and exploded, not only by thoſe popular Pagans that made Laws againſt Aſtrologers (as the Romans did,) but by (u) ſeveral of the Philoſophic Pagans; (w) a Party of the Chaldean Philoſophers rejected Genethliacal Aſtrology. Yet ſuch is the Affinity between the Aſtrological and Magical Genius, that the Platoniſts of the later times continu'd to Aſtrologize; and even thoſe of them that rejected and refuted the Predictions of the vulgar Aſtrologers (as Plotinus did,) yet themſelves Aſtrologiz'd at ſo extravagant a rate, that they retain'd the ground of them. (x) Plotinus in his Book intituled, Whether the Stars be effective (or only ſignificative,) determineth, That nothing befalleth Men by their Virtue or Power: but thoſe things which the Decree of Providence allotteth unto every one are ſhewed and ſignified by the Tranſition, Station and Receſſion of the Planets, in ſuch a manner as the Birds in Augury, not knowing any thing themſelves, by their Poſture of flying or ſtanding, by their Feathers and Voice ſignifie futurities. In this mode of Philoſophizing one Planet will rightly be called Salutary, another terrible, ſeeing proſperous Events are ſignified by one, Misfortunes by another. (y) Origen alſo determineth, that the Stars are not effective, but ſignificative, that the Heavens are a Book wherein God hath deſcrib'd Futurities, but its Letters and Characters (which Plotinus calleth the Grammar of the Heavens) cannot be read by Men, but by ſuch only that are more than meer Men. Agreeably to the Magical Aſtrologizing Genius of the Platoniſts Syneſius ſuppoſeth, (z) that the World is a Book, wherein Events are written in various Letters, whence various Modes of Divination ariſe. And becauſe they ſuppos'd, that the Motions and Configurations of the Heavens correſpond with Human Actions and Events, ſo that the one may be prognoſticated from the other, Simplicius ſaith touching Fate, (a) The fatal Converſion of the Heavens correſpondeth with the Production of Souls into Generation, which cometh to paſs at that time, not neceſſitating them to Will this or that, but correſponding with their Appetites or Volitions.

(z) Οἱ περὶ Ζωροάςρην ϗ Ὑςάσπην χαλδαῖοι ϗ Αἰγύπτιοι ἀπ' ἀριθμῦ τῶν πλανητῶν ἐν Ἑβδομάδι τὰς ἡμέρας ἀνέλαβον Selden. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 3. c. 19.

(a) Seld. ibid. Marſham ſupr. p. 197.

(b) Tetrab. l. 2.

(c) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 4.

(d) Marſham ſupr. p. 246, 247.

(e) Ibid. p. 476.

(f) Gale in Jambl p. 296, 305.

(g) Hiſt. Dynaſt. p. 6, 7.

(h) Mor. Nev. par. 3. c. 46.

(i) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 74.

(k) Ibid. l. 2. c. 36.

(l) Selden. ſupr. l. 3. c. 22.

(m) Gale in Jambl. p. 309, 310, 313.

(n) Porph. de Antr. p. 264. Macrob. in Som. Scip. l. 1. c. 12.

(o) C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 289.

(p) Περὶ ὀνειρ. p. 598. ed. Gr. Pari.

(q) Celſ. ap. Orig. l. 6. p. 290.

(r) Ἑπτάπορον δὲ βαθμίδα φησὶ τὴν ἐκ τῶν πλανήτων εἱμαρμένην.

(q) J. Gol. Not. in Alferg. p. 20.

(t) Diſciplinas præſentiendi futura per ſuam quiſque progeniem poſteris ætatibus tradunt. Ammian. l. 43.

(u) Str. l. 3. p. m. 329.

(t) Plin l. 30. c 1.

(u) Cic. de Divin. l. 2. Petav. T. 3. l. 1. c. 9.

(w) Fuller. Miſc. l. 1. c. 15.

III. Agreeably to the Magical Aſtrologizing Genius of the Ancient Pagans Paganiſm aboundeth with Aſtrological-Magical Myſtery (of which (b) Aſtrology it ſelf is thought a Branch;) much of Paganiſm is Magick complicated with Aſtrology. (c) The Egyptians Conſtitution of the Heavens and their agreable Demonolatry is Aſtrological-Magical. That the leaſt things have their Preſidents (ſaith Celſus,) we may learn from the Egyptians, who diſtribute the Body of Man into ſix and thirty parts (anſwerable to the Decani,) ſaying, that ſo many δαίμονες ἢ θεοί τινες αἰθέριοι, Demons or Ethereal Gods preſide over thoſe parts. And the Names of theſe Demons are, Chumen, Cnachumen, Cnat, Sicat, Biu, Erebiu, Romanor, Rejanoor, which being invok'd do all of them heal the Diſeaſes of their ſeveral parts. Theſe Origen calleth ſix and thirty Barbaric Demons, which only the Egyptian Magicians invoke. And if this Conſtitution of the Heavens according to the Egyptians is Aſtrological-Magical, their diſtribution of the Heavens is of no better Character. (d) They diſtribute the Heavens into two parts (the two Hemiſpheres) or four parts (four Portions of the Zodiac,) or into twelve parts (the twelve Signs of the Zodiac,) or into ſix and thirty parts (each one of the twelve Houſes of the Planets is divided into three Portions, which they call Decani,) and allot ſome to preſide, more or fewer, over thoſe Diviſions. So Triſmegiſt in his Aſclepius allotteth to the Sun and the Planetary Spheres (e) their Preſident Demons or Princes (which he calleth ἐπάρχας,) and the Names of the twelve Gods are ſaid to have had their riſe amongſt the Egyptians. Theſe twelve Gods or Spirits, which are thought to be the Gods, (f) that in Proclus have the Name of θεῶν μοιρηγετῶν, (the Name ſignifieth, that they have a principal hand in diſpenſing the Fates of Men, Cities and all the things of Nature) according to the Egyptians and Chaldeans bear rule in the twelve Signs of the Zodiac each in his proper Sign; one Month is ſacred to each God (as in Jul. Cæſar's Calendar, Juno governeth January, Neptune February, Minerva March,) and to theſe principal Gods the Chaldeans added thirty Auxiliary Gods in thirty Stars, ſo contriving an Univerſe of their own Character Aſtrological-Magical. So Proclus imagineth, (g) that Human Souls diſſeminated about their Social Stars are ſome of them Jovial, others Martial, others Heliacal (of various Planetary Families,) and are ſeverally annex'd to the ſeveral Powers of their God, ſo contriving a Mundus magicus, an Univerſe of Aſtrological-Magical Conceit. Such an Univerſe the Aſtrological-Magical Jews alſo (in Conformity to the Pagans) have contriv'd; (h) for they ſuppoſe twelve Angels to preſide over the twelve Signs of the Zodiac (as Aſmodel in Taurus, Hanael in Capricorn,) and ſeven Angels to preſide over the ſeven Planets. Which Planets ſome of the Pagans ſuppos'd to be govern'd by Intelligences, others look'd upon the Planets themſelves as a ſort of Demons: As Euſtathius obſerveth, (i) that the Sun was conſider'd, not only as a Luminary of the Heavens, but as a σωματικὸς δαίμων, Spirit cloathed with ſuch a luminous Body; and Tatianus ſaith, (k) Chriſtians have learned one inerratick Lord ἀντὶ πλανητῶν δαιμόνων inſtead of the Pagans Planet-Demons. The Stars and Planets in Paganiſm as a ſort of Demons (l) deliver Oracles, preſcribe their way of Worſhip, the matter and form of their Statutes, and viſit their Suppliants. By theſe Oracles the Pagans were taught the way of Planetary Demonolatry, to invoke the Planets upon their proper Days, that bare their Names and were ſacred to them, according to that Aſtrological-Magical rule of Pythagoras (m) Ἀφροδίτῃ τῇ θυσιάζειν τῇ ἕκτῃ, Sacrifice to Venus on the ſixth Day. So Jarchas the Brachman gave to Apollonius Tyanæus (n) ſeven Rings called by the Name of the ſeven Planets, which Apollonius ware one by one according to the Names of the Days. (o) So the Perſians and Magi had their particular Prayers and Devotions according to the ſeveral Days and Months; and not only ſo, but their very Meat and Drink, Clothing and Perfumes were different; and they had their Tables or Rubricks to inſtruct them. The Oracle in Euſebius ſaith; Invoke Mercury, and according to the ſame rule the Sun on the Sun's Day; the Moon alſo when her Day cometh, and in like manner Saturn and Venus.

> Κλήσεσιν ἀφθέγκτοις ἃς εὗρε Μάγων ὄχ' ἄριστος
> Τῆς ἑπταφθόγγου βασιλεὺς, ὃν πάντες ἴσασιν,
>
> With Words Arcane found out by the beſt of the Magi
> King of the Septiſonous, known unto all Men.

The Hearers of this Oracle thought, that Hoſtanes the Magician was the Perſon here deſcrib'd; ſuppoſing that the Title King of the Septiſonous denoteth an Aſtrological-Magical Prince or Chieftain. (p) And probably he is ſo intituled by the Oracle, to denote him the King of the Magi and the Chieftain of the Septiſonous Magick, the Planetary Cant, Charm or (x) Macrob. in Som. Scip. l. 1. c. 19.

(y) Philocal. p. 75.

(z) De Inſomn. p. 134.

(a) Σύμφωνός ἐστιν ἡ εἱμαρμένη περιφορὰ τῇ προβολῇ τῶν ψυχῶν τῇ κατ' ἄυλην ἐρχομένῃ εἰς τὴν γένεσιν. In Epict. p. 23.

(b) Montacut. or. Eccl. T. 1. p. 199.

(c) Celſ. ap. Orig. l. 8. p. 416.

(d) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 159. v. Gale Not. p. 362.

(e) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 26. Herodot. l. 2. c. 4.

(f) Gale ſupr. p. 309, & 304. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 23.

(g) In Tim. p. 290, 325, 330.

(h) Zanch. de oper. Dei P. 1. l. 3. c. 1. vid. Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 23.

(i) In Odyſſ. T. p. 1871.

(k) Or. c. Græc. p. 148.

(l) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 5. c. 12, 13, 14.

(m) Selden. de J. Nat & G. l. 3. c. 20.

(n) Ibid. c. 19.

(o) J. Gol. Not. in Alferg. p. 20.

(p) Sleden ſupr. c. 19.

Modulation, which was Septiſonous; for the Oracle addeth, that every God (or Planet) muſt be invok'd ſeven times on his day. Whether Hoſtanes the Magician was a King in Civil Polity and Government, (as Scaliger ſuppoſeth,) we do not know: But the Philoſophic-Pagan Julian was in ſuch Senſe an Aſtrological-Magical Prince. For riſing at Midnight (q) he ſecretly pray'd to Mercury, who is the ſwift and agile Senſe of the World; exciting and quickning the motion of our Minds, as the Theological Doctrines teach, ſaith the Hiſtorian. The account which this Hiſtorian giveth of the Origin of Divination is the ſame with the Philoſophic-Pagans (for they impute it to the Spirit or Aporrhæa from Phœbus, Hecate, or ſuch others,) and is a Branch of their Aſtrological Magick. (r) The Sun, the Mind of the World, inſpiring our Minds with a very vehement Ardour and Eſtuation, giveth them the Faculty of Divination.

IV. Syneſius ſuppoſeth, (s) that there is ſuch a Conſent and Conſpiration among the things of the Univerſe (being all the parts of one Animal,) that the Pagan Methods of Divination (by the Stars, Birds, Entrals of Beaſts, and ſuch more) are true Methods; that all ſorts of things are ſignificative of future Events; that one part of the Univerſe is attractive of another, which is of Cognation and Sympathy therewith; that the Magicians Iynges are nothing but the Conſent and Sympathy of the parts of the Univerſe, and he is a Wiſe-man that underſtandeth the Cognation of the parts of the World. (t) For a Stone or Herb that is here, being of Cognation with ſome in-mundane God, he is naturally drawn thereby and inchanted. So the Pagan Theologers ſay, (u) that the things on Earth, Plants, Stones, Animals, are of the Solar, Lunar, or the like Family and Order; as amongſt Plants the Heliotrope and Lotus; amongſt Animals Lions and Cocks, are Solar, they participate of a Solar Numen. (Whence the Lion feareth the Cock becauſe of his greater Solar Virtue, and becauſe he is ſuperior in the Order of things Solar) Theſe things Terrene are cauſally in Heaven, and things Celeſtial are of Cognation and Sympathy with them. The conſideration whereof ſuggeſteth the way of worſhipping the ſuperior Virtues; for by compounding theſe things that are of Cognation and Sympathy with the things Celeſtial and uniting their Forces, we draw influxes upon us. (w) The Prieſts of old conſidering a certain Cognation of the things of Nature, and the Sympathy of them with one another, of things manifeſt with things occult, and that all the things above were in things below, and the things below were in things above, invented their ſacred Diſcipline. For Terrene things are cauſally and in a Celeſtial manner in things Celeſtial: And things Celeſtial are in things Terrene in a Terrene manner. Touching the method of attracting the influxes of the Celeſtials (x) Ficinus hath compos'd a Book of Aſtrological Magick (interpreting Plotinus as himſelf ſaith in his Apology,) which pretendeth to various Methods of attracting the Celeſtial Spirit and Virtue of any Star, as alſo of the Demons, and the vital Spirit and Virtue of the Soul of the World. One method of Attraction is by Aſtrological-Magical Figures. (y) They uſe Figures that are of operative Virtue, and by the figuration of themſelves after a certain manner they ſecretly induce upon themſelves operative Virtues. Words and Sounds are ſuppos'd to be efficacious: (z) For Words, Singings, Sounds, form'd according to a certain preſcrib'd Correſpondence with the Planets, have from thence a ſidereal Virtue. The Planets anſwer thereunto will as naturally come to you from Heaven (as Plotinus and Jamblichus ſay) as a String of a Muſical Inſtrument ſhaketh, when another that is Uniſon to it is ſhaken, or as an Echo is made from the oppoſite Wall. (a) Charms, Verſes and certain Sounds and the Figuration of the Agent are attractive. Aſtrological Prayer (ſuch Prayer as the Platoniſts made to the Sun and other Pagans to other Stars and Planets,) was alſo ſuppos'd to be of great Efficacy. Memento verò orationem aptè & opportune compoſitam, & affectu ſenſuque plenam atque vehementem, ſimilem cantibus vim habere. Prayer (ſaith Ficinus) fitly and ſeaſonably made, vehement and full of Affection and Sence, hath the like force with thoſe other modes of Incantation. Another principal Method of drawing Influxes was by Images and Statues, whence the Statues and ſenſible Sacra were ſuppos'd, to have a Celeſtial and wonderful Virtue reſiding in them. (b) The Wiſe-men of old that made and erected Images and Statues of the Gods, that ſo they might have the Gods preſent with them, ſeem to have conſider'd the Nature of the Univerſe, and to have underſtood, that Soul is eaſily drawn. It may be got the moſt eaſily of any thing, if any ſuch thing be made, that is of Paſſive Affinity with it, and ſuſceptive of a Portion of it. Of Paſſive Affinity being ſome way reſembled and ally'd, as a Specular Body is of Efficacy to ſnatch away the Species. Some pretend (c) to make Images of Medicinal Virtue both for Mind and Body, (the Images of Saturn or Jupiter for procuring long Life, of Mercury for Wit and Memory and againſt Fevers;) Magical and Idolatrous Paganiſm (d) hath its Amulets, Seals, Phylacteries, which relate to this ſort of Magick; and ſo doth that celebrated Artifice of the Magi (the followers of Zoroaſter, that made uſe of a Golden Ball or little Sphere mark'd with the Characters of the Celeſtials (the Hecatine Circle,) having a Sapphire Stone in the midſt, to call forth Spirit and Virtue from Hecate or an Hecatic Demon. The Aſtrological Magicians (e) had Images alſo devis'd for procuring Felicity or Calamity to a Perſon, Houſe or City. Olympius an Egyptian Magician and Aſtrologer by this ſort of Magical Contrivances attempted upon Plotinus: But his Attempts were retorted upon himſelf by the Celſitude of Plotinus's Soul, or (which is too probable and lamentable) by his Superiority in the Magical Order.

(q) Occultè Mercurio ſupplicabat, quem Mundi velociorem ſenſum eſſe, motum mentium ſuſcitantem Theologicæ prodidere Doctrinæ. Ammian. Marcell. l. 16.

(r) Sol, ut aiunt phyſici, Mens Mundi, [in] noſtras mentes ex ſeſe velut ſcintillas diffunditans, cùm eas incenderit vehementiùs, futuri conſcias reddit. Gal. Not. in Jambl. p. 224, 236.

(s) De Inſomn. p. 134. Ficin. Arg. in Apolog. Procl. Theol. Plat. l. 6. c. 4.

(t) Καὶ θεῷ τινὶ τῶν εἴσω τοῦ κόσμου λίθος ἐνθένδε καὶ βοτάνη προσήκει, οἷς ὁμοιοπαθῶν εἴκει τῇ φύσει καὶ γοητεύεται.

(u) Procl. de Magia.

(w) Sacerdotes antiqui, cùm conſiderarent in rebus naturalibus cognationem quandam compaſſionemque aliorum ad alia, & manifeſtorum ad vires occultas & omnia in omnibus invenirent, ſacram eorum ſcientiam condiderunt. Agnoverunt enim & in infimis ſuprema, & in ſupremis infima: In cœlo quidem terrena ſecundum cauſam, modoque cœleſti; in terra verò cœleſtia, ſed modo terreno.

(x) Ficin. de vita.

(y) Καὶ τοῖς σχήμασι προσχρῶνται δυνάμεις ἔχουσι καὶ αὐτοὺς σχηματίζοντες ὡδὶ ἐπάγουσιν ἐπ' αὐτοὺς ἀψοφητὶ δυνάμεις. Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 40. Ficin. de vit. l. 3. c. 17, 18, 26.

(z) Ficin. de vit. l. 3. c. 21. com. in Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 38, 39, 40, 43.

(a) Πέφυκε δὲ καὶ ἐπῳδαῖς, τῷ μέλει καὶ τῇ τοιᾷδε ἠχῇ καὶ τῷ σχήματι τοῦ δρῶντος· ἕλκει γὰρ τὰ τοιαῦτα. Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 40, & 30.

(b) Καί μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ πάλαι σοφοί, ὅσοι ἐβουλήθησαν θεοὺς αὐτοῖς παρεῖναι, ἱερὰ καὶ ἀγάλματα ποιησάμενοι, εἰς τὴν τοῦ παντὸς φύσιν ἀπιδόντες, ἐν νῷ λαβεῖν ὡς πανταχοῦ μὲν εὐάγωγον ψυχῆς φύσις. Δέξασθαι γε μὲν ῥᾷστον ἂν εἴη ἁπάντων, εἴ τις προσπαθές τι τεκτήναιτο, ὑποδέξασθαι δυνάμενον μοῖράν τινα αὐτῆς. Προσπαθὲς δὲ τὸ ὁπωσοῦν μιμηθέν, ὥσπερ κάτοπτρον ἁρπάσαι εἶδός τι δυνάμενον. Plotin. En. 4. l. 3. c. 11.

(c) Ficin. de vit. l. 3. c. 11, 14.

(d) Scalig. Ep. p. 377, & Cauſin. in Hor. Apoll. p. 100. Hoffman. Umbr. in Luc. p. 171.

(e) Ficin. ſupr.

V. One of the principal Artifices of the Pagans Aſtrological Magick was the Teleſms or Taliſmanical Figures and Statues, which are called by Scaliger priſcum Magorum & Chaldæorum Inventum, an old Invention of the Magi and the Chaldeans: But Apollonius Tyanæus is celebrated as the Prince of the Teleſmatical Artiſts, conſecrating in his Travels for the benefit of ſeveral Cities and Countries, Teleſms againſt Storks, Gnats, Snails, Inundations of Rivers, Winds and Storms, and other noxious things. And according to the mode of making theſe στοιχεῖα, or Teleſms he took care (as Scaliger (f) citeth it from Tzetzes,) to have Images of Storks made, τὰς ἐπεμβάσεις τῶν ἀστέρων σκοπῶν, obſerving the Ingreſſes of the Stars. As in the building of Cities the Rules of Aſtrology were conſulted for a propitious Configuration of the Heavens: So the Teleſmatical Figures and Statues were made and erected under a certain Configuration of the Heavens and the influences thereof; and one of the principal Grounds of the Teleſmatical Artifice was that Aſtrological Maxim (g) vultus hujus ſeculi ſunt ſubjecti vultibus cœleſtibus, the forms of inferiour things are anſwerable to the Celeſtial Configurations, and the Celeſtial Forms influence the Sublunary, the Celeſtial Scorpion and Serpent the Sublunary and Terreſtrial. Therefore Apollonius Tyanæus was careful (in making his Teleſms,) to obſerve τὰς ἐπεμβάσεις τῶν ἀστέρων, the Ingreſſes of the Planets into thoſe Celeſtial Forms or Configurations. Some others alſo of the Philoſophic Pagans have pretended to the ſame Wonder-working Faculty (of making Teleſms,) and their Teleſms have been of great Fame. For the Trojan Palladium was not διοπετὲς, a thing that fell from Heaven, but a Teleſm made by a Philoſopher and Mathematician, (as Joannes Antiochenus affirmeth) ὡροσκοπίᾳ καλλίστῃ, under a moſt Fortunate Horoſcope, and incloſing the Genius or Fortune of the City by Virtue of the uſual Artifices of Aſtrological Magick. To this ſort of Magick we muſt refer the Images call'd by Triſmegiſt and other Philoſophic Pagans (h) Statuæ animatæ, Senſu & Spiritu plenæ, futurorum præſciæ, animated Statues, full of Sence and Spirit, preſcious of things future, ἀγάλματα θείας μετουσίας ἀνάπλεα, Images full of Divine Communication (as Jamblichus calleth them) ſaid to be οὐρανίας φύσεως, of a Celeſtial Nature, and which were uſeful both for the driving away of Evils (which was the uſe of the Teleſms) and alſo for oracular Reſponſes. Which variety of Virtues they were furniſh'd with, not only from the Poſition of the Stars and their beneficial Influxes, (i) but ἀπὸ τῶν προσηγγίσιων Dæmoniorum, becauſe certain Demons at a certain Poſition of the Stars were incloſ'd in thoſe Statues, or being invok'd by Magical Prayer took up their Habitation there. To this Aſtrological ſort of Magick (k) the Conſent of the learned referreth the Teraphim of the ancient oriental Pagans and the Egyptian Serapes (the ſame with Teraphim,) which are ſuppoſ'd to be *oracular ſpeaking Statues made under a certain Poſition of the Stars, from whoſe influx they were thought to derive their Oracular ſpeaking Virtue. That they were Oracular (or Prophetic) and ſpeaking, is manifeſt from Scripture; for the King of Babylon conſulteth Teraphim, Ezek. 21. 21. The Teraphim have ſpoken Vanity, Zech. 10. 2. (So the Idol Nebo hath his Name from נביא, a Prophet, Iſa. 46. 1.) whence it ſeemeth the moſt Natural Etymology of Teraphim, to derive it from (l) Syriac תרף (percontatus eſt,) which denoteth conſulting or inquiring. The Syrian Laban may rationally be thought a Man addicted to Paganical Soothſaying and Divination (becauſe Mankind are madly addicted to Divination, Teraphim muſt neceſſarily be in great requeſt,) and his Teraphim or Gods (Gen. 31. 19, 30.) the ſame with the Oriental Pagans Oracular Statues, which the Name Teraphim denoteth in its firſt original Signification. But uſe enlargeth the Terms of Language beyond their firſt and original to a more general Signification (as Clades originally ſignify'd (m) the breaking of the κλάδοι, or Branches of Trees, but was afterwards extended to other things;) and accordingly in ſeveral places of Scripture the Name Teraphim, ſignifieth in general a Statuary Oracle, and being join'd with Ephod (a Sacerdotal Habiliment) it ſignifieth a Sacerdotal Statuary Oracle. Hoſ. 3. 4. The Children of Iſrael ſhall abide many days without a King and without a Prince (without Civil Polity, and the things that belong to the Polity of Religion are next enumerated) and without a Sacrifice, and without an Image (or Statue,) and without an Ephod and Teraphim, that is, a Sacerdotal Oracle. Such an Oracle was that which Gideon made, Judg. 8. 27. which is Synecdochically called an Ephod. Gideon made an Ephod and put it in his City. Judg. 17. 4, 5. The Founder made a graven Image and a molten Image, and they were in the Houſe of Micah. And the Man Micah had an Houſe of Gods (of Images or Statues of his Religious Worſhip) and made an Ephod and Teraphim; (that is) to the Images and Statues which were meerly for Religious Worſhip he ſuperadded a Sacerdotal Oracle of Vocal Divination. Touching the Religion of Micah, I am of Opinion, that the Scripture looketh upon him as an Idolatrous Religioniſt (although his Statues were dedicated to the true God;) for the Name Elohim or Gods in the Text (but now cited) plainly ſignifieth the Images or Statues of his Religious Worſhip, as appeareth from the Connexion of the two Verſes, and from the uſual Dialect of Scripture, in which the Name Gods denoteth the Images or Statues of Mens Religious Worſhip. Gen. 31. 30. and ch. 35. 4. Exod. 20. 3, 23. and ch. 32. 4, 31. Joſh. 24. 14. 2 King. 19. 18. 2 Chron. 13. 8, &c. The Scripture ſpeaketh of Micah in a Phraſe characteriſtical of an Idolatrous Religioniſt (the Man Micah had an Houſe of Gods) and the Man himſelf ſpeaketh in a Dialect peculiar to an Idolatrous Religioniſt, Judg. 18. 24. Ye have taken away my Gods. The Scripture alſo repreſenteth him as a grand Criminal, Judg. 17. 6. In thoſe days there was no King in Iſrael, but every Man did that which was right in his own Eyes. If the Danites conſulting this Religioniſts Levite, Judg. 18. 5. obtain'd an Anſwer from the true God, this will not infer, that Micah was no Idolatrous Religioniſt, ſeeing ſuch as Balaam the Magician have had Reſponſes from the true God. But there is nothing in Scripture which aſcertaineth us, that Micah's Levite was ſo far in favour with God, or that his Oracular Anſwer was of Divine Original: Nor on the other hand, is there any appearance, that he degenerated to downright Heatheniſm, or that in the Fabrication of his Teraphim there were any Artifices of Aſtrological Magick, whence the

(f) Ep. 119.

(g) Seld. de D. Syr. Synt. 1. c. 2. J. Gregor. Not.] & obſerv. c. 7, 8. Hotting. Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 8. ed. 1.

(h) Gale in Jambl. p. 249, 256.

(i) Seld. ſupr. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 378.

(k) Seld. ſupr. Spencer de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. Diſſ. 7. c. 3. S. 6. & 10. Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. col. 2661. de Dieu in Gen. 31. 19.

(l) Lex. Heptaglot. col. 3951.

(m) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 12.

the Pagans thought, that their Teraphim deriv'd their Oracular Virtue; and therefore they are call'd by the Book Coſri (n) אַנְשֵׁי הָרוּחָנִיּוּת the Men of Spirituality, who ſuppos'd, that Spiritual Influence and Virtue might be drawn from the Heavenly Bodies into the Images which they made by the Methods of Aſtrological Magick. But that there was nothing of Magical Correſpondence in Micah's Teraphim, is more than we may affirm.

VI. The Religion of the Zabii (ſo much ſpoken of by Oriental Writers) is an Inſtance of unparallell'd Aſtrological Magick. Some Men of Learning (ſuppoſing them the ſame with the ancient Magi inſtituted by Zoroaſter) have ſtil'd them Philoſophers: But although Philoſophers may be of the Party and Profeſſion of the Zabii, and may be call'd by that Name, yet the Name is not deſign'd to denote any profeſſion of Learning or Philoſophy, but of Religion only. As in Muhammed Ben Iſaac's Story the Charanæi ſay of themſelves, (o) We are Zabii, which is a Name of Religion mention'd in the Alcoran. To the Accounts which many Learned Writers have given of this Religion, I have nothing to add, but that there is a neceſſity of diſtinguiſhing two ſorts of Zabii (to ſave the Credit of the Oriental Writers) the Ancient and the Modern, the one meer Pagan, the other Heretical Pagan. Sometimes the Zabii are repreſented as meer Pagan Religioniſts; for Abul-Pharagius ſaith of Conſtantine, (p) He embrac'd the Chriſtian Faith, having left the Religion of the Zabii. Of the Grecians he ſaith; moſt of them were Zabii, magnifying the Stars and worſhipping Idols. Of the Perſians, Chaldeans, Grecians, Egyptians, Turks, Indians, Sinenſes, he ſaith, They were all Zabii, worſhipping Idols made after the ſimilitude of the Heavenly Bodies. Zabiiſm in the Notion of the Arabic Writers plainly ſignifieth in the ſame Latitude with Ethniciſm, Aſtrolatry and Heathen Idolatry. Agreeably whereunto ſome ſay, (q) The Superſtition of the Zabii in the Arabic Writers ſeemeth to us, to be the ſame that the Greek Fathers call Helleniſm. The Zabii (r) are the Chaldeans, (s) the Name is deriv'd from the Arabic Noun Tſeba, and importeth צביים Orientals, by which Name the Chaldeans are underſtood. By Chaldeans they mean the Ancient Chaldeans agreeably to that of Abul-Pharagius, (t) we are aſſur'd by certain Tradition, that the Profeſſion of the Zabii is the ſame with that of the Ancient Chaldeans. The Profeſſion of the Ancient Chaldeans may ſignifie the Profeſſion of Aſtrology, and in ſuch Senſe the Profeſſion of the Chaldeans is by Origen (u) oppos'd to the Profeſſion of the Magi, whoſe Buſineſs was matter of Religion principally. But the Ancient Chaldeans were alſo the eminent Pagan Religioniſts, the Magi were their Philoſophers * (as S. Hierom ſaith) and miniſtred their Sacra, according to that of the Poet Claudian,

——— rituque juvencos
Chaldæo ſtravere Magi ——

The Profeſſion of the Zabii being the ſame with the Profeſſion of the Ancient Chaldean Religioniſts and their Magi, Abulfeda may affirm with truth touching theſe Zabii, (w) that their Religion is moſt ancient and had poſſeſs'd almoſt all the World; and Maimonides, (x) that the Zabaiſts were a Nation, quæ totum terrarum orbem impleverat, that had fill'd the whole Earth. Maimonides alſo may affirm with truth, that they prevail'd in the Days of Abraham, that our Father Abraham was educated in the Faith and Rites of the Zabii, and that the Precepts of the Moſaic Law contain a deſign'd Antitheſis to their Rites. All this is true of the purely Pagan Eaſterlings; but nothing of this is true of the Modern and ſecond ſort of Zabii, which are commonly ſpoken of and deſcrib'd by the Oriental Writers, and which are plainly an Heretical and Mongrel ſort of Pagans (not meer Pagans) like the Gnoſticks of the Primitive Church. This appeareth from Beidavi's Deſcription of them; for he calleth the Zabii (y) a People betwixt Chriſtians and Maguſeans (the Magi;) and their grand pretence is דינהם דין נוח their Foundation is the Religion of Noah. Maimonides repreſenteth them as great Adverſaries to Noah; howſoever that be, theſe can be no purely Pagan Religioniſts. Keſſæus reporteth, that their Party diſtinguiſh themſelves by this Profeſſion; we follow the Religion of Scheth, Edris and Noah. They boaſt, that Seth the Son Adam (of whom they ſay, that beſides Enoſh he had another Son call'd Sabius) was the Founder of their Religion, and Enoch (called by the Muhammedan Writers Edris) the Propagator thereof. They ſhew a Book (as Abulfeda relateth) the Book of their Sect, (z) intituled The Book of Seth, as containing his Doctrine and Inſtitutes, and treating of Honeſty of Life, the ſtudy of Virtue, and eſchewing of Vice. Theſe are plainly the practices of Hereticks (as Hottinger obſerveth) to father their Suppoſititious Books upon Patriarchs and Prophets. They are call'd (a) Arabic Hereſiarchs, and Thebeth ben Corrah and Albategnius (fam'd Aſtronomers) are noted to have ſymboliz'd with their Hereſie. Moreover, the Rites and Sacra of the Zabii (as they are recited by Learned Men) are ſeveral of them extreamly diſſonant from the Rites of meer Pagan Religioniſts and the Ancient Chaldeans. And if Maimonides and the Oriental Writers do not Legendize, the Zabii were Pre-Adamites, told prodigious Stories of Adam and a Book of his touching a Tree in India, of Diſputations with Abraham, of Seth's departing from the Opinion of his Father touching the Worſhip of the Moon, and had wild Conceits touching the Saints of the Old Teſtament. As for Philoſophy, Maimonides upbraideth them with the height of Ignorance in it, nor is there any appearance of Philoſophy amongſt the Modern Zabii ſave only ſome few Principles of the Ariſtotelian; whereas the Ancient Chaldeans (b) were conſiderable for their Learning in Philoſophy and Aſtronomy. Abul-Pharagius giveth this Account of their Wiſdom. (c) There were of the Chaldeans wiſe men, that made ample progreſs in ſeveral ſorts of the Liberal Arts, Mathematical and Theological Sciences; but they chiefly excell'd in the Obſervation of the Stars, and the Inveſtigation of the Celeſtial Arcana, Skill of the Nature of the Stars and their Significations; in this ſort of Learning they excell'd to the height. They taught the Occidentals, how the Sacella (Schemes of the Celeſtials) ſhould be rightly order'd, to elicit the Virtues of the Stars, and manifeſt their Natures, and the Projection of their Rays upon them, their agreeable kind of Sacrifices being offer'd, and their peculiar kind of Rites. And from them came marvellous Contrivances, and famous Concluſions for the making Teleſms and other things of like nature. The Heretical-Pagan Zabii retain'd the Chaldeans Aſtrologicals as they are here repreſented; but hugely degenerated from the Liberal Arts, Mathematicals and Theologicals alſo of the Ancient Chaldeans, agreeably to that Etymology of their (n) P. 178. ed. Buxtorf.

(o) Hotting. Hiſt. or. l. 1. c. 8. ed. 1.

(p) Hiſt. Dynaſt. p. 2, 62, 69.

(q) Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 53.

(r) Scalig. Ep. 62.

( ) Huet. Dem. Ev. pr. 4. c. 4.

(t) Pocock. Spec. p. 138.

(u) C. Celſ. l. 1. p. 45.

* Com. in Dan. 2.

(w) Pocock. Spec. p. 145.

(x) Mor. Nev. Par. 3. c. 29.

(y) Hotting. Hiſt. l. 1. c. 8.

(z) Pocock. Spec. p. 138.

(a) Hoffman. umbr. in Luc. p. 95.

(b) Voſſ. de Sect. Phil. c. 1.

(c) Hiſt. Dynaſt. p. 47.

their Name from the Arabic Verb Tſeba, which ſignifieth a new religionizing and a forſaking the old; as if theſe Heretical Pagans were ſo denominated, becauſe in part the Religion of their Anceſtors (the Ancient Chaldeans) was relinquiſh'd, meer Paganiſm being chang'd into Heretical Paganiſm. Thus Maimonides and Abul-Pharagius ought to have repreſented the Religion of the more modern ſort of Zabii, as in part only and in ſome reſpects the ſame with the Ancient Chaldeans Religion.

There is another Etymology of the Name Zabii from the Hebrew word צבא (Hoſt) which is thought moſt agreeable to their Rites and Inſtitutes, becauſe they were the Worſhippers of the Hoſt of Heaven. They are diſtinguiſh'd by Shareſtanius into two Sects: (d) The one the worſhippers of the Sacred Habitacles (worſhipping the Bodies of the Planets as Habitations of the Spiritual Intelligences;) the other, the worſhippers of Images and Statues. The former obſerve the Houſes of the Planets, their Riſings, Settings, Conjunctions, diſtributing Days, Nights and Hours to them, aſſigning to them Forms, Figures and Regions; and from theſe Obſervations they preſcribe the way of making Teleſms, Seals and Figures, Inchantments alſo, and Prayers, with ſuch more; all which are thought available to do wonderful Feats by virtue of the Stars. If upon the Day and Hour proper to any Planet, they put on his Seal and the Garments proper to that Planet, and ſay the Forms of Prayer that properly agree to him, they doubt not they ſhall be heard in whatever they ask (depending upon his Influence) and obtain what they pray for. The other Sect made their Images according to the proper Figure of every one of the ſeven Sacred Habitacles, of proper Planetary Metal, with due obſervation of Days, Hours, Degrees, Minutes and other things which the Aſtrologers count uſeful for eliciting benign Influxes, uſing alſo ſuch Seals, Garments, Odours, Prayers and Incantations, as were moſt pleaſing to the Star, whoſe Favour they deſign'd to gain. Maimonides ſaith of the Zabii in general, (e) They erected Images to the Stars, to the Sun Images of Gold, to the Moon Images of Silver, diſtributing the Metals and Climes amongſt the Stars, and ſaying, that ſuch a Star is the God of ſuch a Clime. They built little Temples, in which they plac'd their Images, affirming an Influx of the Virtues of the Stars into thoſe Images, ſo that thoſe Images were intelligent and loquent, inſpiring Men with the gift of Prophecy and teaching them things ſalutary. The like Opinion they had of Trees; that by virtue of Charms and Dedications the Stars were preſent in them by an Ethereal Spirit or Spiritual Virtue to wonderful effects. An Aſtrological-Magical Rite of the Zabii is by Maimonides (f) thought the cauſe of that Precept of the Law Deut. 22. 5. The Woman ſhall not wear that which pertaineth to a Man, neither ſhall a Man put on a Woman's Garment. The Precept carrieth an Antitheſis to that Inſtitute of Zabiiſm; A Man muſt put on Woman's Apparel when he ſtandeth before Venus, and a Woman muſt put on Military or Martial Habiliments, when ſhe ſtandeth before Mars. But touching the Moſaic Inſtitutes that are deſign'd to confront the Rites of the Zabii, this is not a place to diſcourſe, we will conclude this Account of the Zabii and of the Philoſophic Pagans Aſtrological-Magick with theſe two Remarks. One is, That the Religion of the preſent Banians, Bramanes and Perſees in India (g) as it is of late repreſented, is hugely different from the Religion of the Ancient Brachmans and Perſians, as the Modern Zabii are hugely diſſonant from thoſe of ancient times. The other Remark is touching Plotinus, who by the generality of the Learned (following Macrobius) is thought, to be of Opinion, that the Stars are only ſignificative, not effective of Events. But his own words are expreſſive of a contrary Senſe. (h) But what ſhall we attribute to the Stars and their Configurations, Effection or bare Signification? both Effection and Signification in many Caſes, in others Signification only.

(d) Pocock. Spec. p. 139, &c.

(e) Mor. Nev. Par. 3. c. 29. Of the Spirit of the Stars Ficinus may be ſeen, de Vita l. 3. c. 20.

(f) Ubi ſupr. Par. 3. c. 37.

(g) A Diſcov. of the Sect. of the Banians, &c. by Mr. Lord.

(h) Ἀλλὰ τί ποιήσεις ἢ σημασίας; καὶ ποιήσεις καὶ σημασίας ἐν πολλοῖς· ἀλλαχοῦ δὲ σημασίας μόνον. En. 4. l. 4. c. 34.

CHAP. VI.

1. Of the Deities of the Exoterical Theology and the Supream Deity thereof as to the Mundane City locally underſtood. 2. A miſtake of Voſſius. 3. Of a twofold Conſideration of this Supream Deity. 4. Of a groſs miſtake of the Rabbins and ſome of the Fathers. 5. Of the ſeveral Aſtral Deities of ſeveral Parties of the Pagans. 6. Of the Deities of the Samaritan Colonies. 7. Of the various Acceptations of the Pagan Deities, with a general Application of them to the Oriental Baal. 8. A particular Application of them to the Oriental Baal, with an Account of Heliogabalus's God and ſome other Deities. 9. The Sun not abſolutely the Supream Deity of the Pagans, nor are the Proofs of it valid. 10. Of the Pagans deifying Heaven and Earth with the Mundane Elements. 11. Of the Deities of the Exoterical Theology that are Inhabitants of the Mundane City, the firſt ſort whereof are the Genial kind of Deities of the Supra-demonial Order. 12. Who the principal of theſe Genial kind of Deities were, and of the Herological Deities. 13. Of the Deiformities and the Mythical Deities. 14. Of the Animal Deities.

I. THE Pagan Theology muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into the Exoterical and Acroamatical (as appeareth from our Idea of the Philoſophic Pagan Theology;) and conſequently the Deities of it muſt be diſtributed into thoſe of the Exoterical Theology, which were the Popular Pagans Deities; and thoſe of the Acroamatical and Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology, which were peculiar to the Philoſophic Pagans; the Popular Pagans knew nothing of them. To give an account of the firſt ſort of theſe Deities (thoſe of the Exoterical Theology) we muſt conſider the World as a City of Gods and Men, (ſo the Pagan Theologers define it) the word City denoting both the place inhabited and the Inhabitants. For many of the Pagan Deities belong to the Mundane City locally underſtood (the World and the Parts thereof:) Others of them are the Inhabitants of the Mundane City, Inhabitants either real or fictitious. As to the Deities belonging to the Mundane City locally underſtood, this Mundane City it ſelf is (doubtleſs) the firſt and eldeſt Deity in Paganiſm; for there is great reaſon to think, that the firſt original Theiſm of the Pagans was the Deifying the viſible Heaven or World (as the Supream Univerſal Deity or Chief God) and the Lights of Heaven. Their eldeſt Idolatry was Uranolatry, Coſmolatry, Aſtrolatry, as appeareth from the Jove of the eldeſt times. Of the Perſians, Herodotus reporteth, (i) that they did not like the Greeks think the Gods ἀνθρωποφυέας, of Humane Birth and Original; but their way was, aſcending to the tops of the Mountains they ſacrific'd to Jove, calling the whole Circle of the Heaven Jove. Strabo ſaith of them, (k) They ſacrifice in an high place, thinking the Heaven Jove. So Plutarch ſaith of the Egyptians, (l) They take the firſt God and the Univerſe for the ſame thing. And Diodorus Siculus affirmeth, that Pan and Zeus are but two ſeveral Names for one and the ſame Deity. Univerſal Mundane Nature the Egyptians deify'd under the Name of Iſis (which was their Supream Deity) as the Inſcription before her Temple at Sais ſheweth; I am all that hath been, is, and ſhall be, and my Peplum or Veil no Mortal hath ever yet uncover'd; and that other Inſcription on an Altar at Capua (Tibi una. Quæ es omnia. Dea. Iſis.) which maketh her one and all things. The Egyptian Scrapis (their greateſt and ſupream Deity) is the World; (m) for Serapis being ask'd by Nicocreon (King of the Cypriots) what God he was? made anſwer, I am a God ſuch as I deſcribe my ſelf. The Starry Heaven is my Head, the Sea is my Belly, the Earth my Feet, mine Ears are in the Ether, and mine Eye is the bright Eye and Lamp of the Univerſe, the Sun. The Orphic Theology (which is generally thought a Deſcendent from Egypt) makes (n) a like Deſcription of Jove or Zeus. So Cicero hath ſhew'd from Ennius and Euripides (who is call'd the Scenical Philoſopher) that the Heaven or Circumambient Ether is (o) the European Pagans Jove, the Supream Univerſal Numen. So in the Poet Æſchylus (of whom Clemens (p) ſaith, that he ſpeaketh concerning God σεμνῶς σφόδρα, mighty venerably) Jupiter is univerſal Mundane Nature. (q) Jupiter is Ether and Earth, and Heaven, and all things. And if there be any thing above theſe Jupiter is it. (r) The Naturaliſts (ſaith Macrobius) called the Sun Dionyſos, the Mind of Jove, becauſe the Mind of the World. The World is called Heaven, which they call Jove. Whence Aratus being to ſpeak of Heaven, ſaith, Let us take our riſe from Jove. So in an ancient Inſcription the viſible Heaven (s) is intituled Eternal, the beſt and greateſt Jupiter. So in Plato's ſeventh of Laws the Pagans confound the greateſt God and the whole World. As to the greateſt God and the whole World (τὸν μέγιστον θεὸν ϗ ὅλον τὸν κόσμον) Men ſhould not buſily ſearch after the knowledge thereof (ſay they) nor buſily enquire into the cauſes of things, it being not pious for them ſo to do. Agreeably to which Senſe of the Ancient Pagans that Tradition of theirs reported by Ariſtotle is to be underſtood touching the Divinity or Godſhip of the Heavens. (t) It hath been deliver'd to us from thoſe of very ancient times, both that the Stars are Gods, and that the Divinity containeth the whole of Nature. This Notion was ſo familiar with the Pagans, that Strabo writing of Moſes, could not but ſuppoſe the God of his Religion, to be of this Nature and Notion; (u) That which containeth us all, and the Earth, and the Sea, which we call Heaven, and the World, and the Nature of the whole (Univerſal Mundane Nature.) So the Poet Juvenal deſcribeth the God of the Jews.

(w) Nil præter Nubes & Cœli numen adorant.
They worſhip no Deity but the Clouds and the Heaven.

So Diodorus Sic. reporteth Moſes to have been of Opinion, (x) That the Heaven which ſurroundeth the Earth, is the only God and Lord of all. Theſe Pagans did not imagine, that the Jews could worſhip any higher kind of Deity than their Supream Jove, the Heaven, which in the larger Senſe of the Word ſignifieth the whole Corporeal World. So the Stoicks uſually Theologize; (y) that God is all that we ſee, and all that we do not ſee, the Stars are parts of Jove, all the Gods and Goddeſſes are one Jupiter. Vis illum Naturam vocare? non peccabis: vis illum vocare Mundum? non falleris. God, Nature and the World are ſynonymous in their Theology; and the World with them is the Supream Deity, becauſe it is the Supream Excellence; (z) for in Nature there is nothing greater or better than the World, ſaith Seneca. Pliny (a Spurious Stoick) rightly expreſſeth their Dogma, or rather the firſt and principal Dogma of Pagan Theiſm. (a) The World or the Heavenly Canopy muſt in reaſon be thought a Deity. Such a Deity was the European Pagans Jove, and ſuch a Deity was the Aſiatic Bel or Baal; for that Name is interpreted οὐρανὸς, the Heaven, (b) the comprehenſion of the Ether and the Stars, and the Heaven was called Bel by the Chaldeans, as Euſtathius reporteth from the Ancients. And Philo ſaith of the Chaldeans, (c) They ſuppos'd the viſible World or Heaven the Supream Deity. The proclivity of Heathen Mankind to ſuch a Notion of the Supream Deity is viſible in a late Writer of the Affairs of China. (d) A mighty Nation of the Tartars, though they are not by what appeareth, of any particular Religion, but indifferently receive all Religions, which they are acquainted with, and conform themſelves to all, not knowing or caring to know what it is they adore, and they have no knowledge of the Idols or Deities which the Ancients ador'd; nor doth it appear, that they receive or retain thoſe firſt Notions which the inſtinct of Nature without the aſſiſtance of any

(i) L. 1. c. 131.

(k) L. 16.

(l) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 7. c. 2.

(m) Εἰμὶ θεὸς τοιόσδε μαθεῖν, οἷον κ' ἐγὼ εἴπω οὐράνιος κόσμος κεφαλὴ, γαστὴρ δὲ θάλασσα,
Γαῖα ἢ μοι πόδες εἰσι. τὰ δ' οὔατ' ἐν αἴθερι κεῖται.
ὄμμα τε τηλαυγὲς, λαμπρὸν φάος ἠελίοιο.
Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. diſſ. 10.

(n) En hujus caput eximium, vultuſque decoros
Undique reſplendens cœlum, cui pendula circum
Aurea Cæſaries Aſtrorum lumina fundit.
Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 9.

(o) Hunc Ennius nuncupat ita dicens,
Aſpice hoc ſublime candens, quem invocant omnes Jovem. Hunc etiam Augures noſtri cùm dicunt, Jove fulgente, tonante: dicunt enim, Cœlo fulgente tonante. Euripides autem, ut multa præclare, ſic hoc breviter.
Vides ſublime fuſum, immoderatum æthera
Qui tenero terram circumvectu amplectitur.
Hunc ſummum habeto Divum, hunc perhibeto Jovem.
De N. D. l. 2.

(p) Strom. l. 5. p. m. 440.

(q) Ζεὺς ἐστὶν αἰθὴρ, Ζεὺς δὲ γῆ, Ζεὺς δ' οὐρανὸς
Ζεύς τοι τὰ πάντα, χ' ὅτι τῶνδ' ὑπέρτερον.

(r) Phyſici Διόνυσον Διὸς νοῦν, ſolum mundi mentem eſſe dixerunt. Mundus autem vocatur cœlum, quod appellant Jovem. unde Aratus de cœlo dicturus ait, ἐκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα. Saturn. l. 1. c. 18.

(s) Optimus Maximus, Cœlus æternus, Jupiter. Elmenhorſt. in Arnob. p. 30.

(t) Παραδέδοται ὑπὸ τῶν ἀρχαίων ϗ παλαιῶν, ὅτι θεοί τέ εἰσιν οὗτοι, ϗ περιέχει τὸ θεῖον τὴν ὅλην φύσιν. Metaph. l. 14. c. 8.

(u) Τὸ περιέχον ἡμᾶς ἅπαντας ϗ γῆν ϗ θάλατταν, ὃ καλοῦμεν οὐρανὸν ϗ κόσμον, ϗ τὴν τῶν ὅλων φύσιν. L. 16. Intell. Syſt. p. 516.

(w) Gat. Not. in Ant. l 4. ſ. 23.

(x) Τὸν περιέχοντα τὴν γῆν οὐρανὸν μόνον εἶναι θεὸν ϗ τῶν ὅλων κύριον.

(y) Gat. ſupr. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 8. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 11.

(z) Nihil enim novit natura vel majus vel pulchrius. Vid. Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 6. c. 5.

(a) Mundum & hoc quod nomine alio cœlum appellare libuit, cujus circumflexu teguntur cuncta, numen eſſe credi par eſt.

(b) Seld. de D. Syr. Synt. 2. c. 1. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 15.

(c) Τὸν κόσμον αὐτὸν ὑπέλαβον εἶναι θεόν· περὶ Ἀβραάμ. p. 244. Ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(d) Palafox p. 440. Heaven ſignifieth τὸν ἄνω τόπον, the place above us. Ariſtot.

any ſupernatural Light impreſſeth upon the very Breaſt of every Man ; yet they Worſhip the Heavens, and to theſe they pay their greateſt Adoration ; and this maketh the greateſt impreſſion upon the Minds of the People. Of the barbarous Nation of the Gallans bordering upon Habiſſinia we have this account. (e) They have no Idols, and but very little Divine Worſhip. If you ask them concerning God or any ſupreme Numen, or who it is, that governeth the Earth with ſo much order and conſtancy? They anſwer, Heaven, which embraceth in their view all the reſt. (f) A great Nation on the North of Japan are ſaid to have no other Religion ſave only the Worſhip of Heaven ; and the Supreme Deity or greateſt God of the Chineſe is ſaid to be the Heaven, which they ſuppoſe increate, without beginning, unbodily and a Spirit.

II. According to the Teſtimony of the Scriptures and of Heathen Authors, the conſent of all the Chriſtian and the beſt of the Hebrew Writers, the firſt and earlieſt Idolatry of the Heathen was the Worſhip of the Lights of Heaven, which inferreth the Antiquity of Uranolatry, and that the firſt Original Pagan Theiſm was the deifying the (Syſtema Coſmicum) Mundane Syſtem. (g) Voſſius indeed affirmeth (agreeably to their Opinion, who ſuppoſe the Sun, to have been the Pagans ſupreme Deity,) that their Worſhip of the Celeſtial Lights was antecedent to the Worſhip of the Æther, Heaven or World ; that Uranolatry and Coſmolatry ſucceeded Aſtrolatry ; which is a Suppoſition altogether groundleſs, and as unreaſonable, as if he ſhould ſuppoſe them the Worſhippers of Mountains and Rivers, before they were the Worſhippers of their great Goddeſs the Earth (h) which Plato calleth the moſt ancient of the Gods. (i) The ſame Philoſopher ſuppoſeth, that Uranolatry and Aſtrolatry was the eldeſt Religion of the Pagans, and that Uranolatry was contemporary with Aſtrolatry both amongſt the Greeks and Barbarians. The Greeks receiv'd Aſtronomy and the knowledge of thoſe Celeſtial Deities, the Stars, from the Barbarians, thoſe ancient Pagan Nations, which were the Inventors of Aſtronomy, and which in Egypt and Syria (as Plato diſcourſeth in his Epinomis) had great advantage for the knowledge of the Stars becauſe of the Serenity of their Country. The Theology therefore of thoſe ancient Pagan Nations may be underſtood from the Greek Theology of the elder times, which the Philoſopher in his Cratylus thus repreſenteth. The firſt Inhabitants of Greece ſeem, as many of the Barbarians now, to have thought the Sun and the Moon and the Earth, καὶ ἄστρα καὶ οὐρανὸν, and the Stars and the Heaven, the only Gods. When they beheld theſe running round perpetually, they call'd them θεοὺς from θέω, which ſignifieth to run. Afterwards taking notice, that there were other Gods, they called them alſo by the ſame Name. As the firſt Inhabitants of Greece deify'd not only the Sun, Moon and Stars, but the Heaven above them: So when Diodorus ſaith of the Men of ancient times, (k) that beholding the World and univerſal mundane Nature, being ſtruck with admiration, they thought the prime eternal Gods were the Sun and Moon, calling the one Oſiris, the other Iſis ; this is not ſo to be underſtood, as if they deify'd the Sun and Moon excluſively of the reſt of the World above them: But beholding τὸν κόσμον καὶ τὴν τῶν ὅλων φύσιν, the World and univerſal Mundane Nature, and being ſtruck with admiration, they deify'd it, and ſuch illuſtrious parts of it as the Sun and Moon. So when Maimonides ſaith of the Zabii, that their Tenent was, (l) there is no other God but the Stars ; This is not to be underſtood excluſively of Heaven, as if the Zabii did not ſuppoſe it the Supreme Deity ; for the ſame Author ſaith of them, (m) All the Zabaiſts held the eternity of the World ; for the Heavens according to them are the Deity. So Philo ſaith of the Chaldeans, (n) They ſuppoſe the Stars to be Gods, and the Heaven and the World (the firſt and greateſt God,) to which they refer the Fates of Men, acknowledging no cauſe of things abſtract from ſenſibles. If the firſt Heathen deify'd the Lights of Heaven (o) becauſe of their Amplitude, Pulchritude, Utility, and Reſidence in Heaven (which is called τὸ θεῖον, the Divinity by Ariſtotle in his Book de Cælo l. 2. c. 3.) they could not fail upon the ſame accounts to Deify the illuſtrious Canopy of Heaven, according to that of Plato in his Epinomis ſpeaking of the Author of all Goods. (p) What God is it, that I Celebrate? The Heaven in any wiſe, whom it is moſt juſt that we, as all the other Demons and Gods, honour and pray to eximiouſly. This we all readily acknowledge the Author of all other Goods to us. Celſus cannot but wonder at the Jews, (q) that worſhipping Heaven (as he ſuppos'd,) they ſhould ſlight the moſt auguſt and venerable and potent Parts of it, the Sun, Moon and Stars. It would have been as great an incongruity in the firſt Heathen, to have deify'd the Sun, Moon and Stars without acknowledging the Divinity of the Heavens and the Mundane Syſtem, which is much more auguſt and venerable than any luminous parts of Heaven. So ſtrange an incongruity ought not to be ſuppos'd in the Heatheniſm of the firſt times, becauſe no ſuch thing, but the contrary appeareth in the Pagans Theiſm of ſucceeding Ages ; the univerſality of Pagan Theiſts (otherwiſe of diſagreeing Sentiments) agreeing in the Godſhip of the viſible World or Heaven, which was their Catholic Doctrine. So ſenſible a Deity, of ſuch admirable Greatneſs and Goodneſs, Sublimity, and Pulchritude, (which is viſibly πολυόφθαλμος, many-ey'd, as the Name of the Egyptian God Oſiris, who is the ſame with Serapis, is ſaid to ſignifie,) Order, Stability, Perennity, and ſuppos'd Incorruptibleneſs, to which in ancient times (their Learning being that of Aſtrology) they attributed the Gubernation of all things, could not be overlook'd in the firſt Inſtitution of the Aſtrological Religion of the Pagans: Nor could their Religion well be without one Supreme all-comprehending Numen. (r) Ipſum itaque Jovem veteres vocaverunt, the Heathen of ancient times therefore called the Heaven Jove. (s) The old Arabians are ſaid by Arrianus, to have worſhipp'd only two Gods, Uranus and Dionyſus. Uranus as containing in himſelf both the other Stars and the Sun, from whom the greateſt and moſt manifeſt utility cometh to Human Affairs.

III. The viſible Heaven conſider'd under this Notion as the Mundane Syſtem of all-comprehending Amplitude was the Pagans Supreme Deity: But they often conſider it under another Notion, as the ſupernal part of the World, and in

(e) Ludolph. Hiſt. of Ethiop. B. 1. c. 16.

(f) Hoffman. umbr. in Luce p. 88. Purchas pilgr. Par. 1. B. 4. c. 19. S. 2. B. 5. c. 15. S. 7.

(g) De Idol. l. 2. c. 37. & l. 7. c. 2.

(h) Ibid. l. 2. c. 51.

(i) V. Eugubin. de Per. phil. l. 5. c. 3.

(k) Dion. Voſſ. in Maimon. de Idol. p. m. 5.

(l) Nullum eſſe Deum præter ſtellas, Mor. Nev. Par. 3. c. 29.

(m) Omnes Zabaiſtæ crediderunt Antiquitatem mundi, quia cœli juxta illos ſunt Deus.

(n) Τοὺς ἀστέρας θεοὺς νομίζουσι, καὶ τὸν σύμπαντα οὐρανὸν τε καὶ κόσμον. Περὶ εὐγενείας, p. 622. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(o) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 35.

(p) Voſſ. Ibid. c. 37.

(q) Ap. Orig. l. 5. p. 234.

(r) Macrob. ſom. Scip. l. 1. c. 17.

(s) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 26.

in this Notion they muſt neceſſarily make it the Supreme of their Deities. For ſeeing the World (according to their Hypotheſis) is a World of Deities, it naturally and neceſſarily falleth to the ſhare of the Supernal part of the World, to be the Supreme of Deities. (t) Univerſal Mundane Nature, (ſaith Varro) is divided into Heaven and Earth, which is the ancient Diviſion. The ſupernal Places and thoſe of the Gods, are called the Heavens: The places below and thoſe of Men, the Earth. Heaven is of a twofold acceptation: The higheſt part of it where the Stars are, is called Heaven; and that which Pacuvius pointeth at, the next Circumambient, which ſurroundeth and containeth the Earth. Heaven and Earth are the chief Gods. Theſe Gods are the ſame with Serapis and Iſis in Egypt, Taautes and Aſtarte amongſt the Phenicians, Saturn and Ops in Latium. For Heaven and Earth are (as the Samothracian Myſteries teach) Dei magni, the great Gods, which are call'd in Samothrace, θεοὶ δυνατοὶ, and in the Books of the Augurs, Divi potes, the potent Gods. This pair of Deities the Ancients renown'd for their Beneficence (u) ſtiled them Jupiter and Juno, the grand Parents of things: Heaven or Jupiter is ſtiled Father, and the Earth hath the name of Mother. The one was ſuppos'd, to be of Active Virtue and Maſculine Nature (for Heat, Fire and Soul in Generation is from Heaven, where there are innumerable immortal Fires,) the other was thought of Feminine Paſſive Nature (as the Scythians in Herodotus (w) ſuppoſe the Earth to be the Wife of Jove,) whence the Athenians (x) made them their Nuptial Deities. The one they ſuppos'd of ſubject Nature, the other dominant and ruling, agreeably to the natural notice of their Minds (that the Heavens rule,) and as the Poet repreſenteth them. (y) Behold me Acmonides King of the broad-breaſted Earth. Acmonides (ſaith the Scholiaſt) is Heaven, the ſame with Jove. In ſtiling him Acmonides the Poet ſeemeth to have reſpect, both to his uſual Name Chronides (for Acmon in Heſychius is interpreted Chronos,) and alſo to the Name of the Sidereal Heaven, which is called Ἀκμὼν, (Acmon) from its ſteddy unwearied Motion. Which Sidereal Heaven (whether conſider'd as univerſal mundane Nature All-comprehending, or as the ſupernal part of the World) was accounted by the Pagans Animate and Intelligent mundane Nature, otherwiſe they would not have accounted it Jove their Imperial Majeſty of Heaven. For they deify'd Heaven and Earth, becauſe they ſuppos'd them Animate and Intelligent, as the Writer de placitis Philoſophorum diſcourſeth of the Men of ancient times. (z) The Notion of God in their Minds had its riſe from the appearing Stars, ſeeing them the cauſes of very great Harmony, and beholding the ſtated orderly Succeſſion of Day and Night, Summer and Winter, Riſings and Settings, and the Animals and Fruits brought forth by the Earth. Wherefore Uranus ſeem'd to them to be the Father, becauſe the pouring out Water is as the emiſſion of Seed: But the Earth the Mother, becauſe ſhe receiveth the Seed and bringeth forth. The Men of ancient times deify'd the Stars together with Uranus (Heaven:) So the Orientals (a) worſhipped the Sun together with Heaven, Antiquity call'd the Sun the Eye of Jove; whence it appeareth, that the firſt Original Pagan Theiſm was the deifying Heaven (the Mundane Syſtem,) the making this their Jove.

But Varro obſerveth from Pacuvius, that there is an Heaven on this ſide the Sidereal Heaven, that the ambient Air is ſtiled Jupiter (whoſe Temple was perforate (b) ut videatur Divum, id eſt Cœlum, that the Air-heaven may be ſeen,) which Air-Jupiter was look'd upon (c) as Omnipreſent and Omniſcient, had the Supreme Attributes communicated to him, is ſtil'd by the Poet Virgil, Pater omnipotens, and is ſo confounded with the great univerſal Jove, that Theon the Scholiaſt upon Aratus ſuppoſeth, that this Hemiſtich —— τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμὲν, (for we are his Off-ſpring) may be underſtood of the Air, which is ſtiled by him Ζεὺς φυσικὸς, the Phyſical Jupiter. The mean and ſottiſh Conceits which the Greeks and Romans had of their Jupiter-Father, appear in the Verſes of Ennius touching this Air-Jupiter. (d) To this Senſe; The Air as the Greeks call it, which hath various Tranſmutations, is Jupiter, the Helper of Men, Cities and Cattel, the Father-King of the Gods and Men. The vulgar Notion of the Pagan Jove is of great Affinity with this Air-Jupiter (for by Jove they commonly underſtood the Power of the Air that thundereth and lightneth;) who hath alſo the Name of Dieſpiter, and was the Preſident of the Day; the ſuperiour part of the World being under the Preſidency of Jove, and the inferiour part under Hades or Pluto. So the Gods were diſtributed into Dii Superi and Inferi; which diſtribution of them probably had its Origin only from a diſtribution of the parts of the Univerſe; for (e) they that derive it from the Perſian Ditheiſm, have not alledg'd any ſufficient Reaſon for their Opinion.

IV. The Rabbins ſuppoſe, that Providence taketh no care of the Gentiles, but hath intirely committed the care of them (f) to the Stars, Planets, and the Angels which preſide over and govern them; and that the Goods and Evils which befal them, are not from God's governing Providence, (g) but from the determination of the Stars, or from the Aſtral Preſident Angels, that act by the Influence of the Stars. Such a ſuperiority in Rule and Government is manifeſtly ſomething of Deity (God-propriety,) the Stars according to this Rabbinical Hypotheſis are Deities to the Gentiles, who are abandon'd by God, to Serve and Worſhip them. As the Gentiles made them in Honour and Dignity Gods by their Religious Worſhip: So Trypho in J. Mart. ſaith of the Sun and Moon, (h) which it is written, God hath granted to the Gentiles to Worſhip as Gods. To this Senſe ſeveral ancient Writers of the Church have interpreted, Deut. 4. 19, 20. And leſt thou lift up thine Eyes unto Heaven, and when thou

(t) Omnis natura in cœlum & terram diviſa eſt. Cœli dicuntur loca ſupera, & ea Deorum: Terræ, loca infera, & ea hominum. Cœlum dicitur duobus modis: Et pars ejus ſumma, ubi Stellæ; & id quod Pacuvius demonſtrat, cùm dicit, Hoc vide circum ſupraque quod complexu continet terram. Principes Dei, Cœlum & Terra. Varro de L. L p. 13. 8, 17.

(u) Duo hi Parentes magni dicuntur: Jupiter (Cœlum) Pater appellatur. Tellus terra mater. Ibid. p. 17, 18, & de re ruſtic. p. 4.

(w) l. 4. c. 59.

(x) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 58.

(y) Λεῦσσέ με τὸν γᾶς τε βαθυστέρνου ἄνακτ' Ἀκμονίδαν. Ibid. c. 37.

(z) Θεοῦ ἔννοιαν ἔσχον ἀπὸ τῶν φαινομένων ἀστέρων, ὁρῶντες τούτους μεγάλης συμφωνίας ὄντας αἰτίους, καὶ τεταγμένας ἡμέραν τε καὶ νύκτα, χειμῶνα καὶ θέρος, ἀνατολάς τε καὶ δυσμάς· καὶ τὰ ὑπὸ τῆς γῆς ζωογονούμενα καὶ καρπογονούμενα. Διὸ πατὴρ μὲν ἔδοξεν αὐτοῖς ὁ οὐρανὸς ὑπάρχειν, μήτηρ δὲ ἡ γῆ. τούτων δὲ ὁ μὲν οὐρανὸς πατὴρ, διὰ τὸ τὰς ὑδάτων ἐγχύσεις σπερμάτων ἔχειν τάξιν. Ἡ δὲ γῆ μήτηρ, διὰ τὸ δέχεσθαι ταῦτα καὶ τίκτειν. L. 1. c. 6.

(a) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 11. & 37.

(b) De L. L. l. 4.

(c) Grot. Dict. Poet. p. 117.

(d) Iſthic eſt is Jupiter, quem dico, quem Græci vocant aera: Qui ventus eſt & nubes, himber poſtea, atque ex himbre frigus; ventus poſt fit, aer denuo. Hæc propter Jupiter ſunt iſta, quæ dico tibi: Qui mortaleis atque urbeis belluaſque omneis juvat. Quòd hic omneis & ſub hoc. Eundemque appellans dicit Ennius, Divumque hominumque Pater Rex. Varro ſupr. p. 18.

(e) Marſham. can. chr. p. 258. ed. Lipſ. Windet. de vit. funct. S. 3.

(f) L'Emper. not. in Iacchiad. in Dan. p. 116, 117, 209, 214.

(g) Idem Not. in Abarb. in Iſa. 30. p. 61, &c. Hulſ. Theol. Jud. p. 437.

(h) p. 274.

ſeeſt the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Hoſt of Heaven, ſhouldeſt be driven to Worſhip them, and Serve them, which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. But the Lord hath taken you, and brought you forth out of the Iron Furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a People of inheritance, as ye are this day. Clemens, who at a great rate of Extravagance hath diſcours'd for the Greek Philoſophy, at the ſame rate hath diſcours'd for the Gentiles Religion of Aſtrolatry; that they were in part Religious by it, and that the Worſhip of the Stars was the way which was given them, to raiſe themſelves unto God. (i) God, who hath preſcience, knew, that the Gentile would be a Non-Believer, nevertheleſs, that he might not want ſuch Perfection as was competible to him, God gave him Philoſophy, but before Faith. He gave alſo the Sun, Moon and Stars for Religious Worſhip, which God hath made for the Nations, ſaith the Law; that they might not be totally Atheous, and totally Periſh. Clemens is follow'd by (k) Origen and Euſebius; who ſaith; It was requiſite, for them (the Gentiles,) to make choice of the moſt excellent parts of Heaven, leſt ſeeking after God and buſying themſelves about things inviſible, they ſhould ſtumble upon the Aerial Demons. Some ſuppoſe, that the Senſe of Moſes is; that God divided the Sun, Moon and Stars to the mundane Nations, ſo as to permit the Worſhip of them to the Gentiles, but that he ſtrictly forbiddeth it to his own peculiar People; and to this Senſe Grotius inclineth: but aſſuredly there is no foundation for any of theſe odd Conceits in the Moſaic Text, the ſeveral Clauſes whereof are ſo many diſſuaſives from Aſtrolatry. For that Moſes may alienate the Iſraelites Minds from it, he repreſenteth to them, of how diſſonant a Character the Stars are from their God, and of how diſſonant a Character themſelves are from other People. The Stars are not any religiouſly adorable Objects, but ought to be conſider'd as the Clouds and Rain, Act. 14. 17. as the Works of Gods general Beneficence (that is the true Notion of them) which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. This diſtribution of them in Creation and Providence is remote from the Inſtitution of Sanctity, and Iſraelitical Theiſm; and the Stars themſelves are ſo remote from the Divinity, that they are nothing better than things of common mundane Nature, and of the common mundane Nations, Dona Dei ſine Deo, Gifts of God but without God, Godleſs Bounties. They are great utilities to the World, and inſtances of God's Beneficence to all Nations, all Nations therefore are Objects of God's Beneficence: But not of ſuch Beneficence as his redeemed Iſrael, they are not Nations of his Election and Inſtitution of Sanctity, as the Nation of Iſrael is, (which therefore is under the mightieſt Obligations to be Gods Religioniſts, and not Star Worſhippers,) which the Lord hath taken and brought forth out of the Iron-furnace, even out of Egypt, to be unto him a People of inheritance. Agreably to this diſſonant Character of Iſrael from other Nations the Book Coſri thus diſcourſeth. (l) Moſes in the Introduction of his Speech unto Pharaoh ſaith, the God of the Hebrews hath ſent me unto thee. He did not ſay, the God of Heaven and Earth hath ſent me unto thee; nor did he ſay, my Creator, or thy Creator. The like Introduction God maketh in ſpeaking to the People of Iſrael, Exod. 20. 2. I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the Land of Egypt; not I am Creator of the World and your Creator. The Jews Inſtitution therefore and their near Relation to God (for their Church was not a Society of meer Creator and rational Creatures, nor did they acknowledge and Worſhip God as meer Creator of all things, but as God-redeemer of a peculiar People) ſetteth them at a great remove from the Heathens Religion of Aſtrolatry, which was doubtleſs the principal and primitive Branch of their Idolatry, as Maimonides ſaith. (m) In the days of Enoſh the Sons of Men grievouſly err'd, and the Wiſe-men of that Age became brutiſhly ſtupid (even Enoſh himſelf being of their number,) and their Error was this; that ſince God had created the Stars and Spheres to govern the World, and placing them on high had beſtow'd this honour upon them, that they ſhould be his Miniſters and ſubſervient Inſtruments, Men ought therefore to Praiſe them, Honour and Worſhip them. There is a miſtake touching Enoſh and ſomething of Self-contradiction alſo viſible in this Doctor's account of the Origin of Idolatry (as will be noted hereafter:) But theſe intermixtures of Folly are no prejudice (n) to the wiſdom and reaſonableneſs of his Hypotheſis, that the firſt original Idolatry of the Heathen was the Worſhip of the Stars, which they commonly call the Senſible and Viſible Gods. So Philo diſcourſing of the Creation of Heaven, ſaith, (o) It was to be the moſt ſacred Manſion-houſe both of the Inviſible and viſible Gods. Where it is again obſervable, that Philo like an Orthodox Philoſophic Pagan (for ſuch he was more than a Jew) calleth the Stars Gods. The proclivity of Mankind to this ſort of Idolatry in the elder times is viſible, Job 31. 26, 27. If I beheld the Sun when it ſhined, or the Moon walking in brightneſs, and my heart hath been ſecretly enticed, or my mouth hath kiſs'd my Hand.

V. Several Parties of the Pagan Religioniſts had their ſeveral Aſtral and Aſtrological Deities, of which number (agreeably to the Antiquity of Aſtrolatry and Aſtrology) ſeveral of the Deities (p) that occur in the old Teſtament manifeſtly are. For the Star-worſhip of the ancient times was the ſame with that of the Indians and other barbarous Nations of theſe latter Ages, (q) that ſuppoſe twelve Stars (which they adore) to preſide over the twelve Months; that every Animal hath its like in Heaven, whence it is procreated and receiveth its growth; that the Stars are of ſeveral Faculties and Offices (whence they adore them, as need requireth;) one Star preſideth over Bears and Tygers, another is the Keeper of their Cattel; ſome of them are addicted to the Worſhip of Lyra, others adore the Pleiades, and others are the Devoto's of the Northern Polar Star. (r) The Arabic Writers report, that the Arabians and Indians differ'd from others in their Method of Aſtrological Obſervation and Divination (for in their Aſtrological Judgments they had greater regard to the fix'd Stars than to the Planets;) and that the Indian Zabii were different from the Chaldean and Grecian Zabii in this; theſe latter worſhipp'd the Planets in chief, the former the fix'd Stars. (s) Among the old Arabian Tribes there was ſome diverſity of Religion; for Hamyar worſhipp'd the Sun, Cenanah the Moon, Miſah the Star Aldobran (the Bull's Eye,) Lachamus and Jedamus worſhipp'd Jupiter, Tai the Star Sohail or Canopus,

(i) Strom. l. 6. p. m. 482.

(k) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 5. p. 236. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 1. c. 9. de Dem. ev. l. 4. c. 8. Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 7.

(l) p. 18. ed. Buxt.

(m) De Idololatr. c. 1.

(n) Dion. Voſſ. not. in Maim. de Idol. p. m. 2, 4.

(o) Θεῶν ἀοράτων τε καὶ αἰσθητῶν ἔμελλεν οἶκος ἔσεσθαι ἱερώτατος. De Mund. Opif. p. 4. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(p) Hotting. Hexaem. p. 117.

(q) Hoffman. umbr. in Luce p. 93, 94.

(r) Pocock. ſpec. p. 163.

(s) Ibid. p. 5.

nopus, Nai the Star Alſhaari-lobur, or the Dog-Star, and in Abul-Pharagius (t) the Zabii are ſaid to have the Arctic Pole for their Kebla. Which is hugely Diſſonant from the ancient Magi, (u) who were taught by Zoroaſter, to make the Eaſt (the Quarter whence the Luminaries aroſe) their Kebla (the place or Region towards which Men turn themſelves when they pray, as the Muhammedans towards Mecca, is call'd the Kebla.) The Rabbins ſuppoſe, that the Pagan Religioniſts are differenc'd by a Diverſity of their Aſtral Deities, (w) That all people have a Star and a Planet and a known Prince, which are inferionr to the Angels of God : As it is ſaid in Daniel, the Prince of the Kings of Perſia, and the Prince of the Kingdom of Grecia. Theſe they make their Gods by ſerving them. So the Syrians are known to have had a particular Veneration for the Conſtellation Piſces, the Egyptians for Sothis or the Dog-Star (from whoſe riſing they reckon'd the beginning of their Year, and of their Month Thoth, and made their Prognoſticks for the enſuing Year; their Nilus alſo beginneth his increaſe at that time :) So the Idolatrous Iſraelites had a particular Veneration for the Planet Saturn, as the Prophet ſaith, Amos 5. 26.

וּנְשָׂאתֶם אֵת סִכּוּת מַלְכְּכֶם But ye have born the Tabernacle (Tent or Pavillion) of your King,
וְאֵת כִּיּוּן צַלְמֵיכֶם and Chiun your Images (their Images were ſo many Chiuns) כּוֹכַב אֱלֹהֵיכֶם the Star of your God.

There will not be any thing of difficulty in this Prophetic Text, nor in S. Stephen's verſion of it (Act. 7. 43.) if theſe two things be conſider'd. Firſt, that Chium is the Planet Saturn, that Remphan or Rephan is an Egyptian Name for that Planet (therefore the ſame with Chiun,) and conſequently Saturn was the idolatrous Iſraelites King; agreeably whereunto an Arabic Writer affirmeth, (x) that Satrun is a Syriac word and ſignifieth King. Another thing to be conſider'd in this Prophetic Text and S. Stephen's Verſion of it, is the Phraſe of taking up and bearing the Star of their God, which the idolatrous Iſraelites are ſaid to do, becauſe they took up and bare the Symbol thereof (moſt of the Images of the oriental Pagans (y) had relation to ſome Star or Planet;) for they that carry the Symbol of a Deity are uſually ſaid, to carry the Deity.

If the Iſraelites deify'd the Aſtral or Planetary Saturn (which was but one Notion of him,) it cannot reaſonably be ſuppos'd, that they neglected to Worſhip him in the other uſual Notions of the God Saturn (the Star of your God ſignifieth both the Star which you Deify, and alſo which relateth to, and beareth the Name of your God;) in ſuch latitude and variety of Notion this Deity was their King (Malcham your King is his Name, Zeph. 1. 5.) their Baal, Moloch or Milcom. For that theſe Names denote Saturn the Supreme Deity of the oriental Pagans, appeareth from the general conſent of the ancient Writers. (z) They all affirm that Beel is Chronos, that the orientals called Chronos Belus and Baal (the ſame with Moloch, Jer. 19. 5.) and that the Phenicians and their Colonies ſacrific'd their Children to Saturn. If Saturn was the Supreme Deity of the Popular oriental Pagans (of which we have great aſſurance,) it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe him the Syrians Rimmon, (a) who hath his Name from רום which denoteth his Highneſs. And doubtleſs the Syrians Worſhip of Saturn in other Notions was (like the idolatrous Iſraelites) complicated with the Worſhip of the Planetary Saturn, who is altiſſimo orbe (as Tacitus ſaith) and therefore fitly denominated Rimmon. Agreeably whereunto Plotinus and other Platoniſts ſay, (b) that Saturn being ſublime and next to the Supreme Heaven, whence Souls deſcend into Bodies, be endoweth the deſcending Soul with the Virtue of underſtanding and contemplating ſublime things. So R. Iſaac Caro ſaith; (c) that according to the Opinion of all the Aſtrologers Saturn is Iſrael*'s Star, that the Rational Soul, the Power of Cogitation and of knowing all Myſteries are in his Portion, as alſo the Houſe of the Sanctuary, the Hebrew-tongue and the Law of* Iſrael.

As the idolatrous Iſraelites were ſometimes the Religioniſts of a particular Planet : So they were the Religioniſts of the Septenary of the Planets, (d) as ſome interpret the Prophet Iſa. 65. 11. Ye are they that prepare a Table (Lagad) for that Troup, and that furniſh the Drink-offering (Lammeni) unto that number. Agreeably to the Aſtrologizing humour of the Chaldeans the Hebrew Doctors rightly underſtand that Speech of Leah, Gen. 30. 11. (Bagad) in an Aſtrological Senſe, (e) good Luck cometh, or an happy Star (ſome underſtand it (f) of the Aſtrologers Part of Fortune :) in like manner the Rabbins ſuppoſe, that this Text of the Prophet ought to be underſtood agreeably to the Genius of oriental Paganiſm, (g) that Gad and Meni are the Names of Aſtral and Aſtrological Deities. But Meni is of great Affinity with Menes a deify'd Pagan Hero, (h) of whom ſome underſtand it : Others underſtand it of an Arabian Idol Manah, (i) that was thought to have the Virtue of procuring the benign influx of the Stars for cauſing Rain, which the Arabians counted one of the greateſt Goods that could befal them, and which together with the Winds, Heat and Cold they attributed to the influence of the Stars, accounting this one of their principal Sciences, to have the Learning and Skill touching the Virtue of the Stars in cauſing Rain. Both theſe latter Interpretations are liable to this Exception; Gad and Meni, according to the uſual Mode of ſpeaking in Scripture, ſeem to be exegetical of each other; and therefore I chuſe rather, to interpret that Troup and Number of the Hoſt of Heaven or Septenary of the Planets.

VI. We do but grope in ſeveral Affairs of Antiquity, as appeareth from our ſlender Notices of ſeveral of the Deities of the Oriental Pagans. We have no notices of the Babylonian Idol Merodach, Jer. 50. 2. who yet ſeemeth very plainly, to have the Babylonian Mor (Dominus) in his Name. And if his Name was from מר and רְדָה (which denoteth expulſion,) it ſignifieth a Deus Averruncus of the Babylonians. The ſignification of the Name Sheſhach, (Jer. 25. 26. and 51. 41.) is now loſt. It is thought, to denote one of the Babylonian Deities : But I am prone to think, that Sheſhach was no Name of a Deity, that Shach and Sheſhach in ancient times denoted Mirth and Joy, Drink and Revelling, that the Babylonian revelling, Saturnalia, were thence denominated Sacea, and that the City Babylon is called Sheſhach, to denote it a joyous revelling City. As this conjecture is not improbable (for the Deſolation of Babylon is foretold under the Name of Drinking, Jer. 25. 26. and the City was taken by Cyrus (t) Hiſt. Dyn. p. 184.

(u) Pocock. ſpec. p. 148.

(w) Moſes G. ap. Druſ. in Deut. 4. 19. Hulſ. Theol. Jud. p. 437.

(x) Pocock. ſupr. p. 390.

(y) Grot. not. in Jer. 10. 3. Iſa 24. 21.

(z) V. Petit. var. Lect. c. 1. Selden de D. Syr. Synt. 1. c. 6. Synt. 2. c. 1. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 4, 5. Theoph. ad Autol. l. 3. p. 139.

(a) Grot. not. in 2 King. 5. 18.

(b) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 34.

(c) De Dieu not. in Act. 7. 43.

(d) Vatabl. in loc.

(e) Full. Miſc. l. 5. c. 17.

(f) Seld. de D. Syr. Synt. 1. c. 1.

(g) Pocock. Spec. p. 92, 93.

(h) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. Diſſ. 2. c. 2. S. 2.

(i) Pocock. ſupr. p. 92, & p. 163.

at the Revelling Feſtival time of the Sacea :) So ſome probabilities may be propos'd touching moſt of the Deities of the Colonies transplanted into Samaria. 2 King. 17. 29, 30, 31. Every Nation made Gods of their own, and put them in the houſes of the high places, which the Samaritans had made, every Nation in the Cities where they dwelt. And the Men of Babylon made Succoth Benoth, and the Men of Cuth made Nergal, and the Men of Hamath made Aſhima. And the Avites made Nibchaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their Children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech the Gods of Sepharvaim. Of the two firſt of this Rabble of Deities Mr. Selden hath inveſtigated very good Notices. He ſuppoſeth, that Succoth Benoth ſignifieth the Tabernacles of the Daughters, which were the Temple of the Babylonians Venus Militta ; and that Nergal denoteth that unextinguiſhable fire, which the Perſians kept in their Pyræths (Septs or Incloſures thereof) and worſhipp'd. Of Aſhima we have no Memoirs worth conſidering : But of Nibchaz and Tartak the Rabbins ſay, that the former was a Dog, and the latter an Aſs ; whence ſome ſuppoſe, that Nibchaz was Latrator Anubis. If Nibchaz was Latrator Anubis, which the Etymology of the Name maketh very probable (for Nibchaz is from נבח which denoteth Barking,) it muſt be a Symbol of the God Mercury ; and if Nibchaz was a Symbol of the God Mercury, Tartak may be probably ſuppos'd, to have been a Symbol of the God Mars (to whom ſome Northern Warlike Nations (k) ſacrific'd an Aſs,) for Monimus and Azizus, (l) Mercury and Mars, were copulate or conjunct Deities in ſome parts of the Eaſt, as Nibchaz and Tartak undoubtedly were. In the Name of one of the Sepharvites Deities, Adrammelech, there is the Notion of Superiority ; (m) for Addir ſignifieth Sublime, and therefore Adrammelech is ſupernal King. In the Name of the other there is the Notion of Inferiority ; for probably it is deriv'd from Melech and צָנָה which ſignifieth depreſſit ; whence we may reaſonably ſuppoſe Adrammelech and Anammelech (to whom the Sepharvites burnt their Children) the one a ſupernal, the other an infernal Saturn, agreeable to the Stygian Jupiter of the Gentile Theology. And ſeeing both Adrammelech and Anammelech muſt be ſuppos'd the Saturn of the Orientals (as appeareth from their Names and their Rite of Worſhip,) and both of them cannot be one and the ſame Saturn, is it not neceſſary to ſuppoſe the one a ſupernal, the other an infernal Saturn ? There are other Deities of the oriental Pagans, which are fairly reducible to Saturn (as Niſroch Sennacherib's God was Saturn, if the Story be true, (n) that his two Sons ſlew him with the Sword, becauſe he had vow'd to Sacrifice them :) But inſtead of purſuing that Argument, we will infer from our account of the Sepharvites Deities, that the Saturn of the Orientals cannot be the Sun only ; for there can be no ſuch thing as an infernal Sun. Or if any other Notion of this pair of Deities may be excogitated, yet their Names imply, that there was a twofold Moloch or Saturn in the oriental Pagans Theology, and conſequently their Saturn cannot be the Sun only.

VII. But before we can repreſent the true and adequate Notion of the oriental Saturn or Moloch, it is requiſite to diſtinguiſh the various Acceptations and Notions of Saturn, Jupiter and other Deities in the Gentile Theology. Sometimes they are taken κοσμικῶς, Coſmically, as when Jupiter is ſaid to be the whole World or the Soul of it, and Saturn is confounded with Uranus, as we have ſeen from Varro. Sometimes they are taken ἀστροειδῶς, Aſtrally, as when by Jupiter is meant the Sun, or the Planet ſo called : So the higheſt of the Planets is a Saturn. Sometimes they are taken φυσικῶς, Phyſically ; as when by Saturn is meant Time, and by Jupiter ſome Elementary Nature. So Empedocles calleth (o) the igneous Nature or Ether Jupiter, the Air Juno, the Earth Pluto, and the Water Neſtis. Sometimes the Names of the Pagan Deities ſignifie ἱστορικῶς, Hiſtorically or Herologically, in which Notion there are many Joves * and not a few Saturns. Sometimes the Pagan Deities are of ſuch a Notion, as reſembleth deify'd Hero's, yet are not deify'd Hero's, but of another kind, originally Gods or Demons, which belong to the Pneumatology of the inviſible World, and therefore their Names in this Notion may fitly be ſaid to ſignifie πνευματολογικῶς, Pneumatologically. Such a Pneumatological kind of Jupiter was the Chieftain of the Dii Conſentes ; for the Romans ſuppos'd him a Deity always Celeſtial, yet this Chieftain of Deities always Celeſtial ſo far reſembled a deify'd Hero, that they ſuppos'd, (p) he might be drawn down from Heaven by their Charms and Sacrifices, and therefore ſtiled him Jupiter Elicius. So the Poet Virgil repreſenteth, not an Herological kind of Saturn born in Crete, but a Pneumatological kind of Deity originally Celeſtial, (q) that fled from Jupiter's Arms and lay hid in Latium. Sometimes the Names of the Pagan Deities (Saturn, Jupiter and ſuch more) ſignifie ἀκροαματικῶς, Acroamatically, thoſe Deities, that are of Nature aud Notion Acroamatical. As Plato in his Cratylus endeavouring to make good Senſe of the Fable, that Jupiter is the Son of Saturn aud Saturn the Son of Uranus, interpreteth it in this manner. To ſay, that Jupiter is the Son of Chronos, may ſeem contumelius, to one that heareth it. Εὔλογον δὲ, μεγάλης τινὸς διανοίας ἔκγονον εἶναι τὸν Δία, but it is reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that Jupiter (the Soul of the World) is the Off-ſpring of a certain great Mind or Intellect. (r) This great Mind or Intellect is the Son of Uranus, as it is ſaid ; for the ſupernal Aſpect or looking upwards is fitly called Urania. Plato ſuppoſeth, that as the great Soul hath its Original from a great Mind, ſo that great Mind hath its Origin from a ſuperiour Principle, and that this is the meaning of the Fable. But of this ſort of Acroamatical or Myſtic-metaphyſical Deities it is not poſſible, that any ſhould be found in the Popular-Pagan Theology.

In the ſame Latitude and variety of Notion with the European, Saturn and Jupiter, the Baal or Moloch of the Oriental Pagans muſt be underſtood ; for according to the Senſe and Interpretation of the Ancient Writers the Oriental Baal or Moloch is both the European Saturn and Jupiter. As Jupiter and Saturn alſo (s) hath the Name of Deorum Princeps, Chieftain of Deities : (t) So Moloch undoubtedly hath his Name as being the King and greateſt of the Gods. The Phenicians and Syrians call Saturn El, and Bel, and Bolathen, (u) ſaith Damaſcius. So Apollinaris, (w) The (k) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 16. & l. 2. c. 13.

(l) Ibid. l. 2. c. 5. & c. 32.

(m) Ibid. c. 37.

(n) V. Grot. not. in 2. Reg. 19. 37.

(o) Plutarch. de placit. phil. l. 1. c. 3.

* Vives in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 18. c. 15.

(p) Elmenhorſt. in Arnob. p. 155. Plutarch. in Numa.

(q) Primus ab Æthereo venit Saturnus Olympo
Arma Jovis fugiens, &c. Æn. l. 8.

(r) Ἔστι δὲ οὗτος οὐρανοῦ υἱός, ὡς λόγος· ἡ δ᾽ αὖ ἐς τὸ ἄνω ὄψις καλῶς ἔχει τοῦτο τὸ ὄνομα καλεῖσθαι οὐρανία, ὁρῶσα τὰ ἄνω.

(s) Elmenhorſt. in Min. Fæl. p. 209.

(t) Dion. Voſſ. in Maim. de Idol. c. 6. S. 4.

(u) Phot. cod. 242.

(w) The Greeks call Baal, Bel, which is ſaid to be the ſame with Saturn. So Procopius. (x) Bel is called by the Greeks,Chronos, to whom Mankind ſacrific'd their deareſt Pledges. The Saturn whoſe rite of worſhip was the Humane Sacrifices, was thought by the Fathers generally, to be the European Saturn, as is plain from the reaſon (y) which they give of the Congruity of ſuch a Sacrifice; Quia propriis filiis non pepercit, becauſe he ſpar'd not his own Children, but devour'd them. So Learn'd Men generally agree, (z) that the old Hetrurians (from whom the Romans took a great part of their Sacra) were originally Aſiaticks, that the old Hetruſcan Language hath almoſt all its ſacred Names à Syris, from the Orientals, and therefore the Hetrurian Saturn was originally Oriental, and deriveth his Name from סתר, either as that word ſignifieth to lie hid, or as it ſignifieth, to hide and protect, which is the Office of a King or מלך, by which Name the Orientals call'd their Saturn. Of the Oriental Saturn Servius ſaith, (a) It is manifeſt, the Aſſyrians worſhipp'd Saturn, which ſame is ſaid to be the Sun alſo; that is, Saturn is both Saturn and the Sun) and they worſhipp'd Juno. Amongſt the Aſſyrians Bel is ſaid to be by a certain reaſon of the Sacra both Saturn and the Sun. Agreeably to the European Saturn the Saturn of the Orientals was in part, and in a certain Notion and Acceptation the Sun; their Bel was a Complication of Saturn (in other Acceptations) and of the Sun; (b) and of Jupiter alſo, as Servius's Diſcourſe implieth; for he ſaith, The Aſſyrians worſhipp'd Saturn and Juno; therefore their Bel or Saturn was Jupiter. (c) So Beroſus, Herodotus, Menander, Dius and other ancient Writers agree, that Belus is by Interpretation Zeus or Jupiter; (d) the Phenician's Beelſamen is by Interpretation Jupiter Olympius; and the Learned agree, that the Cretians had their Jupiter from the Gazites (who were Philiſtines) and from their Marnas (which ſignifieth Lord of Men) the ſame with Baal; which inferreth, that the Aſiatic Pagans had one Jupiter in common with the European; (e) for that Jupiter reigneth in Heaven, is (ſaith Pauſanias) the common Language of all Men.

It may ſeem perhaps an Incongruity in the Ancient Writers, to interpret Baal both Saturn and Jupiter, for the European Saturn and Jupiter are ſeveral Deities. But although in ſome Notions and Acceptations they are ſeveral Deities, yet in others they are the ſame Deity, as we have ſeen in Varro, who calleth Heaven Saturn and Jupiter Pater. (f) Jupiter Latialis was in his Feſtival at Rome honour'd with an ἀνθρωποθυσία, Humane Sacrifice, the right of Worſhip which belong'd to old Saturn of Latium, which is an Indication, that they were the ſame Deity. They are the ſame Deity, when they are but ſeveral Names of the Sun; or if we ſuppoſe them ſeveral Deities, it is agreeable to the Genius of the Pagan Theology, to complicate them in one Baal or Moloch.

VIII. But becauſe the European Saturn and Jupiter, as alſo the Aſſyrian and Chaldean Belus, the Phenician Beelſamen, the Ammonites Moloch and the Perſian Mithras, are ſometimes underſtood of the Sun, hence ſome of the Learned infer (a groundleſs Conceit which they have entertain'd) that the Sun was the Oriental Pagans Supream Deity. Which groundleſs Conceit Macrobius may ſeem to favour in his Reduction of Saturn, Jupiter, Apollo, Mercury and other Pagan Deities to the Sun. But Macrobius hath not attempted, to reduce all the Pagan Deities to the Sun (but almoſt all the Sub-celeſtial Gods only,) nor hath he conſider'd the ſeveral Notions and Acceptations of the Pagan Deities. The Stoicks ſay, that one God (the Univerſal) Jupiter is Mercury, Æolus, Bacchus, and ſuch more; but do not hereby intend to deſtroy the particular Deities known by thoſe Names: So Macrobius hath ſhew'd, that Saturn, Jupiter, Apollo, Mercury, and ſuch more, are one God, the Sun; but he hath not ſhew'd, nor was it his Opinion, that there is no other ſort of Saturn, Jupiter, Apollo, Mercury or the like) in the Pagan Theology, ſave only the Sun. If by this Name Jupiter ἀστροειδῶς, (Aſtrally) the Sun is ſignify'd, by the ſame Name κοσμικῶς, the World (or the Mind thereof) is ſignify'd; and by the ſame Name φυσικῶς, an elementary Nature is ſignify'd; by the ſame Name πνευματολογικῶς, a great Genius is ſignify'd; by the ſame Name ἡρωικῶς, an Hero is ſignify'd; and by the ſame Name ἀκροαματικῶς, an Acroamatical Deity is ſignify'd. Agreeably to this medly of Polytheiſm in the European Pagan Theology the Oriental Baal or Moloch is Coſmical, Pneumatological, Aſtral, Phyſical, Hiſtorical, and alſo Acroamatical. For the firſt God in the Chalday Oracles that all Mankind are ignorant of, is an Acroamatical kind of Baal. A Coſmical Baal is viſible in the firſt of the Popular Pagan Deities Uranus, (g) a Deity that was worſhipp'd by Humane Sacrifices in Africa, Libya, and the Weſtern Iſlands. So Manaſſeh's Graven Image, 2 King. 21. 7. is thought to have been (h) a Statue of the Hoſt of Heaven, and that the Idol Baal was ſuch a Statue, the Language of the Scriptures is an Indication; for they uſually conjoyn the worſhip of Baal and the Hoſt of Heaven, 2 King. 17. 16. They worſhipp'd all the Hoſt of Heaven and ſerved Baal. 2 King. 21. 3. and 23. 5. They burnt Incenſe unto Baal, to the Sun, and to the Moon, and to the Planets, and to all the Hoſt of Heaven. So a Learned Man of our own ſuppoſeth, (i) that the whole Syſtem and Univerſality of the Celeſtial Bodies was the grand Baal of the Gentiles, according to one reading of Tobit 1. 5. The Houſe of my Father ſacrific'd, τῇ Βαὰλ τῇ δυνάμει, to Baal the Hoſt. But by Baal and Moloch the Scriptures uſually mean the Image or Idol known by that Name. (k) The Idol Moloch (as ſome of the Rabbins deſcribe it) was an hollow Image of Braſs having ſeven Rooms or Apartments according to the number of the Planets; which Rabbinical Deſcription ſpeaketh it the Statue of a Coſmical Deity. The ſame Judgment muſt be made of the Perſian Mithras, in whoſe Sacra there was an aſcent of ſeven Gates repreſentative of the ſeven Planets (by which Souls deſcend) which Deſcription ſpeaketh him at once an Aſtrological-Magical and a Coſmical Deity. But the Oriental Pagans conſider'd this Coſmical Deity as the Material World complicate with the Regial Mind or Soul of it; for the Hiſtorian ſtileth the Hetrurian Saturn (originally Oriental) The giver and perfecter of all Happineſs to Men, (l) a Deity that comprehendeth the whole Nature of the World. There are many Notices in the Perſians Theology of a Jupiter diſtinct from the Sun, which Jupiter of theirs is the ſame with their Belus, (m) as he is repreſented by Agathias from ſeveral ancient Writers of the Aſiatic Affairs.

(w) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 7.

(x) In Eſai. cap. 46.

(y) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 291.

(z) Grot. not. in Matth. 12. 1. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 18. l. 2. c. 57. l. 7. c. 4. Pocock. Spec. p. 390.

(a) Aſſyrios conſtat Saturnum (quem eundem & ſolem dicunt) Junonemque coluiſſe. Apud Aſſyrios Bel dicitur, quadam ſacrorum ratione & Saturnus & Sol.

(b) Seld. de D. Syr. Proleg. c. 3.

(c) Ibid. Synt. 2. c. 1.

(d) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 7.

(e) Δία γὰρ ἐν οὐρανῷ βασιλεύειν, οὗτος μὲν λόγος κοινὸς πάντων ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπων.

(f) V. Annot. in Min. Fœl. p. 199. 297.

(g) Betuleius in Lactant. p. 51.

(h) Selden. de D. Syr. Synt. 2. c. 10.

(i) Fuller. Miſc. l. 2. c. 7.

(k) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 5. l. 7. c. 2.

(l) Πᾶσαν δὲ περιειληφότα τὴν τοῦ κόσμου φύσιν. Dion. Halicarn. Antiq. l. 1. p. 24.

(m) Seld. ſupr. ſynt. 2. c. 1. Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 15.

In their Religious Pomp and Proceſſion (n) a Chariot was drawn ſacred to Jupiter (diſtinct from the Sun; which Jupiter (to whom this Chariot was ſacred) is moſt reaſonably to be ſuppos'd a Pneumatological Jupiter (or Belus) the ſame with Jupiter the Chieftain of the Romans Dii Conſentes. Such a Jupiter (or Belus) we may reaſonably ſuppoſe, to have been called by the Perſians Ζεὺς πατρῷος, their Country-Jupiter (a Deity diſtinct from and Superior to the Sun) as in Cyrus's Prayer in Xenophon, (o) Thou our Country-Jupiter, and thou Sun, and all ye other Gods, accept theſe Euchariſtical Sacrifices. Of an Aſtral Baal or Moloch we have ſeen Inſtances in the Sun, in Chiun, Rimmon and the Planet Jupiter, call'd by the Chaldeans (p) Moloch Baal, and by the Phariſees (q) Coceb Baal. A Phyſical Baal or Moloch (agreeable to the European Pagans Jupiter, which was the Igneous Nature, is viſible in the God Fire, (r) a well-known Deity of the Oriental Pagans (from which the Europeans deriv'd their veſtal Fire;) Moloch was an Idol in which they worſhipp'd the Fire, (s) as R. Levi affirmeth. The Hiſtorical or Herological Baal of the Orientals is ſaid to be (t) the ſame with their Mars, whom ſome ſuppoſe to be Nimrod the Father of Ninus, others ſuppoſe him to be Thurras the Succeſſor of Ninus, moſt probably he was Ham the Son of Noah. But howſoever theſe things were, an Herological Jupiter Belus (Aſſyrian or Phenician) is remembred by the Poet Virgil.

(n) Curtius l. 3.

(o) Ζεῦ πατρῷε ϗ ἥλιε, ϗ πάντες θεοὶ δέχεσθε τάδε χαριστήρια. Inſtit. Cyr. l. 8. p. 184.

(p) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 33.

(q) Seld. ſupr.

(r) Voſſ. ſupr. c. 64, 65.

(s) Druſ. not. in Lev. 18. 21.

(t) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 1. c. 16. & 25. Gale in Phornut. de nat. Deor. p. 56.

> Implevitque mero pateram, quam Belus & omnes
> A Belo ſoliti —— ——

Heliogabalus's Deity, Sol Elagabalus, is a Belus Demiurgus, if the Etymology of his Name be from Elah Gabul (u) which ſignifieth ὁ ἥλιος δημιουργός, or God the Creator. But probably his Name ſignifieth nothing more than Eloah Geboul, the God of the Coaſt, or Deus Gabalæ (a Syrian City) the Syrian Deity, under which Notion Heliogabalus would have his Deity introduc'd and conſider'd at Rome. The Symbol of this Deity was a great Stone of the faſhion of a Cone, one of the Bætulia famous in the Oriental Parts, many of which were ſeen by Aſclepiades on Mount Libanus near Heliopolis in Syria, of which ſome were conſecrated to one, others to another, to Saturn, Jupiter, the Sun and others, (w) as Damaſcius reporteth. From which Account of the Oriental Bætulia it is manifeſt, that there was in the Theology of the Popular Oriental Pagans a Saturn and a Jupiter diſtinct from and ſuperiour to the Sun; as Lampridius alſo ſaith of Heliogabalus's Deity, that ſome ſuppos'd him to be Jove, others the Sun. So Spartianus maketh a doubt touching a certain Temple, (x) whether it was built Jovi Syrio vel Soli, to the Syrian Jove or to the Sun. Agreeably to which Notices of the Oriental Pagan Theology and to our Account of the Sepharvites Adrammelech and Anammelech a not improbable Interpretation may be made of that Marble Inſcription at Palmyra in Syria (y).

(u) Fuller Miſc. l. 1. c. 14.

(w) Phot. Cod. 242.

(x) In vit. Caracall. in fin.

(y) Seld. de D. Syr. ſynt. 2. c. 1. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 5.

ΑΓΛΙΒΩΛΩ. ΚΑΙ. ΜΑΛΑΧ-ΒΗΛΩ. ΠΑΤΡΩΟΙϹ. ΘΕΟΙϹ.

To Aglibolus (or Aglibelus) and to Malachbelus, my Country Gods.

Some underſtand by this pair of Deities the Summer and Winter Sun: Others diſcerning the improbability of that Interpretation, underſtand by Malach-belus, the Moon, and by Agli-belus, the Sun, as being עגול בעל rotundus Dominus, of round Figure, or Lord of the round World. The reaſon which induceth them, to underſtand by Malach-belus the Moon, is, becauſe in the Marble-Table there are two Men ingraven (which are ſuppos'd to repreſent Aglibelus and Malach-belus) the latter of which hath the Moon on his Shoulders. But this Interpretation which maketh the Moon a Belus, and not only a Belus but a Malach-Belus or King-Belus, is quite againſt the Analogy of the Oriental Pagan Theology. And from the reaſon which induceth them to make it, I infer, that the full Title of Malach-belus is the ſublunary Malachbelus, or the Infernal Saturn. And if Malachbelus be the Infernal Saturn, Agli-belus is manifeſtly applicable to the Supernal. Howſoever this Conjecture ſhall approve it ſelf, it is certain, the Oriental Baal ought to be underſtood in very great latitude and variety of Notion; and there is the ſame reaſon for the Moabites and Madianites Deities, Chemoſh and Baal-peor, the Egyptians Oſiris and Jupiter-Ammon, and the Aſſyrian Adad, which (as Macrobius affirmeth) ſignifieth One, and is ſuppos'd to be that אחד One, Iſa. 66. 17. behind whom (his Idol or Temple) the Idolatrous Iſraelites are ſaid to purifie themſelves. If Adad ſignifieth One, ἀςεροειδῶς, he is the Sun, ἀκεραματικῶς, the Platonic Monad (which was originally oriental) κοσμικῶς the Univerſe (ἓν ϗ πάντα, One and All) more eſpecially the ſupernal part of it; for as Macrobius affirmeth, (z) The Aſſyrians ſubjoyn to Adad a Goddeſs called Atergatis, attributing the Power of all things to theſe two, underſtanding thereby the Sun and the Earth. Theſe copulate Deities could not be the Sun and the Earth only, but (a) Saturn and Rhea, Heaven and Earth (as we have ſeen from Varro;) Adad therefore is Uranus. And if Atergatis (b) is the Watery Nature, Adad φυσικῶς, muſt be the Igneous Nature. Adad is an uſual Name of Oriental Kings (as Ben-Adad) and therefore is ἱςορικῶς, a deify'd King, or Ἄδωδος βασιλεὺς θεῶν, Adad the King of the Gods, as Philo Byblius calleth him; which King of the Gods muſt in reaſon be thought (conformably to the European Jupiter) a Pneumatological Adad, a great Genius as well as a great Hero.

(z) Subjungunt eidem Deum nomine Adargatin (Atergatin) omnemque poteſtatem cunctarum rerum his duobus attribuunt, ſolem terramque intelligentes. Saturn. l. 1. c. 23.

(a) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 54.

(b) Ibid. c. 76.

From what hath been diſcours'd touching the various Notions and Acceptations of Saturn, Jupiter and the Oriental Baal; we may in ſome degree illuſtrate his copulate Deity Aſhtaroth or Aſtarte, Judg. 10. 6. and 12. 13. 1 Sam. 7. 4. and 12. 10. For as Baal is to be interpreted Jupiter; ſo (Baal and Aſhtaroth being copulate Deities) the genuine method of interpreting Aſtarte or Aſhtaroth is not in the firſt place, to interpret her the Moon, but Juno, which is comprehenſively and incluſively the Moon. (c) It is commonly ſaid, that Baal in the oriental parts is the Name of Jupiter, but Aſtarte of Juno. Doubtleſs Juno (ſaith S. Auſtin) is call'd by the Pæni Aſtarte; ſo the Sidonian and Carthaginian Goddeſs hath in the Poet the Name of Juno.

(c) Solet dici Baal nomen eſſe apud Gentes illarum partium Jovis, Aſtarte autem Junonis. S. Aug. ſup. Judic. Qu. 16.

> Hic Templum Junoni ingens Sidonia Dido
> Condidit —— ——

So in Lucian (who had inquir'd into theſe Matters) the Syrian Goddeſs to whom the City Hierapolis was ſacred, (d) is ſaid to be the Aſſyrian Juno.

(d) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 55.

Juno. Aſtarte therefore was the Oriental Pagans Queen of Deities, Βασίλεια Βῆλτις, and the Queen of Heaven (as our Tranſlation rendreth, Jer. 44. 17.) which ἀστεροειδῶς is the Moon. But φυσικῶς, Aſtarte, is the Earth, which is agreeable to the Theology of the European Pagans; for they called the Earth Juno. Atergatis alſo or Dagon, 1 Sam. 15. 2. was the Earth, which comprehendeth the Elements of Water; and therefore Aſtarte and Atergatis are of great Affinity (if not the ſame Deity) although their Symbols were diſſonant, the Symbol of Aſtarte being throughout a Woman, the Symbol of Atergatis being half a Woman and half a Fiſh; whence ſome (e) render, 1 Sam. 5. 5. Only the form of a Fiſh was left. Both theſe Deities are uſually interpreted Venus; and Aſtarte had in her Symbol an Ox's Horn, which ſheweth her to be Venus Urania, a Goddeſs that was firſt worſhipp'd by the Aſſyrians, from whom the Paphii in Cyprus and the Phenicians in Aſcalon receiv'd her Sacra, and the Cytherians learn'd them of the Phenicians, (f) as Pauſanias affirmeth. Which Account of the Origin of the worſhip of Venus Urania is an Inſtance of the Symphony between the Oriental and the European Pagans Theology, and ſheweth, that the latter is a deſcendent from the former.

IX. The Sun was of immenſe Veneration in the Heathen World (more eſpecially in the Eaſtern parts) and is of many Eminencies and Magnificences in the Pagan Theology; but hath no higher place in it than (g) that of Ἑβδομαγέτης (as the Ancients ſtil'd him) The Chieftain or Leader of the Septenary of the Planets, and King of the viſible Gods. So the Pagan Theologers (h) repreſent him, and ſo the Oriental Pagans conſider'd him as the Celeſtial Baal, Moloch, Adon, Lord and King, (i) to whom all the Celeſtial Gods (the Stars) are obſequious as to their Lord and Potentate. His Name ἥλιος is from the Hebrew El which is God's Name, and in the Writings of the Pagans he is ſtil'd God ſimply and without addition (as ὁ θεοῦ ἐνιαυτός, the Egyptians Civil or Heliacal Year was ſtil'd the Year of God) as being eminently ſuch. In their Inſcriptions his Stile is, Domino Soli, to the Lord the Sun, Deo Soli, to God the Sun, Omnipotens Deus, Almighty God. (k) Attis (the Sun) in an Inſcription is denominated ὕψιστος, the moſt high. Sometimes he is ſtil'd παντοκράτωρ, omni-imperial, the Attribute of Omniſcience is uſually given him, and the Oracle intitleth him Iao and the Supream Deity.

Φράζεο τὸν πάντων ὕπατον θεὸν ἔμμεν' Ἰάω.

But none of theſe μεγαλυσμοὶ, or Doxologies are ſo to be underſtood, as if his Deity was abſolutely Supream or Sovereign; for the Pagans uſually aſcribe the ſublimeſt ſort of Attributes to their Supra-demonial Gods. So when Maimonides ſaith of the Zabii, (l) According to them the Stars are Gods, but the Sun the greateſt God; This muſt be underſtood with reſpect to the Stars. And if ſome Egyptians in an Inſcription on an Obelisk ſtil'd the Sun (m) κτιστὴς τῆς οἰκουμένης, Opificer of the World (which Title ſignifieth, that he is eminently one of the Opificers of the World) it muſt not therefore be thought, that there was no other nor higher Sovereign Deity in the Egyptians Theology; for (to ſay nothing of their Acroamatical Theology) becauſe the Stars are igneous, (n) the Egyptians ſuppos'd, that Sol was the Son of Vulcan. That devotional Addreſs to the Sun in Jul. Firmicus, (o) O Sol the beſt and greateſt, ſeated in the midſt of Heaven, the Mind of the World and Temperature, the Guide and Prince of all; is to be underſtood in the Senſe of the Stoicks, who made the Sun the Supream Deity, but no otherwiſe than as the Hegemonicon or Principale of the great Mind or Soul of the World, the Jove of their Theology, and therefore not excluſively of ſuch a Jove. (p) The Perſians (ſaith Trogus in Juſtin) ſuppoſe the Sun, unum Deum, alone God, to which God they conſecrate Horſes. Some ancient Writers have the like Paſſages touching the Religion of the Maſſagetæ (miſunderſtood (q) of the Perſians) which if they deſign, to repreſent the Oriental Pagans as meer Helio-Theiſts, not Polytheiſts, are enormous miſtakes; but probably thoſe Authors mean nothing more, than that the Perſians and other Orientals were ſuperlative Helio-Theiſts, that ſuppos'd the Sun an Imperial Lord or Monarch of the viſible Mundane Syſtem, and therefore alone Lord or God; for a Monarch is alone Lord. So that Supream Title of the Sun in Philo Byblius's Account of the Phenician Theology, μόνος οὐρανοῦ κύριος, is literally the very ſame with Monarcha Cœli (Monarch of Heaven) and nothing more; which Title was given to the Sun by the generality of the Pagan Theiſts, who were far from ſuppoſing him abſolutely the Supream Deity. But in Philo Byblius this Title ſignifieth, that the Sun was abſolutely the Phenicians Supream Deity; for he reporteth from Sanchoniathon, (r) that the Phenicians had no immortal Gods ſave only the Sun, Moon, and Stars, and that their mortal Gods were deify'd Benefactors and Authors of Good to Men. And having repreſented a (Mythological) Coſmogony abſurdly Atheiſtical (that the Univerſe of things and of Mankind had their origin from Spirituous Air and Chaos) and peopled Phenicia with Inhabitants (the firſt of Human Race;) he reporteth of thoſe Phenicians, (s) They thought the Sun God, alone Lord of Heaven, calling him Beelſamen, which in the Phenician Tongue denoteth Lord of Heaven, but is the Grecians Zeus. Theſe Paſſages are alledg'd by Euſebius and (t) S. Cyril of Alexandria, to no better purpoſe than injuriouſly to miſrepreſent the Pagan Theology; for it is a great folly and injuſtice, from a fabulous Coſmogony (ſuch as Philo Byblius deſcribeth from Sanchoniathon) to make a Judgment of the Pagan Theology.

The fabulous Coſmogony could not be the Primitive and Original Theology of the Pagans, but is (comparatively ſpeaking) a late thing, if (as is generally and probably ſuppos'd) it had its origin from certain broken Traditions of the Moſaic Coſmopœia. Herodotus counteth it a late thing; (u) whence every one of the Gods was generated, or whether they all of them ever were, and what are their Forms, was not known till very lately. For I ſuppoſe, that Heſiod and Homer were not above four hundred Years my Seniors. And theſe were they that introduc'd the Theogonia amongſt the Greeks. The Heathen World had certainly an Heathen Religion and Theology long before the Greek Poets and the Gods of their Theogony (or Coſmogony) were in being, and long before the time of Moſes, with whom the Greek Poets (w) are obſerv'd

to

(e) Ouzel. in Min. Fel. p. 274.

(f) Voſſ. ſupr.

(g) Seld. de J. nat. & G. l. 3. c. 21.

(h) Plutarch. Qu. Plat. p. 1006. Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. s. 36, 37.

(i) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. diſſ. 13.

(k) Marſham. can. chr. p. 136. ed. Lipſ.

(l) Mor. Nev. Par. 3. c. 29.

(m) Fuller Miſc. l. 1. c. 14. Procl. in Tim. p. 308.

(n) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 64. Marſham. ſupr. p. 462.

(o) Sol optime, maxime, qui mediam cæli poſſides partem, mens mundi atque temperies, dux omnium princepſque. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. diſſ. 13.

(p) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 9.

(q) Ibid. Hiſt. Pelag. l. 3. Par. 3. Theſ. 6.

(r) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. 9, 10.

(s) Τὸν ἥλιον θεὸν ἐνόμιζον, μόνον οὐρανοῦ κύριον, Βεελσαμὴν καλοῦντες, ὅ ἐστι παρὰ Φοίνιξι κύριος οὐρανοῦ, Ζεὺς δὲ παρ' Ἕλλησι.

(t) C. Jul. l. 6. p. 205.

(u) Euterp. c. 53.

(w) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 1. S. 16.

to ſymbolize (ſome more and ſome leſs) in their Chaos, Erebus, Tartarus.

The fabulous Coſmogony was but in ſome degree receiv'd into the Pagans Religion; much of it remain'd properly Poetical, and was no part of the Greeks Civil Theology, which was their publick authoriz'd Religion. For Plato (x) hath with great freedom condemn'd Heſiod for lying, lying unhandſomly touching the Gods in his fabulous Theogonia (which ſort of Fables (y) the Romans alſo rejected;) yet he ſuppoſeth Men oblig'd in obedience to the Laws, to believe what the Poets have taught touching the generation of thoſe Genial kind of Gods, Oceanus, Tethys, Phorcys, Saturn, Rhea, Jupiter, Juno, and ſuch more. It ſhould ſeem the fabulous Theogony had in ſome degree the Countenance of the Laws, which yet did not ſettle any determinate Belief touching that grand Article of Religion, The Origin of the Univerſe, much leſs did they ſettle a determinate Belief of it in the fabulous Theogoniſts way.

The fabulous Coſmogony hath not a Demiurgic Zeus in it, yet ſuch a Zeus was an acknowledg'd Principle in the generally receiv'd Pagan Theology. (z) In the Orphic Theology Zeus is Coſmical and Demiurgic — ἁπάντων Ἀρχιγένεθλος, the beginning and Prince of all; agreeably whereto the Hierophantes in the Eleuſinian Myſteries (a) repreſented the Demiurgus; whence it appeareth, that there was ſuch a Demiurgic Principle as νοῦς or Mind in the Greek Theology long before Anaxagoras's time. Aratus's Zeus is Coſmical and Demiurgic — τάγε σήματ' ἐν οὐρανῷ ἐστήριξεν, he hath fixed the Signs in Heaven. The Oracle diſſwaded the Cnidians (b) from making their City an Iſland for this reaſon; Jupiter enim ſi voluiſſet, Inſulam feciſſet; Jupiter had made it an Iſland, if it had been his Will. The Pagan Theologers uſually teach, (c) The Gods are the makers of all things that were made; (d) ὦ Ζεῦ ϗ Θεοὶ πατέρες ϗ ποιηταὶ γῆς ϗ θαλάττης, O Jupiter and the Gods, the Fathers and Makers of the Earth and Sea. Throughout Univerſal Pagan Religioniſm Jupiter is intituled The Father of the Gods; he is ſo intituled by Homer and Heſiod, who although in their fabulous way of Coſmogony and Theogony (deriving all things and the Gods themſelves from the Ocean and the Chaos) they make no mention of a Demiurgic Zeus; yet there are ſeveral Paſſages in them, whence it appeareth, that they acknowledg'd that Pagan Religious Principle; as for inſtance, Heſiod ſaith, (e) The motion of Sun, the finiſhing of Winter Days is of Jupiter's appointment; which implieth, that the Order of the World is of his Conſtitution, and is beſt underſtood of a Coſmical Zeus.

The fabulous Coſmogony inverteth the Order of Nature and the Tenour of the Pagan Theology; of which therefore a Judgment muſt not be made from the fabulous Coſmogony. For according to the tenour of the Pagan Theology Heaven and Earth are the grand univerſal Parents, the one is the Father (Heaven) the Earth is the Mother; but according to the fabulous Coſmogony the Earth generateth the Starry Heaven (f) and is both Father and Mother unto it. Of the ancient Poets that were fabulous Theogoniſts Ariſtotle obſerveth, (g) They do not attribute Regnancy and Rule to thoſe things that are ſuppos'd, to have the Primacy (in order to Exiſtence) the Night, Uranus, Chaos or the Ocean, but to Jupiter. Becauſe they attributed the Rule and Principality to Jupiter, and acknowledg'd the Pagan Theopolity, they were Pagan Theiſts, not Atheiſts; but becauſe they did not attribute the Primacy of Exiſtence to that which hath the Rule and Principality, but made the worſt firſt (whereas the beſt ought to be the firſt) they did μεταβάλλειν τοὺς ἄρχοντας, change the chieftain things (as the Philoſopher ſpeaketh) and invert both the order of Nature and of the Greek Theology. So a Phenician fabulous Theogoniſt hath inverted the order of Nature and of the Phenician Theology.

The fabulous Coſmogony was a Tradition of ſeveral Poets, that were Pagan Theiſts; but of it ſelf it is perfectly Atheiſtic (one Form of Atheiſm;) and it is abſurd, to make a Judgment of the Pagan Theiſm from a Form of groſs Atheiſm. For it atheizeth that Love-Deity (the only Deity which it admitteth) which ſeveral of the Pagan Theologers celebrate as an active Principle in the Coſmogony, that decided the Contentions of the Chaos The Argonauticks attributed to Orpheus repreſent this Love as a ſelf-exiſtent Deity, calling it (h) Love, the moſt ancient of Gods, ſelf-perfect and mighty wiſe. Parmenides celebrateth this Deity, but not as an unmade Deity; for he ſaith of it, (i) He firſt made Love before all the other Gods. If we inquire of the Pagan Theologers, what they mean by this celebrated Love, Plutarch interpreteth it (k) of that Love and Deſire which is requiſite in Generation. Phornutus interpreteth it, (l) the impetus to Generation. Some will have it the Divine Love (the Love that God is) ſuch Love as cannot reaſonably be ſuppos'd to be found in Paganiſm. But becauſe Simmias Rhodius in his Hymn made in honour of it, deſcribeth this Love which is a Principle in the Coſmogony and more ancient than the other Gods) as of a nobler kind than the effeminate Love, it is reaſonable to interpret it the pagan Theologers celeſtial Cupid; agreeably to that ſaying of Pherecydes Syrus (which is meant of Jupiter's transforming himſelf into the ſhape of a Celeſtial Cupid) * εἰς ἔρωτα μεταβεβλῆσθαι τὸν Δία μέλλοντα δημιουργεῖν, Jupiter transform'd himſelf into Love, when he went about the Demiurgic Operation. The reaſon why theſe Pagan Theologers introduc'd Love (their Celeſtial Cupid) into the Coſmogony, was, becauſe they ſuppos'd a Love-Conſtitution of the Univerſe, which is the cauſe of the Harmony of it, as Gr. Naz. ſaith, (m) The artificer Logos hath combin'd the Univerſe by the Bonds of Love. So the Chalday Oracles ſay (n).

The Cauſe of all hath ſown in all the Seeds of flagrant Love,
The Bond of all, that nothing might for ever diſcord move.

Of this Love-Conſtitution of the Univerſe a Love-Deity independent upon the Chaos was ſuppos'd to be the efficient cauſe, and this was Pagan Theiſm; but in the fabulous Coſmogony this Love-Deity is made an Atheiſtic Principle; for it deriveth the Generation of all things from the Chaos and from Love, ſo as to make this Love-Deity (as well as all things elſe) the Off-ſpring of the Chaos. Thus the Coſmogony is repreſented in Ariſtophanes de Avibus. At firſt there was nothing but Night and Chaos, and Night laying an Egg, from thence was produc'd Love gliſtering with golden Wings (the Celeſtial Cupid,) which mingling with the Chaos generated Men and the Gods, that before had no Exiſtence. In Heſiod's Theogony the Love Deity ſeemeth to be repreſented as emerging out of the Chaos; for in this Order things ſucceed in it. (o) Chaos was firſt, next the broad-breaſted Earth, and Love the moſt beauteous of the Gods. In Homer's Theogony there is no Love-Deity, he repreſented the Gods as having their Original (p) wholly and ſolely from the Ocean (the fluid matter) and from Mother Tethys. In Sanchoniathon's fabulous Coſmogony there is a Love-Deity, but of no better Original than an Off-ſpring of the Chaos. For he ſuppoſeth, that at firſt there was nothing but Spirit or Tenebricoſe Air and Chaos. (q) But when Spirit became in Love with its own Principles, and a mixture was made, that Conjunction was called Cupid, or Deſire, which is the Principle of the Creation of all things.

(x) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 2. c. 7.

(y) Ibid. c. 8.

(z) Eugub. de Per. phil. l. 7. c. 10.

(a) Marſham. can. chr. p. 261. ed. Lipſ.

(b) Oenomaus ap. Euſeb. ſupr. l. 5. c. 26.

(c) Phornut. de nat. Deor p. 3.

(d) M. Tyr. diſſ. 34.

(e) Εὖτ' ἂν ἑξήκοντα μετὰ τροπὰς ἠελίοιο Χειμέρι' ἐκτελέσῃ Ζεὺς ἤματα —— Op. & Dies. l. 2.

(f) Γαῖα δέ τοι πρῶτον μὲν ἐγείνατο ἶσον ἑαυτῇ Οὐρανὸν ἀστερόενθ', ἵνα μιν περὶ πάντα καλύπτοι.

(g) Βασιλεύειν ϗ ἄρχειν φασίν, οὐ τοὺς πρώτους, οἷον Νύκτα ϗ οὐρανὸν, ἢ χάος, ἢ ϗ Ὠκεανὸν, ἀλλὰ τὸν Δία. Metaphyſ. l. 14. c. 4.

(h) Πρεσβύτατόν τε ϗ αὐτοτελῆ πολύμητιν Ἔρωτα. Eugubin. ſupr. l. 7. c. 10.

(i) Πρώτιστον μὲν Ἔρωτα θεῶν μητίσατο πάντων. Ibid. c. 12.

(k) Ἐρωτικ. p. 756.

(l) De nat. Deor. p. 39.

* Eugubin. ſupr. l. 7. c. 10.

(m) Τοῖς τῆς εὐνοίας δεσμοῖς ὁ τεχνίτης λόγος τὸ πᾶν συνέδησε. Or. 1. de pace, c. 199.

(n) Πᾶσιν ἐνέσπειρεν δεσμὸν πυριβριθῆ ἔρωτος
Ὄφρα τὰ πάντα μένῃ, χρόνον εἰς ἀπέραντον ἐρῶντα.

A fabulous Coſmogony might be amongſt the Phenicians as well as amongſt the Greeks: But that this ſhould be the Phenicians Theology, as Euſebius will have it, is as incredible and impoſſible as that Ariſtophanes's Coſmogony ſhould be the Greeks Theology. Euſebius could not be ignorant, (r) that Orpheus's Theology was a deſcendent from Egypt, that the Orphic Theology acknowledgeth an incorporeal Deity, and a Deity of the Univerſe, (s) that the Egyptians ſuppos'd the Deity, to pervade all things, (t) the Sun and Moon to have had an eternal Generation (and conſequently, that they were generated Deities,) that the Egyptians (u) acknowledg'd an Intellectual Demiurgus or Maker of the World called Cneph, and that (w) the Prieſts of Egypt had an Arcane Theology; nothing of this was unknown to Euſebius. And yet he ſuppoſeth, (x) that their Coſmogony was Atheiſtic from an αὐτοματισμός, Spontaneous Motion of the Elements, (y) that the Egyptians acknowledg'd no incorporeal Deity, nor any incorporeal Subſtance (as if the Doctrine of incorporeal Subſtance was peculiar to true Religion;) that the Men of ancient times (z) worſhipp'd only the Lights of Heaven, knowing nothing of the God of the Univerſe, (a) that the Phenicians and Egyptians ſuppos'd the Sun, Moon and Stars the ſole Cauſes of Generation and Corruption, and that the latter knew no other Gods but thoſe and the Elements. Such Contradictions they muſt admit, that admit this Report, that the Sun was abſolutely the Supreme Deity of the Oriental Pagans.

X. At the riſe of Paganiſm Heaven and Earth ſeem to have been honour'd (b) as amongſt the Chineſe, as univerſal Parents; next to Heaven therefore and the Heavenly Bodies the Earth was the principal Deity; as Plato ſtileth it, the firſt and moſt ancient of the Gods within the Heavens. The Earth hath an Intellectual Soul, and ſo is a God, (c) ſaith a Platoniſt. Which reaſon of its Deity implieth, that thoſe Philoſophic Pagans (d) who accounted the four Elements Gods as well as the Sun and Moon, ſuppos'd them to be Animate and Intelligent as well as the Heavenly Bodies, nor did the Intelligent Pagans account any thing a God abſolutely and in the Plenary Senſe, ſave only what they ſuppos'd, to be Animate and Intelligent. The Egyptians ſaith Salluſtius the Philoſopher (e) think and call αὐτὰ τὰ σώματα, even the bodily Subſtances Gods. The Earth Iſis, the moiſt Element Oſiris, the Heat Typhon, or the Water Saturn, the Fruits Adonis, Wine Bacchus. It is the part of Wiſe-men, to ſay, that theſe are dedicated to the Gods, (as Herbs, Stones and Animals are,) but to call them Gods, is the part of Mad-men. To call them Gods in the Plenary Senſe, is the part of Mad-men: But they may be accounted Gods in a partial limited Senſe, ſo far only as to be the Objects of Religious Veneration, and for that Reaſon to have the Name of Gods; and in ſuch a partial limited Senſe Intelligent Pagans would have many things inanimate and unintelligent called Gods. But touching the four Elements, Ficinus ſaith; (f) Plotinus & multi unicuique elementorum ſuam tribuunt Animam, Plotinus and many attribute a diſtinct Intelligent Soul to each one of the Elements, calling the Soul of the Earth Veſta and Ceres. As the Earth was deify'd under the Names of Veſta, Rhea, Cybele (and ſuch more,) ſo thoſe other mundane Elements, Water, Fire, Air, their Powers, Parts and Productions, were perſonated and deify'd (either in the Plenary or Partial Senſe,) and had their Temples, Altars, Sacrifices. They were deify'd (as upon other accounts, ſo) with reſpect to their Preſident Deities; for much of the Senſe of the ancient Pagans is viſible in this account of the Religion of the Chineſe. (g) They Sacrifice four times a Year, to Heaven, the Sun, Moon, and greater part of the Planets and Stars; to the Earth, Mountains, and the four parts of the World; to the Sea, Rivers, Lakes, and other things: But it ſeemeth, that in reality they Sacrifice to the Spirits of thoſe things. So the ancient Pagans called the Sea and its Preſident Deities by the Names of Neptune, Nereus, Tethys, Thetis and Amphitrite. The Parts and Powers of the Sea were alſo deify'd (the Romans ſacrific'd to the Waves for the ſafety of their Navies, and Tempeſtas was one of their Deities,) and its Productions the Rivers and Fountains, which were ſuppos'd to flow from the Sea by Subterraneous Paſſages, as Homer philoſophizeth. (h).

Thence ſtores of Waters, Rivers, Rills,
Do flow, all Fountains and deep Wells.

The Worſhip of the Fire (which the European Pagans kept in their Prytanea and call'd by the Names of Vulcan and Veſta) was of (i) vaſt diſpread in the Pagan World: But the Oriental Pagans, the Perſians and Chaldeans were the ancient and eminent Fire-worſhippers. The City Ur of the Chaldees is ſuppos'd, to have its Name (k) from Fire-worſhip (אור ſignifieth Fire;) and the Perſian God Amanus (from חמה Heat) is probably ſuppos'd to be the Fire; and Chammanecem rendred your Images, Lev. 26. 30. ſeemeth to ſignifie your Fire-Temples or Fire-Hearths, places for the Cuſtody of the ſacred Fire. The Perſians and Chaldeans are ſaid, to have preſerv'd their ſacred Fire (l) four thouſand

---

(o) Ἤτοι μὲν πρώτιστα χάος γένετ', αὐτὰρ ἔπειτα
Γαῖ' εὐρύστερνος, &c.
Ἠδ' Ἔρος, ὃς κάλλιστος ἐν ἀθανάτοισι θεοῖσι.

(p) Ὠκεανόν τε θεῶν γένεσιν, ϗ μητέρα τηθύν.

(q) Ὅτε δὲ ἠράσθη τὸ πνεῦμα τῶν ἰδίων ἀρχῶν, καὶ ἐγένετο σύγκρασις, ἡ πλοκὴ ἐκείνη ἐκλήθη πόθος. αὕτη δὲ ἀρχὴ κτίσεως ἁπάντων. Poſt Chaos fuere Tellus & Tartara: Item Amor. Voſſ. de Heſiodo. de Idol. l. 8. c. 3.

(r) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 1. c. 6. l. 3. c. 9.

(s) Ibid. l. 3. c. 4.

(t) Ibid. c. 3.

(u) Ibid. c. 11.

(w) Ibid. l. 1. p. 54.

(x) Ibid. c. 7.

(y) Ibid. l. 3. c. 13.

(z) Ibid. l. 1. c. 9.

(a) Ibid. c. 6, & 9.

(b) Semedo Hiſt. par. 1. c. 18.

(c) Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 22.

(d) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 5. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 51.

(e) De Diis. c. 4.

(f) Com. in Plotin. p. 414.

(g) Semedo ſupr. c. 19.

(h) Ἐξ ὅπερ πάντες ποταμοὶ ϗ πᾶσα θάλασσα
Καὶ πᾶσαι κρῆναι, ϗ φρείατα μακρὰ νάουσιν.

(i) Huet. Dem. ev. pr. 4. c. 5.

(k) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 9. & 64.

(l) Hotting. Hexaem. p. 132.

thouſand Years, until Omer the third Succeſſor of Muhammed extinguiſh'd it. At this day Magus and a Fire-worſhipper (m) are amongſt the Arabians and Perſians Synonymous, and Terms of Diſgrace; for ſuch the Perſians thus reproach in their taunting Proverb;) (n) Although Kebber (a Fire-religioniſt) kindleth the Fire an hundred Years, yet if he falleth into it but once, he is burned. The beſt account of the Origin of Fire-worſhip amongſt the Magi is that (o) of the Arabic Writers; becauſe they had Light in great Veneration, therefore they worſhipp'd Fire. They worſhipp'd the Fire with proper Worſhip, yet they worſhipp'd it alſo with a Symbolical Worſhip. (p) For they kept the never-dying Fire in their Temples in honour of the Celeſtial viſible Gods (the Stars) as being moſt like them. The liquid Air was perſonated and deify'd (Wiſd. 13. 2.) under the Names of Minerva, Juno, Jupiter, Dijovis, Dieſpiter; and the Meteors, the Winds, Thunder and Lightning, the Rainbow, Caſtor and Pollux were deify'd alſo. So the Productions and ſeveral parts of the Earth, Trees, and Groves, Stones, Metals and the Mountains were made Gods and Goddeſſes and the Symbols of the Pagan Deities, and the City of Rome was made a Goddeſs.

As mundane Nature was the Pagans Supreme Deity, ſo the things of mundane Nature without bound or meaſure were deify'd by them (either in the Plenary or Partial Senſe) agreeably to the Phantaſtry of their Minds. Terminus and Time (called an eaſie God in Sophocles,) the Night, the Hours, were deify'd; and (probably in an Atheiſtic Senſe) the Chaos is call'd a God by the Coſmogoniſts. There is nothing ſo vile in the comprehenſion of Nature, which the impure Phantaſtry of theſe mundane Theiſts hath not deify'd; (q) for the Braſilians deify'd a Fruit like a Gourd, the People of Guinea Rings of Straw and a Bundle of Feathers. But chiefly things of an extraordinary appearance and things of great utility were deify'd by the Pagans. As Acoſta ſaith of the Peruans; (r) they worſhipp'd Rivers, Fountains, Rocks or great Stones, Hills and the tops of Mountains, which they called Apachita's, and all things in Nature which ſeem'd to have ſomething extraordinary in them. A Sand-hill was a principal Idol of theirs, which they venerated for a Miracle, becauſe it was ſandy in the midſt of ſtony Mountains. A great ill-favour'd Tree they look'd upon as having ſomething of Divinity in it, becauſe it tranſcended the reſt in magnitude. Some things in Nature by their Majeſty, Terribleneſs, Surprizingneſs, Solemneſs, made a Religious or Devotional kind of impreſſion upon the Minds of the Heathen, (s) whence they ador'd the heads of great Rivers, and Fountains of hot Waters; the ſudden eruption of a vaſt River out of the Caverns of the Earth hath its Altars erected to it; and ſome Pools have been made ſacred for their immenſe Profundity and Opacity. (t) So Trees and Groves came to be of ſacred Eſteem and were deify'd (properly or ſymbolically, as the Reſidences and Repreſentatives of their Deities;) and other things were deify'd for their beneficial Nature and Utility to Mankind. (u) The Egyptians worſhipp'd Fire and Water as the chief cauſes of our Welfare. Sanchoniathon in Euſebius ſaith of the Egyptians; theſe were the firſt that conſecrated the Plants of the Earth, and counted them Gods and worſhipp'd them. The Egyptians (and others) ſo deify'd the Fruits of the Earth, as to make them the Gods that preſided over them (ſaying, that Oſiris was buried, when the Seed was buried in the Earth, and return'd to Life, when the Seed began to ſprout,) which ſenſleſs piece of Superſtition is reprov'd by Plutarch for this Reaſon; (w) a God is not a thing inanimate Subject to the Hand of Man. Nothing imperſonal and therefore nothing inanimate and unintelligent can be a perſonal God or Goddeſs, as common Senſe dictateth; and therefore it is marvellous, and ſheweth the prevalency of Phantaſtry againſt Reaſon, that the vulgar Pagans thought the Fruits of the Earth, to be thoſe perſonal Gods and Goddeſſes, that preſided over them, (x) as Plutarch repreſenteth them.

XI. The viſible Heavens, heavenly Bodies, and mundane Elements (which we have conſider'd) belong to the mundane City locally underſtood, as conſtitutive parts thereof; the next ſort of Pagan Deities are Inhabitants of the Mundane City real or fictitious. Which yet are not ſo ſtrictly Inhabitants of the mundane City, but that ſome of them muſt be conſider'd alſo as conſtitutive parts of the mundane City locally underſtood: In like manner as ſome parts of the mundane City locally underſtood (which we have repreſented,) muſt alſo be conſider'd as Inhabitants of the mundane City. The Star Arcturus is both a Conſtitutive part of the mundane City locally underſtood, and alſo an Inhabitant or Citizen thereof; for thus in Plautus's Rudens he ſpeaketh of himſelf. (y) I am one of his Celeſtial Citizens that is Rector of the Univerſe. The Citizens and Inhabitants of this mundane City (ſuch as appertain to the Exoterical Theology) as they are recounted by (z) Euſebius and Theodoret (an immenſe Rabble) are theſe following Pagan Deities. 1. The Genial (or Pneumatological) kind of Deities, τὸ τῶν ἀοράτων πλῆθος, the World of inviſible Spirits and Gods contradiſtinct to the viſible. 2. The Herological Deities, ſuch as Herodotus calleth ἀνθρωποφυέας, of Human Birth and Original. 3. The Deiformities, ſo that ſort of Deities may be fitly call'd, which are nothing but Affections, Qualities and Forms of Subſtances perſonated and made Deiform, ſuch as Virtue, Piety, Fidelity, propter quæ datur homini adſcenſus in Cœlum, for which Men are tranſlated to Heaven. 4. The Mythical. 5. The Animal. 6. The Symbolical Deities.

The Genial Deities are diſtributed by the Philoſophic Pagans into the Imperial and Miniſterial, the Lords and the Servitors, the Gods and the Demons in the reſtrict Notion (before diſcours'd of;) which diſtribution of theirs inferreth, that the Platoniſts of the Chriſtian Church do not deal fairly (a) in making their order of Gods in the ſtrict Notion (the ſuprademonial Order) Parallel to the Angels of our Theology; for the Pagan Theology (b) acknowledgeth no Angels but only thoſe of the Demonial Order, and always repreſenteth the Gods as Supra-angelical. The Order of Government in the Pagan Theopolity is thus repreſented by Julian and his Divine Jamblichus. (c) Several Nations have their ſeveral Prefect-Gods, which Prefect-Gods have Angels (an higher rank of Demons) Demons and a peculiar kind of Souls for their Servitors. Agreeably to the Fundamentals of their Theology and Religion the Pagan Theologers uſually aſcribe

---

(m) Pocock. ſpec. p. 146.

(n) Hoffman Umbr. in Luc. p. 110.

(o) Pocock. ſupr.

(p) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 5.

(q) Beyer. Addit. ad Selden de D. Syr. p. 121.

(r) Nat. and Mor. Hiſt. of the Indies. B. 5. c. 5.

(s) Sen. Ep. 1.

(t) V. Dr. Hammond n Col. 2. 3.

u) Sbarock de ff. c. 5. 8.

(w) Οὐ γὰρ οὐδὲ ἄψυχον ἀνθρώποις ὁ θεὸς ὑποχείριον. De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 377.

(x) Ibid. p. 379.

(y) Qui Gentes omnes mariaque & terras movet ejus ſum civis civitate cœlitum.

(z) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 5. c. 3. Theodor. Θεραπ. Ser. 3.

(a) Eugubin. de Per. phil. l. 8. Liv. Galant. compar. l. 6. Mat. Panſa de Oſcul. p. 63. Theodoret. ſupr. Ser. 4.

(b) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 9 c. 23.

(c) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 4. p. 143. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 124, 140, 141.

the Divine Attributes, Omniſcience, Omnipreſence, Omnipotence, univerſal Providence and Beneficence (not to the Demonial, but) to their Supra-demonial Order of Deities, ſtiling them the Makers, Archical Cauſes, Lords, Rulers, Curators of the Univerſe. Theſe Fundamentals of their Theology are thus abridg'd by Epictetus. (d) To have right Opinions concerning the Gods, their Exiſtence and their univerſal Providence, and that they adminiſter all things juſtly. They are more fully diſcours'd by Plato in his Tenth of Laws to this Senſe; (e) The being of the Gods, their univerſal Providence, and that they adminiſter all things according to Juſtice, and cannot be perverted from the Rule of Juſtice, to give indulgence to Criminals, by any Gifts or Services. The Gods neglect not the Care of the leaſt things, for they know, ſee, and hear all things; nothing eſcapeth their notice that can be known: They are able to do all that can be done; and they are of all manner of Virtue, without Sloth, Negligence, Timidity, there is nothing of this in any of the Gods. They are not without their (f) κοιναὶ ἔννοιαι περὶ τὸ θεῖον, common Notices touching the Divinity; that the Divinity is good and the Author of goods only, is unchangeable, and free from lying and deceiving. Agreeably to which common Notices touching the Gods the Divine Attributes are transferr'd by the Platoniſts upon their Supra-demonial Deities, and thus they diſtinguiſh them from the Demonial Order, but ſo as alſo to diſtinguiſh them into ſeveral Orders.

(g) It is a common Notion, that every one of the Gods is every where preſent, and heareth all things in all places. (h) Their Providence is not circumſcrib'd, nor themſelves confin'd in any part of the World. Accordingly, the Dii ἄζωνοι, Azonous Gods in the Chaldaic Theology are of this Explication. (i) They are certain Gods that have no certain determinate parts of the World for their Allotment, but are generally worſhipp'd by all; for it is manifeſt, that they are every where, their Power is in all the Zones.

(k) The Gods generate and adminiſter all things, and as the Archical cauſe imperially precede all things; they rule over all things by the Power of their Cauſality, and by their Empire or Prepollency. (l) The Parents, Guides, Rulers of all things in the World; having the Rectorſhip of all things, their Providential Care extendeth to all things, and their Preſence alſo (πάντα περιέχοντες ϗ πάντα προνοοῦντες,) for they contain all things, but are contained by nothing. (m) Remaining in themſelves the Gods go forth into all places, and although preſent to all depart not from their own περιωπὴ, ſublime Station of Providence: Nor is their Providence laborious and troubleſome, (n) for beholding themſelves only and by their own Eſſence they conduct all things ἀψόφῳ κελεύθῳ, in a ſilent way, and repleniſh them with Goods ἀφθόνῳ βουλήσει, with an uninvidious Good-will. (o) The viſible and inviſible Gods comprehend all things in their Gubernation, all the Heaven, the World, and the inviſible Powers in the Univerſe.

(p) The Gods are of omnimodous Unity and permanent Stability in one's ſelf, the cauſe of indiviſible Eſſences, immoveable, the cauſe of all Motion, tranſcending the Univerſe of things, having nothing in common with them, but being unmix'd and ſeparate, in Eſſence, Power and Operation; all ſuch things we muſt aſcribe to the Gods. (q) Πάντα δύναται ἅμα ἐν τῷ νῦν μονοειδῶς, they can do all things in an inſtant uniformly, (r) have unbounded Power indiviſible and uncircumſcrib'd, (s) wherefore the Poets rightly ſay, πάντα δύνασθαι τοὺς θεοὺς, the Gods can do all things.

(t) The Vaticination of what is future is not from thoſe things that have not Preſcience in themſelves, but from the Gods, which have in themſelves τὰ πέρατα τῆς ὅλης εἰδήσεως τῶν ὄντων, the extremities of the whole knowledge of Beings. (u) The Gods know all things at once, things univerſal and particular, eternals and things done in time, (and therefore in their Oracles they teach alike all thoſe things;) for the intellection of the Gods is eternal, nothing is at any time abſent from the Intellect of the Gods, but all things are preſent; no God Philoſophizeth or deſireth to be Wiſe (ſaith Plato,) but is ſo.

(w) Diſtinguiſh the Demons from the Gods in this manner. In the God of Gods Providence is altogether univerſal, extending to all and all things, and communicating accordingly. It is alſo in a manner univerſal in the Divine Mind and in the Soul of the World. In the following Gods, whether they be inviſible or viſible, Providence is alſo in a manner univerſal, but with a particular Condition. For either they communicate to all, but not all things, but certain Gifts only: Or if they communicate all ſorts of Gifts, it is but to ſome. But in the Demons Providence is both particular, and with a particular Condition. For they diſtribute only ſome certain Gifts, and but to ſome certain kinds of things and Regions.

Whether thoſe Sublimities that are attributed to the (Supra-demonial) Gods in common, are not inconſiſtent with that great Superiority and Tranſcendency of ſome of them above others, which the Platoniſts ſuppoſe (for they ſuppoſe (x) their Super-celeſtial (y) and Supramundane Gods at a great rate tranſcendent to their other Supra-demonial Deities) is not worth the while to diſpute. We will only obſerve, that if the Gods (Supra-demonial) are at this Platonic rate unconfin'd in Power, Providence and other Perfections, it is not they that are Parallel to the Angels of our Theology, but only the Demons, (z) as Tertullian, S. Auſtin and Philo ſuppoſe. Philo (not making a due diſtinction between the Church and the World) muſt not be thought a Church of God-kind of Theologiſt, nor is he better than a Philoſophic Pagan Demonologiſt (as being wholly ignorant of any ſuch Polity as the Kingdom of Darkneſs, of the Fall of Angels, of their baniſhment from the Celeſtial and Penal confinement to the Aerial Regions:) But his parallеliſm between the Pagan and Moſaic Theology is much more Legitimate than that of our Chriſtian Platoniſts. For ſpeaking of the Souls that fly in the Air he ſaith, (a) other Philoſophers call theſe Demons, but the holy Scripture is wont to call them Angels.

XII. The principal Deities (ſupra-Demonial) of the Exoterical Theology are the Dii Conſentes (Dii majorum Gentium) contain'd in thoſe two Verſes of Ennius,

Juno, Veſta, Minerva, Ceres, Diana, Venus, Mars, Mercuri', Jovis, Neptunus, Vulcanus, Apollo.

Theſe are call'd in the Law of the twelve Tables, (b) The Gods that were always Celeſtial (or Gods,) a Colledge of Sempiternal Deities. So Plutarch in the life of Pelopidas repreſenteth Apollo as one of the Sempiternal Deities. For our Tradi-

(d) Ὀρθὰς ὑπολήψεις περὶ θεῶν ἔχειν, ὡς ὄντων, ϗ διοικούντων τὰ ὅλα καλῶς ϗ δικαίως. Enchir. c. 38.

(e) Τὸ εἶναι τοὺς θεοὺς, τὸ προνοεῖν πάντων, τὸ κατὰ δίκην τὰ πάντα ἄγειν.

(f) Ὅτι ἀγαθὸν τὸ θεῖον, ϗ μόνων ἀγαθῶν αἴτιον, ἀμετάβλητον τὸ θεῖον, ἀληθευτικὸν τὸ θεῖον. Procl. in Polit. p. 358. Theol. Plat. l. 1. c. 12. 17.

(g) Plotin. En. 6. l. 5. c. 4. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 6. p. 192.

(h) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 15, 16.

(i) Seld. de J. Nat. & Gent. l. 3. c. 20.

(k) Jambl. ibid. p. 11, 12. de vit. Pythagor. p. 138.

(l) Procl. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 13. & p. 51.

(m) Ibid. l. 6. c. 23.

(n) Ibid. p. 41.

(o) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 35.

(p) Ibid. p. 9, 10.

(q) Ibid. p. 11.

(r) Porphyr. Ep. ad Aneb.

(s) Procl. Th. Plat. p. 164.

(t) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 59.

(u) Procl. ſupr. p 54, 55, & l. 5. c. 17. Plotin. En. 5. l. 8. c. 3, 4.

(w) Ficin. Com. in Plotin. p. 49, 193.

(x) Procl. ſupr. l. 6. c. 16.

(y) Syneſ. de provid. p. 97.

(z) Petav. T. 3. p. 2.

(a) Ταύτας δαίμονας μὲν οἱ ἄλλοι φιλόσοφοι, ὁ δὲ ἱερὸς λόγος ἀγγέλους εἴωθε καλεῖν. περὶ ὀνειρ. p. 398. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(b) Divi Cœleſtes ſemper habiti.

Tradition (ſaith he) doth not rank this God amongſt thoſe that were born and ſo made Immortal, as Hercules and Bacchus) whom their Virtues rais'd above a mortal and paſſible Condition; but he is one of the eternal, if we may gather any certainty concerning theſe things from the Diſcourſes of the oldeſt and wiſeſt in theſe matters. And thus Apuleius would have us conſider Jupiter, Apollo, Juno, Venus and the reſt of the Dii Conſentes, as certain eternal Minds, (c) ſaith Voſſius. (d) Theſe Gods plac'd in the higheſt Ether Plato thinketh true, incorporeal, (or incorporeal Nature's,) Animal, without beginning or end, eternal in their own Nature remote from the Contagion of Body, happy to the height of Happineſs of Mind, good not by Participation of any external good, but of themſelves ſo; of promptitude, eaſie and free to all Functions belonging to them.

A late Learned Author (e) hath undertaken, to make it evident, that Apuleius was not rightly underſtood by Voſſius, that his words muſt be underſtood in a Senſe properly Platonic, touching the Ideal Deities in the intelligible Archetypal World, his deſign being to accommodate thoſe civil Poetic Gods, the twelve Conſentes, to thoſe Gods of Plato the firſt Paradigms and Patterns of things. But of this Deſign there is no appearance in Apuleius; nor hath our learned Author produc'd any thing conſiderable, to determine his words to ſuch a Senſe. On the contrary, it is evident, that the Dii Conſentes are Deities of the Exoterical Theology, and therefore can be no Ideal Deities of the School of Plato; that the ſubject of Apuleius's Diſcourſe is the Celeſtial Deities contradiſtinct to the Demonial Order; (f) that S. Auſtin underſtandeth Apuleius's Diſcourſe touching (not the Ideal, but) Genial or Pneumatological kind of Deities; that twelve Deities of this kind are viſible in the beginning of Plato's Eighth of Laws, (g) and are famouſly known in Platonic Authors; that Apuleius's Deities are thoſe, whoſe Powers are diſcern'd by the Minds of Men, by the many utilities which they are found to bring to the life of Man in thoſe things which every one of them taketh care of; which are the ſame ſort of Deities with thoſe of Balbus in Cicero, (h) utilitatum magnitudine conſtituti ſunt ii Dii, qui utilitates quaſque gignebant, thoſe Natures of Gods have been conſtituted, that produc'd the ſeveral utilities of life. If the Platoniſts ſuppos'd a whole World of eternal Ideal Deities (which are Animals and Intelligent,) is it ſtrange, that the popular Pagans ſhould ſuppoſe twelve Sempiternal Genial Deities, or that Apuleius and other Platoniſts ſhould entertain this Branch of their Theology? (i) In Salluſtius the Platoniſt theſe twelve Deities are manifeſtly not Ideal, but Genial Deities; for having conſider'd the firſt Cauſe he proceedeth to the Subſequent Orders of the Gods, which he diſtinguiſheth into the Super-mundane and the In-mundane. The In-mundane ſome of them make the World, ſome animate it, ſome adapt (or harmonize) the different parts of it, and ſome keep it ſo compos'd. Here then being four things, and each of them conſiſting of Firſt, Middle and Extreme, they that adminiſter theſe things muſt neceſſarily be twelve in number. They therefore that make the World, are Jupiter, Neptune and Vulcan. They who animate it, are Juno, Ceres and Diana. The Harmonizers of it are Apollo, Venus and Mercury. The Keepers of it are Veſta, Pallas and Mars. If the popular Pagans ſuppos'd twelve of their Deities of theſe Denominations, to exiſt from Eternity, this will not infer, that they ſuppos'd them all Self-exiſtent, (for they that ſuppos'd the World, to exiſt from Eternity, did not therefore ſuppoſe it Self-exiſtent; nor did the Platoniſts ſuppoſe their eternal Ideal Deities Self-exiſtent;) nor could they ſuppoſe them all Self-exiſtent without contradicting their generally receiv'd Maxim, that Jupiter is the Father of Gods and Men, and thoſe ſupreme Attributes alſo (as peculiar to Jupiter,) which they appropriated to him in their uſual Inſcriptions. (k)

I. O. M.
CETERISQ.
DIS CONSENTIBUS.

To the Coſmical Jupiter (according to the Pagan Theologers) the Name Zeus moſt properly belongeth, (l) which denoteth him the cauſe of Life to all that live. In the Pœnulus of Plautus (m) Mankind are ſaid, to have life and vitality from him (per quem vivimus vitale ævum;) he was therefore celebrated by the popular Pagans as the Father of Men; (n) and they ſuppos'd the Gods, to iſſue from the Coſmical Jupiter (for Jove is the World, ſaith Varro) as from a Father and Mother. If therefore they had ſet at the head of their Dii Conſentes (or Colledge of Sempiternal Deities) this Coſmical Jupiter, we muſt be ſatisfied, that they did not make any of them Self-exiſtent but Jupiter only. And they have done the ſame thing in ſetting a Genial Jupiter at the head of their Dii Conſentes, as if they had ſet the Coſmical Jupiter there; becauſe Jupiter in the Coſmical and in the Genial (or Jupiter conſider'd as Coſmical and as Genial) are by them confounded. And the ſupreme Attributes of the Coſmical Jupiter theſe blundring Theiſts uſually communicate to Jupiter in other Notions, as to a Genial Jupiter, an Herological Jupiter, and alſo to a Phyſiological Jupiter. For Diodorus affirmeth, that (o) the Egyptians call'd that ſpirituous matter which pervadeth all things, Jove, and look'd upon it as a certain Father of all things; and that the Greek Poets Symbolize with them, ſtiling Jupiter the Father of Gods and Men.

The next ſort of Deities the Herological, returneth us back again to the conſideration of the Dii Conſentes; for Jupiter, Juno, Vulcan, Veſta, and others of the Dii majorum Gentium are repreſented by S. Auſtin (p) as Herological Deities; and the moſt of the Dii Nobiles (the Conſentes and Selecti) were in one Notion of them the deify'd Souls of Men. Beſides the Genial Apollo and Jove there is an Herological Apollo (according to that of Pindar, (q) 'Εν χρόνῳ δ' γένετ' 'Απολλών, Apollo was ſometime born) and a Jupiter born in Crete, whom the Poet (conſidering him in his Infancy) calleth (r) parvum Tonantem, the little Thunderer. So in a Coin in honour of Titus (s) ΖΕΥϹ ΚΡΗΤΑΓΕΝΗϹ, Jupiter born in Crete, furniſh'd with a Thunderbolt is plac'd amongſt the Stars. S. Auſtin argueth from the Enſigns of Jupiter (t) plac'd in the Capitol, that the Capitoline Jupiter was ſuppos'd to be of Humane Birth and Original, and conſequently the Romans (agreeably to other Pagans) made an Hero the Supream Deity and the Supream Governour of the World. To this ſort of Deities (the Herological) the great Men deify'd by the Pagans in their life-time, and their deify'd Cities (if by City we underſtand the Inhabitants) appertain. The Heavenly Bodies were alſo confounded with this ſort of Deities; for the Heathen ſuppoſing that their deceas'd Heroes were deify'd in the Heavenly Bodies, attributed their Names to them and worſhipped both together.

(c) De Idol. l. 2. c. 31.

(d) Hos Deos in ſublimi Ætheris vertice locatos, Plato exiſtimat veros, incorporales, (vel naturas incorporales) animales, neque fine ullo, neque exordio, ſed prorſus ac retro Æviternos, corporis contagione ſuâ quidem naturâ remotos, ingenio ad ſummam beatitudinem porrecto, nullius extranei boni participatione, ſed ex ſeſe bonos, & ad omnia competentia ſibi, prompto nutu, facili, ſimplici, libero, abſoluto.

(e) Intellect. Syſt. p. 496. &c.

(f) De C. D. l. 8. c. 14. l. 9. c. 7. &c.

(g) V. Gale in Salluſt. de Diis. c. 6. in Jambl. p. 269.

(h) De N. D. l. 2.

(i) De Diis. c. 5, 6.

(k) Elmenhorſt. in Arnob. p. 125. Ouzel. in Min. Fel. p. 198.

(l) Phornut. de Nat. Deor. p. 4.

(m) Act. 5. Scen. 4.

(n) Jupiter omnipotens Regum Rex ipſe, Deuſque, Progenitor, Genitrixque Deûm S. Aug. de C. D. l. 7. c. 9, & 11.

(o) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 3. c. 3.

(p) De C. D. l. 8. c. 5.

(q) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 10. c. 12.

(r) Statius Thebaid. l. 5.

(s) Marſh. Can. Chr. p. 259. ed. Lipſ.

(t) Quid de ipſo Jove ſenſerunt, qui ejus nutricem in capitolio poſuerunt? Quid illic facit ſcutum illud Jovis, quod appel-

XIII. As many of the vaſt number of the Pagans Herological Deities were the Ghoſts of dead Men famous for Vice and Miſchief, Murders, Luſts and Rapes: So many of their Deiformities (which had Temples and Altars erected to them) were the moſt vicious and noxious things in Nature; ſuch as (u) Contumely and Impudence, Luſt, the Fever, Orbona, evil Fortune and Death. So Impiety and Iniquity (w) are ſaid to have had their Altars, Pallor and Pavor, Diſeaſes and Plagues were Pagan Deities. The popular Pagans conſecrated ſuch criminal and diſaſtrous things, that they might be deprecated: (x) but Cicero would have nothing deify'd ſave only what is virtuous, ſuch as Mind, Piety, Virtue, Fidelity, and the Names of things deſirable, (ſuch as Health, Honour, Victory) as Symmachus argueth, pleading for the reſtauration of the Altar of Victory, after it had been demoliſh'd, (y) Nemo colendam neget, quam profitetur optandam, they that refuſe not Victory, but acknowledg her deſirable, ſhould not refuſe her Worſhip. The deſirableneſs of ſuch things gain'd them a great veneration, (z) and about Gades on the Coaſt of Spain Altars were erected to Old Age, becauſe they had it in great veneration. Such Romantick Deities were ador'd in Paganiſm, not only by the ſottiſh Vulgar, but the Humour of deifying things unſubſtantial and imperſonal was the general humour of the Pagan World, of the Sage Philoſophers, of the Popular Pagan Theologers, of the great Captains, the wiſe Stateſmen, and the Learned Pagan Nations in their Civil Theology, as if common Reaſon had forſaken the World of Mankind. Theſeus before he fought with the Amazons ſacrific'd to Fear. Lycurgus now and then would ſacrifice an Hour to the little God Riſus, to whom he dedicated a Statue in his Houſe. Marcellus was hindred by the Prieſts from dedicating the Temple which he had vow'd to Honour and Virtue, becauſe they ſuppos'd, that one Temple might not lawfully be dedicated to two Deities. Timoleon after his Victories built a Chappel in his Houſe, in which he ſacrific'd to good Fortune, as a Deity that had much favour'd him, devoted the Houſe it ſelf to that ſacred Genius; and in Rome the Lady Fortune had more Temples than any other God or Goddeſs. Such Deities become Religioniſts in jeſt; agreeably to the Story of Themiſtocles requiring Money of the Iſland Andros: He told them, he had brought with him two Goddeſſes, Perſuaſion and Force; and they made anſwer, that they had alſo two great Goddeſſes, which prohibited them from giving him Money, Poverty and Impoſſibility. Poverty had Altars erected to it about Gades (as Philoſtratus (a) reporteth;) Neceſſity was a Platonic Deity (b) the Mother of the Fates. (c) Τὸν χρόνον αὐτὸν ὑμνήκασιν ὡς θεὸν οἱ θεουργοί, the Theurgiſts have celebrated Time it ſelf as a God. The Philoſophic Pagans ſymboliz'd with the Popular, but with this difference; they perſonated and deify'd things Philoſophical; as Anaxagoras dedicated two Altars, the one to Mind, the other to Truth. The Philoſophy of the Platoniſts deifieth all the abſtract Notions of the Mind; Ipſum Unum, Ipſum Ens, Ipſa Mens, Ipſa Vita, (d) αὐτοεπιστήμη, Science it ſelf, αὐτοδικαιοσύνη, Juſtice it ſelf, αὐτοσωφροσύνη, Temperance it ſelf, (which are θεότητες νοηταί, Deities that are the Intelligibles;) and their firſt Intellect is a World of abſtract Notions or Idea's, which are ſuppos'd to be Gods. Theſe Pagan Deiformities have their Parallels amongſt the Pagano-Chriſtians, and there is the ſame origin of both; for in our Forefathers Days (e) the Theological Virtues of Faith, Hope and Charity were worſhipp'd as Saints, and the ſame Phantaſtry ſet up the Picture of St. Sunday. In an ancient and fair Romiſh Manual I find, ſaith a Divine of our own, (f) this to be part of a Letany; Holy Faith pray for me, Holy Hope pray for me, Holy Charity pray for me. As the Pagano-Chriſtians conceiving of theſe unſubſtantial and imperſonal things as ſo many abſtract Forms, thought them to be ſo many Saints; ſo the Pagans forming the like Conception of Truth, Faith, Hope, Juſtice, Clemency, Liberty, Fame, Memory, Victory, as alſo of Sleep, the Night, Echo, and innumerable other accidental things, thought them to be ſo many Gods and Goddeſſes. Balbus in Cicero (g) aſſigneth another reaſon of their Deification, which hath only thus much of good Senſe in it; the Pagans deify'd ſuch unſubſtantial things, in quibus vis ineſt major aliqua, in which there is ſome extraordinary force. (h) So Impudence was accounted a Deity becauſe of its prevailing force, and according to Cæcilius in Cicero Love muſt be reputed a God, (i) as having power to make Men mad, and to throw them into Diſeaſes. Becauſe of their τὸ δραστικὸν, operative force and power, theſe unſubſtantial things were deify'd; and for the ſame reaſon it was thought requiſite, that a God ſhould preſide over them and rule them (and there was a Goddeſs (k) Pecunia, Concordia, Victoria, Virtus, Felicitas, which was ſuppos'd, to diſpence and beſtow Money, Concord, Victory, Virtue, Felicity) and the Pagans deify'd the things themſelves in complication with their ſynonymous preſident Deities, as when we call Corn Ceres, and Wine Liber. This is no unreaſonable account of the origin of their Religious Worſhip of the Deiformities; but it is altogether unreaſonable to ſuppoſe, (l) that theſe were perſonated and deify'd as ſeveral Powers, Vertues, Effects and Manifeſtations of the Deity, and that the Pagans conſider'd them as ſuch; for of this there is not any appearance in Paganiſm. The Platoniſts did not conſider thoſe various abſtract Forms which they deify'd, as the ſeveral Powers and Manifeſtations of the Deity; nor were the Gods Labor & Triumphus conſider'd by the Popular Pagans as Virtues and Effects of the Deity; nor was S. Paul's Anaſtaſis, Act. 17. conſider'd in ſuch a Notion, which his Pagan Auditors ſuppos'd a Goddeſs; nor is it probable, that the Heathen when they deify'd the Echo, or the Morning, or Eros, Anteros, Concord and Diſcord, had any more regard to the Virtues, Powers, and Manifeſtations of the Deity, than when they deify'd Aius Locutius, the God call'd the Speaker or Caller; nor doth Syneſius ſuppoſe the Muſes to be meer Virtues and Effects of the Deity, when he writeth of them in this manner; (m) that an illiterate perſon falling aſleep, and converſing with the Muſes, lant Aegida? De C. D. l. 6. c. 7. de conſ. Evang. l. 1. c. 23.

---

(u) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 8. c. 6, 14.

(w) Hoffm. umbr. in Luc. p. 87.

(x) De Leg. 2.

(y) L. 10. Ep. 54.

(z) Hoffman. ſupr. p. 132.

(a) Phot. Cod. 241.

(b) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 6. c. 23.

(c) Id. in Tim. p. 252.

(d) Id. Plat. Theol. l. 4. p. 201.

(e) Dr. Jackſon orig. of Unbelief, ch. 17.

(f) Dr Teniſon of Idol. p. 207.

(g) De N. D. l. 2. Seld. de D. Syr. Proleg. c. 3.

(h) Voſſ. ſupr. c. 14.

(i) Cui in manu ſit, quem eſſe dementem velit, Quem ſapere, quem ſanari, quem in morbum injici.

(k) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 24.

(l) Intell. Syſt. p. 227, 521, 525.

(m) De Inſomn. p. 136.

Muſes, ſhould awake an expert Poet, as ſome in our time have done, this is not to be thought incredible. It muſt be acknowledg'd, that the intelligent Pagans ſometimes diſpute and reaſon againſt theſe unſubſtantial and imperſonal Deities, (n) and that Cotta ridiculeth theſe Deiformities (as no perſonal Gods and Goddeſſes;) but Reaſon is of little force againſt eſtabliſh'd Religion, ancient venerable Superſtition, and the power of Phantaſtry, which hath the faculty and a propenſity, to perſonate and deifie every thing. Beſides, the intelligent Pagans that ſometimes reaſon againſt their Deiformities, yet thought it reaſonable, that they ſhould be Objects of their Religious Veneration (as Cicero hath diſcours'd in his Book of Laws) and that it was Piety to make them ſuch. And how much better are Faith and Truth, Honour and Virtue, and more deſerving of Divine Honours than the Rabble of Pagan Perſonal Deities?

The next ſort of Deities, the Mythical, are the Matters of Mundane Phyſiology (Natural Philoſophy) fabulouſly turn'd into perſonal Gods and Goddeſſes. For the Pagan Theologers ſay of their fabulous Theology, (o) It was Matters of Phyſiology involv'd in Fables. They ſuppoſe, that there is a Mythical θεοποιΐα, way of making Deities, that the contrivers of the Fables deſign'd to ſignifie and repreſent things Phyſical by fictitious Deities, which therefore are of Allegorical and Phyſiological Interpretation. (p) Saturn they interpret Time (as in the Fable of Saturn devouring his own Children;) Juno the Air; the Generation of Vulcan, the change of Air into Fire; Pluto, who is ſaid to carry away with him Proſerpina, is the Sun going under the Earth about the Winter-Solſtice. So the naſty Stories of their Deities, (q) Jupiter's Adulteries and Pluto's Rapes, are interpreted to an Allegorical and Phyſiological Senſe; and this method of Interpretation the Pagans made uſe of in their Diſputes with the Chriſtians, to ſave the Credit of their Religion. So Celſus will have the Fable in Homer touching Jupiter's binding Juno, (r) to ſignifie God's binding the Matter to its good-behaviour; that being at firſt diſorderly, God bound it by certain Laws of Regularity and adorn'd it. It is manifeſt, that this mode of interpreting the θεομυθία Fables of the Gods deifieth the things of Nature and ſeveral parts of the World, which are realities, not figments; but ſuch Gods and Goddeſſes as were made of them, and by which they were ſignify'd and repreſented in the fabulous Theology, were figments of the Phancy, not Realities; and theſe are the Deities that are called (s) by Balbus in Cicero (agreeably to the Senſe of the Stoicks) fictitious, poetic and fabulous Deities. (t) See you not (ſaith he) how from the things of Nature fictitious Gods have been made? The things of Phyſiology were cloath'd in humane form, and repreſented as (Figuræ Deorum, non rerum naturæ) of the Shape and Figure of Gods, not as the natures of things, and being ſo fictitiouſly perſonated and made ſuch Gods and Goddeſſes, the Phyloſopher calleth them fictitious Deities; rejecting therefore theſe fictitious Deities, he ſubſtituteth in their ſtead (u) God paſſing through the nature of every thing, through the Earth Ceres, through the Seas Neptune. This mythical ſort of Deities ſo call'd by Balbus and the Stoicks, are by them accounted the various Powers, Virtues, Effects and Manifeſtations of the Deity pervading all things.

XIV. Animals of all ſorts (Beaſts, Birds, Inſects, Fiſhes, Serpents, Goats, Oxen, Dogs, Cats, Apes, Hawks, Crocodiles, Ichneumons, (a kind of Water-Rats) and their Images alſo were religiouſly worſhipp'd by the Egyptians and ſome other Pagans. (w) The Egyptians (ſaith Mela) worſhip the Images of many Animals, much more the Animals themſelves, (x) which they repreſented by Golden Images. The Animals themſelves were ſacred to their ſeveral Deities (as the Eagle to Jupiter, the Lion to Vulcan;) not only ſacred to them, but Symbols of them (as the Ox of Oſiris, the Ram of Jupiter Ammon;) not only Symbols of them, but the Egyptians thought it reaſonable, to worſhip their ſacred Animals with proper worſhip, thereby making them at once Deities (as Labeo wrote a Book (y) de Diis Animalibus, touching the Animal Deities) and Symbols of Deities; which ſeemeth to have been the condition of many other Symbols in Paganiſm; (for a * Mountain was to the Cappadocians their God, their Oath, and their Statue; and Mount Atlas was both Temple, and God, and Oath, and Statue to the Libyans.) Upon various Accounts and Reaſons the Egyptians and other Pagans worſhipp'd Animals; for in America (z) the fiercer ſort of Animals were worſhipp'd becauſe of their hurtful power; (a) but the Egyptians gave Religious Veneration to their Animals upon the account of their Utility and Beneficence; (b) as the Peruans that liv'd near the Sea-ſide, anciently before the time of the Incas worſhipp'd the Whales, becauſe they afforded them Nutriment and fatned their Fields. Animals were alſo worſhipp'd by the Egyptians, becauſe they ſuppos'd, that there is ſomething in ſome of them which is of quality Divine; (c) for upon this account the Lion was worſhipp'd as a God, and Serpents alſo, as the King of Calecut in the Eaſtern India (d) is ſaid to have look'd upon Serpents as Spirits of celeſtial deſcent, and therefore gave them the worſhip of Deities. The Devils appearing in the form of Goats and ſome other Animals (e) are thought to have conciliated Veneration to thoſe Animals; others were had in Religious Veneration, becauſe of their relation to, and affinity with ſome of the Gods, Stars, Planets, or Celeſtial Conſtellations, (f) as an Aſtrologizing Village in Egypt ſuppoſing a Cognation between the Celeſtial Venus and a Cow, worſhipp'd the Celeſtial Venus in a Cow. A relative and ſymbolical worſhip was given to Animals, when they were conſider'd by the Philoſophic Religioniſts amongſt the Egyptians as reſemblances of the Divine Ideas; for Celſus affirmeth, (g) The Egyptians worſhip was not the worſhip of periſhing Animals, as the Vulgar ſuppoſe, but of the Eternal Ideas. Porphyry imputeth the Egyptians worſhip of Animals to their profound Wiſdom and Diſcernment of divine things; (h) they underſtood how congenial ſeveral Animals are to ſeveral Gods (as the Hawk to the Sun, being an Animal full of Blood and Spirits, and that they are of dearer regard to them than Men are; whence they worſhipp'd a Scarabee, ὡς εἰκόνα ἡλίου ἔμψυχον, as the Sun's living Image or Statue. (i) In the Aſp, the Weaſel and the Scarabee, they diſcern'd εἰκόνας τινὰς ἀμυδρὰς, certain obſcure repreſentations of the Power of the (n) Cic. de N. D. l. 3.

(o) Λόγος ἦν φυσικὸς ἐγκεκαλυμμένος μύθοις. Plutarch. ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. p. 83.

(p) Ibid. l. 3. c. 3. & 11.

(q) V. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 5. p. 179, 180, 186. Elmenhorſt. in Arnob. p. 172. Herald. in Arnob. p. 208.

(r) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 304.

(s) De N. D. l. 2.

(t) Videtiſne ut à phyſicis rebus tracta ratio ſit ad commentitios & fictos Deos?

(u) Deus pertinens per naturam cujuſque rei, per terras Ceres, per maria Neptunus.

(w) Mela de orbis ſitu, l. 1. c. 9.

(x) Effigies ſacri nitet aurea Cercopitheci. Juv. Sat. 15.

(y) Wower. in Min. Fæl. p. 261.

* M. Tyr. diſſ. 38.

(z) Hoffman. Umbr. in luc. p. 119.

(a) Ouzel. in Min. Fæl. p. 278.

(b) Hoffman. ſupr. p. 118.

(c) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 4. S. 9. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 1. c. ult.

(d) Hoffman. ſupr. p. 123.

(e) Grot. expl. Decal. ad Exod. 20. 3. Bochart. de Anim. p. 1. l. 2. c. 53.

(f) Ouzel. ſupr.

(g) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 121.

(h) Ubi ſupr.

(i) Plut. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 380.

Gods, and in the Crocodile who is without Tongue; for ſo Divine Reaſon ſilently with Juſtice adminiſtreth Humane Affairs, and in ſeeing not being ſeen he reſembleth the principal God; wherefore we ought to approve, not thoſe that worſhip theſe, but thoſe that through theſe worſhip the Divinity, as being the clearer Glaſſes and the natural. And it is not fit, that any thing inanimate and ſenſeleſs (as Images are) ſhould be preferr'd before that which is animate and hath Senſe. This Paganical Principle of beſtial Idolatry, that the Divinity may be worſhipp'd through Animals (that the Egyptians did well in giving Religious Adoration to Animals, with intention to terminate it upon God) is entertain'd and enlarg'd amongſt the Pontifician Theologers, who are not aſham'd to aſſert, (k) that we may lawfully worſhip God in any Creature whatſoever. So the Banians Religion bindeth them, (l) to give worſhip to God upon ſight of any of his Creatures firſt preſented to the Eye after the riſing Sun; eſpecially they pay their Devotion to the Sun and Moon. The Banians ſtill retain another Principle of the Egyptians worſhip of Animals, the Tranſmigration of Souls; for they worſhipp'd ſome of their Animals as animated Statues of their deify'd Heroes. The Ox Apis at Memphis (whom they ſuppos'd, to be (m) conceiv'd by Lunar Rays, and therefore a Treaſury of Celeſtial Virtue) was worſhipp'd (n) as the Image of Oſiris's Soul; (o) and they ſuppos'd, that Oſiris's Soul paſs'd by Tranſmigration into Apis. So Apollonius Tyanæus perſuaded the Alexandrians, (p) that a certain good-natur'd Lion was King Amaſis; whereupon the Prieſts convening ſacrific'd to Amaſis, adorn'd the Beaſt, ſent him into the interior parts of Egypt with Muſick, Hymns and Songs. Whence it appeareth, that Symbolical Worſhip mix'd with proper was given to the Sacred Animals, not only by the ſottiſh vulgar, (q) but by the intelligent Philoſophic Pagans, whoſe Philoſophy (Philoſophic Phantaſtry) was the Parent or Nurſe of the groſſeſt beſtial Idolatry.

To the Intelligent Philoſophic Pagans the Apoſtle hath reſpect, Rom. 1. 22, 23, 25. Profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe they became fools; and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds and four-footed Beaſts, and creeping things. They changed the truth of God into a Lye. The Gentiles chang'd the σέβασμα, Religious Worſhip objectively underſtood: The Truth of God and the Glory of the uncorruptible God is the σέβασμα; therefore as it is the σέβασμα, the Gentiles chang'd or turn'd it into a Lye, a vile Image or vile Animals, making theſe the σέβασμα they muſt neceſſarily change the σέβασμα into theſe; as they that make the Miſſal Sacrifice the Holy Euchariſt, neceſſarily change the Holy Euchariſt into the Miſſal Sacrifice. But this change of the Truth of God (that is, of the Truth of the Godhead, not of the true Notices of God) and of the Glory of the uncorruptible God may be alſo underſtood (r) in a ſenſe of permutation or exchange, as Money is ſaid to be chang'd into Commodities; ſo the Gentiles exchang'd the Truth and Glory of God for Images and Animals. But this Expoſition ſeemeth alien from the Apoſtles ſenſe (whoſe words import an hideous Transformation of the Godhead by the Gentile Idolatries) as alſo from the Pſalmiſts, Pſal. 106. 20. They chang'd their Glory (their God) into the ſimilitude of an Ox that eateth Graſs; Egyptianizing in their Idolatry. The Antiquity of this Egyptian Idolatry (that Idolatry was the Religion of Egypt in the Age of Moſes, (s) and that in his Days a principal Branch of their Idolatry was the worſhip of Animals) is viſible enough in the Moſaic Pentateuch, Deut. 4. 15, 16. And ſeeing all agree, that the Egyptians were immenſely Superſtitious, that much of their Superſtition was about Animals (particularly lanata animalia) and that they were extreamly nice and divided in their Superſtition about them (for they ſacrific'd Oxen, but not Boves Fœminas, and eat other parts of the ſacrific'd Ox, but not the Head;) hence I look upon it as a thing unqueſtionable, that the Egyptians averſation from foreign Shepherds, and from eating with the Hebrews (as afterwards with the Greeks) was from their Superſtition, ſome of their nice Superſtitions about Animals, and that all other Accounts of it are illegitimate. If the Hebrews ſacrific'd a Cow (Exod. 8. 26.) if they ate any Food which the Egyptians abhorr'd, (Gen. 43. 32.) if the Foreign Shepherds fed on Sheep or Sheeps-Milk, violated their Inſtitutes touching Sheeps-Wool, or any other of their Inſtitutes about the lanata animalia, they muſt neceſſarily be an Abomination to ſome of the Egyptians, Gen. 46. 24. Notwithſtanding the naſtineſs and ſenceleſneſs of their Idolatry the Jews ſometime egyptianiz'd ſo far, that they worſhipp'd Animal Forms, as the Prophet repreſenteth the Idolatry of their Ancients or Sanhedrin; Ezek. 8. 7,—11. He brought me to the Door of the Court, and when I looked, behold, a hole in the Wall. Then ſaid he unto me, Son of Man, dig now in the Wall. And when I had digged in the Wall, behold a Door. And he ſaid unto me, go in, and behold the wicked Abominations that they do here. So I went in, and ſaw, and behold, every Form of creeping things, and abominable Beaſts, and all the Idols of the Houſe of Iſrael pourtrayed upon the Wall round about. And there ſtood before them ſeventy Men of the Ancients of the Houſe of Iſrael, and in the midſt of them ſtood Jaazaniah the Son of Shaphan, with every Man his Cenſer in his Hand, and a thick Cloud of Incenſe went up. Then ſaid he unto me, Son of Man, haſt thou ſeen what the Ancients of the Houſe of Iſrael do in the dark, every Man in the Chambers of his Imagery?

(k) Vaſqu. in 3. Th. Diſp. 110. qu. 25.

(l) Lord's Diſc. p. 60.

(m) Seld. de D. Syr. ſynt. 1. c. 4.

(n) Plut. de Iſ. & Oſir. p. 362.

(o) Diodor. Sic. l. 1. p. 76.

(p) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 74.

(q) Maſſeium Indic. p. 55, 56.

(r) De Dieu in l. c.

(s) Bochart. de Anim. p. 1. l. 2. c. 53. Seld. de D. Syr. ſynt. 1. c. 4. Herodot. Euterp. c. 39, 41. Pignor. Menſ. Iſ. p. 22. Beroald. in Apul. p. 962.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

1. The general Notion of a Symbolical Deity. 2. The Deſign of the Symbols of the Gods. 3. The Nature of them. 4. How far they were Deify'd by the Pagans. 5. A due abatement of our Account. 6. Of Image-worſhip amongſt the Jews, and of the Firſt and Second Commandment. 7. Of the Iſraelites worſhip of the Golden Calf, and the Idolatry of the Ten Tribes. 8. Of the Idolatry of the Pagano-Chriſtians Image-worſhip. 9. They have improv'd in Symbol Idolatry, yet in ſome reſpect fall ſhort of the Pagans. 10. Their Images, as the Pagans, are vicarious and ſubſtitute to the remote Exemplar. 11. Their Images are parallel to the Pagans in the ſuppos'd preſence of their Divi and other reſpects. 12. Their Rites of Image-worſhip are an Imitation of Paganiſm. 13. The weak defence of their Images and Image-worſhip.

I. NExt to the Animal Deities a principal Crime of the Gentiles Religious Worſhip was their Symbolical Deities or their Image σεβάσματα under which Names we comprize thoſe Symbols of the Gods, which were things natural as well as things artificial; Trees, Mountains, Pillars, Pyramids, rude Stones, pieces of Wood without any Imagery of Man or Beaſt, monſtrous Repreſentations, Images of Humane Shape or other regular Figure, which were εἴδωλα, in a twofold ſenſe; both as being Repreſentations, and as being the Objects of Idolatry. But the Name of Symbolical Deities is applicable to the Deities themſelves, as well as to their Symbols; for a Symbolical Deity may ſignifie ſuch a perſonal Godhead, which is a Symbolical Deity, and it may ſignifie ſuch an Image which is a Symbolical Deity. (t) There are two ways of worſhipping the Gods, the one without, the other with Symbols, Statues, Images; which latter is the Symbolical way, and the Pagans way, and their Deities being worſhipp'd (agreeably and according to their Inſtitution) in this Symbolical way, are therefore fitly call'd Symbolical Deities; for ſuch they are by their Statue-Religion. And becauſe their Statue-Religion is a Symbol-Idolatry, and the Symbols of the Gods are in ſome ſort deify'd by it, theſe are alſo fitly denominated Symbolical Deities. But they may be call'd Symbolical Deities, only to ſignifie the Gods ſymbolically underſtood as (u) every Image of Juno was call'd Juno, the Iſraelites call'd their Symbol Elohim, Exod. 32. 23. and when the Pagan Writers ſpeak of their ſeveral Deities (Jupiter Ammon, Berecyntbia Mater, and ſuch more) it is thoſe Deities as Symbolically repreſented and perſonated, which they uſually mean; agreeably whereunto the Poet ſpeaketh.

(t) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 38.

(u) S. Aug. ſupr. Judic. Qu. 16.

Propter quæ fas eſt genua incerare Deorum.

The Gentile Idolatry was for ſome time, and in ſome places of long time, without theſe Symbolical Dieties or Image-σεβάσματα. The moſt ancient ſeem to have been Ἀνδριάντες στηλῶν (as Cedrenus calleth them) Statues of Pillars or rude unpoliſh'd Stones anointed and conſecrated. And becauſe a Statue (w) is a Structure, to which People reſort for Divine Service, and conſequently it determineth the place of Religious Worſhip, therefore a Statue is neceſſarily Beth-El an Houſe of God; and conſequently Jacob's fact, Gen. 28. 18. his erecting and anointing a Pillar, and the name Bethel which he gave the place, might be tranſcrib'd from the Pagans. In proceſs of time Images of Humane Shape were introduc'd; but the ancient Statues before Dædalus (in which neither the Hands were diſ-joyn'd from the Sides, nor the Feet from one another) could be but rude Symbols of the Gods.

(w) Maimon. de Idol. c. 6. S. 8.

II. The Pagans Symbols of the Gods were deſign'd and inſtituted, to be vicarious and ſubſtitute Deities, ſo as (viſibly and inviſibly) to preſentiate the Deities, and to be ſo far proximate and preſent Deities. (x) Images were form'd by the Gentiles, that they might have before their Eyes that which they worſhipp'd. (y) Theſe were Inſtruments, whereby they might have their Gods with them, behold them before their Eyes, ſpeak immediately to them, and with them as preſent perſons, mingle as it were their Religious Colloquies; (z) for there is a great deſire in all Men, to worſhip the Divinity, not at a diſtance, but at hand, approaching and touching; ſo Phidias in Dio Chryſoſtom pleadeth for the Statue of Jupiter Olympius. (a) For this reaſon, when Oſiris was worſhipp'd throughout Egypt, and his living Image was viſible only in the ſuperiour part of it, the Metropolis of Memphis; the Prieſts took occaſion to ſet on foot a Schiſm, and thoſe of Heliopolis would alſo have a ſacred Bull, that their Deity might be as viſible and preſent to them, as to the other Egyptians. So thoſe old Idolomaniſts the Idolatrous Iſraelites, Exod. 32. 1. deſir'd a Statue-Divinity, a God to go before them, and like jolly Religioniſts they danc'd about their Deity, although the Symbols of the Gods (b) were thought to be of good uſe, to keep the People in awe, to reſtrain them from evil practices, and to make them Religious in their behaviour, as ſuppoſing themſelves in the preſence of their Gods. (c) Our Fathers (ſaith Julian) appointed them, to be Symbols of the Gods, σύμβολα τῆς παρουσίας τῶν θεῶν, Symbols of their preſence. And becauſe they were the preſence of the Gods to them; the Sicilians in Cicero complain, (d) They had now no Gods left them in their Cities, to flee to for help, becauſe Verres had taken away their moſt holy Images out of their Temples. So the Ambracienſes in Livy complain. (e) The Gods being pull'd out of their Seats, they had now none to adore, none to pray and make ſupplication unto. They had loſt the preſence of their Deities having loſt their Images; for it was ſuppos'd, that the Symbols were both a viſible and a virtual, a repreſentative and a perſonal-real preſence of the Gods to them.

(x) Gentiles ob hoc ſimulachra finxerunt, ut in ipſis erroribus oculis cernerent, quod colebant. P. Chryſol. Ser. 147.

(y) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 6. p. 192.

(z) Herald. in Arnob. p. 241.

(a) V. Dr. Teniſon of Idol. p. 26.

(b) Herald. ſupr. p. 256. Arnob. p. 208.

(c) In Fragm. inter op. p. 537.

(d) Lactan. l. 2. c. 4.

(e) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 9. c. 2.

The Statues as viſibly repreſenting their Deities were their viſible and repreſentative Preſence; and both a Phyſical and a Legal kind of Repreſentative. For as the external Form and Figure of the Image repreſenteth the Prototype, it is a Phyſical kind of Repreſentative. And becauſe it ſuſtaineth the Prototype's Perſon, beareth his Name, receiveth his Worſhip in his place and ſtead, and is the Prototype to the Religioniſt, not φύσει, by Nature, but θέσει, by Inſtitution and vacarious Subſtitution, it is a Legal kind of Repreſentative. (f) Simulachra hæc omnia Diis immortalibus vicaria Subſtitutione formatis. Theſe Images are all of them made to the Immortal Gods by vicarious Subſtitution. So the Statue of Jupiter is a Vicarious and Subſtitute Jupiter.

(g) Origen ſuppoſeth a Perſonal-real Preſence of the Demons at their Statues, that they delight to dabble in the matter, and as Smell-feaſts deliciate themſelves in the Steams and Nidor's of the Sacrifices, and are as it were nail'd thereunto (αἵμασι ϗ κνίσῃ προσηλωμένοι,) upon which account, as alſo upon the account of Magical incantations, they adher'd to their Altars and Statues; where if they wrought any extraordinary Operations (gave Oracles, heal'd Diſeaſes, puniſh'd Tranſgreſſors) as the Pagans ſuppos'd, theſe could not fail to beget in their Minds an Opinion of the perſonal Preſence of their Deities there. They had alſo an Opinion, (h) that certain Powers dwelt in their Statues, which when their Statues were ruin'd, took their flight to Heaven, (i) that their Deities inhabited and animated their Statues; (k) and that their ſacred (Magical) dedication introduc'd them; (l) and their Theurgic Art pretended (by Deiform Spices and other Materials,) to make a perfect and pure receptacle for the Gods. This Opinion was common amongſt the Pagans, but could not be Catholic; for their Symbols of the elder times were manifeſtly incapable of inhabitation and animation by their Deities (the Theſpians (m) worſhipp'd a Bough for Cinxia, the Icarians an unhewn piece of Wood for Diana, the Peſſinuntii a Flint for the Mother of the Gods, the Romans a Spear for Mars, the Samii a Frame of Wood for Juno;) and the more intelligent Pagans thought of Statues as Clinia in the Eleventh of Plato's Laws. Of the Gods (ſaith he) ſome are ſeen; to others which we ſee not, we erect Images and Statues. And although theſe be inanimate, yet whilſt we Worſhip them, we think the animate Deities have upon that account a very great favour for us.

(n) They were generally ſuppos'd by their Favour and Help preſent in their Images (which is their virtual preſence;) whence the Tyrians bound the Image of Apollo faſt with Golden Chains, and the Athenians clipt the Wings of the Image of Victory, that they might not loſe the preſence of their Deities. Hence ſome carry'd about with them the Image of Alexander M. The Philoſopher Aſclepiades carry'd about with him a Silver Image of the Celeſtial Goddeſs. The Egyptians in travel carry'd with them the Image of ſome Deity, to which they made ſolemn Supplication on Feſtival-days, and to whoſe Guardianſhip they committed themſelves. The Philiſtines carry'd their Idols with them, when they went to Battel. 2 Sam. 5. 21. and the Silver-ſhrines for Diana, Act. 19. 24. were certain portatile Temples, wherein the Image of Diana was inclos'd, which the Religioniſts of that Goddeſs carry'd about with them as their Defenſative and for Religious Worſhip. So the Images of the Gods in the City of Rome are ſaid, (o) to have conſerv'd to the City perpetual Happineſs. (p) And Ammianus ſaith, that the City Memphis was famous by the Preſence of the God Æſculapius.

III. The Images of the Pagans therefore muſt not be conſider'd as chiefly a medium of Worſhip: But the Nature of them chiefly conſiſteth in being certain proximate and preſent Deities. Not that the intelligent Pagans accounted them Gods (perſonal Gods, or of the number of Gods,) or ſuppos'd them to be the Gods whoſe Names they bore; for who but ſuch an one that is wholly a Fool, thinketh the Statues Gods? (q) ſaith Celſus. Agreeably to whom other Pagans (r) Theologize. Some of them are ſo nice, that they diſlike the common Language, and would not have the Statues called by the Name of the Gods whom they repreſent, becauſe it ingendreth an Opinion in the Minds of Men, that the Statues are thoſe real perſonal Gods. Philoſophers ſay, They that underſtand not words, abuſe the things, (s) ſaith Plutarch. As the Greeks that have not learn'd, nor are accuſtom'd, to call the brazen, painted and ſtony (Symbols) the Statues or Honours of the God, but the Gods, have proceeded to ſuch extravagant boldneſs, as to ſay, that Lachares ſtript Minerva, Dionyſius ſhav'd away Apollo's golden Locks, Jupiter Capitolinus about the Civil War was burnt and periſht. The ſame Author preferreth the Egyptians Worſhip of Animals as Symbols of the Gods before the Worſhip of Statues, (t) becauſe theſe are inanimate, devoid of Senſe, not ſo good as dead, for they never were alive. (u) The Ancients underſtood (ſay the Pagans,) that the Symbols have nothing of Divinity (God-propriety,) and that there is not any Sence at all in them. The uſe which ſome pretended to make of them, was (w) by the Contemplation of the viſible Symbol to aſcend ἐπὶ τὸ νοούμενον, to the inviſible intelligible Deity, which they repreſented. (x) Theſe are the Images, thoſe are the Gods, of which they are the Images. But notwithſtanding that by theſe Sayings the Pagans ſeem to make their Images no Gods, yet if the Aſclepian Dialogue (one of the Triſmegiſtic Books) doth ſpeak the Senſe of the intelligent Pagans (as in all probability it doth,) they pretended (y) by making Images efficere Deos, to make Gods. Therefore to make their Sayings conſiſtent with themſelves, we muſt diſtinguiſh between their Deities ſimply and without addition ſuch, and their Deities proximate or preſent. If they had ſuppos'd their Images, to be their Deities ſimply and without addition ſuch, they muſt have deſtroy'd their being Images, and have made them Prototypes, not Images. But although they could not ſuppoſe a Deity, to be an Image, nor an Image to be no Image, but a Deity (the Prototype,) yet they look'd upon their Images as the Deities proximate and preſent. For the Statue in it ſelf is the Deity as viſibly preſentiated; and in reſpect of what it is cauſally and concomitantly, it is the Deities inviſible Preſence, (a Deity inviſibly preſentiated;) and alſo its Topical Deity-ſhip (thereby it became the Deity of that place and people, which poſſeſs'd its Image;) in theſe reſpects therefore it is a proximate and preſent Deity. They that ſuppoſed their Images the Habitations of the Deities, ſuppos'd them proximate and preſent Deities in reſpect of their Inhabitants; and the complicate of theſe two, the Image and the Inhabitant muſt be thought a proximate and preſent Deity. They that did not ſuppoſe their Statues animated, yet (linking together the perſonal or virtual Preſence of their Deities with

---

(f) Arnob. ſupr. l. 6. p. 195.

(g) C. Celſ. l. 3. p. 128. l. 7. p. 374. l. 8. p. 418.

(h) Sozomen. Hiſt. l. 7. c. 15.

(i) Dr. Hamm. of Idolatry. S. 34.

(k) Arnob. ſupr. l. 6. p. 203.

(l) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 139.

(m) Arnob. ſupr. l. 6. p. 196.

(n) Dr. Ham. ſupr. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 24. Spencer. de Leg. Heb. l. 3. Diſſ. 1. c. 3. S. 1.

(o) Φυλάξαι τῇ πόλει τὴν εὐδαιμονίαν ἀίδιον. Zoſim. Hiſt. l. 5.

(p) Præſentia numinis Æſculapii Clara. l. 22.

(q) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 373.

(r) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 6. p. 203. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 4. c. 7. S. Aug. in Pſal. 113. Julian. in Fragm. inter op. p. 537.

(s) De Iſ. p. 379.

(t) Ibid. p. 382.

(u) Nihil habere numinis ſigna, neque ullum omnino ineſſe his ſenſum. Arnob. ſupr. p. 208.

(w) Orig. ſupr. l. 7. p. 362.

(x) Orig. ibid. l. 6. p. 284. Athenag. Legat. p. 17.

(y) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 8. c. 23, 24.

with their viſible Preſences) ſuppos'd them as good as animated; for a Statue that hath a δαίμων πάρεδρος, aſſociate Demon, is as good a Deity as an animated Statue. So a Deity eſpecially and virtually preſent in or at his Statue, to receive Honour and Worſhip, hear Prayers and relieve his Suppliant, is as good a Deity to all the purpoſes of Religious Worſhip as an animated Statue, and is alike a proximate and preſent Deity. The Statues of the Deities being alſo Vicarious and Subſtitute to them, (yet ſo as inviſibly as well as viſibly to preſentiate them,) and their Legal kind of Repreſentatives, to receive their Worſhip in their place and ſtead, were ſo far Deities preſent by Proxy, and the Pagans worſhipp'd their Deities as ſuch. (z)

The Etherial Gods by the Statues became proximate and preſent.
Jove may be pray'd to without travelling ſo far as Heaven.
His Statue being a vicarious ſubſtitute Jove.

IV. If the Form of Jove was worſhipp'd for Jove (as the Poet ſaith,) the Pagans Images were their σεβάσματα, objects of Religious Worſhip; and conſequently they made them Gods at leaſt in a partial limited Senſe, if not by attributing to them ſubjective Perfection, yet in a way of objective Application. (a) The Image is adorn'd, conſecrated, worſhipp'd, and then it is made a God. The Firſt of theſe the ornamental pompouſneſs and gariſhneſs of the Images (their ſplendor of Gold and Silver, their ſumptuous Veſtments, Crowns and Enſigns of Power, Jer. 10. 9. Baruch ch. 6.) was one allective to Idolatry; as goodly Proportion, comely Stature, and gorgeous Apparel adorn and ſet forth the Perſons of Men (they ſeem goodly Perſonages,) whereby Women are enamour'd upon them: So were Idolaters upon their Idols, whence the Prophet ſtileth them חֲמוּדֵיהֶם (their delectable or deſirable things, Iſa. 44. 9.) a word whence the Arabian Prophet hath his Name Muhammed, which ſignifieth precious or deſirable. The Second thing requiſite to deifie the Images, was their Conſecration, (b) which was done by the Prieſts, and was ſuppos'd, to bring the Gods into them: But whether this Conſecration was perform'd with a certain Form of Words or not, (c) this the learned (becauſe the old Pontifical Books are loſt) pretend not to know. Doubtleſs, the Conſecration of Images for publick Worſhip was a Branch of the Pagans Theurgy (as appeareth (f) from Proclus;) the Gods were introduc'd into them διά τινων συμβόλων, by certain Symbols, by which Name the Theurgiſts underſtand Words, Characters, Charms, Plants, Animals, and the Sacerdotal Veſtments. Their Idol-worſhip (which is the Third thing requiſite to make an Image a God) was interiour and exteriour (uſually commix'd and complicate,) the Rites whereof are diſtinguiſh'd by Maimonides (g) into thoſe that are appropriate to the ſeveral Idols (as the caſting of Stones at Mercury was his proper Worſhip,) and thoſe that are proper to the Worſhip of the true God, Incurvation, Incenſe, Libation, Sacrifice, Invocation, Bleſſing, making Vows and Swearing by them. An Image-σέβασμα, thus made is call'd a God in Scripture, and the making of it is the making a God. Exod. 20. 23. Ye ſhall not make with me Gods of Silver, neither ſhall ye make unto you Gods of Gold. Exod. 34. 17. Thou ſhalt make thee no molten Gods. Iſa. 44. 15, 17. He maketh a God and worſhippeth it: He maketh a graven Image and falleth down thereto. —— the reſidue thereof he maketh a God, even his graven Image. The making it his σέβασμα the object of his Religious Worſhip was the making it a God.

The Heathen made their Images Gods in reſpect of ſubjective Perfection, ſo far as to ſuppoſe them their proximate and preſent Deities. In thus deifying their Images vulgar Heathen tranſcended the more intelligent. For Origen ſaith of them; (h) they would not endure, that any one ſhould ſay, that their ador'd Statues are not Gods. (i) The ſacredneſs and ſublimity of their place, their ſolemn Worſhip, the attendance and multitude of their Suppliants, their ſhape and pourtraiture, ſo amus'd and affected ſome vulgar Heathen (as S. Auſtin ſaith;) that they durſt not account them ſenſleſs, but thought them living, or that a living Inhabitant was in them. Agreeably whereto ſome of them pray their Images, (k) to be Keepers and Guardians of their Cattel. It would be an extravagance, to impute to the generality of the Heathen all the Idolatrous Conceits of theſe vulgar Heathen: But thus much we may ſafely affirm, that the generality of the Heathen, who made their Images the Objects of their Religious Worſhip, ſo far deify'd them in reſpect of ſubjective Perfection, they ſuppos'd them their proximate and preſent Deities. Whence they had an high Opinion of them (of their Power and Efficacy) repos'd a mighty Truſt in them, and made great aſcriptions to them, as may be exemplify'd in the Jews ſymbolizing with the Heathen in their Idolatries. For as the Heathen truſted in graven Images, boaſted themſelves of Idols, and aſcribed to them their Succeſſes and Proſperities: So God by the Prophet declareth, that for this reaſon he had foretold a great deliverance of the Jews, before it came to paſs, that when it was come to paſs, they might not aſcribe it to their Images. Iſa. 48. 5. I have from the beginning declar'd it to thee, before it was come to paſs, I ſhew'd it thee, leſt thou ſhouldſt ſay, mine Idol hath done them, and my graven Image and my molten Image hath commanded them. The great Opinion which the Idolaters had of the Power and Efficacy of their Images (or Idols) occaſion'd theſe words of God by the Prophet. Iſa. 40. 18, 19, 20, 25. To whom will ye liken God? Or to whom ſhall I be equal, ſaith the Holy one. The Workman melteth a graven Image, and the Goldſmith ſpreadeth it over with Gold, and caſteth Silver Chains. He that is ſo impoveriſh'd, that he hath no Oblation, chooſeth a Tree that will not rot; he ſeeketh unto him a cunning Workman, to prepare a graven Image that ſhall not be moved. Iſa. 46. 5, 6, 7. To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal and compare me, that we may be like? They laviſh Gold out of the Bag, and weigh Silver in the Ballance, and hire a Goldſmith, and he maketh it a God. They bear him upon the Shoulder, they carry him and ſet him in his place, and he ſtandeth. The Sin which God in theſe places of the Prophet inveigheth againſt, is not meerly the Sin of making Pictures of God (which yet is an high and heinous criminality:) But the Crime is of a more criminal Character; for the Idolaters in making their Images Objects of their Religious Worſhip and in their high Opinion of them made them Beings like unto God and his Compeers; and therefore God, to ſhew the infinite

Ii distance

(z) Sic homines meruere Deos, quos arduus Æther occulit, & colitur pro Jove forma Jovis. Ovid. de ponto. l. 2.

(a) Simulachrum ornatur, conſecratur, oratur, tunc Deus eſt. Min. Fœl. p. 220.

(b) Quintil. Declam. 323.

(c) Guther de vet. jur. pontif. l. 4. c. 20.

(f) Theol. Plat. l. 1. c. 29. Gale in Jambl. p. 285.

(g) De I-d. c. 2, 3, 4.

(h) C. Celſ. l. 7. p. 375.

(i) S. Aug. Ep. 49. Qu. 3. & in Pſal. 113.

(k) Hoffman. umbr. in luce p. 141.

Iſa. 42. 17. Pſal. 97. 7. Judg. 16. 23. Dan. 5. 4.

diſtance between himſelf and their Idols, expatiateth in the following Verſes in a large Declaration of his infinite Power. So Calvin interpreteth God's Expoſtulation, quòd ipſum parem facerent Idolis, they made Idols his Compeers, and they did ſo in making them Idols. From the diſparity between God and Idols, and becauſe they are totally heterogeneous (which Image-Religioniſm over-looketh) the Apoſtle inferreth the Folly and Impiety of the Athenian Idolatry. Act. 17. 28, 29. Certain of your own Poets have ſaid, for we are alſo his Off-ſpring. Foraſmuch then as we are the Off-ſpring of God, we ought not to think, that the Godhead is like unto Gold, or Silver, or Stone graven by art and man's device. The Crime which the Apoſtle reproveth in the Athenians is their Image σεβάσματα, which were a making the Godhead like thoſe Images. But we ought not to think the Godhead like thoſe (either by likeneſs of Compariſon or Repreſentation,) or that thoſe are like the Godhead (in Matter, Form, Nature, Nobleneſs or other Reſpect,) ſeeing we know ſo much of God, that we are his reſembling Off-ſpring. We that know ſo much of God by natural Notice, cannot but know, that the Godhead is not like unto Mens artificial Images and mechanical Statues, to Gold, Silver or Stone graven by art and Mans Device; therefore your making the Godhead ſuch by your Image σεβάσματα, is atrocious Impiety. Thus the Apoſtle argueth with the Athenians, agreeably to what a Pagan Theologer ſaith, (l) ſpeaking univerſally, a Lover of God ought not to pay Honour to any things, that are below Human Nature.

As the Apoſtle repreſenteth the Athenians Statues as no better than graven Gold, Silver, or Stone: So the Scripture uſually repreſenteth the Heathens σεβάσματα, (Objects of Religious Worſhip) as ſenſleſs Idols, that can neither See, Speak, nor Hear; vain Fray-bugs, that hold in their hands a Scepter, a Dagger, or an Ax, but can do no execution (whereby they are known not to be Gods, Baruch 6. 16.) Carpenters Chips (as one in Hen. 8. days called the Images, and was accus'd of Hereſie for his ſaying,) and Wooden Logs, part of ſuch Materials that are us'd for the Fire. Iſa. 44. 16, 17. They have no knowledge, that ſet up the Wood of their graven Image, and pray unto a God that cannot ſave. Iſa. 45. 20. Saying to a Stock, thou art my Father; and to a Stone thou haſt brought me forth. Jer. 2. 17. Wiſd. 14. 21. Men aſcribed unto Stocks and Stones the incommunicable Name. Iſa. 44. 10. Who hath formed a God or molten a graven Image, that is profitable for nothing? So in many other places of Scripture the ſenſleſs Statues are ſaid to be the Gods of the Heathens Religious Worſhip; agreeably whereto (m) the Chriſtian Apologiſts uſually reproach the Pagans with their wooden, ſtony and metalline Gods; that leaving Heaven they framed to themſelves Terreſtrial Gods; that it is madneſs, to believe that a God, and to implore its aid, which themſelves have made; to ſuppoſe Images made by Men, to be Gods that work Miracles; and that they might be aſhamed, to hope for Defence and Guardianſhip from that which needed their Guardianſhip. But although the Pagans, their Gods or their Idols are deſervedly thus reproach'd and expos'd by holy Men and in holy Scripture, yet it is certain, that they conſider'd their Idols or Images in one Notion, and the Scripture conſidereth them in another. For when the Scripture thus reproacheth them, it conſidereth their Images only as to what they are in themſelves: But the Pagans conſider'd them, as to the whole of what they are in their Magical Religion, and therefore as their proximate and preſent Deities. So Arnobius conſider'd them, when he was a Pagan. (n) I worſhipp'd Images (ſaith he) that came out of the Furnaces, Gods that were fabricated on the Anvil and by the Hammer. —— I ſpake to and flatter'd a ſmooth anointed Stone, as if a Divine Preſence was in it. So ſometimes the Scripture conſidereth the Heathens Idols as their proximate and preſent Deities; for ſo the Apoſtle conſidereth them, when he ſaith; 1 Cor. 10. 20. The things which the Gentiles Sacrifice, they Sacrifice to Devils.

V. This account that we have given of the Pagans Symbolical Deities, is not ſo to be underſtood, as if all their Symbol-Idolatry was of this high ſtrain, which we have repreſented; for ſome of it was without any Rites of Religious Worſhip. As the Ancilia and Palladium introduc'd by Numa (a great Adverſary of Image-Worſhip) as Pledges of Divine Favour and of Empire, were made Idols without the Rites of Idol-worſhip, by repoſing an Idolatrous truſt in them. And the Brazen Serpent amongſt the Jews being worſhipp'd by one only Rite of Religious Worſhip, became an Idol; the Children of Iſrael burnt Incenſe unto it. Some of the Pagans Symbols of their Gods were Idol-Symbols, that were not ſuppos'd to be ſuch proximate and preſent Deities as their Images; without ſuppoſing them ſuch it was Idolatry to Worſhip them as meer Symbols relative to their Deities, on which account they were uſually worſhipp'd. As Theocritus introduceth the Plane Tree thus ſpeaking; (o) Worſhip me, for I am Helena's Tree.

VI. If the God of Iſrael had been ſuch a Symbolical Diety, as the Pagan Deities were, (a Diety to be worſhipp'd by a Symbol, Image or Statue,) Image-worſhip amongſt the Iſraelites would not have chang'd the object of Worſhip; for in worſhipping their Calves they did not intentionally change the object of Worſhip any farther than to change its mode of Subſiſtence, by preſentiating that Deity, which otherwiſe was (as they ſuppos'd) of remote Subſiſtence: But becauſe the God of Iſrael was no ſuch Symbolical Deity, therefore their Image-worſhip really chang'd the object of Worſhip, and was the Worſhip of an heterogeneous Symbolical Trinket inſtead of the true natural Perſon of their Deity. The true natural Perſon of their Deity was the object-no-object of their Image-worſhip, it was intended to him, but was really alien'd from him. If Children ſhould make a Sign-poſt the Repreſentative of their abſent Father, and pay to it their Filial Homage in his place and ſtead, the true and natural Perſon of their Father would be the object-no-object of ſuch Filial Homage. Or if an Husband ſhould make a Bed-poſt the Repreſentative of his abſent Wife, and pay to it the Conjugal Duty in her place and ſtead, the true natural Perſon of his Wife would be the object-no-object of ſuch Conjugal Duty. To pay that Conjugal Duty which is proper to her true natural Perſon, to a Proxy of his own deviſing, is not to pay it to her, but to alienate

(l) Ὅλως γὰρ τὰ χείρονα τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης ȣ̓σίας ȣ̓ καθήκει τιμᾶν τῷ ἐρωτικῶς ἔχοντι τȣ̃ Θεȣ̃. Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 46.

Pſal. 135. 15. and 115. 4. Iſa. 41. 7, 21, &c. Jer. 10. 14. Habak. 2. 18, 19.

(m) Dalleus de rel. cult. object. l. 1. c. 19, 20, &c.

(n) Adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 22.

(o) —— Σέβȣμ' Ἑλένας φυτόν εἰμι.

nate it from her, and to give it to another thing. So the worſhipping an Image may be called the worſhipping God by an Image, becauſe it is intentionally ſo: But really it is an alienating his Worſhip from him, and a giving it to the Image. For God's Worſhip, like Conjugal Duty to a Wife, cannot be given him by Proxy; nor is a Statue any more fit to be a Proxy Deity, than a Bed-poſt to be a Proxy-Wife; and the Inſtitution of a Proxy-Deity and a Proxy-Wife are alike incongruous.

An Image amongſt the Iſraelites was by Inſtitution and Deſign a vicarious or ſubſtitute Deity; what the true and natural Perſon of the Deity was to the immediate Adorers of it, that this putative ſuppoſititious Perſon of the Deity was to the Image-adorers; and becauſe they did unto it what is proper to be done only to the true and natural Perſon of the Deity, therefore they made the former, not the latter their Deity. This matter will be more clearly intelligible by comparing the Deity with the Papacy. If at the Election of a new Pope, when he is ſolemnly ador'd at Rome, the Romaniſts at Avignion ſhould erect and adore a golden Calf for a vicarious ſubſtitute Pope; if they ſhould pay their ſolemn Adorations to it, adorn it with all the magnificent Titles of his Holineſs, beg Indulgences from it, conſult it as their Oracle, and do unto it what the Catholicks at Rome do to the true and natural Perſon of the Pope; if this putative ſuppoſititious Perſon of the Pope ſhould be to the Romaniſts at Avignion (as to their ſtating of it) what the true and natural Perſon of the Pope is to the Catholicks at Rome. This would be making a Pope of Gold, as the Iſraelites made a God of Gold. And as Gold is not fit to make ſuch a ſubſtitute Pope of, the whole Inſtitution of ſuch a putative ſuppoſititious Perſon of the Pope is a monſtrous abſurdity, and the Pope himſelf would be concern'd to demoliſh it as an Idol-Pope and an Anti-Pope, and would forbid his Catholicks to reſort to it as their Head: So Gold is infinitely inept, to make a Subſtitute God of, and the whole Inſtitution of a putative ſuppoſititious Perſon of the God of Iſrael (ſuch as the Golden Calf was) is a monſtrous Idolatry. Or ſuppoſe a Party of Subjects, that live at a diſtance from the Court, ſhould erect a ſubſtitute King of Clouts, and pay their Homage, offer their Preſents, make their Petitions and reſort for Protection to this putative ſuppoſititious Perſon of the King, making it their Head of Sovereignty; ſuch a King of Clouts would be an Idol-King, and a tolerable reſemblance of the Iſraelites God of Gold.

The Nature of Idolatry (as that ſignifieth the giving God's Worſhip unto Creatures) is viſible in this Image-worſhip of the Iſraelites; from whence it followeth, that all ſuch Image-worſhip altereth the object of Worſhip, and maketh a new object; that we ought not to imagine ſuch a ſtrict Notion of Idolatry, as ſome ſuppoſe, which is not the giving the Worſhip of God to Creatures, but is the Worſhip of God by an Image; which maketh ſuch Images, not the Object, but only the medium of Worſhip; that when God forbiddeth Image-worſhip in the ſecond Commandment, he only forbiddeth that manner of Worſhip, not that Object. Both the general current of holy Scripture and the Contexture of the Decalogue demonſtrate, that there is miſtake in theſe Notices of Image-worſhip. For if Image-worſhip is not a mode of violating the firſt Commandment, whence is it, that the firſt Commandment hath no diſtinct Sanction, but the Sanction of the ſecond belongeth to both Commandments? They have one Sanction in common, therefore one criminality is common to the violation of them both, namely, the alienating from God his Worſhip and the giving it to a Creature. If there was nothing of this in Image-Worſhip, how could it merit an horrendous penalty, how could it move God's jealouſie (as the Rival of an adulterous Wife doth an Husband,) and be ſtiled hatred or inimical Affection to God (in a Senſe of eminence) in common with the violation of the firſt Commandment? And do not Image-worſhippers violate the firſt Commandment in ſaying (expreſly or implicitly) to their molten Images, Ye are our Gods? Iſa: 42. 17. The Firſt Commandment forbiddeth the having any other σέϐασμα, Object of Religious Worſhip, ſave only the true God; the Second particularly forbiddeth any Image σέϐασμα, which is one eminent mode (becauſe of the proclivity of Mankind to dote on a viſible Object) of violating the firſt Commandment. This will further appear from a brief explication of it.

In an Image σέϐασμα, two things are of diſtinct conſideration; the Image it ſelf, and the Religious Worſhip of it. Accordingly, two things are diſtinctly prohibited in the Commandment: Both the making the Image, and the making it a σέϐασμα, by Religious Worſhip. The Commandment diſtinctly enumerateth the ſeveral Practices of Image-religioniſts, and injoineth God's Religioniſts to eſchew them; and therefore the Intention and Purport of it is to ſay, That Gods People muſt be no Religioniſts in making them, bowing down to them and ſerving them. They muſt be no graven Image Religioniſts, ſaith the Commandment expreſly; graven or molten Images are by much the moſt noble and eminent ſort of Images; therefore if God's Religioniſts muſt be no graven Image Religioniſts, they muſt be no Religioniſts of any ſort of Images. Expreſly they are forbidden, to be graven Image-Religioniſts; implicitly and by conſequence the Precept is general, and they are commanded not to be at all Image-religioniſts, in making them, bowing down to them, or worſhipping them. Which ſheweth the vanity (p) of that Judaical Conceit, that the making extant or protuberant Images, but not the plain or depreſs, is prohibited by the Precept. Whereas the terms of the Precept [making, bowing down to, ſerving a graven Image] are nothing more than a Periphraſis or Deſcription of an Image-religioniſt; and therefore the making Extant or Protuberant Images, if there be nothing in it of Image-religioniſm, is no leſs lawful, than the making plain or depreſs; as appeareth from many Inſtances, the brazen Serpent, the Cherubims, Solomon's brazen Bulls, and golden Lions, and ſuch more. But upon this groundleſs Conceit (that the making extant and protuberant Images is unlawful) the Jews have founded the Criticiſms of their vain Superſtition. (q) It is forbidden, to make Images for Ornament only: It is not forbidden, to make an Image for Ornament, ſave only the figure of a Man (others extend the prohibition to the Images of all Animals,) and this muſt be underſtood of an Image that is Protuberant. A Ring whoſe Seal is the figure of a Man, if it be gibbous, is forbidden to be worn, but it is lawful to Seal with it (for the impreſſion will be hollow:) But if the

Figure

(p) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. Diſſ. 5. c. 7. S. 1. vid. Petav. T. 4. par. 2. l. 15. c. 14. S. 4.

(q) Maimon. de Idol. c. 3, 12, 13.

Figure be depreſs or hollow, it is lawful to wear it, but not to ſeal with it, for the Impreſſion will be gibbous. Such Criticiſms of vain Superſtitioniſts are altogether beſides the Intention of the Lawgiver, whoſe Deſign is, to alienate his People from all Image-Religioniſm, and from nothing but Image-Religioniſm, Deut. 4. 15, 16. Take good heed unto your ſelves (for ye ſaw no manner of ſimilitude on the day that the Lord ſpake unto you in Horeb out of the midſt of the Fire) leſt ye corrupt your ſelves, and make you a Graven Image, the ſimilitude of any Figure, the likeneſs of Male or Female. Similitude (Temunah) both in this Text and in the Second Commandment is added to Graven Image by way of Explication, not of Diſtinction, (r) as ſome Learned Men rightly ſuppoſe; but this is no ſufficient ground for certain Criticiſms of theirs in matter of Religion; viz. that the Second Commandmemt forbiddeth none but Graven Images, or none but Graven Images reſembling Animals (theſe being the Images capable of Animation) and that it forbiddeth the Jews the making or having ſuch Images. For the Intention of the Lawgiver is (becoming a Lawgiver in matter of Religion, and agreeable to the deſign of the Moſaic Inſtitution, which was, to unpaganize the Iſraelites) neither more nor leſs, than to forbid his Religioniſts, to be Image-Religioniſts. They are forbid all Image-Religioniſm, as appeareth from the Reaſon of the Law, ye ſaw no ſimilitude. They are therefore commanded, to demoliſh all the Pagans Image-σεβάσματα without exception; Numb. 33. 52. Ye ſhall drive out all the Inhabitants of the Land from before you, and deſtroy all their Pictures, and all their Molten Images. As they are commanded to deſtroy all the Pagans Image-σεβάσματα, ſo they are forbid the making or having any of their own, whereby they would become guilty of the Crime of being Image-Religioniſts; Lev. 26. 1. Ye ſhall make you no Idols, nor Graven Image, neither rear you up a ſtanding Image, neither ſhall ye ſet up any Image of Stone in your Land, to bow down unto it. So the Second Commandment ſaith, Thou ſhalt not make unto thee any graven Image, or any likeneſs of any thing that is in Heaven above, or that is in the Earth beneath, or that is in the Water under the Earth: Thou ſhalt not bow down thy ſelf to them nor ſerve them. The Commandment forbiddeth the making any Image-σέβασμα by fabricating it, and the making any Image-σέβασμα by worſhipping it; which Image-σεβάσματα are throughout the Bible called Gods, Gods no Gods, Idols, which are falſe Gods, Exod. 20. 23. and 34. 17. and 32. 31. Judg. 17. 5. and 18. 24. 2 Chron. 13. 9. Pſal. 115. 4. & 135. 15. 2 King. 19. 8. Iſa. 42. 17. and 44. 10, 15, 17. Jer. 16. 20. Therefore the purport of the Second Commandment being this, to forbid all Image-σεβάσματα, the purport of it is to forbid one eminent mode of violating the Firſt Commandment.

VII. There is now no difficulty in reconciling the ſeeming diſſonant Accounts, which the Scripture giveth of the Iſraelites worſhip of the Golden Calf, and the Calves at Dan and Bethel. On the one hand, the Scripture is expreſs (as many have demonſtrated) that their Calves were Symbols of the God of Iſrael, and conſequently the Iſraelites in worſhipping them were intentionally the Worſhippers of the true God, Exod. 32. 5. they kept a Feaſt to the Lord. Exod. 32. 6. 1 King. 12. 32. they ſacrific'd the Jewiſh kind of Sacrifices (Burnt-offerings and Peace-offerings) and therefore offer'd them intentionally to the God of Iſrael, 2 King. 10. 23. in oppoſition to the Worſhippers of Baal. Jeroboam's Religioniſts are call'd the Servants of the Lord, 2 King. 9. 25, 36. and ch. 10. 10, 16. 2 Chron. 22. 9. Jehu (one of theſe Religioniſts) with great Devotion owneth the true God and his Prophets, looketh upon himſelf as an Executioner of his Judgments, profeſſeth himſelf a Zealot for the Lord, ſheweth reſpect to the Son of Jehoſhaphat, becauſe he ſought the Lord with all his Heart, 2 King. 13. 4. Jehoahaz his Son beſought the Lord, and the Lord hearkened unto him, 2 King. 13. 14. Joaſh his Son with great piety lamenteth the death of Eliſha, ſtiling him My Father, the Chariot of Iſrael and the Horſemen thereof; 2 Chron. 28. 13. The Heads of the Children of Ephraim confeſs their Sins againſt the Lord and dread his Wrath, 1 King. 17. 26, 27. An Iſraelitiſh Prieſt taught the Samaritan Colonies the Worſhip of the God of the Land, which was the worſhip of the God of Iſrael: So great Evidence is there, that the Worſhippers of Jeroboam's Calves were in ſome ſort the Worſhippers of the true God. Their Idolatry was not purely Pagan, but Pagano-Iſraelitical, diſtinguiſh'd by (s) Jewiſh Writers and in Scripture from meer Heathen Idolatry, Act. 7. 41, 42. The Calves of Jeroboam and that of Aaron were Repreſentatives of their God, that brought them out of the Land of Egypt, which could not be thought an Egyptian Deity, Exod. 32. 4. 1 King. 12. 28. Their deſign in erecting thoſe Symbols, was not to relinquiſh, but to preſentiate their Deity; Exod. 32. 1. 1 King. 12. 27, 28. And becauſe theſe Symbols are of no certain Name (ſuch as Baal, Moloch, Chemoſh) therefore ſome of the Pontifician Theologers (t) allow it probable, that the Jews did worſhip the true God in the Idol. The Religion of Micah, Judg. 17. is of the ſame Character; for his devout Mother dedicated the Silver to the Lord, of which his Graven and Molten Image was made. And his joyful Entertainment of a Levite for his Prieſt, and his bleſſing himſelf for his good fortune in lighting upon him (now know I, that the Lord will do me good, ſeeing I have a Levite for my Prieſt) plainly demonſtrateth him in ſome ſort a Moſaic Religioniſt. But as the Religion of Micah was Idolatry; ſo the Iſraelites worſhip of the Aaronical Calf is of the ſame criminal Character, Act. 7. 41. They made a Calf in thoſe Days, and offered Sacrifice to the Idol. Exod. 32. 31. Oh this People have ſinned a great ſin, and have made them Gods of Gold. The greatneſs of their Crime is viſible in the ſeverity of their Puniſhment (the Trangreſſors were ſlain, v. 22.) in Moſes's tranſport of Paſſion (he caſt the two Tables of Teſtimony out of his Hands and brake them; he burnt the Calf in the Fire, ground it to Powder, and as if he could never ſufficiently be reveng'd upon the Idol, he caſt the Duſt of it into the Brook that ran out of Horeb, and made the People drink of that Water; to ſhew, in what infinite deteſtation Idols muſt be held, they muſt be utterly aboliſh'd and not the leaſt memorial of them left;) and by the height of God's diſpleaſure againſt their Sin, Exod. 32. 10. Let me alone, that my Wrath may wax hot againſt them, and that I may conſume them. As Idolatry hath the primacy amongſt Sins; ſo the Religion of Jeroboam's Calves hath the primacy amongſt Iſrael's Sins (which therefore was an Idolatrous Worſhip) as Jeroboam's uſual Character implieth, who made

Iſrael

(r) Grot. explic. Decal. ad Ex. 20. 4. Dr. Hammond of Idol. S. 37.

(s) Coſri p. 288. ed. Buxt.

(t) Bellarm. de Imag. l. 2. c. 13.

Iſrael to ſin, 1 King. 14. 9. Thou haſt done Evil above all that were before thee (ſaith God to Jeroboam) for thou haſt gone and made thee other Gods, even molten Images, to provoke me to anger, and haſt caſt me behind thy back; 2 Chron. 13. 9. Abijah King of Judah upbraideth Iſrael with their Golden Calves which Jeroboam made them for Gods, 2 Chron. 11. 15. Jeroboam ordained him Prieſts for the High places, and for the Devils, and for the Calves which he had made. The word which our Tranſlation rendreth Devils, is Leſebirim, which ſeemeth to be a word extended beyond its original uſe to a general Signification, and ſhould be rendred, not Devils, but falſe Gods. The falſe Gods of the elder times being Sehirim (the ragged or hairy) the word was uſed in after-times, to ſignifie falſe Gods. As falſe Gods are ſtiled Vanities; ſo Baaſha, and Elah, and Omri, Jeroboam's Succeſſors are ſaid to provoke the Lord God of Iſrael to anger with their Vanities; 1 King. 16. 13, 26. Vanities are Gods no Gods, 2 Chron. 13. 9. Whoſoever cometh to conſecrate himſelf with a young Bullock and ſeven Rams, the ſame may be a Prieſt of them that are no Gods. The Scripture inſiſteth upon it, that the Iſraelites Calves were no Gods, becauſe by way of objective application they made them Gods (making them Image-σεβάσματα;) and not only ſo, but in reſpect of Subjective Perfection thus far they accounted them Gods (or Elohim) they ſuppos'd them to be their proximate or preſent Deity, therefore the Prophet argueth againſt them in the ſame manner as the Scripture argueth againſt the Idols of the Heathen; Hoſ. 8. 6. The Workman made it, therefore it is not God, but the Calf of Samaria ſhall be broken to pieces.

VIII. Conformably (in great degree) to the guiſe of ancient Paganiſm the Pagano-Chriſtians have introduc'd into our Religion Image-σεβάσματα or Idol-Symbols; for that their Images are of the nature of Idol-Symbols, this is a ſhrewd Indication; They are ſuch in the Eyes of all Mankind except their own. For the Heathen count them ſuch Image-worſhippers as themſelves are; reform'd Chriſtendom chargeth them with Symbol-Idolatry; ſo do the Muhammedans; (u) and the Jews call a Church בית עבודה זרה an Houſe of Idolatry (or ſtrange worſhip) and בית דתרפת an Houſe of turpitude, becauſe of the Pontificians Idolatrous Image-worſhip. Agreeably to this conſent of Nations ſome Learned Men of their own Communion (Lud. Vives, Polydore Virgil, Caſſander, Heſſelius) have acknowledg'd and lamented the Heatheniſm of their Image-worſhip, (w) and that they ſeem not to come ſhort of the higheſt Adoration, which the Pagans gave their Images, nor of their extream Vanity in forming and adorning them. Some of the Learned of that Communion make a further acknowledgment, that in the Old Teſtament, and particularly in the Second Commandment, Statues and Images for Worſhip are univerſally prohibited, that their Image-worſhip is a violation of the Second Commandment, and that the Worſhip which they give their Images, (x) is the ſame (prohibited) Worſhip, that the Jews gave the Brazen Serpent; but they pretend, that this Moſaic Prohibition of Image-worſhip is poſitive and temporary, that now they are paſt Infancy, and grown to be perfect Men, and therefore are not under the Pædagogy of the Law (as J. Damaſcen. ſpeaketh) againſt Image-worſhip. But if the Commandment forbiddeth their Image-worſhip in terms expreſſive of the higheſt Criminality, which ſpeak the Criminals Idolaters (haters of God) and with a Commination of an horrendous Penalty, this is a fair Indication, that their Image-worſhip is not evil becauſe prohibited, but is prohibited, becauſe in it ſelf it is evil and in its own nature Idolatry; which will appear by reflecting upon what hath been diſcours'd touching Symbol-idolatry; that when the worſhip proper to the true natural perſon of the God of Iſrael is given to the Symbol, although it be intended to him, it is really alien'd from him, and ſo given to the Symbol; and conſequently, it is a making the Symbol, not the Deity, our God. Moreover, if that Honour and Worſhip which is proper to God, be truly and really given to any created thing in any manner, or upon any account whatſoever, ſuch Worſhip is in its own nature Idolatry; no Diſtinctions of Worſhip, no Intention of the Religioniſt can poſſibly make it otherwiſe. For which reaſon, although in the intentional worſhipping God by an Image, the worſhip be (intentionally) meerly σχετικὴ, relative and tranſitive, not terminative, yet it is certainly Idolatry; how much more if the Worſhip be mixt of abſolute and relative, with which ſort of Worſhip many of the Heathen worſhipp'd their Images? To make a Judgment therefore touching the Religious Worſhip of unreform'd Chriſtendom, whether it be Symbol-Idolatry or not, it muſt be conſider'd, what Worſhip ſhe allotteth to her Image-σεβάσματα.

(u) Hoornbeck c. Jud. proleg. p. 17.

(w) Caſſand. Conſult. de Imagin.

(x) Vaſqu. in 3. Th. Diſp. 104. Qu. 25.

According to the Definition of the Second Nicene Council it is and is not Latria the Sovereign Religious Worſhip: For if the Images be conſider'd in themſelves, as diſtinct from the Prototype, they ought not to be worſhipp'd with Latria, with true Latria, Latria in Spirit, as the Council ſpeaketh) but with an inferiour ſort of Worſhip, as the Holy Goſpels and Sacred Utenſils; but the Images muſt be alſo worſhipp'd in conjunction with the Prototype, as the Definition of the Council implieth; (y) for the Honour of the Image paſſeth to the Prototype (ſaith the Council) and he that worſhippeth the Image, worſhippeth in it the repreſented Exemplar. The Prototype cannot be worſhipp'd in the Image, unleſs the Prototype's proper worſhip be given it (ſuch Worſhip which is fit to be given to, and receiv'd by the Prototype;) therefore the Image of Chriſt muſt be worſhipp'd with nothing leſs than Latria; not that the Image muſt be ſo worſhipp'd for it ſelf, with abſolute Latria (as a God in reſpect of Subjective Perfection ſuch) but the Prototype conjoyn'd in Mental Conſideration with the Image muſt be worſhipp'd with abſolute Latria; with reſpect to the Image the Latria is relative or reſpective, and for the ſake of the Prototype, to whom the Religioniſt intentionally referreth it. If the Image be worſhipp'd as conſider'd in it ſelf and diſtinct from the Prototype with an inferiour ſort of Worſhip, ſuch Worſhip is ſuppos'd to be honourary to the Prototype, but is not the Worſhip of the Prototype (as when an Embaſſadour is honour'd with an Honour proper to his perſon for the King's ſake, this is honourary to the King, but is not the proper Regial Honour:) If the Prototype be worſhipp'd in worſhipping the Image (as the Council defineth) his proper worſhip muſt be given him mediante Imagine, through the Image; (which proper worſhip is Latria, if God be the Object, Dulia and Hyperdulia if the Bl. Virgin and the Saints be the Object) the Image muſt be worſhipp'd with the ſame act of Adoration and with the ſame Worſhip that is due to the Prototype. From which account of the (y) Act. 7. p. 755.

the Senſe of this Nicene Council (agreeably whereunto the Church practiſeth, her Synods Decree, and the generality of her Theologers diſpute) it appeareth, that not a few of their Image-σιϐάσματα are Idol-Symbols: For if their Saint-worſhip be Idolatry (as is before demonſtrated) the worſhip of their Images with the ſame worſhip muſt be much more Idolatry. The relative Divine Worſhip of their other Image-σιϐάσματα, the Croſs and Image of Chriſt, can be nothing better than Symbol-Idolatry; for the Image of Chriſt muſt be worſhipp'd with Latria, Divine Honours muſt be done it σχετικῶς or relatively, which is the ſame Symbol-Idolatry with the ancient Gnoſticks, (z) who worſhipp'd the Image of Chriſt with Divine Honours, not abſolutely and terminatively, but relatively; for they worſhipp'd an Image as an Image, a Symbol as a Symbol, as the reſt of Mankind do. The Church forbiddeth no Worſhip to be given to her Images ſave only abſolute Latria and certain Hypotheſes which infer it (that the Images are Gods, and that there is ſome Divinity or Virtue in them, for which they ought to be venerated;) but there are ſome Modes of Image-worſhip maintain'd and practis'd in her Communion, on this ſide abſolute Latria, which ſome of her great Divines pronounce Idolatry; for they that pay their Worſhip to the Image as conſider'd in it ſelf and diſtinct from the Prototype, worſhipping it with an inferiour worſhip diſtinct from that which is due to the Prototype, theſe expreſs their Submiſſion and do ſervice to a meer inanimate irrational thing, and therefore (a) Vaſquez accounteth them Idolaters. On the other hand, they that ſuppoſe, that the Image and Exemplar ought to be worſhipp'd with the ſame Worſhip, and conſequently, that the Image of Chriſt ought to be worſhipp'd relatively with Latria (which is the Doctrine of the generality of the Pontifician Theologers) incur the guilt of Idolatry, (b) as the great Writer of Controverſies diſputeth: Which ſevere Charges of Idolatry upon the two oppoſite Modes of Image-worſhip muſt neceſſarily involve their Church in the guilt of Symbol-Idolatry.

But by diſowning abſolute Latria the Church diſtinguiſheth her Image-worſhip from Heathen Idolatry; (c) for the Gentiles (as her Theologers ſuppoſe) intent upon their Images and Statues attributed God-excellence to them, having no thought of any Deity which they expreſs'd and ſignify'd; they worſhipp'd them ſimply and abſolutely, and their worſhip of Latria was not σχετικὴ, relative and tranſient (paſſing through the Image to the Prototype) but terminative and ſtopping in the Image. As the Philoſophy of Philo the Jew is uſually no better than Heatheniſm, yet he diſtinguiſheth it from Heatheniſm by affixing to the Heathen certain abſurd unphiloſophical Conceits, that were in great meaſure ſtrangers in the Heathen World; at the ſame rate the Roman-Catholicks diſtinguiſh their Image-worſhip from Heathen Idolatry. For the Heathen thought not their Images Deities no-Images, they ſuppos'd them proximate and preſent Deities, yet ſo as to be vicarious and ſubſtitute to the Prototypes, and the worſhip which they gave them, was relative to the Prototypes: Many of them ſuppos'd, that their inviſible Deities animated their Images, and their Image-worſhip was relative to that real perſonal preſence of their Deities, which they worſhipp'd with abſolute Latria, according to this their Profeſſion, (d) In theſe material Images we worſhip thoſe, whom the ſacred Dedication introduceth; and therefore the whole of their Religious Worſhip was a Mixture and Complication of abſolute and relative Latria. But the new Doctors of Symbol-idolatry ſuppoſe no real perſonal preſence of a Deity in their Images, they have ſubſtituted inſtead of it a phantaſtic and imaginary preſence of their Saint or Deity, (which they worſhip in, with and by the Image) the Image repreſenting the Exemplar to their Minds they imagine it in the Image (as contain'd and inclos'd in it, and as it were animating the Image) and this imaginary preſence of their Saint or Deity (e) they call the Life, Soul, and Dignity of the Image, and the Image taken in Complication with it is ſtiled Imago animata & in actu exercito (which actually doth the Function of an Image and containeth the Prototype) and of ſuch Images conſider'd as containing the Exemplar they ſay, (f) None hath made ſcruple to affirm, that true Latria or Latria in Spirit ought to be given them, if the Exemplar be God or Chriſt. Agreeably to the Pagans therefore the whole of their Image-worſhip is a Mixture and Complication of abſolute and relative Latria. In ſuch an animated Image the Image in it ſelf conſider'd and the Exemplar (the Phantaſm of the Exemplar) concur, to conſtitute one Total, one total Object of the Supream Honour and Worſhip, which is ſuch a ſtrain of Idolatry (in worſhipping at once their Images and Imaginations with the Supream Worſhip) that nothing higher can be found in Paganiſm. The Image in a narrow acceptation is the partial term or object of the Supream Worſhip (relatively) and in a large conſideration (as it comprehendeth the Phantaſm of the Exemplar) it is the total Object of it, the Object of abſolute Latria alſo; and what is this but θεοποιεῖν τὰς εἰκόνας, a deifying Images? Nor is it to purpoſe to alledge, that the Object of this abſolute Latria is Chriſt cloathed with his Image, (g) the Prototype ſhining in his Image, which they worſhip per ſe, the material Image being ador'd per accidens only (as a Prince's Robe is ador'd when he is worſhipp'd;) for the Prototype ſhining in his Image is like the Image behind the Looking-glaſs (to which (h) they uſually compare it) a mear Creature of Man's Phantaſy, as the material Image is the Creature of Man's Hands; the Image and Imagination are alike, a fictitious, not a real Perſon of the Prototype, and the latter is εἰδώλου εἴδωλον, but the Image of an Image.

IX. Since the times of the Nicene Synod the Church hath improv'd in Symbol-idolatry; for ſhe pretendeth to make and worſhip certain Images of God and the holy Trinity, which the Nicene Synod abhorr'd. (i) Theſe Pictures are in common uſe amongſt Catholicks, and have their common approbation. (k) Origen accounteth it Madneſs, to think the Works of impious Artizans and Mechanicks honourary to true Gods; but degenerate Chriſtendom thinketh it no diſhonour to God and the holy Trinity, to ſubject them to the Pencils of impious Artizans. (l) A late Painter teacheth (as a Branch of his Art) how the Trinity is uſually painted, and treating of an Artifice in Grammica or the Art of Delineation, after this manner (ſaith he) the Picture of God the Father is done by Pordonone in the top of the Roof of St. Mary's in Campagna of Placentia. This unholy kind of picturing God (for there is an holy kind of depainting God in our Souls and Lives, which is God-imagery) is neceſſarily οὐχ ὅσιον, or profane and irreligious, (m) as the

Jews

(z) Bellarm. de Imag. l. 2. c. 24.

(a) In 3. Th. Diſp. 108. Qu. 25. Art. 3. c. 9.

(b) Bellarm. ſupr.

(c) Petav. T. 4. Par. 2. l. 15. c. 17. S. 5.

(d) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 6. p. 203.

(e) Vaſq. ſupr. Diſp. 108. c. 5. & 15.

(f) Ibid. Diſp. 109. c. 3.

(g) Bellarm. ſupr. c. 23.

(h) Petav. ſupr. l. 15. c. 15. S. 3.

(i) Ibid. c. 14. S. 6.

(k) C. Cell. l. 3. p. 158.

(l) Lomatius l. 7. c. 2. & l. 5. c. 13.

(m) V. Grot. Explic. Decal. ad Exod. 20. 4.

Jews ſtile it; the Pillar of Fire that conducted the Iſraelites, ſignifieth, ſaith Clemens, (n) τὸ ἀνεικόνιστον τοῦ Θεοῦ; that the perſonal Glory and Majeſty of God is not ſo mean a thing, * as that Pictures and Sculptures may be made of it. Theſe are not duly honourary Repreſentations of God, but extreamly diſhonourable and diſgraceful. They affix a viſible corporeal ſhape to the Godhead, and the finite littleneſs of a Creature; they aſſimilate the Godhead to a carv'd Log or a painted Stone (Act. 17. 29.) and make the Lineaments and Colours of a Painter God's Image (the Image of his Glory, 1 Cor. 11. 7.) which ſpeaketh τὸ ἐξαίρετον. that which is eximious; and therefore no Picture or Sculpture (thoſe vile Trumperies of Humane Artifice) can be the Image of God, nor will God own them for ſuch; and conſequently they that religiouſly worſhip them, commit the Sin of Idolatry. But if we ſhould ſuppoſe, that the Draughts of a Painter are the Images of God (that of an Old Man, or of a Pope in his Pontifical Habit) as Man is in reſpect of his Manhood, as Kings are in reſpect of their Sovereignty, and as Saints and Angels are in reſpect of their Sanctity; yet ſeeing theſe ſtately Realities are not σεβάσματα, to be had in Religious Veneration, whence is it, that Pictures are become Image-σεβάσματα; created Beings may be the Images of God in a large ſenſe; but there is one that is the Image of God, ſo as to be God. God muſt be conſider'd as the ſuper-create Excellence (the Excellency that he properly is, is beyond the Rank of created Beings) and there is one that is this ſuper-create Excellency, in whom it exiſteth as in Imagine, (in the Image of God;) and becauſe in this Senſe there is but one Image of God, there can be but one Image-σέβασμα, according to that of S. Auſtin (o). No Image of God ought to be worſhipp'd, but the Image which is that which He is, nor that inſtead of Him but with Him. (p) We worſhip one Image, which is the Image of the Inviſible and Omnipotent God. (q) Not a few of the Pagan Nations prohibited the worſhip of Images. (r) The Philoſophers diſcourſe, that God is like to nothing viſible, (s) the ſublimer ſort of them ſuppos'd the Supream Deity beyond Imagination and Intellect, for which reaſon Antiquity form'd no Image of him. The making and worſhipping the Images of God and the Holy Trinity therefore in ſome reſpects tranſcendeth Paganiſm.

(n) Str. l. 1. p. m. 255.

* Vid. Baron. ad an. 324. n. 110.

(o) Nulla Imago ejus coli debet niſi illa quæ hoc eſt quod ipſe, nec ipſa pro illo, ſed cum illo. Ep. 119. ad Januar. c. 11.

(p) S. Hierom. l. 4. in Ezech. c. 16.

(q) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 6. c. 10.

(r) Antiphanes.

(s) Macrob. in Som. Scip. l. 1. c. 2.

But in ſome reſpect the Symbol-idolatry of degenerate Chriſtendom falleth ſhort of the Pagan; for there are two ways of Image-worſhip, the one is ſuch Image-worſhip (or Idol-worſhip) which is the plenary Divine Service; the other is, Image-worſhip, which is but an Ingredient of the Divine Service. Jeroboam's Calves were erected as a vicarious ſubſtitute God of Iſrael for plenary Divine Service and the whole of Religious Worſhip; they had their Temples, Altars, Feſtivals, Prieſts, Sacrifices, and the Buſineſs of his Religioniſts Religious Aſſemblies was the Religious Worſhip of thoſe putative ſuppoſititious Perſons of the Deity. Of like Nature and Notion (in this reſpect) were the Statues in the Pagans Idol-Temples, Gal. 4. 8. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9. But the Symbol-idolatry of degenerate Chriſtendom (like the Jews worſhip of the Brazen Serpent, or the Pagans worſhip of the Pine-Tree in Cybele's Sacra) is only a Branch or Ingredient of their Religious Worſhip; they have not proceeded to Image-σεβάσματα or Idols of the plenary Divine Service, nor made the God-ſervice of an Image the entire Buſineſs of their ſtated Aſſemblies, nor have they erected any publick Statue of the (non-incarnate) Supream Deity, to poſſeſs the place of an Imperial Head in our Religion, agreeably to the Pagan Moloch or Capitoline Jupiter. But they that have proceeded thus far, to make and worſhip Images of God and the Holy Trinity, what ſhould hinder them from proceeding a ſtep further, to make certain Statues of God and the Holy Trinity, (t) ſeeing there is the ſame reaſon, (as themſelves ſay) of Pictures and of Statues? But although the Church pretendeth not to erect any publick Statues of the Divinity, and probably accounteth it a kind of Sanctity (like ſome Chriſtian People in Salvian) minus eſſe vitioſum, not to preceed to the height of Wickedneſs; yet to compenſate this defect, ſhe hath her Relique-Images (ſuch as the Veronica and that famous one ſent to Agbarus, which are Reliques as well as Images) and an Imperial Lady at Loretto, which may juſtly be thought a Parallel for the grandeſt Idols in Paganiſm. And in the (u) devotional Pomp of her Proceſſions, the immenſe Veneration which ſhe payeth to her Images in thoſe grand Solemnities, her Symbol-idolatry hath manifeſtly outgrown the Pagan ſize.

(t) Petav. ſupr. l. 15. c. 14. S. 6.

(u) Saul and Sam. at Endor. c. 16. p. 351. Dr. Stillingfl. Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 663, &c.

X. But the Pagano-Chriſtians Images are parallel to the Pagan in being vicarious and ſubſtitute to the Exemplars. (w) Sometimes (ſay they) we conſider them as ſtanding in the place and ſtead of the Exemplars. (x) The nature of things ſeemeth to teach us, that the Image is the Subſtitute of the unſeen Exemplar, and ſometimes it is ſurrogated in the place of it. (y) Images ſo repreſent the Exemplar, that they are ſubſtituted in the place of it. (z) I adore the inanimate Figure of Chriſt (ſaith Leontius) for when I hold this, by it I ſeem to my ſelf, to hold and adore Chriſt. (a) Images ſupply the place of the thing repreſented. (b) The Image is a vicarious Repreſentation of the Prototype, and is in ſome ſort in its place and ſtead. (c) The Image differeth from the Prototype in Nature only, not in Hypoſtaſis or Perſon. (d) When one that injureth the Statue of a King, is as ſeverely puniſh'd as if he had injur'd the King himſelf, it is not becauſe he injur'd the Statue as his Statue, but becauſe he took the Statue for the King himſelf. According to this Hypotheſis the vile Images muſt have an Unity or Identity of perſon with God in Religious Worſhip; to which purpoſe a Saying of Athanaſius (which concerneth the Myſtery of the Trinity) was cited (e) in the Second Nicene Synod. The Similitude of the King is in the Image without any variation or difference; ſo that if one that ſeeth the Image, deſireth to ſee the King, the Image may ſay to him, I and the King are one. I am in him and he is in me. A Saying alſo of S. Baſil of the ſame nature was cited to the ſame purpoſe: The Image of a King is call'd the King, and there are not two Kings (the one the King the other his Image) for the Empire is not divided, nor the Glory; but as the Imperial Power over us is one, ſo is our Glorification one, not multifarious. The Image being vicarious and ſubſtitute to the Exemplar ſo as to be of Unity and Identity of perſon, the Image-Religioniſts do and ſpeak the ſame things to the Image, and behave themſelves towards it in the ſame manner as if it was the Exemplar viſibly preſent. (f) We ſpeak to the Croſs, and pray to it (ſaith Aquinas) as if it was Chriſt crucify'd upon it. O Crux ave ſpes unica! Hail O Croſs our only Hope! in (w) Bellarm. ſupr. c. 23.

(x) Vaſqu. ſupr. Diſp. 108. c. 8.

(y) Ibid. c. 11.

(z) Ibid. Diſp. 110. c. 2.

(a) Suarez. in 3. Th. qu. 25. Diſp. 54. art. 3. S. 6.

(b) Valentia. T. 3. Diſp. 6. Qu. 11. punct. 6.

(c) Petav. ſupr. S. 6.

(d) Bellarm. ſupr. c. 24.

(e) Petav. ſupr. S. 8.

(f) Aquin. Par. 3. Qu. 25. art. 4.

this time of the Paſſion increaſe the Righteouſneſs of the Juſt, and give Pardon to the Guilty. (g) When the Image of our Saviour was carryed in ſolemn Proceſſion from the Chappel of S. Laurence in the Lateran to S. Mary's, through thoſe Streets of Rome that were thought infeſted with evil Spirits, the manner was at the firſt opening the place, to ſalute the Image with this Prayer. O Saviour of the World, ſave us all thy poor Servants, and grant us all, that by the Merits of the two Johns, the Baptiſt and the Evangeliſt, we may appear guiltleſs before thee. The Pope and Cardinals made their approach to the Image bare-foot, kneeling or bowing ſeven times, then opening the Image and kiſſing the Feet of the Lord, all ſang Te Deum, We Praiſe thee, O God, we acknowledge thee to be the Lord. (h) The Image is ſometimes taken for the Prototype himſelf, and thoſe things which ſhould be done about the Prototype himſelf, if he was preſent, are done about the Image, but with the Mind defix'd upon the Prototype. So Preachers addreſs their Speech to the Image of Chriſt crucify'd, and ſay to it, Thou haſt redeem'd us, thou haſt reconcil'd us to the Father; for theſe things are not ſaid to the Image, either as it is Wood, or as it is an Image, but as it is taken in the place and ſtead of the Prototype; that is, they are ſaid to Chriſt himſelf, to whom the Image is vicarious and ſubſtitute. As on Good-Friday, when Chriſt crucify'd is by little and little uncover'd and ſhew'd, and propos'd to be ador'd, all thoſe things are underſtood to be done to true Chriſt himſelf by the Image. In this caſe no Honour is given to the Image properly, but to the Exemplar only, yet the Image it ſelf may be ſaid to be honoured improperly. If this Apology would excuſe the Image-Religioniſts, it would not only excuſe the Pagano-Chriſtian, but the Pagan, who did and ſpake the ſame things to the Image of Jupiter, (a vicarious and ſubſtitute Jupiter,) and behav'd themſelves towards it, as if the Exemplar was viſibly preſent. It would much more excuſe the Pagans (from worſhipping Idol-Symbols) than the Pagano-Chriſtians, whoſe Deity is no Symbolical Deity (as the Pagan Deities were;) they that ſet up any thing vicarious and ſubſtitute to him, and ſpeak and do unto it what is proper to his true natural Perſon, alienate from him his Divine Honours, give them to that deviſed Subſtitute, and make that their God, as the Iſraelites did their Vicarious Subſtitute Golden Calf. As if Subjects that live remote from Court, ſhould make any one Vicarious and Subſtitute to their King, ſo as to be of Unity and Identity of Perſon, and did ſpeak and do the ſame things to him, as if their King was viſibly preſent, this would be a raiſing the Subſtitute above the rank of a Subject, a making him their King: And in the ſame manner they may make a Bundle of Clouts their King, and ſo the Paganizing Iſraelites made a Calf their God, and the Pagano-Chriſtians make a Croſs or an Image their God and their Saviour. Not plenarily, not properly, yet ſo plenarily and ſo properly, as to make it an Idol-Symbol; and ſo far as to make their Approaches, Salutations, Adorations, Addreſſes to the Image with the ſame Religious Fear and Reverence, as if the Prototype was in Perſon preſent, and to Worſhip an Image at the ſame rate of Devotion (in their bowings, proſtrations, reverential looks and touches) with the ancient Pagans. There is a mixture of Impropriety in the Honours which they do to the Croſs, yet ſuch Propriety, that they ſuppoſe, Latria is due to the Croſs, as the Church determineth in her Pontifical; and ſhe conjoineth theſe Prayers and Praiſes (wherein there is ſtrict Propriety) in her Adorations of it. (i) O Croſs! brighter than all the Stars, famous in the World, exceeding amiable to Men, more holy than all things, which alone haſt been thought worthy to bear the weight of the World. Sweet Wood! bearing the ſweet Nails, and ſweet Burdens, ſave the preſent Company gather'd together this Day to thy Praiſe.

XI. The Pagano-Chriſtians Images are a Parallel for the ancient Pagan in the ſuppoſed preſence of their Divi, their inherent Sanctity and Wonder-working Faculties, and various Uſes and Benefits. For they reſort and make long Pilgrimages to the Images of the Bl. Virgin (erected in her ſacred Chappels) and of other Saints, for the Cure of their Diſeaſes and the Relief of their Neceſſities; to theſe they pay what they have vow'd, and make their Preſents and Oblations; at theſe they make their Prayers and expect miraculous help in their Diſtreſſes (as of old at the Sepulchres of the Martyrs,) and therefore they ſuppoſe them (at leaſt) the Symbolical Preſences of their Divi. They carry them into Battel with them, as the Pagans carry'd their Idol-Symbols (for which purpoſe (k) the Images of our Saviour and the Bl. Virgin are highly commended;) they wear Crucifixes and Images of the Bl. Virgin about their Necks (ſome of them (l) when they go to Battel) and Agnus Dei's as their Guardians, Amulets and Defenſatives; (m) the Jeſuits and their Converts ſtile them Arma Spiritualia, their Spiritual Arms, and Weapons of Defence againſt the Enemy and imminent Dangers. As the Bodies of the Saints, ſo their Images, are thought Tutelar to their Adorers; for Theodoret in the Life of Simeon Stylita reporteth, that at Rome they erected in the Entrance of all their Shops the Image of that Saint, ſuppoſing (which ſurely is truſting in Images) this a ſafe Cuſtody and Security to them. That famous Image of our Saviour ſaid to be ſent to Agbarus King of Edeſſa, which the Emperor (not without much ado) gain'd from the Citizens of Edeſſa and tranſlated to Conſtantinople, (n) is ſtiled by the Citizens of Edeſſa, the Guardian of their City and the ſafety of all (as the Oration of Conſtantinus Porphyrogenitus repreſenteth their Senſe;) and to the City of Conſtantinople it is ſaid to impart Sanctification and Strength. (o) To ſave that City from imminent Danger, the Image of the holy Virgin was ſometime carried about over its Walls. (p) And Iſaacius Angelus on the ſame account tranſlated it from a certain Monaſtery unto the Walls of that City. (q) Wamba King of Spain, when after his Victories he erected new Buildings in the City of Toledo, upon the tops of the Towers (agreeably to that of the Prophet, I have ſet Watchmen upon thy Walls, O Jeruſalem, Iſa. 62.) He ſet up the Statues of the Saints with this Inſcription (which ſpeaketh the preſence of the Saints with their Images, and illuſtrateth Church-Demonolatry)

Vos Domini Sancti, quorum hic præſentia fulget, Hanc Urbem & Plebem ſolito ſervate favore.
Lord Saints, whoſe preſence adorneth this place,
Keep City and People with wonted grace.

They ſuppoſe a Conjunction between the viſible and inviſible Preſence of their Divi; which implieth, that their holy venerable Images are animated,

(g) C. Raſponi de Baſil. Lateran. l. 4. c. 19.

(h) Bellarm. ſupr. c. 23.

(i) Breviar. Roman. in Feſt. Invent. Sanct. Cruc.

(k) Baron. ad an. 610. n. 2.

(l) Krantz. Saxon. l. 9. c. 10.

(m) V. Dallæum. de rel. cult. object. l. 1. c. 23, 24.

(n) Baron. ad an 944. n. 8. 12.

(o) Idem ad an. 717. n. 3.

(p) Id. ad an. 1187. n. 22.

(q) Id. ad an. 674. n. 5.

animated, or as good as animated, agreeably to the Pagan. In miraculous Faculties and Operations and ſalutary Effects (which are thought ſo Authentic, that the Nicene Pſeudo-Synod recounteth the Miracles wrought by Images, for eſtabliſhing their Worſhip) they plainly tranſcend the Pagan, and may vie with the Reliques of the elder times. They have the Faculty of moving the Head, Hand or Foot, of removing themſelves from place to place, and of flying in the Air; the Faculty of ſpeaking, ſinging, laughing, weeping, howling, ſmiling, frowning, bleeding, ſweating, ſweating out Medicinal Oil, foreſhewing future Events; of reſiſting the Fire, ſtopping and repreſſing Scale-fires, of helping Women to eaſie Labour, of profligating Demons (from the places where they are ſet up,) of curing Demoniacks, of guarding Mens Goods (a Faculty for which S. Nicholas's Image deſerveth a remark,) of driving away the Peſtilence (which ſeveral Images are ſaid to have done, when carry'd in Proceſſion) of working all ſorts of Miracles; and not a few of their Images are of great fame, becauſe all ſorts of Diſeaſes are cur'd, and all ſorts of Diſaſters are remov'd by adoring them.

It would be a voluminous buſineſs, to give an Hiſtorical Account of all their miraculous Feats and Faculties; we will content our ſelves with a few inſtances from Baronius. (r) The Image of Chriſt crucify'd bow'd its Head to S. Gualbertus. (s) For the ſpace of ſeveral days a flood of Tears iſſued from its Eyes preſaging an imminent Calamity. (t) Joannes Comnenus by looking on the Image of the Bl. Virgin with Lamentation and rueful Geſtures was arm'd with Celeſtial Proweſs and profligated the Scythians. After his Victory in Gratitude to that mighty Conquereſs, her Image in a pompous Chariot was carried in Triumph, as Trajan triumph'd in his Statue. (u) The abovementioned Image tranſlated from Edeſſa to Conſtantinople wrought innumerable Miracles on the way (and hath the Name of the Miracle-working Image,) the Blind receiv'd their ſight, the Lame walk'd, they that had been of long time Bed-rid danc'd; they that had wither'd Hands were made ſound, and all Diſeaſes and Infirmities were profligated. (w) To the Roman Soldiery the Divine Effigies imparted a Divine Proweſs, and gave them Victory over the Perſians. (x) Anatolius going to make Supplication to the Image of the Bl. Virgin, the Image check'd him and drove him away. (y) Blood flow'd out from the Image of our Saviour, when it was wounded by a Jew, (z) as alſo from the Image of S. Theodore, when it was wounded by a Saracen. (a) An Image of our crucified Saviour miraculouſly ſpake, and decided a Conteſt between the married Clergy and the Monks. (b) An Image of the Mother of God carried in Proceſſion profligated the Plague at Rome. (c) A Picture of her upon a Board at Saidaneida near Damaſcus (ſo holy that none dare touch it) is become fleſhy, a moſt fragrant Oil floweth from it continually, which cureth Mankind of their Diſtempers. (d) Another Image of her that was hid in a Cypreſs Tree, diſcover'd it ſelf by its own refulgent Light (ſeeming to burn like a Torch,) and a mighty Miracle-working Virtue iſſu'd from its latent Efficacy. If the Wonder-working Virtue aſcrib'd to the holy Images, be adherent only and extrinſecal, they are as good as animated: But the Eccleſiaſtic Legendaries that report theſe Miracles, uſually aſcribe them to an inherent Virtue, (e) they ſuppoſe a Virtue in the Divine Effigies of our Saviour. Agreeably to which Hypotheſis the Roman Catholicks ſuppoſe themſelves and their Beads ſanctified by touching an holy Image, and they are careful to get thoſe little Images which they buy, touch'd by ſome Image of our Lady. (f) The Greeks in the time of Sickneſs and Mournings for the dead retain, not only ſome Ceremonies by us accounted Superſtitious, but alſo ſavouring ſomewhat of ancient Gentiliſm. If the Head ach or be ill affected, the Prieſt bindeth it with the Veil of the Sacramental Chalice, and adminiſters to the Sick a draught of conſecrated Water, in which is Baſil, or Dittamon, or ſome other odoriferous Herb bleſſed with the touch of a Crucifix, or the touch of our Lady. The Church of Rome conſecrateth Images, Agnus Dei's and Croſſes for the producing ſupernatural and ſalutary Effects, which are expected from them (to be ſalutary Remedies to Mankind againſt the Frauds of the Devil, Storms and Tempeſts, Peſtilence and Corruption of the Air, Fire and Falling Sickneſs, Sin and Adverſity; for the ſtrengthening Faith; proficiency in good Works, redemption of Souls; for Comfort, Protection and ſafe Defence againſt all the cruel Darts of the Enemy, and ſuch more,) and in conſecrating a new Croſs ſhe prayeth; that the Benediction of that Wood on which our Saviour's holy Members were hanged may be in this Wood, that by the Holineſs of that (which is not diminiſh'd how much ſoever is taken from it) he would ſanctifie this, which implieth a Conceit of inherent Sanctity and Virtue in the Wood of the Croſs. Notwithſtanding the Declaration of the Council of Trent, (which is utterly inconſiſtent with the Church's Practice, the Hiſtory of Miracle-working Images, and which cannot be meant of Relique-Images,) that there is no Divinity or Virtue in them, for which they are to be worſhipped; nor is any thing to be ask'd of them, nor any truſt to be put in Images; yet Pagano-Chriſtendom affordeth a Parallel for the moſt extravagant and ſottiſh Conceits in vulgar Paganiſm. (g) For Polydore Virgil complaineth of many that worſhipped Images, not as ſignificative, but as ſentient and perceptive, and put more truſt in them than in Chriſt and the Saints, to which they were dedicated. And Æn. Sylvius telleth of an Image of the Bl. Virgin, which the People worſhipp'd with wondrous Devotion, as the Giver of Rain and Fair Weather upon occaſion.

XII. The various Rites of Image-worſhip in degenerate Chriſtendom are an imitation of Paganiſm, and their Images are the Subſtitutes and Succeſſors of the Pagan. For ſo a ſuppoſititious Apoſtolic Canon (publiſh'd by Turrianus) ordaineth, (h) that ſuch as are ſaved erre not about Idols, but that inſtead of them they Picture the Human Divine Effigies of the true God (our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt) and of his Servants in Oppoſition to Idols. (i) So the Jeſuits of China, when they had perſuaded their Converts, to part with their Pagan-Idols, ſubſtituted inſtead of them their own Images, and ſet them up in their Oratories. The Pontifician Theologers acknowledge, (k) that they have tranſlated the Rites of Gentiliſm into their Religion. And the Book Coſri rightly ſaith, (l) of the Chriſtians (for the Worſhippers of Images would be thought the only Chriſtians, and their Adverſaries muſt be called χριστιανο-κατήγοροι, the Accuſers of the Chriſtians,) they retain the Rites of (r) Ad ann. 051. n. 1.

(s) Ad ann. 888. n. 11.
(t) Ad ann. 1124. n. 7
(u) Ad ann. 944. n. 10.
w) Ad nn 599. 50.
x) Ad ann. 80. n. 3.
y) Ad ann. 60 n. 4.
z) Ad ann. 09. n. 10.
) Ad ann. 5. n. 12.
b) An. ann. 90. n. 13.
c) Ad ann. 70. n. 5.
d) Ad nn. 446. 16.
(c) Ad ann. 944. n. 11.
(f) Rycaut State of the Greek Ch. p. 292.
(g) V. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 9. c. 6.
(h) Petav. T. 4. par. 2. l. 15. c. 14. *S.*6.
(i) V. Dallæum ſupr. l. c. 12.
(k) Baron. ad ann. 58. n. 77.
(l) p. 284.

the old Paganical Worſhip. As the Pagans conſecrated their Images, and their Conſecrations were a Magical conjuring and inchanting: So the Pagano-Chriſtian Church conſecrateth Images, Croſſes, Agnus Dei's, Churches, Candles, Oil, Salt, Water, (and other material Elements,) and her Conſecrations muſt be ſtiled a Magical conjuring and inchanting, in the ſame Senſe that her Conſecration of Bells is called the Baptizing or Chriſtening of them. For as in this Conſecration there is a great reſemblance of Baptizing or Chriſtening: So in her other Conſecrations, which the Church accounteth a Religious Conjuring or Inchanting, there is at leaſt, a great reſemblance of Magical conjuring and inchanting, and in all probability (ſeeing the Church is in ſome degree laps'd into Demonolatry in the foul Senſe) there is more than meerly a great reſemblance, ſomething of true and proper Magical Operation. The Conſecrations of her Wonder-working Trinkets are all perform'd after the mode of Magical inchanting; and the making Greek and Latin Characters in aſhes upon the ground croſs-wiſe, the blowing three times croſs-wiſe over Oil, antick turnings, croſſings, mutterings, (and ſuch more Ceremonials,) what are they but the proper Rites of Magical conjuring? The conjuring the Devil out of Oil (or other material Element) involveth a principle of the old Magical Philoſophy, that all material things carry τὰς ἀπορροίας δαιμονίων ὑλικῶν, the effluxes of the material Demons. If their inchanted Materials have the Wonder-working Virtue that is aſcrib'd to them, it muſt be by Magical Operation; and the very pretence of raiſing them to prodigious and ſupernatural Effects (to drive away evil Spirits, to cure Diſeaſes, to be a Safeguard both to Soul and Body) without Divine Inſtitution, is a Magical Buſineſs. To Conjure Oil into an aptitude for the reception of the Holy Ghoſt, what is it but a branch of Theurgy, that adapteth matter for the reception of the Gods? To make an holy exorciz'd Salt for the health both of Soul and Body, and an holy exorciz'd Oil to purifie both Fleſh and Spirit, what is this but Symbolizing with the Pagan Theurgiſts, that pretended by Stones, Herbs and Charms, to make a Purgation for the Soul? A great Divine of our own faith, (m) The uſe of holy Water as it ſeems was firſt borrowed from the Heathens, and in Proceſs of time perverted from a Civil to a Magical Ceremony. Whence it appeareth, that the Pagano-Chriſtian Prieſthood have their Theurgical Conſecrations, and their θεουργικὴ τέχνη, Theurgic Art, as well as the Pagan; and if the Pagans mode of driving away Spectres by Holy Water and the jangling of Braſs-inſtruments is thought Magical, ſhall not the Pontificians mode of driving away evil Spirits by the ringing of baptized Bells be thought of the ſame Character? It is not reaſonable to imagine, that their horrible Conjurings, which involve much of Magical Rite, and are horrible Profanations of the Name of God and of the Inſtitutes of the Chriſtian Religion, are tranſacted without the Commerce of unclean Spirits: Nor is it reaſonable, to ſuppoſe, that all their Apparitions, Revelations, Miracles, are meer Fiction or Juggle; ſome of the miraculous Feats aſcrib'd to Images have probably ſome reality, and muſt be look'd upon as real Effects of their Theurgy. Their Conſecrate Images are ſuppoſed to have real, viſible, ſupernatural Effects, yet theſe muſt be thought devoid of inherent Virtue, as the Tridentine Fathers teach: But their conſecrate Oil, Candles, Aſhes, which are not ſuppos'd to have any ſuch real, viſible, ſupernatural Effects, theſe muſt be thought replete with inherent Virtue; for into theſe the Church's Conſecration introduceth the Holy Ghoſt, Grace, Strength, and Bleſſing. (She prayeth for the infuſion of them.) Which ſheweth, how arbitrariouſly and inconſiſtently they Philoſophize touching their Theurgic Sacra.

But it is not only their Magical Conſecrations which deſerve the Name of Theurgic Sacra; Theurgy inſtituted the Pagans Religion and their various Rites of Image-worſhip, which the Pagano-Chriſtians tranſcribe and imitate. For (agreeably to the ancient guiſe of Paganiſm) they erect Altars and place their Images upon them for ſolemn publick Worſhip; they Crown them, Cloath them, Paint and Gild them ſumptuouſly, and conſecrated Lights and Tapers are burning before them, to make them illuſtrious. They make Oblations to them, and carry them in pompous Proceſſion: But in Lent cover them and draw a veil before them, as the Pagans at certain times cover'd and conceal'd their Idol-Symbols from the Eyes of the People. The conſecrated Images (conſecrated by holy Water, holy Incenſe, Croſſings and Benedictions,) claim from us the Worſhip of Salutation, Incurvation, Genuflexion, Proſtration, Exoſculation and Incenſing, which was a principal Branch of the Pagans Idol-ſervice; for (as A. Ezra noteth on the ſecond Commandment) their Idol-ſervice chiefly conſiſted in Sacrifice and Incenſe. Their Religioniſts * make their devotional Salutations to our Lady as repreſented and preſentiated by her Image, and with the ſame reverential Looks and Geſtures, as if her ſelf was viſibly preſent; and at the ſame rate they make their Prayers, Prayers of as high a ſtrain as any the Pagans ever made to their Idols. For to the abovementioned Effigies of our Saviour which was tranſlated to Conſtantinople (and there laid up for the Glory of the Faithful, the Guardianſhip of the Emperors, the Defence of the whole City, and of the State of Chriſtians) Conſtantinus Porphyrogenitus maketh this following Prayer. (n) O Divine Similitude of the unchangeable Similitude of the Father! O Character of the Character of the Divine Subſtance! O venerable and all honourable Impreſs of the primary Pulchritude of Chriſt our God (for I talk with thee as with an animate thing) conſerve and keep always him that piouſly and moderately governeth us, and that ſplendidly celebrateth the Memory of thy coming hither. And when thy Benignity hath rais'd him to the Seat of his Fathers, conſerve his Stem, the Succeſſion of his Family, and the perpetuity of their Sceptres: Grant a pacific State to the Republick, that this Queen of Cities may continue impregnable, and that we being acceptable to thy Archetype Chriſt our God may be admitted into his Heavenly Kingdom. To the Portugueze in their Expedition to the Eaſtern Indies the Sign of the Croſs is ſaid to have appear'd in Heaven, whereupon all of them fell down and worſhipp'd, Albuquercius (a Man of eximious Piety) lifted up his Hands to it, and with a loud Voice poured out this following Prayer. (o) O Croſs, the argument of our Redemption, O thou Sign of Chriſtian Victory, O thou that art grac'd with the moſt precious Blood of the Lord Jeſu, O Divine Tree, by whoſe vital Fruit the Fruit of the deadly Plant is repair'd: In thee, in thee, (m) Dr. Jackſon of the Orig. of Unbelief ch. 33. p. 312. in marg. v. Lanſell. Calumn. Caſaubon. diſpunct. c. 6.

* Ave Maria, Salve Regina.

(n) Bar ad an. 544 n. 14.

(o) Maff us Indic. l. 5. p. 220.

thee, I ſay, all our hopes are repoſ'd; thee we profeſs, acknowledge, adore; and humbly beſeech thee, to be a Safeguard to us amongſt ſo many Dangers by Land and Sea. They that ſuppoſe a Croſs a Salvific Figure, and make their Prayers to it as to a Salvific Numen, ſhould not complain of Miſrepreſentation, becauſe they are accus'd of praying to Images: Nor do their Theologers diſallow praying to Images, if they be animated with the Phantaſm of the Prototype. (p) Chriſtians are not to be reprov'd (ſaith Coſterus,) that with bended Knees, uncover'd Heads, join'd Hands, adore and pray to Chriſt in his Image, and implore his Mercy, Help and Aid. So the Pagans in time of Danger betook themſelves to their Devotions, (q) ut ante ſimulachra projecti victoriam à Diis expoſcerent, that being proſtrate before their Images, they might deſire Victory of the Gods.

XIII. The Pontifician Divines have nothing to ſay in Defence of Images of God and the Holy Trinity properly ſuch, and but little in Defence of their Image-Worſhip. They pretend not, to depaint the proper likeneſs of God, but only of ſome of his Appearances (as that of the ancient of days in Daniel) and what is analogically or metaphorically expreſſive of what he is. Which is as much as to ſay, they make properly no Images or Pictures of him; they ſo depaint him, as properly not to depaint him at all. For ſuppoſe, we depaint an appearance of his in a bright Cloud, or a Globe, or Pillar of Fire, ſuch a Picture cannot juſtly be call'd the Picture of him, but of his Appearance (not of an Appearance of what he is in himſelf, but of an exhibited expreſſive Appearance:) Nor is it otherwiſe, if thoſe Apparitions of God be depainted, that are of an Human Form, or approach to an Human Form. For (as the Pontifician Theologers generally affirm) God's appearances in the Old Teſtament were by Angels; which implieth, that they were by Angels of a viſible Form; therefore thoſe Appearances ought to be depainted no otherwiſe than as God's Angelical Appearances, nor ought the viſible Form (that is in thoſe Apparitions) to be conſider'd otherwiſe than as the Angels viſible Form, which would tempt no Body but ſuch as the old Angelici to adore it. We will ſuppoſe, that the Holy Ghoſt caus'd the viſible appearance of a Dove at his deſcent upon our Saviour, as he caus'd the viſible Appearance of fiery cloven Tongues at his deſcent upon the Apoſtles, and as our Saviour caus'd the viſible appearance of a Lamb in a Viſion to S. John: They that depaint thoſe fiery cloven Tongues, or that viſible form of a Dove, do not make a Picture of a Divine Perſon, but of ſome of his Appearances only, that are analogically and metaphorically expreſſive of what he is. Speaking figuratively and rhetorically both a living Lamb and the Picture of it may be call'd the Picture of our Saviour; both a live Dove and the painted Image of it may be ſtil'd the Picture of the Holy Ghoſt: But in propriety of Speech the Picture of a Lamb is the Picture of that Animal and nothing elſe; and the Picture of a Dove (the Picture of that Animal) is no more the Picture of the Holy Ghoſt than that of fiery cloven Tongues. If any Perſon of the Godhead is Human-divine, and appeareth in a viſible Form as his viſible perſonal Form, it is lawful, to depaint him in ſuch a Form: But the lawfulneſs of depainting Apparitions in Scripture inferreth not the lawfulneſs of making an Image or Picture of God or the Holy Ghoſt (that which may be taken for ſuch,) all ſuch Images ſtand condemn'd by a Commandment, that is of eternal Reaſon and Obligation. Yet ſuch Images are known to be of common uſe in the Church of Rome, and her Theologers propounding the Queſtion, Whether Images of God be prohibited? anſwer negatively, pleading for their ground the Church's practice, (r) which propoſeth her Fanatic Images of the Trinity for Divine Worſhip; which is no leſs a crime than the lapſing the World into the old Egyptian Idolatry of worſhipping Animal-forms, for ſuch the Image of a Dove is. In defence of the lawfulneſs of Image-worſhip, they plead for themſelves, the Reverence that we do to the holy Goſpels, and the Command given to Moſes and Joſhua, to put off their Shooes upon holy Ground. To which Allegations the Anſwer is; that as the kindneſs which one hath for the Animals of his Friend, is not his Friendſhip, but is only a concomitant Effect of it, that is much below it: So the Reverence which we do to ſacred Officers and to the ſacred Books (in taking an Oath) is not our Religious Worſhip, but is only a concomitant Effect of it, that is much below it. We owe ſo much Reverence to ſacred things, that we ought to pull off our Gloves in handling them, ſo Moſes ought to pull off his Shooes upon holy Ground: But neither the pulling off the Glove nor the Shooe is a mode of doing the Religious Worſhip to things ſacred: Nor do the Muhammedans deſign to do the Religious Worſhip to their Alcoran (which they dare not touch with unwaſhen Hands,) as the Pagano-Chriſtians do to their Images.

It appeareth, that the Image-religioniſts of degenerate Chriſtendom have but ſlender Pleas for their Image-worſhip: But the Heatheniſm of their Creature-worſhip in the ſeveral Branches of it is palpable and notorious, and their groſs Superſtition and Idolatry is condemnable upon the ſame grounds with ancient Paganiſm. Eutychius giveth this account of the Origin of the Church Cæſarea at Alexandria. (s) A Temple was built by Cleopatra, and a great Braſs Idol was worſhipped there by the Name of Michael, and on the twelfth day of the Month Athyr the Alexandrians and Egyptians celebrated a grand Feaſt unto this Idol, ſacrificing to him many Sacrifices. But ſo ſoon as Alexander was made Patriarch there, (making uſe of his Politicks, to get that Idol broken and thoſe Sacrifices aboliſh'd,) he told the People, that the Idol was good for nothing; but if they would celebrate that Feaſt to Michael the Archangel, and offer thoſe Sacrifices to him, he would intercede with God for them, and would be the cauſe of greater good to them than the Idol would ever be. Having gain'd their conſent he brake the Idol, and made a Croſs of it, and nam'd the Temple the Church of Michael (which is the Church Cæſarea) and the Feaſt and the Sacrifices became Michael the Angel's. As yet the Coptites in Mitzar (Grand Cair or the Egyptian Babylon) and in Alexandria celebrate a Feaſt on that day to Michael the Angel, and Sacrifice thereon very many Sacrifices. The Pagano-Chriſtians Saint-worſhip and Angel-worſhip ſtandeth upon the ſame ground with the Pagan Demonolatry and Aſtrolatry, inſomuch that the Jeſuit Tannerus ſaith, (t) If the Heavens or the Stars were endow'd with a rational or intelligent Soul, and were in Grace, they might be worſhipped by us by ſome ſacred or religious

(p) V. Le-Blanc Theſ. p. 339.

(q) Cæſar. de bello civ. l. 2.

(r) Vaſq. in 3. Th. Diſp. 103. c. 3.

(s) Selden. de Synedr. l. 3 c. 15. §. 8.

(t) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 30.

gious Worſhip, ſuch as is agreeable unto Saints. In Relique Worſhip the Ancient Pagan is younger Brother to the Pagano-Chriſtian, his Superſtition is by much paramount to Ancient Paganiſm, and Modern Judaiſm alſo, which yet proceedeth a great way in idolizing the Reliques of Saints and Prophets; for R. Benjamin reporteth, (u) That the River Tigris divideth the City Shuſan into two parts; that on one ſide the River, where the Jews dwell, all the Inhabitants were rich, and on the other ſide all were poor. Becauſe the Riches and Splendor of the former was ſuppoſ'd to proceed from hence, the Prophet Daniel lay buried amongſt them, therefore thoſe on the other ſide the River, who were poor, deſir'd that he might be buried in the midſt between them; but this the other Party would by no means yield to; at length the Buſineſs came to blows, and the Parties fought it out till they were weary, and then they made an Agreement upon this Condition; The Prophet Daniel's Coffin ſhould change place by turns, thoſe on the one ſide the River ſhould have it one Year, and thoſe on the other ſide ſhould have it another.

CHAP. VIII.

1. Of the Acroamatical Theology and the Deities thereof. 2. Of the Triplaſian Mithras. 3. Of the Zoroaſtrian and Platonic Triad. 4. Of the Inventor of T'Agathon or the Firſt Henad. 5. Of T'Agathon or the Firſt Henad as he is the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Firſt Nature. 6. Of the Platonic Henades. 7. Of the Platonic Noes. 8. Of the Ideas of the firſt Platonic Intellect, that they are not meer Notionalities. 9. Of the arbitrarious Partiality of Chriſtian Platoniſts. 10. Of the Proclo-Platonic diſtribution of Gods. 11. Of the Genial kind of Deities. 12. Of the Schoolmens Hierarchies of Angels.

I. THE Acroamatical Theology by its unpopular Nature diſtinguiſheth it ſelf from the Exoterical; and ſo far as it is diſtinguiſh'd from the Exoterical, we are now to conſider the Deities thereof. The only Acroamatical Theology whoſe Deities we are concern'd to conſider, is that of Platoniſm; for although ſeveral Learned Nations of the Pagans had their Acroamatical as well as their Exoterical Theology, and other Sects and Schools of Philoſophers (ſuch as the Peripateticks and Stoicks) had their Acroamatical Theology as well as the Platoniſts; yet becauſe the Acroamatical Theology of thoſe other Sects and Schools of Philoſophers is nothing like a Syſtem of Acroamatical Theology, and becauſe the Acroamatical Theology of thoſe Learned Pagan Nations is coincident with Platoniſm, which is call'd by Pletho (w) the Theology that is according to Zoroaſter and Plato; therefore we will confine our Conſideration to the Deities of the Platonic Theology with ſome Intermixtures of the Chaldaic. To repreſent an Account of the Deities of this ſort of Theology (which becauſe of its Antiquity, ample diſpread and great Fame is in a ſenſe of Eminence the Acroamatical Theology) we will take our riſe from a Platonic Deſcription of the Mundane City or Polity Imperial. (x) How is it juſtifiable, to criminate ſuch a City, which giveth to every one his deſert, wherein Virtue is rewarded with Honour, and Naughtineſs with convenient Shame? wherein not only the Statues of the Gods are, but the Gods themſelves inſpecting from on high, who will eaſily be diſcharg'd of any Crimination from Men, conducting all things orderly from the beginning to the end, and diſtributing to every one what is agreeable, and conſequent to what was antecedent according to the viciſſitude of Lives; to be ignorant of ſuch a Diſtribution, is to be rudely unskilful in Divine Matters; but it is requiſite, you ſhould endeavour your ſelf, to be as good as may be, not only believing, that you may be ſo good, but that there are other very good Men, and that the Demons are good alſo; much more the Gods, who being in this viſible ſenſible World are eying the intelligible; but moſt of all the Regent of the Univerſe, the moſt bleſſed Soul; and thence further to praiſe and celebrate the intelligible Gods (the Ideal Deities:) and yet above all the great King there, whoſe greatneſs is chiefly ſhew'd in a multitude of Gods. The Platoniſts Notion of the Conſtitution of the Univerſe (as appeareth from this account of the Mundane Syſtem) is the ſame with the Popular Pagans; for they ſuppoſe it a City of Gods and Men. And their Inſtitution not only retaineth all the Deities of the Popular Pagans, but agreeably to their Polytheiſtic Genius and Principle (that it belongeth to the Magnificence of the firſt God, to have many Gods dependent upon him) they vaſtly inhance the Pagan Theiſm, and ſuperadd to the Deities of the Exoterical Theology theſe three things. A Zoroaſtrial Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes, three Kings and three Gods of the Theopolity (each of which is called Zeus or Jove) of which Archical Hypoſtaſes but one belongeth to the Exoterical Theology. A Syſtem of Myſtical Natures, which the Exoterical Theology hath no acquaintance with. Various Families and Diſtributions of Genial kind of Deities, that are in part not Exoterical but Acroamatical.

II. The principal thing that recommendeth the Acroamatical Theology is the Zoroaſtrian (or Platonic) Triad, which many Learned Men have thought a Divine Cabala and the ſame with the Trinity of the Chriſtian Religion. For (although there is no certainty touching the Name of the ſecond Hypoſtaſis in the Perſian Theology) there is great reaſon to think, that there was a Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes or Principles in the Ancient Perſian Theology. For the Platoniſts had their Triad by Arcane Tradition (from the Magi) and accordingly it is call'd by (u) Itinerar. p. 86, 87.

---

(w) Θεολογία ἡ κτ̓ Ζωροάστρην καὶ Πλάτωνα. Pletho apud Leo. Allat. demenſur. temp. c. 11. p. 133.

(x) Πῶς ἂν ὀρθῶς ἔχει, μέμφεσθαι πόλιν διδοῦσαν ἑκάστῳ τὴν ἀξίαν, ἧ καὶ ἀρετὴ τετίμηται καὶ κακία τὴν προσήκουσαν ἀτιμίαν ἔχει; καὶ θεῶν οὐ μόνον ἀγάλματα, ἀλλὰ καὶ αὐτοὶ ἄνωθεν ἐφορῶντες, οἳ ῥηϊδίως αἰτίας φησὶν ἀποφεύξονται πρὸς ἀνθρώπων, πάντα ἄγοντες τάξει ἐξ ἀρχῆς εἰς τέλος, μοῖραν ἑκάστῳ τὴν προσήκουσαν διδόντες κατ' ἀμοιβὰς βίων τοῖς προϋπηργμένοις ἀκόλουθον· ἣν ὁ ἀγνοῶν προπετέστερος ἀνθρώπων, περὶ πραγμάτων θείων ἀγροικιζόμενος· ἀλλὰ χρὴ ὡς ἄριστον μὲν αὐτὸν πειρᾶσθαι γίνεσθαι· μὴ μόνον δὲ αὐτὸν νομίζειν ἄριστον δύνασθαι γένεσθαι· οὔπω γὰρ οὔπω ἄριστος· ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀνθρώπους ἄλλους ἀρίστους. ἔτι καὶ δαίμονας ἀγαθοὺς εἶναι· πολὺ δὲ μᾶλλον θεοὺς τούς τε ἐν τῷδε ὄντας, κἀκεῖ βλέποντας, πάντων δὲ μάλιστα τὸν ἡγεμόνα τοῦδε τοῦ παντὸς ψυχὴν μακαριωτάτην. ἐντεῦθεν δὲ ἤδη καὶ τοὺς νοητοὺς ὑμνεῖν θεούς. ἐφ' ἅπασι δὲ ἤδη τὸν μέγαν τὸν ἐκεῖ βασιλέα, καὶ ἐν τῷ πλήθει μάλιστα τῶν θεῶν τὸ μέγα αὐτοῦ ἐνδεικνυμένους. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 9. contr. Gnoſticos.

Proclus ἡ τῶν τριῶν θεῶν παράδοσις, the Tradition of the three Gods. Porphyry reporteth, (y) that the Perſians were of Opinion, δύο νόας πρὸ ψυχῆς εἶναι, that there are two Minds before Soul; and Proclus hath cited this Magick or Chaldaic Oracle.

> ———Μετὰ δὲ πατρικὰς Διανοίας > ψυχὴ ἐγὼ ναίω. After (or next below)
> the paternal Mind I Pſyche dwell.

But although there is great reaſon to think, that there was in the Ancient Perſian and Chaldean Theology a Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes, yet there is no reaſon to think, that this Triad was meant by the Perſians Triplicate or Triplaſian Mithras, which in all probability was nothing better than an Aſtrological-Magical Buſineſs, (z) ſuch as Hecate triplex Dea (a threefold or triplicate Deity) undoubtedly is. Hecate is no ſtranger in the Zoroaſtrian Theology, nor to the Perſian Mithras; the triplicate Hecate is conjoyn'd with Mithras in this Inſcription upon an Altar recorded by Baronius (a).

GRATIANO IV. ET MEROBAVDE CONSVLIBVS DEDICAVIT
ANTIQVA GENEROSE DOMO CVI REGIA VESTÆ
PONTIFICI FELIX SACRATO MILITAT IGNE
IDEM AVGVR TRIPLICIS CVLTOR VENERANDE DIANE
PERSIDIQ. MITHRE ANTISTES BABILONIE TEMPLI
TAVRIBOLIQ. SIMVL MAGNI DVX MISTICE SACRI.

As Hecate (call'd Diana in this Inſcription) is the Moon in conjunction with her * preſidentiary Spirit or God, the Moon not ſimply, but transform'd into the great Witch of the Univerſe and the Witch-Goddeſs; ſo the threefold Mithras agreeably to the threefold Hecate is moſt probably to be underſtood of that Mithras the Sun in conjunction with his preſidentiary Spirit, the Sun not ſimply, but transform'd into the great Wizzard of the World and Wizzard-God. And this is the more likely, becauſe the Magi celebrated a ſolemn Feſtival in honour of the threefold Mithras, (b) as the counterfeit Dionyſius reporteth. For it is not probable, that the Arcane Cabala of a Trinity quite remote from the publick Theology and conceal'd from the People ſhould be the matter and occaſion of a Solemn Religious Feſtival: Nor is this Philoſophic-Pagan Triad a Buſineſs of Popular Religion, but of Philoſophy only; which is an Argument, that the threefold Mithras honour'd with the celebration of a Solemn Feſtival is to be underſtood of the Sun. (c) Kircher is one of thoſe Theologers that at a great rate Philoſophic-paganize the matters of the Chriſtian Theology, yet he maketh a rational conjecture touching one of the Idols in Japan with three Heads (Images with three Heads and one Body are uſual amongſt the Eaſtern Idolaters) that it is to be underſtood of the Sun. And the words of Volaterranus touching the Seres are manifeſtly to be underſtood of the Sun. As they riſe from Bed, ad orientem ſe ſolem convertunt, Trini Dei opem implorantes, they turn themſelves to the Sun, imploring the help of the Trine God. From Macrobius (d) it appeareth, that the Sun was repreſented with three Heads in the Egyptian Hieroglyphicks. (e) And Cerberus's three Heads ſignifie the three Regions of the Sun. (f) There are ſeveral other Ternaries alſo remarkable in the Sun.

The counterfeit Dionyſius and his Scholiaſts ſuppoſe, that the Triplaſian or Threefold Mithras is the Sun, and that he is ſo denominated from the Miracle wrought in the Days of Hezekiah, when the Day was increas'd, and almoſt triplicated: But this Conceit is a Foolery; whence ſome infer, that by the Triplaſian Mithras muſt be meant the Perſian Trinity, becauſe this Conceit is a Foolery. But they that make this Inference are guilty of ſomewhat worſe than a Foolery. (g) For Pletho (in conſort with others) affirmeth, that the third Hypoſtaſis of the Perſian Trinity was that which they call'd Arimanius, he gathering as much from Plutarch himſelf. He obſerveth alſo, how great an Agreement there was between the Zoroaſtrian and the Platonic Trinity, they differing in a manner only in words. It is much, that any Chriſtian Divines ſhould proceed to this pitch of Extravagance in their humour of Philoſophic Paganizing the Matters of Chriſtian Theology. But they ſuppoſing the Zoroaſtrian or Platonic Triad a divine Cabala coincident with the holy Trinity of the Scripture-Theology (as it muſt be if it was deriv'd from the Hebrews) infer from this Hypotheſis, that the Holy Ghoſt and the Perſian Arimanius (ὁ πονηρὸς δαίμων Περσῶν, the evil Demon of the Perſians) are one and the ſame Hypoſtaſis; confounding (h) the delirous Imaginations of the Magi with the Doctrines of Chriſtianity, that is, Hell with Heaven.

III. The matter will not be much amended by confounding and identifying the Chriſtian Trinity with this Philoſophic Pagan Trinity, as it is repreſented by the Platoniſts without any conſiderable difference in their Accounts of it. For in their Trinity the third Archical Hypoſtaſis is the Soul of the World, which implieth, that the World is the third God. The World being their third God (not primarily, but ſecondarily and by conſequence upon the account of its Soul) Numenius in Proclus (i) thus repreſenteth the Platonic Triad of Gods. He calleth the firſt God the Father, the ſecond the Opificer, the Work (or the World) the third. Harpocration in like manner, (k) calleth the firſt God Uranus and Chronus, the ſecond Jupiter and Zeus, the third Heaven and the World. So Plotinus ſaith; The World, as is uſually ſaid, is the third God.

According to Parmenides the Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes is thus denominated and diſtinguiſh'd; (l) τὸ πρῶτον ἕν, the firſt Hen; ἓν πολλά, one many; ἓν καὶ πολλά, one and many. From the firſt Hen all Beings are ſuppos'd to derive their Unity or Oneneſs. (m) Whatever is one, is one by participation of the firſt Unity, which is one it ſelf, and is more large and general than Ens it ſelf, Mind it ſelf (the Hypoſtaſis which is no higher than ſo) the Henad ſuperiour to and exempt from the whole comprehenſion of Beings. This firſt Hen is of abſolute Simplicity, devoid of all Forms, Species, or Ideas; but the ſecond Hen is: omniform; (n) therefore this one Nature is all Beings (the Beings themſelves) that which is Truth, and a certain great God, or rather not any one God, but every

(y) Eugubin. de Per. Phil. l. 1. c. 10. Gale in Jambl. p. 297. Intellect. Syſt. p. 289.

(z) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 192, &c.

(a) Ad ann. 377. n. 1.

* Signorum præſtites Dii Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 23.

(b) Selden. de D. Syr. proleg. c. 3.

(c) Hoffman. umbr. in Luc. p. 97, 98.

(d) Saturn. l. 1. c. 20.

(e) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 11.

(f) V. Dictionar. Hiſtoric. Geographic. Poetic. p. 112. ed. Ann. 1670.

(g) Intell. Syſt. p. 289, &c.

(h) Magorum deliria cum dogmatis Chriſtianis, quod idem eſt ac ſi cœlo Tartara. Pocock. Spec. p. 149.

(i) Πατέρα μὲν καλεῖ τὸν πρῶτον, ποιητὴν δὲ τὸν δεύτερον, ποίημα δὲ τὸν τρίτον. In Tim. p. 93.

(k) Ἀποκαλεῖ τὸν πρῶτον θεὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ κρόνον, τὸν δὲ δεύτερον Δία καὶ Ζῆνα, τὸν δὲ τρίτον οὐρανὸν καὶ κόσμον. Ibid. Ὁ κόσμος θεὸς, ὥσπερ σύνηθες λέγειν, τρίτος. Plotin. En. 3. l. 5. c. 6.

(l) Plotin. En. 5. l. 1. c. 8.

(m) Πᾶν τὸ γινόμενον ἓν μεθέξει τοῦ ἑνὸς γίνεται ἕν. ἑνὰς πρὸ τῶν ὄντων. Procl. Inſtit. Theol. c. 3. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 3. & p. 85, 86.

(n) Μία τοίνυν φύσις αὕτη τὰ ὄντα πάντα, ἡ ἀλήθεια, ἡ δὲ θεός τις μέγας· μᾶλλον δὲ οὐ τις, ἀλλὰ πᾶς. Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 3.

very God, the Comprehenſion of all the Pagan Deities. The third Hen (the intellectual Soul) is alſo omniform, and is denominated one and many, to ſignifie, that it is further remov'd from Simplicity than the Second.

Uſually the Platoniſts call this Triad of Hypoſtaſes three Kings (as Plato and Amelius ſtile them) as well as three Gods; they ſuppoſing (o) an intellectual Kingdom amongſt Beings (the Platonic Univerſe of Beings maketh one Imperial Polity) and attributing βασιλείαν τῶν ὄντων, the Kingdom of all Beings to the firſt Hypoſtaſis, the Kingdom of Ideas (the Kingdom of that which is Truth) and the Divine Conſtitution of Gods to the Second, and the Kingdom of the Univerſe that is made to the third; which ſpeaketh that Hypoſtaſis hugely diſſonant from the Chriſtians Holy Ghoſt.

Numenius call'd theſe three Hypoſtaſes (p) πάππον, ἔγγονον, ἀπόγονον, the Grandfather, the Son, and the Nephew. Plotinus in like manner calleth the Second the Father of the Third, and the Firſt the Grandfather of the Third. Their relation and dependance he thus expreſſeth; (q) Plato calleth T'Agathon the Father, and that which is above Intellect and above Eſſence. He often calleth Ens and the Intellect The Idea: His Notion is, that Intellect is from T'Agathon, and Pſyche from Intellect. (r) This Nature (Intellect) is a God, the ſecond God, that ſheweth himſelf before the beholding that other (T'Agathon) who ſitteth aloft, and is ſeated upon the ſecond Deity as his fair Seat or Baſis, that is dependent on him. Their gradual ſubordination and dependance is moſt clearly thus expreſſed; (s) The Eſſence or Nature of Soul is above all Bodies, and the Intellectual Nature is above all Souls, and One it ſelf is above all Intellectual Hypoſtaſes.

The firſt Hypoſtaſis is καθ' οὐσίαν or eſſentially T'Agathon: (t) The ſecond is call'd ἀγαθοειδὴς Boniform, to ſignifie, that it hath the ſimilitude and form of (T'Agathon) the ſuper-eſſential Good, and participateth thereof; and the third is denominated νοειδὴς, Menti-form, and is ſaid to participate both of Intellect and T'Agathon. T'Agathon is of a twofold Conſideration and hath two Names; for it is conſider'd as the procreant cauſe of all Beings, whence they proceed as Multitude from Unity; and accordingly it is denominated Ipſum unum, one it ſelf. It is conſider'd alſo as the Object of Deſire, towards which all Beings naturally turn themſelves, and accordingly it is denominated Ipſum Bonum, Good it ſelf. (u) For if all Beings have an Appetite after Good, it is manifeſt, that the firſt Good is before all Beings (as alſo becauſe the firſt muſt be the beſt.) The ſecond Archical Hypoſtaſis is likewiſe of a twofold Conſideration; for it may be conſider'd in general as Νοῦς or Intellect only, and in ſuch ſenſe it is Exoterical and known to all Mankind; but conſider'd as the Platonic-kind of Νοῦς or Intellect, it is Arcane-Philoſophic.

The third Archical Hypoſtaſis (the Intellectual Soul) is alſo of a twofold Conſideration; for the Platoniſts (particularly Plotinus) conſider it (w) as Intellectual, and as Vital or Vivificative to the World; and therefore it is denominated both ψυχὴ ὑπερκόσμιος, the Super-mundane Soul, and ψυχὴ ἐγκόσμιος, the Inmundane Soul, or the informing Soul of the World; which Inmundane and Super-mundane Soul ought not (according to the true method of Philoſophizing) to be repreſented as two Specifically or Numerically diſtinct Souls, (x) as a Learned Writer repreſenteth them, ſuppoſing this to be the Senſe of Plotinus; but as partial Conſiderations of one and the ſame Soul. For Plotinus maketh the Soul of the World twofold in no other Senſe than he maketh the Soul of the Sun and Stars twofold; nor otherwiſe than as ſome make a twofold Humane Soul, whoſe intellectual part is in ſome ſort ſeparate from the Body. Of which ſeparate or intellectual Soul of the World Plotinus ſaith, If it be reckon'd with the World, the World is a God: Τὸ δὲ λοιπὸν, δαίμων φησὶ μέγας· καὶ τὰ πάθη τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ δαιμόνια, but the reſt (of the Mundane Soul) is called by Plato a great Demon, and the Paſſions that are in it are Demonial. This great Demon (ſo called by Plato) is manifeſtly of affinity with the Perſian Arimanius; for (y) Plutarch's Notion of the Perſian Arimanius is coincident with this partial inadequate Notion of the third Hypoſtaſis of the Zoroaſtrian or Platonic Triad.

The Platonic Triad is coincident with (z) the Orphic Triad of Archical Deities Phanes, Uranus and Chronus; which inferreth, that the Egyptians had ſuch a Triad in their Acroamatical Theology; for Orpheus deriv'd his Theology from Egypt. But in the account that is given us of the Egyptians Triad there is a difficulty touching their remarkable Deity Kneph, (a) who is thought to be the ſame with the Orphic Chronus (becauſe an Egg is attributed to both) and is repreſented by Jamblichus as an Acroamatical Deity. Whereas the famous Egyptian Kneph was certainly an Exoterical and Popular Pagan Deity, (b) being the Deity of the People of Thebais, their ſupreme Deity, the Deity of their Religion, worſhipp'd in a Statue of Human Form, of a Sky-colour'd Complexion, ſomewhat blackiſh, holding in his Hand a Girdle and a Scepter, and having upon his Head a kingly Plume (καὶ ὅτι βασιλεὺς, καὶ νοερῶς κινεῖται, in token that he is a King and moveth intellectually) thruſting an Egg out of his Mouth, which ſignifieth the World, of which he was ſuppos'd to be the Demiurgus. There is a neceſſity therefore of diſtinguiſhing in the Egyptian Theology an Acroamatical from the Exoterical Kneph, for ſeveral Deities were called by that Name. The Philoſophic Pagans alſo made ſeveral of their Deities the Demiurgus; and therefore it is not ſafe to affirm, that Kneph is the ſame with the Orphic Chronus (who ſeemeth to be an Acroamatical Deity,) becauſe an Egg is attributed to both. But ſuppoſing, that there was in the Egyptian Theology an Acroamatical as well as an Exoterical Kneph, and that Ptha (a Deity ſaid to be generated by Kneph) ſignified in their Acroamatical Theology a different Deity from what it ſignified in their Exoterical, admitting theſe reaſonable Suppoſitions, the Egyptian Triad may reaſonably be thought to have conſiſted of theſe three Archical Hypoſtaſes: Kneph (the intelligible World, as ſome have interpreted this Deity,) Ptha, Vulcan the immediate Artificer the mundane Soul,) τὸ ἓν ἀμερὲς, the impartible Unite, which the Egyptian Hermes is ſaid to have ſet before thoſe other Deities.

IV. But

(o) Τὴν νοερὰν βασιλείαν ἐν τοῖς οὖσι. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 2. c. 4. l. 3. c. 7.

(p) Procl. in Tim. p. 93.

(q) Πατέρα φησὶ Τ'ἀγαθὸν, καὶ τὸ ἐπέκεινα νοῦ, καὶ ἐπέκεινα οὐσίας. Πολλαχοῦ δὲ τὸ ὂν καὶ τὸν νοῦν τὴν ἰδέαν λέγει· ὥστε Πλάτωνα εἰδέναι ἐκ μὲν Τ'ἀγαθοῦ τὸν νοῦν, τὴν ἰδέαν· ἐκ δὲ τοῦ νοῦ τὴν ψυχήν. Enn. 5. l. 1. c. 8.

(r) Καὶ θεὸς αὕτη ἡ φύσις, καὶ θεὸς δεύτερος προφαίνων ἑαυτὸν πρὶν ὁρᾷν ἐκεῖνον· ὁ δὲ ὑπερκάθηται καὶ ὑπερίδρυται ἐπὶ καλῆς οὕτως οἷον κρηπῖδος, ἣ ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἐξήρτηται. Ibid. l. 5. c. 3.

(s) Πάντων σωμάτων ἐπέκεινά ἐστιν ἡ ψυχῆς οὐσία, καὶ πασῶν ψυχῶν ἐπέκεινα ἡ νοερὰ φύσις, καὶ πασῶν τῶν νοερῶν ὑποστάσεων ἐπέκεινα τὸ ἕν. Procl. Inſt. Th. c. 20.

(t) Procl. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 12. & l. 3. p. 95.

(u) Εἰ γὰρ πάντα τὰ ὄντα τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ ἐφίεται, δῆλον ὅτι τὸ πρώτως ἀγαθὸν ἐπέκεινά ἐστι τῶν ὄντων. Id. Inſt. Theol. c. 8.

(w) V. Plotin. En. 2. l. 3. c. 9. & 18. Ficin. Com. p. 288.

(x) Intellect. Syſt. p. 562, 576.

(y) Pſychogon. p. 1014.

(z) Procl. in Tim. p. 93.

(a) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 158. Gale not. p. 301.

(b) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 2, 5. l. 9. c. 11. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 11.

IV. But the Egyptian Hermes ſeemeth not to have been the Inventor of Hen or T'Agathon, but rather the Perſian Zoroaſter: For the Perſian Oromaſdes (to whoſe Party and Preſidency the things and Powers of the Univerſe that are of luminous Quality do belong) the Zoroaſtrian Fable ſay; (c) he made ſix Gods, of Benevolence, Truth, Equity, Wiſdom, Riches, and the Opificer of the Pleaſure that followeth honeſt things. After this he augmented himſelf thrice, and remov'd himſelf as far from the Sun, as the Sun is from the Earth, and furniſh'd the Heavens with Stars. One Star above the reſt, the Dog-Star, he conſtituted as a Curator of the reſt. He alſo made four and twenty other Gods and put them into an Egg. How much ſoever of Non-ſenſe and Impiety there is in this Zoroaſtrian mode of Theologizing, it is manifeſt, that Oromaſdes (according to the Perſians) is a Deity ſuperiour to the Sun, and the ſame with that Mithras, of whom Eubulus ſaith, τὸν κόσμον ἐδημιούργησε, he was the Demiurgus of the World. A learned Man addeth; (d) that Oromaſdes is God properly as the Fountain of Light, and the Original of all Good, and the ſame with Plato's T'Agathon or firſt Good. But this Notion of Oromaſdes from Pletho is plainly a miſtake, that confoundeth diſtinct Principles or Deities in the Perſian Theology. For the ancient Magi before the times of Zoroaſter or Zaraduſht acknowledg'd two Principles of things, Light and Darkneſs, Oromaſdes and Arimanius. (e) Zoroaſter was a Reformer of their Theology (not the Founder) and is ſaid, to have made this change in their Profeſſion; whereas the Magi before his time held, that Light and Darkneſs (Oromaſdes and Arimanius) were the firſt Principles of things, he taught, that God was Senior to both and the Maker of them. The accounts which are given us of the Tenents of the Magi by Plutarch and Theodorus in Photius, agree with this account of the Arabic Writers touching Zoroaſter. For Oromaſdes in Plutarch is ſaid, to have had his Origin from the pureſt Light and Arimanius from Darkneſs, * as if neither of them was Self-originate. And in Theodorus's account both Ormiſdas and Satanas (which is the Name that he giveth to the Perſian Arimanius) are ſaid to be begotten by Zaruam, (f) whoſe Name is thought to be derived from the Arabic Zarahou, which ſignifieth omnium Satorem, the Sower or Father of all things. Such Etymological Gueſſes are too lubricous to build any thing upon: But the Relation of the Arabic Writers touching Zoroaſter and his reform'd Theology is a fair account of the Origin of the Platonic Hen or T'Agathon. For if Zoroaſter introduc'd into the Theology of the Magi a Principle ſuperiour to Oromaſdes and Arimanius (the former of which is the Demiurgus,) what could that be but T'Agathon or the Monad? And this is the more probable, becauſe the Chalday Oracles upbraid all Mankind with Ignorance of the firſt God. There is alſo ſomething expreſſive of the Monad in Zoroaſter's Aſſertion touching the firſt Principle or God, as the Arabic Writers report it, (g) that he is one and ſolitary without any Aſſociate. But that which Plutarch reporteth of Zaratas Pythagoras's Maſter, is much more conſiderable, (h) Zaratas Pythagoras's Maſter called the Dyad the Mother of Number, and the Monad the Father. Whence it is manifeſt, that the Pythagoric Number-kind of Theologizing, making a Monad the Principle or Father of all things, is originally Perſian or Chaldean, and therefore Zoroaſtrian.

Moreover, they that conſider Zoroaſter's Character, cannot doubt of the fiery Nature of his Theology. For the Perſians did not only Worſhip two Gods, the one good, the other bad, (i) as S. Auſtin miſtaketh; they were the Worſhippers of many Gods, but of Fire in chief, invoking it firſt in every Sacrifice, as the Romans did Janus, (k) not daring to pollute ordinary Fire. The Perſees at this Day diſpers'd in India Worſhip Fire in chief, and ſuffer it not to be extinguiſh'd, believing its Nature moſt Divine, and like to God's Nature; and ſome ſay, they Worſhip Fire as a part of God. The Magi in general are remarkable for their unextinguiſhable Fire and their Pyratheia; Magus and a Fire-worſhipper are words of the ſame importance amongſt the Perſians and Arabians; Prayers, Sonnets and myſterious Rites in Honour of the Fire were the main of their Religion. Zoroaſter is peculiarly remarkable for his Name זרדוסת Zarduſt, which ſignifieth a Friend of the Fire; his Story is full of Fire, and he is thought by ſome the Diſciple of the Prophet Elias (upon no other account ſurely, but) becauſe he was a Man of Fire. (l) Zoroaſter being ſuch a Fire Theologer, it is more than probable, that he Theologiz'd (in his Myſtic-Philoſophic-Theurgical Theology) in ſome ſuch fiery way, as the Chalday Oracles repreſent, whoſe ſound is Fire, which by Fire ſignifie the Divine Nature (as Pletho ſaith,) which deſcribe the appearances of the Gods as certain Fire-appearances, and derive all things from one Fire, —— εἰσὶ πάντα πυρὸς ἑνὸς ἐκγεγαῶτα, all things are the Off-ſpring of one Fire. And being ſo great a Reformer of the Doctrine of the Magi, that common fame ſpeaketh him the Author of their Theology and Religion, it is reaſonable, to think him the Author and Introducer of that firſt and higheſt Principle of the Philoſophic Fire-Theology called τὸ ἓν the Henotety. We will conſider further, that the Philoſophic Pagans do not (as our Chriſtian Platoniſts) Parallel the God of Iſrael with their Monad or T'Agathon, but with that ſecondary inferiour God of theirs, the Demiurgus, as one of them (Julian) hath diſcours'd. (m) If it is the next Opificer of the World, whom the Hebrews Worſhip (ſaith he), we have better Opinions of him than they. Whence his Adverſary S. Cyril inferreth, (n) Julian therefore degradeth the next Opificer of the World into the ſecondary Rank and Nature from the firſt God. For they ſet before him T'Agathon, which they ſay is immote and ſtirreth not; and having remov'd from him all care of us, they excogitate a ſecond God, whom they call next and attent to the things that are made. The Philoſophic Pagans have rightly judg'd, that the God of Iſrael is of no Affinity with their T'Agathon (if he is as idle (o) as an Epicurean Deity, and hath as little Right or Title to Religious Service:) Nor is there any Principle in the Theology of the Hebrews, which reſembleth that Philoſophic-pagan Principle. Therefore a learned Preacher pointeth to its true Original, when he ſaith; (p) The Philoſophers diſliking the vulgar Superſtition, went to School, ſaith Clem. to the Perſian Magi, and of them learn'd a more Scholaſtic Atheiſm. The Alexandrian Clemens (contrary to his ſtrain of Diſcourſe elſewhere) ſometimes reputeth this Philoſophic-pagan Theiſm no better than Atheiſm. The Philoſophers (ſaith he) confeſs that the Perſians, or Sarmatians, or the Magi were their Maſters, (q) of whom thy learned the Atheiſm of their venerable Principles, not knowing the Prince, the Maker of all, and the Maker of all their Principles, the Self-exiſtent God. If the Magi were ignorant of the true God, if their Theiſm was but a ſort of Scholaſtic Atheiſm, the Zoroaſtrian Triad could not be an Hebrew Cabala, nor is the unknown and unintelligible T'Agathon any part of ſacred Doctrine, but the Notices of it are pure Human Invention, introduc'd by Zoroaſter or the Egyptian Hermes or by both; for according to Athanaſius Kircherus they were both the firſt Revealers of this and ſome other venerable Myſteries of like Nature. Hæc ſunt vetuſtiſſima omnium ſacræ Theologiæ dogmata, à Zoroaſtre & Hermete mundo primævo propalata. Theſe the moſt ancient Theological Dogmes (ſaith he) were by Zoroaſter and Hermes made known to the primeval World.

(c) Plutarch de Iſid. p. 369.

(d) Intell. Syſt. p. 287, &c.

(e) Pocock. Spec. p. 148.

* Vid. Gale not. in Phornut. de nat. Deor. p. 43.

(f) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1, c. 5.

(g) Pocock. ſupr.

(h) Καὶ Ζαράτας ὁ Πυθαγόρου διδάσκαλος, ταύτην μὲν (τὴν δυάδα) ἐκάλει τοῦ ἀριθμοῦ μητέρα· τὸ δὲ ἓν πατέρα. Meurſ. Den. Pythag. p. 13, 15.

(i) De C. D. l. 5, c. 21.

(k) Seld. de D. Syr. Synt. 2, c. 8. Gale in Phornut. p. 74. Hoffman. umbr. p. 109.

(l) Hotting. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 6. S. 16. ed. 1. Gale in Jambl. p. 222, 254, 209, 297.

(m) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 4. p. 141.

(n) Καταβιβάζει μὲν οὖν ὡς ἐν δευτέρᾳ τάξει τε καὶ φύσει τοῦ πρώτου τὸν προσεχῆ τοῦ κόσμου δημιουργόν. Προαναχθέντες γὰρ αὐτοῦ τ' Ἀγαθὸν, ἀτρεμεῖν τε αὐτὸ φασὶ, καὶ τῆς ἐν ἡμῖν φροντίδος ὁλοτρόπως ἀποσοβήσαντες, δεύτερον ἐπινοοῦσι θεὸν, ὃν καὶ προσεχῆ καλοῦσι τοῖς κτίσμασιν.

(o) S. Cyr. ibid. p. 61, 68, 117. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 18.

(p) Dr. Ham. Ser. on Act. 17. 30. p. 184.

But of Zoroaſter it is further obſervable; that the Theology of the Valentinians and Gnoſticks (r) is generally reputed Zoroaſtrian, and that thoſe Heretical Theologers Symbolize with the Philoſophic Pagans Monad or T'Agathon (s) in their Cant touching Proarche, proanennoetos & inenarrabilis & innominabilis, the Pro-principle, Præ-unintelligible, both undeclarable and innominable. Such are their Sublimities touching the Monotety (as they call their Principle;) and the principal point of their Hereſie was; they pretended to ſomething higher than the Opificer and Creator of all things.

V. The old Philoſophic Pagans were ſuperlative Scholaſticks, and in their Scholaſticiſm or Ontology the Monad or Henotety is of the ſame Attributes (if they may be called Attributes) with the Gnoſticks Monotety. (t) Antecedent to all Beings and to the Gods the producers of all Beings, there is one ſeparate and imparticipate cauſe ineffable and unſayable by all Speech, unknowable by all Knowledge and beyond Conception, producing all things into Light from it ſelf, exiſting in an ineffable manner before all things, converting all things towards it ſelf, being the beſt end of all. This therefore which is ſeparate from all, ſo as to ſurmount all which Heniadically cauſeth to ſubſiſt both all the Divine Henades and all the kinds of Beings and their Proceſſes, Plato calleth T'Agathon. Reproaching the Devotions of the Chriſtian Church as of a mean and low Strein, the ſame Author (Proclus) thus celebrateth the Praiſes of the firſt God. (u) Let us celebrate him, not ſaying, that he is the Founder of the Earth and Heaven, nor of Souls and the Generations of all Animals, of theſe things he is indeed the Founder, but in the laſt place. But before theſe things, that he brought to light all the intelligible kind of Gods, and all the intellectual, all the ſupermundane and all the in-mundane Gods, and that he is the God of all Gods, and the Henad of all Henades, and that he is above the firſt Impoſſibles, and more unſayable than all ſilence, more unknowable than all ſubſiſtence, Holy in the Holies, hidden and conceal'd within the intelligible Gods. In this Proclo-Platonic Syſtem of Deities there are Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures of different Kinds and Degrees. Of the firſt and higheſt of them and the Fountain of the reſt (Hen or T'Agathon) we have this account from Petavius, who in great degree followeth Plotinus in his Platonic Conceits. (w) Plotinus uſually removeth Being, Eſſence, Life, Mind (Intellect) and the like from the higheſt Principle (the firſt God) as incompetible thereto.

His Reaſons are; (x) becauſe Eſſence, Species, Form and Idea is τὸ δέ τι, a definite, diſtinct and determinate This or That, ἐκεῖνο δὲ οὐ τι, ἀλλὰ πρὸ ἑκάστου, but the firſt Principle is not This or That thing, but before every thing. And that the firſt Principle is not Eſſence, Form or Species, (nor can any of them be found there) he further argueth from its abſolute Oneneſs and Simplicity. Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἰδέα ἕν, ἀλλ' ἀριθμὸς μᾶλλον, ϗ ἑκάστη, ϗ σύμπασα, Idea is not ſimply one, but number rather (more than one) both every Idea and the whole comprehenſion; they are but one as the World is one. Whereas the firſt Principle is ὅλως ἕν, totally one without all Multiplicity, Diverſity, or Duplicity. And therefore Eſſence is as remote from the very one, as Number is from Unity. Another Reaſon is; (y) the firſt Principle is nothing of thoſe, whereof it is the Principle. For which Reaſon Life is incompetible to the firſt Principle, (z) τὸ παρέχον ταύτην ἐπέκεινα ταύτης, that which affordeth it, is perfectly beyond it. And for the ſame Reaſon (as it is beyond all Beings, ſo) it is beyond Ens or Eſſence. Beſides, (a) Ens hath as it were the Form of Ens, ἄμορφον δὲ ἐκεῖνο, but the firſt Principle is informous, and without all intelligible Form; therefore it is beyond Ens, which is determin'd by its proper Form. Being the Nature procreant of All, and none of All, it is not this or that, nor of any quality or quantity, nor is it Mind or Soul, nor in motion or reſt, nor in place or time, is ſoliform by its ſelf, or rather without Form, before all Form or Species, and above it, and above reſt or motion; for theſe are the Properties of Ens, which make it many, but are altogether (the one or the other) incompetible to the firſt Nature. And upon this account All proceed from it, (b) becauſe it is not determin'd by any Form, μόνον γὰρ ἓν ἐκεῖνο, for Henotety is the All that it is. (c) Nothing can be predicated of it, not Ens, not Eſſence, not Life, it is a meer tranſcendental to them all. (d) It is incapable of all Additionals; for every addition (Reſtriction or Determination) deſtroyeth the exact and ineffable Henotety thereof. If you ſay one Soul, οὐ μὲν αὐτὸ

(q) Παρ' ὧν τὴν ἀθεότητα τῶν σεβασμίων αὐτοῖς μεμαθήκασιν ἀρχῶν, ἄρχοντα τὸν πάντων ποιητὴν καὶ τῶν ἀρχῶν αὐτῶν δημιουργὸν ἀγνοοῦντες, τὸν ἄναρχον θεόν. Προτρεπτ. p. m. 32.

(r) Ut Valentini Doctorem agnoſcere poſſis, & Gnoſticorum in Æonibus ſuis. Montacut. Orig. Eccl. T. 1. p. 177. de Zoroaſtre.

(s) Iren. adv. Hær. l. 1. c. 5. & in proœm. v. Gale in Jambl. p. 298. Pearſon. vindic. Epiſt. S. Ignat. par. 2. p. 66, &c.

(t) Ἁπάντων δὴ τῶν ὄντων, ϗ αὐτῶν τῶν τὰ ὄντα παραγόντων θεῶν, μία ἐξῃρημένη ϗ ἀμέθεκτος αἰτία προϋφέστηκεν, ἄρρητος μὲν παντὶ λόγῳ ϗ ἄφραστος ἄγνωστος δὲ πάσῃ γνώσει ϗ ἄληπτος, πάντα μὲν ἀφ' ἑαυτῆς ἐκφαίνουσα, πάντων δὲ ἀρρήτως προϋπάρχουσα, καὶ πάντα μὲν πρὸς ἑαυτὴν ἐπιστρέφουσα τέλος δὲ οὖσα πάντων τὸ ἄριστον. Ταύτην οὖν τὴν ὄντως ἐκβεβηκυῖαν χωριστῶς ἀπὸ πασῶν, καὶ πάσας μὲν ἑνάδας τῶν θείων, πάντα δὲ τὰ γένη τῶν ὄντων καὶ τὰς προόδους ἑνιαίως ὑφιστᾶσαν, τ' ἀγαθὸν ἀποκαλεῖ. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 3. c. 7.

(u) Ὑμνήσω μὲν αὐτὸν οὐχ ὅτι γῆν ϗ οὐρανὸν ὑπέστησεν λέγοντες, οὐδ' ἂν ὅτι ψυχὰς ϗ ζώων ἁπάντων γενέσεις· ϗ ταῦτα μὲν γὰρ, ἀλλ' ἐπ' ἐσχάτοις πρὸ δὲ τούτων, ὡς πᾶν μὲν τὸ νοητὸν τῶν θεῶν γένος, πᾶν δὲ τὸ νοερὸν ἐξέφηνε, πάντας δὲ ὑπὲρ τὸν κόσμον, ϗ τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ θεοὺς ἅπαντας, ϗ ὡς θεός ἐστι θεῶν ἁπάντων, ϗ ὡς ἑνὰς ἑνάδων, ϗ ὡς τῶν ἀδυνάτων ἐπέκεινα τῶν πρώτων, ϗ ὡς πάσης σιγῆς ἀρρητότερον, ϗ ὡς πάσης ὑπάρξεως ἀγνωστότερον, ἅγιος ἐν ἁγίοις, τοῖς νοητοῖς ἐναποκεκρυμμένος θεοῖς. Ibid. l. 2. c. 11.

(w) Plotinus paſſim nomina iſta ὄν, οὐσίαν, ζωὴν, νοῦν, Ens, Eſſentiam, Vitam, Mentem, & ſimilia, removet ab eo qui ſummus eſt. Dogm. Theol. T. 1. l. 1. c. 6. S. 10.

(x) En. 6. l. 9. c. 2, 3. En. 5. l. 5. c. 6.

(y) En. 3. l. 8. c. 9.

(z) En. 3. l. 9. c. 3. En. 5. l. 5. c. 6.

(a) En. 6. l. 9. c. 3.

(b) En. 5. l. 1. c. 7.

(c) En. 3. l. 8. c. 9.

(d) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 3. c. 20. Plotin. En. 6. l. 9. c. 1.

τὸ ἕν, ψυχὴ γὰρ μία· καὶ δύο ταῦτα ψυχὴ καὶ ἕν. This is not one it ſelf, for it is one Soul; and theſe are two, Soul and One. Thus the Maſters of Platoniſm Diſpute for the abſtractedneſs and indeterminateneſs of their Principle, for the meer Henotety and immenſe Simplicity thereof, and that One is of greater latitude and extent than Ens or Being.

And for the like Reaſons they affirm, that (although it is ſometimes called Mind in a large Senſe,) it quite tranſcendeth Mind, Intellect, Intellection, and that all theſe fall to the ſhare of a ſecond Nature, which is (e) the πρῶτον γινώσκον, the firſt knowing Nature; for the firſt Nature is above it and needeth it not, as the Soul needeth not Hands and Feet, to keep it from being lame. Nor is the Multiplicity that is in Intellect and Intellection conſiſtent with the Simplicity of the firſt Nature. (f) For Intellect and Intelligible are connex'd, and therefore at leaſt there muſt be two, wherefore what is above Duplicity and exempt therefrom, muſt be above Mind and Intellect. And if one and the ſame be both underſtanding and the thing underſtood, there will be Duplicity, not pure Simplicity and Henotety. (g) Whatever underſtandeth it ſelf, ὃ δ' ἐξελίττει ἑαυτὸ, καὶ πολλὰ ἂν εἴη, expandeth and diſplayeth it ſelf, and will be more than one. In all Intellection there is unum & aliud, identity and alterity, and multitude πολλῶν εἰς αὐτὸ συνελθόντων, ſeverals coming together. And in an Object that is Intelligible there muſt be ἄλλο καὶ ἄλλο, a diſtinctneſs of one from another: Elſe what can be ſaid, or diſtinctly underſtood about it? εἰ γὰρ ἑνὶ καὶ ἀμερεῖ προσϐάλλοι, ἠλογήθη, for if the Application be to what is abſolutely indiſtinct, there is no room for Speech or Reaſon. Wherefore in all underſtanding there muſt be ſeverals, and in every thing that is underſtood there muſt be (ποικίλον) Diverſity, or elſe there will be no Intellection, but touch only inexplicable and unintelligible. Theſe Maſters (who aſſuredly never deriv'd this kind of Theology from the Hebrews) further Diſpute, (h) that 'tis not Intelligence which underſtandeth, but that which hath Intelligence; whence again there emergeth Duplicity in that which is Intelligent. Intellection is Motion, κίνησις πρὸς ἀγαθὸν, Motion to good, (in Life alſo there is Motion ad aliud, viz. to Good,) which is incompetible to the firſt Immoveable, which muſt be without all Action. Underſtanding is not the firſt, either in Being or being honourable, nor is all Underſtanding ſuch, but the Underſtanding of good; Good therefore is before and tranſcendent to Intellection. And it argueth a defect ἐν τῷ νοεῖν ἔχειν τὸ εὖ, οὐκ ἐν τῇ ὑποϛάσει, to have well being in Underſtanding, not in Subſiſtence. For theſe and the like Reaſons they judge it no abſurdity, to ſay, that the firſt Principle knoweth not, nor underſtandeth it ſelf, nor any thing elſe, is unſayable and unintelligible, nor can this exquiſite Henotety (underſtanding it ſelf) ſay or affirm any thing of it ſelf, not ſo much as (i) ἐγὼ εἰμὶ, I am, (for this is compounding) or εἰμὶ τόδε, I am this or that: Nor can it operate upon it ſelf; for being abſolutely one, there is nothing for it to act upon. The Platonic reaſon in its inquiries after the firſt Nature having thus demonſtrated, that Eſſence, Intellect, Mind and Life can be no higher than a ſecond Nature, pitcheth upon an Idea more ſimple than All theſe, and before All, ipſum unum, One it ſelf (the moſt ſimple Idea poſſible, which is not multitude but before it and the beginning of it) and better than All theſe and beyond All, ipſum bonum, Good it ſelf (than which there can be no higher Good, which all things need, and tend to, but it to none, not needing any Good) for the firſt Nature; which Myſtic-Metaphyſical Nature is (k) the Platonic Divinity of Nature. Whence the Unity of the Soul (l) is call'd God by Plotinus, and the Henades are Myſtic-Metaphyſical Divinities of Nature, the rank of Gods, that have no Intellection but what is Super-intellectual.

VI. The Henades may be underſtood from the ſeveral ranks of Beings in the Proclo-Platonic Theology. (m) Above Body or Matter there is the rank of (Plaſtic) Natures, above the rank of Natures there is the rank of Souls, above the rank of Souls there is the rank of Noes, and above the rank of Noes there is the rank of Henades, Unities, or θεοὶ ἑνιαῖοι, Heniadic Gods. Sometimes a rank of Lives is inſerted. (n) Soul is firſt ſeated above Bodies; Intellect is above Soul; Life is before Intellect (for many things partake of Life, that do not partake of Intellect, and therefore Life is more general,) but the firſt Ens is above Life; for many Beings are deſtitute of Life.

In all theſe ſeveral Ranks there is one that is Firſt, Univerſal and Imparticipate (a Monad,) and the Proceſs is by Similitude (like produceth like,) every Monad produceth a number agreeable to it ſelf. (o) The imparticipate Intellect is before all that partake of Intellect, and the imparticipate Life before all that partake of Life, and the imparticipate Ens before thoſe that partake of Ens. So in the rank of Natures there is one imparticipate univerſal Nature (the head of that Rank) before many particular Natures. In the rank of Souls there is one univerſal Soul before many particular Souls. And in the rank of Henades there is a firſt imparticipate Henad (the firſt Hen or T'Agathon) before many Secondary, particular and participate Henades. The firſt Henad or T'Agathon therefore muſt be look'd upon as ſurrounded with Henades (called alſo Agathotetes or Goodneſſes,) ſo that (p) there is one God and many Gods, one Principle and many Principles: But with this difference, the Secondary Henades (or Unities) are particular, the firſt is ſimply Hen and T'Agathon or Oneneſs and Goodneſs: Every one of the reſt is a certain Henad and Agathotety of a certain Propriety of Goodneſs (perfective, contentive, cuſtoditive, or the like) or as Simplicius repreſenteth the difference, (q) The firſt is not this or that Principle, as every one of the reſt is; one the Principle of Pulchritude, another of Truth, another of Symmetry, or of ſomething elſe, but ſimply the Principle, the Principle of Principles. From which conceit and contrivance in the Acroamatical Theology, it appeareth, that the Philoſophic Pagans in their Polytheiſm imitated the popular Pagans (who phanſied ſo many diſtinct inviſible Cauſes, as there are diſtinct viſible Effects, one the Goddeſs of Water, another the God of Wine;) for the great variety of things are thus reduc'd to their proper Principles. All fair things in Bodies and Souls are reduc'd to one Fountain of Pulchritude, (e) En. 5. . 3. c. 12.

(f) En. 3. . 8. c. 8. En. 6. l. 9. . 2. & l. 7. c 39.

(g) En. 5. . 3. c. 10, 13.

(h) En. 5. . 6. c. 5, . En. 6. l. 7. c. 38. En. 3. l. 9. c. 3.

(i) En. 5. 3 c. 10, 3. En. 6. 7. c. 38.

(k) Simpl. in Epict. p. 9. Procl. in Tim p. 110.

(l) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 759.

(m) Inſtit. Theol. c. 21. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 3.

(n) Ψυχὴ μὲν ἐϛι τὸ πρώτως ὑπεριδρυμένον σωμάτων· νοῦς δὲ ἐπέκεινα ψυχῆς· ζωὴ δὲ νοῦ πρεσϐυτέρα τὸ δὲ ὂν ἐφ' ἅπασιν ἵδρυται, τὸ πρώτως ὄν. Idem Th. Plat. l. 3. c. 1.

(o) Πάντων τῶν νοῦ μετεχόντων ἡγεῖται ὁ ἀμέθεκτος νοῦς, καὶ τῶν τῆς ζωῆς ἡ Ζωὴ, καὶ τῶν τοῦ ὄντος τὸ ὄν. Id. Inſt. Theol. c. 101.

(p) Simpl. in Epict. p. 9, 10. vid. Grot. in Epheſ. 3. 15.

(q) Ἐϛὶν ἐκεῖνο οὐ τὶς ἀρχὴ, ὥσπερ ἑκάϛη τῶν ἄλλων, ἡ μὲν καλοῦ, ἡ δὲ ἀληθείας, ἡ δὲ συμμετρίας, ἡ ἄλλου τινὸς, ἀλλ' ἁπλῶς ἀρχὴ, ἀρχὴ ἀρχῶν.

ſo all Symmetral things and things that are true. As theſe ſecondary Henades are particular, ſo they are called Participate (whereas the firſt is ſeparate and exempt, and therefore denominated the Imparticipate,) being not wholly ſeparate from Beings, but participated by thoſe of an inferior Rank, and thoſe that Participate them thereby become Divine and Gods. (r) Every Divine Body is Divine by reaſon of a deify'd Soul, every Divine Soul is ſuch by reaſon of a Divine Intellect or Mind, every Divine Mind or Intellect becometh ſuch by Participation of a Divine Henad. But the Henades themſelves are not Gods by another Nature Participate, they are primarily and of their Nature Gods, (s) and the Divinity is ſaid to ſubſiſt primarily in the Henades, whoſe Myſtic-Metaphyſical Nature (the ſupereſſential Unity and Goodneſs is that which they are) is Divinity of Nature. (t) Every God (Henad) is ſuper-eſſential, ſuper-vital, ſuper-intellectual. Being αὐτοενάδες, αὐτοαγαθότητες, every one of them an Unity it ſelf, a Goodneſs it ſelf, their knowledge is not an intellectual kind of knowledge, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὴν ἰδιότητα τὴν θείαν ὑπὲρ νοῦν ἱδρυμένη, but of Propriety Divine, which is ſuper-intellectual, wherefore an univerſal Providence belongeth to theſe Henades, as the Etymology of the word ſheweth; ἡ δὲ πρόνοια ἐνέργειά ἐστι πρὸ νοῦ, Providence is an operation before Intellect.

In the Writings of Plato there is not any mention of theſe ſecondary ſuper-ſubſtantial Henades and ſuper-eſſential Goodneſſes: But Plotinus ſaith; (u) There are three ranks according to Plato, all about the firſt King. For he ſaith, there are the firſt, (or as Euſebius readeth Plotinus, (w) the firſt about the firſt,) the ſecond about the ſecond, the third about the third. It is probable, that Plotinus ſuppos'd, that there are ſecondary Henades about the firſt; and thus Proclus (x) and many other Platoniſts underſtand the Philoſophy of Plato; that it demonſtrateth three Archical Cauſes or Monads above Body; Soul, Intellect and Unity, every one of which produce their proper number; whence ariſe ſeveral Sets of Gods, οἱ μὲν οὐσιώδεις καὶ ζωτικοί, ſome Eſſential and Vivific, οἱ δὲ νοεροί, ſome Intellectual, οἱ δὲ ἑνιαῖοι, others Heniadical. But whether the later Platoniſts have made a right Judgment of their Maſter's Senſe, or otherwiſe, theſe Henades are an Inſtance of the boundleſs Phantaſtry and Polytheiſm of the Philoſophic Pagans, and of their deifying their own Imaginations; which is not much for their Credit, nor can it reaſonably invite any, to Philoſophic-paganize the great things of the Chriſtian Theology, which hath been the Practice of Chriſtian Divines and learn'd Men from the eldeſt times of Chriſtianity.

VII. As from the firſt Hen multitudes of ſecondary Henades ſo from the firſt Intellect multitudes of ſecondary Noes or θεοὶ νοεροί, intellectual Gods (as they are uſually called) are ſuppos'd to iſſue; which muſt be conſider'd both as exiſtent in the Univerſe and as (in ſome ſort) exiſtent in Man. Theſe (as alſo the firſt Intellect whence they iſſue,) are pure mental Intellects, a rank of Beings that are an higher rank of Intellects than Soul-intellectual Natures (which are called mentes animales, Soul-Minds,) they are abſtract Intellects, ſubſtantial Intellects, eſſential Intelligences. So Ariſtotle ſuppoſeth, that beſides and above Soul there are in the ſeveral Orbs or Spheres certain abſtract Intellects or Separate Intelligences; (y) and the Intellectus agens of that Philoſopher is thought to be an abſtract Intellect. The Platoniſts from their Principles of mundane Phyſiology demonſtrate the Eſſence, Order and Exiſtence of their Noes in this manner. (z) The Eſſence of Soul is above that of Bodies, and the intellectual Nature is above all Souls, and the Unity is above all intellectual Hypoſtaſes. For Body is moveable by another, but not of Nature ſelf-moveable (ἑτεροκίνητον, not αὐτοκίνητον,) therefore Soul which is eſſentially ſelf-moveable, is above Bodies. On the other hand, Soul which is ſelf-mov'd, is of ſecond or inferior rank to that nature which is immote. That which moveth, it ſelf being immote, muſt be before it. Mind or Intellect moveth, it ſelf being immote, and its operation is always the ſame. And as Body by Soul is ſelf-moving: So Soul by Intellect participateth of always underſtanding. Intellect therefore is before Souls. But the Unity is before Intellect, for although Intellect is immoveable, yet it is not very one. For it underſtandeth it ſelf, and operateth about it ſelf. And all things that are in any ſort Beings, participate of one, but all things do not participate of Intellect. Upon theſe grounds the Platoniſts have introduc'd their rank of (abſtract) Intellects, which are below the Unity and a reſemblance thereof; but above intellectual Soul, which is a reſemblance of them. (a) For thoſe things that are congenit to the more excellent Natures but inferiour to them, theſe Philoſophers call their εἴδωλα, Images or Reſemblances: As Intellect congenit to God (the Unity,) the rational Soul to Intellect. Agreeably to which gradual deſcent of Natures (Unity producing Intellect and Intellect producing Soul) Man is conſtituted. For in the Soul of Man there is the Unity, which is the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Divinity of Nature (and when the Soul becometh her own Unity only, ſhe becometh God, (b) according to Plotinus;) there is alſo the Intellect, which is above Soul-Intellect. (c) For as above the lower Soul which is as it were corporeal, there is the Soul it ſelf ſimply and without addition: So above the Soul-intelligence there is the Intellect it ſelf ſimply and without addition. This in-ſouled Intellect is properly no abſtract Intellect, nor intellectual Hypoſtaſis (unleſs there may be two Perſons in one Man:) But the intellectual Nature which the Platoniſts attribute to this in-ſouled Intellect (that is above Soul-intellect) is the ſame with thoſe other Platonick Noes, which are intellectual Hypoſtaſes, and which are ſaid, (d) to differ ſpecifically from intellectual Souls. They repreſent it as much above Soul-intellect as Senſe is below it. (e) Sence is our Meſſenger, Intellect is a King to us.

(r) Πᾶν μὲν σῶμα θεῖον διὰ ψυχῆς ἐστι θεῖον, τῆς ἐκθεουμένης. Πᾶσα δὲ ψυχὴ θεία διὰ τὸν θεῖον νοῦν. Πᾶς δὲ νοῦς κατὰ μέθεξιν τῆς θείας ἑνάδος. Procl. Inſt. Theol. c. 129.

(s) Procl. Inſt. Theol. c. 129. 139. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 27.

(t) Πᾶς θεὸς ὑπερούσιός ἐστι, καὶ ὑπέρζωος, καὶ ὑπέρνους. Procl. Inſt. c. 115, 120, 121, 127, 128, 119.

(u) Τὰ Πλάτωνος τριττά· τὰ πάντα περὶ τὸν βασιλέα. φησὶ γὰρ, πρῶτα, καὶ δεύτερον περὶ τὰ δεύτερα. Καὶ περὶ τὰ τρίτα τρίτον. En. 5. l. 1. c. 8. En. 1. l. 8. c. 2.

(w) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 17.

(x) V. Gale in Jambl. p. 300. Procl. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 3, 4. l. 2. p. 103.

(y) Gaſſend. T. 2. l. 3. c. 1.

(z) Πάντων σωμάτων ἐπέκεινά ἐστιν ἡ ψυχῆς οὐσία, καὶ πασῶν ψυχῶν ἐπέκεινα ἡ νοερὰ φύσις, καὶ πασῶν τῶν νοερῶν ὑποστάσεων ἐπέκεινα τὸ ἕν. Πᾶν γὰρ σῶμα κινητόν ἐστιν ὑφ' ἑτέρου, κινεῖν δὲ ἑαυτὸ οὐ πέφυκεν. Ἐπέκεινα ἄρα σωμάτων ἐστὶν ἡ ψυχὴ ὡς αὐτοκίνητος κατ' οὐσίαν. Πάλιν δὲ ἡ ψυχὴ κινουμένη ἀφ' ἑαυτῆς δευτέραν ἔχει τάξιν τῆς ἀκινήτου φύσεως. Δεῖ πρὸ αὐτῆς εἶναι τὸ ἀκινήτως κινοῦν. Νοῦς δὲ κινεῖ ἀκίνητος ὤν, καὶ ἀεὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ ἐνεργῶν. Καὶ γὰρ ἡ ψυχὴ διὰ νοῦν μετέχει τοῦ ἀεὶ νοεῖν, ὥσπερ σῶμα διὰ ψυχῆς τὸ ἑαυτὸ κινεῖν. Πρὸ τῶν ψυχῶν ἄρα ὁ Νοῦς. Ἀλλὰ μὲν καὶ πρὸ τοῦ νοῦ τὸ ἕν. Νοῦς γὰρ κἂν ἀκίνητος, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἕν. Νοεῖ γὰρ ἑαυτὸν, καὶ ἐνεργεῖ περὶ ἑαυτόν. Καὶ τοῦ μὲν ἑνὸς πάντα μετέχει τὰ ὁπωσοῦν ὄντα· Νοῦ δὲ οὐ πάντα. Procl. Inſt. Theol. c. 20. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 12.

(a) Pſellu in orac. mag. p. 53.

(b) Fici in Plotin. p. 759.

(c) Idem ibid. p. 10 p. 365.

(d) Liv. Galant. Compar. 185, 19

(e) Αἴσθησις δὲ ἡμῖν ἄγγελος, βασιλεὺς δὲ πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἐκεῖνος. Plotin. En. 5. l. 3. c.

This Hypotheſis of a Platonic Intellect in the Soul implieth, that there are ſeveral ſorts of Intellection in a Man. (f) We do not alike underſtand in all reſpects, but agreeably to ſeveral Natures: In Intellect intellectually, in Soul rationally. (g) The Species of things alſo (which are from Intellect impreſs'd upon our Reaſon, or reſult from thence in our Reaſon) are in us two ways: In Intellect they are all together, in Soul as explicate and ſeparate. Becauſe the Species of things are originally in the Platonic Intellect (where they are altogether, yet ſo as to be diſtinct) the true Sciences (h) the Sciences of the Intelligibles are ſaid to come from Intellect into the rational Soul (which is an eaſie way of acquiring them;) and becauſe it affordeth the Principles of all Sciences, and there can be no reaſoning without thoſe Stable Ideas (of Juſt, Good, and ſuch more) which are ſuppos'd to be there, therefore Intellect is thus diſtinguiſhed; (i) there is the reaſoning Intellect, and that which affordeth reaſoning. All reaſoning, rational inquiry, diſcurrency and deduction is Soul-intellection, the rational Power is the moveable Intelligence: But in Intellect (this Platonic Intellect) and the Intellection thereof all is ſtable, ſtanding and quieſcent. (k) The Intellect is more inward, whoſe Being and Converſe is with it ſelf perpetually and which is Act; and which is not intent upon the reaching any thing, as if it had it not, or acquiring or diſcurrent about things that are not at hand, (for theſe are properly Soul-qualities,) but is ſtable in it ſelf, being it ſelf all things together. This account of a Platonic Nous or Intellect in Man repreſenteth it (l) as an Intellect, as an omniform Intelligible alſo, and as an Orb of Intelligence, νοῦν ἐν ἑαυτῷ, καὶ οὐκ ἔξω, Intelligent in it ſelf, not looking out to externals; which is a principal point of difference between Soul-intellection and Intellect-intellection. (m) To intellectual Soul it belongeth, to conſider Externals, and to be a buſied thing: But to Intellect it belongeth, to ſpeculate it ſelf, and what is in it ſelf; for Intellect having the Intelligibles, being the Intelligibles, its Intellection of the Intelligibles is ſelf-Intellection.

As the Platoniſts diſtinguiſh the rational Soul in Man from Intellect; ſo they diſtinguiſh the intellectual Soul of the Univerſe from the Firſt or Univerſal Intellect: which firſt Intellect (the ſecond Nature in Platoniſm) is ſaid to be (n) Underſtanding in perpetual act, that of its own nature and eſſence hath the intellection of the Intelligibles. Such is the common nature of the Platonic Noes; they are actual underſtandings and actual intelligence, and their οὐσία or eſſence is their ἐνέργεια operation of intellection. Their eſſence and operation being one and the ſame, the intelligence which they are, is neceſſarily the immovable intelligence; and the Eſſence being eternal, their Operation muſt be in Eternity, not in Time. Whereas time (paſt and to come) is incident to Soul, nothing is paſt or to come in Intellect, but Is onely is there. Soul underſtandeth ſucceſſively one thing after another, (o) τὰ μὲν παρεὶς, τοῖς δὲ ἐπιβάλλων, diſmiſſing ſome, attent upon others; now ſome one thing, anon ſome other; now Socrates, anon an Horſe. But Πᾶς νοῦς πάντα ἅμα νοεῖ, every Intellect (both the Firſt and the Secondary in ſome ſort) underſtandeth all things together and at once. And as theſe wiſe intelligent Natures (or rather αὐτοσοφίαι, eſſential wiſdoms, as they are called) are beyond Time, Flux and Succeſſion of intellection: ſo they are above motion, action or practice (being no ſelf-moveable Beings, nor of a moveable nature actively or paſſively, but abſolutely immoveable) having their perfection ἐν νοήσεσιν, in notions or intellections; (p) for the intelligence or wiſdom which they are, is purely ſpeculative. So Plotinus ſaith of the Firſt Intellect, (q) It hath no practice, nor any work or eſſence, but to be Intellect onely; οὐ γὰρ δὴ πρακτικὸς ἐςι, for it is not practick, nor is there in pure Intellect any deſire of any thing abſent; wherefore it looketh not to externals but is ſelf-reflexive, and turneth its aſpect upon it ſelf, ἐν τῷ θεωρεῖν τὸ ζῆν ἔχων, having its life and beatitude in contemplation. (r) Becauſe it is Intellect actually intelligent, and underſtandeth of it ſelf the things which it underſtandeth, αὐτός ἐςιν ἃ νοεῖ, νοεῖ οὐ ζητῶν, ἀλλ' ἔχων, It is the things which it underſtandeth, it underſtandeth, not inquiring, but poſſeſſing. The Intelligibles are its Eſſence, (s) they are not things without, (for ſuch kind of Intellection is indigent, fallacious and fortuitous, and would infer, that νοῦς or intelligent Intellect may be ἀνόητος, unintelligent:) Nor doth it underſtand by Impreſſes and Images from Objects, which would ſpoil the certainty of Intellection. (t) For ſo we ſee touching matters of Senſe (ſenſible Qualities) which ſeem to be matters of greateſt aſſurance. It is doubted, whether they have their ſeeming Subſiſtence in their Subjects, or in our Paſſions. (u) The Intellect and Intelligible muſt be the ſame, or Truth will not be there: For if it contemplates the true things, not having them, but only certain Images of them, the Truth is not there. (w) And ſeeing Intellect muſt be the Maker of the World, its Intelligibles muſt be before the World; not any Figures or Impreſſes from others, but Archetypal and Firſt, and the Eſſence of Intellect, ὁ νοῦς ἄρα τὰ ὄντα ὄντως, therefore Intellect is the things that truly are. The ſeveral intelligible Species which are in Intellect (unchangeable and unperiſhing, which are the true things) are there, not only as Intelligibles, but as live-intelligent Intelligibles; each of them is that vital intellectual Act, the Intellection of that Intelligible, (this live-Act or intellectual Operation is τοῦ ὄντος ἐνέργεια, the Act of the Intelligible) which Act of Intellection is the Eſſence of Intellect actually intelligent. ἓν ἄρα πάντα ἔςαι νοῦς, νόησις, τὸ ὄν, καὶ τὸ νοητὸν, wherefore all theſe are one, (though in ſome ſort diſtinct; for Identity and Alterity is in all Intellection) Intellect, Intellection, Intelligible Species, and Ens or Eſſence: Such an Intellect being the Seat of the Intelligibles, and the Intellection of thoſe Intelligibles, is truly knowing, always knowing, without Obliviouſneſs or Inquiſitiveneſs, having and beholding all things in it ſelf. The Ideas of it are commonly call'd θεοὶ νοητοὶ, the Intelligible Gods.

VIII. This

(f) Οὐχ ὁμοίως μὲν νοοῦμεν ἐν πᾶσιν, ἀλλ' οἰκείως τῇ ἑκάςου οὐσίᾳ· ἐν νῷ μὲν νοερῶς· ἐν ψυχῇ δὲ λογικῶς. Porphyr. ſent. p. 221.

(g) Ἔχομεν καὶ τὰ εἴδη διχῶς· ἐν μὲν ψυχῇ οἷον ἀνειλιγμένα καὶ οἷον κεχωρισμένα· ἐν δὲ νῷ ὁμοῦ τὰ πάντα. Plotin. En. 1. l. 1. c. 8. Ficin. in En. 5. l. 3. c. 6.

(h) Plotin. En. 5. l. 9. c. 7. Ficin. Com. p. 19.

(i) Νοῦς δὲ ὁ μὲν λογιζόμενος, ὁ δὲ λογίζεσθαι παρέχων. Plotin. En. 5. l. 1. c. 10, 3, 4. & l. 9. c. 7.

(k) Ὁ νοῦς ἔνδον συνὼν αὑτῷ ἀεὶ καὶ ἐνέργεια ὑπάρχων, καὶ οὐκ ἐπιβάλλων ὡς οὐκ ἔχων, ἢ ἐπικτώμενος, ἢ διεξοδεύων οὐ προκεχειρισμένα (ψυχῆς γὰρ ταῦτα πάθη) ἀλλ' ἕςηκεν ἐν αὑτῷ ὁμοῦ πάντα ὤν. Plotin. ſupr.

(l) Idem En. 6. l. 2. c. 8. En. 1. l. 8. c. 2.

(m) Ibid. En. 5. l. 3. c. 3.

(n) Ἐνεργείᾳ καὶ ἀεὶ νοῦς, ὃς κατ' οὐσίαν ἔχει τὸ νοεῖν. Idem En. 5. l. 9. c. 5. Procl. Theol. Plat. p. 35.

(o) Procl. Inſtit. Th. c. 170. Plotin. En. 5. l. 1. c. 4. Porphyr. Sent. p. 228, 229, 280.

(p) Procl. ſupr. c. 134.

(q) En. 5. l. 3. c. 6. En. 6. l. 7. c. 15.

(r) En. 5. l. 9. c. 5. & l. 1. c. 4.

(s) En. 5. l. 3. c. 13.

(t) Ἐπεὶ καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς αἰσθήσεως, ἃ δὴ δοκεῖ πίςιν ἔχειν ἐναργεςάτην, ἀπιςεῖται μήποτε οὐκ ἐν τοῖς ὑποκειμένοις, ἀλλ' ἐν τοῖς πάθεσιν ἔχῃ τὴν δοκοῦσαν ὑπόςασιν. En. 5. l. 5. c. 1, 2.

(u) Δεῖ τὸν νοῦν ταὐτὸν τῷ νοητῷ· καὶ γὰρ εἰ μὴ ταὐτὸν, οὐκ ἀλήθεια ἔςαι. En. 5. l. 3. c. 5. & l. 5. c. 1.

(w) En. 5. l. 9. c. 5. 8. & l. 6. c. 2. Ficin. com. p. 601, 602, 561, 342.

VIII. This Deſcription of the firſt Platonic Intellect (touching the Secondary Noes we ſhall not concern our ſelves) plainly ſheweth, that its Eternal Ideas or Intelligible Species are not meer νοήματα, Conceptions or Notionalities; but as the Stoicks thought Virtues and Vices Animals, ſo thoſe Ideal Natures or Species that are in the firſt Intellect, were thought by the Platoniſts not meer Notionalities, but Realities and Subſtantialities; the Realities and Subſtantialities, (x) not exiſting apart by themſelves out of any Mind (as Ariſtotle miſrepreſenteth the Doctrine of Plato) but exiſting in Intellect as the Eſſence thereof. For in this Philoſophy, not the Singulars and Senſibles, but the Species and Ideal Natures of things are look'd upon as τὰ ὄντα ὄντως, the true Eſſences, of which Singulars and Senſibles are but the Imitamens and Images, according to that known Platonic Maxim, τὰ αἰσθητὰ τῶν νοητῶν μιμήματα, Senſibles are but the Ectypal reſemblances of the Intelligibles. The firſt Intellect is the Seat of Entia or Eſſences, and the Archetypal World; which is not a World of Notions only, but of the great and only Realities. (y) The World of that which is Truth, of which this beautiful World is the Shadow and Image; for the intelligible World is οὐσία, Eſſence (as we have ſeen before from Plato) contradiſtinct to γένεσις, Generation. (z) Plato (ſaith Tertullian) ſuppoſeth certain inviſible Subſtances, Incorporeal, Supermundial, Divine and Eternal, which he calleth Ideas, that is, the exemplar Forms and Cauſes of things ſenſible; and that thoſe are that which is Truth, theſe the Images of them. Philo ſaith; (a) The Creator firſt made in the intelligible World an Incorporeal Heaven and an Inviſible Earth, and the Idea of Air and Vacuum: Next, he made the Incorporeal Eſſence of Water and of Spirit (the Spirit of God;) and laſtly, of Light in like manner incorporeal, the intelligible Exemplar of the Sun and of all the Stars, the Fountain of the ſenſible Stars, whence the Sun and Moon, and the other Planets and fix'd Stars draw ſuch Light or Splendor, as is fit for them to have.—— The Incorporeal World being perfected, ſeated in the Divine Logos, the Senſible was fram'd according to this Exemplar. The Platonic Hypotheſis touching an Intelligible Archetypal World, (b) Philo, Juſt. M. Clemens, Euſebius, look upon as true and genuine Theology, and pretend to find it, where it never was, in the firſt Chapter of Geneſis. The Hebrew Cabaliſts alſo (a ſort of Platoniſts) have entertain'd the Hypotheſis of an Intelligible Archetypal World, which they do not ſuppoſe a World of meer Notionalities, (c) but of the Firſt, Primitive and Archetypal Beings, agreeably to this Maxim of theirs; That every thing below hath ſome root above; and this remarkable Saying of one of their Doctors. That which is ſealed and receiveth the Sigillation here below, is like to the ſhape and form of thoſe things above, which did ſeal and ſtamp the Signature. Conformably hereunto the Intelligible World (or the Divine Logos) is call'd by Philo (d) ἀρχέτυπος σφραγὶς, the Archetypal Seal; and the ſeveral Ideal or Archetypal Natures are call'd τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀποτελεσμάτων σφραγῖδες, the Seals of ſenſible Effects, Forms and Species being their Expreſs and Image, as that upon the Wax is the Seals. By their Energy what is without order becometh ordinate, what is without figure Figurate, and undetermin'd determinate; what hath no quality becometh qualify'd, and form accrueth to the informous, whence they are rightly call'd Ideas. As the Forms that are in Matter are ſuppos'd to be deriv'd (not immediately, but by the Intervention of the Mundane Soul) from the Forms of the Univerſal Intellect, which is ἡ τῶν ὅλων σφραγὶς, the Seal of the Univerſality of things: So the Forms of Arts and Virtues that are in Man, (e) are ſuppos'd to be certain impreſſes from the general Nature or Archetypal Idea, ἀφ' οὗ τὰ πολλὰ ἀμύθητα ἐκεῖνα διεπλάσθη, whereby thoſe many Muſicals, Grammaticals, Temperates or Juſts were form'd. This Author (Philo) uſually ſtileth them Powers, Incorporeal Powers, τὰς δορυφορούσας δυνάμεις, the Powers that are as a Guard unto God, and αἱ ποιοῦσαι δυνάμεις, the Powers or Virtues that form and figurate things. So Plotinus (f) calleth them Powers, and the known Maxim of the Pythagoreans ſpeaketh them ſuch, That Numbers (that is, (g) the Ideas) are the cauſes of the Eſſence of other things. Their Names and Operations import, that they are real Eſſences, the real Eſſences of things as well as the Notionalities of the firſt Intellect (not only the Notionalities of all things are in the Archetypal World, but the true Realities and Subſtantialities) as the Platoniſts generally define them. (h) An Idea in reſpect of God is his Intellection or Conception; in reſpect of us the firſt Intelligible; in reſpect of Matter the Meaſure; in reſpect of the ſenſible World, the Exemplar; in its own nature Eſſence or Subſtance. The Ideas in this Deſcription are ſaid to be our Intelligibles, becauſe being ſtable, Univerſal and Eternal, they are the Objects of Knowledge (as Knowledge differeth from Opinion) of them there is Science and Definition. They are ſaid to be the Meaſure in reſpect of Matter, becauſe material things have their juſt Meaſure and Circumſcription from them; for the Opificer is ſaid, (i) ταῖς ἰδέαις οἰακίζων, to govern the Matter and keep it in conſiſtence by the Idea's. And every material thing is ſaid, to be to its Idea, (k) as the Image and Picture to the live-Subſiſtence. Atticus and Didymus in Euſebius define an Idea; (l) an Eternal Eſſence, the Cauſe and Origin, that every thing is ſuch, as it ſelf is. So Timæus Locrus calleth an Idea (which he ſaith, is ingenit, immote, permanent, and the intelligible Paradigm of things generated, which are in change and viciſſitude) * τὰν νοητὰν οὐσίαν, the intelligible Eſſence. Agreeably whereunto Plotinus ſaith; The firſt Intellect is (m) Ens or Eſſence, that is, the comprehenſion of all Entia or Eſſences; Animal it ſelf, the univerſal abſolute Animal, comprehending in it ſelf all Animals; not as one Intellect, but the comprehenſion of all Intellects: Whatever you pitch upon of the things that are there, is Eſſence, live-Eſſence and Intellectual. The abſtract Forms or Species that are there, (n) are compar'd to a Sphere of live-Faces or Countenances; for each of them is a certain Eſſence, Life, Intellect; and every Idea of thoſe things that are here without Life, is a certain Life and Intelligence. (o) For it is Intellect that underſtandeth an Horſe, the Intellection of it is Intellect, that Intelligible is this Intellect and Intellection; therefore it is ſuch an Intellect, ſuch a Life, and cannot be devoid of Intellect and Life. (All things live here.) Hence the Platonic Ideas are call'd by Euſtratius, (x) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. diſſ. 3. Plutarch. de placit. Phil. l. 1. c. 10. J. Mart. Paræn. p. 8.

---

(y) Κοσμὸς ἀληθινὸς, οὗ καὶ ὁ καλὸς οὗτος κόσμος σκιὰ καὶ εἰκών. Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 2. En. 3. l. 2. c. 1. & l. 9. c. 10.

(z) Tertul. de Anim. c. 8.

(a) De Mund. opific. p. 3, 4. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(b) J. Mart. Paræn. p. 28, 29. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 24, 25. & l. 13. p. 671.

(c) Dr. Cudworth. Union of Chriſt and the Church. p. 3, 4, 6.

(d) Petav. T. 1. l. 4. c. 9. S. 5, 12. vid. Gale in Jambl. p. 299.

(e) Philo opuſc. p. 42, 45. v. p. 24, 25, 37, 114.

(f) En. 5. l. 9. c. 6. En. 6. l. 2. c. 21.

(g) Procl. Plat. Th. l. 4. c. 29.

(h) Ἔστι δὲ ἡ ἰδέα, ὡς μὲν πρὸς θεὸν νόησις αὐτοῦ· ὡς δὲ πρὸς ἡμᾶς νοητὸν πρῶτον· ὡς δὲ πρὸς τὴν ὕλην, μέτρον· ὡς δὲ πρὸς τὸν αἰσθητὸν κόσμον παράδειγμα· ὡς δὲ πρὸς αὐτὴν ἐξεταζομένη, οὐσία. Alcin. de Doctr. Plat. c. 9. vid. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. l. 1. c. 15.

(i) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 18.

(k) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 564.

(l) Ἀΐδιον οὐσίαν, αἰτίαν καὶ ἀρχὴν τοῦ ἕκαστον εἶναι τοιοῦτον, οἷα ἐστὶν αὐτή. Pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 23.

* De An. Mund. p. 2, 4.

(m) Τὸ ξύμπαν ὄν, αὐτοζῶον, τὸ παντελὲς ζῶον ἐν αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα ζῶα περιέχον· οὐχ ὡς νοῦς εἷς, ἀλλὰ πᾶς ἐκεῖ μὲν ὢν ὁμοῦ πάντων ὄντων, ὅτι ἂν λάβῃς αὐτῶν, οὐσία καὶ νοερὰ, καὶ ζωῆς ἕκαστον μετέχον. En. 6. l. 6. c. 15. & c. 7. & l. 7. c. 8. En. 5. l. 9. c. 10.

(n) En. 6. l. 7. c. 9, 15.

(o) Ibid. c. 9, & 13.

Euſtratius, (p) ſuch things as properly are and ſubſiſt, that are actuous and intelligent, as well as intelligible. Becauſe the firſt Intellect (q) containeth all things in the way of its own Nature, which is Eſſence live and intellectual; therefore the Intelligibles of this Orb of Intelligence are not Figments (Images of things) but real Exiſtents, living and intellectual. So the Chalday Oracles repreſent them.

Νοούμεναι Ἴυγγες πατρόθεν νοέουσι καὶ αὐταί.

The Oracle (ſaith Pletho) calleth the intelligible Species Iynges, which being conceiv'd from the Father, themſelves alſo conceive or underſtand. (r) Every one of them is an Intellect and an Ens or Eſſence, and the whole is every Intellect and every Ens, the Aggregate of Eſſences, Animals, Intellects.

The Platonic Family (s) Plato, Plotinus, Syrianus (and the reſt) are ſo far from ſuppoſing their Archetypal Ideas meer νοήματα, Notionalities, that they expreſly deny it, and diſpute againſt it. In the beginning of the Parmenides, Plato (diſcourſing of certain Species or Ideas, Similitude, Magnitude, Pulchritude, Juſtice, by participation whereof things become Like, Great, Fair, Juſt) introduceth Socrates philoſophizing very ſoberly touching theſe Ideas. Perhaps (ſaith he) every one of theſe Species is but a νόημα, Notion of the Mind, which hath no exiſtence ſave only in the Soul. But Parmenides rejecteth, and thus refuteth Socrates's Suppoſal; ſuch a Notion of the Soul cannot be the Notion of nothing, but of ſomething exiſtent. Thus all Mankind (becauſe whatever we conceive of, we conceive of it as exiſtent) are prone to think their own Phantaſms, or the Ideas of their Minds, Realities in Nature (Objective Realities) as is plain from the Phænomenon of ſenſible Qualities. And ſo it fareth with thoſe, whom Plato (at the end of his fifth de Rep.) calleth φιλοσόφους, the Men of Philoſophic Knowledge or Science, that love and admire the Matters thereof, which he oppoſeth to the Men of (popular) Opinion (whom he calleth φιλοδόξους) that love and admire the Matters thereof, which are πολλὰ καλὰ, the many Fairs, that are partly fair and partly foul; πολλὰ δίκαια, the many Juſts, that are in part juſt and in part unjuſt, as alſo the many Greats and Littles, Lights and Heavies, are partly ſuch and partly the contrary. Theſe are properly the Matters of that dubious ſort of Knowledge and Power (below Intellect) which the old Philoſophers call Opinion, and theſe the Men of (popular) Opinion admire, not acknowledging (t) Fair it ſelf, and a certain Idea of Pulchritude always the ſame, nor any ſuch abſtract Forms, which the Philoſophic ſort love and admire, and which are properly the Objects of Knowledge or Science, becauſe they are τὸ ὄν, That which is indeed, and οὐσία, Eſſence. (u) That the knowledge of the firſt Intellect may be true Knowledge or Science, it muſt have οὐκ εἰκόνα τοῦ πράγματος, ἀλλὰ τὸ πρᾶγμα, not the Image or Notion of the thing, but the thing it ſelf; being χώρα ἰδεῶν, the Region of Ideas, it muſt be τοῦ ὄντος χώρα, the Region of that which truly is. (w) In the firſt place touching the Species we ought not to think, as if an intelligent Mind had underſtood them, and that by this Intellection they had their Subſiſtence; for Juſtice did not therefore exiſt, becauſe he underſtood what Juſtice is; nor had motion its ſubſiſtence, becauſe he underſtood what Motion is; for Intellect is in order poſteriour to Ens or Eſſence; therefore Intellect operating and underſtanding doth not generate Entia or Eſſences. (x) It is not rightly ſaid, that νοήσεις τὰ εἴδη, the intelligible Species are Intellections, if the meaning be, that Intellect became ſuch or ſuch an Intelligible after the underſtanding it; for the Intelligible muſt be before this Intellection, ſeated in Intellect.

If you ſay, that this Intellection is the ſame with the Intelligible, ſuch an Aſſertion may ſeem to be countenanc'd by this Platonic Maxim; (y) In things which exiſt independently upon Matter, the thing and the Science of it are the ſame. But againſt this Plotinus maketh theſe following Objections. (z) Firſt, it is abſurd, to make Juſtice nothing but a Definition of it. In the next place, (a) It is impoſſible, to take the definition of a thing not ſubſiſtent. As for that Platonic Maxim, the meaning is not, that the Science is the thing; but on the contrary, that the thing it ſelf exiſting without Matter is both the Intelligible and the Intellection: Whence it is manifeſt, that the Platoniſts Eternal Ideas are real Ideal and Archetypal Natures, not Ideal and Archetypal Notions only (ſo the Ideal Juſtice is οἷον ἄγαλμα νοερόν, as an intellectual Statue, ſaith Plotinus;) and that their firſt Intellect muſt neceſſarily be an heap of Entia or Eſſences, Animals, Intellects and Gods. Thoſe Egyptians undoubtedly that were Worſhippers of the Divine Ideas directed their worſhip, not to meer Notionalities, but to Subſtances, Animals and Gods. So the Platoniſts ſtile them, (b) All the pulchritude of the Ideas, all the intelligible Gods. Becauſe the Ideas are Gods, hence they infer, (c) that there is no Idea of Evil; for if there was, it would be a God. Æſculapius is one of theſe intelligible Gods, who coming out of Heaven upon Earth, appear'd in Humane Shape about Epidaurus, according (d) to Julian's Notion of him (he ſuppoſeth him the Eternal Idea of the Art of Medicine generated in the Intelligible World) who alſo ſtileth the Sun, Moon and Stars the viſible Gods, Images of the Inviſible. The Exoterical Theology deifieth the ſenſible World, making it a God, a Comprehenſion of Gods; and the Acroamatical Theology (with great Congruity) deifieth an Intelligible Archetypal World, making it a God, a Comprehenſion of Gods, a Pantheon.

IX. It is not without cauſe, that we have made a large Deſcription of the Platoniſts firſt Intellect, and a ſomewhat large Deſcription of their Hen or T'Agathon (yet with deſign to make a larger Deſcription of it hereafter;) for theſe Archical Hypoſtaſes, in the Chriſtian Church, in the elder times of Chriſtianity and in ſucceſſive Ages have been thought very venerable Myſteries; and the Platoniſts Triad (of Henotety, Intellect and Soul) hath been, and is at this Day, accounted a Divine Cabala and a Traduction from the Hebrews. Whereas from its Deſcription it appeareth, to be nothing better than a gradual Subordination of Natures in their Phyſiology of the Mundane Syſtem, altogether alien from the knowledge of God and true Religion, in the main of it and the eſſential Branches of it conſiſting of ſuch Abſurdities (mix'd with ſome good Notices) as its Deſcription repreſenteth. And as their Triad hath been

(p) Τὰ κυρίως ὄντα, καὶ ὑφεστηκότα, δραστικά τε καὶ νοερά. Petav. ſupr.

(q) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 612.

(r) Ἕκαστον δὲ νοῦς καὶ ὂν ἐστι, καὶ τὸ σύμπαν πᾶς νοῦς καὶ πᾶν ὄν. Plotin. En. 5. l. 1. c. 4. En. 6. l. 7. c. 9, 17. En. 5. l. 9. c. 8.

(s) Gaſſend. T. 2. p. 459.

(t) Τὸ αὐτοκαλὸν, καὶ ἰδέαν τινὰ τοῦ κάλλους ἀεὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ ὡσαύτως ἔχουσαν.

(u) Plotin. En. 6. l. 6. c. 6.

(w) Ibid.

(x) En. 5. l. 9. c. 7, 8. En. 6. l. 6. c. 6.

(y) Ὡς ἐπὶ τῶν ἄνευ ὕλης, τὸ αὐτόν ἐστιν ἡ ἐπιστήμη τῷ πράγματι.

(z) Πρῶτον μὲν ἄτοπον, μηδὲν εἶναι δικαιοσύνην ἢ τὸν οἷον ὁρισμὸν αὐτῆς.

(a) Μὴ ὑφεστῶτος πράγματος λόγον λαβεῖν ἀδύνατον.

(b) Πᾶν μὲν τὸ τῶν ἰδεῶν κάλλος, πάντας δὲ θεοὺς νοητούς. Plotin. En. 5. l. 1 c. 7.

(c) Procl. in Polit. p. 357.

(d) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. p. 200. & l. 2. p. 65.

thought a Divine Cabala, ſo it hath been introduc'd into our Theology as the ſame with the Chriſtian Trinity, the ſecond Archical Hypoſtaſis of it (the firſt Intellect) being the ſame with the Logos of Philo and the Platoniſts, hath been, and is ſuppos'd, to be the ſame with the Chriſtian Logos, and S. John in the Proem of his Goſpel is interpreted to mean this Logos of Philo and the Platoniſts, which is their firſt Intellect.

They that make theſe Pretenſions, make them with ſome abatement; for they ſay, that the genuine Cabala of the Trinity is in ſeveral reſpects deprav'd and adulterated by the Platoniſts (where then ſhall we find this genuine Cabala?) and as if they deſign'd, to requite the Platoniſts, and to pay them in their own Coin, they quite deprave and adulterate the Platoniſts Trinity, alter it in the main Branches of it, and ſpoil the Eſſential Conſtitution of it. For they will have the third Hypoſtaſis of the Platoniſts (e) not to be the Mundane Soul, but ſuch a Supra-mundane Soul, as Platoniſm hath no acquaintance with. (f) They diſallow the Platoniſts Notion of their firſt Hypoſtaſis, which they will have to be Intellect and Wiſdom; and if ſo, there can be no ſuch thing as the Platoniſts firſt Hypoſtaſis; for if it is Intellect and Wiſdom, it is not τὸ ἓν, τὸ μόνως ἓν, μὴ πλέον ἑνός, one ſo as to be nothing more than one; it is Duplicity, Diverſity, Multitude, Compoſition, Ens, Eſſence, Life, Animal, and therefore is not the firſt, but the ſecond Hypoſtaſis in Platoniſm; of which ſecond Hypoſtaſis they ſay, (g) that the Platoniſts (as if they knew not their own Minds, or did ſay one thing and mean another) very well underſtood, that all their Ideas were really nothing elſe but Noemata or Conceptions of that one perfect Intellect their ſecond Hypoſtaſis. For the proof whereof Amelius the Ita-Pniſt is very unhappily alledg'd, thus gloſſing upon the Evangeliſt's Text, Joh. 1. 3, 4. ἐν ᾧ τὸ γενόμενον ζῶν καὶ ζωὴν εἶ, καὶ ὂν πεφυκέναι, in whom whatſoever was made, was Living, and Life, and true Being, that is, Reality and Subſtantiality.

Some Chriſtian Platoniſts diſcard the Secondary Henades in Platoniſm, but pretend not to diſcard the Firſt Henad (Hen or T'Agathon;) which is an incongruous Partiality; for it is one and the ſame Myſtic-Metaphyſical Divinity of Nature, that conſtituteth the Firſt Henad and the Secondary Henades; and ſeeing the firſt Henad is no Ens or Eſſence, it can have no exiſtence, no more than the Secondary Henades. The ſame Chriſtian Platoniſts diſcard the Secondary Noes as Platonic Figments and Chimæra's, yet retain the Firſt or Univerſal Intellect; whereas they ought to make the ſame Judgment touching the whole Rank of Platonic Noes. For the firſt Intellect is of as bad a Character as the Secondary Noes, and of no better a Character than the Platonic Ideas, becauſe it is nothing elſe but (h) ἰδέα τῶν ἰδεῶν, the Idea of the Ideas, or the World of abſtract Ideas. They are It, and It is they. And becauſe the Platoniſts αὐτοὸν, (Ens or Eſſence it ſelf) is no ſingular individual Eſſence, nor the Comprehenſion of ſingular individual Eſſences; their αὐτοζῶον (Animal it ſelf) is no ſingular individual Animal, nor the comprehenſion of ſingular individual Animals; their αὐτονοῦς (Intellect it ſelf) is no ſingular individual Intellect, nor the comprehenſion of ſingular individual intellectual Eſſences; it is certain, that this Intellect or Logos of theirs (which is made uſe of, to expound our Evangeliſt) can have no exiſtence. Nor can a meer abſtract Nous or Intellect be a legitimate intellectual Hypoſtaſis, as being without Imagination, Reaſon, Will and Affection, without true Vitality, and all liberty of Agency; and therefore the firſt Intellect and the reſt of the Platonic Noes are incapable of any thing moral or morally Divine. As wiſe as theſe Noes are ſaid to be (they are ſaid to be eſſentially and perfectly wiſe) they effect nothing like wiſe and intelligent Agents, but fatally and naturally; for every Platonic Nous (i) effecteth whatever is effected by it, by this agency, its Intelligence, which is the ſame with its Eſſence. The firſt Intellect created, (or rather form'd) the viſible World, as Plaſtic Principles, or Seminal Forms operate: (k) For as if there be the ſeminal form of any Animal, and Matter prepar'd to receive it, the Animal muſt neceſſarily be generated; in like manner, intellectual and all-powerful Nature exiſting, and nothing hindring, nothing interpoſing between it and the recipient, the one neceſſarily formeth, the other is neceſſarily formed. The various Ideas are in Intellect, as the various ſeminal Powers are in Soul.

X. The Platoniſts Henades and Noes are of the number of their Super-mundane Deities, which yet are not ſo Super-mundane, but that (according to our Diſtribution of Pagan Deities) they may be look'd upon as Inhabitants of the Mundane City either real or fictitious. And that they are fictitious Phantomes, the Humour of the Platoniſts is a great Indication; for their way is, to deifie the abſtract Notions of their own Minds, to make them Powers, Animals, Intelligences and Gods. This Humour of theirs will appear in a Set of Deities (Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures) which we muſt now enumerate, but which are ſo extreamly abſurd and extravagant, that I would gladly paſs them by in ſilence, if I was not oblig'd to take notice of them, for the aſſiſtance of ſuch Students as have a mind to converſe with the old Philoſophers, and to travel through all the Obſcurities of the Platonic Theology, and becauſe our Account of the Pagan Deities (of the Acroamatical Theology) will not be tolerably perfect without them. This Set of Deities muſt be denominated Proclo-Platonic, as being introduc'd by Proclus into the Platonic Theology, with deſign to model it into ſuch a Conformity with the Chaldaic, as Plato never deſign'd. (l) The Chaldeans (ſaith Pſellus) ſuppoſe, that there is one Principle of all things, which they declare to be one and good. (m) Next they worſhip a certain paternal Bythus or Profundity, compos'd of three Triads, each Triad having Father, Power and Mind. Agreeably hereunto in the Proclo-Platonic Theology (n) there are three Triads next after the firſt Hen or T'Agathon; every Triad having τὸ πέρας Finity (the Father) τὸ ἄπειρον, Infinity (the Power) τὸν νοῦν, the Mind, or τὸ μικτὸν, that which is mixed of Finity and Infinity (for this Theology ſuppoſeth, that thoſe Henades Finity and Infinity proceed from T'Agathon, and that all Beings are a mixture of Finity and Infinity, as Plato ſaith in his Philebus.) Theſe Triads are conſtituted of theſe ſubordinate Ranks: The firſt Ens or Eſſence, the firſt Life and the firſt Intellect. For in the firſt Triad τὸ μικτὸν, that which is mixed of Finity and Infinity is αὐτὸ ὂν or αὐτουσία, Ens or Eſſence it ſelf. In the ſecond Triad τὸ μικτὸν, that which is mix'd of Finity and Infinity is ἡ νοητὴ ζωὴ, the intelligible Life, the firſt Life, or ὁ αἰὼν, ipſum Ævum, Eternity it ſelf. In the third Triad τὸ μικτὸν, that which is mix'd of Finity and Infinity is ὁ νοητὸς νοῦς, the intelligible Intellect, the firſt Intellect (the Name of Intellect is appropriate to it, although the other are in ſome ſort νόες Minds or Intellects) which is alſo Plato's αὐτοζῶον, Animal it ſelf, as Proclus will have it; (o) who alſo ſuppoſeth theſe ſupernal Gods, to be the paramount Ideas, and as it were the Univerſals of all things. This διάκοσμος, or order of Gods is denominated by Proclus θεοὶ νοητοὶ, the intelligible Gods. The next order of Gods (which are the proceſs of theſe) the Proclo-Platonic Theology calleth θεοὺς νοητοὺς ϗ νοερούς, the intelligible and intellectual Gods, as underſtanding the Gods that are before them, being underſtood by thoſe that are after them. This order of Gods is alſo the Comprehenſion of three Triads, every Triad conſiſting of thoſe three μονάδες ὑπερούσιοι, Superessential Unities, Eſſence, Life, Intellect (but with ſome difference not worth the inſiſting on) which in this order are a Triplication of thoſe in the former. Theſe imaginary Triads are of various Faculties and Operations, as their Names ſignifie; (p) Three collective Unites, three contentive (one of theſe is ſaid to contain one World, another the infinity of the Matter, and therefore they are called συνοχεῖς, the Conteiners in the Chaldaic Theology) Three Teleſiurgic. But that which chiefly ennobleth them, is their great concern in the Theurgical Reduction of the Soul.

(e) Intell. Syſt. p. 562.

(f) Ibid. p. 586.

(g) Ibid. p. 563.

(h) Eugubin. de Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 12.

(i) Ποιεῖ δὲ ποιεῖ τῷ εἶναι, καὶ τῷ νοεῖν· τὸ γὰρ εἶναι, καὶ τὸ νοεῖν, ἓν ἄμφω. Procl. Inſt. Theol. c. 173.

(k) Ὡς γὰρ ὄντος λόγου ζώου τινὸς, οὔσης δὲ καὶ ὕλης τὸν τοῦ λόγου τὸν σπερματικὸν δεξαμένης, ἀνάγκη ζῶον γενέσθαι· τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ φύσεως νοερᾶς καὶ παντελοῦς δυνάμεως οὔσης, καὶ οὐδενὸς διείργοντος, μηδενὸς ὄντος μεταξὺ τούτου καὶ τοῦ δέξασθαι δυναμένου, ἀνάγκη τὸ μὲν κοσμηθῆναι, τὸ δὲ κοσμῆσαι. Plotin. En. 5. l. 9. c. 9, 6. En. 3. l. 2. c. 1, 2, 3. Ficin. Com. p. 559.

(l) Orac. Mag. p. 113.

(m) Εἶτα πατρικόν τινα βυθὸν σέβονται, ἐκ τριῶν τριάδων συγκείμενον. ἑκάστη δὲ τριὰς ἔχει πατέρα, δύναμιν καὶ νοῦν.

(n) Plat. Theol. l. 3. 4, 5.

(o) Creditque Deos hos ſupernos eſſe Ideas illas ſummas, & quaſi univerſalia rerum cunctarum. Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 11.

(p) Τρεῖς μὲν αἱ συναγωγοὶ μονάδες, τρεῖς δὲ αἱ συνεκτικαί, τρεῖς δὲ αἱ τελεσιουργοί.

To theſe Orders of Deities which are plainly Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures (and wherein there are ſeveral Ideal Natures, ſuch as the firſt Number, Identity and Diverſity it ſelf) we muſt annex a third Order of Deities in the Proclo-Platonic diſtribution of Gods, which proceed from the former Orders, and are intituled θεοὶ νοεροὶ, the intellectual Gods; but without determining (becauſe it is a diſputable Point not worth the diſputing) whether they be Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures or of the Genial ſort of Deities. Theſe Gods that are νοεροὶ μόνον, intellectual only, are an intellectual Hebdomad, and there is in this Order a Triad call'd οἱ τρεῖς νοεροὶ πατέρες, the three intellectual Fathers (whereof one is a Mother) the great Saturn, Queen Rhea (call'd alſo Ceres) and the great Jupiter, who is ſaid to partake of Mind from his Father and of Soul from Queen Rhea, and is (according to Proclus) the ſame with Plato's Demiurgus or Opificer of all things. To this Triad of Intellectual Fathers this Theology (which transformeth the Popular-Pagan into Philoſophic-Pagan Deities, and accommodateth to them the matters of the fabulous Theology) adjoyneth another Triad, the Trinity of Curetes, which are alſo call'd οἱ ἄχραντοι or ἀμείλικτοι θεοὶ (the Deities impollute or not to be ſweetned) and a Diacritic or diſcretive Monad. In this Order of Gods the intellectual Fathers are the ſame with the πηγαῖοι πατέρες, Fontal Fathers or κοσμαγωγοί, Leaders of the World in the Chaldaic Theology, which the Oracle calleth νοεροὺς ἀνοχῆας, intellectual Suſtainers.

Jambl. de Myſt. p. 71.

Πᾶς ἔχει κόσμος νοεροὺς ἀνοχῆας ἀκαμπεῖς.

Theſe intellectual Suſtainers (which Eugubinus (q) fondly miſtaketh for Angelical Powers) are ſo intituled, becauſe they ſuſtain the whole World. They are ſtiled inflexible, to denote their firmitude; and they have the Name of Leaders of the World, becauſe they are Powers, that actuate and guide the World by their providential Motions. (r) Hecate is the midſt or center of theſe three Powers, having on the right-ſide the Font of Souls, and on the left-ſide the Font of Virtues. So the Proclo-Platonic Rhea is remarkable for two of her Secondary Powers or Monads; the one is Plato's Crater (wherein the Elements of Souls are temper'd) the Font of Souls; the other is the Font of Virtues. (s) The Chaldeans alſo worſhip a Fontal Triad of (Chaldaic or Platonic) Faith, Truth and Love; which Ternary of Virtues are in the Proclo-Platonic Theology (t) ſtil'd the three Anagogic Cauſes, becauſe they are reductive to Souls.

(q) De Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 9.

(r) Orac. Magic. p. 78.

(s) Ibid. p. 114.

(t) Plat. Theol. l. 4. c. 9. p. 193, 194.

XI. The various Families and diſtributions of Genial Deities that occur in Proclus's Platonic Theology (with whom ſeveral others of the Platonic School Symbolize) are properly Deities of the Exoterical Theology: As the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures (or Phantomes) are peculiarly the Deities of the Acroamatical Theology; for the Exoterical Theology acknowledgeth no Myſtic-Metapyſical Natures. But becauſe the Platoniſts Syſtem of Deities from the higheſt to the loweſt, their ſeveral διάκοσμοι, ordinate Conſtitutions of Gods (u) are as ſo many Links of one Chain, of indiſſoluble coherence and cloſe Contexture; and becauſe their Philoſophizing about the Genial Deities hath rendred them in ſome reſpect Acroamatical, therefore we will conſider their Account of them as one Branch of the Acroamatical Theology. The Genial ſort of Deities in this Theology are of a three-fold Diſtribution: One Order of them is Hegemonical or Archical (αἱ ἀρχαὶ, the Principles,) which are ſuper-mundane Deities of the higher rank. The next Order of them is the Dii ἀπόλυτοι, free and exempt ſort of Deities, which are ſuper-mundane and ſuper-celeſtial Deities of the lower rank. A third Order of them is that of In-mundane Gods, the Celeſtial and Geneſiurgic.

(u) Procl. ſupr. l. 6. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 34.

The firſt Order of them (the Hegemonical or Archical) proceed from the intellectual Fathers, and are ſaid, to be ἀφομοιωτικοὶ θεοί, Deities that aſſimilate Beings, the lower to the higher, from which ſimilitude great and numerous Effects enſue. In this Order there are four Triads of Deities (the Platoniſts have the Faculty of making Deities at their Fingers ends) πατρικὴ, the paternal Triad conſiſting of the three Saturnidæ, or Sons of Saturn in Plato's Gorgias, Jupiter (a ſecondary Jupiter) Neptune, Pluto, that Triumvirate of Gods amongſt whom Homer ſhareth the Government of the World: Ζωογόνος or κορικὴ, the Zoogonic or Virgin-Triad conſiſting of Diana, Proſerpina, Minerva: Ἐπιστρεπτικὴ, the Converſive Triad, which cauſeth the Converſion of things to their Principle (calleth alſo the Apollinary or Solar Triad:) Φρουρητικὴ, the cuſtoditive Triad (the Triad cuſtoditive of the other;) for the Pagan Deities (as Xerxes appointed a Guard, to defend the Plane-Tree, which he had choſen for his God) muſt have a Guard to keep them. The firſt of theſe Triads the Paternal (called alſo the Demiurgic Triad or Trinity of Opificers) is concern'd in ſome Diſputes in the Proclo-Platonic Theology. (w) For in ſeveral Diſputations putations Proclus concerneth himſelf, to demonſtrate, that before a Triad of Demiurgical Hypoſtaſes there muſt be a Demiurgic Monad, becauſe none of the Divine Orders beginneth from multitude, but the Order of many proceedeth from Unity. In which Diſputations, as ſome obſerve, (x) his deſign is, to introduce a Monad before Plato's T' Agathon; and to ſhew, who is the Demiurgus by demonſtrating, that he is one exempt Demiurgic Monad before the Order of many and before a Triad. Accordingly, this Author's Demiurgus is the great Jupiter (one of the intellectual Fathers) who precedeth the Paternal Triad (or Trinity of Opificers) in the higher rank of ſuper-mundane Gods.

(w) Plat. Th. l. 5. c. 14, 28. l. 6. c. 7. in Tim. p 93.

Between this rank of Deities which is wholly ſupermundane, and that other rank which is inmundane, the Dii ἀπόλυτοι, free and abſolute ſort of Deities intervene, communicating in the Properties of both, and as a common Bond combining them together. The twelve Deities in Plato's Phœdrus, which are Captains of the inmundane Gods and of Demons, and the Leaders of particular Souls to the ſublime intelligible, namely, Jupiter agitating a wing'd Chariot (a third Jupiter,) Juno, Veſta, Mars, Mercury and ſuch more (which are diſtinguiſh'd into four Triads according to the mode of the Proclo-Platonic Theology) are ſaid to be Deities or Princes of this Rank and Quality. The inmundane Gods (which this Theology ſtileth our Princes and Saviours) are diſtributed according to the ſeveral diſtributions of the ſenſible World, from which they are inſeparate, and wherein they have their Receptacles and Preſectures making the moſt excellent mundane Polity. Theſe are the Captains of the Demons (which bringeth us back again to Demonology;) for every in-mundane God is Commander over ſome Demonial Order, as Proclus ſaith. With reſpect to the matter (which they comprehend in themſelves and adorn) the Chaldaic Theology ſtileth theſe Deities ὑλαίους, the material Deities. They have alſo the Name of Zonæi (whereas thoſe of an higher rank are ἄζωνοι, the Azonous) in that Theolgy. If we ſhould recount the reſt of the Chaldaic Deities (which I willingly overlook, as alſo ſome of the Platonic) the Recital would ſeem to conjure the Reader into ſome Magical Maze or Circle, (y) as a judicious Writer ſpeaketh touching the intelligible Iynx, Synocheis, Empyrial, Etherial, Material, Teletarchæ and the rabble of Names that follow them.

As bad as the Deities of the Theurgical Theology are, Syneſius thought them worth remembring in his Hymn to God, (z) whom he invoketh by the Name of Αὐτουργὲ θεῶν, the Opificer of the (Chaldaic) Gods. The intellectual Gods (ſaith he) celebrate thee, O King, and the Leaders of the World. The Gods that are about the World, the Gods that are in the World, the Zonæi and the Azonous.

Σὲ μὲν οἱ νοεροὶ
Μέλπουσιν ἄναξ
Σὲ δὲ κοσμαγοὶ οἱ περὶ κόσμον,
οἱ κατὰ κόσμον,
οἱ ζωναῖοι,
οἱ τ' ἄζωνοι.

Thus to celebrate the Praiſes of God, is not the Sanctification of his Name, but a deadly Profanation of it; for it is a making him the Head and Societiſt of Fictitious, Profane and Magical-kind of Deities. But ſo in the ſecond Hymn of Syneſius there are the Platonic Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures, with the ſubordinate ranks of Philoſophic-Pagan Deities, which ſhew him to have been (a) A Philoſophic-pagan, when he was a Biſhop. Thoſe that tranſcend the World (ſaith he) the individuous Diviſion of the intellectual and intelligible Gods, bleſt ſilence covereth. From one Fountain and Root the vaſt ſtore of Goods emergeth, the Superſubſtantial Progeny of Gods fervid with prolific Motions, and the admirable ſplendors of the bleſſed that are in-ſubſtantial Gods. Thence the in-mundane Chorus of immortal Kings and the army of Angels that knoweth not old age.

Τὰ πρόσω μάκαρα σιγὰ
Νοερῶν τε καὶ νοητῶν
Ἄτομον τομὰν καλύπτει.
Μία παγὰ, μία ῥίζα

Ἀγαθῶν ἀνέσχεν ὄλβον,
Ὑπερούσιόν τε βλάσταν
Γονίμοις ζέοισαν ὁρμαῖς
Τὰ τ' ἐνουσίων προλάμπει

Μακάρων αἴγλα φέγγη.
Ὅθεν ἐγκόσμιος ἤδη
Χόρος ἀφθίτων ἀνάκτων
Στρατὸς ἀγγέλων ἀγήρως.

To which numerous Progeny this Hymn ſubjoyneth the rout of Material Demons, as the Theurgical Theology ſtileth them. A learned Man of our Nation and Biſhop of our Church obſerveth, that Syneſius ſpeaketh the Dialect of that Heretical Theologer Valentinus: But taketh it for granted, that Syneſius (a Catholick Father) is not chargeable with Valentinianiſm. (b) In his moſt ſweet Hymns (ſaith he) we have Pater Ἄρρητος, the unſayable Father, Nous and Logos, who is ſtiled the firſt Off-ſpring from the firſt Root, and the Root of all that have a Being after him. He placeth the ſupreme Beatitude in the Viſion of the Bythus or Profundity, pronuncing him bleſſed, that after Death becoming intellectual Βυθὸν εἶδεν θεολαμπῆ, ſeeth the Bythus refulgent with the Light of the Gods, which he ſometimes calleth αἴγλαν Ἀγάλματι Βυθῶ Ἀμαρυσσομέναν, the Splendor ſhining in the immote Bythus. God the Father he calleth προπάτορα, αἰωνοτόκον, θῆλυ καὶ ἄρρεν, Before-Father, the Parent of Æon, Male and Female, is not all this the Language of the Valentinians?

It is much, that any one who obſerveth ſuch a verbal Affinity between Syneſius and the Valentinians Theology ſhould not diſcern the real Affinity; for Syneſius's Theology is the very ſame with the Chaldaic-Theurgical, whence the Theology of the Valentinians and Gnoſticks is manifeſtly deſcended. From hence they had (c) their προπάτορα, Before-Father, βυθὸν, Bythus or unfathomable depth, σιγὴν, Silence, νοῦν, Nun or Intellect, ἀλήθειαν, Verity, αἰῶνα, Æon, their Theological terms, προβολὴ, Prolation or Emiſſion, πλήρωμα, Fulneſs, ἐλπὶς, Hope, καρπὸς, Fruit, καρπιστὴς, Fructuary, are of the ſame Original; whence alſo Epiphanes (who gave new Names to the Gnoſtic Figments) had his Monoteta, Henoteta, Monada and Hen; the Philoſophers were the Patriarchs of the (Philoſophic-paganizing) Hereticks. Valentinus is call'd by Tertullian a follower of Plato, the Valentinians call'd their firſt Tetrad the Pythagorick Tetractys, the Gnoſticks worſhipp'd the Images of Pythagoras and Plato, and there is ſomething of Platoniſm in this their Dogma; that the viſible World was made by Angels; for (d) the Platoniſts ſuper-mundane and in-mundane Gods are Creators. Baſilides alſo injoin'd ſilence to them, to whom he revealed his Myſteries (probably) both in imitation of the Pythagorean Silence, and out of reſpect to Mother Sige, as Tertullian ſaith. Moreover, in this Heretical Pagan Theology the firſt Æon or God is ſtiled ἄγνωστος, ἀκατονόμαστος, ἄρρητος, Ignote, Innominable, undeclarable, unſayable, (the ſame with their Bythus,) which is a palpable Indication of its deſcent from the old Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theology, and that this was the Ground-work, whereupon they rais'd their Model. That ſomewhat of the Valentinians Æons (or Gods) and their Syzygiæ (Combinations) may be underſtood, I will repreſent a Fragment of their Genealogy from the beginning of Irenæus.

Bythus

(x) Petav. de Trin. l. c. 1. S. 3, 4. Intell. Syſt. p. 626.

(y) Purchas Pilgrim par. 1. B. 4. c. 6.

(z) Hymn. 3.

(a) See Luc. Holſten. Diſſert. de Syneſio at the end of the Ecleſ. Hiſt. publiſh'd by Valeſius.

(b) Pearſon vindic. ep. S. Ignat. par. 2. p. 5.

(c) Gale in Jambl. p. 201, 211, 213, 298, 301, 302. Tenſon of Idol. p. 149, 150, 153. Spencer in Orig. p. 88.

(d) Salluſt. de Diis, c. 6.

Bythus —— Sige	Bythus is call'd the Firſt-Father, Before-Father; Sige is call'd alſo Ennœa, Conceit, Charis, Grace.
Nous —— Aletheia	Nous (called alſo the Unigenit) is a Father for the Production of other Subſequent Æons.
Logos —— Vita.	Logos not being generated by Bythus is wholly ignorant of the firſt Father, and is therefore called the blind Æon.

XII. As the Names of the Valentinians Æons ſpeak them of Original and Deſcent Philoſophic-Pagan: So the Cabaliſtical Jews diſtribution of Angels into a Ternary of Kinds and Claſſes (e) ſeparate Intelligences, Angels of Miniſtry and ſublunary Spirits, is an imitation of the Philoſophic Pagans diſtribution of their Deities (for it is a great Miſtake, (f) to ſuppoſe the Philoſophic Pagans diſtribution of their Deities a deſcendent from the Jews;) and the ſame humour of criminal Philoſophic-paganizing in matters of Theology hath contriv'd the Schoolmens Orders and Hierarchies of Angels. For they blindly following their blind Guide the Counterfeit Dionyſius, have form'd three Hierarchies of Angels, each conſiſting of a Triad of Orders, conformably (but with ſome diſcrepancy) to the Proclo-Platonic Scheme of Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures, θεοὶ νοητοὶ, the intelligible Gods, νοητοὶ καὶ νοεροὶ, the intelligible and intellectual, νοεροὶ μονὸν, the intellectual only. There is ſuch Conformity between theſe two Models, that Suidas, (g) Eugubinus, (and others) blindly ſuppoſe, that Proclus ſtole his Scheme from their great Theologer, the Titular Dionyſius the Areopagite. His Model (conſiſting of a ſuperior, middle and inferior) is thus delineated.

1. Hierarchy { Seraphim, Cherubim, Throni }
2. Hierarchy { Dominationes, Virtutes, Poteſtates }
3. Hierarchy { Principatus, Archangeli, Angeli. }

The Marian Theologers ſuppoſe, (h) that the Mother of God conſtituteth a fourth Hierarchy, and that her Seat is in the twelfth Heaven. But this combination of a Woman with the Divine Majeſty may paſs for a Valentinian Syzigia: And a like inept is this following Combination of a Seraphim with S. Francis, and of Prelates with the Order of Dominations. (i) We Minorites hold it for certain, that the bleſſed God ſent one of the Order of Seraphim to our Seraphic Father, when out of his Benignity he would impreſs in his Fleſh the five Wounds. Hence we ſing, Cui Seraph apparuit, (to whom one of the Order of Seraphim appear'd;) hence alſo the bleſſed Father Francis is ſaid to be full of Seraphic ardour, and to burn continually in his Life-time (having the Seraphim for his Maſters,) and to have inſtituted thoſe of his Fraternity in true love both by Words and Examples. (k) The Dominations are ſo call'd, becauſe they have Domination over the reſt, and are ſubject to none. Their Office is to inſtruct the Prelates, how they ought to behave themſelves in the Spiritual Warfare, witneſs S. Gregory; and how they are bound to exerciſe Domination diſcreetly over their Inferiours or Subjects. There is nothing more inept in the Valentinians Scheme than theſe Friar-like Combinations: But the latter doubtleſs (the Combination of Prelates and Dominations) is no Fictitious Syzigia, but too viſible a reality, that hath caus'd more numerous and dolorous Wounds in the Church and Servants of Chriſt, than the Seraphim is ſaid to have made in S. Francis.

Theſe Hierarchical Orders are called διάκοσμοι, by the counterfeit Dionyſius, who ſpeaketh the Language of the Proclo-Platonic Theology. (l) The Philoſophers Intelligences are the Angels of the Schools, the Hierarchical Orders conſiſt of abſtract Noes, that underſtand without Phantaſms, whoſe Intellection is that of ſimple Intuition, without Ratiocination or ſucceſſive Diſcourſe; ſo far the Noes of the Schools Symbolize with the Platonic. In theſe Orders (which are ſubordinate, aud gradually deſcending agreeably to the Proclo-Platonic) the ſuper-celeſtial Eſſences that are near to God, are ſtiled νοηταὶ δυνάμεις, the intelligible Powers; thoſe that are remote, are intituled νοεραὶ, the intellectual, by the pretended Dionyſius. The Schools alſo diſpute (conformably to the Doctrine of Proclus touching his Myſtic-Metaphyſical Natures,) that as the Angels are ſuperior in Nature, ſo the Species whereby they underſtand, are more univerſal. The Superiors exerciſe towards their Inferiors the Hierarchical Function, thoſe three Hierarchical Acts, κάθαρσις, Purgation, φωτισμὸς, Illumination, τελείωσις, Perfection; which account of their Operations conformeth them to the Pagan Deities in Theurgy; and accordingly the Theurgical Theology of Proclus (m) touching the perfective initiation of aſcending Souls to the intelligible ſublime view (conſiſting of three degrees τελετὴ, the firſt Initiation, μύησις, the ſecond, ἐποπτεία, the third) is tranſcrib'd by the Titular Dionyſius. The Orders of the firſt Hierarchy ſeem to be rais'd to the rank and condition of the Proclo-Platonic θεοὶ νοητοὶ, intelligible Gods; for at what a rate do they tranſcend Angels and Arch-Angels?

With theſe Speculations (and ſuch more) touching three Celeſtial Hierarchies and nine Orders the Schools have entertain'd themſelves; not conſidering, that they were impos'd upon by a Philoſophic-paganizing Trick of the Titular Dionyſius, and that there is no Foundation either in Theological Reaſon or good Authority for the belief of their Exiſtence. (n) Some credulouſly ſuppoſe, that the knowledge of them was communicated to the pretended Areopagite by S. Paul his Maſter or Initiator, as he calleth him. (o) Others pretend to no great aſſurance touching theſe abſtruſe matters, wiſely conſidering, that there no is mention made of theſe nine Orders by the more ancient Writers of the Church, that liv'd in the five firſt Centuries, when the Writings of Dionyſius were not extant. If the Church at that time and in the ſubſequent Ages had not paganiz'd, this Author with his Hierarchies and nine Orders could never have gain'd an univerſal Reception (as they did, but with ſome difference in placing ſome of the Orders) both in the Greek and Latin Church. They could not have fail'd, to explode the Impoſtor, if for no other Crime, yet for this one of the firſt Magnitude, His Nefarious * Philoſophic-paganizing the matters of the Chriſtian Theology.

(e) Hoornbeck c. Jud. l. 4. c. 1.

(f) Ibid. p. 308. vid. Jac. Cappell. not. in Heb. 1. 14.

(g) Eugubin. de Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 11. & Liv. Galant. Compar. l. 7. p. 195.

(h) Biel 3. de Aſſumpt.

(i) Liv. Galant. ſupr. l. 5. p. 166.

(k) Dominationes dictæ ſunt, eo quia cæteris dominantur, & nulli ſubjecti extant. Horum officium eſt, inſtruere prælatos, quomodo in pugna ſpirituali ſeſe gerere debeant, teſte Greg. S. & quomodo ipſi diſcretè inferioribus ſuis, ſive ſubditis dominari teneantur. Liv. Galant. ibid. p. 150.

(l) Liv. Galant. ſupr. p. 154. Petav. T. 3. l. 1. c. 3. l. 2. c. 3. & Aquin. 1. Qu. 58. 3, 4. qu. 55 3. qu. 108, 5, 6.

(m) Plat. Theol. p. 220. Eugubin. de Per. Phil. l. 8. c. 13.

(n) Vaſqu. in Th. T. 2. Diſp. 216. c. 1.

(o) Petav. T. 3. l. 2. c. 1. S. 12. & c. 2.

* Quàm abſurda docuit Origenes, quàm ſtulta & vana voluit aſtruere Euſebius, cùm in aliis libris, tum in Præparationibus Evangelicis, quando quædam ex Gentilibus conatur in noſtram religionem transferre? Herman. Hameſman. de Tradition. Apoſtol. p. 11.

CHAP. IX.

1. Of the Phyſiological conſideration of the Pagans Syſtem of the Univerſe and of their Notion of a Supreme Deity. 2. Of the Supreme Deity of their Religion and Laws. 3. Of the Supreme Deity of their Religion and Laws according to the Platoniſts. 4. Of the Supreme Deity of their Religion and Laws according to the general Senſe of the Pagan Theiſts. 5. Of the Jews and Chriſtians Agreement with the Pagans touching this Idea of God. 6. Of the Heatheniſm of this their Idea. 7. Of the Agreement and Difference of the Pagan Theiſts touching their Archical Hypoſtaſes. 8. Of the Unity of the Univerſe as one animate mundane Syſtem and mundane Animal. 9. Of the Unity of it as one Deity and one Houſe and Temple. 10. As All is one according to the Pagan Theiſts, ſo One is All. 11. Of a moſt extravagant Senſe wherein One is ſaid to be All. 12. How One is the multitude and variety of Pagan Deities, and of the Stoicks Polyonymy. 13. The Reaſons of their Polyonymy and the falſe Senſe of it. 14. Their Coſmical Jove both politically and animatively Imperial. 15. This Coſmical Regent is Order, Law, Providence, Fate and Fortune to the World.

I. THE Pagans Syſtem of the Univerſe which muſt be Politically conſider'd (and which we have conſider'd both as their Univerſe of Rationals and of Gods) is alſo of Phyſiological conſideration, and this conſideration of it is (doubtleſs) of equal importance with the other; as will appear from one of their ſupreme Deities, which (although it was not abſolutely their ſupreme Deity, yet) is juſtly called the ſupreme Deity of their Religion and Laws. For it muſt be ſaid, that the Pagan Theiſts held a ſupreme Deity, whereby they meant their ſupreme Deity, the ſupreme of their Deities, which ſignified in various Notions, and conſequently various ſupreme Deities, of which one that was not the higheſt Deity in Paganiſm, was yet the ſupreme Deity of their Religion and Laws.

The common Profeſſion of the Pagan Theiſts importeth a Supreme Deity, ſuch a Supreme Deity as this Profeſſion of Atheiſm diſclaimeth. (p) There is no Government of the Gods, nor any univerſal Providence of the Chieftain or the Supreme of the Gods. In oppoſition to this Profeſſion of Groſs Atheiſm the Popular-pagan Theiſm is the acknowledgment of a ſupreme Deity and an univerſal Providence. Which ſheweth the Injuſtice and Partiality of Euſebius in treating of the matters of the Gentile Theology; for he maketh the Platonic (or Philoſophic-Pagan) Theiſm, to be nothing worſe than the Iſraelitical Theiſm; but the Popular-Pagan Theiſm nothing better than Atheiſm. Whereas the Popular-pagan and the Philoſophic-pagan Theiſts are of one and the ſame Religion, and equally agree with the Iſraelitical Theiſts in the acknowledgment of a Supreme Deity. But the Agreement and Difference between the Pagan and Iſraelitical Theiſm inferreth, that this Name (or theſe complex Terms) a Supreme Deity is of that ambiguity, which ſome Logicians call Æquivocatio Erroris (the Equivocation of Error,) as alſo thoſe other equivalent Names expreſſive of a Supreme Deity in the Pagan Writers. (q) The God of the Univerſe, the God above all, the Ruler of all things, the Ruler and Prince of all, the Prince and chief Leader of the Univerſe, the Supreme Governor and Lord of the Univerſe, that chief or principal God, the firſt and greateſt God, he that generated this whole Univerſe, the Parent of the World, the great Father of Nature, the Parent of Gods and Men, the Hegemonic and ruling Principle of the World, the beſt and greateſt, the Governour of the World. Theſe Honorary Names (and ſuch more) are expreſſive of a Deity that is Supreme, to which ſort of Deity the Pagan Theologers (agreeably to the Iſraelitical Theiſts) often aſcribe the Attributes of Ingenit, Eternal, Beate, and ſuch other, as the Name of the Beſt and Greateſt manifeſtly implieth. (r) Both Parties grant, that there is one Parent of the Univerſe, Immortal and Ingenit alone. Wherefore if this Name the Supreme Deity be underſtood in a general and indeterminate Notion without Specific or individual determination, it is matter of agreement between theſe two ſorts of Theiſts: But if it ſignifyeth, not without, but with Specific or Individual determination, it is not matter of Agreement, but of difference between the Pagan and Iſraelitical Theiſts, and in ſome ſort amongſt the Pagan Theiſts themſelves, they underſtanding the Supreme Deity in various Notions (and ſo far making various Supreme Deities) κοσμικῶς, Coſmically, φυσικῶς, Phyſically, ἱστορικῶς, Herologically, πνευματολογικῶς, Pneumatologically or Genially, ἀκροαματικῶς, Acroamatically. But as the Name of Princeps Philoſophorum (the Prince of Philoſophers) in the Schools of the Ariſtotelians muſt be underſtood of their Prince of Philoſophers (reputatively ſuch,) the Platoniſts and Epicureans have another Prince of Philoſophers: ſo this Name the Supreme Deity amongſt the Pagan Theiſts, and the ſeveral ſorts of Pagan Theiſts muſt be underſtood of their Supreme Deity (reputatively ſuch,) ſeveral ſorts of Pagan Theiſts having ſeveral Supreme Deities. So that the Epithet which they gave to the Jews Supreme Deity properly belongeth to their own.

——— ——Dedita Sacris
Incerti Judæa Dei——— ——— Lucan.
Judæa the Devotioniſt of an uncertain God.

II. The Supreme Deity amongſt the Pagan Theiſts is of this Specific determination, it ſignifieth a Paganical kind of Supreme Deity; for with them the Name doth not ſignifie meerly a Deity Supreme, but the Supreme (or Chieftain) of their Pagan Deities. As in Silius Italicus (s) Jove is invok'd by the Name of Summe Deorum the Supreme of the Deities. And the uſual Form of Invocation amongſt the Pagan Religioniſts is, ὦ Ζεῦ ϗ Θεοί, O Jove and the Gods,

(p) — jam neque Dii regunt, Neque profectò Deûm ſummus Rex omnia curat. V. Annot. in Min. Fæl. p. 41.

(q) Ὁ θεὸς τῶν ὅλων, ὁ ἐπὶ πᾶσι θεός, dominator rerum, ἡγεμὼν ϗ ἄρχων ἁπάντων, ὁ ἡγεμὼν τοῦ παντὸς ϗ Ἀρχηγέτης, ſummus Rector & Dominus, Princeps ille Deus, ὁ πρῶτος ϗ μέγιστος θεός, ὁ τόδε τὸ πᾶν γεννήσας, mundi parens, parens hominum deorumque, τὸ τοῦ κόσμου ἡγεμονικόν, opt. max. κοσμοκράτωρ, παντοκράτωρ.

(r) Omnes concedimus unum eſſe rerum Patrem, immortalem, atque ingenitum ſolum. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 67.

(s) l. 4.

Gods, underſtanding by Jove (t) τὸν θεὸν θεῶν, or as ſome Inſcriptions ſtyle him Numen Deorum, the God of the Gods. Their Prayers are made Διΐ τε βασιλεῖ ϗ τοῖς ἄλλοις θεοῖς, to Jupiter the King and to the other Gods. His uſual ſtyle in Homer, Virgil, Ennius, Plautus and other Poets, is the Father and King of the Gods; (u) for him they will have to be the King of the other Gods and Goddeſſes. By the Gods they underſtand (w) τὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσι θεὸν ϗ τοὺς ἄλλους, the Supream Deity and the other Deities; and for this reaſon they ſpeak of God and the Gods promiſcuouſly, becauſe they conſider them as one Syſtem and one Chorus. (x) The reſt of the Gods (ſaith Onatus the Pythagorean) are to the Firſt God, the Intelligible (or Super-ſenſible) God, as thoſe of the Chorus to the Coryphæus, or as the Souldiers to their General. They conſider'd their Deities collectively, celebrated a Feſtival of them all in common (call'd θεοξενία or θεοξυνία) and conſecrated Altars θεοῖς πᾶσιν ἐν κοινῷ, DIS Deabuſque omnibus, to all the Gods and Goddeſſes. They are his Aſſociates, Collegues and near Allies, and He is the Head of the Family of Pagan Deities. It is the Title of a Chapter in Eugubinus, (y) that Ariſtotle affirmeth with Homer, that the Supream God is the Father of the Gods and of Men (Heathen Gods and Heathen Men) ejuſdemque generis cum illis, of the ſame Kind, Kindred and Family with them; as the Anceſtor and the Younger (ſaith Ariſtotle) he that begetteth and he that is begotten. The ſubordinate Deities are ally'd to the Supream as Sons to the Father, that conſtitute with him one Family, for they are (z) παῖδες θεοῦ, Sons of God, co-reigners with God; (a) or Daughters of Allah taal (ὀλοτάλ) the Supream Deity, as the Arabians in their Heatheniſm call'd their Alilahat (Ἀλιλάτ) Inferiour Deities. The Dii Conſentes are ſo nearly ally'd to the Supream Deity, that the Civil Theology ſuppoſeth them his Counſellors and Aſſeſſors (their conſent being ask'd to every Decree in Heaven;) the Noble and Greater Gods are (b) βασιλέως συγγενέστατοι, of Royal Dignity, next of kin to him, feaſting as it were at the ſame Table with the Supream God, (c) as the Philoſophers and the Poets agree.

Homer therefore and Ariſtotle, the Poets and the Philoſophers, (the Popular and the Philoſophic Pagans) agree in the acknowledgment of a Supream Deity, and of one and the ſame Supream Deity, yet not without diſtinction and limitation of Senſe. For they do not agree in the acknowledgment of an Acroamatical Supream Deity, of whom there are no Notices amongſt the Popular Pagans. But they agree in the acknowledgment of a Supream Deity in general, and of a Paganical kind of Supream Deity, as the Supream Deity is in the Pagan Theology a Term of Polytheiſm, which relateth to the Subordinate Deities, as ὁ πρῶτος θεὸς (the firſt God) relateth to the Secondary. They agree therefore in the acknowledgment of a Supream Deity in the Senſe of their Religion and Laws, but not in the Senſe of their Schools of Philoſophy. When the Philoſophers ſpeak of the Supream Deity Scholaſtically (in the peculiar Senſe of their Schools) they mean one Supream Deity; and when they ſpeak of the Supream Deity (popularly) in the Senſe of their Religion and Laws, they mean another.

III. The Pagans Theiſm being their Polytheiſm, and the Supream Deity being a Term of their Polytheiſm, it is manifeſtly inconſiſtent with the acknowledgment of the true God, to whoſe Supremacy and Sovereignty it belongeth, to ſubſiſt in the Quality and Condition of God alone. Their Supream Deity manifeſtly claſheth alſo with the ſolitary Supream Deity of Anaxagoras, whoſe Hypotheſis ſo far befriendeth Atheiſm, it ſubverted the main of their Theiſm by ſubverting their Polytheiſm. The Atheiſm charg'd upon Anaxagoras (for which the Athenians baniſh'd him, fin'd him five Talents, and had put him to death, if his Scholar Pericles had not interpos'd) may beſt be underſtood from Plato's tenth Book of Laws; where deſigning to eſtabliſh the Belief of Deity and Providence as the Foundation of Laws, he aſſerteth in the firſt place, The Godſhip of the Earth, the Sun, the Moon, the Stars; falleth foul upon Anaxagoras and the young Men that ſlighted theſe things ὡς γῆν τε ϗ λίθους αὐτὰ ὄντα, as being but Earth and Stones without any Deity or Divinity; and he is ſo earneſt in purſuit of the Argument, that Ficinus ſaith of him, Vix ab ira continere ſe poteſt, He is almoſt out of patience. From this Bigotic Diſpute of Plato (who was a very ſerious and zealous Pagan Religioniſt) on behalf of the Pagan Theiſm againſt ſuppoſed Atheiſm, it appeareth, that Anaxagoras's Philoſophy was charg'd with Atheiſm and Impiety, becauſe it ſhut out of Being the Mundane Soul, deſtroy'd the Godſhip of the World and the parts thereof (making them inanimate and unintelligent) calling the Moon an Earth, and the Sun μύδρον διάπυρον, a Maſs of Fire; ἥλιον ϗ σελήνην ϗ τὰ ἄλλα ἄστρα εἴπερ ψυχὴ περιάγει πάντα, ἆρ' οὐ ϗ ἓν ἕκαστον; The Sun, Moon and Stars if they are all mov'd by Soul, are they not ſingly animated? This is the Summ of Plato's Theiſm, the oppoſite to the Atheiſm which he diſputeth againſt. The grand Fundamental of it which the main of his Diſpute is employ'd about, is the Exiſtence of the Mundane Soul (which inferreth the Deity of the illuſtrious parts of the World; and for this reaſon he aſcendeth to no higher Deity in his Book of Laws than the Univerſal Mundane Soul, becauſe the Theiſm which he deſigneth to aſſert, is the oppoſite to the Atheiſm which he intendeth to deſtroy. In his twelfth Book of Laws the Philoſophy of Anaxagoras is ſaid to be injurious to Religion, and to have cauſed much Atheiſm, becauſe injurious to Soul. (d) Some who affirm, that Mind order'd all things in the Heavens, themſelves erring about the nature of Soul and not making it elder than Body, have overturn'd all again: Theſe things cauſed much Atheiſm. For there are two things that Plato accounteth eſſential to Religion. (e) One is, that Soul is the moſt ancient and divineſt of all things, whoſe motion being generated, hath produc'd the ever-flowing Subſtance. The other is concerning the orderly motion of the Stars and the reſt, which Intellect guideth, ordering all things. (f) No Man can be firmly religious, that doth not believe theſe two things; that Soul is the moſt ancient of all things generated, and immortal, and ruleth all Bodies. The other is; that Mind or Underſtanding is in the Stars. The belief of Soul, both the Soul of the World, and the particular

(t) Hierocl. in aur Car. p. 10.

(u) Ipſum enim deorum omnium dearumque regem eſſe volunt. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 9.

(w) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 3. S. 5.

(x) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 84. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 3.

(y) De Per. Phil. l. 4. c. 13.

(z) M. Tyr. diſſ. 1.

(a) Pocock. Spec. p. 107, 108.

(b) M. Tyr. ſupr.

(c) Idem Diſſ. 29.

(d) Λέγοντες ὡς νοῦς εἴη ὁ διακεκοσμηκὼς πάνθ' ὅσα κατ' οὐρανόν, αὐτοὶ δὲ πάλιν ἁμαρτάνοντες ψυχῆς φύσεως, ὅτι πρεσβύτερον εἴη σωμάτων, ἅπανθ' ὡς εἰπεῖν ἔπος ἀνέτρεψαν πάλιν. —— Ταῦτ' ἦν τὰ τότε ἐξειργασμένα πολλὰς ἀθεότητας.

(e) Ἓν μὲν ὃ περὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ἐλέγομεν, ὡς πρεσβύτατόν τε ϗ θειότατόν ἐστι πάντων ὧν κίνησις γένεσιν παραλαβοῦσα ἀέναον οὐσίαν ἐπόρισεν. ἓν δὲ τὸ περὶ τὴν φοράν, ὡς ἔχει τάξεως ἄστρων τε ϗ ὅσων ἄλλων ἐγκρατὴς νοῦς ἐστι, τὸ πᾶν διακεκοσμημένος.

(f) Οὐκ ἔστι ποτὲ γενέσθαι βεβαίως θεοσεβῆ θνητῶν ἀνθρώπων οὐδένα, ὃς ἂν μὴ τὰ λεγόμενα ταῦτα νῦν δύο λάβῃ· ψυχήν τε ὡς ἔστι πρεσβύτατον ἁπάντων ὅσα γονῆς μετείληφεν, ἀθάνατόν τε, ἄρχει τε δὴ σωμάτων πάντων. ἐπὶ δὲ τούτοισι δή, τὸ νῦν εἰρημένον πολλάκις, τόν τε εἰρημένον ἐν τοῖς ἄστροις νοῦν τῶν ὄντων.

cular Souls of the Sun, Moon and Stars, is of grand concern in Religion, becauſe they have their Godſhip from it. Anaxagoras therefore introducing a ſolitary ſeparate Mind and diſcarding the Deifying Soul of the World, Athe-iz'd the World (with the illuſtrious parts of it) which was no leſs than a ſubverſion of the main of the Pagan Theiſm.

We have ſhew'd one Reaſon, why Plato in his Book of Laws aſcendeth to no higher Deity than the Mundane Soul; this was the Deity (not any higher Deity) whoſe Exiſtence he was to prove againſt the ſuppos'd Atheiſm of Anaxagoras. Ficinus furniſheth us with another Reaſon; Why doth Plato (ſaith he) in this Book of Laws manifeſtly aſſert the Celeſtial Gods only? (g) becauſe the Contemplation of the higher Deities is very alien from the Matter of Laws; which is an Intimation, that thoſe higher Deities in Platoniſm, the firſt Archical Hypoſtaſis, and the Second alſo as it is a Platonic kind of Intellect, are properly Gods of Philoſophical Speculation only, no Deities of Religion and Laws; which Card. Beſſarion intimateth alſo, anſwering Trapezuntius (who chargeth Plato, that he did not worſhip God) in this manner; (h) that in his Books of Laws which were made for the People, he doth not expreſly preſcribe any worſhip to God under the Name of One, or Firſt, or Ineffable. Such a Deity not at all accommodate to the People can be no Deity of Religion and Law; for theſe are Exoterical and Popular things. Nor could the Platoniſts ſuppoſe their firſt Principle a Deity of Religion and Laws; for they look upon it as quite above all external Adoration, as Porphyry diſcourſeth. (i) Let us ſacrifice, but as becometh us, to the God over all, that is, as a wiſe man ſaid, by offering up no ſenſible thing to him; for every material thing is impure or unclean unto that which is immaterial; therefore the beſt Sacrifice to God is, to offer up our Lives to him (for even our Words are not agreeable to him) which is the moſt proper Hymn to him, and the moſt beneficial to our ſelves. This Acroamatical kind of Deity was Numa's Deity, (k) to whom he would allow no Image to be erected in the Temples, becauſe unſuitable to his Nature; nor would he allow (for the ſame reaſon) any material Sacrifices to be offer'd to him, but ſuperſenſible only; (l) theſe being only acceptable to him. So Apollonius Tyanæus will not allow (m) that any Sacrifice be offer'd to the greateſt God that is over all, or that any thing ſenſible be conſecrated to this Supream Deity; for there is nothing that the Earth or Air affordeth, Plant or Animal, which is not a Pollution unto him. Agreeably to the Senſe of theſe Theurgical Sophiſts the firſt Deity is repreſented by Eugubinus as a Deity altogether unpopular, ſuch as cannot be a Deity of Religion and Laws, and therefore Plato hath not propos'd him as an Object of Worſhip. (n) Plato did not ſo clearly propoſe the greateſt God as an Object of Worſhip, becauſe he could not be worſhipp'd; what He is, and how to be worſhipp'd, cannot be deſcrib'd or declar'd. In three places he calleth him Undeclarable, in the Timæus difficult for Thought, undeclarable by Speech or Word. According to Philo alſo He is unconceivable, unintelligible, unthinkable, undeclarable; being thus unſpeakable and inexplicable, and ſuch as the old Theologers call'd innominable, ſome inviſible, others to be worſhipp'd in ſilence, others un-inveſtigable, therefore Plato hath ſaid nothing of him in his Book of Laws, nor ſet down any thing concerning his Worſhip, becauſe he could not, this Deity being unknowable both as to Name and Nature. If Plato's Supream Deity is of no Religion, if all Underſtanding, Conception, Name, Word, Speech, be utterly incompetible and unapplicable to this Firſt Principle; if He be perfectly tranſcendental to all Cognoſcibility, Intelligibility, Speakability; if there can be no Doctrine, no Learning, no Diſcipline or Inſtitution touching ſuch a Deity, and conſequently no Religion, Lactantius had great reaſon to ſay; (o) Plato hath ſpoken many things of one God, by whom he ſaith the World was conſtituted; but nothing of Religion; for he only dream'd of, but knew not God.

But although Plato hath preſcrib'd no Worſhip for his Supream Deity, yet his Followers (the Myſtic-Metaphyſical and Theurgical Theologers) allot him a ſort of Worſhip (p) δι' ἑνώσεως καὶ σιγῆς, by Henotety and Silence. (q) Porphyry that forbiddeth all External Speech, (which he alloweth in the Praiſes of the Intelligible Gods, becauſe they are Intelligible) and Internal alſo, if inquinated by any Paſſion, preſcribeth pure Silence (pure from that materiality which is in Speech) and pure Cogitations, Conjunction with him and Aſſimilation to him, the Apathy of the Soul, and Theory of this God, which is the Sacrificing our Life to him. The Pythagoreans and Egyptian Wiſe Men forbad Men to ſpeak, when they paſs'd by the Doors or Gates, worſhipping by that ſilence God that hath the (entrance or) beginning of all things. Prayer may be made to the greateſt God; for (r) all pray except the Firſt, ſaith Theodorus Aſinæus; but the Prayer muſt be purely mental according to Apollonius: and Pſellus intituleth this Deity, (s) a Deity rather to be honour'd by Silence, than celebrated by any Words that ſpeak an Admiration of him; τὸ ἓν τετιμήσθω σιγῇ, the Henotety muſt be honour'd in pure Silence, (t) ſaith Damaſcius. And Clemens in his Humour of (Criminal) Philoſophic-Paganizing ſaith of the Father and Cauſe of the Univerſe, (u) He is unſayable, and moſt properly to be worſhipp'd and venerated with Silence together with an holy Aſtoniſhment. Agreeably to the Firſt, a Second Deity or Archical Hypoſtaſis, (w) διὰ σιγῆς μόνης θεραπεύεται, is worſhipp'd only by Silence. But ſuch Acroamatical kind of Deities and their Worſhip being alien from Matter of Law, and altogether unſuitable to the generality of Mankind and the Societies of Men, Plato thought it a ſolecism, to mention them in his Book of Laws. As in his Epiſtle to Dionyſius; (x) He taketh care, that the matters of his Acroamatical Theology, his Acroamatical Deities do not fall into the Hands of unskilful Men; for ſcarce any

(g) Quoniam ſuperiorum contemplatio eſt à legum materia admodum aliena. Arg. in 10. de Leg.

(h) L. 3. c. 5.

(i) *S. Cyr. c. Jul. l.*2. p. 60.

(k) Ibid. l. 6. p. 193.

(l) Θυσίαις δὲ χαίρειν αὐτὸ ταῖς νοηταῖς, οὐχὶ ταῖς ἐνύλοις ἰσχυρίζετο.

(m) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 13.

(n) Illum autem maximum ineffabilemque Deum idcircò non tam clarè adorandum propoſuiſſe, quòd non poſſet adorari, & deſcribi qualis eſſet, & quomodo colendus: confeſſus eſt enim eum tribus locis inenarrabilem, in Timæo cogitatu difficilem, dictu ineffabilem: Philo etiam cogitari & intelligi non poſſe, nedum proferri. Quoniam igitur hunc ineffabilem, inexplicabilem, quenque ſuperiores omnes Theologi, alii innominabilem, alii inviſibilem, alii ſilentio colendum, alii ἀζήτητον non inveſtigabilem dixerant, non eſt de eo in legibus locutus, cujus de cultu quicquam ſtatuere, quia nec nomen noſſet, nec naturam ejus haberet exploratum, non poſſet. De Per. Phil. l. 5. c. 3.

(o) Plato quidem multa de uno Deo locutus eſt, à quo ait, conſtitutum eſſe mundum; ſed nihil de religione. Somniaverat enim Deum, non cognoverat. l. 5. c. 15.

(p) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 3. c. 7. l. 4. c. 6.

(q) De Abſt. l. 2. S. 34. de Antro. p. 265. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 13, 14.

(r) Πάντα εὔχεται πλὴν τοῦ πρώτου. Gale in Jambl. p. 281.

(s) Σιγῇ μᾶλλον τιμώμενον ἢ θαυμασίαις φωναῖς σημαινόμενον. Orac. Mag. p. 110.

(t) Eugubin. ſupr. l. 3. c. 5.

(u) Οὐκέτι φωνῇ παραδιδόμενον, σεβάσματι δὲ καὶ σιγῇ μετ' ἐκπλήξεως ἁγίας σεβαστὸν καὶ σεπτὸν κυριώτατα. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 503.

(w) Gale in Jambl. p. 301, 274.

(x) Cave, inquit, ne quando excidant hæc in homines imperitos. Si quidem, ut ego cenſeo, nihil propè eſt, quod magis irrideatur apud plebem. habes igitur à Platone cauſam veram, cur any thing, as I ſuppoſe, would be matter of more deriſion amongſt the common People. From Plato therefore you have the true cauſe, why we may not ſpeak of the Firſt Deity amongſt the Vulgar, why it is not lawful to publiſh to the Vulgar the Parent of the Univerſe: For not underſtanding the things that are ſaid of him, they deride them, being things remote from Popular Cuſtom, and groſs Ears; therefore treating of Laws which ought to be publiſh'd to the People, he ſpake nothing of that great un-inveſtigable Deity, propoſing only the worſhip of Heaven to the People, to whom he muſt ſpeak only of that which they thought certain Religion.

IV. The Platoniſts therefore, although they had higher Deities in their School, do yet agree, That the Supream Deity of their Religion and Laws is the Mundane Soul, or the Syſtema Coſmicum (Mundane Syſtem before diſcours'd of) as animated by a Regial Mind and Soul, which is deifying to it. The Popular-Pagans in their Religion acknowledg'd no higher Deity than an Univerſal Mind, animative of the Mundane Syſtem and Sovereign thereof; for upon this account Plato in his Book of Laws, in proving the Exiſtence of a Deity, aſcendeth no higher than the Heavens and the Mundane Soul, becauſe he look'd upon the Heavens or the Mundane Soul as the higheſt Deity of their Religion and Laws. So the Deſcription which he maketh of the Mundane Soul in his Cratylus, ſheweth, that he look'd upon it as the Grecanic Zeus or Jupiter, which was undoubtedly the higheſt Deity of their Religion and Laws. (y) Some call the ſame God Ζῆνα (Zena,) others Δία (Dia,) dividing his Name (ſaith he) Δία-Ζῆνα (which is in Senſe δι' ὃν ζῆν, He from whom all things have their Life) into two parts, which if join'd together, ſhew the Nature of this God. (z) For there is nothing which is more the cauſe of Life to us and all other things than this Prince and King of all; therefore the Greeks have given him a very ſuitable Name. In his Philebus alſo, having own'd the Opinion of the Ancients, who held, that the World was not fortuitouſly and temerariouſly mov'd, but govern'd by Mind and wonderful Wiſdom, he ſubjoyneth; (a) Wiſdom and Underſtanding cannot be diſjoyn'd from Soul; therefore you muſt conclude, that in the Nature of Jove there is a Regial Soul, and a Regial Mind or Underſtanding. Speuſippus agreeably to Plato is ſaid by Cicero (b) to have held Vim quandam quâ omnia regantur, eámque Animalem, a certain Force or Power, whereby all things are govern'd, and that Animal. Such was Pythagoras's Notion of the Deity, as the Writers of the Church in conſort with Cicero and others report it. (c) There is one God, who is not, as ſome ſuppoſe, without the Fabrick of the World, but in it, whole in the whole Circle, the Overſeer of all Generation, the Contemperation of all things, the Father of all, Mind and Animation to the whole Circle, the Motion of all. (d) Pythagoras alſo acknowledgeth one God, an Incorporeal Mind, diffus'd through the whole Nature of things, the Origin of Vital Sence to all Animals. The Writers of the Church take it for granted, that this Pythagoric Deſcription of the Deity is to be underſtood of the Supream Deity; but doubtleſs the Deity thus deſcrib'd is but the third Hypoſtaſis of the Pythagoric Triad, which was the Supream Deity of the Pagan Theiſts Religion and Laws. So God is defin'd by Onatus the Pythagorean; (e) God is Mind and Soul and the Hegemonic of the whole World. The Zeus or Jove of the Orphic Theology is the Mundane Soul and the Mundane Syſtem.

> (f) Πάντα γὰρ ἐν μεγάλῳ Ζηνὸς τάδε σώματι κεῖται:
> All theſe things lie in the great Body of Jove.

(g) A Spirit that pervadeth the whole World (τῶ παντὸς κόσμω τὸ διῆκον πνεῦμα) was one of the Egyptians Notices of God. (h) The Force which pervadeth all things, and which is both Fate and Mind, is the Grecanic Zeus, which noticeth to us, that Aratus's Zeus is the Regial Mundane Soul, (i) the Life of the World, the common Life of the Mundane Body, the Supream Diety of the Poetic and Civil Theology.

> ——Μεσταὶ δὲ Διὸς πᾶσαι μὲν ἀγυιαὶ > πᾶσαι δ' ἀνθρώπων ἀγοραὶ, μεστὴ δὲ θάλασσα > καὶ λιμένες· πάντη δὲ Διὸς κεχρήμεθα πάντες.
> All is full of Jupiter (He is διήκουσα διὰ πάντων δύναμις, the Power that pervadeth All) He is every where needful and uſeful to us All.

The Supream Deity of the Peruans was of this Notion, as appeareth from his Name Pachacamac, which ſignifieth the Soul or Life of the World. And as Aratus ſtileth Jupiter μέγα θαῦμα, the great Wonder, ſo the Peruans are ſaid, (k) to have intituled their Deity Uſapu admirabile, or Wonderful. In the School of the Stoicks the Supream Deity is uſually intituled, (l) The Mind and Underſtanding of the whole, the common or univerſal mundane Nature, and the common Reaſon of Nature, the Hegemonic and Ruling Principle of the World, and (as Zeno defin'd God) A Spirit pervading the whole World. And in the Senſe of the Stoicks the Indians ſuppos'd (as Megaſthenes (m) in Strabo reporteth) that the God who is the Maker and Governour of the World, δι' ὅλω διαπεφοίτηκεν, pervadeth the whole of it. The Learned Romans Stoicize in their Notices of the Capitoline Jove, ſtiling him, (n) The Mind and Spirit, the Guardian and Governour of the Univerſe, the Artificer and Lord of this Mundane Fabrick, to whom every Name, Fate, Providence, Nature, the World, is agreeable. So true is that of Macrobius; (o) Jupiter amongſt the Theologers is the Soul of the World. The Soul moveth and governeth the Body, which it preſideth over, ſaith Cicero, (p) as that Chieftain God governeth the World. The Pagans in S. Auſtin ſay, (q) We worſhip Jove of whom Virgil ſaith, All things are full of Jove; that is, the oporteat de primo ſilere apud vulgus, cur efferre nefas in vulgus parentem Univerſi. Irrident enim non intelligentes, veluti à populari conſuetudine, craſſiſque auribus remota, quæ de eo dicuntur. Eóque cùm de legibus loqueretur, quas populo publicare oporteret, de magno illo & inſcrutabili Deo nihil eſt locutus, propoſito tantùm cœli cultu, ut cui de certa religione loquendum eſſet. Eugubin. ſupr. l. 5. c. 3.

---

(y) Viv. in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 9.

(z) Οὐ γάρ ἐστιν ἡμῖν καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις πᾶσιν, ὅστις ἐστὶν αἴτιος μᾶλλον τῶ ζῆν, ἢ ὁ ἄρχων τε καὶ βασιλεὺς τῶν πάντων.

(a) Σοφία μὲν καὶ νοῦς ἄνευ ψυχῆς οὐκ ἄν ποτε γενοίσθην. οὐκοῦν ἐν μὲν τῇ τῶ Διὸς ἐρεῖς φύσει, βασιλικὴν μὲν ψυχὴν, βασιλικὸν δὲ νοῦν ἐγγίνεσθαι.

(b) De N. D. l. 1.

(c) Ὁ μὲν θεὸς εἷς· αὐτὸς δὲ οὐχ ὥς τινες ὑπονοοῦσιν, ἐκτὸς τᾶς διακοσμήσιος, ἀλλ' ἐν αὐτῷ, ὅλος ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ κύκλῳ, ἐπίσκοπος πάσας γενέσιος, κρᾶσις τῶν ὅλων. πάντων πατὴρ, νοῦς καὶ ψύχωσις τῷ ὅλῳ κύκλῳ, πάντων κίνασις. J. Mart. de Monarch. Clem. in protrept. S. Cyr. c. Jul. Lactant. de ira Dei c. 11. Eugubin. ſupr. l. 3. c. 3. Gat. in Ant. p. 164, 165. Min. Fœl. p. 151.

(d) Pythagoras quoque unum Deum confitetur, dicens incorporalem eſſe mentem, quæ per omnem rerum naturam diffuſa & intenta, vitalem ſenſum cunctis animalibus tribuat.

(e) Αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ἐστὶ νοῦς καὶ ψυχὴ, καὶ τὸ ἁγεμονικὸν τῶ συμπάντως κόσμω. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 4.

(f) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 9.

(g) Hor. Apol. Hieroglyph. l. 1. n. 61.

(h) Ἀνάγκη καὶ νοῦς ἐστὶν, ἡ διήκουσα διὰ πάντων δύναμις. Plutarch. Pſychog. p. 1026.

(i) Ficin. de vita in Apolog.

(k) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 4.

(l) Ὁ τῶ ὅλω νοῦς καὶ διάνοια, ἡ κοινὴ φύσις, καὶ ὁ κοινὸς τῆς φύσεως λόγος, τὸ τῶ κόσμω ἡγεμονικὸν, πνεῦμα διῆκον δι' ὅλω τῶ κόσμω.

(m) L. 15.

(n) Sen. Qu. Nat. l. 2. c. 45.

(o) Jupiter apud Theologos eſt Mundi Anima. In Som. Scip. l. 1. c. 17.

(p) Ut hunc mundum princeps ille Deus. Ibid. l. 2. c. 12.

(q) Nos Jovem colimus, de quo ait Maro; Jovis omnia plena: id eſt omnia vivificantem ſpiritum. De Conſenſ. Evangel. l. 1. c. 23.

univerſal Spirit of the Mundane Syſtem vital and vivificative to the whole. From Varro the ſame Father repreſenteth the Supream Deity as the Mundane Syſtem's Animative Genius. (r) When Varro elſewhere calleth the Rational Soul of every one a Genius, and affirmeth ſuch a Mind or Soul of the whole World to be God, He plainly implieth, that God is the univerſal Genius of the World, and that this is he whom they call Jove. (s) Thoſe only ſeem to Varro, to have underſtood what God is, who thought him a Soul governing the World by Motion and Reaſon. Such a Soul of the World is call'd by the Stoicks πῦρ τεχνικὸν ὁδῷ βαδίζον εἰς γένεσιν, the artificial Fire orderly proceeding to the Generation of the things of the World. And of ſuch a Mundane Fiery Nature Plutarch (in the Life of Camillus) ſeemeth to interpret Numa's Fire-worſhip. For ſpeaking of the Veſtal Virgins flight from Rome becauſe of the Gauls; Some write (ſaith he) that they preſerv'd nothing but the ever-living Fire, which Numa had ordain'd, to be worſhipp'd as the Principle of all things; for Fire is the moſt active thing in Nature, and all Generation is Motion, or at leaſt with Motion; all other parts of Matter without warmth are ſluggiſh and dead, and crave the Influence of Heat as their Soul, which when it cometh upon them, they preſently fall to doing or ſuffering ſomething. Wherefore Numa, a Man very curious in ſuch things, and for his Wiſdom thought to converſe with the Muſes, did conſecrate Fire, and ordain'd it to be kept ever burning, in reſemblance of that Eternal Power which preſerveth and acteth all things. But it is not probable, that Numa's ſacred Fire related to a Stoical Fiery Deity, as Plutarch (who had little inſight into Theurgical Theology) ſeemeth to ſuppoſe; but his Inſtitution of Fire-worſhip was (doubtleſs) of the ſame nature with that of the ancient Magi, from whom by the way of Egypt he deriv'd both his Acroamatical Deity and his Fire-worſhip as alſo his averſation from Images.

V. Theſe Notices of a Coſmical Zeus (or a Mundane-Syſtem Jove) of the Exoterical kind, although they are Popular-Pagan (for it is not the Popular, but the Philoſophic Pagans and their Theology that have gain'd the great Reputation in the Chriſtian Church, amongſt the Rabbins alſo and the Muhammedan Sophiſts) yet have met with ſuch Approbation, that ſeveral both Jews and Chriſtians ſymbolize with them at a great rate. The Hebrew Doctors diſcourſe, (t) that the venerable Name, the Tetragrammaton, is form'd from thoſe four Letters Aleph, He, Vau, Jod, that theſe four Letters are as the Soul and Spirit of the reſt, without which they cannot be mov'd or pronounc'd; which denoteth the Nature of God, that He is the Soul of all things, and as R. Moſes ſaith, The Life of the World. (u) R. Jehuda Levi ſaith; As the firſt Cauſe is the Soul and Spirit of the World (which is alſo confirm'd by the Sacred Book Zoar, where the Bleſſed God is ſaid to be the Spirit and Soul of the Univerſe;) ſo in Man (who is ſtiled a little World) Intellect in Act is his Soul and Life. The Book Coſri (w) ſpeaketh favourably of thoſe Philoſophers, that (agreeably to theſe Popular Pagan Notices of a Deity) have compar'd the World to a great Man, and Man to a little World; that repreſent God as the Spirit, Soul, Intellect and Life of the World, as he is called חי העולם (a Name ſomewhat near the Life of the World) Dan. 12. 7. Philo proceedeth ſo far, as to call God the Soul of the World. (x) They that know not the Eſſence of their own Soul (ſaith he) how ſhould they exactly know the Soul of the Univerſe? Origen thus philoſophizeth touching the State of the World. (y) As our Body being one is made up of many Members, and is contained by one Soul: So I think, that the whole World is to be look'd upon as one huge Animal, which is contain'd as it were by one Soul, the Virtue and Reaſon of God. And this I ſuppoſe, the Scripture intimateth by that which the Prophet ſaith, Do not I fill Heaven and Earth? ſaith the Lord. And by that which S. Paul ſaith, when he preach'd to the Athenians, for in him we live, and move, and have our Being. For how is it, that we live, and move, and have our Being in God, but becauſe in his Virtue and Power he doth conſtringe and contain the whole World? Origen doth not call God the Soul of the World, but as it were the Soul of the World: yet if the World is an huge Animal, as he ſuppoſeth, God muſt be ſuppos'd to be the Soul of it.

Lactantius is of Opinion, that the Stoicks Supream Deity or the Mind of Jove is the ſame with the Logos or Son of God in the Chriſtian Theology; (z) for it is the Spirit of God (ſo this Author calleth the Son) which Zeno hath called the Mind of Jove. Tertullian hath alſo diſcours'd in favour of this Notion. (a) We have ſaid, that God made the World by a Word, and Reaſon, and Virtue; your Wiſe Men are alſo of Opinion, that Logos, that is, Reaſon or Speech, is the Artificer of the Univerſe. According to Zeno's determination, this is the Maker, that form'd all things in regularity, and is called by the Name of Fate, God, the Mind of Jove, and the Neceſſity of all things. Theſe things Cleanthes attributeth to a Spirit, which he ſaith is the Permeator of the Univerſe; and we alſo uſe the Name Spirit, to ſignifie the proper Subſtance of that Speech, and Reaſon, and Virtue, by which we ſay God made all things. Eugubinus followeth Lactantius, and confoundeth the Chriſtians Meſſiah with the Pagan Jove, ſo perverting the Holy Scriptures, confounding the Holy and Profane, Old and New, Humane and Divine, Mundane Nature and Goſpel-Grace; God and the World, Chriſt and Belial, the Kingdom of Darkneſs and of Light, unchriſtianizing the matters of Chriſtianity and paganizing the Believers of it. (b) He that manifeſted himſelf viſibly to all in the laſt Ages, was the very ſame, whom all Men ſometime venerated obſcurely, calling him Jove, Creator, Omni-regent; known to all Philoſophers, Religions, Ages.

Some ſuppoſe, that (not the Son, but) the Holy Ghoſt is the mundane Soul, which was the Pagans Jove and ſupreme Deity. This ſeemeth to be the Senſe of Paulinus, who ſpeaketh like one of the Stoicks, that call univerſal mundane Nature Deum mundo permiſtum, God permix'd with the World, (c) Who ſeeth not, that corporeal World to be govern'd by an incorporeal Virtue, and that by having the Mind of that Divine Spirit whereby it was made, infus'd and permix'd with the great Body of the Univerſe, the whole bulk hath agitation and vivification? All thoſe Writers of the Church (both the later and more ancient) that account the Platonic Triad the ſame with the Chriſtian Trinity, if they are conſiſtent with themſelves, do ſuppoſe the Holy Ghoſt, to be the ſame with the Platoniſts mundane Soul, which is the Pagan Jove. Theodoret ſaith, (d) He whom we call the Father, Plato calleth T'Agathon; he whom we call the Son and the Logos, he calleth the Intellect; and the Force which animateth and enliveneth all things, he calleth Soul, which the holy Scriptures call the Holy Ghoſt. Theſe things were ſtollen from the Philoſophy and Theology of the Hebrews. Theodoret is a Tranſcriber of Euſebius and ſpeaketh his Senſe (e) touching the Identity of the Platonic Triad with the Chriſtian, and of the Platonic Pſyche (mundane Soul) with the Holy Ghoſt of our Religion. So a late Writer of the Court of the Gentiles (citing alſo Lud. Vives for his Opinion) pretendeth to prove, (f) that Plato's Soul of the World is the Spirit of God, or God (which is a confounding the true God with the Pagan Jove) and calleth the Spirit of God the Increate mundane Spirit. The Alexandrian Cyril doth not ſuppoſe, that the Platoniſts Triad is abſolutely the ſame with the Chriſtian, or that their mundane Soul is abſolutely the ſame with our Holy Ghoſt: But (g) inſtead of the holy Spirit (ſaith he) they introduce a third, Pſyche, by whoſe implanting Life in them every Animal is animated, and they have attributed to it the Powers and Operations of the holy Spirit, which moveth all things that are moved, and containeth the Univerſe, and from which all things animate have their Animation and Vivification. This Father might as well have ſaid, that the holy Spirit is the mundane Soul, as to make it ſuch by his deſcription of it; for if the holy Spirit is of his Deſcription and Idea, it ought to be denominated the mundane Soul. There are other paſſages in ſome Ancient and Modern Writers that (more or leſs) Identify the holy Spirit and the mundane Soul, which will be remark'd hereafter.

(r) Cum alio loco dicit, Genium eſſe unius cujuſque animam rationalem, talem autem Mundi Animam Deum eſſe, ad hoc idem utique revocat, ut tanquam univerſalis Genius ipſe Mundi Animus eſſe credatur. Hic eſt igitur quem appellant Jovem. De C. D. l. 7. c. 13.

(s) Ibid. l. 4. c. 31.

(t) Menaſſ. ben Iſr. in Exod. Qu. 3.

(u) Idem Qu. in Gen. p. 27.

(w) *P.*274. ed. Buxt.

(x) Οἱ τὴν ἰδίας ψυχῆς τὴν οὐσίαν οὐκ ἴσασι, πῶς ἂν περὶ τῆς τῶν ὅλων ψυχῆς ἀκριβώσαιεν. Allegor. p. 39. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(y) Περὶ Ἀρχ. l. 2. c. 1.

(z) Eſt enim ſpiritus Dei, quem ille (Zeno) animum Jovis nominavit. L. 4. c. 9.

(a) Jam ediximus Deum univerſitatem hanc mundi verbo & ratione & virtute molitum. Apud veſtros quoque ſapientes λόγον, id eſt ſermonem atque rationem conſtat artificem videri univerſitatis. Hunc enim Zeno determinat factitatorem, qui cuncta in diſpoſitione formaverit, eundem & Fatum vocari, & Deum, & Animum Jovis & neceſſitatem omnium rerum. Hæc Cleanthes in ſpiritum congerit, quem permeatorem univerſitatis affirmat: & nos etiam ſermoni atque rationi, itemque virtuti, per quæ omnia molitum Deum ediximus, propriam ſubſtantiam ſpiritum inſcribimus. Apologet. c. 21.

(q) Qui ſe noviſſimis ſeculis viſibiliter omnibus declaravit, erat ille ipſe, quem olim obſcurè cuncti venerabantur, Jovem, Creatorem, regentemque omnia poteſtatem vocantes: Philoſophis, religionibus, ſeculis omnibus notum. De Per. Phil. l. 1. p. 9.

The mundane Soul is uſually call'd by the Stoicks Nature, common or univerſal Nature, and the Name is ſo well thought of by the Alexandrian Clemens, that he ſaith of the Stoicks; (h) They hold, that the final good is to live agreeably to Nature, the Name God being elegantly chang'd into that of Nature. The Stoicks ſay, the end of Philoſophy is to live according to Nature; Plato to be aſſimilated to God; Zeno had his Dogma from Plato. By Nature is meant Intelligent Nature, touching which Lactantius (who yet denieth, that the World is an Animal, and that God is the Soul of it) argueth; (i) Nature which you ſay, is the Origine of all things, if it have not Counſel, can effect nothing. But if it can generate and effect, it hath Counſel, and therefore muſt neceſſarily be God. Nor can that force be called by any other Name, wherein there is Providence to Excogitate, and Skill and Power to effect. Better therefore Seneca the moſt acute of the Stoicks, who ſaw, that Nature is nothing but God. This Argument may be us'd either in a Chriſtian or a Pagan Senſe. In a Chriſtian Senſe the intent of it is not to ſet up an univerſal mundane Intelligent Nature as God (which is a falſe and ſpurious kind of Deity:) But the intent of it is to ſay, that intelligent and provident Nature, the Origin of things, is God-propriety, it is ſomewhat of that which God is peculiarly and appropriately, and that they which aſſert ſuch a Nature muſt neceſſarily aſſert a Deity. But in the Pagan Senſe, the intent of it is to affirm, that univerſal mundane intelligent Nature is the Idea of God, that this Ideal Being or Perſon an intelligent Mind or Soul of the World is the Deity. And the Argument us'd in this Senſe in Conſort with Seneca, ſetteth up his Coſmical Jove for God; which is a Principle ſo far from ſaving Men from Paganiſm, that it muſt neceſſarily lapſe them into it. It is one thing, to ſay, that mundane-animative-intelligent Nature is God as being ſomewhat, that he comprehenſively and incluſively is; and another thing, to ſay, that mundane-animative-intelligent Nature form'd by the Pagans into a Jove is as ſuch God: The former Aſſertion is legitimate Theiſm, the latter is Heatheniſm. From which the Argument of Lactantius is not wholly excuſable, nor is this other of Minucius Fœlix, unleſs it be underſtood with due limitation of Senſe. (k) They that will have Jove the Chieftain (or Supreme) Deity, are deceiv'd in the Name, but touching one Soveraign Power they agree. The Poets ſpeak of one Father of Gods and Men, and that every Man is of ſuch a Mind as the Father of all every day induceth into him. The Mantuan Maro doth he not ſpeak more plainly, nearly and truly? When he ſaith, that a vital Spirit within nouriſheth, and an infus'd Mind agitateth Heaven and Earth, and the other parts of the World, whence Mankind and other Animals have their Origin? In another place he nameth that Mind and Spirit God. For he ſaith, that God paſſeth through the Heavens, the Earth and the Sea: Thence Men and Cattel, and Showers and Fire. What elſe do we ſay, that God is, but a Mind and Reaſon and Spirit? Unleſs Name ſignifieth Perſon (as it may and uſually doth) this Diſcourſe repreſenteth the difference between the God of Iſrael and the Pagan Jove as meerly verbal, not real.

(c) Quis non videt mundum um corporeum vi incorporea bernari, totamque molem, in- ſa atque permiſta magno uni- rſitatis corpori divini ſpiritus ente qua facta eſt, agitari ad itam? Ep. 38.

(d) Ὃν ἡμεῖς πατέρα κα- ῦμεν, τἀγαθὸν ὀνομάζοντα. ῦν δὲ, ὃν ἡμεῖς υἱὸν καὶ λό- ον προσαγορεύομεν. τὴν δὲ ὶ πάντα ψύχουσαν ϗ ζωοποι- σαν δύναμιν, ψυχὴν καλοῦντα, πνεῦμα ἅγιον οἱ θεῖοι προ- αγορεύουσι λόγοι: ϗ ταῦτα δὲ ὰ τῆς τῶν Ἑβραίων φιλοσο- ίας ϗ θεολογίας σεσύληται. θεραπ. Ser. 2. p. 33.

(e) Pr. ev. . 11. c. 0.

(f) B. 3. . 9. p. 24, 335.

(g) Ἀντὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος ρίτον εἰσκομίζουσι, ψυχὴν, ὑφ' ς καὶ ἅπαν ψυχοῦται ζῶον, ιείσης αὐτοῖς τὴν ζωὴν, καὶ ὰς τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος δυνά- μεις τε ϗ ἐνεργείας προσνενε- μήκασιν αὐτῇ. —— Κινεῖ γὰρ ὰ κινούμενα, ϗ συνέχει τὸ πᾶν αὶ ψυχοῖ ϗ ζωοποιεῖ. C. Jul. l. 8. p. 275, 276.

(h) Τὸ ἀκολούθως τῇ φύσει ζῆν τέλος εἶναι ἐδογμάτισαν, τὸν θεὸν εἰς φύσιν μετονομάσαντες εὐπρεπῶς. Strom. l. 2. p. m. 295. & l. 5. p. m. 433, 435.

(i) Natura à qua dicitis orta eſſe omnia, ſi conſilium non habet, efficere nihil poteſt. Si autem generandi & faciendi potens eſt, habet ergo conſilium; & propterea Deus ſit neceſſe eſt. Nec alio nomine appellari poteſt ea vis, in qua ineſt & Providentia excogitandi, & ſolertia poteſtaſque faciendi. Melius igitur Seneca omnium Stoicorum acutiſſimus, qui vidit nil aliud eſſe naturam quam Deum. L. 2. c. 9.

(k) Qui Jovem principem volunt, falluntur in nomine, ſed de unâ poteſtate conſentiunt. Audio poetas quoque unum patrem divûm atque hominum prædicantes; & talem eſſe mortalium mentem, qualem parens omnium in diem induxerit. Quid Mantuanus Maro? Nonne apertius, proximius, verius? Principio, ait, cœlum & terras, & cætera mundi membra Spiritus intus alit, & infuſa mens agitat: Inde hominum pecudumque genus, & quidquid aliud animalium Idem alio loco, mentem iſtam & Spiritum Deum nominat. Hæc enim ejus verba ſunt: Deum namque ire per omnes, terraſque tractuſque Maris, cœlumque profundum: Unde homines & pecudes, unde imber & ignes. Quid aliud & à nobis Deus, quàm Mens & Ratio & Spiritus prædicatur? P. 145, 146.

VI. The Coſmical Zeus of the Popular Pagans (univerſal mundane animative Nature, or the regial Mind and Soul of the World) may juſtly be thought the beſt ſort of Zeus or Jove in the Pagan Theology: But the Heatheniſm of this Idea will (in ſome degree) appear from the Original of it. For to this Notion of the Supreme Deity the Heathens were carry'd, partly by the firſt original Theiſm of their Inſtitution, and partly by their Method of proving the Exiſtence of a Deity againſt Atheiſm. The firſt Original Theiſm of their Inſtitution, or their eldeſt Idolatry (as is before diſcours'd) was the deifying the viſible Heaven or World as the ſupreme univerſal Deity or chief God. As amongſt the Chineſe, (l) ſome ſuppoſe, that the Sun, Moon and Stars, and chiefly Heaven it ſelf (whence the Earth deriveth all her Goods) muſt be worſhipp'd with all poſſible Devotion. Heaven which the elder times worſhipp'd as the Supreme God, was ſuppos'd Intelligent and animate, as Philo ſaith (not of the Magi, but) of the Popular-Pagan Chaldeans; (m) they thought this viſible Univerſe was either it ſelf the only Deity, or that the Soul of the Univerſe which it containeth, was ſuch. To ſubvert this Chaldaic Dogma, he introduceth Abraham perſuading the Chaldeans to deſiſt from their Aſtronomical Sublimities, from inquiries into the courſe of the Sun, Moon and Stars, as things above their reach, and to buſie themſelves in conſidering their own Nature, for by contemplating themſelves God and his Works may be underſtood. (n) For bethink your ſelves, as there is a Mind in us which hath the Rule and Principality, ſo the Univerſe is conſtituted. By which Paganical Method of teaching the knowledge of God Philo hath not deſtroy'd, but eſtabliſh'd the Chaldeans Dogma; for if God is to the World what our animative Mind and Soul is to our Human Body, the animated Univerſe is neceſſarily the Supreme Deity.

Which Idea of the Supreme Deity was a conſequent of the Pagans method of proving the Exiſtence of a Deity againſt Atheiſm; which hath much of ſound Reaſon and Philoſophy in it, but it involveth alſo the Godſhip of the World, which is of the ſame Importance in the Pagan Theiſm with the Exiſtence of a Deity. Plato's Theiſm which he aſſerteth againſt Atheiſm, is (as we have ſeen) the World's Animation. So Cicero diſputeth. (o) There is aſſuredly a Celeſtial Force or Power Divine. An animative Principle of Life and Sence which is in our Bodies and our meanneſs, is not wanting in the greatneſs of univerſal Nature and the illuſtrious Motion thereof. Unleſs perchance they think there is no ſuch thing, becauſe it is not viſible, nor ſenſible: As if our own Mind whereby we are Wiſe and Provident, whereby we do and ſay theſe very things, was viſible, or diſcernible by Senſe. The Philoſophic Emperor and others argue. (p) Can there be Order in thee, and none in the World? It is abſurd, to ſay, that the Heaven or viſible World is inanimate, (without Mind or Soul,) ſeeing we that have but a part of the Body of the Univerſe, have a Soul. For how could a part have Soul, if the Univerſe was devoid of it? Socrates's diſcourſe (with Ariſtodemus) againſt Atheiſm is thus repreſented by Cicero. The Humour and Heat and Earth and Breath which is in our Body, if any one asketh, whence we have them? It is manifeſt, that we took one of them from the Earth, another of them from the Water, the other from the Fire and Air. But that which ſurmounteth all theſe, Reaſon, Mind, Counſel, Cogitation, Prudence, where found we it? Whence took we it? Unde hanc Homo arripuit? Whence hath Man ſnatch'd to himſelf ſuch a thing as this? So the Father of the Stoicks (Zeno) diſcourſeth againſt Atheiſm. (q) What is devoid of Soul and Reaſon cannot generate an Animal and a Rational. But the World generateth Animals and Rationals: Therefore the World is an Animal and Rational. That which is Rational, is better than that which is not Rational: But nothing is better than the World. Therefore the World is Rational. In like manner, we may infer, that the World is Wiſe, that the World is Bleſſed, that the World is Eternal. So Balbus in Cicero diſcourſeth for the Theiſm of the Pagans (the Theiſts or Religioniſts of the mundane Syſtem) againſt Atheiſm.) (r) From that Ardor or vital Heat which is in the World, (the mundane Soul of the Stoicks) all Motion ariſeth: Which becauſe it is ſelf-moving, is neceſſarily a Mind. whence it followeth, that the World is an Animal. Hence alſo we may infer, that it is intelligent, becauſe the World is certainly better than any particular Nature, which is but part of the World. The World becauſe it comprehendeth all things, nor is there any thing which is not in it, is every way Perfect: Nothing can be wanting to what is (abſolutely) the beſt: There is nothing better than Mind and Reaſon: Theſe therefore cannot be wanting to the World. Wherefore it is Wiſe and God. At this rate theſe mundane Theiſts deify the World in their Diſputes againſt Atheiſm, which deſign to prove the Exiſtence of the animative Mind of the World, the acknowledgment whereof conſtituteth a (Pagan) Theiſt, and is that which diſtinguiſheth him from an Atheiſt. (s) All others affirm ἔμψυχον τὸν κόσμον καὶ προνοίᾳ διοικούμενον, that the World is animated and adminiſtred by Providence: But Democritus and Epicurus and ſo many as introduce Atoms and Vacuum (as the Principles of all things) do neither acknowledge the World to be Animant, nor to be govern'd by Providence, but by an irrational Nature.

(l) Alii Solem & Lunam ac Stellas Cœlumque præcipuè ipſum, unde cuncta in terras bona promanent, omni ſtudio colendum exiſtimant. Maffeius Indic. l. 6. p. 258.

(m) Οὗτοι τὸν φαινόμενον τοῦτον κόσμον ἐν τοῖς οὖσιν ὑπετόπησαν εἶναι μόνον, ἢ θεὸν ὄντα αὐτὸν, ἢ ἐν αὐτῷ θεὸν περιέχοντα τὴν τῶν ὅλων ψυχήν. Περὶ Ἀποικίας. P. 284. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(n) Λογιεῖσθε γὰρ, ὡς ἐν ἡμῖν ἔνεστι νοῦς, καὶ τῷ παντὶ ἐστι. Ibid. p. 285.

(o) Eſt, eſt profectò illa vis (vis Cœleſtis numenque Divinum:) Neque in his corporibus atque in hac imbecillitate noſtra ineſt quiddam quod vigeat & ſentiat, & non eſt in hoc tanto naturæ tam præclaro motu. Niſi fortè idcirco eſſe non putant, quia non apparet, nec cernitur: Perinde quaſi noſtram ipſam mentem qua ſapimus, qua providimus, qua hæc ipſa agimus, ac dicimus, videre aut planè qualis, aut ubi ſit ſentire poſſimus. Orat. pro T. Ann. Milone.

(p) Ἐν σοὶ μέν τις κόσμος ὑφίστασθαι δύναται, ἐν δὲ τῷ παντὶ ἀκοσμία; M. Ant. l. 4. S. 27. Ἄτοπον τὸν οὐρανὸν ἄψυχον λέγειν, ἡμῶν οἱ μέρος σώματος ἔχομεν τοῦ παντὸς, ψυχὴν ἐχόντων. Πῶς γὰρ ἂν τὸ μέρος ἔχειν, ἀψύχου τοῦ παντὸς ὄντος; Plotin. En. 4. l. 3. c. 7.

(q) Nihil quod animi, quodque rationis eſt expers, id generare ex ſe poteſt animantem compotemque rationis. Mundus autem generat Animanteis, compoteſque rationis. Animans eſt igitur Mundus compoſque rationis. Quod ratione utitur, id melius eſt, quàm id quod ratione non utitur. Nihil autem mundo melius. Ratione igitur mundus utitur. Similiter effici poteſt, ſapientem eſſe mundum: Similiter Beatum: Similiter Æternum.

(r) Quoniam ex mundi ardore motus omnis oritur, is autem ardor non alieno impulſu, ſed ſua ſponte movetur: Animus ſit neceſſe eſt. Ex quo efficitur, animantem eſſe mundum. Atque ex hoc quoque intelligi poterit, in eo eſſe intelligentiam, quod certè eſt mundus melior quàm ulla Natura. Mundus quoniam omnia complexus eſt, nec eſt quidquam quod non inſit in eo, perfectus undique eſt. Quid igitur poteſt ei deeſſe, quod eſt optimum? Nihil autem eſt mente & ratione melius. Ergo hæc mundo deeſſe non poſſunt. Sapiens igitur eſt: Et propterea Deus. Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(s) Plutarch. de placit. Phil. l. 2. c. 3.

In their Diſputes againſt Atheiſm the Pagan Theiſts deſign to eſtabliſh their own Theiſm, which is their Religion of Coſmolatry, Uranolatry, Aſtrolatry. For their Regial Mind and Soul of the Univerſe (for whoſe Exiſtence they diſpute) is univerſal mundane animative Nature, animative of the World, (as the Soul of Man is of his Body) complicate with the World, deifying to the World. In the Stoicks account of the mundane Syſtem (t) there are various complications of Jupiter and the World; and they are ſo complicated, that each communicateth to the other his Name and his Properties. For the Deity is called the World. Vis Deum Mundum vocare? non falleris. If you call the Deity the World (ſaith Seneca,) you are not Miſtaken in ſo doing. And as the Deity is called the World (both the whole and the parts of it) is called God, according to that of Manilius.

> Quà pateat Mundum Divino Numine verti,
> Atque ipſum eſſe Deum. ———
> The World is govern'd by the Deity, and is it ſelf the Deity.

There is alſo a Communication of Properties between God and the World. For the Stoicks God is round and of Globoſe Form (whence their Deity was derided as being ſine capite & præputio, without Human Form,) and this is from the World. The Stoicks World is wiſe and abſolutely the beſt, and this is from God.

VII. The Stoicks Theology in this account of it is of a mean and ſorry appearance; and there is an appearance of very great Diſſonance between their Pedantry and the ſublimer ſort of Platonic Theology; which yet doth not hinder, but that in ſeveral reſpects there is a great Symphony between theſe two Theologies. For as the Platoniſts Triad is nothing better than a Ternary of their Univerſal Phyſiological Principles of the Univerſe: So the Stoicks Deity is nothing better than a Principle of their mundane Phyſiology, which divideth univerſal mundane Nature into two Parts: (u) εἰς τὸ ὑλικὸν καὶ εἰς τὸ αἰτιῶδες, that which is paſſive and material, and that which is active and formal, (the one is God, the other is the Matter,) which are two Principles of the Univerſe of things, that by their neceſſary Connexion and Union conſtitute the whole animate Syſtem, as Man is conſtituted of Soul and Body. The Deity they call (w) Nature, common Nature, the Catholic Soul, the Mind of the Univerſe, containing in it and under it all ſeminary Reaſons or Spermatic Principles, a Spirit immixed with all the parts of the World, God permix'd with the World; which are none of the ſublimeſt Attributes and Appellatives. But in this their Deity of the meaner ſort of Appellatives, there is (x) T'Agathon, Nous, Pſyche (the Names of the Platonic Triad;) and how far their Moral T'Agathon tranſcendeth the Platoniſts Myſtic-Metaphyſical T'Agathon, appeareth from the devout Cleanthes's deſcription of what Good is.

> Τ'ἀγαθὸν ἐρωτᾶς μ' οἷον ἔς', ἄκουε δή.
> Τεταγμένον, δίκαιον, ὅσιον, εὐσεβές·
> Κρατοῦν ἑαυτοῦ, χρήσιμον, καλὸν, δέον·
> Αὐστηρὸν, αὐθέκαστον, ἀεὶ συμφέρον·
> Ἄφοβον, ἄλυπον, λυσιτελὲς, ἀνώδυνον·
> Ὠφέλιμον, εὐάρεστον, ὁμολογούμενον.
> Εὐκλεὲς, ἄτυφον, ἐπιμελὲς, πρᾶον, σφοδρόν·
> Χρονιζόμενον, ἄμεμπτον, ἀεὶ διαμένον.

> I tell the Nature of the Good,
> That may be clearly underſtood.
> Ordinate, not Vicious,
> Beneficent, Juſt and Pious,
> Self-imperant, Due, Beauteous,
> Auſtere and ſtrict, Innoxious,
> Fearleſs, Griefleſs, Honourable,
> Profitable, Pleaſant, Stable,
> Devoid of Faſtus, Provident,
> Diſpaſſionate, yet Vehement,
> Unſtain'd by Defect or Crime,
> Not limited by any time.

One great and real difference there is between the Stoicks, Platoniſts and other Pagan Theologers touching the Supreme Deity, which we ought to remark; for ſome of them were Monadiſts, others Dyadiſts, others Triadiſts, and ſome were reputed Atheiſts. The Stoicks that diſtinguiſh'd not any Archical Hypoſtaſes, were Monadiſts, Pſychical Monadiſts, as holding one univerſal deifying Soul of the World, and no higher Deity. Anaxagoras that was reputed a kind of Atheiſt by the Pagan Religioniſts, and vehemently declaim'd againſt by Socrates and Plato (amongſt others,) muſt be called a Monadiſt, a Mental but no Pſychical Monadiſt, his Hypotheſis of a ſolitary ſeparate Nous being deſtructive of the Stoicks and Platoniſts deifying Soul of the World (the Coſmical Zeus of the Pagan Religion) and Atheizing the World and the illuſtrious parts of it. He muſt be called a Monadiſt, becauſe of what Plotinus ſaith of him. (y) Anaxagoras aſſerting a pure and unmix'd Mind, maketh the firſt Principle ſimple and a ſeparate Unity. Xenocrates was a Dyadiſt in a twofold Senſe: (z) For he ſuppos'd two Archical Hypoſtaſes or Principles, one of which hath the Name of a Dyad; that both a Monad and a Dyad were Gods, the one Maſculine, having the order of a Father, which he calleth Zen and Mind, and which is alſo to him the firſt God: The other Feminine as it were the Mother of the Gods, which is alſo to him the Soul of the Univerſe: The former of theſe Deities (Monad or Zen) Xenocrates ſuppoſeth ἐν οὐρανῷ βασιλεύουσαν, reigning in Heaven, the ſecond of them (the Dyad or mundane Soul) τῆς ὑπὸ τὸν οὐρανὸν λήξεως ἡγουμένην, having its rule and prefecture under Heaven. Whence it appeareth, that this Hypotheſis of a Dyadiſt is nothing more than the Section or Partition of the Popular Pagans Coſmical Zeus into two Archical Hypoſtaſes (Mind and Soul;) and therefore the difference between the Stoicks and Dyadiſts Theiſm ſeemeth not very conſiderable.

Nor is the Platoniſts diſtinction of Archical Hypoſtaſes (which yet is a great and real difference between the Stoical and Platonical Theiſm) of any value or conſideration in Matter of Religion: Nor are they the better Religioniſts upon account of it. The Stoicks are thought groſly criminal in making God no higher than the Soul of the World: But this groſs criminality is no ſingularity of theirs, the Platoniſts are alike criminal and do the ſame thing; for they degrade the Supreme Deity of their Religion into the Rank and Condition of the Soul of the World, the deifying Soul

(t) Jacob. Thomaz. Diſſert. p. 178.

(u) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 7. c. 5. & Gat. in Ant. p. 145. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 4, 5.

(w) Φύσιν, φύσιν κοινὴν, τὴν ψυχὴν καθολικὴν, τὸν τοῦ ὅλου νοῦν, τὸν ἐν τῇ ὕλῃ λόγον, λόγον σπερματικὸν τοῦ κόσμου, ſpiritum omnibus partibus immiſtum, Deum mundo permiſtum.

(x) Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 439. προτρεπτ. p. m. 35. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 13.

(y) Ἀναξαγόρας δὲ νοῦν καθαρὸν καὶ ἀμιγῆ λέγων, ἁπλοῦν καὶ αὐτὸς τίθεται τὸ πρῶτον, καὶ χωριστὸν τὸ ἕν. En. 5. l. 1. c. 9.

(z) Stob. Eccl. Phyſ. p. 5.

of the World, Plato's Pyſche conſtituting the World a Deity as well as the Stoicks. (a) This World is a God by the Soul of it: So the Sun is a God becauſe animated, and the other Stars. So Plato in his Tenth of Laws proveth the Godſhip of the Heavens, and the heavenly Bodies becauſe they are animated. (b) Becauſe a Soul or Souls virtuous with all ſort of Virtue, are demonſtrated to be the Cauſes of all theſe, we will affirm, that they are Gods. Now, if the World be deify'd, deify'd at ſuch a rate; if ſuch a Foundation be laid for Coſmolatry, Uranolatry, Aſtrolatry; it is all one as to the buſineſs of true Religion and the Service of God, whether we ſay, that God is the informing Soul of the World, or only the aſſiſting Soul of the World; whether the World be deify'd by an in-mundane or a ſuper-mundane Soul. As ſome of the learned Diſpute, (c) that the Pſyche which Plato contendeth for in his Tenth Book of Laws, is not ψυχὴ ἐγκόσμιος, an in-mundane Soul (the immediate Soul of the mundane Animal,) but purely ὑπερκόσμιος, a ſuper-mundane Soul, and that this is the third Hypoſtaſis of the Platonic Triad. But there is great Reaſon to think the contrary, and that ſuch a meer ſuper-mundane Soul is altogether alien from the Platonic Inſtitution; that the Coſmical Zeus of the Popular Pagans (the ſame with the Stoicks) is the third Hypoſtaſis of the Platonic Triad (there are but three Archical Hypoſtaſes in Platoniſm, and the Introduction of a fourth is a grand incongruity,) and that one and the ſame Soul is both ὑπερκόσμιος, ſuper-mundane and ἐγκόσμιος, in-mundane, whence the Platoniſts (although they ſpeak of a ſuper-mundane Soul, yet) uſually call the World the third God, which is Plotinus's Language. The ſame Author intituleth Human Souls (d) the Siſters of the Soul of the World and of the ſame Species with it (which ſpeaketh it in-mundane,) as alſo the Souls of the heavenly Bodies. (e) As if you ſhould ſuppoſe an animated City comprehenſive of other animated Cities, the Soul of that animated comprehenſive City would be more perfect and powerful: Yet nothing hindreth, but the Souls of the other Cities may be of the ſame Nature. Certainly, a Soul of this deſcription is an in-mundane Soul; and if the Fathers underſtood Platoniſm aright, the third Hypoſtaſis of the Platonic Triad is an in-mundane Soul. (f) The Platoniſts affirm, that the (viſible) Gods have moſt happy Souls, yet fetter'd in eternal Bodies, the celeſtial in fiery Bodies, but the Soul of Jove himſelf (whom they will have to be the World) inclos'd in all the Elements of this corporeal bulk, which reacheth from Earth to Heaven. For this Soul is ſuppos'd by Plato, to be diffus'd and extended by muſical Numbers from the Center of the Earth to the ſummity of Heaven, ſo that this World is an huge Animal, moſt happy and eternal, whoſe Soul hath the perfect felicity of Wiſdom, and never deſerteth its Body, and whoſe Body liveth for ever by its inclos'd Soul, and retardeth it not in its operations. Moreover, It is evident beyond all Diſpute, that the mundane Soul which Plato diſputeth for in his Tenth of Laws, is a deifying Soul of the World; whence it unavoidably followeth, that it is an in-mundane Soul. Nor is there any thing in Platoniſm of a contrary appearance, which the Platoniſts themſelves (g) have not anſwered, or which is not before conſider'd. For agreeably to Plotinus's Senſe (which is before conſider'd) the other Platoniſts that intitle their mundane Soul ὑπερκόσμιος, ſuper-mundane, ſuppoſe it alſo ἐγκόσμιος, in-mundane, as Jamblichus's Text ought to be read. (h) By the eternal ſuper-mundane and in-mundane Soul God maketh the Worlds.

VIII. The animative Genius of the mundane Syſtem (as Varro calleth Jove) inferreth the Unity of the Univerſe, that all things are one, one animate mundane Syſtem. (i) The chief Philoſophers have declar'd, that All is one. So Linus in Stobæus. (k)

Omnia ſunt unum, ſunt omnis ſingula partes.
All things are parts of the Univerſe, and that All is one.

The unity of the Univerſe (which ſo far as it claſheth with the divided ſtate of it according to Chriſtianity, is a grand irreligious miſtake) is a grand Maxim in the Stoicks Theology. (l) This whole (ſaith Seneca) in which we are contain'd, is both one thing and God. This All, the comprehenſion of Divine and Human things, is one thing: We are the Members of one great Body. The Univerſe is ſuppoſ'd to be one Body becauſe of its informing Soul, which connecteth and holdeth together the parts of it. (m) For if there was not one animative Force pervading through All, the Univerſe could not be wiſely and well govern'd. So Sextus Empiricus repreſenteth the Senſe of Pythagoras, Empedocles, and all the Italic Philoſophers. (n) We Men have not only a Conjunction amongſt our ſelves with one another and with the Gods above us, but alſo with the Brute-animals below us: Becauſe there is one Spirit which as a Soul pervadeth the whole World, and uniteth together all the parts of it. The Pagan Theologers thought it a grand abſurdity, to ſuppoſe the Univerſe a meer mechanical Structure. (o) For the Structure of the World ought not to be like an inanimate Houſe great and multifarious, of Wood, Stone and other Materials regularly numbred: But it ought to be vigilant every where and vital with great Diverſity. The vital Conſtitution of the Univerſe is the Origin of Natural Magic, wch is a vital Sympathy and Antipathy between ſeveral things in the World, according to that of Plotinus, (p) the true Magick is the Friendſhip and Inimicalneſs that is in the Univerſe. But under the pretext of Natural Magick the Pagan Theologers introduc'd all the Artifices of their Technical and Theurgical Magick. Reſolving the operations of Art Magick (in the foul Senſe) into an (q) ἕνωσις καὶ ἡ συμπάθεια τοῦ παντὸς, Union, Alliance and Sympathy of the whole mundane Compages, ſuch as is amongſt the parts of an Human Body, or the Strings of a muſical Inſtrument; (r) for there is (ſaith Syneſius) a Sympathy and Conſent amongſt the parts of the Univerſe, as being parts of one whole. Into this they reſolve the Efficacy of (s) Charms and Faſcinations, of Philtres alſo (ſome of which are Magical in the foul Senſe,) the Efficacy of their Myſtic Ceremonies, Symbols, Sacrifices (which are ſuppos'd Cognate and Congenial to ſeveral Deities,) the Efficacy of Prayer to the Sun and Stars, which putteth them into Motion, and attracteth influxes from them, in the ſame manner, as when the lower part of a Chord that is ſtretch'd, is put into Motion, the upper part is put into Motion alſo. For this reaſon Pythagoras forbiddeth the ſacrificing a Cock, becauſe ally'd to the Sun and Moon; which is ſaid to be an Indication (t) of the Unity, mutual Connexion, Sympathy, and Conſent that is between the parts of the World. But although there are many unqueſtionable Inſtances of a marvellous Sympathy (u) that is in Nature (ſuch as that of a young Woman, who was grievouſly tortur'd in her Joints, when her Father at a great diſtance was broke upon the Wheel) yet theſe Sympathies being altogether heterogeneous do not at all countenance the Sympathies of the Pagan Theologers Theurgical Magick.

(a) Διὰ ταύτην ὁ κόσμος ὅδε θεός ἐςι δὲ καὶ ἥλιος θεὸς, ὅτι ἔμψυχος, καὶ τὰ ἄλλα ἄςρα, Plotin. En. 5. l. c. 1, 2.

(b) Ἐπειδὴ ψυχὴ μὲν ἢ ψυχαὶ πάντων τούτων αἰτίαι ἐφάνησαν, ἀγαθαὶ δὲ πᾶσαν ἀρετὴν, θεοὺς αὐτὰς εἶναι φήσομεν.

(c) Intell. Syſt. p. 562, 576, 594.

(d) Ibid. p. 593.

(e) Οἷον εἰ πόλις ἔμψυχος ἦν περιεκτικὴ ἐμψύχων ἄλλων, τελειωτέρα μὲν πόλεως καὶ δυνατωτέρα, οὐδὲν μὲν ἐκώλυε τῆς αὐτῆς φύσεως εἶναι καὶ τὰς ἄλλας. Plotin. En. 4. l. 8. c. 3.

(f) Deos dicentes habere beatiſſimas animas & tamen Æternis corporibus illigatas, Cœleſtes quidem igneis, Jovis autem ipſius animam, quem mundum iſtum volunt, omnibus omnino corporeis Elementis, quibus hæc tota moles, à terra in cœlum ſurgit, incluſam. Hanc enim animam Plato ab intimo terræ medio quod Geometræ centrum vocant, per omnes partes ejus uſque ad Cœli ſumma & extrema diffundi, & extendi per numeros muſicos opinatur, ut ſit iſte mundus Animal maximum, beatiſſimum, ſempiternum, cujus Anima & perfectam ſapientiæ felicitatem teneret, & corpus proprium non relinqueret, cujuſque corpus & in Æternum ex illa viveret, & eam quamvis non ſimplex, ſed tot corporibus tantiſque compactum hebetare atque tardare non poſſet. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 13. c. 17. vid. S. Cyr. C. Jul. l. 4. p. 147. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 20. Theodor. Θεραπ. Ser. 2.

(g) Alcin. de Doctr. Plat. c. 14.

(h) Διὰ τῆς ἀϊδίου τῆς ὑπερκοσμίου καὶ ἐγκοσμίου ψυχῆς δημιουργεῖ τοὺς κόσμους. De Myſt. p. 98. Gale not. p. 249.

(i) Ἓν τὸ πᾶν ſapientum Principes prodiderunt. Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 17.

(k) Πάντα δ' ἕν ἐςιν, ἕκαςτ' ἑνὸς μέρος. Grot. Excerpt. p. 150.

(l) Totum hoc quo continemur, & unum eſt, & Deus eſt. Totum hoc quo divina & humana concluſa ſunt, unum eſt: Membra ſumus corporis magni. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 8.

(m) Attic. ap. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 15. c. 12.

(n) Μὴ μόνον ἡμῖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους καὶ πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς εἶναι κοινωνίαν, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς τὰ ἄλογα τῶν ζώων· ἓν γὰρ ὑπάρχει πνεῦμα τὸ διὰ παντὸς κόσμου διῆκον Ψυχῆς τρόπον, τὸ καὶ ἑνοῦν ἡμᾶς πρὸς τὰ ἐκεῖνα. Adv. Matth. p. 331.

(o) Οὐ γὰρ δὴ ὥσπερ ἄψυχον οἰκίαν μεγάλην ἄλλως καὶ πολλὴν ἐκ τινων εὐαριθμήτων κατ' εἶδος, οἷον λίθων καὶ ξύλων· εἰ δὲ βούλει καὶ ἄλλων τινῶν εἰς κόσμον, ἔδει αὐτὸ γεγονέναι· ἀλλ' εἶναι αὐτὸ ἐγρηγορὸς πανταχῇ καὶ ζῶν ἄλλο, ἄλλως. Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 16.

Their one animated mundane Syſtem is neceſſarily one mundane Animal; upon which account they attribute a Magical Conſtitution to the Univerſe. For they ſuppoſe, (w) that this Univerſe is one, and one Animal, ſo that nothing is ſo remote, as not to be near, becauſe of the Sympathy and συγκίνησις, or Conſent of Motion, which is between the parts of one Animal. As an Animal the Univerſe is conſtituted of Soul and Body; as a Rational intelligent Animal it is conſtituted of Mind, Soul and Body, ὅλον δὶ ὅλου ψυχῆς καὶ νοῦ πλήρες, throughout full of Soul and Mind, (x) as Julian expreſſeth this Paganic Dogma. An Animal Fabrick muſt have diſtinction of Parts: So the Stoicks ſay, that God is the Mind of the Univerſe, the Body of it is his Body, and the Sun, Moon and Stars are the Eyes of this great mundane Animal. The mundane Animal was thought Hermaphroditick (becauſe a generative Animal) both Sexes are attributed to it in Jarchas the Brachman's Anſwer to Apollonius. (y) The World is an Animal; for it generateth all things, being of both Natures, Male and Female, and doing the part both of Father and Mother for Generation. The World conſiſting of active and paſſive Nature, and becauſe the Virtue of generating and conceiving (the Maſculine and Feminine Virtue) are conjunct in univerſal Nature, is not ineptly intituled ἀῤῥενόθηλος, Male and Female: (z) So Orpheus and Triſmegiſt alſo call Nature and the mundane Jove Male and Female. And in imitation of theſe mundane Theiſts Syneſius hath aſſum'd the boldneſs, to ſalute his Supreme Deity in this manner.

Σὺ δὲ ἄῤῥην, σὺ δὲ θῆλυς.
Thou art both Male and Female. Hymn. 2.

The Popular Pagans call their Deities (a) ſometimes by Maſculine and ſometimes by Feminine Names (in the Septuagint alſo Baal is ſometimes of the Maſculine and ſometimes of the Feminine Gender,) not pretending to know their Sexes; or judging it a matter indifferent, which of the Sexes they aſcrib'd to their Deities; or perhaps ſuppoſing them Hermaphroditick: But touching the true God Piety alloweth no ſuch arbitrarious uſe of Names. The true God is neither a Maſculine nor a Feminine Imperial Dignity, but muſt be called by ſuch Names of Imperial Dignity (God, Lord, King,) which denote an Imperial Dignity of the nobler kind of Idea. To ſuppoſe the Godhead a Goddeſs, Lady or Queen, is not a genuine legitimate Idea, thoſe Names of Imperial Dignity being complicate with ſomewhat of blemiſh and imperfection, are a ſpice of Blaſphemy and Reproach; for (as Buxtorf ſaith,) it is not agreeable to the Divine Majeſty, that his Name be of Feminine termination.

IX. The one animate mundane Syſtem is alſo one Deity, (b) ſome ſay the firſt God, others the ſecond, and ſome call it the third God. In the Stoicks Theology the World is the ſupreme God: But Philo (having a greater regard to the Platonic Philoſophy than to the Religion which he profeſs'd) often diſputeth, (c) that the World is not the firſt God. The Platoniſts uſually call it the third God: But Origen ſaith, that they call it the ſecond God. Which is very agreeable to what Plato ſaith in his Timæus (according to Cicero's Verſion of it) Deus ille æternus hunc perfectè beatum Deum procreavit, that God who belongeth to unchangeable Eternity procreated this perfectly happy God. The viſible, ſenſible, fabricated World (which belongeth not to unchangeable Eternity) being thus confronted to an inviſible, intelligible, parental Deity conſider'd in general only, and in a ſuſpence Notion (without deſcending to the conſideration of diſtinct Archical Hypoſtaſes) in this Antitheſis and mode of conſidering things, it falleth to the World's ſhare, to be called the ſecond God. So the Suppoſititious Triſmegiſtic Books often call the viſible World the ſecond God, ſometimes tranſcribing Plato's Language. (d) The Lord of Eternity is the firſt God, the ſecond is the World. The World is call'd by Plato in the cloſe of his Timæus μονογενὴς, Unigenit; and Theodoret (e) citeth a Verſe of Parmenides, which ſo calleth the World.

Μοῦνον, μουνογενές τε καὶ ἀτρεμὲς, ἠδ' ἀγένητον.
Sole, Unigenit, and Immote, and Ungenerate.

If the Attribute ἀγένητον be underſtood, to ſignifie, that the World is ſelf-originate, as Theodoret underſtandeth it, there will be an enormous contradiction in Parmenides's Poetry; for the World cannot be Unigenit if it be Self-originate and abſolutely ungenerate. By Ungenerate therefore Parmenides muſt mean that which is not ſubject

(p) Ἡ ἀληθινὴ μαγεία, ἡ ἐν τῷ παντὶ φιλία καὶ τὸ νεῖκος αὖ. En. 4. l. 4. c. 40.

(q) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 80.

(r) De Inſomn. p. 134.

(s) Plotin. ſupr. Jambl. de myſt. p. 124. Gale not. p. 271.

(t) Τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ἑνώσεως, καὶ ἀλληλουχίας, συμπαθείας τε καὶ συμπνοίας. Jambl. προτρεπτ. p. 146.

(u) Etmuller. T. 2. p. 977.

(w) Πᾶν τοῦτο τὸ ἕν, καὶ ὡς ζῶον ἕν· ζώου τε ὄντος καὶ εἰς ἓν τελοῦντος, οὐδὲν οὕτω πόῤῥω τόπῳ ὡς μὴ ἐγγὺς εἶναι τῇ τοῦ ἑνὸς ζώου πρὸς τὸ συμπαθεῖν φύσει. Plotin. En. 4. l. 4. c. 32.

(x) Orat. in Ant. p. 164. Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. Diſſ. 10. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 37.

(y) Ζῶον τὸν κόσμον, ζωογονεῖν γὰρ τὰ πάντα· ἀμφοῖν, ἄρσενός τε θηλείας φύσεως· αὐτὸν γὰρ αὐτῷ ξυγγινόμενον, τὰ μητρός τε καὶ πατρὸς εἰς τὴν ζωογονίαν πράττειν.

(z) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 419. Jupiter & mas eſt, & neſcia Fœmina Matis.

(a) Seld. de D. Syr. Synt. 2. c. 2.

(b) Orig. C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 235.

(c) Περὶ Ἀβραάμ. p. 245. Περὶ Ἀποικίας. p. 285. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(d) Æternitatis Dominus Deus primus eſt, ſecundus eſt mundus. Aſclep. c. 6.

(e) Θεραπ. Ser. 2.

ject to Generation and Corruption; and in ſuch Senſe the World is ſuppos'd to be both Ungenerate and Unigenit, which Attribute ſpeaketh it an only Son of God. So Celſus the Platoniſt (f) and the Triſmegiſtic Books have intituled the animated World the Son of God. And conſequently there is in Platoniſm a twofold Son of God; the one is the Metaphyſical Intellect of the Mundane Syſtem, the other is the Intelligent Mundane Animal, the only begotten ſenſible Son of God. Philo throughly imbib'd theſe Platonic Notions; for of the High Prieſt's Robes (which repreſented the World) he giveth this Account. (g) They were inſtituted in the firſt place, that the High Prieſt might have about him a manifeſt Repreſentation of the Univerſe, by the continual beholding whereof he might live a Life worthy the Nature of the whole. In the next place, that in his Sacred Miniſtrations the whole World might co-officiate with him; for being conſecrated Prieſt to the World's Father, it was hugely convenient, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἐπάγεσθαι πρὸς θεραπείαν τοῦ γεγεννηκότος, that the Son ſhould be made a Party in the Worſhip of the Father, (h) ἵνα συνιερουργῇ καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἀνθρώπῳ, to conjoyn the World with Man in the Sacred Miniſtration. Sometimes he diſtinguiſheth two Sons of God, the Seniour and the Juniour, (i) the Intelligible and the Senſible, ſtiling the viſible World νεώτερον υἱὸν θεοῦ, the younger Son of God, (k) τὸν μόνον καὶ ἀγαπητὸν αἰσθητὸν υἱόν, the ſole and belov'd ſenſible Son. And ſometimes this extravagant Allegoriſt preſcribeth to the World a Life of Devotional Duty to its Father. (l) Βίος γὰρ ἐμπρεπὴς κόσμῳ, τῷ πατρὶ καὶ ποιητῇ συνεχῶς καὶ ἀδιαστάτως εὐχαριστεῖν; ſuch a Life becometh the World, to give thanks continually to its Father and Maker. The World's Religious Life (being no Figurative Expreſſion) ſpeaketh it Animated and Intelligent; and therefore Philo muſt be ſuppos'd to acknowledge not only the two firſt Archical Hypoſtaſes, but the third Platonic Archical Hypoſtaſis (m) τὴν τοῦ παντὸς ψυχήν, the Soul of the World; nor is it a reaſonable thing in him, to refuſe the Godſhip of the World, acknowledging its Sonſhip to God in the Platonic Notion.

The one Mundane Syſtem is alſo intituled one Temple, Houſe or Habitation and Deiform Statue; all which Appellatives denote ſuch an Unity and undivided State of the Univerſe, which is diſſonant from Chriſtianity. (n) The Habitation of the Immortal Gods is one of the uſual Names of the World. One Philoſopher calleth it, The Temple of the Father; another calleth it A moſt holy and God-becoming Temple; another ſtileth it The Fire-refulgent Houſe of Jove. By Cicero it is intituled the Celeſtial and Divine Houſe; and by the Egyptians, the Kingly Houſe of the Deity. Is God ſhut up within the Walls of Temples? ſaid Heraclitus. (o) The whole World variouſly adorn'd with Animals, and Plants, and Stars is his Temple. So the Stoicks ſay, (p) The whole World is the Temple of the Gods, and the only Temple becoming their Amplitude and Magnificence: Whence the Perſians and their Magi condemn'd all artificial Temples, and Xerxes (by the perſwaſion of the Magi) burnt the Temples of the Greeks, themſelves doing their Religious Worſhip to the Gods under the open Heaven, to whom they ſuppos'd, that all things ſhould be open, and that this whole World is their Temple and Habitation. Zeno in like manner (the Father of the Stoicks) is ſaid, to have diſallow'd the building of Temples; and Plato (as Clemens (q) will have it) privately prohibited the having Statues of the Gods, as knowing, that the World is the Temple of God. The World is call'd by him, (r) The Houſe of the Gods; and in his Timæus, The made Image of the Gods that belong to Eternity (a Deiform Statue) whereby he meaneth, what Plotinus ſaith, that the viſible World is a conſpicuous and illuſtrious Statue of the Intelligible Gods. Philo diſtinguiſheth two Temples of God: (s) One is the Rational Soul; and the Prieſt of this Temple is the true Man: The other is the World; and the High-Prieſt in this Temple is the Divine Primogenit Logos. This ſenſible World (ſaith he) is nothing elſe but the Houſe of God, a comely and ready-furniſh'd ſenſible Houſe of God. And we ought to ſuppoſe this whole World τὸ μὲν ἀνωτάτω καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἱερὸν θεοῦ, the Supream Temple of God and that which is truly ſuch, which hath Heaven (the moſt holy part of the ſubſtance of things) for its holy place, the Stars are its Anathemata or Ornaments, and the Prieſts of it, the Sub-miniſters of his Powers, are the Angels and the ſeparate Souls. Agreeably to Philo and the Philoſophic Pagans the Apocryphal Book of Baruch (ch. 3. 24.) looketh upon the viſible Univerſe as the Houſe of God; but no ſuch Language ever occurreth in the Holy Bible; from which ſilence of the Holy Scriptures, the Chriſtian Apologiſts ſhould have learn'd ſo much Warineſs and Diſcretion, as not to ſpeak the Senſe and Language of the Philoſophic-Pagans, which they ordinarily do. (t) A Chriſtian, even an unlearned one, (ſaith Origen) is perſwaded, that every place of the World is a part of the whole, and that the whole World is the Temple of God. What Temple (ſaith S. Cyprian) can God have, whoſe Temple is the whole World? He needeth not a Temple, whoſe Houſe is the World; a Divine Temple, ſaith Lactantius. This World (ſaith he) is one Houſe of God. So Minutius Fœlix ſaith, This whole World is to God one Houſe. But theſe Chriſtian Writers ought to have conſider'd, that there are Apartments and Incloſures in the Univerſe; that this lower World is not an holy place, but (u) ſedes ac domicilium in quo omne quotidie perpetratur nefas, the Seat and Manſion-houſe of all manner of Wickedneſs, which is daily perpetrated in it; that although God is preſent every where, yet his eſpecial preſence, his Houſe and Temple is not every where, nor is it any where, but where his dwelling Houſe is, the place of his Reſidence and his Holy Habitation, where he is a Domeſtick; for this is the Notion of a Temple. But God neither animateth nor inhabiteth the whole World ſave only in a large improper Senſe.

X. As the Pagan Theologers ſuppoſe, that All is One, ſo they alſo ſuppoſe that One is All, and that in many varieties of Senſe. The firſt Senſe that I will take notice of, is imply'd in an excellent Paſſage of Plotinus, which befriendeth Piety at a great rate. (w) If any one ſaith, that a Virtuous Soul is oblivious in this ſort, he will ſpeak truly; for ſhe fleeth

(f) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 308.

(g) Περὶ Μοναρχ. 2. p. 505.

(h) Περὶ ὀνειρ. p. 406.

(i) Quod Deus ſit immutab. p. 201.

(k) Περὶ μέθης, p. 166.

(l) Quis rer. divin. Hær. p. 345. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(m) V. Philon. opuſc. p. 70.

(n) Deorum immortalium domicilium. Τὸν ναὸν τοῦ πατρός. Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 46. Ἱερὸν ἁγιώτατον καὶ θεοπρεπέστατον. Plutarch. de Tranquill. an. p. 477. Τὸν τοῦ Διὸς πυριλαμπῆ οἶκον. M. Tyr. Diſſ. 3. Cæleſtis & divina domus. Cic. de N.D. l. 2. Βασίλειος οἶκος. Hor. Apoll. Hierogl. l. 1. n. 58.

(o) Ep. ad Hermod. p. 51.

(p) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. diſſ. 7. v. Macrob. in ſom. Scip. l. 1. c. 14. Eugub. de Per. Phil. p. 253. Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(q) Str. l. 5. p. m. 426.

(r) Θεῶν οἶκος. Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 23. Τῶν ἀϊδίων θεῶν γεγονὸς ἄγαλμα. Eugub. de Per. Phil. l. 3. c. 11. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 6. c. 3. p. 347. Ἄγαλμα ἐναργὲς καὶ καλὸν τῶν νοητῶν θεῶν. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 8.

(s) Περὶ ὀνειρ. p. 406, 403. Περὶ φυτουργ. p. 150. Περὶ μοναρχ. 2. p. 562. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(t) Χριστιανὸς δὲ, καὶ ὁ ἰδιώτης, πάντα μὲν τόπον τοῦ κόσμου πέπεισται εἶναι μέρος τοῦ ὅλου, ναοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ ὄντος τοῦ παντὸς κόσμου. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 362. Quod vero Templum habere poſſit Deus, cujus Templum totus eſt Mundus? S. Cypr. Quod Idol. Dii non ſint, n. 63. Non indiget Templo, cujus domicilium mundus eſt. Lactant. Epit. c. 2. Divinum Templum. De Ira D. c. 14. Hic mundus una Dei Domus eſt. Idem Inſtit. l. 4. c. 29. Deo una Domus eſt, mundus hic totus. Min. Fœl. p. 318.

(u) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 7

(w) Ὥστε ὁ ἐπιλήσμονα ἂν τ λέγων τὴν ἀγαθήν, ὀρθῶς ἂ λέγοι τρόπῳ τοιούτῳ· ἐπεὶ κ φεύγει ἐκ τῶν πολλῶν, καὶ τ fleeth from the many, and collecteth the many into one, diſmiſſing what is interminate and endleſs; for thus ſhe liveth, not with the many, but diſburdened and with her ſelf alone; for while ſhe is here below, when ſhe would be there above, ſhe diſmiſſeth all other things. But it is in the Senſe of their Number-kind of Theology, that the Pagan Theologers uſually ſay, One is All. (x) The Hen that is before the many, being the cauſe of the many, precontaineth the many in himſelf Unitively, being All before All. In this Senſe the old Metaphyſical Theologers (Parmenides, Xenophanes, Meliſſus) uſe this Maxim, ἓν τὸ πᾶν, One, the Univerſe or All; for their meaning is, that the Platonic Monad is virtually and originally All things. A ſimple Unite is the vaſt Univerſe of things; which grand Maxim of the Number-Theology hath the ſound of an high-flown unintelligible Paradox; accordingly the Orator (y) cenſureth Meliſſus as abſurdly Paradoxical; for whereas there is an infinite multitude of things, he went about to demonſtrate, that One is All. The Paradoxical Stoicks pretend to no ſuch Myſtic-Metaphyſical Paradoxes (that a ſimple Unite is virtually and originally all things;) but in their Theology (or Phyſiology) One is All; for the Mundane Syſtem Jove is the Univerſe of things δημιουργικῶς, demiurgically, and alſo συνοχικῶς, ſelf-containingly. (z) He alone is all things, containing his own work, not only without but within. In a like Senſe the ſecond Archical Hypoſtaſis in Platoniſm (the Mundane Syſtem's Archetypal Intellect) is One and All things; for he is that Animal which containeth all other Animals in it as its parts (as Plato ſpeaketh;) the intelligible All things is coexiſtent with him and inexiſtent in him; and he is the ſenſible All things Demiurgically, and (in ſome ſort) ſelf-containingly. (a) Having the fulneſs of Ideas in himſelf, he containeth all things in himſelf.

Πάντα γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁμοῦ ἐν κόσμῳ τῷγε νοητῷ.
For all things are together in this Intelligible World.

The firſt Archical Hypoſtaſis in Platoniſm (τὸ ἓν, the Henotety) is alſo cauſal of the Unity of All, as well as of the Exiſtence of All; and in this Senſe it is ἓν τὸ πᾶν, cauſally the one Univerſe, or the cauſe why the Univerſe is one; for this Archical Hypoſtaſis is πάντων κέντρον, the Centre of the World or Univerſe, according to that known ſaying of Plato in his Epiſtle to Dionyſius, (b) About the King of all things All things are. So the Platoniſts ſay of the firſt Hen, (c) It is the Centre of all Beings and about it all Beings, and all the Gods have their Eſſences, and Faculties, and Operations; ſo that the whole Univerſe or the Mundane Syſtem is (as Heraclitus ſpeaketh) ἐκ πάντων ἓν, καὶ ἐξ ἑνὸς πάντα, One conſiſting of All, and All from One. (d) There is a proceſs of all from one, a recourſe and reduction of all unto one, and the Empire of one over all, which maketh a Communion between the Gods in this World and thoſe pre-exiſting in the intelligible. The Fontral and Central one is the cauſe of the Unity and undivided ſtate of the Univerſe.

In the Stoicks Phyſiology the one Mundane-Syſtem Jove is All things, not only Demiurgically and Self-containingly, but He is all things and All things are Him as his Parts and Members. Particular Souls are μόρια Θεοῦ καὶ ἀποσπάσματα, parts of God and Avulſions from Him; viſible corporeal things are the Parts and Members of his Body. (e) If God is the Mind of the World, and the World his Body, ſo that the whole is one Animal conſiſting of Mind and Body; and that Deity be a deep Cavity of Nature (ſinus quidam naturæ) containing all things in it ſelf, ſo that from his Soul which is vivificative to the whole bulk the Souls of all things that have Life are taken according to every one's Lot; there remaineth nothing, which is not a part of God. There is yet a further meaning of God's being all things in the Stoicks Phyſiology; for all things (as they ſuppoſe) conſiſt of the Deity. (f) Univerſa ex materia & ex Deo conſtant; All things conſiſt of God and the Matter, which are ſuppos'd to make up one compleat Subſtance. If all things conſiſt of God and the Matter, God is all things as in part their conſtitutive Subſtance, and conſequently All is God. Moreover, as a Man is ſometimes diviſively defin'd (the parts of which he is conſtituted are diviſively conſider'd) as when he is ſaid to be the Intelligent Soul of an Animal Body (and therefore he may be defin'd comprehenſively, the Compound of both theſe:) So when the Stoicks define Jove the Intelligent Mind and Soul of the World, this diviſive Definition inferreth, that he is in the whole comprehenſion of himſelf both that Intelligent Soul and the Mundane Body, or the Compound of both theſe the animated World, which is manifeſtly Unum & Omnia, One and All things. Their Deity is ſo intimate, complicate, united and connex'd with all things (Totus ſuis partibus inditus, ſaith Seneca) as to conſtitute with them one Mundane Intelligent Animal; therefore the whole Animated World and all the things thereof are Jove, and Jove is the Animated World and the things thereof.

Jupiter eſt quodcunque vides. ——

Agreeably to the Stoicks (for the main) the Orphic Verſes Theologize, and the old Egyptian Theology ſymbolizeth with them in their cant of God's being all things; for ſuch the Egyptians counted their Iſis, one and all things, as appeareth from an Inſcription upon an Altar at Capua (before-mention'd) and from this other before her Temple at Sais; Ἐγώ εἰμι πᾶν τὸ γεγονός, καὶ ὂν καὶ ἐσόμενον; I am all that hath been, is, and ſhall be. Which Inſcriptions plainly demonſtrate, that Iſis is no Acroamatical Deity, but a Deity of the Exoterical Theology (for the Popular-Pagan Religioniſts were concern'd in theſe Inſcriptions) that Iſis in theſe Inſcriptions is taken κοσμικῶς, Coſmically, and can be no other Deity but Univerſal, Animative, Mundane Nature, the very ſame Deity with the Stoicks Mundane Syſtem Jove. Agreeably to which Account Iſis is intituled by Apuleius, (g) rerum Natura parens, the parental Nature of things (which is both Mother and Nurſe to all the things of Nature, and therefore they made her Multi-mammia, all over full of Breaſts, to ſignifie her feeding all things) the origin of the Fruits of the Earth, the perpetual Savioureſs of Mankind, that hath a Motherly Affection for the Miſerable, the Mother of the πολλὰ εἰς ἓν συνάγει, τὸ ἄπειρον ἀφιεῖσ. οὔπω γὰρ καὶ οὐ μετὰ πολλῶν, ἀλλ᾽ ἐλαφρὰ καὶ δι᾽ αὐτῆς. ἐπεὶ καὶ ἐνταῦθα ὅταν ἐκεῖ ἐθέλῃ εἶναι, ἔτι οὖσα ἐνταῦθα, ἀφίησι πάντα ὅσα ἄλλα. Enn. 4. l. 3. c. 32.

---

(x) Τὸ πρὸ τῶν πολλῶν ἓν αἴτιον τῶν πολλῶν ὑπάρχον, προείληφεν ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὰ πολλὰ κατὰ μίαν ἕνωσιν, πάντα ὂν πρὸ πάντων. Simplic. in Epict. p. 210.

(y) Iſocrat. Helen. Laud. initio.

(z) Solus eſt omnia, opus ſuum & extra & intra tenet. Sen. Nat. Qu. Procem.

(a) Τῶν δὲ ἰδεῶν πλήρης ὤν, διὰ τούτων ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὰ ὅλα περιείληφε. Procl. in Tim. p. 95.

(b) Περὶ τὸν πάντων βασιλέα πάντ᾽ ἐστίν.

(c) Πάντων ἐστὶ τῶν ὄντων κέντρον, καὶ περὶ αὐτὸ πάντα τὰ ὄντα, καὶ πάντες οἱ θεοὶ τάς τε οὐσίας καὶ τὰς δυνάμεις καὶ τὰς ἐνεργείας ἔχουσι. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 2. c. 21. p. 27.

(d) Ἥτε ἀφ᾽ ἑνὸς πρόοδος, καὶ εἰς ἓν τῶν ὅλων ἀναγωγή, καὶ ἡ τοῦ ἑνὸς πάντη ἐπικράτεια συνάγει τὴν κοινωνίαν αὐτῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ θεῶν πρὸς τοὺς ἐν τῷ νοητῷ προϋπάρχοντας. Jambl. de Myſt. p. 159. & 33.

(e) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 12.

(f) Sen. Ep. 65.

(g) V. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 7. c. 2.

the Gods, Mother of the Stars, Parent of Times, Lady of the whole World, Chief of the Gods, Queen of the Seas, Lady of all the Elements. Athenagoras giveth a like account of the Goddeſs Iſis; (h) They ſay, that Iſis is the Nature of the World, from which all ſpring, and by which all exiſt. In the ſame Author Minerva or Neith (which at Sais in Egypt (i) was one of Iſis's Names) is ſaid to be ἡ φρόνησις διὰ πάντων διήκουσα, Wiſdom or Providence paſſing through all things; which is a Deſcription of Intelligent Animative Mundane Nature, which was the Supream Deity of the Pagans Religion and Laws, and was worſhipp'd as ſuch throughout the whole Pagan World; as Apuleius ſaith of Iſis, * That being but one, the whole World venerated her in a multiform manner with various Rites and under manifold Names. Iſis therefore was the Supream Univerſal Numen, of which the World of Popular Pagans were the Religioniſts, which was no other than the Mundane Syſtem, the Nature of the whole (as Strabo ſpeaketh,) Univerſal Animative Mundane Nature, which in its whole Comprehenſion is all things collectively, the whole animated World; and therefore God is all things, and there is not any thing, which is not God, as the Egyptians Theologiz'd; which ſpeaketh the Unity of the Univerſe at a prodigiouſly extravagant rate.

XI. To ſuch a pitch of Extravagance the Popular Pagans proceeded in their Religion; but ſome of the Philoſophic Pagan Theiſts (ſo accounted) are ſaid, to proceed to an higher pitch of Madneſs and Impiety in ſenſing their Dogma of One being All, or of God's being All things. For the Pagan Myſticks in the Eaſtern parts ſuppoſe, (k) that there is one firſt Principle of all things, perfectly wiſe, but mindleſs and unintelligent of the Affairs of the World, living in perfect Eaſe and Happineſs; that by long Meditation they get acquaintance with, and arrive at the degree of the Firſt Principle, which is the ſtate of perfect Quietiſts; and they diſcard the plain and obvious truths of Religion (touching Mens ſubſiſtence in a future ſtate) for this grand Arcanum of theirs, that all Subſtances are nothing elſe but an Extenſion or Expanſion of God's own Subſtance (all Subſtances are the Divine Subſtance expanded,) Creation is nothing elſe but an Extraction or Extenſion which God maketh of his own Subſtance, and the deſtruction or diſſolution of things is nothing elſe but a reſuming or taking up again of this Divine Subſtance and their relapſe into the Firſt Principle. (l) Such Myſticks are thoſe, that ſay, their Souls are created out of God's Subſtance, that when they die, they ſhall be what they were before, as a Cup of Water refunded into the Fountain whence it was taken; and that after the Day of Judgment all Men good and bad will be but one and the ſame Eſſence of God, which will remain without action to all Eternity. (m) Such Myſticks there are amongſt the Judaical Cabaliſts, which deny the Creation of any Subſtance, and ſuppoſe all things to conſiſt of the Divine Eſſence as of their material conſtitutive cauſe. Many places there are in the Book Emek Hammelek, which plainly import, That all things are made of God as of their material Cauſe, that there is but one Subſtance in the World, and that all Subſtance is neceſſarily exiſtent. Chriſtendom hath produc'd a Generation of Philoſophic Enthuſiaſts, that philoſophize at the ſame rate of extravagance; for about the end of the twelfth Century (n) Dinantius publiſh'd his Dogma, Deum eſſe materiam primam (that God is the firſt Matter) which all things are made up of. And the Cant of his Maſter Amalricus was, Omnia ſunt Deus, Deus eſt Omnia; All is God, God is All; the Creator and the Creature are the ſame. God is therefore ſaid to be the End of all, becauſe all things ſhall return into Him, that they may immutably reſt in God, and remain one unchangeable Individuum. And as Abraham is not of one Nature, Iſaac of another, but both are of one and the ſame; ſo all things are one, and all things are God; for he affirm'd, that God is the Eſſence of all Creatures. So Joannes Scotus Erigena (who imbib'd his Myſticks from the Books of the Counterfeit Dionyſius) had taught before him, that all things are God, and God is all things. Servetus is charg'd with this delirous Conceit, (o) That all Creatures conſiſt of the proper Subſtance of God, and that he doubted not to affirm touching any thing that was ſhew'd him (as a Stool) that it is the Subſtance of God. Fanaticks ſtill hold on the ſame Cant; When we conſider Univerſal Nature and the Properties thereof, then we contemplate the Father. God is all things, and whatever is made, is made of or out of God. The whole Univerſe is God, the Earth and Water not excepted, (p) ſaith a known Familiſtical Myſtick. It is not to be ſuppos'd, that theſe delirous Fanaticks deſign downright Atheiſm; for their Hypotheſis is Atheiſm inverted: the Atheiſts ſuppoſe, that Univerſal Matter is the only Deity; on the contrary theſe Enthuſiaſts ſuppoſe, that God or the Divine Eſſence is the Univerſal Matter, and conſequently is All things as their material conſtitutive Cauſe.

Some of the Familiſtical Tribe declining this way of the Cabaliſtical Myſticks, have made Chriſt the Univerſe of things, not as their material conſtitutive Cauſe, but in the way of Orpheus and the old Egyptian Theologers; who though they did not abſolutely confound or identifie Zeus or Iſis with the Univerſal Matter, yet they ſo far confounded them, that the Mundane Syſtem Jove is in his whole comprehenſion All things (the whole Animative Mundane Syſtem) and all things are parts of Jove. The Word made Fleſh (ſaith a certain Preacher) is the whole Tree of Being uncreated and created, the Root, the Body with all the Branches, putting forth themſelves into one little Top-branch, now withering, that through its Death they may renew all to a freſh and flouriſhing Spring. A Divine of our own hath exhibited a Scheme of this Familiſtical Sophiſt's and his Fellows Theology. (q) They ſay, that God is the Fountain of Being by emanation, as the Sun is of Light; and that his Eternal Wiſdom is Jeſus Chriſt in the firſt Inſtant or Nature; that the firſt Creature which emaneth from him, is a perfect univerſal Mind, the Platform of all the reſt of the Creation, and that this is Jeſus Chriſt in his ſecond Nature and Notion, which Arius knew, but did ill to deny his Divine Nature; that this Univerſal Spirit or Mind maketh all the World beſides, and is in them all: and ſo the whole Creation elſe was Chriſt's firſt ſhadowy Image or Body; that the Angels are the nobleſt parts of this, and that the Deity firſt, and Chriſt's Super-angelical Nature next, is one in them all, and they one with him, as the Beams with the Sun, and as the lower part of the Sun-beams with the parts next the Sun: That the

Soul

(h) Ἣν φύσιν αἰῶνος ἐξ ἧς πάντες ἔφυσαν, καὶ δι᾽ ἧς πάντες εἰσὶ, λέγοντες. Legat. p.24.

(i) Plutar. de Iſ. p. 345.

* Cujus numen unicum multiformi ſpecie, ritu vario, nomine multijugo, totus veneratur orbis.

(k) Poſſevin. Biblioth. l. 10. c. 2, 3, 5. Bernier's Memoir. T. 3. p. 178. *Semedo's Hiſt. p.*90.

(l) Jac. Thomazii Diſſert. p. 19, 20.

(m) Dr. H. More confut. Cabal. Aetopædo. Meliſ. T. 1. p. 927.

(n) Jac. Thomaz. ſupr. p. 199, &c.

(o) Verba Serveti ſunt: ex propria Dei ſubſtantia eſſe omnes creaturas. Item, ſe non dubitare, & ſcamnum hoc & quicquid oſtenditur, Dei ſubſtantiam eſſe. Melancthon. Exam. Theol. de Deo, p. m. 55.

(p) V. Dr. H. More ſupr. p. 538.

(q) Mr. Baxter Cathol. Theol. Par. 3. p. 311, 312.

Soul of Man is the next part of Chriſt's ſhadowy Image, into which he deſcended, and ſo into all Bodies; and as into a ſpecial, into that Body born of the Virgin Mary, and in that and in other Bodies he dieth, and deſcendeth to his lowеſt ſtate; and then (as the Sun) doth riſe again and bring all back to the ſtate of pure Spirituality in his Super-angelical Nature, whence all ſprang. Here are ſeveral intermixtures of Platoniſm in this Idea; for a perfect Mind the Platform and Opificer of the Creation, is a Platonic Principle; and the Phraſeology of a ſhadowy Image or Body is Platonic alſo; but according to the Platoniſts, this ſenſible World is not the ſhadowy Image and Body of the perfect Mind (which hath no Body;) but it is rather to be call'd the ſhadowy Image and Body of their Mundane Pſyche; for they ſtyle it, (r) τὸ ἴνδαλμα καὶ τὸ εἶδος τῆς ψυχῆς, the Image of Soul, from which they ſuppoſe it to iſſue, and to be form'd by a continual emanation; for they ſay, (s) This World is an Image, that is always in fieri or in aſſimilation. If the World is Chriſt's Body; if He is the Univerſe of Beings; if Men, Animals and other parts of the Univerſe are his Parts or Members, He is neceſſarily the ſame Hypoſtaſis with the Platoniſts Mundane Pſyche, and conſequently with Orpheus's and the Stoicks Mundane Syſtem Jove, the Egyptians Iſis, and the Popular Pagans Coſmical Zeus. Wherefore in this miſhapen Scheme of Theology there is a confuſed Jumble of two Platonic Archical Hypoſtaſes; a ground is laid for Coſmolatry, Uranolatry, Aſtrolatry, (and all manner of Creature-worſhip;) and Heatheniſm is ſubſtituted inſtead of Chriſtianity. (t) The Spirit of Nature is ſuppos'd, to be the plaſtick part of this Soul of Chriſt extended through the whole World, which Soul is ſuppos'd to be hypoſtatically united with God, and ſo God will be hypoſtatically united with the World, God and the whole Univerſe will be one Hypoſtaſis. The God, Chriſt, and Chriſtianiſm of ſuch wild Religioniſts, is of the Character, which Euſebius giveth of the Egyptian Theology, (u) Such is the Egyptians miſhapen Atheiſm rather than Theiſm.

XII. The one Mundane Syſtem Jove is in ſome ſort the multitude and variety of the Pagans Gods and Goddeſſes; and there is a certain Polytheiſm of theirs, which is nothing more than the Polyonymy of this one Supreme God. For it is not unuſual with the Pagan Theologers, to reduce the multitude and variety of their Deities to one Jupiter in various Senſes and upon various Accounts. Sometimes they conſider the Coſmical Zeus as originally and comprehenſively the All of their Deities, as Valerius Soranus repreſenteth them (w).

Jupiter omnipotens, Regum Rex ipſe Deûmque,
Progenitor Genitrixque Deûm, Deus unus & omnis.
Omnipotent Jupiter, the King of Kings and Gods,
The Progenitor and Genitrix of the Gods, one God and all Gods.

Jupiter is all the Gods; not as if there was no Polity of Gods; but as the Founder (the Father and Mother) of the Polity, and as a Deity comprehenſive of all the Deities; for Jupiter is the ſame with Pan (Univerſal Mundane Nature) whom in the Certamina at Athens (x) they look'd upon as a Pantheon, the Comprehenſion of all the Gods. So the Author of the Orphic Verſes (y) having ſuppos'd the World a great Animal, and having call'd this Mundane Animal Jupiter, (z) he placeth Heaven, the Earth, the Sea, and the whole of the Univerſe in Jupiter's Womb.

Πάντες τ' ἀθάνατοι μάκαρες θεοί, ἠδὲ θέαιναι.
And all the bleſſed immortal Gods and Goddeſſes.

The Rabble of Deities contained in him are neceſſarily his Parts and Members, both as He is Politically Imperial, and as He is Animatively Vital; in a Political and in a Phyſiological Senſe; they are the Members of his Body Politick and of his living Animal-Body; as Seneca ſaith of Mankind, & ſocii ejus ſumus & membra, we are his Aſſociates (the Members of his Body Politick) and the Members of his Animal-Body. Both theſe Notions are glanc'd at by the Poet introducing Jupiter thus ſpeaking to the other Gods.

Cœlicolæ mea membra Dei, quos noſtra poteſtas
Officiis diviſa facit. ——
Ye Gods my Members, to whom my Imperial Power allotteth diverſity of Offices.

The Gods to whom Jupiter allotteth diverſity of Offices, are not meer Names or Virtues, but ſo many ſubſtantial Beings, diſtinct perſonal Deities; yet theſe being contained in him, are in ſome ſort reducible to him; but there is another ſort of Deities, which the Stoicks ſuppoſe to be nothing more than ſo many ſeveral Names, Notions and particular Conſiderations of the one Supreme Jupiter, or only ſo many ſeveral Powers, Virtues, Functions and Agencies of his fictitiouſly perſonated and deify'd; and the reduction of theſe to the one ſupreme God is (according to their Hypotheſis) nothing more than his Polyonymy; which Polyonymy of the one Supreme God is a principal Theorem (a) of the Philoſophic-Pagan Theology, and at firſt ſight may ſeem a great Theory; but really it is a pompous futility, that maketh a great ſhew, but hath nothing valuable in it, ſave only that it importeth the Pagans honourary acknowledgment of one Supreme Deity, and explicateth an eminent Mode of their Idolatry.

For the Stoicks Polyonymy of the one Mundane Syſtem Jove ſignifieth nothing, but that the ſupreme Deity is capable of a great diverſity of Names, both according to his univerſal Nature (ſuch as Zeus, Pan, Genius, Iſis, Minerva,) and according to particular conſiderations of Him, as pervading the ſeveral parts of the world, and diſplaying his various powers and agencies in it. (b) Pervading, acting, and ruling in the Air, He may be call'd Juno; in the Earth, Pluto; in the inferiour parts of it Proſerpina; in the Sea, Neptune; in the lower part of it Salacia; in the Vineyards, Liber; in the Smith's Forges, Vulcan; and in the domeſtic Hearths, Veſta. As he beſtoweth Corn, he may be called Ceres; Wine, Bacchus; Health, Æſculapius; as he governeth the Wars, Mars; and the Winds, Æolus. (c) The Names that denote a certain Force and Effect of things Celeſtial are any of them properly applicable to Him. His Appellatives may be as many as his Gifts or Functions.: which Polyonymy of the one ſupreme God inferreth, that the Pagans Polytheiſm was in part not real, but apparent only. Their Theologers ſuppos'd (as Alexander the Peripatetick in his Book of Providence (d) expreſſeth his ſenſe,) that all things are full of the Deity, who pervadeth all Beings. (e) Παντοίαις δυνάμεσι τὰ πάντα πληρῶν, filling all things with his various powers. Which various powers

of

(c) Quæcunque voles illi nomina propriè aptabis, vim aliquam effectumque cæleſtium rerum continentia. Tot appellationes ejus poſſunt eſſe, quot munera. Sen. de Benef. l. 4. c. 7.

(r) Plotin. En. 2. l. 3. c. 18.

(s) Οὗτος ὁ κόσμος εἰκὼν ἀεὶ εἰκονιζόμενος. Plotin. ibid.

(t) V. D. H. M. ubi ſupr. p. 438.

(u) Τοιαύτη ἡ Ἀιγυπτίων ἀ-[illegible]ήμων ἀθεότης μᾶλλον ἢ θεολογία. Pr. Ev. l. 2. c. 1.

(w) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 7. c. 9.

(x) V. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 3.

(y) Euſeb. Pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 9.

(z) Procl. in Tim. p. 95.

(a) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 7. c. 7.

(b) Ibid. l. 4. c. 11.

(d) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 3. p. 82.

(e) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 13.

(f) Ad 4. Thebaid.

of the Coſmical Zeus the Magi (as Luctatius upon Statius (f) ſaith, abuſively ſet forth as ſo many diſtinct perſonal Deities, (g) and endeavour'd to call the Deity by the ennoblement of very many Deities. Such Deities are plainly fictitious, and conſequently the Philoſophical Theology is in ſome degree fabulous; for as the Mythical Theology perſonateth and deifieth the parts and powers of mundane corporeal nature: ſo the Philoſophical Theology perſonateth and deifieth the ſeveral Powers, Virtues and Agencies of the one ſupreme God. In this mythical way the Pagans pretended to worſhip (h) τὸν ἀμέριστον καὶ τὸν μεμερισμένον νοῦν, the undivided and divided Mind or Soul, by which plea they defend their Worſhip of the ſeveral parts of the corporeal World. For their Polyonymy of the one ſupreme God was not deſign'd to deprive the parts of the World of all their Godſhip; but to give a plauſible account and reaſon of their Worſhip. (i) The Virtues of the one ſupreme God (ſaith Maximus Madaurenſis) diffus'd throughout the whole World we invoke under very different Names, becauſe we know not what his proper Name is. Whence it cometh to paſs, that whilſt we proſecute with our Supplications his as it were divided members ſeverally, we muſt neceſſarily be judg'd to worſhip the whole Deity. (k) Many (Pagans) the moſt ancient eſpecially, agree in this, that Deus was Anima Mundi, the World was animated by God, as our Bodies are by our Souls. Whence they concluded, as ſome later Romaniſts do, that all or moſt viſible Bodies might be religiouſly worſhipp'd or ador'd with reference to God's reſidence in them. The intentional worſhipping God in the Creatures is an eminent mode of Pagan Idolatry.

(g) Et quaſi plurimorum Numinum nobilitate Deum appellare conati ſunt.

(h) Jul. Firm. de err. prof. rel. p. 19.

(i) Ep. 43. inter Ep. S. Aug.

(k) Dr. Jackſon Orig. of Unbelief. ch. 19.

XIII. The Supreme Deity in the Stoicks Theology is ſuperlatively Polyonymous upon a twofold account: both becauſe of a phancy which they had, to apply to him the proper names of other Deities; and becauſe they diſcarded the Deities, which they called Mythical and Commentitious. Agreeably to their humour of changing the Names of things they applied to the ſupreme Deity the Names of other Deities, allegorically interpreting and ſenſing their proper Names. (l) We Stoicks make account, that he is Liber Pater, Hercules and Mercury. Liber Pater, becauſe He is Parental to all, and the Inventor of the force of Seeds. Hercules, becauſe of his invincible force. Mercury, becauſe with him is Reaſon, Number, Order and Science. (m) In ſuch things as theſe they pleas'd themſelves, applying (as the Platoniſts did alſo) the vulgar Mythicals to their Myſticals. In this ſenſe the Orphic Verſe may be underſtood (which may be alſo underſtood to ſignify, that Jupiter is all the Deities originally and comprehenſively.)

(l) Sen. de Ben. l. 4. c. 8.

(m) Lipſ. in loc. Plotin. En. 3. l. 6. c. 19. En. 5. l. 8. c. 4, & 13.

Εἷς Ζεύς, εἷς Ἀΐδης, εἷς ἥλιος, εἷς Διόνυσος.
Jupiter, Pluto, the Sun and Bacchus are one.

Another Origin of the Stoicks Superlative Polyonymy was their diſcarding the Deities call'd by themſelves the Mythical and Commentitious (which are things Phyſical repreſented by fictitious Deities;) for having diſcarded theſe fictitious Deities, they ſubſtituted in their ſtead the various Powers, Virtues, Effects and Agencies of the Coſmical Zeus. (n) Calling him Minerva, becauſe his Hegemonicon is extended in the Ether; Juno as pervading the Air; Vulcan, Neptune, Ceres, as pervading and acting in the Artificer's Fire, in the Sea and the Earth. So Balbus in Cicero (before cited) having rejected the Deities, which he calleth the Mythical, ſubſtituteth in their room God paſſing through the Nature of every thing. Agreeably to which Stoical Notion it is moſt reaſonable, to underſtand the ſaying of Antiſthenes the Cynick in his Book called Phyſicus, (o) Populareis Deos multos, naturalem unum eſſe dicens, that is, one natural God ought to be ſubſtituted in the ſtead of thoſe many popular Deities, which the Stoicks and their Brethren the Cynicks rejected as the Mythical and Commentitious.

(n) Laert. in Zenone.

(o) Cic. de N. D. l. 1.

Some unwiſe Theologers ſuppoſe, (p) that the Ancients were no Polytheiſts, that the Egyptians Inſtitutes (which they account a Pædagogy to the ſublime Myſteries of the Chriſtian Theology) were alien from Polytheiſm: But they called one God by various Names, to ſignifie his various Effects in the World. Such a Polyonymy of one God (excluſive of all Polytheiſm) is much what as likely to be found in Paganiſm, as that a Serpent ſhould be an Hieroglyphic of the Chriſtian Theology's Son of God. The Stoicks Polyonymy is ſo far from deſtroying the Pagans Polytheiſm, that it maketh no conſiderable abatement in the multitude of their Deities. For they deify'd the parts of the Corporeal World as living Members of the mundane Animal, Reſidences of the Powers and Virtues of the Supreme God, Sections of the mundane Soul, (q) Chryſippus affirmeth, that the World is God, and the univerſal Diffuſion of its Soul. Although they ſeem to reduce all the Deities properly belonging to the mundane City locally underſtood to the Polyonymy of one Supreme God, yet both Varro and Balbus plainly affirm, (r) that the Stars are animated with intelligent Souls (they might as well ſay the ſame of the Earth,) and conſequently they are ſo many diſtinct perſonal Deities. But ſuppoſe, they abate the number of Deities properly belonging to the mundane City locally underſtood, yet they extravagantly inhance that other Fry of Deities the Inhabitants of the mundane City, which they multiply without end or meaſure; whence Plutarch repreſenteth the Stoical Polyonymiſts as the moſt extravagant Polytheiſts in all the pack, (s) that filled the Heaven, Earth, Air and Sea with Gods. Wherefore their reduction of Deities to the Polyonymy of one Supreme God, ſignifieth nothing to the prejudice or diminution of their Polity of Gods. When they call Jove by the proper Names of ſeveral other Deities, they muſt not be thought to deny the Exiſtence of thoſe Synonymous Genial Deities of the vulgar Theology (Liber Pater, Mercury and ſuch more;) for in their ὑπονοίαις, Allegorizings, Interpretations, Accommodations, and the various honorary Appellatives which they beſtow upon Jove, they do not ſpeak privatively with reſpect to their Genial Deities, but accumulatively; not with intention to deſtroy them, but to ſuperadd to them the Polyonymy of their Supreme God. And if this is the true account of the Stoicks Polyonymy (as certainly it is,) there is no reaſon imaginable, why they ſhould condemn the vulgar Polytheiſm, (t) as a learned Writer ſuppoſeth, they would have done, if fear of diſturbing the Commonwealth, and creating a Socrates-like danger to themſelves, had not reſtrain'd them. For the Senſe of the Stoicks and

(p) Kircher. Oedip. Ægyp. T. 2. par. 2. Synt. 3.

(q) Chryſippus ait, mundum Deum eſſe, & ejus Animi fuſionem univerſam. Cic. de N. D. l. 1.

(r) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 7. c. 6. Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(s) Adv. Stoic. de Com. Not. p. 1075. Ἐν πά- τοις θε M. Ant. l. 9. S. 35.

(t) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 7. c. 7.

and of all the genuine Pagan Theologers muſt be thus repreſented, The conſtitution of the Univerſe being politically conſider'd, and Jupiter as (politically Imperial, they conceiv'd (as they uſually ſay) πάντα θεῶν πλήρη, all full of Gods and Demons: But withall the Conſtitution of the Univerſe being Phyſiologically conſider'd, and Jupiter as vital or animative of the whole, they conceiv'd Jovis omnia plena, all full of Jove, his various Virtues, Powers and Effects. Theſe things perfectly conſorting together, and carrying an abſolute conſiſtency in their Eyes, the Stoicks and Cynicks might condemn the want of Philoſophy in the vulgar (in ſuppoſing the parts of the World ſo many ſeveral animate perſonal Deities,) but could not condemn their Religion. They are miſtaken, when their Polyonymy is repreſented as Anti-polytheiſm: As ſome other Philoſophers are miſtaken, when they are repreſented as Stoical Polyonymiſts. For when M. Tyrius ſaith (u) that according to Homer all is full of Divine Names (which is manifeſtly meant of the Preſidentiary Gods and Demons,) it is marvellous, that his ſaying ſhould be interpreted (w) of the Stoicks Polyonymy. And when he ſaith, (x) that Neptune is a Spirit which paſſing through the Earth and Sea cauſeth their State and Harmony, (being a Platoniſt) he muſt be interpreted to ſpeak (not according to the Stoicks Polyonymy, but) according to the Senſe of thoſe Platoniſts, who ſuppos'd the Elements to have particular intelligent Souls of their own; which Spirits of the Elements (y) Julian worſhipp'd as ſuppoſing them endow'd with the Faculty of Divination.

XIV. The mundane Syſtem Jove muſt be conſider'd both as animatively (or Phyſiologically) and as Politically Imperial to the World. For being the mundane Soul he is animatively Regent and Imperial, as the Soul of Man is. (z) That is a God (or Divine) which is Vigent, Sentient, Reminiſcent, Provident, which ruleth and governeth and moveth that Body, whoſe Prefect it is, as the Chieftain God doth this World. (a) As we have a Soul, that is an animative Regent: So the Gubernation of the World is by a Soul, that containeth and keepeth it in Conſiſtence, which is called Zeus. Who as an animative Regent is ſuppos'd, regularly to agitate the mundane Matter, to form all things Celeſtial and Terreſtrial, to figurate his own Animal-body, and to generate all ſorts of Animals, as the Poet Philoſophizeth. (b)

From firſt, Earth, Seas and Heavens all ſpangled Robe
The Golden Stars and Phœbe's
Silver Globe,
A Spirit fed, and to the Maſs
conjoin'd,
Inſpiring the vaſt Body with a
Mind.
Hence Men and Beaſts, and
Birds derive their ſtrain,
And Monſters floating in the Marble Main.
Mr. Ogleby's Tranſlat. p. 259.

By Phyſical motion and as animatively Regent the Coſmical Zeus ſteereth the World, (c) as a Pilot doth a Ship, or as a Charioteer doth a Chariot, (d) circumvolving the Heavens; keeping the Earth in conſiſtence, ruling the Sea (ſo Apuleius ſaith of the Goddeſs Iſis, tu rotas Orbem, luminas Solem, regis Mundum, thou whirleſt about the World, lighteneſt the Sun, ruleſt the World) and variouſly influencing the Minds of Men, according to that of Homer. (e)

Men hold not conſtant in one
Mind, ſuch is their Senſe,
As daily is inſtill'd by Jove's bid influence.

Becauſe the Coſmical Zeus is animatively the Regent of the World, he ought to have his Hegemonicon (or Regent part) ſeated in ſome ſuperiour part of the World (agreeably to the Soul of Man, whoſe Hegemonicon or rational Faculty is ſeated in the Head) either in the Ether, as Antipater; or in Heaven, as Chryſippus; or in the Sun, as Cleanthes ſuppos'd, (f) which latter (doubtleſs) was the Senſe of the Pythagoreans in thoſe illuſtrious Epithets which they gave the Sun, ſtiling him.

Ζηνὸς πύργον, Διὸς φυλακὴν, Διὸς θρόνον,
The Tower, Cuſtody or Hold, and Throne of Jove.

But the Coſmical Jove is alſo Politically the Regent of the World (the Univerſe being ſuppos'd one imperial Polity, one common City of Gods and of Men;) for ſuch a governing Power the Pagan Theologers diſpute with great Reaſon and ſtrength of Argument. (g) Without (Political) Government neither any Houſe, nor City, nor Nation, nor Mankind in general can ſubſiſt, nor the whole Nature of things, nor the World it ſelf. (h) Seeing a City or an Houſe cannot continue for the leaſt time without a Governour and Curator, how is it poſſible, that ſo great and illuſtrious a Structure as the World ſhould be ſo orderly adminiſtred fortuitouſly and by chance? (i) The Knowledge and Contemplation of things Celeſtial, the beholding how great Moderation and Order there is among the Gods, begetteth modeſty; and the beholding the Works and Facts of the Gods ingendreth a greatneſs of Mind, and Juſtice alſo, when you underſtand the Supreme Rector and Lord, what his Will and Counſel is (in the Conſtitution, Gubernation and Adminiſtration of this Univerſe of things,) Reaſon ſuited to his Nature being call'd by Philoſophers the true and ſupreme Law. As politically imperial the ſupreme Rector appointeth to the ſubordinate Deities their Lots and Prefectures, and their Function and Imploy is to execute his Appointments. (k) For the Sun was made for ſome Work or Function and the other Gods.

XV. The Coſmical Rector is Order, Law, Fate, Fortune, Providence, (a governing ſuperviſorſhip of things) juſt and good Government to the World. (l) Either this Univerſe is a meer Hotch-potch and caſual Implication of things, which may be disjoin'd and diſſipated: Or there is in it Union, Order and a Providence. But it could not be κόσμος, a regular and comely piece without Order; and this Order and the Law that is viſible in the Univerſe infer a Providence, (m) whereby the World and all the parts of it were at firſt conſtituted, and is at all times adminiſtred. (n) The equable Motion and Circumvolution of Heaven, the Sun, Moon and all the Stars, their diſtinction, variety, pulchritude, order, the ſight of theſe things ſufficiently ſheweth, that they are not by chance, (o) but eternæ Legis Imperio, by an eternal Law or Preſcript, a Law of the World, which the Stoicks call Fate.

(u) Diſſ. 16. confer. Diſſ. 26, & 29.

(w) Intellect. Syſt. p. 494, 492.

(x) Diſſ. 30.

(y) Am. Marcellin. l. 21.

(z) Eſt Deus qui viget, qui ſentit, qui meminit, qui providet, qui tam regit & moderatur & movet id corpus cui præpoſitus eſt, quam hunc mundum ille Princeps Deus. Cic. in ſom. Scip. l. 2. c. 12.

(a) Ὥσπερ ἡμεῖς ἀπὸ ψυχῆς διοικούμεθα, οὕτω καὶ ὁ κόσμος ψυχὴν ἔχει τὴν συνέχουσαν αὐτὸν ϗ αὕτη καλεῖται Ζεύς. Phornut. de Nat. Deor. p. 4.

(b) Principio Cælum, ac Terras camposque liquentes,
Lucentemque globum Lunæ, Titaniaque aſtra
Spiritus intus alit; totamque infuſa per artus
Mens agitat molem, & magno ſe corpore miſcet.
Inde Hominum, pecudumque genus, vitæque volantum.
Et quæ marmoreo fert monſtra ſub æquore Pontus.
Virgil Æneid. 6.

(c) Lib. de Mundo c. 6.

(d) Cic. de N. D. l. 3.

(e) Τοῖος γὰρ νόος ἐστὶν ἐπιχθονίων ἀνθρώπων,
Οἷον ἐπ᾽ ἦμαρ ἄγησι πατὴρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε.

(f) Laert. in Zenon.

(g) Sine Imperio nec Domus ulla, nec Civitas, nec Gens, nec Hominum univerſum Genus ſtare, nec rerum Natura omnis, nec ipſe Mundus poteſt. Cic. de Leg. 3.

(h) Πῶς οἷόντε, πόλιν μὲν ἢ οἶκον μὴ δύνασθαι διαμένειν, μηδ᾽ ὀλιγιστὸν χρόνον, δίχα τοῦ διοικοῦντος ϗ ἐπιμελουμένου· τὸ δ᾽ οὕτω μέγα καὶ καλὸν κατασκεύασμα εἰκῆ καὶ ὡς ἔτυχεν εὐτάκτως οἰκονομεῖσθαι; Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 14.

(i) Modeſtiam quandam cognitio rerum cæleſtium affert iis, qui videant, quanta ſit etiam apud Deos moderatio, quantus ordo; & magnitudinem animi Deorum opera & facta cernentibus: Juſtitiam etiam, cùm cognitum habeas quod ſit ſummi Rectoris & Domini Numen, quod conſilium, quæ voluntas, cujus ad naturam apta ratio vera illa & ſumma Lex à Philoſophis dicitur. Cic. de Fin. 4.

(k) Καὶ ὁ ἥλιος ἐρεῖ πρός τι ἔργον γέγονε, ϗ οἱ λοιποὶ θεοί. M. Ant. l. 8. S. 19.

> Sed nihil in tota magis eſt mirabile mole,
> Quàm ratio, & certis quod Legibus omnia Parent.
> The Courſe and Frame of this vaſt bulk diſplay
> A Reaſon and fix'd Laws which all obey.

In the other Branches of their Doctrine of Fate there is (p) τὸ σφοδρὸν τῆς ἀνάγκης, an exceſs of Fatality. For as the governing Mind or Reaſon which conſtituted and adminiſtreth the corporeal World is Law to it: So all things that befal Mankind, are of his Præ-ordination and appointment, as the Stoicks ſuppoſe; and therefore they derive all things (q) from a Law of Fate. All things proceed by a fix'd ſempiternal Law, fatality leadeth us, by a long ſeries and concatenation of cauſes all things neceſſarily emerge, your joyous and mournful occurrences were appointed long ago. A Wiſe Man will underſtand, that whatever happens is a Law of (univerſal) Nature. (r) It was ordinated to him and he to it. (s) Whatever happens to thee, it is that which from Eternity (or the beginning of things) was fore-deſtinated unto thee; thy ſubſiſtence and ſuch an accident are by an implex'd Series of Natural Cauſes from Eternity fatally connex'd or ſpun together. Fatality by this Hypotheſis is ſcrew'd up to an high pitch of Extravagance, eſpecially as this their Dogma, that all things come to paſs fatally, is underſtood by the ancient Doctors of the Stoa; (t) for they ſubvert (ſo far appeareth) all Contingency and Human Liberty of Agency, and conſequently all Humanity and Divinity. (u) In the Conſtitution of the World thoſe ancient Doctors ſuppoſe Jupiter hamper'd by material Neceſſity (that becauſe of the inobſequiouſneſs of the matter, ſome Men are unavoidably made of an evil Diſpoſition, and good Men are obnoxious to external Evils,) and not being able to do what he would, he is willing to do what he can. In his adminiſtration of the World and Soveraign diſpoſal of things (w) he can alter nothing of his own fatal Ordinations; Scripſit Fata ſed ſequitur, having once written the Fates he always obeyeth them (ſome ſuppoſe, (x) that the three Fates wrote his Decrees;) and conſequently the Supreme Deity in reſpect of his Adminiſtration of things is nothing but intelligent Fate in himſelf and to the World (as Plaſtick Natures are nothing elſe but blind unintelligent Fate in themſelves and to the World,) and unchangeable or inexorable Fate is the Supreme Deity. (y)

> Μόνη γὰρ ἐν θεοῖσιν οὐ δεσπόζεται.
> For Fate alone amongſt the Gods is unſubject.

But although their rigid Genius hath introduc'd much of extravagant Fatality, yet ſome of the ancient Stoicks (z) attempted to mollifie the rigour of Fate to accommodate it to Human Liberty; ſome report of Chryſippus, (a) that he ſuppos'd Human Liberty exempt from Fate; (b) and ſome of them (of later times) more than ſufficiently aſſert the Human Power and Liberty of Agency. They refuſe not the Name of Fortune; for they adviſe Men to commit all their Externals (c) τῷ δαιμονίῳ, τῇ τύχῃ, to the Divinity, to Fortune, underſtanding thereby the Providential diſpoſal of things. Notwithſtanding their rigid Genius they are no Friends to that rigid Dogma of abſolute Reprobation; (d) for God (as they ſuppoſe) hath made all Men to felicity and good Eſtate of Mind, and hath given them what is requiſite thereunto. (e) If the Gods have conſulted concerning me, and thoſe things that ought to happen to me, they have well conſulted; for a God devoid of Counſel is ſcarce conceivable: But to do me a miſchief, what ſhould impell them? For what emolument would accrue from thence, either to them, or to the publick, which they chiefly take care of? Inexorable Fate (according to their generally receiv'd Maxims) is their Soveraign Deity, yet ſome of them are prone to think, (f) that there is a πρόνοια ἱλάσιμος, placable and flexible Providence, and others of them tell us, that they had better Notices of the ſupreme Jupiter. (g) They call Jupiter placid, being ſuch to them that change from injuſtice; for he is not irreconcileable to them. Whence there are Altars of Jupiter placid to Suppliants. They allow not God or Man, to be properly angry with Criminals, yet ſuppoſe, that the Coſmical Rector is juſt and good Government to the World. (h) That he hath made the parts for the uſe of the whole, (i) and ordereth all things as is moſt conducive to the good of the whole. (k) Good Men are his Witneſſes, that he exiſteth, and governeth the Univerſe of things well, and neglecteth not Human Affairs, and that nothing Evil happens to a good Man either alive or dead. He diſpoſeth of all to a good uſe, as is moſt needful for the good of the World. (l) For he, the Governour of the Univerſe, will not fail to put thee to a good uſe. (m) Neither willingly nor unwillingly doth he commit any Error. His Rule therefore is without miſrule. (n) His Government is Paternal, as a Father taking care of all, that his Citizens may be happy like himſelf. (o) Making a diſtribution of things as is fit and juſt (whence they ſtile him νόμος, from νέμω, to diſtribute;) the better Men (p) have the better part, and the good (q) are not afflicted without great Reaſon and for wiſe and good Ends.

CHAP.

(l) Ἤτοι κυκεὼν καὶ ἀντεμπλοκὴ καὶ σκεδασμός· ἢ ἕνωσις καὶ τάξις καὶ πρόνοια. M. Ant. l. 6. S. 10. & l. 4. S. 27.

(m) Providentia Deorum mundum & omnes mundi partes & initio conſtitutas eſſe, & omni tempore adminiſtrari. Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(n) Ibid.

(o) Sen. de provid. c. 1. Nat. Qu. l. 2. c. 29.

Manil. l. 1. Aſtron.

(p) Plotin. En. 3. l. 1. c. 4.

(q) Laert. in Zenon. Sen. de provid. c. 5. de vit. beat. c. 15.

(r) M. Ant. l. 12 S. 1.

(s) Ὅ τι ἄν σοι συμβαίνῃ, τοῦτό σοι ἐξ αἰῶνος προκατεσκευάζετο· καὶ ἡ ἐπιπλοκὴ τῶν αἰτίων συνέκλωθε, τήν τε σὴν ὑπόστασιν ἐξ ἀϊδίου καὶ τὴν τούτου σύμβασιν. Ibid. l. 10. S. 5.

(t) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 49.

(u) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. Diſſ. 14.

(w) Ibid. Diſſ. 12.

(x) Capella l. 1.

(y) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 9.

(z) Lipſ. ſupr. diſſ. 14.

(a) Cicero de Fato.

(b) Steare Anim. medel. l. 2. c. 6.

(c) Epict. diſſ. l. 4. c. 4.

(d) Ibid. l. 3. c. 2

(c) Ει μὲν ἐβουλεύσαντο περὶ ἐμοῦ, καὶ τῶν ἐμοὶ συμβῆναι ὀφειλόντων οἱ Θεοί, καλῶς ἐβουλεύσαντο· ἄβουλον γὰρ Θεὸν οὐδ' ἐπινοῆσαι ῥᾴδιον· κακοποιῆσαι δέ με διὰ τίνα αἰτίαν ἔμελλον ὁρμᾷν; τί γὰρ αὐτοῖς ἢ τῷ κοινῷ οὗ μάλιστα προνοοῦνται, ἐκ τούτου περιεγένετο; M. Ant. l. 6. S. 44.

(f) M. Ant. l. 12. S. 14.

(g) Προσαγορεύουσι δὲ καὶ μειλίχιον τὸν Δία, εὐμείλικτον ὄντα τοῖς ἐξ ἀδικίας μεταβαλλομένοις, οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀδιαλλάκτως ἔχει πρὸς αὐτούς. Διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἱκεσίου Διός εἰσι βωμοί. Phornut. de Nat. Deor. p. 1

(h) Epict. diſſ. l. 4.

(i) M. Ant. l. 5. S.

(k) Epict. diſſ. l. c. 26.

(l) Ἐκεῖνος μὲν γὰρ πάντως σοι καλῶς χρήσεται, ὁ τὰ ὅλα διοικῶν. M. Ant. l. 6. S. 42.

(m) Ibid. l. 12. S. 12.

(n) Epict. Diſſ. p. 328, 330,

(o) M. Ant. l. 4. S. l. 7. S. l. 10. S. 25.

(p) Epict. Diſſ. l. c. 17.

(q) Sen. de provid. c. 3.

CHAP. X.

1. Of the Stoicks Inſtitution of Virtue as they were a Sect of Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts. Their Rules of Piety. 2. Their Rules of Duty to themſelves, and of Humanity. 3. Their Inſtitution in great degree Unpopular and Irreligious, as appeareth in their ſubverting Religion. 4. In their Philoſophy of Death. 5. In their Philoſophy of Pain and Sickneſs, and their Indifference. 6. Their Inſtitution of Virtue is an Inſtitution of an unpopular kind of Nobility and Beatitude. 7. Of placing their All in their Hegemonicon. 8. Of their Apathy. 9. Of the Faſtuouſneſs of their Virtue towards Jupiter. 10. Of the reſt of their faſtuous Grandiloquence, and their Faſtuouſneſs towards others. 11. Of their affecting Tranſcendentals. 12. Their Paſſive Obedience examin'd. 13. The Stoicks more than meer Moraliſts. 14. Of their marvellous abſurd Conceits. 15. Of their foul and groſs Immoralities. 16. The Concluſion.

I. THE exiſtence of the Coſmical Rector (to whom it belongeth, to be imperial over all, and conſequently all ought to be ſubject unto him) is obligatory to Mankind, to ſubject themſelves to his Regency. Upon which ground the Moral Philoſophy of the Stoicks runneth deſcant; for it is the Learning, Diſcipline and Inſtitution of the Virtue of a Sect of Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts, in part excellently well, in part abſurdly unpopular and irreligious, which they rais'd (in great degree) as a Superſtructure upon this Foundation, the Law of Man's Subjection to the Coſmical Regent. The State and Life which they propoſe to themſelves, is that of (r) Jupiter's Subjects, Friends, Miniſters, Soldiers, Citizens, Sons, to be and to be intituled (as Diogenes, Heraclitus, and the reſt of the Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts were) θεῖοι, nothing leſs than Divine. The Law of their Subjection they conſider as an Obligation both to Active and Paſſive Obedience. (s) How great a power hath Man? a power not to do any thing but what God approveth, and to imbrace all that God diſtributeth to him. We ought to make an Oath unto God, as the Soldiers do to Cæſar, (t) never to be diſobedient, nor to accuſe, nor blame any thing that he ſendeth; (u) diſcarding all Externals, the Body, Riches, Fame, Empire, they made it their Buſineſs, to be Philoſophic Pagan Saintiſts, or (which is the ſame thing) to be and to do what theſe Philoſophic Pagan Saintiſts counted agreeable to Nature (to our proper Nature, which is Rational, Social, Humane; to the Will of the governing Nature of the Univerſe; to the governing Right-reaſon of Jove, which is a common Law; to the ordination and purport of Nature, which appointeth Man for his proper Work and Function;) for being Philoſophers they were ἐξηγηταὶ τῆς φύσεως. the Interpreters of Nature. They thought themſelves unconcern'd in the Applauſe or Contumelies, the Approbation or Reprehenſions of Men, as having no power to do them good or hurt; (w) But I have whom I ought to be ſubject to, whom to obey, God and the Subordinate Deities. As good and dutiful Subjects they profeſs themſelves (x) Friends to God in the firſt place (as Socrates was;) chiefly to regard his Eye over them, whom they ought to pleaſe; to concern themſelves about this only, how to fulfil their own Province orderly and obediently to God, to underſtand and mind his Commands and Interdicts, and to be converſant in his Affairs; in all their Actions to have reſpect to him; to deſire, to ſeem fair to him, and to be pure with themſelves and with God; in all Circumſtances to inquire what God would have them to do, and to divine (if it be poſſible) what his Will is; to imitate him in Faithfulneſs, Beneficence, Liberty, Magnanimity; continually to praiſe and celebrate and give thanks to the Divinity; to give thanks for all things, eſpecially for their virtuous living, without their former Vices and Crimes; for the Suſtenance of Life, but eſpecially for the Faculty of underſtanding and uſing things; to ſubmit their Minds to the Governour of all things as good Citizens to the Law of the City; not only to obey, but to approve and praiſe his adminiſtration of things; to will the things that happen in the World, the Eſtate or Uſage that is allotted them, becauſe God willeth them; to will nothing but what God willeth; to be devoted to his Commands; ἐσθίειν ἀρεστῶς θεοῖς, ſo to eat as to pleaſe the Gods; to confide in the Governour of all; to live in mindfulneſs of him; to worſhip the Gods, and to invocate them in all Affairs; for Man is made πρὸς θεοσέβειαν, to worſhip the Gods. (y) To the acknowledgment of their Exiſtence two things are requiſite; the one a faculty of diſcerning the Phænomena of Providence, the other a grateful temper of Mind. Are not the Academicks εὐχάριστοι καὶ αἰδήμονες, grateful and modeſt Men, that daily eating Bread, yet dare to tell us, that we do not know, whether there be a Ceres, Proſerpina or Pluto? To them that ask, where haſt thou ſeen the Gods, or whence is thine aſſurance of their Exiſtence whom thou worſhippeſt? From thoſe things that are Indications of the Power of the Gods I am aſſur'd of their Exiſtence, and therefore worſhip them.

(r) Epict. Diſſ. p. 337, 344, 91, 107, 122, 135. Enchir. c. 21.
(s) M. Ant. l. 12. S. 11.
(t) Μὴ ἀπειθήσειν μηδέποτε, μηδ' ἐγκαλέσειν, μηδὲ μέμψασθαί τι τῶν ὑπ' ἐκείνου διδομένων. Epict. Diſſ. p. 124.
(u) Ibid. l. 4. c. 4.
(w) Ἐγὼ δ' ἔχω τινὶ ὑποτετάχθαι, τινὶ πείθεσθαι, τῷ θεῷ καὶ τοῖς μετ' ἐκεῖνον. Ibid. c. 12.
(x) Epict. Diſſ. p. 217, 337.
p. 165, 341.
p. 342, 231.
p. 225, p. 385, 333.
p. 207.
p. 127, 350.
p. 401, 382, &c.
p. 247, 127.
p. 118.
p. 349, 350, l. 2. c. 16. l. 3. c. 26.
p. 221, 218, 122.
Marc. Ant. l. 6. S. 10, 7, 23. l. 5. S. 33.
(y) Epict. Diſſ. p. 96, 237. M. Ant. l. 12. S. 28.

II. From the great Law of Subjection to the Coſmical Rector the Stoical Pietiſts deduce, (z) τὸ πρὸς τὸν Δία καθῆκον, the comprehenſion of their Duty to God; and thence alſo the great Theorems which properly concern their own Beatitude, have the Name of Laws. (a) Τί δ' ὁ νόμος ὁ θεῖος; τὰ ἴδια τηρεῖν, τῶν ἀλλοτρίων μὴ ἀντιποιεῖσθαι, what doth the Divine Law command? to keep the things that are our own, and not to challenge to our ſelves the things of others; but if granted to us, to uſe them; if not granted to us, not to deſire them: when taken away, to reſtore them cheerfully, and to be thankful for the time we have had the uſe of them. (b) Haſt thou not a Commandment from Jupiter? hath he not given thee thine own things (thoſe which are in the power of thine own Will) exempt from Prohibition and Impediment, the other things which are not thine own liable to Prohibition and Impediment? What Commandment therefore, what preſcript haſt thou (z) Epict. Diſſ. p. 141. ed. Cantab.

(a) Ibid. p. 215.
(b) Ὁ Ζεύς σοι οὐκ ἐντέταλται; οὐ δέδωκέ σοι τὰ μὲν σὰ ἀκώλυτα καὶ ἀπαραπόδιστα, τὰ δὲ μὴ σὰ κωλυτὰ καὶ παραπόδιστα; τίνα οὖν ἐντολὴν ἔχων ἐκεῖθεν ἐλήλυθας; ποῖον διάταγμα; τὰ σὰ τήρει ἐκ παντὸς τρόπου, τῶν ἀλλοτρίων μὴ ἐφίεσο. Epict. Diſſ. p. 145.

thou brought from him? The things that are thine own keep by all means, deſire not the things that belong to others. Faithfulneſs is thine own, who can take away ſuch things as theſe, who ſhall hinder thee from uſing them beſides thy ſelf? In this manner thou may'ſt hinder thy ſelf; when thou mindeſt the things that are not thine own, thou haſt loſt the things that are thine own. (c) Man muſt do what his Reaſon and Mind injoyneth, which is an Avulſion from Jupiter, and which Jupiter (a ſevere exactor of Virtues) hath given him to be his Leader and Prefect.

From the ſame Principle (the Law of Subjection to the Coſmical Rector) the Stoicks infer their various Rules of duty to Mankind. For (d) Man is not ἀπόλυτος, abſolute and unbound, but a part of a certain whole, (e) a Member of the one univerſal Syſtem of Rationals, a Citizen of the World, and therefore is an intellectual ſocial Animal (deſign'd, inclin'd, adapted and neceſſitated to live in Society,) the Coſmical Rector's Subject, not in a ſingle, but a ſocial Capacity, in conjunction with his Fellow-rationals, (f) that are of the ſame nature and kind, of one Tribe or Alliance, his Kinſmen, Fellows, Aſſociates, Neighbours, Brothers, (not as deriving their origin from the ſame Blood or Seed, but from the ſame Parental Mind, of which their Minds are ſo many Decerptions or Avulſions) Fellow-members of one Body, that are born to be Fellow-workers, (as the Feet, the Hands, the Eye-lids, the Rows of the Upper and Under-Teeth) and by nature Friends. (g) Let this be laid down in the firſt place; I am a part of the whole which is govern'd by Nature. In the next place, I am nearly ally'd to thoſe other parts that are of the ſame kind. (h) The Mind of the Univerſe is ſocietive; wherefore the principal thing intended in the Conſtitution of Man is the ſocietive deſign, which is the end and good, and ought to be the ſcope of Man; and whatever practice of his hath not reference (immediately or remotely) ἐπὶ τὸ κοινωνικὸν τέλος, to the Societive Deſign, deſtroyeth the Uniformity of Life and is ſeditious, as a Factioniſt among the People divideth his own party from the common conſent: Wherefore a virtuous Man is (i) κοινωνικὸς, Societive, the Rule of his Agency is κοινωνικῶς πρᾶξαι, to practiſe ſocietively, not to be hurry'd away by ſuch Motions, which are unſocietive, to paſs from one ſocietive practice to another with mindfulneſs of God, (k) to treat Men ſocietively according to the natural Law of Fellowſhip, kindly and juſtly. (l) What do I care for more than this, that my preſent action be the proper action of one that is rational, one that is ſocietive, and that is govern'd by the ſame Law of right reaſon with God?

To Man that is rational and ſocietive, and that ought to live the ſocietive life, it is proper and agreeable, (m) to do nothing but what the reaſon of his Regial and Nomothetic part ſuggeſteth for the good of Men. He ought to love them truly and from the Heart, to take care of the welfare of all Men, to worſhip and praiſe the Gods and to do good to Men (for if Man is born κοινωνικὸς, ſocietive, he is neceſſarily born εὐεργετικὸς, to be beneficent to Men) to bear with them, forbearing to injure them, to do them good unweariedly (perſiſting in an uninterrupted ſeries of good actions) accounting Beneficence to others his own Emolument, and (becauſe they are Members of the ſame Body) a doing good to himſelf. The joy of a Man is to do what properly belongeth to a Man; ἴδιον δὲ ἀνθρώπου εὔνοια πρὸς τὸ ὁμόφυλον, and it properly belongeth to a Man, to be kindly affected to thoſe of the ſame Tribe or Kindred. It is proper and agreeable to a Man, to love thoſe that offend againſt him, (for by nature they are his Friends and Kinſmen;) to bear good-will to them that hate and diſparage him; not to be angry with the ſtupid and ungrateful, but to take care of them; to be amical and benevolous to every Man; Men are made ἀλλήλων ἕνεκεν, for one another; teach them better or bear with them. A Branch cut off from Continuity with its Neighbour-branch is neceſſarily cut off from the whole Tree; a Man divideth himſelf from his Neighbour, hating him and having an averſation from him, yet knoweth not, that at the ſame time he divideth himſelf from the whole Body or Corporation. (n) As a Citizen of the World and a part of the whole Man is oblig'd μηδὲν ἔχειν ἰδίᾳ συμφέρον, to have no private ſelf-intereſt or emolument, to conſult about nothing as ἀπόλυτος, looſe and unbound; but as the Hand or Foot if they had Reaſon and Underſtanding of the natural order, ſhould have no Motions, nor deſire any thing, but with reſpect to the whole; to direct his whole endeavour to the common good, and to abſtain from the contrary (not prejudicing the Community for ſuppos'd ſelf-intereſt) κυριώτερον γὰρ τὸ ὅλον τοῦ μέρους καὶ ἡ πόλις τοῦ πολίτου, for the whole is of greater regard than a part, and a City than a Citizen. The Duties of Juſtice are eminently compris'd in this Law of the Societive Life: And becauſe the Founder of the Univerſe is the Founder of it in the Frame and Conſtitution of Nature (as alſo of the various Offices of Relations, Father, Son, Brother, and ſuch more,) therefore the Violation of it is a grand Impiety; (o) ὁ ἀδικῶν ἀσεβεῖ· He that is unjuſt to any is impious, for the Nature of the Univerſe having made all Rational Animals one for another, that they ſhould benefit one another according to every one's worth, but in no wiſe hurt one another: He that tranſgreſſeth this her Will, ἀσεβεῖ δηλονότι εἰς τὴν πρεσβυτάτην τῶν θεῶν, is manifeſtly guilty of Impiety towards the moſt ancient and venerable of the Gods.

III. The Law of Nature and the Original Law thereof is egregiouſly illuſtrated by this Account of the Stoicks Inſtitution of Virtue (which yet is far from being abſolutely the ſame with the Law of Nature;) and in this better part of it there is much of Natural Religion, which the worſer part of it in great degree ſubverteth and deſtroyeth. For one great Article of the Popular Pagans Natural Religion was the Immortality of Humane Souls, that after this Life they exiſt in an happy or calamitous ſtate, and that Mankind ought to be govern'd by hope of Reward and fear of Puniſhment, which Plato calleth the two adamantine Pillars of a Common-wealth. The Epicureans found, that Religion ſtood firm, becauſe theſe two Pillars could not be demoliſh'd; Lucretius complaineth, that Mankind were apt to be ſcar'd with the threats of Prophets and the fears of Puniſhment after Death; and therefore would be Religious, becauſe they were unable.

——— Minis obſiſtere vatum
Æternas quoniam pœnas in morte timendum.

(c) M. Ant. l. 5. S. 27. Sen. de provid. c. 1.

(d) Epict. Diſſ. p. 181.

(e) M. Ant. l. 2. S. 13. l. 3. S. 11, 7.

(f) Ibid. & l. 2. S. 1. l. 9. S. 8, 9. Epict. diſſ. p. 122.

(g) Πρῶτον κείσθω, ὅτι μέρος εἰμὶ τοῦ ὅλου ὑπὸ φύσεως διοικουμένου, ἔπειτα, ὅτι ἔχω πως οἰκείως πρὸς τὰ ὁμογενῆ μέρη. M. Ant. l. 10. S. 6.

(h) Ὁ τοῦ ὅλου νοῦς κοινωνικός, τὸ μὲν οὖν προηγούμενον ἐν τῇ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου κατασκευῇ τὸ κοινωνικόν ἐστι. Ibid. l. 5. S. 30. & l. 7. S. 55. & l. 5. S. 16. l. 11. S. 21. l. 9. S. 23.

(i) Ibid. l. 5. S. 6. l. 9. S. 31. l. 2. S. 2. l. 6. S. 7.

(k) Τοῖς ἀνθρώποις χρῆσθαι κοινωνικῶς, κατὰ τὸν τῆς κοινωνίας φυσικὸν νόμον, εὐμενῶς καὶ δικαίως. Ibid. l. 6. S. 23. l. 3. S. 11.

(l) Τί πλέον ἐπιζητῶ, εἰ τὸ παρὸν ἔργον ζώου νοεροῦ καὶ κοινωνικοῦ καὶ ἰσονόμου θεῷ. Ibid. l. 8. S. 2.

(m) Ibid. l. 4. S. 12. l. 6. S. 39. l. 7. S. 13. l. 3. S. 4. l. [illegible]. S. 33. l. 5. S. 42. l. 7. S. 74. l. 12. S. 29. l. 7. S. 13. l. 8. S. 25. l. 7. S. 22. l. 9. S. 27. l. 8. S. 8. l. 11. S. 13. l. 8. S. 50. l. 11. S. 8.

(n) Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 10. M. Ant. l. 10. S. 6.

(o) M. Ant. l. 9. S. 1.

But theſe grand Articles of Natural Religion the School of the Stoicks diſcardeth as Plebeian Notices; deſigning to rid themſelves of the Paſſions, to reſcue themſelves intirely from all Bondage and Servility of Mind, and to enjoy perfect Liberty and Tranquility; deſigning to inſtitute a Philoſopher (who muſt be an unpopular kind of Virtuoſo call'd Sapiens, and his Inſtitution or Diſcipline Sapientia) they undermine the Fundamentals of the Inſtitution of Religion, they conſpire with the Epicureans in raſing and demoliſhing the principal Pillars of it, and make their own Law (the Law of Man's Subjection to the Coſmical Rector) not Law, but an extravagant Hypotheſis. They ſuppoſe, that an Imperial Head preſideth over an Univerſe of Rationals, which muſt be govern'd by Law, but without the Sanction of Rewards and Puniſhments; (p) that the Virtuous muſt hope for no other Reward, the Vicious need to fear no other Puniſhment, but their being ſuch; that the Inferi and Infernal Apparatus are a poetic Fable, the Puniſhments after Death are like Accho and Alphito, whereby Women affright Children from doing unhappy Turns; and nothing muſt be thought our good or evil ſave only the things that are in the power of our own Wills, leſt we curſe the Gods, when they ſeem to neglect or croſs us. Upon which terms there can be no Sanction of Rewards and Puniſhments, no virtuous hopes or Fears of them, no dutiful Submiſſion to Divine Chaſtiſements and Puniſhments, no pious Addreſſes for preventing or removing them, and for procuring the external Bleſſings of this or a better Life. Accordingly, a Stoick liveth (q) μηδὲν περιμένων, μηδὲ φεύγων, without expecting or fleeing from any thing, without concerning himſelf about Futurities. His Infidelity tranſcendeth the Popular-Pagan; for at beſt he doubteth of a future ſtate, and ſuſpecteth, that there is none. (r) He ſuppoſeth, that the Agent ſuffereth no Evil, when his Operation ceaſeth in due time and ſeaſon. In a Daunce or Stage-play, if any part be cut off, the whole is imperfect; but it is not thus with the Soul; in what part or time ſoever ſhe is ſeized, ſhe compleateth what is already done, and maketh it full and unwanting to her ſelf, ſo that ſhe can ſay, ἐγὼ ἀπέχω τὰ ἐμὰ, I want not any thing of what belongeth to me. (s) It is of no concern, for how long you ſhall practiſe virtuouſly; three Hours are ſufficient. Prorogation of Life conduceth nothing to Felicity; a bleſſed Life that is ſhort, is no leſs deſirable than that which is long; both are alike; Beatitude is not increas'd by length, nor diminiſh'd by ſhortneſs of time; Time is of no moment to Beatitude. Nihil intereſt inter diem & ſeculum; morâ non fit beatior vita ſed longior: There is no difference between a Day and an Age; Life by ſtay is made longer, but not happier. An Inſtitution which at this rate affronteth the common reaſon of Mankind, corrupteth their natural Notices, ſlaketh their innate Deſires and noble Aſpires after Immortality, diſputeth againſt the Deſirableneſs of Life and Immortality (to which an Inſtitution of Virtue ought to conduct Men) is doubtleſs (in great meaſure) no Inſtitution of (t) ſerious Virtue, but of unpopular and irreligious Humour.

(p) Epict. Diſſ. p. 335, 280, 293. Sen. ad Marc. c. 19. Plutarch. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1040. Epict. Ench. c. 38.

(q) M. Ant. l. 3. S. 12. l. 12. S. 1, 3, 5.

(r) Ibid. l. 12. S. 23. l. 10. S. 1. l. 11. S. 1.

(s) M. Ant. l. 6. S. 23. Sen. de Benef. l. 5. c. 17. Plut. adv. Stoic. p. 1061, 1062. Gat. in Ant. p. 108, 111.

(t) Lact. l. 3. c. 27.

The Stoicks are alſo extremely Irreligious in bereaving the Coſmical Rector of governing Diſtributive Juſtice, of duly Premiant Goodneſs, and Punitive Anger (or Severity;) in attributing to him an extravagant indulgent Goodneſs, deſtructive to the true uſe of Sacrifices, methods of Atonement, Penitential Sorrow and the pious fear of a Deity; for although they ſometimes acknowledge, (u) that the Coſmical Rector inflicteth caſtigatory Puniſhments (in this Life) yet they do not ſuppoſe, that he inflicteth any (properly) Penal Evils. (w) There are ſome Beings, that cannot hurt, and which have no force but what is ſalutary and beneficent, as the immortal Gods that neither will, nor can endamage; for their Nature is mild and placid, as far remote from doing, as from receiving an Injury; wherefore no Man of a ſound Mind feareth the Gods; for it is madneſs to fear what is ſalutary. (x) The Gods like the beſt Parents that ſmile upon their Infants, when they reproach or curſe them, ceaſe not to heap benefits upon thoſe, that doubt of the Author of them; in an equal tenour they diſtribute their Goods through various Nations and People, having only this one power, to benefit or profit. Agreeably to theſe Maxims the ſame Author ſaith, (y) Abſoluta libertas, nec homines timere, nec Deum; the ſtate of abſolute liberty is neither to fear Men, nor God. So according to Zeno one thing requiſite in an happy Man is, (z) nec Deos extimeſcere, not to fear the Gods. The Platoniſts agree with the Stoicks in attributing an irreligious kind of Goodneſs to the Deity (for Plato in his ſecond de Rep. reproveth Homer for his δοιοὶ πίθοι, duo dolia, making Jupiter the diſpenſer both of Goods and Evils; whereas Plato thinketh it a thing unſufferable, to ſay, that God is the cauſe of Evil unto any; he ſuppoſeth, that if any be puniſh'd by him, it is to help and benefit them;) yet they ſuppoſe Caſtigatory Puniſhments in a future Life, and make uſe of their Dogma for promoting Virtue and reſtraining Men from Vice. But Chryſippus affirmeth, (a) ὐτ' ὀρθῶς ἀποτρέπειν τῷ ἀπὸ θεῶν φόβῳ τῆς ἀδικίας τὸν Κέφαλον, that Cephalus in Plato doth not rightly deter Men from Injuſtice by the fear of the Gods. The Gods themſelves (all the Subordinate Deities) are ſuppos'd by the Stoicks, to be mortal and corruptible, and they are all to be ſwallow'd up by the Mundane Syſtem Jove in the univerſal Conflagration: (b) Nor is their Coſmical Jove (being nothing better than a corporeal fiery nature) abſolutely indiſſoluble, indiſcerpible and incorruptible.

(u) Sen. Ep. 95.

(w) Quædam ſunt quæ nocere non poſſunt, nullamque vim niſi beneficam & ſalutarem habent; ut Dii immortales, qui nec volunt obeſſe, nec poſſint, natura enim illis mitis & placida eſt, tam longe remota ab aliena injuria, quàm à ſua. itaque Deos nemo ſanus timet, furor eſt enim metuere ſalutaria. Sen. de Benef. l. 4. c. 19.

(x) More optimorum parentum, qui maledictis ſuorum Infantium arrident, non ceſſant Dii beneficia congerere de beneficiorum auctore dubitantibus: ſed æquali tenore bona ſua per gentes populoſque diſtribuunt, unam potentiam ſortiti, prodeſſe. Idem. ibid. l. 7. c. 31.

(y) Ep. 75.

(z) Cic. Tuſc. Qu. l. 3.

(a) Plut. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1040.

(b) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 17. l. 3. p. 156. l. 4. p. 169, 208.

IV. They phyſiologize away the Fear of Death, explode the laudable uſage of burying the Dead (c) officioſâ pietate (with officious Piety) and of mourning for the Dead; all which is abſurdly unpopular and irreligious. Nor could the World be govern'd, if all Men entertain'd a perſwaſion, that Death (and conſequently the Execution of Criminals) is no penal Evil, no deadly Evil, no Evil at all, as the Stoicks ſuppoſe. (d) To die is the Work of Nature, he that feareth any Work of nature is a very Child; but Death is not only a Work of Nature, but alſo conducive to her. (e) All ways of dying are alike (there is no difference between Natural Death and Death aggravated by horrible Modes and Circumſtances of dying,) dying is like playing at Ball, where the Contention is not about the Ball, as if it was good or evil, but only about the caſting it and catching it well. (f) Socrates called theſe things μορμολύκεια, frightful Mormo's, jeſted with his Adverſaries at his Trial, and play'd at Ball well.

(c) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 1. c. 13.

(d) M. Ant. l. 2. S. 12.

(e) Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 5, 6. & l. 4. c. 7.

(f) Ibid. p. 170, 180.

(g) Canius Iulus (highly commended by Seneca for his contempt of Death) was playing at Cheſs, when the Centurion call'd him forth to die (after he had been reſerv'd for Execution ten Days) leaving his Game he counted his Cheſs-men, ſaying to his Companion, Vide nè poſt mortem meam mentiaris te viciſſe, Do not lie after my Death, and ſay, that you have beaten me. (h) μὴ τραγῴδει τὸ πρᾶγμα, Do not tragically exaggerate the Buſineſs, but repreſent the thing as it is. Death is the Reſolution of the material Concretion into thoſe Elements which it conſiſteth of. God calleth thee to nothing dreadful, but to things amical and congenial, whence thou hadſt thine origin. The Fire which is in thee returneth to Fire, the Earth to Earth, the Air to Air, the Water to Water; (i) οὐδὲν ἄλλο ἢ λύσις τῶν στοιχείων, it is nothing elſe but a Diſſolution of the Elements: It is but being what we were before. Contemn Death, which is either your Extinction or Tranſlation; for neither of theſe hath any Evil in it: If it tranſlateth you to another Life, no place is devoid of Gods: If it depriveth you of all Senſation, there is an end of Pains and Bodily Miniſteries. Death is not any thing, and therefore is not Evil. Which Cicero alſo proveth from an Epicurean piece of Sophiſtry; (k) whilſt we are, Death is not; and when Death exiſteth, we are no more.

(g) Sen. de Tranquil. c. 14.
(h) Epict. Diſſ. p. 293, 402.
(i) M. Ant. l. 2. S. 17. l. 4. S. 5. l. 3. S. 3. Sen. Ep. 54. de provid. c. 6. ad Marc. c. 19.
(k) Tuſc. Qu. l. 1.

Nil igitur mors eſt, ad nos neque pertinet hilum.

Plato alſo and Socrates affirm, (l) That Death is good and better than living with the Body, not to ſome only, but ſimply unto all. (m) He feareth not Death, that loveth to be alone, ſeparate from the Body. But ſome of the Pagans conſider'd Death under other Notions. (n) Some ſuppoſe, that by a privation of Goods only, others, that by Eternal Puniſhments under the Earth and horrendous penalties Death is Evil.

(l) Simplic. in Epict. p. 58.
(m) Plotin. En. 1. l. 6. c. 6.
(n) Τόν τε θάνατον οἱ μὲν ἀγαθῶν στερήσει μόνον, οἱ δὲ καὶ τιμωρείαις αἰωνίοις ὑπὸ γῆν, καὶ κολασμοῖς φρικώδεσι, κακὸν εἶναι νομίζουσιν. Plutarch. de virt. mor. p. 450.

It is not hard for a Stoick to be a Man of Fortitude, to contemn Death and Dangers, and to trample on the whole Kingdom of Fortune; for why ſhould he fear any Evils of Life or the End of Death, that feareth no Diſaſters after Death, and may die when he pleaſeth? (o) If the Wiſe Man be in tragical Circumſtances, and weary of Life, his Philoſophy alloweth and injoyneth εὔλογον ἐξαγωγήν, an Eduction agreeable to Reaſon (ſelf-murder) ἡ θύρα ἤνοικται, the Gate is open, he may go forth out of Life, if he pleaſeth, and imitate the Children's οὐκέτι παίζω, I will play no longer. (p) None hath reaſon to complain of Life, for none is forc'd to live againſt his Will; if he liveth miſerably, it is his own fault; doth it pleaſe you? live: doth it not pleaſe you? you may return whence you came. This Philoſophy was put in practice by ſeveral of the Philoſophic Pagans (Metrocles, Zeno, Menippus and Cato,) the School of Plato (q) was ſomewhat infected with this impure Dogma; but the Popular Pagans that follow'd the Sentiments of Nature, (r) were of better Principles.

(o) Epict. Diſſ. p. 145, 170. Gat. in Ant. p. 83, 213, 314.
(p) Sen. Ep. 70.
(q) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 83, 84.
(r) Lipſ. Manuduct. l. 3. c. 22.

V. The Philoſophy of Pain and Sickneſs (and other Evils of Humane Life) is in the School of the Stoicks of the ſame Character with their Notices of Death, not Wiſdom, but unpopular, irreligious and paradoxical Humour; for their magnificent pretenſions are, (s) That pain and torture of Body is not evil, (as Poſſidonius the Stoick carried on his Diſcourſe, when Pompey viſited him tormented with the Gout, thus ſlighting his Torture; Nil agis dolor, quamvis ſis moleſtus, nunquam te confitebor malum:) or if it be Evil, it is ἀλλότριον κακὸν, another's Evil, not ours, the Body being no part of us, but our Organ only; (t) dolorem in pede manere, divinus Socrates aſſerebat. Socrates affirm'd, that Pain remaineth in the Foot, it doth not affect the Mind with Evil. They can live in great hilarity of Mind, although the Wild Beaſts pull in ſunder their bodily Members; οἱ πεπαιδευμένοι, the Men of Learning (as they ſuppoſe) are furniſh'd with Fortitude againſt things painful and dolorous, which ſuffereth them not to paſs within the Porch of the Soul; but conſidering them as a propos'd exerciſe, beareth them without Dolour and Affliction. (u) Πόνος, ἡδονὴ, ἅπτεταί σου; ὄψεται ἡ αἴσθησις· Doth ſenſitive Pain or Pleaſure touch thee? let Sence look to it: ὄψεται τὸ πάσχον, let the Body and Bodily Members make it their care, if they can, that they ſuffer not; and when they ſuffer, let them complain, if they can, and judge that Pain is Evil: The Soul may keep her proper Tranquility and Serenity, and not ſuppoſe it Evil; for all Judgment, Proſecution, or Averſation is within, and no Evil (unleſs let in by Opinion) aſcendeth thither. Not Fire, nor Iron, nor a Tyrant, nor contumelious Language, can touch the Mind, when ſhe is become like a Sphere (by involving her ſelf in her ſelf) teres tota atque rotunda. But if they can abſtract the Mind from all Sympathy with the Body, and keep her from Diſeaſement by the Pains of it, whence is it, that they cannot keep her from Diſturbance by the Humours of the Body? (for they acknowledge themſelves (w) as liable as other Mortals, to Fevers, Phrenzies and Delirations) whence is it, that upon account of the extremity of Pain, they think it decent, to take away their own lives? and why do they talk of Pain intolerable, and uſually make uſe of the Epicurean Paregorick, (x) if Pain be intolerable, it is not long (for it quickly riddeth us of all Pain:) If it be long, it is not intolerable? (y) When Dionyſius Heracleotas (called ὁ μεταθέμενος, the Changeling or Retractator, becauſe in his declining Age from a Stoick he turn'd Epicurean) fell under great Pain, he relinquiſh'd his Opinion, that Pain is indifferent. He found, that the Stoicks Philoſophy did little more for the cure of Humane Evils, than to make Men (as Critolaus Phaſelites (z) call'd the Stoicks) ὀνοματομάχους, wranglers about Names and Terms; as if changing the Names chang'd the Nature of things: So the Friar on a Faſting-day bade his Capon be Carp, and then very canonically ate it up.

(s) Cic. Tuſc. 2. Stearne Animi Med. l. 4. c. 7.
(t) Simplic. in Epict. p. 77.
(u) M. Ant. l. 8. S. 41. l. 7. S. 13, 14, 16. 18. S. 28. l. 4. S. 39. l. 12. S. 1.
(w) M. Ant. l. 3. S. 1.
(x) Ibid. l. 7. S. 33. 64.
(y) Laert. in vit. Erill.
(z) Clem. Str. l. 2. p. m. 273.

The external Goods of Human Life are not much valuable (ὀβολοῦ γὰρ εἰσὶ, ταλάντου δ' οὐκ εἰσίν, (a) for they are worth an Half-penny only, they are not of the worth and weight of a Talent;) nor is much of them deſirable, (nothing more than is Salutary, and the deſire whereof is Salutary:) But the Stoical indifference is an extravagant unpopular Humour, (b) making no difference between optimè valere and peſſimè ægrotare; for they will not have externals call'd Human Goods, but things indifferent, or at the moſt (c) ſumenda non expetenda, to be taken if they fall, not things to be deſired, only προηγμένα, things to be preferr'd before their contraries. (d) Externals concern us not, are neither our Goods nor Ills, and conſequently we ought not to ſeek or ſhun them: But however they ſhall happen, make a right uſe of them; for although the things be indifferent, the uſe of them is not indifferent: As Children when they play with Shells, their ſollicitude is not about the Shells, but to play with

(a) Epict. Diſſ. p. 335.
(b) Cic. Fin. 2.
(c) Lipſ. Manud. 2. Diſſ. 23.
(d) Epict. diſſ. p. 179, 400.

with them dextrouſly. (e) Upon which terms there may be Well-doing, but no ſuch thing as doing Good to others in the uſe of Externals; yet the Stoicks pretend to Beneficence, and write Books De Beneficiis: Although they are like a Phyſician whoſe care and concern is not the Life and Welfare of his Patient, but only that his own demeanour and management be ſecundum Artem. (f) They inſtitute Mankind to an indifference as to Life and Death, Health and Sickneſs (and yet exhort them to be thankful for their Life and the helps of Life, the Fruits of the Earth) bodily Pain or Pleaſure, Honour or Ignominy, Plenty or Penury, as to Wife, Children, Country, Fame, Poſſeſſions, Friends and their own Bodies. (g) If a Tyrant threatneth me with Bonds, I ſay, he threatneth the Hands and the Feet: If to cut off my Head, I ſay, he threatneth the Neck: If to Impriſon me, the Corpuſculum. Σοὶ οὖν οὐδὲν ἀπειλεῖ; doth he therefore threaten nothing to thee? If I look upon theſe things as nothing to me, he threatneth nothing to me: But if I fear any of them, he threatneth me. (h) Diogenes would not have purſu'd you, had you ſeiz'd and taken away his Poſſeſſions, or a Member of his Body: In like manner, he would have abandon'd his Kinsfolk, Friends and Country. (i) Ὁ υἱὸς ἀπέθανε; τί ἐγένετο; ὁ υἱὸς ἀπέθανεν. Ἄλλο οὐδὲν; οὐδέν. Is thy Son dead? what hath happened? Thy Son is dead. Is that All? That is All. That Ill hath happened, is thine own Additional. (k) If thine Hearing be incommodated, what is that to thee? (l) No ill News can come to thee from Rome, for what Evil can befal thee there, where thou art not? Baniſhment is no Evil; (m) It is but to be elſewhere. (But if Servitude is no Evil, what meaneth that Soveraign Antidote againſt it (n) τὸ εὐκόλως ἀποθνήσκειν, to die readily?) Do'ſt thou want Bread? (o) The Door is open, thou mayſt go out of a ſmoaky Houſe. (p) But is not Life a good? No. (q) May we not deſire Health? No, by no means, nor any thing elſe of the Aliena, from which the Appetite muſt be far remov'd; or elſe thou ſubmitteſt thy Neck to ſervitude, to the Things firſt, and next to the Men that have the diſpoſal of them. (r) Health is not good, nor Sickneſs evil, the good is, τὸ καλῶς ὑγιαίνειν, to be healthful as you ought: In like manner, be Sick as you ought, and Sickneſs becometh good and profitable. The ὀρθὴ χρῆσις τῶν φαντασιῶν, right uſe of the Externals (or appearances) which preſent themſelves (which the Stoicks account the Summary of Virtue) is a Mercury's Rod which turneth every thing that it toucheth into golden. (s) Sickneſs, Death, Penury, Contumely, capital Sentence, touch them with the Rod of Mercury, and they all become profitable. Why then ſhould we ſeek our Goods and Evils in Externals, ſeeing it is in our own Power, to make all Externals good? This is the moſt plauſible Pretenſion for a Stoical indifference as to all Externals: But to rectifie this miſtake in the Philoſophy of Good and Evil, it ought to be conſider'd, that Goods are of a twofold Notion. For ſome things are good as conſtitutive of our true Perfection and felicitative Life: Others are good as mediately conducive thereto. In the firſt Notion the Goods commonly ſo reputed (Life, Health, Honour, Plenty and ſuch more) cannot be Evils; and the Evils commonly ſo reputed (Death, Sickneſs, Infamy, Penury and ſuch more) cannot be Goods. In the ſecond Notion the Evils commonly ſo reputed may be Goods, and the Goods commonly ſo reputed may be Evils, and uſually are, not helps, but hindrances to our true perfection and felicitative Life in a future State.

VI. The Stoicks Moral Philoſophy is an Inſtitution to an unpopular kind of Nobility and Beatitude (of being Noble, Brave, Rich, Proſperous, Fortunate, free from Servitude, Subjection, Miſery and Misfortune altogether unpopularly) quite out of the road both of Civil and Religious Society. For they ſuppoſe, (t) that nothing but our Intelligent free-agent Nature (which they call προαίρεσις, is our ſelf, nothing but τὰ προαιρετικὰ, or τὰ ἐφ᾽ ἡμῖν, the things which properly belong to our Intelligent free-agent Nature, and fall within the Power of our Wills, do concern us, or are our Goods and Evils. Ἔξω τῆς προαιρέσεως οὐδὲν ἐστιν οὔτε ἀγαθὸν, οὔτε κακὸν, out of the Intelligent free-agent Nature (its good Moralities or Vicioſities) there is nothing Good or Evil. (u) Mankind are wretchedly miſtaken in things of greateſt concernment, ſeeking their Goods in Externals, which they muſt ſeek in themſelves, if ever they find them. (w) Diſcarding therefore the many things, they place their one thing and their All in cultivating their Intelligent free-agent Nature, in its being vertuous, and ſuch as the proper Nature of Man requireth. By which method of Diſcipline and Inſtitution they attain (x) a ſtate of proſperity and felicity without impediment or danger of misfortune; for they have learned (and they account it their only Learning) never to fail of their Appetitions, never to fall into their Averſations. As to their Goods and Evils, Proſecutions and Averſations, they are liable to no prohibition, hindrance, conſtraint, fruſtration: But are in a State of perfect Liberty (becauſe not liable to prohibition, impediment, conſtraint, fruſtration in their Appetitions or Averſations,) which they account the greateſt of Goods. (y) From the time that Antiſthenes ſet me at Liberty (ſaid Diogenes) I have not been in any Servitude, nor was he liable to be brought into any. Antiſthenes ſet him at Liberty by ſhewing him what were his own things, and what were not his own; teaching him to diſcard the Body, its Parts and Powers, Poſſeſſions, Fame, Honours, Magiſtracies, Wife, Children, Friends, Relations, and all Externals, as not his own things, but Aliena, and things that were not his Concern, which alone is our Manumiſſion and true Liberty. (z) So Crates having given his Eſtate to the publick Bank, τότε ἔδοξεν ἐλευθερῶσθαι, he then thought himſelf, to be made a Freeman. Agreeably to their Free Eſtate whereby theſe Philoſophic Gallants are ennobled, unſubjected, unſerviliz'd, royaliz'd (for a Kingdom being an unſubject Eſtate (a) they that as to their Goods and Liberties are obnoxious to no ſuperior Power, are neceſſarily in a Kingdom-eſtate,) their temper of Mind is unabject, unſubject, unſervile, ſublime and generous. (b) They that place their Good and Emolument in thoſe things only, that are liable to no prohibition, the things of that comprehenſion which is properly ours, will be free, proſperous, happy, unhurt magnanimous, and pious. Having diſmiſs'd the deſire and fear of Externals, none can hurt them, they inhabit an impregnable City, none can have acceſs to their Riches, they have no Enemy, they complain of none, criminate no Body. (c) Hearken to me (ſaith the Stoick,) and you ſhall never live in Envy, nor be in Anger, Grief, or Fear, never be prohibited or hindred, nor ever Flatter any. To me no Evil can happen, to me there is no Thief (he that ſtole Epictetus's Lamp, (e) Plutarch. adv. Stoic. p. 1072.

(d) was

(f) M. Ant. l. 2. S. 11. l. 9. S. 1. Epict. diſſ. p. 361, 386, 400, 403.

(g) Ibid. p. 158.

(h) Ibid. p 370, 371, 337.

(i) Ibid. p. 281.

(k) Ibid. p. 385.

(l) Ibid. p. 332.

(m) Ibid. p. 384

(n) Ib. p. 352.

(o) Ib. p. 418.

(p) Ib. p. 368.

(q) Ib. p. 359, 141.

(r) Ib. p. 302, & 415.

(s) Φέρε νόσον, φέρε θάνατον, φέρε ἀπορίαν, φέρε λοιδορίαν, δίκην περὶ τῶν ἐσχάτων, πάντα ταῦτα τῷ ῥαβδίῳ τοῦ Ἑρμοῦ ὠφέλιμα ἔσται.

(t) Ib. p. 265, 287, 360, 393.

(u) Ib. p. 313, 344.

(w) Ibid. p. 84, 283, 336.

(x) Ib. p. 172, 313, 206, 221, 358, & 337, 355, 365, 367, 374.

(y) Ib. p. 337, 365, 370, 371, 380, 336, 367.

(z) Simplic. in Epict. p. 59.

(a) Laert. in Zenon. Epict. ſupr. p. 336, 338, 189.

(b) Ib. p. 401, 409, 391, Ench. c. 3.

(c) Diſſ. p. 392, 84, 292.

(d) was no Thief to him,) nor any Earthquake: But all things are full of peace and undiſturbance (quid eſt beata vita? Securitas & perpetua tranquilitas, Sen. Ep. 92.) every Way, every City, every Convention, (e) becauſe I ſeek Good and Evil, ἔσω ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς, within only in mine own things (in judging aright of things, in having my Appetitions and Averſations right, and in the right uſe of Externals) not giving the Name of Good or Evil; of Utility or Damage or any thing of that Nature to the Aliena. (f) For if you place your Good or Evil in Externals, you will neceſſarily be baſe, ſordid, ſervile, liable to prohibition, impediment, conſtraint, grief, envy, fruſtration of deſire, and misfortune, ſubject to the Power of others, and a Servant to them, who have thoſe things at their diſpoſal which you admire or fear, querulous, ireful, timid, accuſing all and never quiet. For all which Evils there is no remedy, but wholly to turn away your deſire from things External, and to turn your Averſation ἐπὶ μόνα τὰ προαιρετικὰ, to thoſe things only, which properly belong to your free Will and Agency. (g) Μία ὁδὸς ἐπὶ εὔροιαν, there is but one way to a proſperous State, to diſmiſs the things External, leaving them to Jupiter and the other Gods. Such are the ὀρθὰ δόγματα, right Principles (Scholaſtick Dogmata,) which theſe Philoſophers inculcate in their Schools, and live in the Meditation and Exerciſe of them, but relinquiſh or diſſemble, when they betake themſelves to the management of publick Affairs. (h) For theſe they manage, as if they accounted Externals (Health, Riches and Glory) Goods; and how can they be throughly concern'd, to avert publick Calamities, if they ſuppoſe them no Evils, or not their Concern?

VII. They have adapted their Inſtitution, not to Human Souls. But to abſtract Noes or ſeparate Intelligences; and it muſt be denominated an Inſtitution of extravagant unpopular Mentaliſts and Intellectualiſts, of their Liberty aad Regality, Security, Tranquility and Proſperity. For the great Principle of their Inſtitution and their Form of living is (i) the placing their All in the comprehenſion of their own Hegemonicon, diſcarding all things elſe as not belonging to them. (k) Corpuſculum nihil ad me: Partes illius nihil ad me: Mors nihil ad me. The Body is nothing to me: The Parts of it are nothing to me: Death is nothing to me. (l) The Buſineſs of a Philoſopher is not to conſerve Externals, but to form and conſerve his own Hegemonicon, which is the Repoſitory of all his Goods, and where his All is always in ſafety. (m) This is the State and Character of a Philoſopher, he looketh for all his Utility and Damage from himſelf. He deſireth no accommodations, feareth no incommodations from any. (n) If another can hurt me, then I do nothing: If I expect, that another help me, then I am nothing. He is his own Safety and City of Refuge; (o) for the Hegemonicon is inexpugnable, when collected into it ſelf, it is Self-content, the Mind devoid of Paſſions is an Acropolis, a ſtronger place (whereunto to make his Refuge, and ſo to become impregnable) and better fortified than this, hath no Man. (p) If he is impriſon'd, he ſuffereth no prohibition; if thrown down a Precipice, he ſuffereth no conſtraint; if tortur'd, he is not tormented; if burn'd, he is not hurt; if he falleth in wreſtling, yet he cannot be vanquiſh'd; if incompaſs'd by a Wall, yet he cannot be beſieg'd; and if he be ſold by Enemies, yet he cannot be captivated; he hath Riches and a Kingdom, and is fortunate and proſperous, unindigent and ſelf-ſufficient without a Penny in his Purſe, as Plutarch expreſſeth the Stoicks Rhodomontades. So Varro jeſteth upon their Romantic Virtue; (q) he that hath Virtue, needeth not a Cloak in the Rain. He that is Indigent, let him become a Cynick (the Cynicks boaſted, that they had found out the moſt compendious way to felicity) and hunger no more, ſaith the Epigrammatiſt. (r) Fecit ſibi pacem nihil timendo, fecit ſibi divitias nihil concupiſcendo. The wiſe Man hath created Peace to himſelf by fearing nothing, and Riches by not deſiring any thing. (s) Although without City, Houſe or Harbour (ἄοικος, ἄπολις, ἀνέστιος) yet he wanteth nothing. (t) He can be happy by himſelf in a State of Solitude (without the innumerable and ineſtimable Benefits of Society) as being Self-felicitative and Self-ſufficient. (u) And becauſe he liveth in the perfection of Virtue and Felicity, as Plotinus ſaith (who with a mixture of Platoniſm entertaineth theſe Dogmata of the Stoicks together with their αὐτοχειρία, Self-murder,) neither publick nor private Calamities are at all infelicitative to the wiſe Man. Not publick Calamities; for (w) the overturning and ruin of his City will he count it any great thing? If he ſuppoſeth it a grand Evil or any evil at all, he will be ridiculous, and no more virtuous, accounting Wood and Stone and the death of Mortals ſome great matter. (x) Wars, Seditions, the death of multitudes of Men, the over-turning and burning of Cities are no great things: As the death of multitudes of Cattel, the over-turning and burning of Birds-neſts are no great matters. Not private Calamities that befal himſelf or his Relatives. For without any Title to a future Happineſs (y) the wiſe Man is Happy in the midſt of Torments. (z) His Beatitude receiveth no addition from Health, Eaſe and Pleaſures, nor any diminution from their Oppoſites.

(a) Shew me a Man (a genuin Stoick) proſperous and happy in Sickneſs, Danger, Death, Baniſhment, Diſgrace. Such Bravado's deſerve this Reprimand. Quid tu tibi in acerbis caſibus conſtitutus Beati nomen imponis? Thou that art in a calamitous State, what haſt thou to do to call thy ſelf Bleſſed? Jul. Firm. de Err. Prof. Rel. p. 40.

VIII. The Stoicks pretenſions to Apathy (to be devoid of the Animal Affections and Paſſions) ſpeak them of Character extravagant and unpopular Mentaliſts. For all the External Goods and Evils of this and another World (which are the object of Human Paſſions) muſt be diſcarded, to reduce themſelves to an Apathy. And whereas there is a duplicity of Nature in Man, an upper and alſo a lower Soul wherein the Paſſions are ſeated (for the compleating of which the Stoicks require the concurrence of Opinion and Judgment, (b) ſeating them in part in the Hegemonicon, and denying that Brute-animals have any true Affections or Paſſions,) inſtead of theſe Paſſions of the lower Soul they ſubſtitute certain mental operations, (c) Will inſtead of the paſſion of Deſire, mental Joy inſtead of the paſſion of Joy, Caution inſtead of the paſſion of Fear; but inſtead of Grief or Sorrow they ſubſtitute nothing, becauſe they deny any ſuch thing in a wiſe Man. (d If Ulyſſes in truth lamented for his Wife, was he not unhappy? But what good Man is unfortunate or unhappy? If therefore he cried and lamented

(d) Ib. p. 132, 160.

(e) Ib. p. 178, 336.

(f) Ib. p. 386, 401, 267.

(g) Ib. p. 387, 221.

(h) Plutarch. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1034.

(i) Epict. Diſſ. p. 360, 361, 393.

(k) Ib. p. 310.

(l) Ib. p. 287. 418.

(m) Φιλοσόφου στάσις καὶ χαρακτήρ, πᾶσαν ὠφέλειαν καὶ βλάβην ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ προσδοκᾷ. Epict. Ench. c. 71.

(n) Idem Diſſ. p. 409.

(o) M. Ant. l. 8. S. 48.

(p) Plutarch. ὅτι παραδοξότερα, &c. p. 1057, &c.

(q) Gat. in Ant. p. 40, 155, 182.

(r) Sen. Ep. 87.

(s) Epict. Diſſ. p. 422.

(t) Lipſ. manud. l. 3. Diſſ. 10.

(u) Plotin. En. 1. l. 4.

(w) Ibid. c. 7. Lactant. l. 6. c. 15.

(x) Epict. Diſſ. p. 156, 157.

(y) Lipſ. ſupr. Diſſ. 6. Lactant. l. 3. c. 27.

(z) Plotin. ſupr. c. 14.

(a) Δείξατέ μοι τινὰ νοσοῦντα καὶ εὐτυχοῦντα, κινδυνεύοντα καὶ εὐτυχοῦντα, ἀποθνήσκοντα καὶ εὐτυχοῦντα, πεφυγαδευμένον καὶ εὐτυχοῦντα, ἀδοξοῦντα καὶ εὐτυχοῦντα. Epict. Diſſ p. 232.

(b) Lipſ. manud. l. 3. diſſ. 7. Gat. in Anton. p. 211, 329, 382.

(c) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 14. c. 8.

(d) Epict. Diſſ. p. 331, 312.

lamented, he was not a good Man. Agamemnon was unhappy, for he lamented, that the Greeks were in danger, and were likely to be kill'd by the Trojans. But muſt they not die, although the Trojans do not kill them? (e) Sorrow for parting with, or for the death of Friends are in this Inſtitution very bad things (a Branch of Apathy which (f) even Epicurus and Seneca inveigh againſt;) this Philoſophy is a contrivance, to live in perfect indolence. (g) It alloweth not Sorrow for our Sins and Vices. (h) Felicity is inconſiſtent with the deſire of things abſent; he that is happy muſt have all that he deſireth, like unto a full Man, ȣ δίψος δεῖ προσεῖναι αὐτῷ, ȣ λιμός, without either Hunger or Thirſt. Thus the Doctors of the Stoa make a Lycurgus's Reformation of Humane Nature, inſtead of wiſe and regular Paſſions they deſign the Eradication of them (of Sorrow, Anger, Hope or Fear of any thing,) the wiſe Man muſt be like the Witches (i) that cannot cry (as it is ſaid,) like thoſe that deſcend into Trophonius's Den, who become ἀγέλαστοι, and cannot laugh, and (to uſe Epictetus's Phraſe (k) of a proud Man) as rigid as if he had ſwallow'd an Obelisk. But if this be Philoſophy, the old Man had great reaſon, to tell his Son, (l) Hear me my Son! you muſt Philoſophize, but you muſt have Brains too: Theſe are egregious fooleries. And ſuch are the Stoicks Paradoxical Maxims, although not of ſo bad a meaning, as they ſeem to be at firſt ſight. (m) Sapientem gratiâ nunquam moveri; nunquam cujuſquam delicto ignoſcere. Neminem miſericordem eſſe, niſi ſtultum & levem. Viri non eſſe exorari atque placari. The wiſe Man is never mov'd by Grace or Favour; never pardoneth the Crimes of any. None commiſerate (or are merciful) but the vain and fooliſh. It is not the property of a Man to be exorable and placable. (n) Miſericordia or Commiſeration (which is the Name both of a Natural Paſſion and a Divine Grace) is in Stoiciſm a forbidden thing, becauſe of the Grief and Sorrow which it involveth.

But (doubtleſs) it would be better for Mankind, to be left to the Sentiments of Nature, than to be inſtituted to ſuch an harden-fac'd Virtue, that is neither poſſible (for themſelves acknowledg'd (o) that the Inchoations of Paſſion which the Schools call Propaſſiones are unavoidable) nor tolerable, being abſolutely deſtructive both of good Nature (the kindly inſtincts that are in Nature) and the Life of Grace, which conſiſteth in the exerciſe of divine and gracious Affections and Paſſions. (p) The leſs their dolours are, the greater are their tumours: The greateſt Saints are the greateſt weepers in prayer. (q) The affections (if rightly directed) are the chariot of life. Fear and Deſire are divine virtues, if their objects be things divine. (r) Τὸ συγχαίρειν ϗ συναλγεῖν, to ſympathize with others in their Joys and Sorrows, is inſeparable from true Benevolence. But the Stoicks admit no ſympathick Sorrow ſave only (s) κατ' οἰκονομίαν, by way of adminiſtration or Politick management of things. (t) If you ſee a Man lamenting his Misfortunes, you may in words accommodate your ſelf to him, and if you be ſo diſpos'd, co-lament with him: But take care, that you do not internally co-lament. Nemeſius a Biſhop of the Chriſtian Church (commixing Stoiciſm and Platoniſm) determineth, (u) All Sorrow is Evil in its own Nature: For although the Man of Moral Virtue will ſometimes be ſorrowful, when good Men, or his Children are deſtroyed, or when his Country is vaſtated, yet this is not primarily or of purpoſe, but by accidental miſ-hap; and in theſe Circumſtances the Theoretic Man is altogether in Apathy, having alienated himſelf from the things that are here, and conjoyn'd himſelf with God: And the Man of Moral Virtue is but moderately affected with them. (w) Epictetus was uſually read by the vulgar Pagans (Plato only by the learn'd,) who much admir'd him, becauſe they were ſenſibly benefited by reading him; and ſo may Chriſtians without criminally Philoſophic-paganizing, or making Divine Chriſtianity and Heathen Philoſophy of one piece. But the Monk Evagrius (x) wrote a Book on behalf of the Stoical Apathy endeavouring to introduce it into the Church. And (agreeably to the Humour of Criminal Philoſophic-paganizing which of old invaded the Church) a late Author hath attempted (y) to revive the Stoicks Indolence, and pretendeth to their abſurd Paradoxical Apathy at a great rate. Dolorem, Metum & Spem profligavimus, à quibus mente liberatâ, Audacia, Deſperatio atque Ira evaneſcunt. We have profligated Sorrow, Fear and Hope (and Miſericordia alſo,) from which the Mind being freed, Audacity, Deſperation and Anger neceſſarily vaniſh. There is ſomething of Ariſtippus and the Cyrenaicks in this Author's Dogmata (for he placeth our ſummum bonum in Pleaſure, which the Stoicks did not;) and therefore they may well walk in Company with the ſaying of a Modern Atheiſt and boon Companion. (z) All things are good that make us Merry, and the merrier any Man is, the more of the Divine Nature and Perfection he hath.

IX. Amongſt the Pagans the Sect of the Stoicks was charg'd with Arrogance (it was objected to Rubellius Plautus, quòd aſſumſiſſet Stoicorum arrogantiam, (as Tacitus ſaith,) and not without great reaſon; for their extravagant Liberty, Security, Tranquillity, ſelf-ſufficiency (ſibi ſufficiunt ad beatam vitam) Nobility, Beatitude, Apathy (and other Branches of their Inſtitution) ſpeak them of Character Philoſophic Bravo's; and (which is a prodigy of Arrogance) their wiſe Man is not any thing leſs than one of Jupiter's Peers, that liveth as well as the Gods live. (a) The wiſe Man full of Joy, Pleaſant, placid and unſhaken by any thing, cum Diis ex pari vivit. And as it is agreeable to Jove (ſaith Chryſippus,) to elate himſelf upon account of his life, to think great, and (if I may ſo ſpeak) ὑψαυχεῖν καὶ κομᾶν ϗ μεγαληγορεῖν, to lift up his Head to glory and magnifie himſelf, living worthy of a magnifying Elation: So theſe things agree to all good Men, that in nothing come behind Jove. (b) As to the Body thou art a ſmall part of the Univerſe: But in reſpect of the Mind or Reaſon, not worſe, nor leſs than the Gods; for the greatneſs of the Mind is not to be judg'd of by Longitude or Altitude, but

(e) Ib. p. 215, 329.

(f) Plut. non poſſe, &c. p. 1101. Sen. Ep. 39.

(g) Plut. de Tranqu. An. p. 468.

(h) Epict. Diſſ. p. 331.

(i) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 47.

(k) Diſſ. p. 139. Gat. in Ant. p. 13.

(l) Ἄκȣσόν μȣ τέκνον· δεῖ μὲν ϗ φιλοσοφεῖν, δεῖ δὲ ϗ ἐγκέφαλον ἔχειν· ταῦτα μωρά ἐστι. Epict. Diſſ. p. 142.

(m) Ibid. p. 28, 69.

(n) Sen. de Clem. c. 5. Lactant. l. 3. c. 23. l. 6. c. 10. & 17.

(o) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 9. c. 4. Gat. Supr. p. 421. Stearne An. Med. p. 206.

(p) Hoc ipſo in eis ſunt ma- ores tumores, quo minores dolores. Quanto quiſque eſt San-ior & deſiderii Sancti plenior, anto eſt ejus in orando fletus berior. S. Aug. de C. D. l.
4. c 9. l. 20. c. 17.

(q) Lactant. l. 6. c. 17.

(r) Plut. Supr. p. 451.

(s) M. Ant. l. 11. S. 18.

(t) Μέχρι μὲν τοι λόγȣ μὴ ȣνει συμπεριφέρεσθαι (τῷ κλαί-ντι) κἂν ȣ̎τω τύχῃ, συνεπινάξαι. πρόσεχε μέντοι, μὴ ἔσωθεν συνεπιστενάξῃς. Epict.
nch. c. 22. M. Ant. l. 5. S.
6. & l 7. S. 43.

(u) Πᾶσα δὲ λύπη κακὴ τῇ ἑαυτῆς φύσει· εἰ γὰρ ϗ ὁ σπȣδαῖος λυπηθήσεταί ποτε χρηστῶν ἀνδρῶν διαφθειρομένων, ἢ τέκνων ἢ πόλεως πορθȣμένης, ἀλλ' ȣ προηγȣμένως· ȣ δὲ κατὰ πρόθεσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ περίστασιν. ϗ ἐν τȣ́τοις, ὁ μὲν θεωρητικὸς ἀπαθὴς ἐστι παντάπασιν, ἀλλοτριώσας ἑαυτὸν τῶν τῇδε ϗ συνάψας θεῷ· ὁ δὲ σπȣδαῖος μετριοπαθὴς ἐν αὐταῖς. De Nat. Hom. c. 19.

(w) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 275.

(x) Baron. ad ann. 388. n. 104.

(y) Stearne Med. An. l. 3. c. 18. de obſtinat. c. 11, 12.

(z) Spinoſa.

(a) Lipſ. Manuduct. l. 3. Diſſ. 14. Gat. in Ant. p. 109, 295. Plut. de Stoic. repugn. p. 1038.

(b) Οὐκ οἶσθα, ἡλίκον μέρος πρὸς τὰ ὅλα· τȣ̃το δὲ κατὰ τὸ σῶμα· ὡς κατά γε τὸν λόγον, ȣ̓δὲ χείρων τῶν θεῶν, ȣ̓δὲ μικρότερος. Λόγȣ γὰρ μέγεθος ȣ̓ μήκει, ȣ̓δ' ὕψει κρίνεται, ἀλλὰ δόγμασιν. Epict. Diſſ. p. 121.

by decretory Sentiments. In this Philoſophy one of the Fundamental Maxims is, Sapientes omnes pares eſſe, all the Wiſe and Good are Equals, being all of them happy to the height of Beatitude. For Virtue the true Beatific Good is equal in them all (it is not capable of increaſe or diminution; and as for Externals, which are of no conſideration, they make no diſparity: Time alſo maketh no diſparity; for an honeſt Life of an hundred Years and of one Day is equally honeſt. From whence it followeth, Τὸν Δία ϗ τὸν Δίωνα σοφοὺς ὄντας, that Jupiter and Dio being both Wiſe, are Equals; for notwithſtanding ſome minute differences there is no conſiderable diſparity between them. In Virtue (which is the ſole Beatific Good) Jupiter doth not tranſcend Dio. In Felicity God doth not tranſcend the wiſe Man, although he ſurmounteth him in age, which maketh no diſparity. But is not Jupiter the more Potent and the more Opulent? (c) Sextius was wont to equalize Jupiter and the good Man. Jupiter indeed hath more, and can do more for Mankind: But between two that are good the richer is not the better. Do you inquire of the difference between a wiſe Man and the Gods? The Gods will exiſt a longer time. But it is a great Artifice, clauſiſſe totum in exiguo, to incloſe the whole in a little room. For the wiſe Man will have the whole in his Age, which God hath in a long Succeſſion of Ages. In this and ſome other reſpects the wiſe Man tranſcendeth Jupiter, and he admireth himſelf above him. (d) There is ſomething wherein the wiſe Man may have the Precedence of God: He is one of the Wiſe by the benefit of Nature, not by his own Efficiency, as the wiſe Man is. (e) The wiſe Man ſeeth and contemneth all things, which others Poſſeſs, with as equal a Mind as Jupiter: And upon this account more admireth himſelf; Jupiter cannot make uſe of them, the wiſe Man will not. Theſe Bravado's (with ſuch more) are peculiar to the School of the Stoicks, and have no Parallel. For who but they make ſuch Compariſons? Rival it with Jupiter? Diſpute Precedence with him and with the other Gods? there is nothing of this Nature in any other Sect of Pagan Theologers, much leſs amongſt the Chriſtian Theologers; for thoſe Aſcriptions of Divinity to Divine Men which are of Kind and Quality Religious, (f) a late Apologiſt for Stoiciſm ought to have diſtinguiſh'd from the Stoicks rampant Luciferian kind of Aſcriptions, and not to have confounded things extremely Diſſonant and Repugnant. They are alſo things extremely Diſſonant and Repugnant, which this learned Apologiſt hath confounded in ſome other impure Philoſophic-paganizing Conceits. (g) That the Holy Scriptures ought to be interpreted out of the Writings of the Heathen Philoſophers. (h) The meaning of Scripture-terms muſt be learn'd from their Schools. (i) When the Divine Word is capable of ſeveral Senſes, that ſhould be thought the genuin, which its Philoſophic Auditors were moſt likely to underſtand, and is moſt conformable to their Principles. (k) That the Stoicks ſacer Spiritus, bona Mens, ſacred Spirit, good Mind, are the very ſame with the Holy Ghoſt of the Chriſtian Religion. At this rate of confounding things that meer declamatory Stoick Seneca (l) will be a good Chriſtian, (m) the Holy Ghoſt a Pagan Demon, (n) the Stoicks Sapience will be Divine Grace, (o) their Paradoxes Divine Oracles, (p) Salvation the deſign of their Philoſophy, (q) their parity with Jove coincident with the Chriſtian Theology, (r) and theſe Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts inſpired Men, as they ſuppos'd themſelves. For (s) they had in themſelves οἱονεὶ θεόν, God as it were, and therefore were Divine. (t) God counſell'd them and put them upon their teaching Trade, as alſo Socrates and Diogenes. (u) A Cynick is Jove's Miniſter and Witneſs, a Meſſenger ſent from him, to rectifie Mens Errors about their Goods and Evils; a partaker of his Empire, and is furniſh'd by him with a Scepter and a Diadem. But notwithſtanding theſe their magnificent Pretenſions, it is manifeſt that they were ἀπειρόκαλοι, atheouſly unskilful in the Science of Good and Evil, that they miſtook Vice for Virtue, and that their Virtue (full of Arrogance) is Self-magnifying and Self-deifying in an improbous Senſe. (w) Origen therefore (who well underſtood their Idiom) ridiculeth and explodeth this their delirous Gloriation, that the God over all is not happier than the wiſe Man.

X. There is the ſame Reaſon for the reſt of their Paradoxical Grandiloquence. (x) The wiſe Man is always alike, and of the ſame countenance (as Socrates was) in all circumſtances, always joyous, deſiring no greater things than he hath at Home. (y) If by magnanimity alone (which is but a Branch of Virtue) he is above all things, then Virtue contemning all things that ſeem to be dolorous, is alone ſufficient to Beatitude. (z) The wiſe Man doth not opine (aſſent to any incertitude,) is ignorant of nothing, never deceiv'd, never unſucceſsful, never repenteth of any undertaking, wondereth at nothing, nothing befalleth him contrary to Opinion. The good Man is perfect, ſinneth in nothing, is impeccable, ſuffereth no injury, is not mad although maniacal, is inebriated yet not drunk. (a) All things are the Stoical wiſe Man's, he is the only King and Free-man, he alone is rich, beauteous, noble (as alſo the only Citizen, Magiſtrate, Judge, Orator, Poet, Prieſt, Prophet,) all which romantick and ſwaggering Prerogatives of the wiſe Man are nothing better than unpopular humour and bravado. The popular Pagans religiouſly acknowledge (b) their good Endowments the Gifts of God: But the Stoicks ſay of their Sapience (c) every one that hath it, oweth it to himſelf. When theſe mundane Sages are in their ruff, they make a puff at praying and imploring the Divine Aid for the acquiſition of Virtue. (d) Quid votis opus eſt? fac te ipſe felicem. What need is there of Prayers? Beatifie thy ſelf. In a better Humour they aſſert the concurrence of Divine Aſſiſtance with Human Endeavours, they exhort us to pray for Virtue, a good Mind, and the Divine Aid: But ſo that the Effect is properly to be aſcrib'd to our own Power, becauſe it is a thing which properly belongeth to our own Power. For this Philoſophy contradiſtinguiſheth τὰ ἐφ' ἡμῖν, τὰ οὐκ ἐφ' ἡμῖν, the things that properly belong to our own Power, the things that do not properly belong to our own Power. The Works of Providence are not the things that properly belong to our own Power, they are properly to be aſcrib'd to the Gods: But the Stoicks Virtue and its conſequent Felicity are Plotin. En. 1. l. 4 c. 15.

---

Τοῦ μὲν Διὸς οὐδὲν χείρους φασὶν εἶναι. Ariſtid ap. Phot. cod. 249. col. 1312. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 178.

(c) Solebat Sextius dicere, Jovem plus non poſſe quàm bonum Virum. Plura Jupiter habet, quæ præſtet hominibus, ſed inter duos Bonos, non eſt melior qui locupletior. Sen. Ep. 73.

(d) Eſt aliquid quo ſapiens antecedat Deum: Ille naturæ beneficio, non ſuo ſapiens eſt. Sen. Ep. 53.

(e) Sapiens tam æquo animo omnia apud alios videt contemnitque, quàm Jupiter: Et hoc ſe magis ſuſpicit, quòd Jupiter uti illis non poteſt, ſapiens non vult. Sen. Ep. 74.

(f) H. Dodwell. proleg. Apolog. præfix. J. Stearnii Libel. de obſtinat. S. 63.

(g) Ib. S. 27.

(h) Ibid. p. 83, 96.

(i) Ibid. p. 101.

(k) Ibid. p. 215, 228, 237, 266.

(l) Ibid. p. 118.

(m) Ib. p. 133, 266.

(n) Ib. p. 218.

(o) Ibid. p. 228.

(p) Ibid. p. 210.

(q) Ibid. p. 264.

(r) Ib. p. 14 228.

(s) Laert. in Zeno.

(t) Epict. Diſſ. p. 307.

(u) Ibid. p. 310, 315, 319, 321, 350, 410.

(w) C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 309.

(x) Simplic. in Epict. p. 232. Lipſ. ſup. Diſſ. 5. Gat. in Ant. p. 13.

(y) Laert. in Zeno. Cic. Tuſc. 5.

(z) Lipſ. ſupr. Diſſ. 3. & Gat. in Ant. p. 112, 17

(a) Lipſ. ibid. Diſſ. 11, &c.

(b) Εἰ μάλα καρτερός ἐσ θεός που σοὶ τόγ' ἔδωκεν. Homer.

(c) Illam ſibi quiſque debet. Sen. Ep. 90.

(d) Gat. in Ant. p. 6

are things that properly belong to our own Power, and are properly to be aſcrib'd thereunto, according to that of Cotta in Cicero. (e) All Mankind aſcribe the Commodity and Proſperity of Life to the Gods: But none ever aſcrib'd (the Philoſophic) Virtue to the Deity. So the Poet (ſpeaking the Philoſophers Senſe) aſcribeth Life and Riches to Jove, but not a virtuous Mind; for that is an Effect which properly belongeth to his own Power. (f) Let him give Life and Riches, I will get to my ſelf a good Mind. But as Riches are the Gift of Providence, yet not excluſively to Human Endeavours: So the Virtue of the Mind belongeth to our own Power, yet not excluſively to Divine Aſſiſtance; (g) for who hath told thee (ſaith M. Antoninus,) that the Gods do not help us even in thoſe things that they have put in our own Power? Whence an appearing inconſiſtency in another Poet (who alſo ſpeaketh the Philoſophers Senſe) is eaſily reconcileable.

Orandum eſt ut ſit mens ſana in corpore ſano.
Monſtro quod tibi ipſi poſſis dare. —— Juvenal.

Becauſe the Gods help us in thoſe things that properly belong to our own Power, therefore the Poet ſaith, pray for a virtuous Mind. Yet becauſe the Virtues of the Mind are things that properly belong to our own Power, and muſt be aſcrib'd thereto, therefore the Poet ſaith, I tell thee of that which thou mayeſt beſtow upon thy ſelf. (h) For the help of the Gods is not requiſite in any great degree, nor otherwiſe than as a leſs principal and adjuvant Cauſe: Nor is Man ſuppos'd, to be impotent and inſufficient for Virtue and Beatitude in any great degree. (i) Patranda eſt potiùs quàm impetranda, it is rather a thing to be patrated by Man than impetrated of the Gods. If this be the genuin Senſe of the Stoicks, (which their learned Apologiſt (k) hath not explicated, but imbroil'd,) their Virtue and Beatitude is of themſelves properly as the Authors and Donours of it, and is properly to be aſcrib'd to themſelves; their ability, ſafety, and their ſufficiency for Virtue and Beatitude, is in themſelves; their Truſt, Hope and Confidence is properly and principally in themſelves (the inexpugnable Caſtle of their own Hegemonicon and their adamantine Dogmata;) and the Spirit that breaths in a genuin Stoick is a criminal gigantic Self-ſufficiency, Self confidence, Self-dependence, Self-aſſuming Gloriation. (l) Ille verò glorietur audacter, & Diis agat gratias. He thanketh the Gods, but with audacious Self-gloriations. (m) His Joy is an Elation of the Mind ſuis bonis viribuſque fidentis, truſting in its own Goods and Abilities. He talketh big and high and challengeth Danger to a Combat, (n) vires ſuas novit, ſcit ſe eſſe oneri ferendo, he knoweth his own ſtrength, and that no burden is too many for him. His Liberty is not obnoxious to Jupiter's Power, (o) τὴν προαίρεσιν ὐδ' ὁ Ζεὺς νικῆσαι δύναται, the agency of his free-will or his Philoſophic purpoſe even Jupiter cannot vanquiſh. The Stoicks are (p) alti Spiritus Viri, the Men of an high Spirit, and (q) the difference between them and the other Sects of Philoſophers is as great as between Men and Women. Agreeably to their faſtuous Sublimities Syneſius Philoſophic paganizeth. (r) Trouble the Gods no more, being able to ſave your ſelf out of your own Stores, if you will.

Their faſtuous Temper appeareth not only in their Demeanour towards Jupiter and the Gods, but in their Carriage to their Civil Governours. For they ſuppos'd, (s) that no Man had Dominion over them being Jupiter's Sons and Subjects, manumis'd and ſet at Liberty by him from all Servitude, Force and Conſtraint. And having diſcarded all regard to things Premiant and Penal, whereby Societies are governed, they diſcarded therewith their due Subjection and Reverence to the Civil Power. A crime not ſo bad (perhaps) as baſe, ſervile, ſoothing and treacherous Adulation; but extremely incongruous to Philoſophers, that are Citizens of the Univerſe. Yet theſe taught the Cynick his faſtuous Language. (t) How do I treat thoſe as Slaves, whom you fear and admire? Who is there, that when he ſeeth me, doth not ſuppoſe, that he ſeeth his Lord and King? What is Cæſar to a Cynick, or the Proconſul or any other, ſave only Jupiter that ſent him down and whom he ſerveth? They are alike faſtuous in their contempt of the Chriſtians, imputing the Fortitude of the Martyrs in their Sufferings, (u) ſometimes to meer Cuſtom, (w) ſometimes to meer obſtinacy. Their Crime was, they were Popular Religioniſts, not Philoſophers, (x) they did not φυσιολόγως ὁρᾶν τὰ ἐν τῷ βίῳ, Phyſiologically ſpeculate the things of Humane Life. But it is too little, to ſay, that theſe ſurly Sophiſts contemn'd Chriſtianity, ſome of them were nefarious Perſecutors of the Chriſtians (for Creſcens the Synick is a known Perſecutor, (y) nor is it poſſible to acquit M. Antoninus of that heinous crime,) which being a repugnance to the kindly Inſtincts that are in Nature, the Bonds and Alliances that are in Nature, the Deſign and Inſtitution of Nature, the grand Law of Nature (univerſal Benevolence and Beneficence,) the good that ſhould be in Nature, and the natural uſe of things, ſpeaketh thoſe Philoſophers that are guilty of it bad Interpreters of Nature.

XI. Inſtead of ſober Moralities their Philoſophic Pride affecteth Tranſcendentals that are Extravagances; for ſuch is their Superlative Strictneſs, (z) not to move a Finger unleſs Reaſon dictateth:

(Ni tibi conceſſit Ratio, digitum exſere peccas.)

Their ſeverity of Temper (a) never ſpeaking any thing for pleaſure, nor admitting any thing of that nature ſpoken by others; which is Sowreneſs and ſupercilious Gravity. (b) Their Preſcript of Silence for the moſt part and ſpeaking ſeldom is an Exceſs; as alſo their conformity to the Phariſees (to whom Joſephus compareth them) in a ſupercilious Contempt of the Vulgar Pagans; and their Averſation from Vulgar Converſation upon the Separatiſts Hypotheſis; He that is converſant with a polluted Companion muſt neceſſarily be polluted. The Patience which they preſcribe the Cynick (a Divine Man) is nothing better than (c) ſuperbiæ ſtupor, an haughty ſullen Inſenſibleneſs; for his Tolerance muſt be ſuch, (d) that he ſeemeth to the Vulgar devoid of Senſe and a Stone. Their Conſtancy to their Principles was a Vice (for Cicero obſerveth that when Reaſon and Arguments fail'd them, they ſupply'd that defect by Conſtancy and Courage;) and their unvariable conſtancy of Temper

(e) Omnes mortales ſic habent; omnem commoditatem proſperitatemque vita à Diis ſe habere: Virtutem autem nemo unquam acceptam Deo retulit. Judicium hoc omnium mortalium eſt, fortunam à Deo petendam, à ſeipſo ſumendam ſapientiam.

(f) Hæc ſatis eſt orare Jovem, qui donat & aufert.
Det vitam, det opes: Æquum mi animum ipſe parabo. Horat.

(g) M. Ant. l. 9. S. 40.

(h) V. M. Ant. l. 2. S. 11. & l. 6. S. 32.

(i) S. Aug. Ep. 52.

(k) Epict. Diſſ. p. 372. 392.

(l) Sen. Ep. 92.

(m) Lipſ. Manud. l. 3. Diſſ. 5.

(n) Sen. Ep. 64. & 71.

(o) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 1.

(p) Sen. Ep. 90.

(q) Id. de Conſtant. Sap. c. 1.

(r) Μηκέτ' οὖν ἐνόχλει τοῖς θεοῖς, οἴκοθεν ἣν ἐθέλῃς δυνάμενος σώζεσθαι. De provid. p. 101.

(s) Epict. Diſſ. p. 135, 158, 381, 402.

(t) Ibid. p. 314. vid. Heraclitus's behaviour. ibid. p. 175.

(u) Ibid. p. 400.

(w) M. Ant. l. 11. S. 3.

(x) Ibid. l. 9. S. 31.

(y) V. Baron. ad an. 164. n. 6. & 10.

(z) Lipſ. Manud. l. 3. diſſ. 15.

(a) Laert. in Zenon.

(b) Epict. Ench. c. 41, 45.

(c) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 19. c. 4. Tertull. de Patient. c. 2.

(d) Ὡς αὐτὸν ἀναίσθητον δοκεῖν τοῖς πολλοῖς, ϗ λίθον. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 12.

per or Self-conſiſtency could be no Virtue, but an Inconſiſtency with the true Virtue, which exerciſeth various Affections and Paſſions upon various occaſions, Anger, Mildneſs, Boldneſs, Fearfulneſs, Joy, Sorrow. But the Stoical Wiſe Man is criminally μονοπρόσωπος, (e) he never changeth Countenance, (none ever ſaw Socrates more joyous or more ſad,) agreeably to the Conceit of Ariſto Chius, (f) that the final good is τὸ ἀδιαφόρως ἔχοντα ζῆν, neutram in partem moveri, to live in an abſolute indifferency of Mind (which is a thing intermediate between Virtue and Vice) without any variation or motion either way (like the dead Sea) carrying one's ſelf with the ſame equable tenour in all things. (g) The Wiſe Man muſt be always alike, in acute Pains, in the loſs of Children, in long Diſeaſes. The Extravagance of their tranſcendental Fortitude appeareth in Celſus's Objection againſt our Saviour. (h) Anaxarchus put into a Mortar and moſt cruelly beaten, contemn'd the puniſhment at a great rate, ſaying, Beat, beat the Sack of Anaxarchus, for him thou doſt not beat, which was indeed the voice of ſome Divine Spirit. Epictetus not at all intimidated, but ſmiling at his Maſter, when he wrench'd and tortur'd his Leg, told him, you will break it; and having broken it, did I not tell you, ſaid he, that you will break it? τί τοιοῦτον ὁ ὑμέτερος θεὸς κολαζόμενος ἐφθέγξατο; what like this did your God utter in his Pains? The Divine Paſſive Virtue of the Captain of our Salvation was not agreeable to their Idea of Fortitude (which was an high Tumour and greatneſs of Mind, of the ſame kind with the Military Gallantry, diſdaining all Hardſhips and adverſe occurrences of Fortune, and all ſeeming abjection and weakneſs of Mind) the Philoſophic Ruffians and mighty Men of Valour diſdain it at the ſame rate with the ſwaggering Vaninus; Illi in extremis præ timore imbellis ſudor, ego imperterritus morior: He at his laſt had a cowardly Sweat, I die without fear or affrightment. (i) With the like Military Gallantry and Stoutneſs ſeveral of the Ancient Philoſophers died; and of later times Simonides a young Philoſopher of great Auſterity condemn'd to the Fire by the Emperour Valens, as being conſcious of a Magical Complotment againſt him; (k) Fleeing Life as a rabid Miſtreſs, deriding the ſudden downfals of ponderous Maſſes, he burn'd with immovable Firmitude; imitating a famous Philoſopher Peregrinus, who having determin'd to leave the World, at the time of the Olympicks, under the Eyes of all Greece, aſcending a Fire-pile which himſelf made, was conſum'd by Flames. Of ſuch Military kind of Bravery and Celſitude of Mind are the Philoſophic-Pagan Σιδηρόφρενες, Iron-minded Men; their Fortitude and Magnanimity (which rais'd them above Fortune, (l) provok'd and contemn'd all her adverſe Power) is of the ſame ſtrain with Democritus's, who ſcorn'd the great Goddeſs Fortune, ſent an Halter to her (thereby bidding her hang her ſelf) and in contempt of her held out the middle Finger.

> ——— Cum Fortunæ ipſe minaci
> Mandaret Laqueum, mediumque oſtenderet unguem.
> Juven. Sat. 10.

As the Stoicks Patience, their Conſtancy and Fortitude, ſo their Paſſive Obedience and conformity of Will to the Divine Will (which is a grand Fundamental of their Inſtitution, and wherein their Philoſophy moſt of all expatiateth and triumpheth) is a tranſcendental Extravagance. (m) For they accommodate their Will to all Events and reſolve it into the Will of Governing Providence, that by this method they may live in a ſtate of perfect Liberty (Tranquillity, Proſperity, Felicity and Generoſity of Mind) not obnoxious to any Prohibition, Impediment, Force, Subjection to the power of others, failure of Appetition, nor to fall into any Averſation. (n) How ſhall I become of free eſtate? for he is a Freeman, to whom all things happen according to his Mind, and none can be his hindrance; naturally I would have all things to happen, as I pleaſe; but to be learned, is to learn to will all things to be as they are. Will nothing but what God willeth, and none can hinder thee, none can force thee, no more than Jupiter. I was never hindred in my Volitions, nor neceſſitated to my Nolitions, becauſe I have rendred my Appetition accommodate to God. Is it his Will, that I ſhould be in a Fever? it is my Will. Is it his Will, that I ſhould obtain any thing? it is my Will. Is it not his Will? it is not mine. Who can now hinder me, or force me againſt mine own Mind? Seek not, that Events ſhould be as thou willeſt; but will them to be as they are, and thou canſt not fail to be proſperous.

XII. In this eminent Branch of Stoical Philoſophy there is an appearance of great Virtue and an exact conformity to the Religion of God's People; but if we examine it, it will be found extremely alien and diſſonant from their true Piety. For (1.) The entire Submiſſion and Reſignation to the Coſmical Rector which Piety injoyneth, muſt be underſtood of ſuch a Submiſſion and Reſignation, which is due, and is of kind and quality Virtuous and Pious; but Stoiciſm over-ſtretcheth the String, and runneth into profane Exceſs and Extravagance: For it is not pious, to pray with the dying Stoick, (o) place me in what Region thou pleaſeſt. (p) Ἆρόν με καὶ βάλλε ὅπου θέλεις, Take me and throw me, where thou wilt, I am indifferent.

(2.) It is not a due conformity to the Divine Will, to have regard to no Calamities, but the common Calamities of Humane Life, to overlook the grand Events of Death and the intolerable Calamities of a future ſtate. (q) Nothing can happen to thee or any Man, which is not an Humane Calamity; for ſurely the common Nature of all would not bring upon thee that which is intolerable.

(3.) It is not a due conformity of Will to the Divine Will, to entertain all afflictive Providences with a Stoical Indifference, as being Externals, which are ſubjected to the Divine Gubernation and Diſpoſal, none of our Goods or Ills, which are only in the Mind. (r) What good happeneth to a Ball, when it is thrown upwards?

(c) Stearne de obſtin. p. 341. Gat. in Ant. p. 13.

(i) Laert. in Zenon.

(g) Ἀεὶ χρὴ τὸν σοφὸν εἶναι ὅμοιον, ἐν ἀλγηδόσιν ὀξείαις, ἐν ἀποβολῇ τέκνων, ἐν μακραῖς νόσοις. M. Ant. l. 1. S. 8. Epict. Diſſ. p. 148.

(h) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 367.

(i) Clem. Str. l. 4. p. m. 362. Tertul. Apol. c. 49.

(k) Vitam ut Dominam fugitans rabidam, ridens ſubitas momentorum ruinas, immobilis conflagravit; Peregrinum illum imitatus protea cognomine Philoſophum clarum: qui cum mundo digredi ſtatuiſſet, Olympiæ quinquennali certamine ſub Græciæ conſpectu totius, aſcenſo rogo quem ipſe conſtruxit, flammis abſumptus eſt. Am. Marcellin. l. 29.

(l) Cic. Tuſc. 5. Sen. Ep. 88. Epict. Diſſ. p. 222.

(m) Epict. Diſſ. p. 119, 387.

(n) Πῶς ἂν γενοίμην ἐλεύθερος; ἐλεύθερος γάρ ἐστιν, ᾧ γίνεται πάντα κατὰ προαίρεσιν, καὶ ὃν οὐδεὶς δύναται κωλῦσαι. ἐγὼ θέλω πᾶν τὸ δοκοῦν μοι ἀποβαίνειν· ἀλλὰ τὸ παιδεύεσθαι, τοῦτ' ἐστι μανθάνειν ἕκαστα οὕτω θέλειν ὡς γίνεται. Epict. Diſſ. p. 118, 119. Μηδὲν ἄλλο θέλε, ἢ ἃ ὁ θεὸς θέλει, καὶ τίς σε κωλύσει; τίς ἀναγκάσει; οὐ μᾶλλον ἢ τὸν Δία. Ibid. p. 221. Ἐγὼ δὲ πώποτ' οὐ θέλων ἐκωλύθην, οὔτ' ἠναγκάσθην μὴ θέλων· καὶ πῶς τοῦτο δυνατόν; προσκατατέταχα μου τὴν ὁρμὴν τῷ θεῷ. θέλει μ' ἐκεῖνος πυρέσσειν; κἀγὼ θέλω. θέλει με τυχεῖν τινός; κἀγὼ βούλομαι· οὐ θέλει; οὐ βούλομαι· τίς ἔτι με κωλῦσαι δύναται παρὰ τὸ ἐμοὶ φαινόμενον ἢ ἀναγκάσαι; Ibid. p. 361, 362. Μὴ ζήτει τὰ γινόμενα γίνεσθαι ὡς θέλεις· ἀλλὰ θέλε τὰ γινόμενα ὡς γίνεται, καὶ εὐροήσεις. Vid. Gat. in Ant. p. 160.

(o) Epict. Diſſ. p. 116.

(p) M. Ant. l. 8. S. 45.

(q) Ἀνθρώπῳ οὐδενὶ συμβαίνειν τι δύναται, ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνθρωπικὸν σύμπτωμα· οὐ γὰρ ἀφόρητόν σοι ἔφερεν ἡ κοινὴ φύσις. M. Ant. l. 8. S. 46.

(r) Τί οὖν ἀγαθὸν τῷ σφαιρίῳ ἀναφερομένῳ; ἢ κακὸν καupwards? or evil, when it falleth downwards?

(4.) A Stoick's conformity of Will to the Divine Will is not a due conformity, becauſe it implieth Apathy and Indolence. His Inſtitution obligeth him, notwithſtanding all his own Sins and Sufferings, the Sins and Miſeries of Mankind, and the Sufferings of God's People, to be (s) ἄλυπος, ἄφοβος, ἀπαθής, ἀτάραχος, (t) δι᾽ οὐδένα δυστυχεῖν, devoid of Sorrow, Fear, Paſſion, Perturbation, not to make himſelf unhappy (or dolorous) upon any one's account.

(5.) The Stoical Wiſe Man is always in Joy; accordingly, a late Chriſtian Stoick hath taught us, (u) to rejoyce in all the tragical Calamities of Mankind, that thereby our Wills may be conform'd to the all-diſpoſing and adminiſtring Divine Will. And withal he ſuppoſeth, (w) that our Saviour hath forbidden Jejunium luctuoſum, ſuch Faſts which are mournful Exerciſes of Piety (as all true Faſts are) approving only a joyous, or at leaſt an indolent Faſt; which goeth a great way towards bidding the Italians, keep Carnival all the Lent-time. (x) We will add the almoſt laſt words of M. Antoninus to his Friends bewailing him near his Death. Why do you lament for me, and do not rather think of the Peſtilence and the common Death? Which words he ſpake deridingly of Humane Affairs, as Capitolinus ſaith; whereas he ought rather to have ſpoken them deploringly, which alſo Joſ. Scaliger hath obſerv'd.

(6.) It muſt not be thought a due conformity to the Divine Will, to diſcard the humbling methods of Piety for the cure and removal of the diſaſtrous Events of Providence (Faſting, afflicting the Soul, Deprecation, Interceſſion) and to ſubſtitute in their ſtead that magnanimous voice (y) συνορμῶ, συνορέγομαι, ἁπλῶς συνθέλω, with him (God) I affect and purſue, with him I deſire, my Volitions are ſimply and abſolutely co-incident with the ſupreme Volitions. They that are oblig'd, to make uſe of thoſe humbling methods of Piety (although they accept the Puniſhment of their Iniquities, yet) how are they oblig'd at the ſame time without Exception or Limitation (z) θέλειν, (a) φιλεῖν, (b) ἐξ ὅλης τῆς ψυχῆς ἀσπάζεσθαι τὰ συμβαίνοντα, to will, love, be well pleas'd with, and from the whole Soul to embrace the things that happen?

(7.) Nor is it agreeable to the Divine Will (c) to diſcard the Methods of Religion for propitiating the Divine Diſpleaſure and obtaining the Divine Favour in diſaſtrous Circumſtances (which not only God's People, but the Popular Pagans (d) made uſe of, to appeaſe the Divine Anger, when Calamities came upon them) as ſuppoſing or preſuming (e) that the Divine Nature cannot be angry, (f) and that the Events of Providence are Fatalities; both which are ſettled Maxims in the School of the Stoicks. Their Philoſophy had been much more agreeable to Piety, had they entertain'd that other Hypotheſis, which they ſometimes harp upon, but have not made it a ſettled Maxim, nor form'd their Philoſophy agreeably thereto. (g) If there be a placable and exorable Providence, make thy ſelf worthy of help from the Divinity.

(8.) They that will all things to be as they are, muſt neceſſarily will the ſtate of things in the World, to be as bad as it is; which is repugnant to all true Virtue, to the uſe of Prayer, (h) and to the Stoicks deſires and endeavours for the emendation of Mankind. Yet this they muſt mean by their conformity of Will to the Divine Will. (i) Seeing a Man is therefore happy, becauſe he hath whatſoever he willeth; that he may never fail of it, it is requiſite, that he will things to be as they are, and not to be as they are not: Every one is calamitous, whoſe Will is not conformable to the things, or to whoſe Will the things are not conform'd. But becauſe things are, or are not, according to the determination of the Divine Will as their cauſe; to will that things be as they are, and that things be not, as they are not, is to will what God willeth, and to nill what God willeth not; but to will what God willeth not, is madneſs, and is never fulfill'd; and to will what God willeth, never faileth of Completion and Fruition. I Will ſomething, and it is not done; and that which is done, is againſt my Will; what can be more unhappy?

(9.) Their Paſſive Obedience is nothing more than a Tolerance of the Patienda, ſeparate from thoſe grand duties of Piety (the humbling our ſelves under the Divine Hand, ſearching and trying our ways, practice of Repentance, rectifying our Nature, refining our Temper, improving in Devotion) which are the Agenda in a ſtate of Affliction. (k) What will you do with a Diſeaſe, when it cometh? I will demonſtrate its Nature, and demonſtrate in it mine own Excellency, Stability, Proſperity, I will not flatter the Phyſician, nor deſire to die; and this is all the uſe, which the beſt of Stoicks could make of a Diſeaſe.

(10.) Their Tolerance is not the genuine kind of Tolerance, but is of kind and quality ſpurious and illegitimate; for there is in it, (l) the inſolent boldneſs of an affected liberty, (which rivals with Jupiter) and the immodeſt boaſting of a ſhew'd-forth and half-naked Breaſt (which Expreſſion relateth to the Philoſopher's naked Shoulder) as S. Cyprian remarketh. To which we may add; that the Virtue and Glory of it is no better than the Fortitude and Stoutneſs of Philoſophic Bravo's. (m) Look at the Powers which thou art furniſh'd with, and having view'd them ſay, φέρε νῦν ὦ Ζεῦ, ἣν θέλεις περίστασιν, bring upon me now, O Jupiter, what hardſhip thou wilt, I am ſufficiently furniſh'd by what thou haſt given me, to make whatever happeneth ornamental to me. (n) At length erect thy Neck as come out of Servitude, fearing nothing that can happen: Dare to lift up thine Eyes to God, and ſay, Uſe me hereafter to whatſoever thou pleaſeſt, I am of the ſame mind with thee, I am equal to any thing. (o) Endure Death, endure Labours, endure Impriſonment, endure Diſgrace, endure Condemnation. I will wiſh in ταφερομένῳ; M. Ant. l. 8. s. 20. vid. l. 9. S. 1.

(s) Epict. Diſſ. p 222, 395.

(t) Ibid. p. 337. M. Ant. l. 4. S. 49.

(u) Stearne de obſtinat. 163, 164.

(w) Ibid. 186.

(x) Adjicere lubet Marci ipſum verba ferè noviſſima ad amicos moribundum deflentes; Quid me fletis & non magis de peſtilentia & communi morte cogitatis? Quod res humanas ridendo protuliſſe eum dicit Capitolinus; cùm deplorando potius dicere debuerit; quod & Joſ. Scaliger obſervavit. Gat. Not. in Ant. p. 324. ed. ann. 1652.

(y) Epict. Diſſ. p. 402.

(z) M. Ant. l. 12. S. 3.

(a) Ibid. l. S. 16.

(b) Ib. l. 3. 4. vid. l. S. 6.

(c) Sen. Ep. 95.

(d) Tiraquel. de Nobil. p. 326.

(e) Lipſ. de Conſtant. l. c. 6. Lactant de irà D.

(f) M. Ant. l. 10. S. 5.

(g) Εἰ δὲ πρόνοια ἐπιδεχομένη τὸ ἱλάσκεσθαι, ἄξιον αὐτὸν ποίησον τῆς ἐκ τοῦ θείου βοηθείας. M. Ant. l. 12. S. 14.

(h) Epict. Diſſ. p. 389.

(i) Cùm homo beatus ſit, quia habet quicquid vult, ut voti ſui ſemper fiat compos, velle ut res ſint ut ſunt; & ut non ſint, ut non ſunt, oportet: calamitoſus eſt omnis, ſive cujus voluntas rebus non eſt conformis, ſive cujus voluntati res non ſunt conformes. Quoniam verò res ſunt, vel non ſunt, pro arbitrio voluntatis divinæ tanquam cauſæ; velle ut res ſint, ut ſunt; & ut non ſint, ut non ſunt; eſt velle quod Deus vult, & nolle quod Deus non vult: velle autem quod Deus non vult, dementiæ eſt, & nunquam completur; & velle quod Deus vult, fruitione nunquam non completur. Stearne An. Medel. l. 1. c. 19. Volo aliquid, & non fit: & non volente fit. Quo quid infelicius? Epict. Diſſ. p. 220.

(k) Τὴν νόσον τί ποιήσεις; δείξω αὐτῆς τὴν φύσιν, διαπρέψω ἐν αὐτῇ, εὐσταθήσω, εὐροήσω, τὸν ἰατρὸν οὐ κολακεύσω, οὐκ εὔξομαι ἀποθανεῖν. Epict. Diſſ. p. 304. v. M. Ant. l. 7. S. 58.

(l) Inſolens affectatæ libertatis audacia, & exerti ac ſeminudi pectoris inverecunda jactantia. S. Cypr. de Bono patient.

(m) Epict. Diſſ. p. 100.

(n) Ἀνάτεινόν ποτε τὸν τράχηλον ὡς ἀπηλλαγμένος δουλείας. Μηδὲν φοβούμενος τῶν συμβῆναι δυναμένων· τόλμησον ἀναβλέψαι πρὸς τὸν θεὸν εἰπεῖν, ὅτι χρῶ μοι λοιπὸν εἰς ὃ ἂν θέλῃς, ὁμογνωμῶ σοι, ἴσος εἰμί. Ibid. p. 217, 222.

(o) Φέρε θάνατον, φέρε πόνους, φέρε δεσμωτήριον, φέρε ἀδοξίαν, φέρε καταδίκην. Ibid. p. 172. Ut me in illis fortiter, animoſè, honeſtè geram, optabo. Sen. Ep. 67.

all theſe to carry my ſelf without failure of Fortitude, Stoutneſs, Laudableneſs.

(11.) Their αὐτοχειρία, to run the Pit and ſlink out of Harm's-way by taking away their Lives in bad Circumſtances, is a grand inconſiſtence with the Heroic Atchievements of their Paſſive Virtue, and demonſtrateth, that it was of kind and quality ſpurious and illegitimate.

(12.) A ſtate of Sufferings for Righteouſneſs ſake (which as ſuch cannot be Afflictions for Sin) is of ſuch Ennoblement and Perfection, of ſuch vaſt advantages, and both preſent and future-premiant Beatitude, that it ſeemeth not reaſonable, to affix the Cenſure of Imprudence upon the Chriſtian Martyrs, that throng'd the Tribunal of their Perſecutors. But what ſhould invite a Stoick, who looketh for nothing but his Labour for his Travel, to relinquiſh the Indifference of his Inſtitution, and to become a Zealot for Blows? yet not content with the obſervance of their own Rules, to follow things and to follow Providence, they have a faſtuous Humour and extravagant Fondneſs, (to over-run their Diſcretion, and) to run before them. (p) Man, you ſhould go rejoycing into Priſon, making haſt, over-going thoſe that carry you thither. (q) I remember to have heard this ſtout Saying of the moſt ſtout Demetrius; for this one thing, ye immortal Gods, I may complain of you, that you have not before made known your Will to me; for I had before come to thoſe things, to which I am now come by your providential call. Would you have my Children? they are at your diſpoſal; or ſome part of my Body? take it. It is no great thing, that I promiſe, I ſhall ſoon leave the whole. Is it your Will, to have my Spirit? in me there ſhall be no delay, but that you may receive what you have given. Whatever you ask, you ſhall have it from a willing Man. What therefore is the matter? I had rather offer, than meerly deliver. What need was there to take away, what you might have taken as an Oblation?

(13.) Their conformity of Will to the Divine Will in Paſſive Obedience, as it is exemplify'd in the Lives of their greateſt Saintiſts, is but acting an unpopular Humour; as is apparent from the Life of Diogenes (and there is the ſame reaſon for Socrates, Heraclitus and others;) yet this their κυρία δόξα, or principal Rule is miſtaken by the Myſtical Theologers of the Church of Rome for a Rule of Seraphic Virtue. And hence Thaulerus hath form'd his Tale of a Chriſtian Beggar, (r) who pretended, that he was never unhappy or unfortunate, nor ever had an unproſperous Morning. Becauſe (ſaid he) whatever God willeth, that I will. But theſe Myſtical Theologers ought to have underſtood, that our conformity to the Divine Will ought to be a due conformity, and that there may be ſuch a conformity to the Divine Will of Events, as claſheth with the Divine Will of Duty and Precept.

(14.) The Stoicks Inſtitution to Paſſive Virtue is for the moſt part founded upon bad (Stoical) Principles. (s) Doſt thou call that a miſchance to a Man, which is no miſchance to the (proper) Nature of Man? (t) Let that part which judgeth of things be at reſt, (and not ſuppoſe any Externals good or evil) although the Body which is next the thing, be cut or burn'd, ſuffer Corruption or Putrefaction. (u) That which maketh not the Man worſe (which doth not involve him in any Crime, nor deteriorate his Mind) doth not make his Life the worſe, nor can it hurt him; as many more beſides the Stoicks ſuppoſe. (w) All things that befall Men are allotted them by that Whole or Univerſe, whereof they are a part; and that is good for every one, which the nature of the whole bringeth upon every one. (x) For two reaſons thou muſt be well pleas'd with every thing that happeneth to thee: the one is; becauſe for thee it was brought to paſs, and was to thee co-ordinate, and to thee had relation, and was from the beginning and the moſt ancient cauſes woven together with thee (thy deſtiny brought it it upon thee, and it was ordain'd for thee, and thou to it;) the other is; becauſe it is requiſite to the Proſperity, Conſummation, and indeed the Permanency of the Adminiſtrator of the whole. (y) Whatever ſhall come to paſs, the World loveth to have it ſo: I ſay therefore to the World, I concur with thee in Affection, and love to have it ſo: Which muſt not be thought a virtuous ſaying; (for what Virtue is there in deifying the World? in concurring in Affection with this Region of Sin and Mortality and Miſery, the Laws of whoſe Adminiſtration are manifeſtly penal and calamitous?) but it ſpeaketh a Philoſophic-Pagan Gallantry and greatneſs of Soul, agreeably to Seneca's and the reſt of the Stoicks Grandiloquence, which it may fitly interpret. (z) Nihil patior invitus, nec ſervio Deo, ſed aſſentio. (a) Naturæ conſentiamus: optimum eſt pati, quod emendare non poſſis: & Deum quo auctore cuncta proveniunt, ſine murmuratione comitari. Malus Miles eſt, qui imperatorem gemens ſequitur, quare impigri atque alacres excipiamus imperia; id poſſumus, magnum ſumere animum. Hic eſt magnus animus, qui ſe Deo tradidit, at contra ille puſillus ac degener, qui obluctatur, & de ordine mundi male exiſtimat, & emendare mavult Deos quam ſe.

Inſtead of a bare Tranſlation of theſe Latin Sayings of Seneca we will give an Account of the true ſenſe and meaning of them in this following Metaphraſe. " A Stoick having dei-
" fy'd Mundane Animative Nature, which is
" ſuppos'd, to be cauſal of the Order and E" vents of the World, is not meerly ſubject
" thereto by Paſſive Obedience (although he ad-
" viſeth others to bear what they cannot amend:)
" but his Paſſive Virtue is of an higher ſtrain,
" he is of the ſame Mind and Affection with " Mundane Governing Nature and with the " World; therefore he ſuffereth no diſaſters un-
" willingly, nor followeth this Orderer of the " World's Events with complaint, nor with re" gret and ſorrow (if at any time he alloweth
" Sorrow, it is againſt his Principle; for he is " an ill Soldier, that followeth his General la" menting;) but with Indifference, Apathy, In-
" dolence,

(p) Ἄνθρωπε εἰς φυλακὴν σε δεῖ χαίροντα ἀπιέναι, σπεύδοντα, φθάνοντα τοὺς ἀπάγοντας. Epict. Diſſ. p. 339.

(q) Hanc animoſam Demetrii fortiſſimi viri vocem audiſſe me memini: Hoc unum, Dii immortales; de vobis queri poſſum, quod non ante mihi voluntatem veſtram notam feciſtis; prior enim ad iſta veniſſem, ad quæ nunc vocatus adſum. vultis liberos ſumere? illos vobis ſuſtuli. vultis aliquam partem corporis? ſumite. Non magnam rem promitto, citò totum relinquam. vultis ſpiritum? quidni? nullam moram faciam, quo minus recipiatis, quod dediſtis. à volente feretis quicquid petieritis. Quid ergo eſt? maluiſſem offerre, quàm tradere. quid opus fuit auferre? accipere potuiſtis. Sen. de provid. c. 5. v. Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 6. & 10.

(r) Stearne An. Medel. l. 3. c. 18. de obſtinat. p. 346.

(s) M. Ant. l. 4. S. 49.

(t) Κἂν τὸ ἐγγυτάτω αὐτοῦ τὸ σωμάτιον, τέμνηται, καίηται, διαπυΐσκηται, σήπηται, ὅμως τὸ ὑπολαμβάνον περὶ τούτων μόριον, ἡσυχαζέτω. Ibid.

(u) Ὃ χεῖρω αὐτὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἄνθρωπον οὐ ποιεῖ, τοῦτο οὐδὲ τὸν βίον αὐτοῦ χείρω ποιεῖ, οὐδὲ βλάπτει. Ibid. l. 4. S 8. l. 2. c. 11. vid. Gat. Not. p. 48.

(w) Συμφέρει ἑκάστῳ ὃ φέρει ἑκάστῳ ἡ τῶν ὅλων φύσις. Ibid. l. 10. S. 20. l. 2. S. 3. l. 3. l. 4 l. 7. S. 66.

(x) Κατὰ δύο λόγους στέργειν χρὴ τὸ συμβαῖνόν σοι· καὶ ἕνα μὲν, ὅτι σοι ἐγίνετο, καὶ σοὶ συνετάττετο, καὶ πρὸς σέ πως εἶχεν, ἄνωθεν ἐκ τῶν πρεσβυτάτων αἰτίων συγκλωθόμενον· καθ' ἕτερον δὲ, ὅτι τῷ τὸ ὅλον διοικοῦντι τῆς εὐοδίας, καὶ τῆς συντελείας, καὶ νὴ Δία τῆς συμμονῆς αὐτῆς αἴτιόν ἐστι. Ibid. l. 5. S. 8.

(y) Ἐρᾷ δὲ ὁ κόσμος ποιῆσαι ὃ ἂν μέλλῃ γίνεσθαι· λέγω οὖν τῷ κόσμῳ, ὅτι σοὶ συνερῶ. Ibid. l. 10. S. 21.

(z) Sen. de provid. c. 5.

(a) Idem Ep. 107.

dolence; yea with promptitude, alacrity, magnanimity. He is not ſollicitous for the cure and removal of calamitous Events, nor for propitiating the Divine Diſpleaſure, and conciliating the Divine Favour, nor doth he ardently deſire a better State of this World, nor that himſelf be in a better State, nor is he ſollicitous for the preſent bettering his Eſtate towards God, nor for the great Agenda in a State of Affliction; for no ſtate is to him afflictive. But he is ſollicitous for a greatneſs of Mind, which he aſſumeth to himſelf, reproaching the Atheiſtically impatient ſort of Men with abjectneſs and degeneracy of Mind, who think ill of the Order of the World, and ſtrive againſt it, and inſtead of amending themſelves would have the Gods amend: Nor hath he any better conceit of the truly Religious; for they are ſaid to be poor in Spirit, they ſuppoſe Afflictions the Diſcipline of Sinners, that they ought to be humbled under them, to comport with the Economy of Providence, and to anſwer the pious Deſigns of them; that Death is Puniſhment, that God can be Angry, that the World is under the Divine Diſpleaſure; and they live in fear of otherkins Puniſhments than meerly Caſtigatory and Medicinal. Thoſe only he accounteth the Men of great Minds, that have made a Stoical Tradition of themſelves to mundane Regent Nature, and given up all that belongeth not to their own Power to its Gubernation, thereby becoming Free-men and Philoſophic Bravo's; ſuch as this Author deſcribeth elſewhere. (b) Ferte fortiter: hoc eſt quo Deum antecedatis. Ille extra patientiam malorum eſt, vos ſupra patientiam. Bear Diſaſters ſtoutly: In this you may precede God. He is without the Patience of Evils, you are above it. From this account of the (forecited) Sayings of a declamatory Stoick it appeareth, that they are in great part Paganical, Stoical, Tranſcendental Extravagances; and therefore I muſt complain of an Irreligious Extravagance in the Elogy, which a late learned Biſhop hath given of them in his Diſcourſes of Paſſive Obedience. (c) Where is there any thing among thoſe that profeſs Chriſtianity better and more becomingly ſaid to this purpoſe? Or how can the Wit of Man frame any Senſe or Words, that do more fully expreſs this Self-reſignation and Submiſſion to the Providence of God than is done in thoſe excellent Speeches of an Heathen Philoſopher?

XIII. It is a vulgar Error, to ſuppoſe the ſublime Heathen Philoſophers (commonly called the Moral Philoſophers,) to be Teachers of nothing higher than common Morality and Natural Religion; whereas the Men of this low level are the popular Pagans (and ſuch Philoſophers as tranſcend not their Inſtitution,) amongſt whom much of this is to be found, and nothing higher than this. (d) Many glory of their Works, and many (popular) Pagans will therefore not become Chriſtians, becauſe they ſuppoſe their good Life ſufficient. To live well, ſaith the Pagan, is the thing that is needful. What will Chriſt command me? To live well? I do that already. Why then is Chriſt neceſſary for me? I commit no Homicide, nor Theft, nor Rapine, nor deſire other Mens Goods, nor am I contaminated by any Adultery. Let any thing reprehenſible be found in my life, and he that reprehendeth it, let him make me a Chriſtian. To this Morality Nature inſtituted the Popular Pagans. (e) For the Diſcipline of Ethicks is Nature's Inſtitution, common to all Mankind. But although the Stoicks in forming their Moral Philoſophy (which they call βίȣ τέχνη, ἐπιστήμη τȣ̃ βίȣ, the Art of life, the Science how to live) pretend to follow Nature as their School-Miſtreſs, and although they call their Philoſophy Moral (as indeed it is their Morality,) yet their Moralities are extremely Diſſonant from, and tranſcendent to Nature's Inſtitution of Morality; for they are the Moralities of Philoſophic-Pagan Saintiſts, of unpopular Humoriſts, of abſtract Mentaliſts, Enthuſiaſts and Divine kind of Men, as they account themſelves. (f) Shew me a Man (ſaith the Stoick) that deſireth, to be made a God of a man, and in this mortal Body to have Conſortſhip with Jove. The Religion therefore and Piety which is properly Stoical, is not Natural Religion (of Nature's Inſtitution and of Natural Obligation:) But a ſupernatural Religion, the fruit of Art and human Contrivance, to ſerve the deſign of living in Self-ſufficiency, Independency, Liberty, Apathy, Proſperity, and undiſturb'd Tranquillity. (g) As Crates with his Scrip and Cloak παίζων ϗ γελῶν ὥσπερ ἐν ἑορτῇ τὸν βίον διετέλεσε, paſſed over his Life ſportfully and ludicrouſly as in a Feſtival. (h) God hath no need of a querulous Spectator. But of thoſe that Feaſt and Dance together with him, that may rather applaud, and like thoſe that are in a tranſport celebrate and praiſe the Feſtival Solemnity. It is not ungrateful to him, to ſee the miſerable and timid diſmiſs'd from the Feſtival Solemnity; for when they were at it, they did not behave themſelves as at a Feſtivity. It is not hard to determine, which were the better ſort of Religioniſts: Whether the Popular Pagans that complain'd, when they were hurt (provided they abſtain'd from curſing their Deities,) were touch'd with their Afflictions, and look'd upon mournful Spectacles with the Eyes of Mourners: Or the Ruffian-like gigantick Philoſophers, (i) who took a pride in being Soldiers of Fortune, and truſting in their own ſtrength and their invincible Dogmata, derided all her frowns; that would live at the rate of Pagan Deities (who are above Paſſion) in Human Fleſh, and were ſo far from ſuppoſing with Holy Men, (k) ὅτι θρήνων ὁ παρὼν καιρὸς, this is a time of lamenting, that they turn it into a Play and a Feſtival. Agreably to their Hypotheſis (l) that the perfection of felicity is attainable in this Life, they contriv'd a method of arriving at ſo tranſcendent a Condition; which was by placing all their good ἐν τοῖς προαιρετικοῖς, in their own things only, that are at the diſpoſal of their own Wills, contemning (m) all the ἀπροαίρετα, that belong not to their free-agent Nature. Being thus inſti-

---

(b) Sen. de Provid. c. 6.

(c) Biſhop Wilkins of Natural Relig. 1. Par. ch. 17. Quid eſt præcipuum? Poſſe læto animo adverſa tolerare; quicquid acciderit ſic ferre, quaſi tibi volueris accidere. Debuiſſes enim velle, ſi ſciſſes omnia ex decreto Dei fieri. Sen. Qu. Nat. l. 3. Præfat.

(d) Multi gloriantur de operibus, & invenis multos Paganos propterea nolle fieri Chriſtianos, quia quaſi ſufficiunt ſibi de bona vita ſua. Bene vivere opus eſt, ait. Quid mihi præcepturus eſt Chriſtus? ut bene vivam? Jam bene vivo. Quid mihi neceſſarius eſt Chriſtus? Nullum homicidium, nullum furtum, nullam rapinam facio, res alienas non concupiſco, nullo adulterio contaminor. Nam inveniatur in vita mea aliquid quod reprehendatur, & qui reprehenderit, faciat Chriſtianum. S. Aug. in Pſal. 31.

(e) Τὰ γὰρ ἠθικὰ μαθήματα πάντας ἀνθρώπȣς ἡ φύσις ἐπαίδευσε. Theodor. Θεραπ. Ser. 2.

(f) Θεὸν ἐξ ἀνθρώπȣ ἐπιθυμȣ̃ντα γενέσθαι, ϗ ἐν τῷ σωματίῳ τȣ́τῳ τῷ νεκρῷ, περὶ τῆς πρὸς τὸν Δία κοινωνίας βȣλευόμενον, δείξατε. Epict. Diſſ. p. 231.

(g) Plut. de An. Tranquil. p. 466.

(h) Οὐκ ἔχει χρείαν [ὁ Θεὸς] θεατȣ̃ μεμψιμοίρȣ. Τῶν συνεορταζόντων δεῖται, τῶν συγχορευόντων ἵν' ἐπικροτῶσι μᾶλλον, ἐπιθειάζωσιν, ὑμνῶσι δὲ τὴν πανήγυριν. Τȣ̀ς ταλαιπώρȣς δὲ ϗ δειλȣ̀ς, ȣ̓κ ἀηδῶς ὄψεται ἀπολελυμένȣς τῆς πανηγύρεως· ȣ̓δὲ γὰρ παρόντες ὡς ἐν ἑορτῇ διῆγον. Epict. Diſſ. p. 364.

(i) Sen. Ep. 67. Epict. Diſſ. p. 372.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. in Joan. Hom. 64.

(l) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 19. c. 4. & Ep. 52.

(m) Ep. Diſſ. p. 401, 330 inſtituted, to live in Safety, Liberty, Independency upon others, not liable to be conſtrain'd, hurt, or hindred by any, never failing of proſperous Succeſs, never being unfortunate, nor conflicting with any adverſity, they could bear. (n) whatever happen'd without humiliation or brokenneſs of Mind. They aſſumed to themſelves a greatneſs of Mind (as ſuppoſing that nothing could hurt them, and that they were beyond the power of Evil,) and were able to make this Reſignation to Providence from their whole Soul. (o)

Ἄγε δέ μ' ὦ Ζεῦ καὶ σύ γ' ἡ πεπρωμένη,
Ὅποι ποθ' ὑμῖν εἰμι διατεταγμένος.
Carry me, O Jupiter, and thou O Fate,
Whitherſoever I am deſtin'd by you.

Such is the Stoicks magnanimous paſſive Obedience, neither Natural, nor Chriſtian Religion, yet ſuch as hath a Conſonance with both: But ſuch a Conſonance that is complicated with extreme Diſſonance, the Diſſonance is greater than the Agreement. And if we agree not with the Stoicks touching Paſſive Obedience (which is the top-Flower and Quinteſſence of their Philoſophy,) nor think it ſafe to rely upon the Maxims of the Philoſophic Pagans (both becauſe they are Pagans, and becauſe they are Philoſophic, of an unpopular humour) we are not likely to entertain a late Conceit, that all the Agenda in Chriſtianity (the two Sacraments excepted) are nothing but what was taught before by the Moral Philoſophers. For although of all things in our Religion and Theopolity there are Conſonances, Affinities and Reſemblances in their Religion and Inſtitutions of Learning and Virtue (as all Terreſtrial Animals are ſaid to have their Reſemblances in the Sea:) yet the beſt of them muſt be thought bad Teachers of Duty and Virtue, all of them being Aliens from true Piety, and ſome of them extremely deficient in Philoſophizing.

XIV. For in the Stoicks Natural and Moral Philoſophy there are ſuch marvellous abſurd Imaginations, as plainly ſhew them extremely deficient in the Faculty of Reaſoning and Philoſophizing. (p) The Sun, Moon and Stars are nouriſh'd by Vapours from the Earth, Sea and Rivers (as they ſuppoſe;) and when theſe Vapours fail, there will be a Conflagration of the vaſt Univerſe, a Reſolution of the Gods (Jupiter only excepted) and of Man into their firſt Elements (God and the Matter;) after which Conflagration there will be a Reſtauration of the ſame World and the ſame Men, and ſo in endleſs Circuitions. (q) The Night, Day, Evening, Morning, our Arts, Memories Phantaſies, Aſſents, Affections, (Anger, Sorrow, Fear, Audacity,) Sapience alſo and Bonum are all Bodies (in this Philoſophy,) as alſo our Virtues (Prudence, Fortitude, Juſtice) and all our Vices are Bodies; and not only Bodies, but Animals; which is ſuch an Imagination, as could ſcarce enter into any one's Head, that is not a Philoſopher or a Rabbi. (r) Virtus nihil aliud eſt, quàm Animus quodammodo ſe habens, ergo Animal eſt. Virtue is nothing elſe but the Mind modify'd, therefore it is an Animal. Agreeably to the Mind of the Univerſe (who in this Philoſophy is a ſubtle fiery Body,) the Mind of Man is a Body, (s) a part of God and a God too. (t) And this deify'd Mind of Man (not the Holy Ghoſt of the Chriſtian Religion) is that which they mean by Sacer Spiritus an Holy or Divine Spirit in Man. (u) Ratio nihil aliud eſt, quàm in corpus humanum pars Divini Spiritus merſa. Reaſon in Man is nothing elſe but a part of the Divine Spirit (the mundane Soul) immers'd in an Human Body. At the ſame rate the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts (w) deify the Humane Nature (they forbid Men to pollute by corporeal Paſſions, τὸν θεὸν τὸν ἔνοικον αὐτοῖς, their Domeſtick God) as alſo Syneſius and Philo according to their uſual mode of criminal Philoſophic-Paganizing. (x) Syneſius calleth the Head νεὼν τοῦ θεοῦ, the Temple of God, Philo calleth the Mind an Avulſion of the divine and bleſſed Soul. So thoſe old Philoſophic-paganizing Hereticks (y) the Manichees and ſome Branches of the Gnoſticks, are ſaid, to have held the Soul a part of God, of the Divine Subſtance. In the elder times of the Church Prudentius (z) is thought a Philoſophic Pagan in this Language of his, Deus, ignee fons Animarum, God the igneous Font of Souls; and of later times Andreas Cæſalpinus maintain'd, (a) that the Souls of Angels, Men and Animals are Particles of God. But this Paganical Conceit is peculiarly Platonic; the Stoicks ſay, that the Minds of Men, not the Souls of Animals, are parts of the Deity, which is the more tolerable Hypotheſis: yet becauſe it ſuppoſeth a Diſcerption and Dilaceration of the Deity, and that the parts of God may be miſerable, (b) Cicero (ſometimes) rejecteth it as an abſurd Imagination.

A like intermixture of abſurd Imaginations pervadeth their Moral Philoſophy; for ſuch are their Dogmata, that all Sins are equal; that all who are not of the Wiſe of the firſt Form (that are in the State of Perfection) are equally fooliſh, bad, vicious, morbid, miſerable, inſani, as they love to ſpeak. And this is the Beatitude which they propoſe to themſelves. (c) O my Soul, when wilt thou be full and unindigent, and deſiring nothing, either animate or inanimate, for pleaſant enjoyment; nor time for long enjoyment, nor place, nor region, nor good temperature of Air, nor agreeable Society of Men: But be ſatisfy'd with thy preſent Conſtitution, delighted with all preſent things, and perſuaded that all is preſent, and that thou art well as to all things? Make this thy care and deſire, to be ſatisfy'd with thy ſelf, and the Goods that ariſe from thy Self. What felicity can be nearer to God? This terrene Region is viſibly (d) κακώσεως τόπος, the Region of Sin and Sufferings: But in Stoiciſm (which is a ſullen and ſurly contempt of Human Calamities) the State of the World is a πανήγυρις, Feſtival Solemnity; (e) Death is the Nature of Man, not Puniſhment; and the ſerious Calamities of Mankind (as Plotinus (f) Stoically Philoſophizeth,) Deaths, Rapines, the ſlaughtering Men and ſacking Cities, are to be contemplated as the ſcenical ſhiftings on the Theaters; the Tears of Mourners as ſhews of Lamentation, and (the Affairs of Life being a Play) as Childrens crying. They are not troubled for their own Vices, (g) for who hindreth them from rectifying their own Principles? Nor are they troubled at the Impieties of others, or angry and offended at their Sins and Injuries; (b) If any one hath ſinn'd the hurt is only his own.

(n) Πᾶν τὸ συμβαῖνον, μὴ ταπεινούμενοι, μηδὲ συγκλώμενοι ὑπ' αὐτοῦ. Epict. Diſſ. p. 100.

(o) Ibid. p. 367.

(p) V. Jac. Thomaz. Diſſertationes.

(q) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 2. Diſſ. 4, 5.

(r) Sen. Ep. 113.

(s) Lipſ. ſupr. l. 3. Diſſ. 8. Gat. in Ant. p. 43, 99, 207, 211, 432.

(t) Ibid. p. 69.

(u) Sen. Ep. 66.

(w) Gat. ſupr. p. 201.

(x) Ibid. p. 211, 432.

(y) Gaſſend. T. 2. p. 239. J. Bapt. Criſp. p. 67.

(z) Jac. Thomaz. Diſſ. p. 253.

(a) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 40.

(b) De N. D. l. 1.

(c) Ἔσῃ ποτὲ ἄρ' ὦ ψυχὴ ... πλήρης καὶ ἀνενδεὴς, καὶ οὐδενὸς ἐπιποθοῦσα, οὐδὲ ἐπιθυμοῦσα οὐδενὸς, οὔτε ἐμψύχου, οὔτε ἀψύχου πρὸς ἡδονῶν ἀπολαύσεις; οὐδὲ χρόνου, ἐν ᾧ ἐπὶ μακρότερον ἀπολαύσεις; οὐδὲ τόπου, ἢ χώρας, ἢ ἀέρων εὐκαιρίας, οὐδὲ ἀνθρώπων εὐαρμοστίας; ἀλλὰ ἀρκεσθήσῃ τῇ παρούσῃ καταστάσει, καὶ ἡσθήσῃ τοῖς παροῦσι πᾶσι, καὶ συμπείσεις σεαυτὴν, ὅτι πάντα σοι πάρεστι, πάντα σοι εὖ ἔχει. M. Ant. l. 10. S. 1. Hoc cura, hoc opta, ut contentus ſis temetipſo, & ex te naſcentibus bonis. Quæ poteſt eſſe felicitas Deo propior? Sen. Ep. 20.

(d) Orig. C. Celſ. l. 7. p. 366.

(e) Sen. Excerpt.

(f) En. 3. l. 2. c. 15.

(g) M. Ant. l. 8. S. 47. l. 2. S. 11.

(h) Εἰ μὲν ἥμαρτεν, ἐκεῖ τὸ κακόν. M. Ant. l. 9. S. 38.

Ἡ κακία οὐδὲν βλάπτει τὸν κόσμον. Ibid. l. 8. S. 35. Διέταξε δὲ [ὁ Διατάσσων] θέρος εἶναι ϗ χειμῶνα, ϗ φορὰν ϗ ἀφορίαν, ϗ ἀρετὴν ϗ κακίαν, ϗ πάσας τὰς τοιαύτας ἐναντιότητας ὑπὲρ συμφωνίας τῶν ὅλων. Epict. Diſſ. p. 119. Stearne de obſtin. p. 155. Gat. in Ant. p. 54, 348.

οων. Wickedneſs doth not at all hurt the World. Jupiter hath ſo diſpos'd things, that there ſhould be Summer and Winter, Fertility and Sterility, Virtue and Wickedneſs, and all ſuch Contrarieties for the good and ſymphony of the Univerſe. Nothing can be more extravagant than this Stoical Dogma; (i) that the worſt of Men do but act according to their Opinion, and are to be rectify'd, not deſtroyed. With this extravagance ſeveral of their Maxims ſymbolize, and are extravagant without due limitation. (k) The Maxim is true of all that offend, it is againſt their Will. All Men miſs of the Truth againſt their Will. Upon this Maxim (the unwillingneſs that all Men have to err) a Polonian Gentleman, Scholar to Socinus, founded his Dogma (which Socinus was not able to cure him of) that there is no ſuch thing as Sin in the World. Which delirous Conceit may fitly walk in company with theſe abſurd Singularities of the Stoicks. (l) Nothing is hurtful to a part (but good,) which is for the good of the whole. What is not hurtful to the City, hurteth not a Citizen. Bad Men are neither affected with Benefits, nor have they any Benefactors, nor are they guilty of neglecting their Benefactors.

(i) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 18.

(k) Ἀληθές ἐστι τὸ, πάντας ἄκοντας ἁμαρτάνειν. Epict. Diſſ. p. 375, 129. Πᾶσα ψυχὴ ἄκουσα στέρεται τῆς ἀληθείας. M. Ant. l. 7. S. 63. Reynolds of the Paſſions. ch. 8.

(l) Οὐδὲν βλαβερὸν τῷ μέρει ὃ τῷ ὅλῳ συμφέρει. Ὃ τῇ πόλει οὐκ ἔστι βλαβερὸν, οὐδὲ τὸν πολίτην βλάπτει. M. Ant. l. 10 S. 6 & l. 5. S. 22. Οὐδὲ εὖ πάσχουσιν οἱ φαῦλοι, οὐδὲ εὐεργέτας ἔχουσιν, οὐδὲ εὐεργετῶν ἀμελοῦσιν. Plutarch. c. Stoic. p. 1058.

XV. The great imperfection of the Stoicks Inſtitution (which is alſo applicable to other Philoſophic-pagan Inſtitutions) appeareth from the groſs Immoralities wherein they liv'd; for they were not well diſciplin'd againſt the foul Vices of Drunkenneſs, Uncleanneſs and irreligious Swearing. (m) Seneca pleadeth for Drunkenneſs, (n) and Zeno practis'd it. Being ask'd at a Banquet why ſo Merry? (his Nature being ſevere,) he made anſwer; that Lupines though bitter, yet being well wetted become ſweet. In favour of Drunkenneſs he pronounc'd that a lapſe of the Feet is not ſo bad as a lapſe of the Tongue. Zeno liv'd in it, and Chryſippus dy'd by it; (o) for the drinking Trade brought the Vertigo upon him, which ended his days. The great Hercules (p) celebrated for a great Drinker (his Cup is alſo celebrated) is a Divine Man in the Stile of Epictetus's Diſſertations; and Cato a Stoical wiſe Man of the firſt Form is of the ſame Character: But no Body muſt call his Drunkenneſs a Crime; for it is eaſier (ſaith Seneca,) to make it no Crime than Cato a Criminal. But as a Stoick is extravagant in his Suppoſition, (q) that he remaineth ſafe and unhurt ϗ οἰνωμένος ϗ ἐν μελαγχολίᾳ, in Drink and in Melancholy; that his Body may be in Drink as to all its Senſes and Powers, yet his Mind remain unprejudic'd (which is the meaning of that Maxim, the Wiſe Man is liable to be inebriated, but not drunk:) So it is a wild kind of Virtue, that is conſiſtent with ſo great a Vice, which is indeed all Vices in one; for Drunkenneſs is (as St. Baſil calleth it) κακίας μήτηρ, ἀρετῆς ἐναντίωσις, the Mother of all Wickedneſs, a Repugnance to all true Virtue. But theſe impure Pagans ſuppos'd, (r) that there is a right and prudent uſe of Drunkenneſs, which contributeth to Virtue, and that it ought not to be extirpated from a well-govern'd City. (s) Plato forbiddeth Children to drink any Wine before they be Eighteen Years of Age, and to be drunk before they come to Forty. But to ſuch as have once attain'd the Age of Forty, he is content to pardon them, if they chance to delight themſelves with it, and alloweth them ſomewhat largely, to blend the influence of Dionyſos in their Banquets, that good God who beſtoweth chearfulneſs upon Men, and youth unto aged Men, who allayeth and aſſwageth the Paſſions of the Mind (even as Iron is made flexible by the fire,) and in his profitable Laws, drinking Meetings or quaffing Companies as neceſſary and commendable (always provided there be a chief Leader amongſt them, to contain and order them,) Drunkenneſs being a good and certain trial of every Man's Nature, and therewithal proper to give aged Men the courage to make merry in Dancing and in Muſick, things allowable and profitable, and ſuch as they dare not undertake being ſober and ſettled. But in his Sixth of Laws Plato doth not allow drinking to Drunkenneſs ſave only in the Solemnities of that God who is the giver of Wine, being of the ſame Mind with the popular Pagans, who call'd their Feaſts after Vintage and Harveſt Θοῖναι q. Θεοῖναι, becauſe they ſuppos'd, that in Duty and to the Honour of the Gods they ought to be drunk. The Philoſophic Pagans were of no better a Religion than the Popular, and therefore (Symbolizing with them) were of ~~the~~ drinking kind of Men. Such was (t) Anacharſis, and the Prince of Philoſophic Pagan Saintiſts Socrates himſelf. (u) He was not forward to drink at Banquets (ſaith Plato,) but when he was compell'd, he maſter'd all; and which is moſt to be wondred at, no Man ever ſaw Socrates drunk.

(m) De Tranquill. An. c. ult.

(n) Lipſ. in loc.

(o) Laert in Chryſip.

(p) Macrob. Sat. l. 5. c. 21. Epict. Diſſ. p. 330.

(q) Ib. p. 222, 266.

(r) Procl. in Polit. p. 369.

( ) Montaign Eſſays l. 2. c. 2.

(w) They ſay in this too Socrates the Wiſe
And great in Vertue's Combats bare the Prize.

The reports of his garrulity and idle loquacity in his Cups (x) are not credible: But his Friends report, that he ſpent whole Nights in drinking. And a certain Author ſaith; (y) the Greeks praiſe him exceedingly, that having ſpent a whole long Night drinking for Victory with Ariſtophanes, he was able at Day-break, to delineate and demonſtrate, a ſubtil Geometrical Problem, thereby ſhewing that the Wine had no noxious effect upon him.

(t) Plutarch. ſept. ſap. Conviv. p. 156.

(u) Lipſ. Manud. l. 3. diſſ. 18.

(w) Montaigne ſupra

(x) Theodoret. Θεραπ. Ser. 12.

(y) Galateus de moribus p. 123.

Socrates acted the humour of a great Lover (an amorous Lover) mightily enamour'd upon Beauty, which was accounted a noble and Gentile quality in his time, when it was a Gentile Faſhion (and therefore forbidden to Slaves,) for Men to be the paſſionate amorous Lovers of Boys, and to have Boys their amorous Lovers. For although the Athenian Laws did forbid Boys, to proſtitute themſelves, or to be proſtituted by thoſe that had the Government of them, yet theſe maſculine Amours were creditable and in faſhion. But how far Socrates proceeded in them is uncertain, probably he went no further than by acting the humour of a great Lover (of beauty and of beauteous Boys,) to give occaſion to that proverbial Speech Socratici Cinædi. But it is certain, that amongſt the popular Pagans theſe maſculine Amours were (in leſſer or greater degree) unchaſt and impure; and the Philoſophic Pagans were uſually not more chaſt than the popular. Such Love of Boys as was at Thebes, Elis and in Crete is condemn'd (z) by Plutarch, who alloweth that which was at Lacedæmon and Athens. But how allowable the Athenian Love of Boys was, may be underſtood from a great Vindicator of the maſculine Amours of Socrates. (a) Finding this Love-paſſion prevalent in other parts of Greece and chiefly at Athens, and that all was full of injurious Lovers and deceived Youths, Socrates bethought himſelf of remedying the miſchiefs of this Love-paſſion, and would act the humour of a great amorous Lover of Youths. (b) Go to Socrates, and ſee him lying with Alcibiades and eluding his (tempting) beauty. And bethink thy ſelf, what a Victory he underſtood himſelf to have obtain'd? What Olympicks? How little diſtant was he from Hercules*? So that one may juſtly ſalute him, hail O wonderful!* If it was a wonderful thing, a mighty Victory, an Olympick, and an effect of Herculean ſtrength, for Socrates to reſtrain himſelf in lying with Alcibiades, it could be no ordinary thing, for Lovers to reſtrain themſelves in their accompanying with thoſe beauteous Youths (or Paramours,) for whom they had a violent burning Love-paſſion. They proceeded uſually to impure dalliance (at leaſt,) as may be argu'd from the inſtance of Euripides, (c) who being invited to a Banquet by King Archelaus became drunk, and in that mood kiſs'd the Poet Agatho (who ſate next him) then being Forty Years old. Whereupon the King ask'd him, if his Paramour was yet delectable? To which Euripides anſwer'd, that not only the Spring, but the Autumn of the Fair is delectable. But uſually in theſe maſculine Amours they proceeded alſo to the fouleſt impure mixtures For amongſt the Cretians (d) if they obtain'd the Boy whom they lov'd, they carry'd him into ſome Mountain or into their Fields and there banquetted for Sixty Days, and then ſent him Home. Which banquetting cannot rationally be ſuppos'd, to be deſign'd for any thing but the enjoyments of Luſt, (e) as the Apologiſt for Socrates calleth this Love-paſſion amongſt the Athenians; and accordingly the Athenian Hierophanta (f) thought himſelf unable to reſtrain τὰς ἀῤῥενικὰς ὀρέξεις, his maſculine kind of Luſts. The Origin of theſe maſculine Amours (as it is reported) was from Luſt. (g) For they ſay, that Laius was firſt enamour'd on generous Youths, and took by rape Chryſippus the Son of Pelops. And from this amongſt the Thebans it ſeem'd one of the fine things, to be Lovers of beauteous Youths. Some ſay, that Orpheus taught the Thracians the abuſe of Boys. Whether ſo or otherwiſe; it is manifeſt, (h) that Socrates, Plato, Xenophon, Cebes, Cicero, approv'd the maſculine Amours; and a fragment of Bardeſanes in Euſebius (i) mentioneth this as a ſingularity amongſt the Greeks; οἱ σοφοὶ ἐρωμένους ἔχοντες, οὐ ψέγονται, the Philoſophers have their maſculine Paramours without diſgrace or reprehenſion. It was they that wrote Amatorious Dialogues and Diſcourſes, which the Celeſtial Venus never inſpir'd. (k) Socrates and Cato communicated their Wives to their Friends. (l) All manner of Inceſt, Adultery, and maſculine mixtures ſome of the ancient famous Philoſophers accounted things indifferent. Some of the Stoicks befriend Chaſtity at an extraordinary rate, (m) commending chaſt Eyes, forbidding obſcene Speech, adviſing Men to be pure as much as may be from τὰ ἀφροδίσια, the things venereous before Marriage (yet agreeing with the popular Pagans, amongſt whom the Harlotry of ſimple Fornication was accounted no Crime, and which (n) almoſt all the great Philoſophers are known to have liv'd in:) But the generality of that Sect are prodigiouſly Paradoxical in their unchaſtities. (o) Teaching the Father to commit Inceſt with the Daughter, the Son with the Mother, and the Brother with the Siſter; (p) Men and Women to wear the ſame Garments, (q) that no Speeches are obſcene, and that every thing ſhould be called by its own Name, themſelves not ſcrupling the moſt immodeſt Actions. Cicero (de Off. 1.) would have the whole Sect of the Cynicks caſt out, as inimical to Modeſty and Shamefac'dneſs; for they had openly to do with their Wives (pretending, that Nature did not teach theſe things to be obſcene, but cuſtom,) and publickly perpetrated (as Diogenes is known to have done) their filthy χειρουργήματα. (r) Zeno was a Lover of Boys, made uſe of both Sexes, and ſware by a Caper, a laſcivious Vegetable, as Socrates ſware by a Dog, a laſcivious Animal. But it is not reaſonable to believe all that is ſaid (s) of his mulieroſity, (t) or of his maſculine Amours although his Enthuſiaſtic Temper was libidinous. Socrates hath had the happineſs of an Eloquent Apologiſt: But Plato is charged with unchaſtity by ſome of his greateſt Admirers and Followers. For Philo ſaith of his Convivium, (u) the ſubject-matter of it is not the love of Men and Women, but the love of Men towards Boys; and he doth not ſuppoſe, that Plato was a meer Platonic Lover, but by the Love of Boys he underſtandeth the foul maſculine mixtures. When it was objected to Apuleius, that his Love-verſes were not ſuitable to a Platonic Philoſopher, (w) he juſtifieth himſelf by Plato's Practice and Example, who hath no Verſes extant but Love-Verſes upon the Boy Aſter, Alexis, Phædrus and Dion. If yet his unchaſtity may be thought dubious and uncertain, yet this is certain; (x) Ficinus changeth and omitteth part of the amatorious things in Plato's Charmides, as offenſive to chaſt Ears. In his Fifth de Rep. (y) he will have young Souldiers that behave themſelves valiantly, gratify'd with the enjoyment of their Amours whether Maſculine or Feminine. Following Lycurgus's Inſtitution he will have Women expos'd naked to the Eyes of Men: Tranſcending Lycurgus's Inſtitution and the popular Pagans Impieties, he aboliſheth Marriage and inſtituteth the Community of Women. So the Founders of Stoiciſm Zeno and Chryſippus (z) will have a Community of Wives amongſt the wiſe Men, that every one may have to do with the Woman which he firſt meeteth. Ταῦτα νομοθετεῖ ἡ στοὰ, ſuch are the unpopular and irreligious Inſtitutes of the Stoical Philoſophy; which are partly to be attributed to the Spirit of Uncleanneſs predominant in the Philoſophic Pagans (inſomuch that Lais once laugh'd, to ſee more of the Philoſophers with her than of any other ſort of Men;) and partly to their croſs-grain'd unpopular Humour, expreſs'd by Diogenes, (a) who entering into the Theatre oppoſite to the People that were coming out, was ask'd why he did ſo? τοῦτο, ἔφη, παντὶ τῷ βίῳ ἐπιτηδεύω ποιεῖν, This, ſaid he, I ſtudy to do through my whole Life. But although the Philoſophers had a great Affectation, to difference themſelves from the popular Pagans, (b) yet theſe they tranſcend in the abſurdity of their Inſtitutes, the popular Pagan

(z) De Educ. Liber. p. 11, 12.

Doctors

(a) Εὑρὼν τὸ πάθος ἐνακμάζον τῇ τε ἄλλῃ ἑλλάδι ϗ πολὺ μάλιστα ταῖς ἀθήναις, ϗ μεστὰ πάντα ἀδίκων ἐραστῶν ϗ μειρακίων ἐξηπατημένων, οἰκτείρας τοῦ πάθους. &c. M. Tyr. Diſſ. 9.

(b) Ἄπελθε πρὸς Σωκράτη, ϗ ἴδε αὐτὸν συγκατακείμενον Ἀλκιβιάδῃ, ϗ διαπαίζοντα αὐτοῦ τὴν ὥραν. Ἐνθυμήθητι οἵαν νίκην ποτὲ ἔγνω ἐκεῖνος νενικηκότα ἑαυτόν; οἷα ὀλύμπια, πόσος ἀφ' Ἡρακλέους ἐγένετο; ἵνα τις νὴ τοὺς θεοὺς δικαίως ἀσπάζηται αὐτόν, χαῖρε παράδοξε. Epict. Diſſ. p. 225, 226.

(c) Ælian. var. Hiſt. l. 13. c. 4.

(d) Heraclides de politiis p. 436.

(e) M. Tyr. ſupr.

(f) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 365.

(g) Ælian. ſupr. c. 5.

(h) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 4.

(i) Pr. ev. l. 6. c. 10.

(k) Tertull. Apol. c. 39.

(l) Marſham. Can. Chron. p. 172. ed. Lipſ.

(m) M. Ant. l. 3. S. 2. Epict. Ench. c. 47, 55.

(n) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 2. S 13. cum Annot.

(o) Sext. Empir. Pyr. Hyp. l. 3. c. 24, 25.

(p) Laert. in Zeno.

(q) Cic. ad Pætum l. 9. Ep. 22.

(r) Laert. in Zeno.

(s) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. p. 185.

(t) Theodoret. Serm. 12.

(u) De vit. contempl. p. 615, 616. ed. Gr. Par.

(w) Apol. p. 455. ed. Beroald.

(x) Argum. in Charm.

(y) J. Bapt. Criſp. Quin. prim. p. 372, &c.

(z) Laert. in Zeno.

(a) Idem in Diogen.

(b) S. Chryſoſt. in Act. Apoſt. 4. Hom. p. 634

Doctors may at leaſt vie with them for ſound and laudable Morality, and one of the Poets thought he had reaſon to prefer Homer before them.

> Qui quid ſit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid non,
> Plenius & melius Chryſippo & Crantore dicit.
> Horat.

The common and cuſtomary kind of Swearing whether by the Deity or by Creatures (all that Profane irreligious Swearing) Chriſtianity forbiddeth: But no Moral Philoſopher ever prohibited ſuch Swearing by the Creatures. Socrates ordinarily practis'd it (doubtleſs out of Reverence to the Gods) ſometimes Swearing by Animals, a Dog, a Gooſe, a Goat, and ſometimes by Plants, an Oak or a Plane Tree. (c) Philo (an Aſſociate of the Philoſophic Pagans) declaimeth againſt Swearing at a great rate, yet directeth to that mode of Swearing by the Creatures, which Chriſtianity forbiddeth. Nor is this the only defect in their Diſcipline touching Oaths; for being Separatiſts from the popular Pagans (whom they contemned at a great rate,) and no great Friends to their Civil Government, they were ſhy of the ſolemn judicial Oaths (which are of all other the moſt allowable and needful,) but made no ſcruple of idle criminal Swearing. Clinias the Pythagorean in a ſuit depending before the Judge, by taking a true and juſt Oath, might have freed himſelf from a Fine of three Talents: But he choſe rather, to pay the Mulct, than to take the Oath; ſo great a reſpect had theſe Pythagoreans for their own Philoſophic Inſtitution, and ſo little for Civil Government. For none can be ignorant, that they were not ſo ſhy of Swearing by the Maſter of their Inſtitution, as Religioniſts Swear by their God; (d) and Hierocles (who hath given many wiſe Cautions touching the uſe of Oaths connex'd with the Honour of the Gods) juſtifieth their Practice. Touching a ſolemn judicial Oath Epictetus ſaith, (e) refuſe it altogether, if it be poſſible: If not, as much as may be; yet himſelf ordinarily ſweareth in his Diſſertations, and ſometimes at an horrible rate. (f) ὀμνύω ὑμῖν πάντας θεὺς, I Swear to you by all the Gods. There is a Vein of Paganical Swearing that pervadeth the Writings of the Philoſophic Pagans, and of the Stoicks amongſt the reſt, which muſt be reckoned amongſt the blemiſhes of their Inſtitution. But although their Inſtitution hath its foul blemiſhes, yet it muſt be acknowledg'd, that their Writings (ſuch as remain) are of great uſe, and ought to be of great value in the Church of God; that the true Lovers of Virtue and Piety may with great Profit be converſant in their Philoſophy (without an undue confounding things and making it of one piece with the Chriſtian Religion;) and that Epictetus deſerveth the honourary Epithet, which Simplicius hath given him, ὁ θαυμάσιος, the wonderful Epictetus.

XVI. We have repreſented an Idea of the Pythagoric, Platonic and Stoical Inſtitutions, but have (almoſt wholly) overlook'd the Ariſtotelian; partly, becauſe it is well known, and chiefly becauſe the conſideration of it is not requiſite for curing the Vice of criminal Philoſophic-paganizing. Unleſs it falleth into the Hands of ſuch a Preacher, as Melancthon ſaith, he heard, who took his Text for his Sermon out of Ariſtotle's Ethicks, it is not capable of being abuſed to the Prejudice of the Sanctity and Divinity of the Inſtitutes of the Chriſtian Religion. Philo ſaith, (g) Ariſtotle was not piouſly and holily learned.

(c) Voſſ. Hiſt. Pelag. l. 5. Par. 2. Antitheſ. 1. Grot. Not. in Matth. 5. 34.

(d) In aur. car. p. 33, 34.

(e) Ench. c. 44.

(f) p. 301.

(g) Ἀριστοτέλης δὲ μήποτ᾽ εὐσεβῶς καὶ ὁσίως ἐπιστάμενος. Περὶ Ἀφθαρ. κόσμ. p. 645. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

BOOK

BOOK II.

An Idea of the Pagans Imperial Polity according to the Scriptures.

CHAP. I.

1. The firſt Agreement between the Scriptural and Pagan Theology touching the Deſignation, Conſtitution and Adminiſtration of the World by a governing Providence. 2. Their Agreement, that Providence is Parental of the Animal-Family. 3. Their Agreement, that Providence is of Parental Goodneſs to the Animal-Family. 4. Their Agreement touching Governing Providence, that the Univerſe of things is His, and of the ſeveral Notions wherein they are ſo. 5. The firſt Illuſtration of this Attribute. 6. A ſecond Illuſtration of it. 7. A third Illuſtration of it. 8. A fourth Illuſtration of it. 9. A fifth Illuſtration of it. 10. A ſixth Illuſtration of it. 11. Of a Theological ſtate of Nature. 12. Of the ſtate of Mankind in it.

I. THE Pagans (Religious) Imperial Polity according to the Scriptures implieth, that the Scriptural and Pagan Theology (being the Theologies of two oppoſite Kingdoms) are like the Pythagoric Letter Y, which for a good part of it is one only Line, but at length divideth it ſelf into two oppoſite parts. So they that compare theſe two Theologies, are like a Man, that for a good ſpace travelleth in one great Road, but at length he cometh to a place, parteis ubi ſe via findit in ambas. The Scriptural and the Pagan Theology at length part with great diſagreement; but for a good ſpace there is great Conſonance and Agreement between them. For in the firſt place; Theſe two Theologies agree touching the Deſignation and Conſtitution of this World, as alſo the Inſpection and Adminiſtration of things in it by a Governing Providence.

By Providence I mean an Eternal Being as provident touching the World, or preſiding intelligent Mind (which is governing in a large ſenſe, becauſe preſiding) the oppoſite to the Theoretic Atheiſm of blind Nature, Chance or αὐτοματισμοῖς, that things of themſelves are as they are. In this latitude of Senſe governing Providence is conſiderable in a threefold Notion. (1.) As deſigning the World and deſtinating its emergent Events. So the Stoicks ſay, (h) Cogitavit nos ante Natura quàm fecit, Nature thought of us, before ſhe made us. And becauſe they ſuppos'd, that emergent Events were deſign'd Fatalities, their Providence was call'd by their Adverſaries, (i) Fatidica Anus, their fatidical Old Woman. (2.) As conſtituting the World, forming the Matter and ſettling the Laws of Mundane Nature. So Plotinus ſaith, (k) ἐτάχθη τὸ πᾶν προνοίᾳ στρατηγικῇ, the World was conſtituted by an Army-leading Providence, which juſt Events follow. (3.) As inſpecting the conſtituted World and adminiſtring Affairs in it. So the Pagan Theologers are Aſſerters, (l) ἑνὸς λόγου τοῦ ταῦτα κοσμοῦντος, καὶ μιᾶς προνοίας ἐπιτροπευούσης, of one Reaſon making an Ornamental Conſtitution of this Univerſe of things, and of one Providence adminiſtring them. Agreeably to theſe Paganical Notices of governing Providence the Scripture-Theology repreſenteth God as the Eternal Arbiter and Diſpoſer of things, provident concerning us before the World was; ſtileth the Acts of his Sovereign All-diſpoſing Will touching what he will do himſelf, and what ſhall be done by or unto others, his Thoughts, Pleaſure, Mind, Decrees, Counſel, Will, Purpoſe, Fore-determinations; and deriveth the Creation of the World from his ſovereign good pleaſure, who worketh all things after the Counſel of his own Will, Apoc. 4. 11. And as the Platoniſts divide the Univerſe (m) εἰς οὐρανὸν καὶ γένεσιν, into Heaven and this Region of Generation, the Popular Pagans diſtribute it into Heaven and Earth (the one the ſupernal illuſtrious part, the other the infimous and ignoble) which is the ancient Diviſion, ſaith Varro: So the Holy Scriptures (to denote, that God is the Founder of the whole Univerſe) uſually celebrate Him as the Creator of Heaven and Earth and of all things therein contained. The Scripture-Theology and the Pagan agree, (n) that they are Impudent and Senſeleſs, that have a Face to gainſay, but no Wit to diſcern Deity and Providence; and that the Stoical Maxim underſtood of ſuch Fools is no Paradox, omnes ſtulti inſaniunt, all Fools are mad. For the ordinary Phænomena of our World, of Motion, Plants, Animals, the Origination of Mankind, of the Sea, Moon, Earth, the Situation of the Earth, the viciſſitudes of Nights and Days, and the Seaſons of the Year, (o) καθάπερ παρθένοι τινὲς χορεύουσαι ἐν κύκλῳ, like certain Maidens dancing in a round, proclaim the ſuperintendency of Providence in its Conſtitution. And as the Pagan Theologers demonſtrate a governing Providence (p) from the conſent of Mankind, (q) the Phænomena of Humane Nature, (r) the artificial Contrivance and wiſe Adaptation of things to one another in this lower Region, and becauſe they are manifeſtly deſign'd for End, Uſe or Utility (one of theſe Productions is enough to impreſs upon a modeſt and grateful Man a ſenſe of Providence, ſaith Epictetus:) So the holy Writers devotionally contemplate the Furniture of this Earthly Stage, and the adorable Attributes of God reſplendent in its Beauty, Uſefulneſs, Curioſity of Artifice, Plenitude and vaſt Variety. O Lord, how manifold are thy Works! in Wiſdom haſt thou made them all; the Earth is full of thy Riches; Pſal. 104. 24. The ſame Providence that founded this lower World, continueth in Government (for what can diſplace it?) inſpecting all things, ordering, guiding, adminiſtring Affairs, and ſo ordering them as is moſt Wiſe and Juſt, and ſo as is the beſt, all things conſider'd, and ſo as to fulfil his own Counſels, and ſo as is moſt for the good of his People (yet ſo that the ſettled Laws of Nature are not ordinarily violated, much alſo is left to the Will of Satan and the Will of Man,) and ſo as to be ordinarily a Con-ſervator,

(h) Sen. de Benef. 6. 23.

(i) Lipſ. Phyſ. l. 1. diſſ. 11.

(k) En. 3. l. 2. c. 2.

(l) Pluta. de Iſid. p. 377.

(m) Procl. in Tim. p. 24.

(n) Epict. Diſſ. p. 125.

(o) S. Chryſoſt. Ἀνδριαντ. θ.

(p) Sen. Ep. 117.

(q) Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(r) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 6. & 16. Xenophon. 4. Apomn. p. 466.

Prov. 15. 3. 29. 6. Exod. 21. 13. Dan. 2. 21. Pſal 66. 7. 67. 4. Deut. 32. 4. Iſa. 46. 10. Rom. 8. 28. Nehem. 9. 6. Job 14. 5, 38, 41.

ſervator, Curator and Guardian, Proviſor, Protector, and immenſe Benefactor to the World. The Lord is good to all, and his tender Mercies are over all his Works, Pſal. 145. 9.

II. The Scripture-Theology and the Pagan agree, That Providence is Parental of and to the Animal Family, this World of living Creatures, eſpecially Mankind. The production of them into Life was a Parental Act, and conſtituteth a Father, (s) διαφέρει γὰρ πατὴρ τε ποιητοῦ καὶ γεννήσεως ποίησις· ἐμψύχου γένεσις ἡ γέννησίς ἐστι. Generation is the production of that which is Animate: For a Father differeth from an Opificer, and making from generating. Generation may be taken in as large a Senſe as Production, (accordingly we read of the Generations of the Heavens and of the Earth, Gen. 2. 4.) and in ſuch latitude of ſenſe God may be ſtil'd (as he is intituled in J. Mart.) πατὴρ τῶν ὅλων, the Father of all. But the Interpreters of Ariſtotle obſerve, (t) that there can be no mutual love but amongſt Perceptive Vitaliſts, nor a proper Parental Relation, and therefore no proper Parental Generation on this ſide the Generation of an Animal. Such a Vital Production is a (plenary or partial) proper Parental Generation, and therefore judicious Naturaliſts treating of Animals (u) have ſtiled the Supreme Creator their Progenitor. So the Pagan Theologers in their uſual definition of God repreſent Animals as ally'd to the Deity, and a Progeny thereof; for they define God, Animus per omnes mundi partes commeans atque diffuſus, ex quo omnia quæ naſcuntur Animalia, vitam capiunt: A Mind pervading and diffus'd through all parts of the World, from whom all Animals that are born, have their Life. The Poet repreſents them as the progeny of the Deity at a great rate (w).

His quidam ſignis atque hæc exempla ſecuti,
Eſſe apibus partem divinæ mentis & hauſtus
Ætherios dixere. Deum namque ire per omneis
Terraſque tractuſque maris, cœlumque profundum.
Hinc pecudes, armenta, viros, genus omne ferarum
Quemque ſibi tenueis naſcentem arceſſere vitas.

From theſe Examples ſome there are maintain,
That Bees deſcend from a Celeſtial Strain,
And Heavenly Race. They ſay, The Deity
Is mix'd through Earth, the Sea and lofty Sky.
Hence Men and Beaſts, both wild and tame derive,
And whatſoe'er by breathing Air ſurvive.

To this Branch of the Pagan Theology the Apoſtle hath reſpect in his celebrated Diſcourſe to the Athenians, wherein he affirmeth theſe four things.

Firſt, He affirmeth, that Mankind are the Off-ſpring of God upon a Reaſon common to them with the whole Animal World, (yet ſo that Mankind in this tranſcend other Animals, they are peculiarly the reſembling Off-ſpring of God) becauſe we are a vital production of the Deity, who is the Author of Life to all the Animal-Family: Act. 17. 25. He giveth to all Life, and Breath, and all things; v. 28. we are his Off-ſpring. So Arnobius repreſenteth the Apoſtle's Senſe. (x) Our locomotive Faculty, our Breath and our Life, doth it not come from him to us? and is it not his doing, that we have that force which Life is, and are mov'd with Animal Agitation? The Production of the firſt Adam (call'd the Son of God) is expreſs'd in terms, which ſignifie nothing more than Zoogony, Gen. 2. 7. 1 Cor. 15. 45. God breathed into his Noſtrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul (that is, he became Animate, for whatever is Animate, is a living Soul,) which implieth, that Zoogony, the putting our Soul in Life (Pſal. 66. 9.) is a ſort of Parental Generation. The term מְרַחֶפֶת alſo Gen. 1. 2. if it ſignifieth ſpreading the Wings for Incubation, implieth, that the production of the Animal World is anſwerable to the Parental Generation of Birds, who firſt produce the Egg, and then hatch the Fœtus; for Providence having produc'd the Mundane Matter, (y) cheriſh'd and imbu'd with prolific Virtue the Nature of the Waters, after the manner of a Bird hatching Eggs, and imparting a vital virtue to what ſhe ſitteth over.

A Second thing the Apoſtle affirmeth; That we (and the reſt of Animals) have our Subſiſtence within the Amplitude and Embraces of Parental Providence. Act. 17. 27, 28. He is not far from every one of us; for in him we live, and move, and have our being: Where it is not the Apoſtle's Intention to ſay, that we have our Subſiſtence within the amplitude of the Divine Eſſence, as his Words are commonly miſtaken (ſo Hell it ſelf hath its Subſiſtence;) but that we live, and move, and have our being within the Amplitude and in the Boſom of Parental Providence, whoſe Progeny and Off-ſpring we are (thoſe words demonſtrate, that the Apoſtle is ſpeaking of Parental Providence,) and which is daily a loving helpful Benefactor to us. Agreeably to the Apoſtle's Senſe Minucius Fœlix may be underſtood; (z) Non ſolum in oculis ejus, ſed & in ſinu vivimus, We do not only live in his Eyes, but alſo in his Boſom, where we are tenderly nouriſh'd and ſuſtain'd.

A third thing the Apoſtle affirmeth; that the Poets (the Popular-Pagan Doctors) have taught very true Doctrine (not touching their God, but) concerning God, and that common mundane parental Providence which he is. It is true Natural Theology, to ſay of Zeus, Deus or God (which are Synonyma's, and therefore Virgil in the Verſes above cited rendreth Aratus's Zeus, Deus) with a Grecanic Poet, τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμὲν, for we are his Off-ſpring. And Χαῖρε πάτερ μέγα θαῦμα, μέγ' ἀνθρώποισιν ὄνειαρ.

Hail, O Father, the great wonder, the great utility to Mankind!

The Popular Pagans were ſo far right in their Theology, they acknowledg'd a God, and by that Name they meant, One that is inviſible, that pervadeth the World and is a Mundane Parental Providence, which implieth ſeveral Divine Attributes before-mention'd. Theſe being truly Divine Attributes, and this in great meaſure a right Idea, Aratus's Doctrine is both in Terms (for in ſaying, that we are Zeus's Off-ſpring, the Poet doth ſay, that we are the Off-ſpring τοῦ Θεοῦ, of God, thoſe terms being ſynonymous) and alſo in great degree of Senſe and Notion the very ſame with S. Paul's; but this will not infer, that the Popular Pagans Coſmical Zeus and the true God muſt be confounded and identify'd. For theſe truly Divine Attributes and this conſiderably right (yet criminally defective) Idea may not be attributed to that Being, which really is them, but to ſuch an Ideal Being, which is not of kind and quality the true God, which was the caſe of the Heathen Religioniſts, as will be hereafter diſcours'd.

(s) Plut. Qu. Platon. p. 1001.

(t) Conimbric. in l. 1. Ariſt. de Gen. & Cor. c. 4. Qu. 10.

(u) Harv. de Gen. Anim. Exercit. 49.

(w) Virg. Georg. l. 4.

Ogilby's Tranſlat. p. 116.

(x) Non quod incedimus, quod ſpiramus & vivimus, ab eo ad nos venit, vique ipſa vivendi efficit nos eſſe, & animali agitatione motari? Adv. Gent. l. 1. p. 16.

(y) Συνέθαλπε καὶ ἐζωογόνει τὴν τῶν ὑδάτων φύσιν, κατὰ τὴν εἰκόνα τῆς ἐπωαζούσης ὄρνιθος, καὶ ζωτικήν τινα δύναμιν ἐνιείσης τοῖς ὑποθαλπομένοις. S. Baſil. in Hexaem. Hom. 2.

(z) P. 319.

A fourth thing the Apoſtle implicitly affirmeth (in his Diſcourſe with the Athenians;) that the true God is the true Zeus, as that Name ſignifieth, (a) αἰτία τοῖς ζῶσι τοῦ ζῆν, the cauſe of Life to thoſe Beings that live; and that the honourary Attributes of the Coſmical Zeus belong to that Mundane Parental Providence, which he is. Such as Juvans Pater, Helping Father, φίλος πατὴρ, Friend-Father, the beginning of all things, Progenitor, King, Saviour, giver of Rain, calmer of Weather (Serenator,) Opulent, Fecund, Liberal, Benign, Placable, Provident, and thoſe in Aratus and in Cleanthes's Hymn.

——— ——— (b) Ὁ δ᾽ ἤπιος ἀνθρώποισι
Δεξιὰ σημαίνει, λαοὺς δ᾽ ἐπὶ ἔργον ἐγείρει
Μιμνήσκων βιότοιο· λέγει δ᾽ ὅτε βῶλος ἀρίστη
Βουσί τε καὶ μακέλῃσι. λέγει δ᾽ ὅτε δεξιαὶ ὧραι
Καὶ φυτὰ γυρῶσαι, καὶ σπέρματα πάντα βαλέσθαι.
(c) Ἀλλὰ Ζεῦ πάνδωρε, κελαινεφὲς, ἀρχικέραυνε,
Ζεὺς φύσεως Ἀρχηγὲ, νόμου μετὰ πάντα κυβερνῶν
Χαῖρε. Σὲ γὰρ πᾶσι θέμις θνητοῖσι προσαυδᾶν,
Ἐκ σοῦ γὰρ γένος ἐσμέν.——— ———

So kind to Men, to ſhew them what is good
For Human Life, to mind them of their Food,
To rouze them to their Work, to teach them Skill,
With Plough-ſhare and with Ox the Ground to till,
To ſhew them by the Stars, when they ſhould Plow,
When Seaſon is to plant, and when to ſow.
Hail, Jove! vaſt Nature's Prince, All-donor,
Condenſer of black Clouds, the Thunderer,
Ruling * by Law the Machine of the World,
Which elſe into a Chaos would be hurl'd,
Of right we thee addreſs, though Mortal Men,
For we thine Off-ſpring are, and near of kin.

To this Mundane Parental Providence which pervadeth the World, and repleniſheth it with the Animal-vital Goods, the Attributes of the Goddeſs Iſis (in Apuleius) manifeſtly belong; namely, The Parent of things, the origin of the Fruits of the Earth, the perpetual Savioureſs of Mankind, that hath a Motherly Affection for the Miſerable, the Mother of the Stars, Parent of Times, Lady of the whole World, Lady of all the Elements, Queen of the Seas, by whoſe beck the Rivers flow, the Seeds ſprout out, the Plants grow, the Illuminatreſs of the Sun, the Mitigatreſs of the Tempeſts of Fortune, and Multimammia, full of Breaſts, which Name ſignifieth, that ſhe is the bounteous Nouriſher of all living Creatures.

III. For Providence which is Parental or Generative of Animals, is alſo Parental to the Animal-Family in goodneſs of Diſpoſition and acts of Beneficence. The Frame and Structure of their Bodies, their different Sexes, their places of abode, and the admirable Inſtincts and Sagacities wherewith they are endow'd, demonſtrate a Parental Care and Solicitude in Providence for their welfare. And in the viſible World things are contriv'd and fram'd as they are (there is a viciſſitude of Night and Day, and of the Seaſons of the Year, and the Earth is invelop'd with fluid Air) upon this account and for this general reaſon, becauſe it was requiſite for the well-being of the Animal-Family, that they ſhould be ſo. And ſo Socrates in Xenophon pronounceth; (d) That the whole Univerſe is the Artifice of an Opificer, that is wiſe and a lover of Animals. Next to the making Providence in the Creation took care for maintaining the Animal-Family, and became (e) their Nurſing-Father (τροφεὺς) ſo liberally providing all Accommodations for the Life of Man and of all Animals, (f) that Providence may ſeem Epicurean, and this lower World (a vaſt Store-houſe of all manner of Goods delightful to the Senſes) may ſeem deſign'd to be the Senſualiſts Paradiſe. The ſame Parental Providence which founded it, continueth an immenſe overflowing Goodneſs to it (as to Animal Senſitive Nature and the Goods thereof,) covering with its Wings, incircling in its Arms, cheriſhing in its Boſom this World of living Creatures, diſpenſing Benefits to them with a liberal hand according to their ſeveral Capacities, The Animal-Family ſwimmeth in an Ocean of Parental Bounty. Pſal. 36. 5, 6, 7. Thy Mercy, O Lord, is in the Heavens, and thy Faithfulneſs reacheth unto the Clouds. Thy Righteouſneſs (Beneficence) is like the great Mountains, thy Judgments (God's providential Doings or Adminiſtrations are call'd his Judgments, becauſe they are what he judgeth fit to do) are a great Deep: O Lord, thou preſerveſt Man and Beaſt. How excellent is thy loving-kindneſs, O God; therefore the Children of Men put their truſt under the ſhadow of thy Wings, as Chickens under the covert of the Mother's Wings; Act. 14. 16, 17. Who in times paſt ſuffer'd all Nations to walk in their own ways. Nevertheleſs he left not himſelf without witneſs, in that he did good and gave us Rain from Heaven, and fruitful Seaſons, filling our Hearts with Food and Gladneſs. Pſal. 65. 9, 10, 11. Thou viſiteſt the Earth and watereſt it: thou greatly enricheſt it with the River of God, which is full of Water. Thou prepareſt them Corn, when thou haſt ſo provided for it. Thou watereſt the Ridges thereof abundantly, thou ſettleſt the Furrows thereof; thou makeſt it ſoft with Showers, thou bleſſeſt the ſpringing thereof. Thou crowneſt the Year with thy Goodneſs, and thy Paths (the Clouds) drop Fatneſs. Luk. 12. 24. Conſider the Ravens, for they neither ſow nor reap, which neither have Store-houſe nor Barn; and God feedeth them. Pſal. 104. 21. The young Lions roar after their Prey, and ſeek their Meat from God. Pſal. 136. 25. Who giveth Food to all Fleſh, for his Mercy endureth for ever. Matth. 10. 29. Are not two Sparrows ſold for a Farthing? and one of them ſhall not fall to the Ground without your Father; that is, without the regard of Parental Providence. Parental Providence maketh proviſion for, and a diſtribution of Food and Suſtenance to, all the Animals of the Earth and Air, and therefore is like a great Houſekeeper diſtributing Food to his Charge and Family. Pſal. 145. 15, 16. and 104. 27,—30. Theſe wait all upon thee, that thou mayeſt give them their Meat in due ſeaſon. That thou giveſt them they gather; thou openeſt thine Hand, they are fill'd with good. Thou hideſt thy Face, they are troubled: thou takeſt away their Breath, they die, and return to their Duſt. Thou ſendeſt forth thy Spirit, they are created; and thou reneweſt the Face of the Earth. The Pſalmiſt repreſenteth the Animal World as ſometimes in a ſtate of Deſertion; for in a time of Famine or Peſtilential Putrefaction of the Earth and Air, and in an hard Winter (which may happen in the courſe of Nature, and according to thoſe Laws that are ſettled in it) Parental Providence withdraweth; but by that vivificative virtue which is in Mundane Nature, or which is diſpens'd in the courſe of Providence (which the Pſalmiſt calleth God's Spirit) the World of Animals reviveth again; and not they only, but univerſal Nature re-flouriſheth, and by the influence of Parental Providence the Graſs and Lilies of the Field are cloathed with pompous Array; Matth. 6. 28, 29. To this vivificative virtue which is in Nature (in the ſeminal Principles of things) or is diſpens'd by Providence Mankind owe their original: Pſal. 113. 9. He maketh the barren Woman to keep Houſe, and to be a joyful Mother of Children. A Providence of ſuch a Character, which the Scripture-Theology every where celebrateth as vaſtly kind and charitable, good and bounteous to the World of Living Creatures, caring and providing for them, tending, nurſing and guarding them, muſt be look'd upon as a Parental Providence to the Animal-Family, and more eſpecially to Mankind, agreeably to what the Pagan Religioniſts in Plutarch ſay; (g) Not Typhons or Titans, but the Father of Gods and Men reigneth. Providence indeed might ſeem unkind to Man in producing ferine and rapacious Animals, if Man was not (h) more pernicious to Man than all Ferine Animals. Nor ought Mankind, to think it a blemiſh in Providence, that certain Animals are wild, ſeeing themſelves are of their Foot-mark and Fraternity.

(a) Phornut. de Nat. Deor. p. 4.

(b) Arat. Phænom. p. 1.

(c) Cleanth. ap. Stephan. Poeſ. Philoſ. p. 49.

* Νόμος μὲν πάντα κρατύνει. All things in nature are done by a certain Law. Hippocrates de Genitura, Initio.

(d) Ὅλον τὸ πᾶν σοφοῦ τινος καὶ φιλοζώου δημιουργοῦ τὸ τέχνημα.

(e) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 4. c. 21.

(f) Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(g) In vit. Pelopid.

(h) Sen. Ep. 167.

IV. Touching Governing Providence the Scripture-Theology and the Pagan agree, that the Univerſe of things is His in various Senſes. For they are His Aſcriptively, in an honourary Senſe; and they are His in a twofold Common-Law Senſe as being His (property) ſimply and without addition, and, as being His with this addition, as being his Servants.

(1.) They are Aſcriptively His in an honourary Senſe, becauſe they are matter of Aſcription to his Honour, of right they are devotionally to be aſcrib'd to him, as the original Author, (whoſe doing and handywork they are) and the free Donor of all: which is a principal mode of doing Honour to God, an eminent Branch of Juſtice and Gratitude in Man, and a due mode of humbling and abaſing our ſelves, the oppoſite to Arrogance and Self-aſſuming. In this devotional ſtrain the Pſalmiſt uſually celebrateth the Deity. Pſal. 74. 16, 17. The Day is thine, the Night alſo is thine, thou haſt prepared the Light and the Sun, thou haſt ſet all the Borders of the Earth, thou haſt made Summer and Winter. Pſal. 89. 11, 12. The Heavens are thine, the Earth alſo is thine; as for the World and the fulneſs thereof thou haſt founded them, the North and the South thou haſt created them. Tabor and Hermon ſhall rejoyce in thy Name; that is, they ſhall rejoyce in thee as their beneficent Founder. 1 Chron. 29. 11, 12, 14. Thine, O Lord, is the Victory —— both Riches and Honour come of thee —— in thine Hand it is to make great, and to give ſtrength unto all —— for all things come of thee, and of thine Hand have we given thee. So the Hebrew hath it; but our Tranſlation rightly rendreth it, of thine own have we given thee; for what is of his Hand, is originally and aſcriptively his. In this Notion the words of God may be underſtood, Job 41. 11. where he ſetteth forth his Primacy, Independency, and Supremacy of Condition, that this whole comprehenſion of things is of his Ordination and Appointment, of his Sufficiency and fulneſs of Goods, of his original Bounty (for none are before-hand with him,) of his abſolutely diſoblig'd but infinitely obliging Beneficence, and therefore this All is originally and aſcriptively His: Who hath prevented me that I ſhould repay him? Whatſoever is under the whole Heaven is mine. In this Notion the Father ſaith, (k) Dei eſt omne quod poſſumus, inde vivimus, inde pollemus: (l) In nullo gloriandum, quando noſtrum nihil ſit: Our Life and Strength and all that we can do is of God; nothing is to be gloried in, ſeeing nothing is ours; not our Body, or Mind, natural Endowments or acquir'd Accompliſhments, or any Accommodations of Life: They are aſcriptively and imputatively His, that made them and that gave them (immediately or mediately) who is the total Author of all the Goods of Man; 1 Cor. 4. 7. What haſt thou that thou didſt not receive? now if thou didſt receive it, why doſt thou glory, as if thou hadſt not receiv'd it? The vice of Self-glorriation maketh an enormous Self-aſcription both of Good and of Honour upon the account of it (as if theſe things were originally and aſcriptively ours,) which is nothing better than Self-deifying, and therefore Athe-iſm and Antithe-iſm; as is viſible in thoſe great Inſtances of Atheiſtical Self-aſcription, (m) which the Scripture remarketh in Secular Bravo's and Haughty Mundane Monarchs, of whom Luther ſaith, (n) I am of Opinion, that Monarchies would far longer continue, if the Monarchs omitted this one Pronoun I. All Irreligious Self-aſcriptions are of kin to the Atheiſtic Rants and rude Impieties of an Engliſh Phyſician, who reproach'd and beat his Patient for thanking God that he was well; when it was I that cur'd you (ſaid he) do you thank God for it? So a rude Countryman, who having a rich Crop of Corn upon his Ground, when his Neighbour exhorted him to thank God for it, anſwer'd, nay rather thank my Dung-Cart. (o) But (in their way devoutly) the Pagans aſcribe their Soul, Body, Life, Sences, the Fruits of the Earth and the Goods of Life, their Virtue and Victory over Inteſtine Foes, to the Divine Beneficence; as alſo their Victories over External Enemies, conſecrating the beſt of the Spoil (ἀκρόλεια) to the God that was ſuppos'd to give them the Victory. They look'd upon the Gods as (δωτῆρες ἐάων) the Donors of their Goods, (p) the Supreme Deity as the Donor of all, (q) and their Sacrifices, as alſo their Libations at Meals, were honourary Aſcriptions to their Deities, and grateful acknowledgments of their Beneficence. Although much of Bravado was intermix'd with the Philoſophers Piety, yet in this manner one of them (ready to leave the World) ſpeaketh to the Supreme Deity. (r) I give thee thanks for thy Gifts; the time that I have had the uſe of thy things is ſufficient for me; for all things were thine, thou gaveſt them to me.

(k) S. Cypr. p. 2.

(l) Idem Teſtim. 3.

(m) Iſa. 10,13. 37, 25. Ezek. 28,6.25,3. *Dan.*4.30. *Hab.*1.16.

(n) In Pſal. 127.

(o) *M. Ant. l.*12. *S.*26. *Epict. Diſſ. p.*127, 247. 388.

(p) *M. Ant. l.*10. *S.*14.

(q) Porph. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 14.

(r) Χάειν ἔχω ὧν ἔδωκας. ἐφ᾽ ὅσον ἐχρησάμην τοῖς σοῖς ἀρκεῖ μοι. σὰ γὰρ ἦν πάντα. σύ μοι αὐτὰ δέδωκας. Epict. Diſſ. p. 416.

(2.) This all is His in another Notion, in an uſual Common-Law Senſe, as being his (property) ſimply and without addition, which denominateth Him the Owner and Superiour Proprietor of all. The Owner of things or perſons is the rightful Poſſeſſour and Diſpoſer of them in his own right. For in Common-Law we are look'd upon as the owners of Money, Land or Goods, if theſe things are matter of proper right to us, and This be in our own right, not in another's, as it is with thoſe things that are mutuatitious and alienable without our conſent. What is committed to our cuſtody (depoſitum) we rightly poſſeſs; what is lent us (mutuum) we rightly poſſeſs and uſe; but not in our own right. He that maketh a Steward, maketh an Officer, not an Owner. If Land be demis'd to us, during the term (performing the Condition) we have right to the Poſſeſſion, Uſe and Fruits, the Uſufructuary is Owner of the Fruits, but is not the Landlord. In a Mortgage the property of the Land is transferr'd upon Condition only, is capable of a Defeiſance, and may be made void without our conſent, the right of Property is not in us, which is defin'd by jus alienandi the right of alienating (s) according to Ariſtotle; and his definition may ſerve well enough for Human right of Property: But no ſuch right of Property is competible to God; who yet hath right to claim, poſſeſs, enjoy and diſpoſe of things and Perſons in his own right, and therefore is a proper Owner. Such an Owner of Land (in reſpect of Men) was Ananias, Act. 5. 4. Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? And after it was ſold, was it not in thine own power? He that poſſeſſeth and diſpoſeth of things in his own Right, is no Truſtee or Accomptant, and therefore (if he is a meer Owner, Lord or Proprietor) may diſpoſe of them at Diſcretion and Pleaſure, according to the Law-maxim (Quilibet eſt Arbiter & moderator rei ſuæ,) and as our Saviour argueth Matth. 20. 15. Is it not lawful for me, to do what I will with mine own? Such Owners of Human Goods the Gods are, as the Pagan Theologers ſuppoſe; for they teach us, when any of them is taken away, (t) not to ſay, ὅτι ἀπώλεσα αὐτὸ, I have loſt it; ἀλλ' ὅτι ἀπέδωκα, but I have reſtor'd it to the Owners. Uſually they oppoſe τὸ ἴδιον, proprium to that which is mutuatitious and alienable without our Conſent; as in that of Terence. (u)

Ego vitam Deorum propterea ſempiternam eſſe arbitror,
Quòd voluptates eorum propriæ ſunt.
I ſuppoſe the Life of the Gods, is therefore ſempiternal, becauſe their Pleaſures
Are their own, not mutuatitious and alienable.

But of Human external Goods they ſay, (w) Nihil eſſe in vita proprium mortali datum. Man hath nothing in this Life, but what is mutuatitious and alienable. Quicquid eſt cui Dominus inſcriberis, apud te eſt, tuum non eſt. Whatſoever thou art called Lord of, is only in thy Poſſeſſion, it is not thine. They ſuppoſe the goodly ſpecious things of Human Life, are not Gift properly (at leaſt not plenarily) but Lone; and agreeably to the Scripture-Theology they ſtile us Procuratours, that have the charge of, and adminiſter the Buſineſs and Goods of others. So Euripides repreſenteth the Gods as the Proprietors of Human Goods.

Οὔτοι τὰ χρήματ' ἴδια κέκτηνται βροτοί.
Τὰ τῶν θεῶν δ' ἔχοντες ἐπιμελούμεθα.

The things are not their own, of which Mankind take care.
They have them but in Truſt, the Gods the Owners are.

So the Holy Scripture repreſenteth God as the Owner or ſuperiour Proprietor of the whole comprehenſion of things, and the Univerſe (but in different Notion) as his Eſtate of Goods, (x) who is Lord and Poſſeſſor of Heaven and Earth. Deut. 10. 14. Behold the Heaven and the Heaven of Heavens is the Lords thy God, the Earth alſo with all that therein is. The Sun is his, the Rain is his, the Silver and the Gold are his. Matth. 5. 45. Hagg. 2. 8. All places are of his Dominion, which reacheth from the higheſt Star to the loweſt Clod of Earth. Pſal. 103. 22. So the Jews (y) call the World his World. Pſal. 50. 10, 12. Every Beaſt of the Foreſt is mine, and the Cattel upon a thouſand Hills—— —— the World is mine and the fulneſs thereof. Pſal. 24. 1. Exod. 9. 29. and ch. 19. 5. The Earth is the Lords and the fulneſs thereof, the World and they that dwell therein. Upon this Aphoriſm the Apoſtle groundeth his Diſcourſe to the Corinthians touching eating things offer'd to Idols, and he maketh uſe of it to contrary purpoſes (as the ſame Key both openeth and ſhutteth,) both to grant them Licenſe, and to abridge their Liberty. He maketh uſe of it, to grant them Licenſe, arguing in this manner. God's Religioniſts acknowledge no ſuch Propriety as Idols Goods or Idols Meat; for the Earth is the Lord's and the fulneſs thereof. Whatſoever therefore is expos'd to Sale (or ſet upon the Table) although offer'd to an Idol, you may without ſcruple eat. 1 Cor. 10. 25, 26. Whatſoever is ſold in the Shambles that eat, asking no queſtion for Conſcience ſake; for the Earth is the Lord's and the fulneſs thereof. He maketh uſe of this Aphoriſm, to abridge their Liberty, arguing in this manner; you may not partake of any thing as Idols Goods, or eat any thing as Idols Meat, (as ſuch or under that Notion in the apprehenſion of others,) it is againſt Religion, ſo to acknowledge any thing, to be Idols Goods or Meat; for the Earth is the Lord's and the fulneſs thereof. 1 Cor. 10. 28. If any Man ſay unto you, this is offer'd in Sacrifice to Idols, eat not, for his ſake that ſhew'd it, and for Conſcience ſake; for the Earth is the Lord's and the fulneſs thereof. God's Religioniſts that acknowledge no Idol-Gods, to be Proprietors of Goods, do not deny, that there is Idolatry or Idol-ſervice: But of the Goods that are imploy'd in it God is the Proprietor; and therefore in the Prophet he aſſerteth his right of Property, and threatneth to ſnatch them out of their Hands, who furniſh'd their Idol-ſervice out of his Goods, as an unchaſt Wife maintaineth a Rival out of her Husbands Eſtate. I will return and take away my Corn in the time thereof, and my Wine in the Seaſon thereof, and will recover my Wooll and my Flax given to cover her nakedneſs. Hoſ. 2. 10. So the Pſalmiſt celebrateth his right of property to the Earth and Sea. Pſal. 95. 5, 7.

(3.) An Owner or ſuperiour Proprietor of Things and Perſons in Common Law-Senſe, becauſe he is rightful Poſſeſſor and Diſpoſer of them in his own right, hath therefore right to Poſſeſs them and to diſpoſe of them for his own uſe, ſervice and behoof; it is his right to have them, to ſerve him, and to diſpoſe of them, for his Service; and therefore if they be his ſimply and without addition, they are his alſo (in a ſecond Law-Notion included in the former) with this addition as his Servants. He hath Dominium directum & utile, both the things themſelves and the uſe of them belongeth to him; and though he may imploy them to another's uſe, yet that ſheweth the uſe of them belongeth to him, that they are of ſervient condition to him; and therefore an Owner is fitly intituled Dominus or Lord. Such an Owner is governing Providence; all things are his in Common Law Senſe; which is to ſay, that all are his as his Servants, they are Servants to him as to their ſuperior Proprietor (whoſe Propriety is as full and abſolute as can be) according to that of the Pſalmiſt all are thy Servants. Pſal. 11 91. So when the Apoſtle ſaith of God, whoſe I am (his I am) his meaning is, I am his as his Servant; Act. 27. 23. for thus his words run, whoſe I am, and whom I ſerve. No Beings can be his or his own in common Law-ſenſe, otherwiſe than as being his Servants; for to be his or his own in the uſual Law-ſenſe, and to be Servants to him as to their Owner or ſuperior Proprietor, is but the very ſame thing in different Expreſſions. As he is their Owner in uſual Law-ſenſe, he is their

(s) Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 2. c. 6. S. 1.

(t) Epict. Ench. c. 15.

(u) Martin. Lex. in voce proprius.

(w) Grot. Not. in Luc. 16. 9, 12. Gat. in Ant. p. 216, 433, 365. M. Ant l. 12. S. 3. Stearne M. An. p. 149.

(x) Gen. 14. 22. Matth. 11. 25. Act. 17. 24.

(y) Hotting. de Jur. Hebr. p. 5.

their Dominus; therefore as they are his or his own (in the ſame uſual Senſe) they are his ſervi (Dominus eſt ſervi Dominus;) and becauſe they are Servants to him as to their Owner or ſuperior Proprietor, hence it is, that Piety is both the Buſineſs of being God's Servants, and the Buſineſs of giving unto God that which is his own, the rights and dues of his Godhead. All rational Beings (Men and Angels) are of right and by obligation his Servants, becauſe he is their Lord, Owner or ſuperior Proprietor. They owe to him the Duties of Servants in general; to look upon themſelves as rightfully his Poſſeſſion (as Plato in his Phædo calleth Mankind ἓν τῶν κτημάτων τοῖς θεοῖς, one of the Gods Poſſeſſions,) and as under his Command, Matth. 8. 9. faithfully to obey his preceptive Will and dutifully to ſubmit to his providential Diſpoſals. Rom. 6. 16. Pſal. 39. 9. To conſider themſelves as for his uſe and ſervice (the Servant is for the Maſter's Uſe. 2 Tim. 2. 21.) And therefore faithfully to do him Service, and to be faithful to his Intereſt, quitting all things that are inconſiſtent with the due adherence thereto. Matth. 25. 21. and 6. 24. Not behaving themſelves as their own Men (ſui juris) or at their own diſpoſal as to their Perſons, Actions, Condition, or as at Liberty, to do their own Will, to follow their own Pleaſures, to mind their own Affairs, to ſeek their own Intereſt, and to imploy their Time, Eſtates, Faculties, Abilities for Self-gratification and Advantage; for ſuch Behaviour is a making themſelves ἀδέσποτοι, without a Lord, whoſe they are, whoſe Rights they ought to acknowledge, whoſe Superiority they ought to revere (1 Tim. 6. 1. Mal. 1. 6.) to whoſe Will they ought to conform themſelves, and to be for the pleaſing of him (Tit. 2. 9.) attending his Buſineſs, propoſing to themſelves the Matters of his intereſt and behoof, whoſe Truſtees they are in this World, and for whoſe Goods they muſt be Accomptants. (z) Scitè Hebræi; da illi de ſuo, quia tu & omnia tua illius ſunt. Rational Beings do not only owe unto God the duties of Servants in general becauſe he is their Owner and ſuperior Proprietor: But they are under a further obligation; to be Servants to him as to their abſolute Owner and Proprietor. Which implieth a ſerving him with nothing leſs than their All, devoting and reſigning all to him, uſing and employing their All for him (themſelves and all that is theirs,) without alienating any thing (which is a defrauding him; for it is his Right, fully and entirely to have the Poſſeſſion, Diſpoſal and Uſe of us, without any exception, limitation or reſerves,) ſerving him at any rate, not declining his Service whatever they do, loſe or ſuffer, doing whatever is matter of Service unto him, living a Life of doing him Service, and making it their Buneſs, their one thing and their All, to be his Servants. But notwithſtanding ſuch abſolute and intire devotedneſs to God which is due from rational Beings, they have, and may ſeek ſuch Intereſts and Advantages of their own, which are conſiſtent with, or ſubordinate to, God's Intereſt; for theſe are propos'd as the grand motives to Piety. Pro. 3. 1, 2. Pſal. 34. 12. Joh. 12. 26. Rom. 2. 7, 10. Rev. 22. 14. Heb. 11. 26.

V. We have competently explain'd this Divine attribute, Lord or Owner and Proprietor of All. But becauſe it is generally miſunderſtood, and there are ſeveral ambiguities and difficulties in it, we will ſubjoin ſome further Illuſtrations of it. And our firſt Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute is from God's relation to thoſe Rationals that belong to his Church and Kingdom (which is the holy kind of Univerſe) who are his or his own in the ſtate of Society with him, and whom he peculiarly owneth for his, to whom he is related, not as a meer Lord or Owner, but as a Liege-Lord to his Liege-ſervants, Subjects and People. In this ſtate of Society with God we are his or his own, not only in the Common Law-Notion, but in a Special Notion importing Alliance and Friendſhip; (a) as Gr. Naz. (to ſignifie, that her Perſon was eſpecially ally'd to him, and that ſhe had a ſpecial Intereſt in his Affections) calleth Gr. Nyſſen's Wife My Theoſebia. In this Notion the Pſalmiſt ſaith; I am thine (as one of thy faithful Liege-people) ſave me. Pſal. 119. 99. I ſware unto thee, and entred into covenant with thee, and thou becameſt mine. Ezek. 16. 9. I am my Beloved's and my Beloved is mine. Cant. 2. 16. This Friendſhip-propriety is mutual and reciprocal, God's Liege-people have a Propriety in his Perſon (and conſequently in that plenitude of Goods which he bringeth with him,) and God hath not only a Propriety in his People, but ſetteth his Mark of Property upon them, as Merchants ſet their Property upon their Goods (to which the Apoſtle alludeth, Eph. 1. 13. Ye were ſealed with that holy Spirit of Promiſe,) or as of old the Goods belonging to the Exchequer had a Mark ſet upon them, which they called the Title. To old Iſrael Circumciſion was the Mark of Divine Property, agreeably to what God ſaith, Lev. 20. 26. I have ſevered you from other People, that ye ſhould be mine. Upon this ground the holy People are animated to a generous Truſt in God, and to fear no Diſaſters (O Iſrael fear not;) for they that belong to ſuperior Owners or Proprietors in the Senſe of Alliance and Friendſhip, ought to be matter of their proper Care and Cuſtody, as Wives are of their Husbands, Children of their Parents (who have a proper Right in the Perſon of their Husbands and Parents, and a ſpecial Intereſt in their Affections.) 1 Tim. 5. 8. If any Man provide not for his own, he hath deny'd the Faith. So God promiſeth thoſe pious Jews, that were his Partiſans and firm Adherents in evil Times, they ſhall be mine (Mal 3. 17.) They ſhall be in the Condition of thoſe that are mine, who are matter of my proper Care and Cuſtody. Wherefore it is a great Reaſon, that Chriſt maketh uſe of, to recommend his Diſciples to his Father's Paternal Care and Cuſtody, Joh. 17. 10. All mine are thine. Chriſtians belong to the Father of the Divine Family in a Senſe of Alliance, Friendſhip and Society; and in the ſame Senſe (καθ' οἰκείωσιν,) he is their Owner and ſuperior Proprietor; and in the ſame Senſe Chriſts Sheep (thoſe that are the People of the Divine Sentiment but preparitorily and initially) do inchoatively belong to the good Shepherd, as being deſign'd and prepar'd to be his Familiſts and Societiſts; whence he calleth them his and his own. Joh. 10. 12, 14. Whoſe own the Sheep are. I know my Sheep and am known of mine. This Popular Senſe of Propriety importing Alliance, is uſually in Scripture complicated with the Common Law-Senſe of Propriety: But it is not unuſual to ſeparate this twofold Senſe. For in a Senſe of meer Alliance and Cognation, without any thing of Common Law-Senſe, the World's Allies and Partiſans are called its own. Joh. 15. 19. If ye were of the World, the World would love his own. And the Apoſtle proceding upon a meer Common Law-Senſe formeth an Argument for ttb. 37. mb. 14. or. 8. m. 14. 8. il. 1. and 2. Luke 42. 14. Matth. 46. im. 4.

(z) Druſ. Job 35.

(a) Ep. 95.

for all Holineſs of Body and Spirit. 1 Cor. 6. 19, 20. Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price. Therefore glorifie God in your Body and in your Spirit, which are Gods. Of Right and by Obligation God is to have the Poſſeſſion of you, and your whole Man, Soul and Body, is to be imploy'd for his Uſe and Service, (according to the Chriſtian Inſtitution of Sanctity,) which is inconſiſtent with being your own ſo as not to be his. This Due accrueth to him upon the account of your Liberation by a price: As in Human Affairs Emptum cedit in jus Emptoris, a thing that is bought is his that bought it.

VI. A ſecond Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute is from God's Relation to the whole Univerſe of Rationals, both thoſe within and without. To this Univerſe God is related not as a meer Lord or Owner in Common Law-Senſe, but as their rightful Liege-Lord. He is their Lord or Owner in Common Law-Senſe: But as their rightful Liege-Lord, and as other rightful Liege-Lords are Lords or Owners in Common Law-Senſe. For ſo ſoon as the Univerſe of Rationals was founded, they were bound to all the Duties of Society with God. To take him for their God and make him their God, by a Soveraign Eſteem and Veneration, and Fear and Love, and Gratitude and Praiſe, a faithful Homage and Obedience, Honour and Subjection to the Father of Spirits, as his Liege-people and Subjects, and dutiful Beneficiaries; and he was to them the Holy Name, that muſt be hallow'd and ſanctified by them. Therefore in reſpect of Right and Obligation to Duty he was immediately upon their Creation, their God, their Father, their Maſter, their Sovereign and their Liege-Lord. And as immediately upon their Creation they were bound to the Duties of God's Religioniſts and Societiſts; ſo they were neceſſarily in the State of God-Societiſts; for to be out of that Divine Condition, is the moſt criminal and penal Condition, which therefore is incompetible to unfallen Rationals. From whence it followeth, that God is not, nor ever was, related to any Rationals as a meer Lord or Owner in Common Law-Senſe, but as a Liege-Lord (a God-Society Liege-Lord;) and that this Univerſe muſt be conſidered as by Original State, Obligation and Deſign God's Religioniſts and Societies. To thoſe Rationals that are within God is related as their rightful Liege-Lord; therefore thoſe extraneous Rationals that are out of the State of Society with God, muſt be conſider'd as his Religioniſts (or God-Societiſts) now in the State of Rebels againſt, and Exiles from their rightful Sovereign and Natural Liege-Lord. They are fallen from God, and therefore are fallen from the State of Society with God. They are fallen into the State of Sin and Miſery, and therefore are fallen from the State of Holineſs and Happineſs, which is the State of Society with God, and which was their Primitive Original State. Of which Original (holy and happy) Condition there are conſpicuous Marks ſtill remaining in degenerate Human Nature. For (as it is generally obſerv'd,) not reaſon, ſo much as a capacity of and propenſeneſs to Religion, is the conſtitutive form and ſpecific difference of Mankind as contradiſtinguiſh'd to Brute Animals. ——— Separat hoc nos à grege Brutorum. The Philoſopher ſaith of Rationals. (b) They only are adapted to converſe with God, being conjoyn'd to him by reaſon. Which is an Indication, that they were originally made for Religion, the State and Life of Society with God; which being fallen from, God is now no more their Proprietor or Owner in the Senſe of Alliance and Friendſhip, till they be recover'd by the Methods of Redemption. But as by Redemption God becometh not their meer Lord or Owner, but their Liege-Lord: So the ſame Relation reſulteth from Original Creation, God is their Society-Lord, their God-Society-Lord, who is the Rector of a Polity.

VII. Hence ariſeth a third Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute; for God as a Liege-Lord, and no otherwiſe than is competible to a Liege-Lord, is abſolute Lord or Owner of Rationals (ſpeaking in a Common Law-Senſe) their Dominus abſolutus: And they are no otherwiſe abſolutely his in Common Law-Senſe, than as his Liege-Servants and People. That he is plenarily, abſolutely, unlimitedly our Lord and Owner in Common Law-Senſe, is the Senſe of all that are truly pious; they expreſly acknowledge it in their abſolute devotedneſs to his Service, and in their abſolute ſubjectneſs to his Divine Will. For their abſolute devotedneſs to his Service ſuppoſeth, that he hath plenary Right to all that they are, have and can do (Soul, Body, Time, Talents, Abilities, Intereſts,) that nothing leſs than their All muſt be dedicated to him, and imploy'd for his uſe; that no Love or Service muſt be thought too much or too dear for him; and that legally and of right whether we live, we live unto the Lord, or whether we die, we die unto the Lord; living therefore or dying we are the Lords. That is, we are for his Service in all Conditions. Rom. 14. 8. As the truly pious are abſolutely devoted to his Uſe and Service, ſo they are abſolutely and without Exception ſubjected to his Divine Will. Whereby I do not mean, that they abſolutely and unlimitedly Subject all matters of Event to his meer Will and Pleaſure (which is a Stoical extravagance,) or that God hath an abſolute unlimited Right, to diſpoſe of his Rational Creatures as to all matters of Event (which is falſe Theology:) But the truly pious ſimply, abſolutely and unlimitedly ſubject themſelves to his Will of Duty, (to follow the Lord fully, Numb. 14. 24.) and as a Branch of this Subjection they dutifully ſubmit themſelves to his Will of Events (to do the Will of God in dutiful ſuffering his Will;) they content themſelves with his Allowance, ſubmit to his Uſage and Correction, leave it to God, to chuſe their Condition for them, prefer his Choices before their own Wiſhes, and dutifully acquieſce in his Soveraign all-diſpoſing Will. It is the Lord, let him do what ſeemeth him good. God is therefore related to his Liege-People as their abſolute Lord or Owner, they acknowledge it both verbally and really, and by acknowlegding it they enter into the State of Society with God: But this Relation is not the Relation of an abſolute meer Lord or Owner (which would be abſolute Servitude to his People,) but is a Branch of his Relation of Alliance, Friendſhip and God-Society. For being related as a Liege-Lord to his Liege-People (as Princes and Patrons are to their Lieges,) this Relation of Friendſhip and God-Society compriſeth both the Duty-part and the Benefit-part of Religion. His being our abſolute Lord or Owner is the Duty-part of Religion to us, obliging us to an abſolute Subjection to his Divine Will, and an abſolute devotedneſs to his Service, agreeably to the Lieges of mundane Princes and Patrons trons, (c) who become their Men (as the Engliſh Phraſe is in doing Homage) and are devoted to live and die with them. But by the Duty-part of Religion we do not loſe or relinquiſh, but gain and enjoy a right to the Benefit-part of Religion: By reſigning and relinquiſhing abſolutely (in the Senſe of Religion) our Party-things, we are entituled to God's Party-things (we gain and enjoy a Propriety in his Perſon, and that infinite good which he is in himſelf and to his People,) and as the Apoſtle ſaith in another Caſe, by having nothing we Poſſeſs all things. This is certainly the State of things in the Univerſe, as it is now conſtituted, and this was the original State of Things. God was never related to his Religioniſts and Societiſts as an abſolute meer Lord or Owner, but as their Liege-Lord, the rightful Liege-Lord of all Rationals, who as ſuch is their abſolute Lord or Owner.

(b) Ὅτι κοινωνεῖν μόνον ταῦτα πέφυκε θεῷ τῆς συναναστροφῆς κατὰ τὸν λόγον. Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 9.

VIII. A fourth Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute is from ſeveral Modes of God's being in Poſſeſſion or out of Poſſeſſion of Rationals. For as a governing Providence he is in Poſſeſſion of the Univerſe of Rationals: But as a God-Society-Lord, he is out of Poſſeſſion of the extraneous Rationals (not having jus in re, whatever jus ad rem he may have;) for the Lords Portion is his People, Jacob is the Lot of his Inheritance. Jacob or Iſrael, God's People, his Portion, Inheritance, or Poſſeſſion, are ſynonymous Expreſſions in Scripture, and ſignifie Peculium Dei, the Church of God, the Syſtem of God's-Societiſts, who is alſo intituled the Portion of Jacob, the excellency of Jacob, the holy One of Iſrael. For God was peculiarly their God, and in the ſtile of the Old Teſtament, they be thy People and thine Inheritance. Save thy People and bleſs thine Inheritance. Remember me, O Lord, with the favour that thou beareſt unto thy People. That I may ſee the good of thy choſen, that I may rejoice in the gladneſs of thy Nation, that I may glory with thine Inheritance. The Name of a Portion and Inheritance (a People of Inheritance, a Flock of Heritage, Deut. 4. 20. Mic. 7. 14) importeth, that the Univerſe of Rationals is in a divided State; for thou didſt ſeparate them from among all the People of the Earth, to be thine Inheritance. 1 King. 8. 53. And becauſe in parting and ſharing Inheritances Lines and Rods were made uſe of, to meaſure them, and they were uſually divided by Lot, hence Iſrael (that was God's Partage or Portion) is ſometimes called his Lot of Inheritance, ſometimes the Rod of his Inheritance. Remember thy Congregation, which thou haſt purchaſed of old; the Rod of thine Inheritance, which thou haſt redeemed. By which Redemption they became λαὸς τῆς περιποιήσεως, a People of God's purchaſe and acquiſition to himſelf, and therefore of Choiceneſs, Precioſity and Peculiarity. Iſrael was peculiarly God's Poſſeſſion in reſpect of his Civil kind of Sovereignty over that People, (d) which God took upon him and exerciſ'd for ſome time (at leaſt till they choſe a King,) and in this Notion the Son of Sirach may be underſtood to ſay; In the diviſion of the Nations of the whole Earth he ſet over every People a Ruler: But Iſrael is the Lord's Portion. Eccluſ. 17. 17. But Iſrael was alſo God's Portion or peculiar Poſſeſſion in reſpect of his holy Sovereignty over that People (being the God of Iſrael;) for they were in the State of Society with God and God with them, as God and People. I will take you to me for a People, and I will be to you a God. Exod. 6. 7. (e) Accordingly upon receiving his holy Government and Inſtitution of Religion they became his in the Senſe of Alliance (Take us for thine Inheritance, Exod. 34. 9. is rendred by the Septuagint we ſhall be thine) his Religioniſts, Familiſts, Societiſts and Republick; and God became their Proprietary and Poſſeſſor as a God-Society Lord of a God-Society People. Jer. 7. 23. This thing I commanded your Fathers, ſaying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye ſhall be my People. Deut. 26. 17, 18. Thou haſt avouched the Lord this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways. And the Lord hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar People. By their confederating with God they were diſcriminated from unholy Mankind, introduced into the State of Sanctity, appropriated to and ſet apart for God, to be unto him a People, for God to Poſſeſs, Enjoy and have the Uſe of; and God ſet apart himſelf, to be unto them a God, a God-like Governor, Protector and Benefactor. Whence the Pſalmiſt (in an high ſtrain) uſually celebrateth their felicitative Eſtate. Bleſſed is the Nation, whoſe God is the Lord, and the People whom he hath choſen for his own Inheritance. Agreeably to the ſtate of old Iſrael the Chriſtian Church is called in Scripture and by the Fathers Vinea Domini, the Lord's Vineyard; Area Dominica, the Lord's Floor; Ager Dei, God's Field; Grex Dei, God's Flock; Ovile Dei, God's Sheep-fold; Civitas Dei, God's City; Regnum Dei, God's Kingdom. All which Appellatives import, both that God is the God-Society-Lord, and that as ſuch he hath no other Poſſeſſion amongſt Rationals but his Church only. So S. Hilary (abating his miſtake touching Angelical Prefects) well repreſenteth the Senſe of the Promiſe made to Chriſt, Pſal. 2. 8. that all Nations ſhould become his Inheritance and Poſſeſſion. (f) This is his Inheritance; that all Nations baptiz'd and taught be regenerate into Life: Not now (according to Moſes's Divine Song) conſign'd to the Domination of Angels, nor divided according to the number of them: But taken into the Divine Family, and made God's Domeſticks, and from the unjuſt wrongful Power of the Dominations tranſlated into an eternal Divine Kingdom. For it doth not now hold, that Iſrael only is the Lord's Portion, and Jacob the rod of his Inheritance: But all Nations before divided according to the number of Angels, this whole of Nations is now one and the People of one God. But before they become the People of God (or make approaches to ſo Divine a Condition) they are (g) tanquam Sylvæ cubile Diaboli, as Woods the Lodging of Satan, and this is the change that is made in their Condition. † The Church had its riſe from Chriſt, but is found amongſt the Gentiles, which are of the Fields of the Wood: Of Horrid they are become nitid, of Steril fruitful, of Food for the fire a Region of vital Food, of wild Beaſts Lodgings the reſting place of God, his Houſe, Temple and Poſſeſſion. As by coming into the Church the Gentiles became God's Poſſeſſion: So if any be juſtly caſt out of the Church, they ceaſe to be God's Poſſeſſion, being Deut. 32. 9.

1 King. 8. 51. Pſal. 28. 9. and 106. 4 78. 6 71 5, 1 106. 4 Deut. 4. 20. 9. 26, 29. Exod. 34. 9. Iſa. 19. 25. 47. 6. 63. 17. 1 Sam. 10. 1. 26. 19. 2 Sam. 14. 16. 21. 3. 20. 19. 2 King. 21. 14. Jer. 12. 7, 8, 9. Joel 2. 17. 3. 2. Mic. 7. 14, 18. Zech. 2. 12. Jer. 10. 16. and 51. 19. Pſal. 74. 2.

Pſal. 33. 12. and 144. 15. &c.

(c) Selden. Titles p. 274, 355, &c. ed 3.

(d) V. Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. Diſſ. de Theocrat. Jud.

(e) V. Coſri p. 261. ed. Buxt.

(f) Hæc eſt hæreditas ejus — ut omnes gentes baptizatæ atque doctæ regenerentur in vitam: Non jam ſecundum illam divinam Moyſi cantionem angelorum dominatui dedicatæ, neque ſecundum eorundem numerum diviſæ: Sed in dominicam familiam ſuſceptæ, & in domeſticos Dei deputatæ & ex injuſto atque perverſo jure dominatuum in regnum æternum divinumque tranſlatæ. Neque enim adhuc tantum portio Domini Iſrael, neque funiculus hæreditatis ejus Jacob: Sed gentes omnes ſecundum numerum angelorum antè diviſæ, nunc jam unus atque unius omnis hæc univerſitas gentium Dei populus eſt. In Pſal. 2. Enarr.

(g) Idem in Pſal. 131.

† Eccleſia cœpit à Chriſto, ſed in gentibus reperitur, quæ ſunt ex Sylvæ campis: Ex horrentibus nitidæ, ex ſterilibus fructuoſæ, ex ignis pabulo vitalis cibi regio, ex ferarum cubilibus Dei requies, Domus, Templum atque Poſſeſſio. Ibid.

being excommunicati à Deo (excommunicated from God, as the Writers of the Church ſpeak) becauſe they are caſt out of the ſtate of Society with God into the Herd of Mundane and Godleſs People, that are not his Inheritance. Iſa. 63. 18, 19. The People of thy Holineſs have poſſeſs'd it but a little while: Our Adverſaries have trodden down thy Sanctuary. We are thine, thou never beareſt rule over them, they are not called by thy Name. Extraneous Rationals therefore are out of God's poſſeſſion; but not in the Rabbins Notion, who ſuppoſe, that their Affairs are not govern'd by Providence; for as a governing Providence God inheriteth all Nations; Pſal. 82. 8. The Lord of the Church is alſo the Lord of the whole Earth: Pſal. 92. 5. Mic. 4. 13. ארון העולם Lord of the World, רבון העולמים Lord of the Worlds (the upper and lower) as the Rabbins ſtile Him: And becauſe he is Lord in reſpect of Might as well as Right, He can never be put out of poſſeſſion; wherefore the Perſians Name of God خدا חדא (which is the moſt proper Name of God in their Language) is adapted to what God is; (h) for that Name properly ſignifieth a Poſſeſſour, and therefore fitly denoteth him that is eminently ſo, the poſſeſſour of Heaven and Earth. O Lord God of Iſrael (ſaith Hezekiah) which dwelleth between the Cherubins, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the Kingdoms of the Earth, thou haſt made Heaven and Earth; 2 King. 19. 15. And now it is eaſie, to anſwer S. Hierom's Interrogatory: (i) God is every where, and whole every where, from whom who can be ſeparated, ſeeing all things are in him? and himſelf ſaith by the Prophet, I am a God nigh at hand, and not afar off: and the Pſalmiſt witneſſeth, If I aſcend into Heaven thou art there: If I deſcend into Hell, thou art there.

IX. A Fifth Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute is from the unſettled condition of the Goods of this World, and the arbitrarious diſpoſal that Providence maketh of them; in which reſpect the World is of oppoſite condition to the Kingdom of God. For of the Goods of his own Kingdom God made a Settlement in the firſt Conſtitution of things, and in the new Creation or Conſtitution of things he hath made a new Settlement of the State and Inheritance of Bleſſedneſs. Having made ſuch a Settlement of things (of Rights and Dues) as a Kingdom of God; the Goods whereof are ſettled to perpetuity, God doth not retain to himſelf a full and abſolute power, to give and take them away at diſcretion and pleaſure, they are not liable to an arbitrary diſpoſal, nor are they that enjoy them meer Tenants at Will, they have ſuch a Propriety in them, that they cannot be taken away without a forfeiture. But the State of this World is no ſuch Settlement of things (of Rights and Dues:) Mankind hold not their Inheritances by any Law-ſettlement made by governing Providence (abſtracting from certain Promiſes made in Scripture, which are but particular Caſes;) nor are the Goods of this World ſettled irrevocably or to perpetuity, or any longer (abſtracting from thoſe Scripture-promiſes) than durante bene placito. For although God hath made a grant of the Earth to Adam (and if any might pretend, to be Univerſal Monarch or Proprietor of the whole Earth, and to diſpoſe of it from the Arctick to the Antarctick Pole, as Pope Alexander the Sixth is ſaid to have done, it was Adam the Father of Mankind.) A like Grant was made to Noah and his Sons; and the Pſalmiſt repreſenteth God as keeping the Heavens in his own Hand (as his own Demeſnes,) but the Earth he hath given to the Children of Men: Although the moſt High divided to the Nations their Inheritance, and hath aſſign'd them the Bounds of their Habitation, and hath made Mankind of dominant condition in this lower Region (and therefore it is a grand Extravagance to ſuppoſe, that Worldly Dominion is founded in Grace, that none but gracious Perſons have right to the Earth) yet God hath not made them a Leaſe of their Eſtates or of their Lives: He may conſerve or change their Condition, preſerve or deſtroy their Lives, and the Earth it ſelf (which yet he hath promis'd not to deſtroy by Water) as he pleaſeth, and as ſeemeth good in his Eyes. In his own right (as a Lord or Owner) he hath right to diſpoſe of and govern the Affairs of this World of his Creatures pro arbitrio, to give and take away, to make poor and to make rich, to kill and to make alive, as the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh, in whoſe Hand our Breath is, and whoſe are all our ways. In his Hand is the Soul of every living thing, and the Breath of all Mankind. And he doth but make uſe of his own Right and Liberty, (of which he hath made no reſtriction by a Kingdom of God-kind of Settlement) in giving the Kingdom to whomſoever he will. The great Lords and Owners of Eſtates (things mutuatitious and alienable) are but Tenants at Will to governing Providence, which (notwithſtanding any Grants or Donations made of the Earth) ſtill retaineth a plenary right, to diſpoſe of them at pleaſure. (k) Why have you receiv'd theſe things? to make uſe of them. How long? ſo long as he that lendeth them pleaſeth. If ye have not been faithful in that which is another Man's, who ſhall give you that which is your own? ſaith our Saviour. He confronteth and oppoſeth a twofold ſtate, and two oppoſite ſorts of Goods. In this World we are poſſeſſors of Goods only as Servants to another (Servants not Owners) the Goods are his, he hath right to call us to account for them, and to take them out of our Hands; but in the Heavenly World we are Owners of a Felicitative Eſtate, (l) the Heavenly kind of Goods are given Nobis & propter Nos, chiefly for our own good (not like thoſe of which we are only Stewards and Depoſitaries,) none may call us to account for our Miniſtration there, nor take away our Celeſtial Inheritance.

X. A Sixth Illuſtration of this Divine Attribute is from the Muhammedan Explication of it, which attributeth unto God as abſolute Lord an abſolute Infinity of Right or Power over all the Creatures (at leaſt it is unbounded by any Rights of the Creatures) which involveth in it a threefold Imagination. Firſt, an imaginary Power of abſolute Reprobation. Secondly, an Imaginary Theological ſtate of Nature. Thirdly, an abſolute Slavery of all Creatures in their Original Condition. For there is a party of the Muhammedan Theologers, who maintain, (m) "That God is reg-
"nant in that Univerſe which he hath created,
"ſo as to do what he will, and determine what
"he pleaſeth. If he ſhould introduce all the "Creatures together into Paradiſe, there would "be no Iniquity in this; or if he ſhould caſt
"them

(h) Hotting. Diſſert. Faſcic. p. 299.

(i) Deus ubique eſt, & totus ubique eſt, à quo quis poteſt ſeparari, cùm in eo ſint omnia? & ipſe per prophetam loquatur. Ego Deus appropinquans, & non de longe: & pſalmiſta teſtatur: Si aſcendero in cælum, tu illic es; ſi deſcendero in Infernum ades. In Epheſ. 2. 13.

Gen. 1. 28.

Gen. 9. 2. Pſal. 115. 16.

Deut 32. 8. Act. 17. 26. Pſal. 8. 6.

Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, omnibus uſu.

Job 1. 21. 1 Sam. 2. 6, 7. Numb. 16. 22. Dan. 5. 23. Job 12. 10. Dan. 4. 25.

(k) Ἐπὶ τί εἴληφας ταῦτα; χρησάμενος. μέχρι τίνος; μέχρις ἂν ὁ χρήσας θέλῃ. Epict. Diſſ. p. 364.

Luk. 16. 12.

(l) Biſhop Sanderſon Ser. on 1 Cor. 12. 7.

(m) Pocock. Spec. p. 252, 253.

“ them into the Fire, this would be no Injuſtice. Injuſtice is, when one taketh upon him, to adminiſter things, where he hath not right, or putteth them in a place which is not theirs; but ſeeing he is abſolute Lord of things, Iniquity cannot be charg'd upon him, nor Injuſtice be attributed to him. God is juſt in his Works, becauſe he is in his own Poſſeſſion and Kingdom, and there doth whatever he will, and determineth what he pleaſeth. Juſtice is, when a thing is plac'd in its own place; and that is, when one is converſant in his own Kingdom according to his own Will: On the contrary, Iniquity is, when one is converſant in the Dominion or Poſſeſſion of another, which cannot be aſcrib'd to God, who is Lord of all. (n) One may ſuſpect a Man of acting unjuſtly, by invading the Rights of others; but no Injuſtice can be imagin'd in God, ſeeing there is nothing that belongeth to any but himſelf. An abſolute Lord of this irregular kind is not deſirable or tolerable in Civil Affairs; (o) and therefore Auguſtus by publick Edict prohibited the Attribute of Lord, nor would he ſuffer his Children or Nephews, to give him that Title. Domini Appellationem ut maledictum & opprobrium ſemper exhorruit. He always abhorr'd (ſaith Suetonius) the Appellative of Lord as a bad Name and a Reproach. So Tiberius and ſome others of the Roman Emperours would not endure the Title of Dominus, becauſe they look'd upon it as the Relative to Servus (a Bond-ſlave;) in which Notion it implieth, that the Subject and his Subſtance are in the Property of the Emperour. But although a Lord of the unnatural and irregular kind is not thought tolerable in Civil Government, yet ſuch a kind of Lord is introduc'd into Religion, not only by Mahummedan but Chriſtian Theologers, who in ſeveral degrees of Extravagance attributed unto God an abſolute Dominion and Sovereignty (which are terms extremely equivocal, yet are made uſe of without due diſtinction of Senſe) of a moſt irregular and unnatural kind. (p) The Writer of Predeſtination and Grace is of Opinion, that God by the abſolute right of his Dominion might adjudge Men to Eternal Death, although they had not ſinned. Which alſo may be read in the Homilies of Macarius. (q) It is matter of diſpute amongſt Divines touching God, whoſe Power over his Creatures is ſupreme and infinite, whether he can by abſolute right damn eternally any innocent Perſon; touching which Point the ancient Fathers are of different Opinions; yet in this all agree, that if it be done, it is by extraordinary and abſolute Power, not by the common and uſual Law which he hath preſcrib'd to himſelf in governing Men, and of which he hath given us ſome ſignification in his word. (r) If God, ſo ſoon as he made Man, had ſunk him into the deep abyſs of Hell without any regard of his good or evil Actions, only that he might ſhew his Summity of Sovereignty over his Creatures, Man ought not unwillingly to acquieſce in that Severity, becauſe the Creature is the Creators by abſolute and indefinite right. Such an abſolute right would be to no purpoſe, nor would it be a Right, if it might not be made uſe of; wherefore the abſolute Reprobationers ſuppoſe, that the Creator maketh uſe of his abſolute indefinite Right, and they found their Doctrine upon this Baſis: (s) The great God bleſſed for ever hath abſolute right of Dominion over his Creatures, to diſpoſe and determine of them as ſeemeth him good. They ſuppoſe, that the Creator (t) as abſolute Lord hath right of predeſtinating and creating to Perdition whom he pleaſeth (the Sublapſarian Hypotheſis implieth it, and the Supralapſarians diſpute for it,) that God maketh them Veſſels of Wrath, pro ſuo jure & mera voluntate, in virtue of his own Right and by his meer Will; that the end of Reprobation is, that thereby God may ſhew his Power of doing what he will with his own, his Right and Authority over all; for Sin is not the impulſive cauſe of Reprobation, but the Will of God only. Agreeably whereto they underſtand S. Paul's Text; For this ſame purpoſe have I raiſed thee up, that I might ſhew my Power in thee. Hath not the Potter power over the Clay, of the ſame Lump, to make one Veſſel to honour, and another unto diſhonour?

Many that diſlike this extravagant Aſſertion, that God hath right, to damn faultleſs and guiltleſs Creatures, that count it the higheſt wrong and injuſtice, yet retain the ground of it and the fundamental miſtake upon which it is built; which is, That the Creatures have no Rights. (u) If the Creatures ſhould have a right to any thing, of which God cannot deprive them, they would have ſomething of their own, to which God hath no right. But ſeeing every Creature is entirely God's, and can have nothing which is not his Gift, and can do nothing which is not his Debt; it cannot have a right where God hath none, becauſe He cannot but have an entire right in his own Works. And therefore if in any thing God's Supreme Sovereignty ſeems confin'd, 'tis not bounded by any right or priviledge in the Creature, but only regulated by his own Perfections. (w) We are abſolutely at the will and diſpoſal of God, as Slaves and Vaſſals are at the will of their Lord. (x) Ancient Servitude to which the Scriptures relate, put the Servants wholly in the poſſeſſion of their Maſter, ſo that their Perſons were as properly his, as the reſt of his Goods: And we be ſo in reſpect of Chriſt. A Divine of our Nation that ſeems to have conſider'd this Attribute, (Lord or Owner of all) at a more than ordinary rate, yet explaineth it exactly after the Muhammedan mode. (y) God is jure creationis & conſervationis, the moſt abſolute Owner or Proprietor of Man and the whole Creation; therefore it belongs to God, to be the abſolute Diſpoſer of all things; to do with them what he pleaſeth, and to uſe them to the pleaſure of his Will. Therefore alſo (in hoc inſtanti, antecedently to any further Relation or Covenant) it is not poſſible for God, to do wrong to his Creature, howſoever he ſhall uſe it; becauſe it is abſolutely his own, and he oweth it nothing: And where there is no Debitum, there is no Jus, and can be no Injuria. God having made himſelf Rector of the World, hath, as it were, obliged himſelf, that is, declar'd his Will, to deal equally with all Men, and judge them according to their Works; and ſo hath created a Debitum & Jus to Man, which inferreth a certain Juſtice on God's part. But conſidering him only in this firſt Relation, meerly ut Dominus abſo-

---

(n) Ibid. p. 288, 289.

(o) Selden Titles par. 1. ch. 4.

(p) Scriptor libri de prædeſtinatione & gratia cenſet Deum pro abſoluto dominii ſui jure etiam homines potuiſſe adjudicare morti æternæ, etſi non peccaſſent. Quod etiam in homiliis Macarii Ægyptii legere eſt. Voſſ. Hiſt. Pel. l. 2. par. 1. Theſ. 3.

(q) De Deo, cujus eſt in res à ſe conditas ſuprema & infinita poteſtas, inter Theologos quæritur, an abſoluto jure innocentem quempiam poſſit æternæ damnationi ſubjicere: de quo variant ſanè antiquorum patrum ſententiæ: illud tamen inter omnes convenit, extraordinaria & abſoluta, ſi id fiat, poteſtate fieri: non communi & uſitata lege, quam in gubernandis hominibus ſibi ipſe præfixit, & cujus nobis in verbo ſuo ſignificationem aliquam dedit. Petav. T. 1. l. 10. c. 7. S. 2.

(r) Si Deus ſtatim poſtquam hominem condidit, eum in profundum inferorum abyſſum demerſiſſet, nulla habita ratione actionum ipſius ſeu bonarum ſeu malarum, tantum ut ſummum ſuum in creaturas imperium oſtenderet, debuiſſe hominem in ea ſeveritate non invitum acquieſcere, quia creatura creatoris eſt, ex abſoluto Jure atque indefinito. Amyrald. ap. Curcell. de Jur. Dei in creat. c. 1.

(s) Cole Pract. Diſc. of God's Sover. p. 2.

(t) V. Curcell. ſupr. c. 10.

(u) Sa. Parker Bi- of Oxf of God's Domin. p. 149.

(w) Dr. Sherlock of Providence p. 140.

(x) Biſhop Pearſon on the Creed, Art. 2. p. 312. ed. 1.

(y) Mr. Baxter Reaſons of the Chriſt. Relig. par. 1. ch. 6.

lutus, or Proprietor, it is not poſſible for any thing that he can do, to be an Injury. A meer corporeal pain (including no Contradiction or Error, as Conſcience's Accuſation of the Innocent doth,) could be no wrong; there being leſs appearance of reaſon, to call it wrong, than for my burning my Wood, or plucking a Roſe, to be a wrong; for it is not the Pain of the one that can make it an Injury, any more than the Deſtruction of the other. —— Every one may do with his own what he liſt, except the Propriety be but limited and dependent on another, or but ſecundum quid; who ſhould interpoſe, and any way hinder God from the free diſpoſal of his own? Not any Copartner, for there is none: Nor the Creature it ſelf, becauſe it is abſolutely His. (z) It is altogether impoſſible for God, the moſt abſolute Lord of all, in this firſt Inſtant, before he maketh Promiſes or other Manifeſtations of his Will, to do wrong to any Creature; for where the Dominion is abſolute, there the Creature can have no right; and where there is no right there can be no wrong. It would be no more Injury to a Man than to a Brute, to be depriv'd of Life or of Pleaſure, or to be tortur'd with Pains, if God was only Lord of Men, and ſtood not related to them in any other Relation than unto Brutes. But now, ſeeing He that is Lord is alſo Rector and Benefactor, and as Rector He hath publickly declar'd, that he will govern and judge his Subjects by his Laws (not by his abſolute Right, but by his ordinate Will, as it is commonly call'd,) none ought to fear, that God will deal with him according to the Power of his abſolute Dominion, without regard to Right and Juſtice; becauſe he hath now ſignified to the World, that he will act otherwiſe. (a) As a Governour and a Father he hath ſecur'd the Faithful of Eternal Life; otherwiſe as their Owner he could not have wrong'd them, if he had made the moſt innocent as miſerable, as he is capable to be.

(z) Method. Theolog. par. 1. cap. 12. p. 248.

(a) Chriſtian Directory T. 1. p. 84.

XI. In this mode of Theologizing (wherein Rationals are ſuppos'd to be related to God as their meer Lord or Owner) we have an Idea of a Theological ſtate of Nature exactly parallel to a like piece of Phantaſtry in the Leviathan. For as the Leviathan's ſtate of Nature is antecedent to Humane Society, and to the Foundation of Humane Society: So this imaginary Theological ſtate of Nature is antecedent to God-Society (or Holy Society) and to the Foundation of ſuch Society. As the Leviathan's ſtate of Nature is antecedent to Humane Government, and to all Promiſes, Pacts and Covenants between Man and Man: So this Theological ſtate of Nature is antecedent to the Holy Government, and to all Promiſes, Pacts and Covenants between God and Creature. As the Leviathan's Atheiſm foundeth Humane Society and Government upon the arbitrary Promiſes of Men and Declarations of their Will, (called Pacts, Covenants, relinquiſhing and transferring of Rights;) ſo this miſtaken Theiſm foundeth the Holy Society and Government upon the arbitrary Promiſes of God and Declarations of his Will. As in the Leviathan's ſtate of Nature there is no ſuch thing as Friendſhip between Man and Man, nor any Relation of Friendſhip and Alliance, the ſtate of Nature is the ſtate of War; (b) for although Men are not always engag'd in actual fighting, yet there is no aſſurance to the contrary, and they are in continual Jealouſies: So in the Theological ſtate of Nature there is no ſuch thing as Friendſhip between God and the Creatures, nor any Relation of Friendſhip and Alliance (as that of Father and Children, Benefactor and Beneficiary, Sovereign and Subject, God and People,) the Deity perhaps is not actually engag'd in fighting againſt them, yet there is no aſſurance to the contrary, and they muſt neceſſarily live in continual Jealouſies, which is plainly a ſtate of War and Hoſtility. Moreover, if the Creator ſhould make uſe of that exorbitant Power, which is aſcrib'd to him, of damning his innocent Creatures, He muſt neceſſarily abdicate them from being his Liege-People in Society and Polity, (c) conſiſtere enim ſimul non poſſunt voluntas imperandi & voluntas perdendi (the Will of deſtroying a People is inconſiſtent with the Will of being their governing Head;) and if the Creator ſhould attempt to treat his innocent Creatures at ſuch a rate of Barbarity, they would have juſt cauſe to rebell (which ſpeaketh a Condition of War;) and probably the fear of it (d) would put them into the poſture of Gladiators: Upon which account it is farther apparent, that the Theological as well as the Hobbeian ſtate of Nature is a ſtate of War. In both theſe Hypotheſes War hath the priority, Society and Government, Order and Peace, are conſequent upon it (agreeably to Heraclitus's Maxim before cited touching a wild kind of ſtrife, πόλεμος πάντων πατὴρ, War is the Father of all things;) which is ſuch a Theological Method of founding the Univerſe, as Epicurus took in Philoſophy, deriving this beauteous and harmonious Frame of things from the Juſtles and Rencounters of Atoms. In the Leviathan's ſtate of Nature the Societive Bonds and Alliances that are in Nature, are diſcarded, Men are ſuppos'd, to be altogether ſegregated, diſunited and diſſociated both from one another, and from a governing Head; but afterwards they are link'd into a Polity by certain arbitrary Covenants: So in the Hypotheſis of a Theological ſtate of Nature the Holy-Societive Bonds and Alliances are diſcarded, the Univerſe of Rationals are ſuppos'd, to be diſſociated from one another and from a governing Head; but afterwards they are link'd and combin'd into a Polity by an arbitrary Law or Covenant, according to which God declareth, that he will govern his Creatures. As in the Hobbeian ſtate of Nature there is no ſuch thing as Law; (e) where there is no common Power there is no Law; nor can any Law be made, till they have agreed upon the Perſon that ſhall make it: So in the Theological ſtate of Nature there is no proper Law (as it is ſuppos'd) for there can be no Law till God ſubſtitute his Ordinate Will inſtead of his Abſolute Right, and take upon him the Relation of Rector. Accordingly a Law is thus defin'd; (f) The ſignification of the Will of a Governour (or Rector) making the Subjects duty, and determining of Rewards to the Obedient and Puniſhments to the Diſobedient. But if there be no Law in the Theological ſtate of Nature, there can be no Religion (for Religion is Law;) and if there be no Religion in the Univerſe, there can be no God in the Univerſe; and what can the Leviathan do worſe than to conſtitute an Univerſe without a Religion? If there be no Law in the Theological State of Nature, whence is it, that Man is bound to acquieſce in God's Severity, if he ſhould ſink him into the deep Abyſs of Hell, ſo ſoon as he is created? Whence is it, that Man is bound to Piety towards God as his Owner? and why are Men taught a Religion towards him in that Relation antecedently to his Relation of Rector? For we are told, (g) that it is the duty of every reaſonable Creature, to bethink him, that God is his abſolute Owner, and there-

(b) Leviathan, par. 1. ch. 13.

(c) Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 1. c. 4. S. 11.

(d) Leviathan ſup.

(e) Leviathan ſup.

(f) Mr. Baxter Reaſ. of the Chriſt. Rel. par. 1. ch. 8.

(g) Ibid. c. 7.

thereupon to make a deliberate reſolved Reſignation of himſelf to God, without any Exceptions or Reſerves. That God ſhould be ſerv'd with his own, and that entirely without dividing; for we are not in part but wholly his. No Man ſhould repine at God's diſpoſal of him, but all Men ſhould acquieſce in the diſpoſing Will of God. All Men ſhould avoid all ſelfiſh Affections and Partiality, and be more affected with God's Intereſt than their own. No Man ſhould do any thing for ſelfiſh Ends, which is injurious to the Will and Intereſt of God our abſolute Owner. No Man ſhould diſpoſe of his Eſtate or any thing he hath, in any way, but for the Intereſt of his abſolute Lord. All Men ſhould make it the very care and labour of their Lives, to ſerve the Will and Intereſt of this their abſolute Owner. If ſuch a Syſtem of Law and Religion is in this State, ſomething is in it ſelf Law (which none may violate;) and if Man in this ſtate is God's Religioniſt, God muſt neceſſarily (in this ſtate) be related unto Man as his God. But as in the Hobbeian ſtate of Nature, becauſe there is no Law, there can be no Juſtice, (h) the Notions of Right and Wrong, Juſtice and Injuſtice, have there no place; every Man hath Jus ad omnia (right to all things) to do whatſoever he liſteth, to whom he liſteth, to poſſeſs, uſe and enjoy all things he will and can: In like manner, in this imaginary Theological ſtate of Nature on the Creator's part there is no place for Right and Wrong, Juſtice and Injuſtice; his Power over his Creatures is infinite, and it is not poſſible for any thing that he can do (in the exerciſe of arbitrary Will and Power) to be an Injury; every one may do with his own what he liſteth; where there is no right no wrong can be done, although the whole Univerſe of ſinleſs Creatures be made as miſerable, as they are capable to be!

XII. In this imaginary Theological ſtate of Nature the Univerſe of Rationals (having no Rights) are no better (at leaſt in reſpect of God) than the oppoſite to liberi & ingenui, ſuch as the Law calleth Slaves and Villains. Liber eſt qui Jus habet ſuiipſius: Servus qui nullum Jus habet, ſed eſt alterius. This is the notion of a Slave, Servus eſt, qui Jus non habet, (i) ſervile caput Jus non habet, One of ſervile condition hath no (civil) right. He hath not right to conſult of buſineſs in any Aſſembly, nor to bear any Office; nor right of ſuffrage, to give a vote in any Election; nor to give teſtimony as a Witneſs; nor hath he right, to enjoy any Eſtate; nor to make a Will or Teſtament to diſpoſe of it. But whatever he acquireth, accrueth to his Lord, Himſelf, his Wife (or rather his Mate) and Children being his Lord's Goods and Poſſeſſions; and whatſoever he getteth by his labour, is his Lords. He hath not Jus connubii, or Jura ſanguinis, as the Jews ſay of their Commonwealth; (k) There was no ſuch thing as Marriage or Kindred amongſt Slaves, the Slave might have to do with his Mother or Daughter, the Bond-woman given him by his Lord for Iſſue was not a Wife, but only contubernalis; and in this matter there was no difference between Slaves and Beaſts. A Slave ſhould marry a Wife after he is manumis'd, although he hath Children; for to a Slave אין לו יוחס there is no Family, or Kindred, or Pedigree. So amongſt the Romans in the elder times (l) ſuch as were Servi or Capite diminuti (as baniſh'd Men or otherwiſe capitally condemn'd) were excluded from having Gentem or the Title of Gentiles among them (they were not of any National Stock or Family) and in this Senſe Horace hath ſine Gente for one that is a Slave, or at leaſt had Servile Anceſtours.

Qui quamvis perjurus erit, ſine Gente cruentus.

A Slave having no Rights was amongſt the Romans liable to all manner of hard uſage from his Lord (till certain Laws were made, to remedy that hardſhip,) and accordingly we read of Pollio in the time of Auguſtus Cæſar, that he ordinarily caus'd his Slaves to be ſlain, to feed his Lampreys with, in certain Ponds near his Houſe. A Slave is in ſome ſenſe a Man, but not in the condition of a Man; whence a proud Dame in Juvenal ſaith, (m) O Demens! ita ſervus homo eſt? It was ordain'd by the Conſtitution of Nations, (n) that none ſhould kill another, but he that was taken in Battel ſhould remain Bond to his Taker for ever, to do with him and all that ſhould come of him, his Will and Pleaſure, as with his Beaſt or any other Chattel, to give, or ſell, or to kill. Having no right in the Common-wealth, he is decapitated or wanteth an Head (he is not of number or reckoning in it;) * Status capitis eſt libertas: nam ſoli liberi caput habere, ſervi ſine capite eſſe in ſervitute cenſentur. Having no Head or Poll of his own, he is deperſonated (ἀπρόσωπος) being ſwallow'd up in fiction of Law in the perſon of another. If any hurt be done him, he is not ſuppos'd to be hurt, but his Maſter by him; what is given to him, is not ſuppos'd to be given to him, but to his Maſter by him; and what is taken from him, is taken from his Lord by him. In Law conſideration his Lord can do no Injury or Injuſtice to him; nor exerciſe any Juſtice towards him (which conſiſteth in giving to every one that which is his) unleſs he can do Injuſtice, or exerciſe Juſtice to himſelf. For as Ariſtotle ſaith; (o) The Lord is only the Slaves Lord, He is not his; but the Slave is not only Servus Domini, but ſimply Domini (ἄλλου ἄνθρωπος,) he is not only a Servant of his Lord's, but ſimply his Lord's, being wholly another's. (p) Nihil ſuum poteſt habere, the miſerable Slave muſt ſay in a miſerable ſervile kind of Senſe, Nothing is mine, either of my Party-things, or my abſolute Maſter's; there is no ſuch thing as being mine, nothing is exempt from being another's as meer Lord or Proprietor.

Such a State of full and abſolute Slavery is neceſſarily a State of the moſt ſervile Dread and Fear (ſuch ſervile Fear as Arnobius calleth (q) pavibundæ trepidationes) devoid of ingenuous Love and Friendſhip; and becauſe ſuch kind of Fear is complicated with hatred, therefore ſuch a ſtate is in its own Nature an Hoſtile inimical State (whence the Proverb ſaith, quot ſervi, tot hoſtes;) and hence again it appeareth, that the Theological State of Nature is, agreeably to the Leviathan's, a State of War. It is alſo the State of Death; Slaves are as it were in the State of the Dead; for having no Rights they are as to matter of Law and Right (r) nulli, incogniti, mortui, none, unknown, dead-in-law to all intents and purpoſes. Slavery is as Death (s) ſaith the Law, and many have choſen Death rather than Slavery. This therefore could not be the State of Rationals by the original Creation of God. The State of Slaves is alſo the depth of vileneſs, abjectneſs, ignobleneſs; and as their baſe diſhonourable Condition is that of Beaſts below Men: So they are look'd upon as filthy, ſordid, ignominious, informous and deteſtable Var-lets

h) Leviathan ſupr. de Corp. polit. c. 1.

) Zouch. l. Juriſ- ud. par. S. 2.

)Selden. J. N.& l. 5. c. 7.

) Idem tles of n.p. 709. l. 3.

(m) Sat. 6.

(n) Cook Inſtit. 1. part of Villen.

* Turneb. Adverſ. l. 6. c. 20.

(o) Ὁ μὲν δεσπότης τοῦ δούλου δεσπότης μόνον, ἐκείνου δ᾽ οὐκ ἔστιν· ὁ δὲ δοῦλος, οὐ μόνον δεσπότου δοῦλός ἐστιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅλως ἐκείνου. Polit. l. 1. c. 4.

(p) Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 3. c. 7.

(q) Adv. Gent. l. 7. p. 221.

(r) Corvin. de verb. ſignif. lex 68.

(s) Zouch. ſupr.

lets (turpe & ſervile are in common Speech the ſame, and denote that which claſheth with Ingenuity and a Free-man,) whence the way of Manumiſſion amongſt the Romans was a Mode of Luſtration or Expiation, (t) & ſervum à contagio ſervitutis liberum eſſe indicabat, and it ſignify'd the Slave, to be free from the Contagion of his Servitude. Upon account of their filth and ſordidneſs Slaves in many places were debarr'd from touching the Images of the Gods or entring the Temples, as Plutarch ſaith; (u) In Chæronea the Guardian of the Temple taking a Whip in his Hand proclaimeth, No Slave muſt enter into the Temple of Leucothea. Wherefore if the State of Sanctity and Religion was the original Condition of the Univerſe of Rationals, (w) if they were God's Servants in the Senſe of Religon (whoſe Service is perfect Freedom,) if they were nobly Born and deſcended (as doubtleſs all Rational Souls are,) it is impoſſible, that ſlavery ſhould be their original Condition. And why is Chriſtianity deſign'd, to unenſlave a World of Rationals, and to ennoble and dignifie them in reſpect of God, if abſolute ſlavery was their Native and original State? All Mankind ſuppoſe, (x) that ingenuity was before ſlavery; and therefore the manumiſing a Slave and ennobling a Plebeian is called by the Lawyers reſtitutio natalium: Therefore the Univerſe of Rationals were originally in reſpect of God in a State of ingenuity not of ſlavery. (y) τὸ δὲ κρεῖττον φύσει πρῶτον, that which is more excellent was firſt exiſtent. The Chriſtian Theology is a Friend to the Philoſophers generous Sentiments that every virtuous Perſon is in a State of Liberty (ὅτι πᾶς σπουδαῖος ἐλεύθερος,) and that (z) the Souls of Men were produc'd in a State of Liberty. Although it rectifieth their Miſtakes touching the Native State of Man in his fallen Condition, yet it agreeth with them, (a) that (in more Senſes than one) Men are originally the Sons of God. So vile and calamitous a thing as ſlavery is not the Iſſue of Divine Goodneſs, God was not the Author of it any otherwiſe than as a Puniſhment for Sin, (b) Conditio ſervitutis jure intelligitur impoſita peccatori, a Criminal may rightly be puniſhed with ſlavery; and if it oweth its Original to the Sin of Man, it cannot be the Original Creation of God. Nor is it any thing better than a vile Reflection upon the ever bleſſed Creator, to ſuppoſe him the Founder and the Head of an Univerſe of Slaves, nor can ſuch an Univerſe be an holy kind of Univerſe, nor can they be abſolutely his Slaves unleſs by ſuch a Fiction as is in Law, which cannot be in the Theological State of Nature; and if it was there, it would exclude all Juſtice and Injuſtice towards our Neighbour there. But although Mankind by their Law-fictions have deperſonated Slaves, and deprived them of all Rights, ſo that as to exteriour Right (impunity of the fact and defence of Law) their Lords may deal with them as they pleaſe, (c) yet they acknowledge, that as to internal Juſtice their Lords have no ſuch Licenſe, and that they ought to treat them agreeably to Juſtice and Equity, as the Apoſtle enjoineth. Nor is it poſſible, that Rationals in reſpect of God ſhould have no Rights, that they ſhould be related to him as their abſolute meer Lord or Owner, or that he ſhould have right to deal with them otherwiſe than agreeably to the Juſtice of their rightful Liege-Lord; that he ſhould have as great right to inflict upon them Penal kind of Things before Tranſgreſſion as after, or ſhould rightfully puniſh them for Sin beyond their demerit. If theſe things cannot be juſtly done, God cannot have right to do them, and the Rational Creatures have right to have them not done. Wherefore ſuch extravagant Suppoſitions touching the Divine Dominion, and all the Notions upon which that impure Dogma of abſolute reprobation is founded, ought to be exterminated out of the Chriſtian Theology

(t) Boxhorn. Qu. Roman. p. 128.

(u) Ibid. p. 205.

(w) Tiraquell. de Nobil. p. 54.

(x) Ibid. p. 63.

(y) Plotin. En. 5. l. 9. c. 4.

(z) Simplic. in Epict. p. 2.

(a) Epict. Diſſ. l. 1. c. 3.

(b) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 19. c. 15. S. Chryſ. T. 6. p. 643.

(c) Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 3. c. 14. l. 2. c. 5. §. 28.

CHAP. II.

1. An Agreement of the Scripture-Theology and the Pagan in attributing to governing Providence the Names of Lord, Potentate and King. Of the Name Lord. 2. The Ambiguity of the Name Lord. 3. Of the Scriptural Aſcriptions of the Names King and Kingdom, Dominant and reigning Condition unto God. 4. Of the Pagan Theologers Aſcriptions of the Name King and of reigning Condition to their Deities. Conſect. 1. From this Agreement; that there is a great Agreement touching the Divine Attributes. Conſect. 2. That this Name God denoteth the King, Lord or Potentate, which governing Providence is. Proofs of it. 2. More Arguments to Prove it. Conſect. 3. That the God-head is the Kingdom-Eſtate. 1. As being the Magnificent reigning Eſtate. 2. As being the Unabject and Unſubject Eſtate. 3. As being the Regial Celſitude of Condition. 4. As being the height of Honour and Nobilitation of Eſtate. 5. As being the Eſtate of Royalty. 6. As being the height of Glory. 7. As being the height of Proſperity and Beatitude. 8. As being the height of Rule and Government. 9. As being the height of Power and Puiſſance. 10. As being the height of Liberties, Immunities and Priviledges. 11. As being the Eſtate of Sacredneſs. 12. As being the Monarchy. 13. As being the Subject-tranſcendent Eſtate. Conſect. 4. Theſe Theologies agree, that the ſupreme Potentate's Kingdom-Eſtate is God-head of Condition.

I. THE Scripture-Theology and the Pagan agree in attributing to governing Providence the Names of Lord, Potentate and King; both Theologies contemplate governing Providence under thoſe Names and Notions, and both agree (but in different Senſe,) that governing Providence as Lord and King is Dominant and Regnant over all (in Fact and of Right,) which Sovereignty of Domination is his Kingdom in an uſual Senſe of Language.

Some of the Learned have ſuppos'd, (d) that κύριος Lord, the frequent Name of God in ſacred Writ, is not to be found ſo us'd by any of the old Greek Authors. But others have ſhew'd, (e) that in the Writings of the Greekiſh Pagans (both the more ancient

(d) B Pear the C Art. 2 290.

(e) D Cudw. Intel. p. 454 ancient and thoſe of later times) the ſupreme God is often called κύριος, or Lord. For Plato in his Sixth Epiſtle ad Hermiam, &c. ſtileth his firſt Divine Hypoſtaſis τοῦ ἡγεμόνος ϗ αἰτίου πατέρα κύριον, the Father of the Prince and Cauſe of all, the Lord. Menander in J. Martyr calleth the ſupreme God τὸν ὄντα πάντων κύριον, him that is Lord of all. Oſiris in Plutarch is called ἁπάντων κύριος, Lord of all, and in the beginning of his Book de Iſide & Oſiride we read of τοῦ πρώτου ϗ κυρίου ϗ νοητοῦ γνῶσις, the knowledge of the Firſt, the Lord, the Intelligible. And Oromaſdes is called ὁ κύριος, the Lord in Plutarch's Life of Alexander; as νοῦς, alſo κύριος, by Ariſtotle, that is, the ſupreme Ruler of all. From Arrianus's Epictetus we learn, that the very Form of Prayer, which hath been now ſo long in uſe in the Chriſtian Church, Kyrie Eleeſon, Lord have Mercy upon us, was anciently part of the Pagans Litany to the ſupreme God, either amongſt the Greeks, or the Latins, or both. Τὸν θεὸν ἐπικαλούμενος, (ſaith Epictetus) δεόμεθα αὐτοῦ, κύριε ἐλέησον, invoking God we pray to him after this manner, Lord have Mercy upon us. Jamblichus writeth thus of the ſupreme God; δεῖν ὁμολογεῖται παρὰ τοῦ κυρίου ἀγαθὸν ζητεῖν, it is confeſs'd, that good ought to be asked of the Lord. Clemens Alexandrinus alſo tells us, that the ſupreme God was called, not by one only Name, but by divers diverſly, namely, ἤτοι Ἓν, ἢ τ' Ἀγαθὸν, ἢ Νοῦν, ἢ αὐτὸ τὸ ὄν, ἢ πατέρα, ἢ θεὸν, ἢ κύριον, either the One, or the Good, or Mind, or the very Ens, or the Father, or the Lord. To this heap of Teſtimonies (collected to my hand) if I ſhould add any more, they might juſtly be thought Supernumeraries: But that the Pagan Theologers Lord be not confounded with the Chriſtian, it is requiſite, to remark, that the Name κύριος, or Lord, in the Pagan Theology is not appropriate to any determinate Deity; but is ſometimes attributed to the ſupreme Deity of the Acroamatical Theology (as in Plato;) ſometimes to the ſupreme Deity of the Exoterical Theology (as in Menander and Epictetus;) and ſometimes to ſubordinate Deities both Acroamatical and Exoterical. It is attributed to an Exoterical Subordinate Deity in thoſe Inſcriptions that are made (f) κυρίῳ Ἀσκληπίῳ, to Lord Æſculapius. And in the Eaſtern parts the Sun (uſually called the Lord of Heaven) was worſhipp'd under the Names of (g) Adon, Adonis, Adoneus, which ſignifie the Lord (Adon in Hebrew is Lord,) whence Heſychius ſaith, Ἄδωνις δεσπότης ὑπὸ φοινίκων, the Phenician Adonis is the ſame with Lord. The Spartans (as he ſaith) called Adonis κῦρις, and κύρις, that is, κύριος, Lord. The Sun is alſo ſtiled δεσπότης, in that memorable Prayer, which the Egyptian Embalmers made for a dead Man; (h) Ὦ δέσποτα ἥλιε, ϗ θεοὶ πάντες, O Lord the Sun, and all ye Gods. So Bacchus is ſaluted (i) Δέσποτα φιλόδαφνε Βάκχε, Lord Bacchus lover of Laurel. So Apollo is ſaluted (k) Ὦ δέσποτα Ἄπολλον, Lord Apollo. Some Inſcriptions to the Sun run in this form, (l)

Domino Soli V. S. TI Claudius.

Jamblichus attributeth the Name Lord to a Subordinate Acroamatical Deity, who was ſuppos'd to Preſide over the Demons, and by whom the Theurgiſts invok'd them. (m) Καθ' ἕνα τὸν κύριον θεὸν τῶν δαιμόνων ἡ κλῆσις αὐτῶν γίνεται. The Invocation of them is made by one Lord (a God) of the Demons. (n) The Arabians in the times of their old Religion before they undertook a Buſineſs (marrying a Wife or going a Journey) us'd a ſort of Divination by Arrows, upon one of which was inſcrib'd Juſſit me רבי Dominus meus, my Lord hath bidden me: Another had this Inſcription, Probibuit me Dominus meus, my Lord hath forbidden me. To the ſupreme Deity of the Exoterical Theology the Name Lord is attributed in the known Titles of Baal, Bel, Marnas; (o) Mithras alſo is by interpretation δυνάστης, ſive Dominus, Potentate or Lord. And in Plutarch's Life of Ariſtides, Arimneſtus who commanded the Platæans, is ſaid to have dream'd, that Jupiter the Saviour ask'd him, what the Grecians had reſolved to do? And that he anſwer'd, to morrow, Lord, we march our Army to Eleuſis. So Diphilus the Comedian ſtileth the ſupreme Deity of the Exoterical Theology πάντων δεσπότης, Lord of all. (p)

——————ἔστι ϗ ἅδου κρίσις
Ἥνπερ ποιήσει θεὸς ὁ πάντων δεσπότης.
There is a Judgment in the other World,
Which God will make the Lord of all.

To the Deities in common Supreme and Subordinate Xenophon (in Oeconomico) attributeth the Name and Power of Lords. (q) You ſeem to me, rightly to teach, that we ſhould take care, to begin every Action with the Gods, they being no leſs Lords of the Affairs of Peace than of War.

II. In the Name Lord there is a conſiderable ambiguity and variety of Senſe. In the Civil Law it denoteth a ſuperior Proprietor of Things and Perſons (Domini appellatione continetur, qui habet Proprietatem,) as Matth. 20. 8. The Lord of the Harveſt. Matth. 9. 38. The Lord of the Vineyard. Therefore ſuperior Proprietors of Perſons of the regular, amiable and natural kind are Lords: * As Children call their Father, Gen. 31. 35. the Wife calleth the Husband, 1 Pet. 3. 6. the Sheep call the good Shepherd (whoſe own they are, Joh. 10. 12.) their Lord. So an Houſholder (οἰκοδεσπότης) is call'd by thoſe of his Family Lord. Matth. 24. 48. Servants unenſlav'd have their Lord. Gen. 44. 5. Matth. 10. 25. And becauſe Lord and Servant are Relatives, hence the Names are in frequent uſe as terms of Reſpect and Reverence in civil intercourſe, where though there be no ſuch Relation as Maſter and Servant, yet ſomething like it is profeſs'd. Oh my Lord, let thy Servant ſpeak. Gen. 44. 18. So Jacob calleth Eſau Lord, Gen. 33. 8. and Abraham the Angel, Gen. 18. 3. and Rebekah Abraham's Servant, Gen. 24. 18. As ſuperior Proprietors of the regular and natural kind are ſtiled Lords: So the Name uſually ſignifieth thoſe of the irregular and unnatural kind, or any others, that Lord it over Men in the Senſe of inſlaving them. (r) Qui pater patriæ eſt, quomodo Dominus eſt? He that is a Father of his Country, how is he Lord? So Pliny in his Panegyric to Trajan abandoneth the Title, nè ſit Domino locus, let there be no Lord. Amongſt ſuperior Proprietors of Perſons governing Powers ought to be reckon'd (for they have a Propriety in their People, as Parents have in their Children, the Husband in the Wife,) and upon that account they are Lords: But beſides as maſterly and ruling Powers and of unſubject Condition they are called Lords in Law-Senſe; for Dominus eſt qui habet poteſtatem. Tertullian thinketh, that (s) Deus ſubſtantiæ ipſius nomen eſt, id eſt divinitatis: Dominus verò non ſubſtantiæ, ſed poteſtatis. God is a Name of the Subſtance it ſelf, that is, the Divinity: But the Name Lord

(f) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 13.

(g) Ibid. l. 2. c. 4.

(h) Porph. de Abſt. 4. S. 10.

(i) Voſſ. ſupr. l. 2. c. 14

(k) Plutarch de Pyth. orac. p. 403.

(l) Beyer. Addit. ad Seld. de D. Syr. p. 52.

(m) De Myſt. p. 172.

(n) Pocock Spec. p. 327.

(o) Voſſ. ſupr.

(p) Theodoret. θεραπ. Ser. 6. Clem. Str. 5. p. m. 442.

(q) Καλῶς μοι δοκεῖς λέγειν, κελεύων πειρᾶσθαι σὺν τοῖς θεοῖς ἄρχεσθαι παντὸς ἔργου, ὡς τῶν θεῶν κυρίων ὄντων οὐδὲν ἧττον τῶν εἰρηνικῶν ἢ τῶν πολεμικῶν ἔργων.

* This is true notwithſtanding what Cujacius ſaith, l. 10. obſerv. c. 76.

(r) Tertull. Apol. c. 35.

(s) C. Hermog. c. 3.

doth not denote the Divine Subſtance, but his Power over others. Amongſt the Sons of God (t) unicus habet poteſtatem, adoptati miniſterium. None but one hath the Power or is Lord (ſaith S. Auſtin,) to the adopted Sons Miniſtery and Service belongeth. Dominant Powers may want due Authority (of ſuch the Jews complain, Iſa. 26. 13. other Lords have had Dominion over us,) but the licentious Linguiſts are to ſeek for a duly authoritative Dominator. Pſal. 12. 4. Our Lips are our own, who is Lord over us? But ſuch a Lord or authoritative Dominator is the Maſter of a Family, and the General of an Army, Magiſtrates alſo Supreme and Subordinate (that in reſpect of ſome are Dominant, in reſpect of others are Servient) old Eli, Joſeph in the Land of Egypt, as Ruling Powers are intituled Lords. For Domination, Empire, Dominion (which conſtituteth Lords and conſtituted Babylon Lady of Kingdoms, Iſa. 47. 5.) ſignifieth bearing Rule, which is an unſubject, unabject Condition; (u) and therefore the authoritative Power to command over, uſe and order Things and Perſons, is a Legitimate Domination. Agreeably to which Senſe in common Language we are ſtiled Domini, Lords of Things and Perſons, to ſignifie, that we have them in our Power or Diſpoſal. (w) The Divine Nature is (as Tertullian ſaith) Domina juvandi & nocendi, the Miſtreſs of helping and of hurting. (x) Animus qui eſt rationis capax, non eſt ſuarum Paſſionum Dominus, ſed repreſſor. The Rational Mind is not (plenarily) Lord of the Paſſions, but the Repreſſor of them. To the Civil Sovereignty the Law attributeth a publick Lordſhip and Domination conſiſting in thoſe great Preheminences and Powers the Rights of Sovereignty, which are ſummarily compris'd in this one, a ſupreme Right to Command in the Affairs of Government. And becauſe the Civil Sovereigns (having full Empire and free Juriſdiction, and therefore ſtiled ſupremi Domini in terrâ ſuâ) have Right to command and diſpoſe of every Man's Eſtate, ſo far as the publick Exigences require, therefore the Lawyers ſay, Ad Cæſarem poteſtas omnium pertinet, ad ſingulos Proprietas. Cæſar omnia imperio poſſidet, ſinguli Dominio: The Power of all things belongeth to Cæſar, the Propriety to every Subject: Cæſar poſſeſſeth all things by Command, the reſt by Dominion.

In Feudal Law the Lord is contradiſtinguiſhed to his Beneficiaries, the Tenants, Clients, Feudataries, and Vaſſals, that hold of him in Fee, and are bound to him by Homage and Fealty. Theſe are ſtiled his Lieges (bound to Love and Reverence him and to do him faithful Service,) and he is related to them as their Patron and Protector. And becauſe there is in every regular Polity the ſame mutual Obligation between the Party imperant and the Party ſubject (although they do not formally make any Bond of Homage or Fealty,) therefore I have called every regular Society-Lord a Liege-Lord, and his Societiſts his Liege-People. In Nobility-learning, which conſidereth Titles of Honour, (y) none but the greater Dominant or more unſubject Eſtates of a Commonwealth or Kingdom are ſtiled Lords, (ſuch as Artaxerxes's Lords, the Lords of the Philiſtins, Herod's Lords, Lord-Emperor,) Proprietors or ruling Powers of mean Rank, although they be Lords in Law-Senſe, yet are not ſuch in the Senſe of Nobility-Learning. In which Senſe the Jews ſeem to ſay, Jer. 2. 31. we are Lords, or thoſe that have the Dominion (the unſubject Eſtates,) we will come no more unto thee. For this reaſon, becauſe the Name κύριος, is the attribution of a more unſubject Eſtate to the Perſon ſo denominated, Inferiors call their Superior Relatives by the Name κύριε, (as Scholars their Præceptor or Maſter, 2 King. 6. 5, 15.) and in common Converſation it is a Title of reſpectful civility to Acquaintance and to Strangers. As in Plautus's Pænulus, Havo Donni (Ave Domine mi;) ſo among the Muhammedans (z) Sultan is an Appellative in their common Salutations, and in Scripture κύριε, or Sir. Job. 4. 11. ch. 5. 7. ch. 9. 36, 38. ch. 12. 21. ch. 20. 15. From theſe Notices of Human Lordſhip (which are moſt of them competible to the Godhead) it appeareth, that governing Providence may be ſtiled Lord in a conſiderable variety of Senſe: But the Senſe here intended is, that he is of Dominant condition over the whole Univerſe as a ſupreme authoritative Power (Lord or Potentate) actually exerciſing that authoritative Power over all things and perſons, as Tertullian ſaith. (a) Deum exiſtimo ubique notum, ubique præſentem, ubique dominantem. I ſuppoſe God every where known, every where preſent, every where dominant. So Cicero calleth the Gods (b) Dominos omnium rerum ac moderatores. The Lords and Moderators of all things.

III. Any dominant condition over things and perſons may in a large Senſe be called a regnant or reigning Condition: As the dominant condition of Sin (which hath the Maſtery over unregenerate Mankind, Rom. 6. 14. is called the Reign of it, Rom. 6. 12. ſuch is the Reign of Death, Rom. 5. 14. (Death reigned from Adam to Moſes;) or in the Language of the Book of Wiſdom, ch. 1. 14. the Kingdom of Death upon the Earth, is a Phraſe expreſſive of its actual and jural Domination over Mankind. Becauſe Man is of dominant condition in this lower Region, and all things are put under him according to Moſes; therefore Euſebius ſaith of Moſes; (c) he affirmeth, that Man was made, to Rule and Reign over all things on Earth. He is ſaid by the Poet, to be of regnant condition here, and the Image of God.

Nunc hominem facimus ait, qui regnet in orbe
Et ſit Imago Dei.

In a more reſtrict and proper Senſe the dominant condition of ſupreme Powers over Things and Perſons is a regnant or reigning condition. In Diſcourſes of ſuch Powers ἄρχειν, ἀνάσσειν, βασιλεύειν, κρατεῖν, κυριεύειν, to bear rule, to be regnant, imperant, dominant, are promiſcuouſly us'd both in Scripture and in profane Authors. (d) So Venice is intituled Domina & Regina Maris Adriatici, The Lady (Sovereign Lady) and Queen of the Adriatic Sea. Caſſandra foretold to the Roman People (e)

Γῆς ϗ θαλάσσης σκῆπτρα ϗ μοναρχίαν.
The Sceptre and Monarchy of the Earth and Sea.

Of the Emperor Theodoſius Themiſtius ſaith, (f) What would you ſay of him, that reigneth over almoſt all the Earth and Sea. The Earth and Sea δεδούλωται, is of ſervient and ſubject condition to the Roman Emperor, ſaith Procopius. Which is to ſay, that he is Γῆς ϗ θαλάσσης κύριος ϗ Δεσπότης.

Lord and Dominator of the Earth and Sea.

(t) S. Aug. Tract. 7. in Joann.

1 Sam. 1. 15. Gen. 42. 30. and 41. 43.

(u) Gen. 27. 40. Judg. 5. 13. Rom. 6. 14.

(w) Tertull. ad nation. l. 2.

(x) S. Ambroſ. de Jacob. l. 1. c. 1.

(y) Selden Titles p. 36. ed. 3. Ezra. 8. 25. 1 Sam. 5. 8. Mark 6. 21. Act. 25. 26.

(z) Selden Titles p. 71. ed. 3.

(a) Ad nation. l. 2.

(b) De Leg. 2.

(c) Ἀρχικὸν φησιν αὐτὸν ϗ βασιλικὸν γενέσθαι τῶν ἐπὶ γῆς πάντων. Pr. ev. l. 11. c. 27.

(c) Selden Mare clauſ. l. 1. c. 10. 11, 12, & 16. p. 67.

(c) Ibid. c. 14. p. 56, 57.

(f) Τί φαίης ἂν περὶ τοῦ πάσης σχεδὸν βασιλεύοντος γῆς ϗ θαλάττης.

In the ſtile of Sovereign Princes the Attributes of Lord and King are of the ſame importance; as when our King Edgar ſtileth himſelf; (g) I Edgar King of the Engliſh and of all the Kings of the Iſlands and of the Ocean about Britain, and of all the Nations included therein Emperor and Lord. The Grand Signior becauſe he is (h) Sultan Olem Lord of the World is King of the World. So Sultan Selim writing in barbarous Greek ſtileth himſelf, Αὐθέντης ϗ βασιλεὺς ὅλονο ϗ πᾶσα τȣ̃ οἰκεμένȣ ἢ τὸ τῶν λιόν. Lord and King of what is comprehended in our ſight under the Sun. In the Language of the Fathers (i) μία βασιλεία, and μία κυριότης, one Kingdom and one Domination are ſynonymous Expreſſions. (k) So amongſt the Hebrew Doctors רבונו של עולם Lord of the World and מלך העולם King of the World are ſynonymous Expreſſions; for to be King of the World is nothing elſe, but to be Sovereign Lord of it. So in the ſtile of the Scriptures his Kingdom and his Dominion (or Domination) are ſynonymous Expreſſions. His Kingdom is an everlaſting Kingdom, and his Dominion is from Generation to Generation. His Kingdom is that which ſhall not be deſtroy'd, and his Dominion ſhall be even to the end. They ſhall ſpeak of the glory of thy Kingdom and talk of thy Power. To make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts and the glorious Majeſty of his Kingdom. Thy Kingdom is an everlaſting Kingdom, and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations. The Kingdom is the Lords, and he is מֹשֵׁל Dominator among the Nations. The Lord hath prepared his Throne in the Heavens, and his Kingdom ruleth (or is dominant) over all. In this Notion of the word Kingdom (as it ſignifieth Sovereignty of Dominion) the devotional Doxologies in holy Scripture aſcribe the Kingdom to God. 1 Chron. 29. 11. Thine O Lord, is the greatneſs, and the power, and the glory and the victory, and the majeſty.—— thine is the Kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Matth. 6. 13. Thine is the Kingdom, and the power and the glory. Which devotional Doxologies of holy Scripture the courtly Language us'd to mundane Princes reſembleth. For the Embaſſadors of Michael Curopalata to Charles the Great for the confirmation of a League came to him at Aix, (l) & more ſuo, id eſt Græcâ Linguâ laudes ei dixerunt, Imperatorem & Baſileum appellantes. After their manner, that is, in the Greek Tongue they gave him laudatory Aſcriptions, calling him (which is the greateſt ennoblement and perfection of Condition) Emperor and King. And as a Greek Emperor Emanuel Commenus blazoneth his own greatneſs (m) ſtiling himſelf Regnator potens, excelſus & ſemper Auguſtus, (powerful Reigner, high and always Auguſt:) So God's Religioniſts uſually magnifie him by the laudatory Aſcriptions of the Name King (ſometimes ſtiling him the King, ſometimes the Lord the King, ſometimes the King of Glory, ſometimes the great King, ſometimes the King Eternal) and the ſupreme Condition of reigning, which is the uſual ſtile of the Pſalmiſts Devotions. The Lord moſt high is terrible, he is a great King over all the Earth. God is the King of all the Earth (which is of the ſame ſignification with that other Attribute the Lord of the whole Earth, or the Dominator over it,) God reigneth over the Heathen. He ruleth by his Power for ever, his Eyes behold the Nations. The Lord ſitteth upon the Flood, yea the Lord ſitteth King for ever. The Lord is King for ever and ever. The Lord ſhall reign for ever. The Lord reigneth, let the Earth rejoice. The Lord reigneth, let the People tremble. The Lord is a great God, and a great King above all Gods. The Lord reigneth, he is clothed with Majeſty. Let Men ſay among the Nations, the Lord reigneth. Say among the Heathen, the Lord reigneth. Pſal. 47. 2, 7, 8. and 97. 5. and 66. 7. and 29. 10. and 10. 16. and 146. 10. and 97. 1. and 99. 1. and 95. 3. and 93. 1. 1 Chron. 16. 31. Pſal. 96. 10. God ſitteth upon the Throne of his Holineſs (which denoteth his ſupreme Condition of reigning) Pſal. 47. 8. Thy Throne is eſtabliſh'd of old. Pſal. 93. 2. Moſes in like manner celebrateth the Divine Majeſty. Exod. 15. 18. The Lord ſhall reign for ever and ever. And Jehoſaphat 2 Chron. 20. 6. O Lord God of our Fathers, art not thou God in Heaven, and ruleſt thou not over all the Kingdoms of the Heathen? This Branch of the Scripture-Theology (which every where repreſenteth governing Providence over all as dominant and regnant over all) is well expreſs'd by Euſebius. (n) Such is the Theology of the Hebrews; it teacheth, that all things were made by God's demiurgic word, and that then the Univerſe was not forſaken by its Founder, as an Orphan left by its Father: But is perpetually adminiſtred by the Providence of God, ſo that he is not only the Maker of the Univerſe, but the Conſervator, and Prefect, and King and Prince, for ever preſiding over the Sun and Moon and Stars, the whole Heaven and the World, by a vaſt Eye and a Divine Power inſpecting all and being preſent with all things Celeſtial and Terreſtrial, and ordering and adminiſtring all things in the World. The ſaying of God in the Prophet, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footſtool, is well expounded by the ſame Author. (o) He that ſaith, Heaven is his Throne, diſcriminateth God the King of all as tranſcendent to the Throne, and ſupreme above the Univerſe, not exempting the Earth from his Providence.

IV. The like Aſcriptions of the honourary Name King, of a reigning Condition and of Kingdom the Pagan Theologers make to their Deities Acroamatical and Exoterical, Supreme or Subordinate. For the Platoniſts (as we have ſeen) ſtile their Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes three Kings; (p) their Ontology ſuppoſeth τὴν νοερὰν βασιλείαν ἐν τοῖς ȣ̓̃σι, an intellectual Kingdom amongſt Beings, and they attribute to their firſt Archical Hypoſtaſis βασιλείαν τῶν ὄντων, the Kingdom of all Beings. (q) Βασιλέα μὲν ὁ Πλάτων τὸν θεὸν ἀποκαλεῖ, Plato calleth God Baſileus. The Name ſeemeth not agreeable to Plato's ſupreme God; for governing Peovidence is not his work; he is ſaid, to be (r) ἀργὸς ἔργων ξυμπάντων, altogether inoperative: But the Platoniſts diſtinguiſh a twofold Providence, the one General, the other Particular: And the former is done (s) κελεύσει ἀπράγμονι, ἐπιϛασίᾳ βασιλικῇ, by an inoperative command a regial prefectſhip. Apuleius thus mitigateth the harſhneſs of the Platonic Language, Apologizing for his Baſileus. (t) Maximus underſtandeth, who it is, that is not firſt called by me, but by Plato, Baſileus, the cauſe, reaſon, and firſt origin of the whole nature of things, the Supreme Genitor of the Soul, the eternal Conſervator of Animals, the aſſiduous Opificer of his World, but an Opificer without labouring (or working) a Conſervator without care, a Genitor without propagation, neither comprehended in Place nor Time, nor any Word (or Speech) and therefore cogitable but by few, ſpeakable by none. He is ſuppos'd, to be abſolutely the King of all; therefore the Platoniſts ſtile him King in a Senſe of Eminence, ſometimes (u) the great King, and ſometimes the King of Kings. (w) The Supernal King (a Myſtic-Metaphyſical King of the like Kings) doth not bear rule over the things of others, but hath the moſt juſt and natural Empire, and the true Kingdom, as being King of what is Truth (the Platonic Ideas) and being naturally Lord of the All of his own Off-ſpring, and the Syſtem of Gods, King of the King, and of Kings. The Philoſophers prove the Exiſtence of one Supreme Deity, by ſuch reaſons as imply, that he is a King or Emperour; for ſo Zeno Eleates argueth; (x) τοῦτο θεὸς καὶ θεοῦ δύναμις κρατεῖν ἀλλὰ μὴ κρατεῖσθαι; This is God and the power of God, to rule and tranſcend, not to be outvy'd and rul'd. Plato ſuppoſeth it a dictate of common Reaſon, (y) τὸ μὲν θεῖον ἄρχειν τε καὶ ἡγεμονεύειν πεφυκέναι, that which is Divine, is to be imperant and bear rule. And Socrates argu'd, (z) That Souls ought to bear rule and have domination over Bodies, becauſe of their ſimilitude to the Gods. For the Subordinate Deities are of a Regial Dignity, as well as the Supreme, (a) and therefore are intituled βασιλικοὶ θεοί, Kingly Gods; and ſome of them were pictur'd with a Crown an Enſign of Empire. (b) In the elder times of the flouriſhing Roman Empire the Crown radiant, or Radiatum Caput was a Character of being accounted as a God; (c) and thence it is, that in diverſe of the Heads of Julius and Auguſtus's Coins (after their Conſecration into Deities) we find Radiant Crowns; and in the following times alſo it occurreth in the Coins of divers others, and that while ſome of them liv'd too, becauſe the Name or Dignity of a God was attributed to them. In the Ancient Times of Paganiſm they worſhipp'd Spears as Symbols of the Gods, and in after-times they added Spears to their Images, (d) thoſe Spears being inſtead of Scepters, Symbols of their Regal Power, and denoting the Gods to be σκηπτοῦχοι βασιλῆες, Sceptigerous Kings.

(g) Ego Edgarus Anglorum Baſileus omniumque Regum inſularum Oceanique Britanniam circumjacentis, cunctarumque nationum quæ intra eam includuntur Imperator & Dominus. Ibid. p. 178.

(h) Idem Titles p. 71.

(i) S. Athanaſ. de com. Eſſen. p. 375. Com. Epiphan. Hær. 62. S. 3.

(k) Hotting. Diſſ. p. 284.

Dan. 4. 3. and 6. 26. Pſal. 145. 11, 12, 13. and 22. 28. and 103 19.

(l) Selden Titles p. 14.

(m) Ibid. . 105. Pſal. 20. . and 99. . and 98. . and 24. . and 48. . Mal. 1. 14. Matth. 5. 35. Tim. 1. 17.

(n) Τοιαύτη μὲν ἡ καθ' Ἑβραίȣς θεολογία λόγῳ θεȣ̃ δημιȣργικῷ τὰ πάντα συνεϛάναι παιδεύȣσα. Ἔπειτα δὲ, οὐχ ὧδε ἔρημον ὡς ὀρφανὸν ὑπὸ πατρὸς καταλειφθέντα, τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον ὑπὸ τȣ̃ συϛησαμένȣ διδάσκει, ἀλλ' εἰς τὸ ἀεὶ, ὑπὸ τῆς τȣ̃ θεȣ̃ προνοίας αὐτὸν διοικεῖσθαι, ὡς μὴ μόνον δημιȣργὸν εἶναι τῶν ὅλων ϗ ποιητὴν τὸν θεὸν, ἀλλὰ ϗ σωτῆρα, ϗ διοικητὴν, ϗ βασιλέα, ϗ ἡγεμόνα, ἡλίῳ αὐτῷ, ϗ σελήνῃ, ϗ ἄϛροις, ϗ τῷ σύμπαντι ȣ̓ρανῷ τε ϗ κόσμῳ δι' αἰῶνος ἐπιϛατȣ̃ντα, μεγάλῳ τε ὀφθαλμῷ, ϗ ἐνθέῳ δυνάμει πάντ' ἐφορῶντα, ϗ τοῖς πᾶσιν ȣ̓ρανίοις τε ϗ ἐπιγείοις ἐπιπαρόντα καὶ τὰ πάντα ἐν κόσμῳ διατάττοντά τε καὶ διοικȣ̃ντα. Pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 11.

(o) Ὁ μὲν τὸν ȣ̓ρανὸν εἰπὼν θρόνον, ἐπέκεινα τȣ̃ θρόνȣ ϗ ἀνωτάτω τῶν ὅλων τὸν παμβασιλέα θεὸν ἀφωρίσατο, ȣ̓δὲ τὴν γῆν τῆς προνοίας αὐτȣ̃ χωρίσας.

(p) Procl. Plat. Th. l. 2. c. 4. l. 3. c. 7.

(q) Ibid. l. 2. p. 103.

(r) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 18.

(s) Plotin. en. 4. l. 3. 8. c. 2.

But the Sceptre amongſt the Ancients was uſually (e) a Symbol of Jove himſelf (the Supreme Deity of the Exoterical Theology) the greateſt King. And (as Servius upon Virgil reporteth) in ſwearing to Solemn Leagues the Cuſtom was, to have the Statues of Jupiter brought to the place, where the Oath was taken, (that ſo it might be taken in his preſence;) but this being found troubleſome, the Pater Patratus or King of Heralds held a Sceptre in his Hand, which was ſubſtituted in the ſtead and ſupply'd the place of the Statue of Jupiter. He is commonly ſaluted Ζεῦ βασιλεῦ, ὦ Ζεῦ βασιλεῦ, in Ariſtophanes, and Ζεῦ ἄνα, Jupiter-King in Homer, who alſo calleth him ὕπατον κρειόντων, the Supreme of Rulers; and in Plautus we read, (f) per ſupremi regis regnum juro, I ſwear by the Kingdom of the Supreme King. All the Earth agreeth, ſaith the Philoſopher, (g) ὅτι θεὸς εἷς πάντων βασιλεὺς καὶ πατήρ, that there is one God the King and Father of all, and conſequently, βασιλεύεσθαι τὸ ὅλον, that the Univerſe hath a King or Monarch over it. He is therefore the King of Gods and Men, becauſe their Father, as Ariſtotle ſuppoſeth, (h) The Rule of a Father over his Children is regial; therefore Homer hath well intituled the King of all theſe things, the Father of Gods and Men. The Egyptians, ſaith Plutarch, (i) expreſs or denote τὸν βασιλέα καὶ κύριον Ὄσιριν, the King and Lord Oſiris (governing Providence) by a Scepter with an Eye in it, by the former ſignifying his Power, and by the latter his Providence. Oſiris is called by Apuleius Maximorum Regnator, the Reigner over the greateſt (which ſpeaketh his Supreme Condition of Reigning;) and as the Scriptures call Heaven the Throne of Governing Providence, ſo Julian affirmeth, that the common Senſe of Mankind (k) ſeateth the King of the Univerſe in that more honourable part of the Univerſe, and ſuppoſeth him from thence to inſpect the things that are here. So Archilochus in Clemens ſaith; (l) O Jupiter, thine is the Empire of Heaven, but in Heaven thou beholdeſt the Works that are improbous and juſt. Agreeably to the European the Oriental Pagans gave to their Deities (Supreme and Subordinate) the Name of King, as appeareth from Moloch, Milcom, Malcham, Adramelech, Anamelech, Malachbelus (before-mention'd;) the Phenicians intituled Hercules (m) Melicarthus, that is, מלך קרתא the King of the City (as one of the Arabian's Gods is called (n) Dyſares, to denote him Dominus Sharæ;) the Amathuſii in Cyprus call'd him Malika, that is, King; and the Greeks commonly prefac'd their Speeches (by way of good luck) with Ἡρακλῆς Ἄναξ, Hercules King. Such Attributions of the name King to governing Providence being uſual in both Theologies (the Scriptural and the Pagan,) we will infer from this their agreement four Conſectaries.

CONSECT. I.

The acknowledgment of a Supreme Potentate in both Theologies inferreth a great Agreement between them touching the Divine Attributes, ſome of which are coincident with that Name. As the moſt High, for the moſt High in Senſe of Scripture ſignifieth the Supreme Potentate; Pſal. 83. 18. Thou, whoſe Name alone is Jehovah, art the moſt High over all the Earth. This Divine Attribute is denoted by the name Shamajim (Heaven) which is not only a Rabbinical, but an uſual Name of God in Scripture. After that thou ſhalt have known, that the Heavens do rule. Dan. 4. 26. A Man can receive nothing, except it be given him from Heaven. Joh. 3. 27. The Baptiſm of John, whence was it? from Heaven, or of Men? Matth. 21. 25. Father, I have ſinned againſt Heaven and in thy ſight. Luk. 15. 21. So the Jews ſpeak; Profanatur nomen cœli, the name of Heaven is profan'd; adjutorio cœli, by the Aid of Heaven; mors per manum cœli, Death by the Hand of Heaven. Touching this Name of God A. Ezra noteth, (o) That the ſignification of Shamajim in Arabick (which is for the moſt part agreeable to the Hebrew) is Highneſs and Eminence. Sama in that Language ſignifieth to be high and eminent, and every thing that is Super-eminent, is call'd Samao; therefore God's being call'd Shamajim denoteth his Eminence and Super-eminence, that he is the moſt High, agreeably to Prov. 25. 3. the Heaven for height. In the Pagan Theology this Attribute ſometimes occurreth; for Philo Byblius from Sanchoniathon mentioneth a certain God, whoſe Name is Ἐλιοῦν or ὕψιστος, the moſt High. Rimmon (from רום) ſignifieth the moſt High. (p) Servius (ſpeaking the Senſe of the Popular Pagans) ſaith, Jupiter ſummus eſt, Jupiter is the moſt High; and Æſchylus (as he is cited by (q) J. Mart. and Clemens) ſaith, —— δυνατὴ γὰρ δόξα ὑψίστου θεοῦ, potent is the Glory of the moſt high God. As both Theologies acknowledge a moſt High; ſo they agree in ſtiling Governing Providence παντοκράτωρ (an Attribute which is ſaid to occur in the Bible no leſs than ſeventy times) which our Tranſlation rendreth Almighty; but Ruffinus ſaith, that God is ſo intituled, (r) quòd omnium teneat potentatum, becauſe he hath the Potentacy of all; and Cyril of Hieruſalem expoundeth it to the ſame Senſe. (s) Pantocrator is he that hath the Empire of all, Authority over all. The Name properly ſignifieth Omni-imperial or All-Emperour; κύριος παντοκράτωρ, is All-imperial Lord, 2 Cor. 6. 18. Agreeably to which Senſe he is ſtiled by Eccleſiaſtic Writers (t) παμβασιλεύς, πανηγεμών, King, Prince or Ruler of all. And the Jews in their Benedictions often repeat (u) רב העולם and מר דעלמא and מלך העולם and אלהי עולם and רבון עולמים Lord, King, God of the World and of the Worlds, accounting this ſort of Attributes honourary to God at the greateſt rate. So Horus Apollo ſaith of the Egyptians, that they acknowledg'd a παντοκράτωρ, one that is imperial over all the World, whom they repreſented by a Serpent, in the midſt whereof they painted a great Houſe, by which they repreſented the World, ὁ γὰρ βασίλειος οἶκος αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, for his Kingly Houſe is the World. Beſides theſe Attributes of moſt High and All-imperial the Pagan Theologers (agreeably to the Chriſtian) aſcribe to the Supreme Potentate the Attribute of Ingenit, Incorruptible, Immortal, and of exiſtence from Eternity to Eternity, and therefore ſtile him —— (w) O Hominum Divumque æterna poteſtas, the Eternal Potentate of Gods and Men.

(t) Maximus intelligit, quiſnam ſit ille, non à me primo, ſed à Platone nuncupatus Βασιλεύς, totius rerum naturæ cauſa & ratio & origo initialis, ſummus animi genitor, æternus animantium ſoſpitator, aſſiduus mundi ſui opifex, ſed enim ſine opera opifex, ſine cura ſoſpitator, ſine propagatione Genitor; neque loco, neque tempore, nec ulla voce comprehenſus, eòque paucis cogitabilis, nemini effabilis. Apol. p. 515. ed. Beroald.

(u) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 3.

(w) Ὁ δὲ ἐκεῖ βασιλεὺς, οὐκ ἀλλοτρίων ἄρχων, ἀλλ' ἔχων τὴν δικαιοτάτην καὶ φύσει ἀρχὴν καὶ τὴν ἀληθῆ βασιλείαν, ἅτε τῆς ἀληθείας βασιλεὺς, καὶ ὢν κατὰ φύσιν κύριος τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἀθρόου γεννήματος καὶ θείου συντάγματος, βασιλεὺς βασιλέως καὶ βασιλέων. Plotin. ibid.

(x) Ariſtot. l. de Xen. Zen. & G. c. 3.

(y) Ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 12. c. 27.

(z) Procl. ſupr. l. 6. p. 374.

(a) Ibid. l. 5. c. 7. Dion. Voſſ. in Maim. de Idol. c. 7. s. 8.

(b) Selden Titles. p. 120.

(c) Ibid. p. 127.

(d) Ibid. p. 137.

(e) Selden ibid. Petav. T. 4. l. 12. c. 6. S. 2.

(f) Amph. Act. 2. Scen. 2.

(g) M. Tyr. diss. 1.

(h) Ἡ δὲ τῶν τέκνων ἀρχὴ βασιλική· διὸ καλῶς Ὅμηρος τὸν Δία προσηγόρευσεν, εἰπὼν— πατὴρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε, τὸν βασιλέα τούτων ἁπάντων. Politic. l. 1. c. 8.

(i) De Iſ. & Oſir. p. 354.

(k) Ὡς εἰς τιμιώτερον τοῦ παντὸς ἐκεῖνο τὸν βασιλέα ὑψοῦσι τῶν ὅλων, ἐφορᾶν ἐκεῖθεν ὑπολαμβάνει τὰ τῇδε. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 2. p. 52.

(l) Ὦ Ζεῦ, σὸν μὲν οὐρανοῦ κράτος· σὺ δ' ἔργα ἐπ' ἀνθρώπων ὁρᾷς λεωργὰ καὶ θεμιστά, Strom. l. 5. p. m. 444.

(m) ler. Miſc. l. 3. c. 17.

(n) Pocock. Spec. p. 105.

—— (x) Ὡς ἀγέννητον ἐὸν καὶ ἀνώλεθρον ἐστίν.

Being both ingenerate and unperiſhable.

So Thales being ask'd, what is the Divinity? made anſwer; (y) That which hath neither beginning, nor end. The Attributes (z) Inviſible, (a) Immenſe, (b) Incorporeal, (c) Unchangeable, as alſo (d) of Simplicity (e) and of Unlikeneſs to all things viſible (and therefore not to be repreſented by Images) are uſual amongſt the Pagan Theologers; nor is it unuſual with them, to ſtile the Supreme Deity (f) τελειότατον καὶ αὐταρκέστατον, moſt perfect and ſelf-ſufficient, (g) Beatus, nihil indigens, Bleſſed, wanting nothing, (Deo nihil præſtantius, ſaith Cicero) the Supreme Excellence, (h) κακοῦ παντὸς ἀνεπίδεκτον, uncapable of any Evil, (i) Ἀγαθῶν τοσούτων εὑρετὴν καὶ κτίστην, The Inventor and Creator of ſo many Goods, τὸ πολὺ πέλαγος τοῦ καλοῦ, the vaſt Ocean of Pulchritude, (as Plato in his Sympoſium ſeemeth to call his Supreme Deity;) and the Popular Pagans acknowledge the Attribute of Sanctity in their uſual Compellation Sancte Jupiter! Beſides theſe Divine Attributes which are honourary to a Deity, but are on this ſide Government, both Theologies aſcribe to the Supreme Potentate, which they acknowledge, another ſort of Divine Attributes, that are requiſite, to qualifie him for the Government of the Univerſe; wherefore Goodneſs muſt be complicated with Power and Greatneſs in the Supreme Potentate, as the Pagan Theiſts acknowledge, intituling Jupiter optimus maximus. (k) Governing Providence ought to be both maſterly and good; for both are ſalutary; the one as chaſtiſing, the other as doing good in a way of Beneficence. Juſtice is eſſential to the Supreme Potentate. (l) For Jupiter may not ſo much as will what is the worſer, (nor is it conſiſtent with the rectitude of his Nature;) and in all his proceedings (m) God is in no wiſe unjuſt, but moſt juſt; nor is any thing more like him than ſuch an one of us that is moſt juſt. Perfection of Underſtanding and of executive Power (to inſpect, direct, protect, reward and puniſh) is alſo requiſite in the great governing Authority, acding to that of Epicharmus; (n) you ought to know, that nothing eſcapeth the Eye of God; He is the Inſpector of us, God can do all things.

Consect. 2.

I. Both Theologies agree, that this Name God denoteth the King, Lord or Potentate, which Governing Providence is. Tertullian (before cited) hath reſtrain'd the word Deus, to ſignifie nothing more than the Divine Conſtitutive Eſſence or Subſtance; but it is certain, the Name is of greater Latitude and Extent, and that the Divine Potentacy which Governing Providence is, is the Deity, Divinity or Godhead, upon the account whereof Governing Providence is denominated God. (o) Deus enim Naturæ nomen eſt & Poteſtatis, The Name God denoteth both the Nature and the Potentacy. (p) Deus eſt nomen ſummæ poteſtatis, God is the Name of the Supreme Potentacy, ſaith Lactantius; whoſe Notion of the Unity of the Godhead is one Divine Potentacy; for thus he diſputeth for it, (q) licet philoſophi diverſis nominibus ſint abuſi, ad unam tamen poteſtatem quæ mundum regeret, concurrerunt.—— omnem divinam poteſtatem neceſſe eſt in uno eſſe, cujus nutu & imperio regantur omnia. Although the Philoſophers abus'd divers Names (in their Polytheiſm) yet with concurrence to one Power or Potentacy Governour of the World. All Divine Potentacy muſt neceſſarily be in one, by whoſe beck and command all may be govern'd. (r) Unus omnium Dominus eſt Deus, neque enim illa ſublimitas poteſt habere conſortem, cum ſola omnem teneat poteſtatem. God is one Lord of all; for that Sublimity admitteth of no Conſort, ſeeing it alone poſſeſſeth all Potentacy. So the Apoſtle noticeth God as the bleſſed and only Potentate; (s) and we read in the Book of Tobit τοῦ Βάαλ τῇ δυνάμει, to Baal the Power, that is, the God. So one of the Rabbins Names of God is הגבורה the Power, under which Name and Notion the Godhead is ſet forth Matth. 26. 64. Mark 14. 62. which Divine Name ἡ δύναμις, muſt be underſtood agreeably to Principalities and Powers (δυνάμεις) and agreeably to δυνάςης (a Potentate) to ſignifie the Authoritative as well as the Executive ſort of Power; in which Senſe the French Kings ſpeak of (t) their pleiner puiſſance and puiſſance abſolute. In S. Paul's ſtile, Rom. 1. 20 his Eternal Power (Potentacy) and Godhead are Terms ſynonymous; and ſo in the Book Coſri (u) אלהותו ומלכותו his Godhead and his Kingdom are Terms ſynonymous; (w) for the Rabbins by his אלהות (Godhead) imperium maximè denotant, chiefly denote his Dominion and Imperial Potentacy. In the Holy Scriptures the Greek name Θεὸς anſwereth to the Hebrew names El, Eloah, Elohim; which Hebrew names ſignifie a Potentate; therefore God's Divine Potentacy is his Divinity and Godhead; which alſo appeareth from the Godſhip of created Potentates; for they are uſually intituled the Gods: as the Angels (Supernal Potentates) and the Judges in the Land of Iſrael are called Elohim; Pſal. 8. 6. and 82. 1, 6. Joh. 10. 34, 35. Exod. 21. 6. and 22. 8, 9. v. 28. Thou ſhalt not revile the Gods, nor curſe the Ruler of thy People: Exod. 15. 11. Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the (Elim) Gods? that is, the Potentates; for the Greek Interpreters make no nice diſtinction between Elim and Elohim, but ſometimes render (x) Elim agreeably to Elohim, ἄρχοντες, ἡγούμενοι, Ruling Powers or Potentates. And becauſe theſe Sublimities are Underlings to the Divine Tranſcendence; therefore God is ſtiled, A God of Gods, a Lord of Lords, a great King above all Gods, Deut. 10. 17. Joſh. 22. 22. Pſal. 95. 3. and 97. 7, 9. 2 Chron. 2. 5. As Potentates are ſtiled Gods, ſo to be the God of any thing, ſometimes ſignifieth, to have the Potentacy, Dominion and Authority over it; as in thoſe Divine Attributes, The God of Hoſts; The God of Heaven and Earth; The God of the Spirits of all Fleſh. A Deity therefore is ſuch a Superiority, as Lords, Kings, Potentates are (thoſe whom Moſes calleth Gods, Exod. 15. 11. the Pſalmiſt calleth the Sons of the Mighty or Potentates, Pſal. 89. 6.) and therefore may not unfitly be ſtiled (y) מלך אללה Rex Deus, as the Samaritan Verſion rendreth the Tetragrammaton. Agreeably whereunto (z) orientalibus ferè omnibus uſu receptum eſt, Deo imponere nomen ab abſoluto in omnes creaturas dominio: In almoſt all the Oriental Nations the Names which anſwer to our Name God, are ſuch as ſignifie Dominion (abſolute Dominion) over all Creatures. As in the Æthiopick Tongue there are two principal Names of God (a) Egſiabher and Emlac, the former denoteth Dominion over all Creatures, the latter Power and Authority. Emlac alſo ſignifieth both the Divine Worſhip, and the Reverence due to Kings: And the Divinity or Godhead is called מלכות (Malcuth) which implieth, that it conſiſteth in Imperial Potentacy agreeably to the Rabbins Notion of Elohuth. Of the Name Elohim the Rabbins ſay, (b) it ſignifieth, a Dominator over any thing and a Judge. So the Latin word Deus ſignifieth a Divine Dominator or Potentate in that of the Poet touching Cæſar Auguſtus (c).

(o) Pocock. Not. Miſc. p. 35.

(p) In 11. Æn.

(q) J. Mart. de Mon. p. 104. Clem. ſtr. l. 5. p. m. 445.

(r) Petav. T. 1. l. 5. c. 5. S. 1, 2.

(s) Παντοκράτωρ ἐστὶν ὁ πάντων κρατῶν, ὁ πάντων ἐξουσιάζων.

(t) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 15.

(u) L. Cappel. in 1 Tim. 3. 17.

(w) Virgil. Æn. 10

(x) Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 439.

(y) Ibid. p. 434.

(z) Ib. p. 427, 428.

(a) Ib. p. 426.

(b) Ib. p. 438.

(c) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 3.

(d) Simplic. in Epict. p. 9.

(e) Clem. ſupr. p. 445.

(f) M. Tyr. diſſ. 22.

(g) Apulei. de dogm. Plat.

(h) Laert. in Zenon.

( ) Clem. ſupr. p. 445.

(k) Δεῖ τὴν διοικοῦσαν πρόνοιαν κυρίαν τε εἶναι καὶ ἀγαθήν· ἀμφοῖν γὰρ ἡ δύναμις οἰκονομεῖ σωτηρίαν· ἡ μὲν κολάσει σωφρονίζουσα ὡς κυρία· ἡ δὲ, δι' εὐποιΐας χρηστευομένη ὡς εὐεργέτις. Clem. Str. l. 1. p. m. 259.

(l) Οὐ γὰρ θέμις Διῒ βούλεσθαι ἄλλο τι ἢ τὸ κάλλιστον. M. Tyr. diſſ. 22.

(m) Θεὸς οὐδαμῇ οὐδαμῶς ἄδικος, ἀλλ' ὡς οἷόν τε δικαιότατος· καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ ὁμοιότερον οὐδὲν, ἢ ὃς ἂν ἡμῶν αὖ γένηται ὅτι δικαιότατος. Plato ap. Jambl. προτρεπτ. p. 90.

(n) Οὐδὲν ἐκφεύγει τὸ θεῖον, τοῦτο γιγνώσκειν σε δεῖ· Αὐτὸς ἔσθ' ἁμῶν ἐπόπτης· ἀδυνατεῖ δ' οὐδὲν θεός. Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 435.

(o) S. Ambr. in cap. 3. Ep. ad Galat.

(p) Lactan. l. 1. c. 3.

(o) De Ira Dei c. 11.

(r) S. Cypr. de Idol. van.

(s) Druſ. Not. in Rom. 11. 4.

> An Deus immenſi venias maris, ac tua Nautæ
> Numina ſola colant; tibi ſerviat ultima Thyle,
> Teque ſibi generum Tethys emat omnibus undis.

In the ſame Notion the word Θεὸς muſt neceſſarily be underſtood, when God is intituled ὁ ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεὸς, God over all, or (as the Fathers uſually ſtile him) ὁ τῶν ὅλων Θεὸς, God of the Univerſe of things. Accordingly, a late Writer of our own faith, (d) This Name and Title is nomen poteſtatis, a Name of Potentacy; and Reuchlin ſaith, (e) negare non poſſumus, quin imperatoriam majeſtatem Dominus ſignificet, & Rex & Deus, ſi Damaſceno Joanni obſequimur: If John Damaſcen be of Authority with us, we muſt acknowledge, that this Name, Lord, and King, and God, denoteth Imperial Majeſty. In Diſcourſes of Matters of Religion theſe Names are us'd promiſcuouſly; for the Name Lord is ſynonymous with the Name God, and is us'd to expreſs the Divinity or Godhead, Deut. 6. 4. The Lord thy God is one κύριος, Lord. Satan is ſometimes known by this Name, the God of this World, and ſometimes by this Name, The Prince of this World; Exod. 4. 16. Thou ſhalt be to Aaron לאלהים for a God, לרב for a Prince, * ſaith the Chaldee. In Iſa. 36. 19. Rabſhakeh's words are thus repreſented; Where are the Gods of Hamath and Arphad? Where are the Gods of Sepharvaim? In Iſa. 37. 13. they are thus repreſented; Where is the King of Hamath, and the King of Arphad, and the King of the City of Sepharvaim? If this Interpretation of a Paſſage in the Prophet Iſaiah be ſomewhat uncertain, yet it is certain, that theſe two Names God and King are uſually conjoin'd in the Old Teſtament (Iſa. 43. 15. Zech. 14. 17. Mal. 1. 14. Pſal. 5. 2. and 20. 9. and 44. 4. and 68. 24. and 89. 18. and 95. 3. and 98. 6, &c.) that in the Prophet Ezekiel's Viſion of a Chariot call'd by the Jews Mercavah, God is repreſented as an Imperial Lord or Potentate; (f) that the Cherubins in the Sanctuary were inſtituted, to be his Regial Throne; that God dwelt and kept Houſe amongſt the Iſraelites as a Regial Majeſty, having his Regial Houſe or Palace with its Utenſils and Furniture, his Regial Throne, his Regial Family of Servitors; (g) that the Pagans worſhipp'd their Kings with Divine Worſhip, and honour'd their Gods after the mode of doing honour to Kings (particularly by the Kiſs of Homage;) that God dwelt among the Iſraelites, not only as a King, (h) but as a Military King or Potentate, the Lord of Hoſts;) and that the Roman Emperours (as alſo other great Princes) becauſe high and mighty Potentates were intituled Gods; (i) which Title they alſo aſſum'd to themſelves, and continu'd it even after the Empire became Chriſtian; for thus the Chriſtian Emperours ſpake and wrote; Noſtra Divinitas, Noſtra Æternitas, Noſtrum Numen, Noſtrum Divinum Præceptum, our Divinity, our Eternity, our Numen, our Divine Precept. From theſe extravagant Titles of Mundane Princes we may infer a true Notion of the Divinity or Godhead. For noſtra Divinitas, noſtrum Numen, are manifeſtly Synonyma's; noſtrum Numen ſignifieth our Divine Potentacy; this therefore is (doubtleſs) the Divinity or Godhead. Moreover from the abuſe of this Name Deus in the Roman Empire (and other great Governments) it appeareth to be a Divine Imperial Name; therefore it denoteth the Divine Potentacy; our Saviour's Apotheoſis is called by the Apoſtle the giving him a Name above every Name, Phil. 2. 9. (k) Name in the Apoſtle's ſtile ſignifieth Poteſtas, Potentacy; therefore the Divine Potentacy is the Divinity or Godhead.

II. In Eccleſiaſtic Writers that diſcourſe of the Trinity, (l) una Deitas, Poteſtas, Divinitas, Dominatio, Imperium, one Deity, Potentacy, Divinity, Domination, Imperial Power, are ſynonymous Expreſſions; as alſo Dominatus tres, tres Deitates, three Dominations, three Deities. So in charging the Arrians with Polytheiſm, (m) which they call πολυαρχία, Polyarchy, whereas themſelves aſſert μοναρχίαν, Monarchy (that there is but one God) they expreſs the Godhead by Potentacy and Rule; (n) as the counterfeit Dionyſius calleth the Divinity θεαρχία, Divine Principality. Their aim is, ſo to ſtate a Trinity of Hypoſtaſes in the Godhead, (o) ut Monarchia dominatus in diverſas divinitates non ſecetur, that the Monarchic Domination be not divided into ſeveral Divinities. Agreeably whereto S. Cyril aſſerteth, (p) θεότητα καὶ κυριότητα μίαν, one Divinity and Domination, which he ſuppoſeth ſynonymous Expreſſions. S. Baſil diſcourſeth, that the Chriſtian form of Baptiſm (q) unius eſt Divinitatis Teſtimonium, is a Teſtimony of one Divinity; and his Senſe Fauſtinus expreſſeth in theſe terms; Unum nomen poſuit dicens, In nomine Patris, & Filii, & Spiritus Sancti, ut una principalis auctoritas crederetur indiviſibilis & perfectæ Trinitatis. But one Name is mention'd, ſaying, In the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, that we might believe one Principal Authority (or Potentacy) that is, one Divinity of the indiviſible and perfect Trinity. The ſame S. Baſil ſuppoſeth, that the Divinity or Godhead is a Regial Dignity; for thus he expreſſeth the order of Perſons in the Holy Trinity, (r) τὸ βασιλικὸν ἀξίωμα, Regial Dignity (the Divinity) paſſeth from the Father through the Son upon the Spirit. So Euſebius ſaith of the Hebrews; (s) They reckon the Holy Spirit in the firſt and regial Dignity and Honour, the Principality of the Univerſe. Hence all ſorts of Theiſts aſſociate and combine theſe two Names of Honour King and God; as Conſtantine's Soldiers in their Prayer. (t) We own thee for the only God; Thee we acknowledge to be the King. The Thracians call'd Zamolxis, our King and God, (u) as Plato ſaith. The Magi worſhipp'd Chriſt quaſi Deum & Regem, as God and King, (w) ſaith Tertullian. The Chriſtian Apologiſts ſtile their God, ſummum Regem, ſummum Imperatorem, the ſupreme King and Emperour, and thus deſcribe their Religion, (x) Nihil ſumus aliud Chriſtiani, niſi magiſtro Chriſto ſummi Regis ac Principis veneratores: We Chriſtians are nothing elſe but the Worſhippers of the Supreme King and Prince according to the Inſtitution of Chriſt. They ſay, that all Mankind have this innate Notion, (y) eſſe Regem ac Dominum cunctorum quæcunque ſunt moderatorem, that there is a King and Lord, the moderator of all things that are; as Cicero calleth Jupiter, rerum omnium præpotens, cujus numini parent omnia, He that hath the Power over all, whoſe Divine Power all things obey. For this is that which all Religioniſts mean by a Deity, (z) משל ומצוה a Dominator and Legiſlator; (a) or the firſt Cauſe that hath regard to all Creatures, and is their Lord, as the Hebrew Doctors notice the Deity. The Divine Attributes of Greatneſs and Goodneſs ſpeak the Deity a King, Lord or Potentate; for thoſe of the latter ſort (Liberality, Graciouſneſs, Lenity, Mercy, Manſuetude, Clemency) are ſo many glorious princely Virtues, which all our Books of Learning highly praiſe in Mundane Potentates, and which make them as great in the Love of their People, as they are in their Rule and Command. So the Inſcription upon a Marble not long ſince digg'd up at Rome repreſenteth them (b).

(t) Selden Titles p. 434. ed. 3.

(u) P. 181.

(w) Grot. Not. in Rom. 1. 20.

(x) Exod. 15. 15. Ezek. 31. 11. and 17. 13.

Amos 4. 13. Gen. 24. 3. Numb. 16. 22.

(y) Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 280.

(z) Idem diſſ. p. 299.

(a) Ibid. p. 296.

(b) Coſri. p. 256.

(c) Virgil. Georgic. l. 1.

(d) Brydall a Glimſe of God. p. 8.

(e) De Verb. mirif. p. 254.

2 Cor. 4. 4. Joh. 12. 31. and 14. 30. and 16. 11.

* Selden de Synedr. l. 1. c. 16. p. 654.

(f) Spencer de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. diſſ. 5. c. 7. S. 1. & l. 1. diſſ. de Theocrat. Jud. c. 5. S. 1.

(g) Ibid. c. 3.

(h) Ibid. c. 1. S. 2. & c. 5. S. 3.

(i) Selden Titles par. 1. c. 4. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 3. c. 17.

(k) Petav. de Trin. l. 2. c. 12. S. 10.

(l) Ibid. l. 4. c. 13. S. 14, 17, 20.

(m) Ib. l. 3. c. 1. S. 8. & l. 1. c. 6. S. 3. & c. 12. S. 7. & l. 8. c. 9. S. 6.

Potentiſſima dos in Principe Liberalitas & Clementia.

True Religioniſts alſo conſider the Deity as an Imperial Eſtate in their Doxologies, and Laudatory Aſcriptions of Might, Majeſty, Glory, Dominion and Power, wherein they intentionally aſcribe unto God the Divinity or Godhead; Jude 25. To the only wiſe God be Glory and Majeſty, Dominion and Power. 1 Pet. 4. 11. To whom be Praiſe and Dominion. Nor is it any thing elſe than his Divinity and Godhead, which the Jews expreſs and acknowledge in their Benediction; (c) Bleſſed be the Lord, and let the Glory of his Kingdom be for ever and ever. This Diſcourſe about the meaning of the Name God is now drawn out to ſome length, but not without cauſe; for it is a matter of infinite importance, that the Godhead be rightly underſtood; which can never be, unleſs our Idea and definitive Notion of God be the Idea of a Lord, King or Potentate, an Imperial or Kingdom-eſtate, The Imperial Eſtate of God. To aſcertain which Idea, we will add nothing more in this place ſave only this Remark, That all true Religioniſts muſt neceſſarily underſtand by this Name God, The Divine King or Potentate, becauſe they underſtand by it the Divine Majeſty, which is the Divinity or Godhead.

CONSECT. 3.

Both Theologies acknowlede a great Affinity and reſemblance between the King, Lord or Potentate that governing Providence is, and the Kingdom-eſtate of ſecular Sovereign Princes. (d) The King having ſupreme unaccountable Rule, and being a living Law, is a reſemblance of God amongſt Men, ſaith a Pythagorean. When Themiſtocles fled out of Greece to the King of Perſia, he was admoniſhed by Artabanus, that if he intended to go to the King, (e) he ſhould adore him after the Perſian mode; for you (ſaid he) are reported, to be very great lovers of Liberty and Tranquillity: But we among other excellent Laws have this moſt excellent one, τὸ τιμᾶν βασιλέα ϗ προσκυνεῖν εἰκόνα θεοῦ τοῦ τὰ πάντα σώζοντος, to do honour to the King, and to worſhip the Image of God that conſerveth all things. So the Chriſtian Theologers uſually ſtile the King εἰκὼν ἔμψυχος θεοῦ, a living Image of God; and S. Baſil ſaith; the King is ὁρατὸς θεός, a viſible God, and God is βασιλεὺς ἀόρατος, an inviſible King. The Kingly Form of Government is called by Ariſtotle (f) πρώτη καὶ θειοτάτη, the principal and moſt Divine. (g) Plato calleth the Regial Dignity θεῖον ἀγαθὸν ἐν ἀνθρώποις, a Divine Good amongſt Men; and the Pythagoreans ſay, θειότατος ὁ βασιλεύς, the King (in reſpect of his condition) is moſt Divine, becauſe of his great affinity and reſemblance unto God. For the ſame reaſon the Scripture calleth Magiſtrates (as alſo the holy Angels) Gods and the Sons of God. For as in Paganiſm the Men-ſuperiorities are called the Gods: So in Scripture The High ones above Men and the Sons of Men are ſtiled the Gods and the Sons of God, being a reſembling Progeny of the moſt High as he is the moſt High. Pſal. 82. 6. I have ſaid, ye are Gods (or the Gods, that is, the Race of High ones above Men,) and all of you Children of the moſt High (a reſembling Progeny of the moſt High as ſuch:) But ye ſhall die like Men; that is, like Men that are not Gods. Potentates called the Sons of the Mighty, Pſal. 89. 6. are in the Septuagints Tranſlation there called the Sons of God; which Name may be ) Idem 4. l. 2. 3. S. 14.

) Idem Trin. l. c. 13. 1.

) Ibid. l. c. 9. S. 8.

) Ib. l. 2. 4. S. 5, 6.

) Ibid. 7. c. 11. 13.

(s) Τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἐν τῇ ώτῃ καὶ βασιλικῇ τ̃ τῶν ὅ- ν ἀρχῆς ἀξίᾳ καὶ τιμῇ καταλα- γουσιν. Pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 15.

(t) Σὲ μόνον οἴδαμεν θεόν· ὲ βασιλέα γνωρίζομεν. Eu- b. de vit. Conſt. l. 4. c. 20.

) In Char.

w) C. Marion. l. 3. 13.

x) Arnob. Gent. l. p. 14.

y) Ibid. 18.

(z) Coſri 181.

(a) Menaſ. en Iſr. Qu. n Lev. p. 284.

(b) Tiraquill. de Nobil. p. 534.

(c) ברוך שם כבוד מלכותו לעולם ועד In Joma ch. 6. fol. 66. a.

(d) Ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς ἀρχὰν ἔχων ἀνυπεύθυνον, ϗ αὐτὸς ὢν νόμος ἔμψυχος, θεὸς ἐν ἀνθρώποις παρεσχημάτισται. Diotegen. de regn.

(e) Plut. in Themiſtocl.

(f) Polit. l. 4. c. 2.

(g) Syneſ. de regno, p. 19.

Pſal. 97. 7. Job 1. 6. and ch. 38. 7. Dan. 3. 25.

be meant either of the holy Angels (ſometimes called the Gods, and ſometimes the Sons of God,) or of the Magiſtrates and ruling Powers among Men. If ſubordinate Magiſtrates are the Sons of God, Sovereign Princes are eminently ſuch, as the Pſalmiſts words imply, Pſal. 89. 7. I will make him my Firſt-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth. He that is made higher than the Kings of the Earth, is made the Firſt-born of thoſe Sons of God; and according to this Senſe the Apoſtle may be underſtood, Heb. 1. 9. (thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladneſs above thy fellows,) that God hath dealt more magnificently with Chriſt, and more royally treated him than any of his Aſſociates (the other Kings,) having magnify'd and dignified him far above all other Potentates, when he ſet his King upon his holy Hill of Sion, and ſtil'd him his Son; thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Kings are therefore the Sons of the higheſt (the Sons of his Highneſs, and eminence of Majeſty, Regial Dignity and Authority, Iſa. 10. 33.) whoſe Eſtate is the ſupreme Supremacy, the Sovereignty abſolutely Sovereign. And (h) Si Deus eſt nomen ſummæ poteſtatis, incorruptibilis eſſe debet, perfectus, impaſſibilis, nulli rei ſubjectus. If God be the Name of the ſupreme Potentate, he muſt be incorruptible, perfect, impaſſible, of condition unſubject to any. And therefore independent, unaccountable, abſolute and unlimited by any, uncontrollable and irreſiſtible, All-commanding and diſpoſing, peerleſs and ſupereminent, the fulleſt height of Dominion and Power, holding of none (and therefore accountable to none,) acknowledging no Superior (to preſcribe Laws to him or lay a reſtraint upon him,) having right to manage Affairs in the ſupreme way of Regency, and abſolute Right to do what he pleaſeth (to do what ever may be done,) whom none may, none can reſiſt in his abſolute Determinations, having plenary Right to command all, and to demand their Service and Obedience, and having the diſpoſal of all things in his hand, all things and perſons being ſubordinate, ſubject, underlings and ſervient to him, and none of them co-ordinate, compeers or co-partners with him, his Empire over the Univerſe and its Inhabitants the Poet thus celebrateth. (i)

Pſal. 2. 6, 7.

(h) Lactant. l. 1. c. 3.

(i) Æſchyl. ap. Clem. Str. l. 5. p. m. 425.

> Ὑπηρετεῖ δ' αὐτῷ θάλασσα καὶ πέτραι.
> Καὶ πᾶσα πηγὴ χ' ὕδατος συστήματα.
>
> All things are of ſubject and ſervient condition to him,
> The Sea and Rocks, and Fountains and Collections of Water.

To governing Providence alone the Glories of Empire appertain in the full and abſolute Senſe, Regni culmen, the culminant condition of the Kingdom; Celſitudo Regalis, Regal Celſitude; imperialis apicis dignitas, the ſummity and pinacle of Imperial Dignity (which is the perfection and conſummation of Dignity;) faſtigium Majeſtatis, the height of Majeſty; ſuprema poteſtas, ſupreme Power; ſupremum Jus regiminis ab omni ſubjectione liberrimi, the ſupreme Right of Government without any meanneſs of Subjection to diſparage it. But theſe Glories of Empire (which in the full and abſolute Senſe are Divine Prerogatives) mundane Potentates in ſome reſpect and in a narrow limited Senſe rightly pretend to, and really poſſeſs and enjoy. (k) For the ſupreme Title King or Emperor, is diſtinguiſh'd from other Dignities in this, that it acknowledgeth no ſuperior, but according to the various Inſtitutions of ſeveral Kingdoms, is accompanied with the higheſt Rights of Majeſty and Sovereignty. Such ſecular Sovereignties are lively Images of the Divine Sovereignty, (as things ſenſible are imitations of the things ſupra-ſenſible,) their Kingdom-eſtate is an expreſs reſemblance of the Godhead. For

(k) Selden Titles c. 1.

I. A Kingdom is a magnificent reigning Eſtate, and ſuch the Godhead is. To be a King and to be of condition reigning, are ſynonymous Expreſſions. Judg. 9. 8. Apoc. 5. 10. So in this Inſcription; regnante D. N. Theodorico fœlix Roma. When our Lord Theodoric reigned (or was King) at Rome, Rome was happy. Joh. 18. 36. My Kingdom is not of this World, ſaith our Saviour; that is, my Eſtate of reigning (being King) is not Mundane, but Celeſtial. As the Name King denoteth a reigning Eſtate, ſo it denoteth alſo a magnificent Eſtate. 2 Sam. 24. 23. All theſe did Araunah as a King (a magnificent Eſtate) give unto the King. Iſa. 10. 8. The Aſſyrian boaſteth; are not my Princes (Chieftain Eſtates) altogether Kings? that is, equal to the great and magnificent reigning Eſtates of the World. Hence Ulyſſes in Homer indoctrinateth a King, to tranſcend others in bounty, becauſe he is a magnificent Eſtate.

> ——————ἐπεὶ βασιλῆϊ ἔοικας
> Τῷ σε χρὴ δόμεναι καὶ λώϊον ἠέπερ ἄλλοι.
> Becauſe you are like a King, you ought to > Tranſcend others in Bounty.

Odyſſ. l. 17.

Becauſe a King is a magnificent reigning Eſtate, hence a good Author will not allow the King of Bohemia, to be properly called a King, (Regem Bohemiæ improprie dici exiſtimat, quod competenti provincia careat,) becauſe the King of Bohemia wanteth a Province, to which ſo magnificent a Title may be applicable. (l) There are ſome Lords (ſaith Thuanus) quorum anguſtæ ditiones Regni titulo dignæ non habentur, whoſe narrow Territories and Provinces are not thought worthy of the Name of a Kingdom, although the Polity be free and independent, and the Government Monarchical. A ſorry Diſtrict (a Kingdom of Tvetot) is a Kingdom, not a Kingdom, a Kingdom in a vulgar, not in a Senſe of ennoblement or honorary acceptation. Ezek. 16. 13. Thou didſt proſper into a Kingdom, that is, into the glory, pulchritude and amplitude of a magnificent Monarchic Polity; for the Name Kingdom ſometimes ſignifieth the Territory, ſometimes the whole Polity, and ſometimes that part of the Polity the reigning Eſtate.

(l) Seld Titles p. 77. ed. 3

II. From hence it followeth, that a Kingdom is the Un-abject, Un-ſubject Eſtate, and ſuch the Godhead is. For the reigning Eſtate is oppos'd to the mean and abject, underling and ſubject Eſtate. So Grace reigneth, Righteouſneſs reigneth, Peace reigneth, when it is in the un-abject, unſubject condition, and in the ſame ſenſe Sin is ſaid to Reign: But when it is ſubdu'd and ſubjugated, and reduc'd to an abject languiſhing condition (like a Weed trodden down) it reigneth not. When the Saints in Heaven are ſaid to Reign, the Phraſe denoteth their magnificent ſublime condition (which is oppos'd to their low and ſuffering Eſtate 2 Tim. 2. 12.) and in ſuch ſenſe Deo ſervire regnare eſt, to be a Servant of God, is to be in reigning condition. As the Reigning, ſo the Regal Eſtate, is the oppoſite to the abject ſubject Eſtate; for the Poets uſually oppoſe King and Caytiff: So βασιλικὴ, Kingly is oppos'd to πτωχικὴ, ſorry or beggarly, βασιλὶς φύσις, the regial Nature (m) is oppos'd to δούλη φύσις, the ſerving Nature. Yet the Jews ſay (not amiſs,) ſervus Regis etiam ipſe Rex eſt, (the Servant of a King is himſelf a King,) being not of abject, ſervile and plebeian Condition, but in compariſon of the generality of Mankind of ſublime and magnificent (that is Regal) Condition. Suppoſing themſelves perfectly unſervilized and unenſlav'd, and becauſe by their mighty Priviledges and Preheminences they tranſcend an abject ſubject Eſtate, they ſay of themſelves omnes Iſraelitæ ſunt filii Regum, all Iſraelites are Kings (Regalities of Eſtate;) and at their Paſſover they behave themſelves with a certain State and Greatneſs (n) בדרך מלכים after the mode of ſecular Kings. When they were God's People, they were ſtiled a Kingdom of Prieſts, Exod. 19. 6. which Name denoteth them both a Regality and a Prieſthood (ἱεράτευμα as the Septuagint have it;) for the Name Kingdom ſignifieth a Regality; and as a Prieſthood ſignifieth a Collection, Multitude or Nation of Prieſts: So a Regality ſignifieth a Collection, Multitude or Nation of Regalities (Kings) ſuch as are of Regal Eſtate. The new Iſrael in like manner (the Chriſtianiz'd Family) are intituled a Regal Prieſthood, 1 Pet. 2. 9. becauſe in reſpect of Spirituals they are in this Life of Regal Eſtate, and the white Raiment which they wear in the other Life denoteth them both of Regal and Sacerdotal quality. Apoc. 3. 4. Agreably to the ſtile of Scripture the Lexicographers have obſerv'd from Euſtathius upon Homer, that all Perſons of eminent and illuſtrious Eſtate are called Kings.

III. By a Kingdom the Philoſophers underſtand a regial or imperial Celſitude of Condition, and ſuch is the Godhead. The Stoicks rightly ſuppoſe, that a Kingdom Eſtate is the higheſt remove from Servility or Servitude; that it is a Regial Celſitude of Condition, not to be baſely, diſhonourably or incommodiouſly ſubjected to any thing (to Money, Fame, Fortune, Fear, to any vicious Appetite or Paſſion.) and therefore they ſtile their wiſe Man a King, the only King. (o)

—————— Qui pectore magno
Spemque metumque domat, vitio ſublimior omni
Exemptus Fatis———

Rex eſt qui poſuit metus
Et diri mala pectoris,
Qui tuto poſitus loco
Infra ſe videt omnia.

Rex eſt qui metuit nihil,
Rex eſt qui cupiit nihil.
———Rex eris, ajunt,
Si rectè facies. Horat.

Qui rectè faciet, qui non dominatur, erit Rex. Auſon.
Regium eſt, nulli ſervire cupiditati. Cic.

'He that wanteth nothing, is not liable to be hurt by external Evils, that is under no inſlaving Powers external or internal (his vicious and corrupt Affections) is a Philoſophic kind of King. And it muſt be acknowledg'd, that theſe are Regial (or Imperial) kind of Things, that they ſpeak a Regial Celſitude of Condition, and that all who are under the Rule of their vicious Inclinations, are ſo far from being Kings, that they are not Free-men. Whence Philoſophers, Poets and Divines have diſputed Political Kings out of much of true Regality, becauſe they are not manumiz'd from the vileſt ſervitude (being judiciorum Domini cupiditatum ſervi;) for where vicious Appetites, Affections and Paſſions reign, having a ſort of Empire and Dominion, they are the Kings, and their Subjects Slaves. But this hindreth not Political Supreme Princes from being a ſort of Kings.

IV. Their Kingdom-Eſtate is the height of honour and nobilitation of Eſtate (and conſequently of Perſon) and ſuch the Godhead is. Our Schools of Learning content themſelves with extremely imperfect notices of Honour and Diſhonour, which are of far greater extent than they imagine. For to be or to be made vile, ignoble, ſordid and baſe really or reputatively, is Diſhonour (our being of worth, dignity, precioſity, may be really, and it may be only repreſentatively deſtroy'd:) On the contrary; to be or to be made unvile, excellent, noble, unſordid really or reputatively, is Honour. But our Maſters uſually confine their notices of Honour and Diſhonour to eſteeming and diſeſteeming, valuing and undervaluing, which is nothing more than reputatively honouring and diſhonouring. (p) Honour (ſaith Ariſtotle) is a ſign or expreſſion of the Opinion which we have of another's Beneficence. For (as the Philoſopher addeth) it is ſuch as are Beneficent, that are honour'd and rightly honour'd by Monuments, Temples, Statues, honourary Salutations, Hymns, Sacrifices, Gifts and Preſents, which are parts of Honour. Honor eſt exhibitio reverentiæ in teſtimonium virtutis. Honour is the exhibition of reverence in teſtimony of Virtue. The Schoolmen in their definitive notices of Honour make a nice diſtinction between Honour and Worſhip; for Honour (ſay they) eſt quædam recognitio excellentiæ alicujus, a certain acknowledgement of one's Excellency: But Cultus or Worſhip in quodam obſequio conſiſtit, conſiſteth in obſequiouſneſs or ſubjection. But theſe are rude imperfect notices of Honour, not commenſurate to the Nature of the thing, not at all accommodate to the ſtile of the Scripture (q) in ſeveral inſtances, nor are they applicable to the Matters of Nobility-Learning. The reputative Honour which the Schoolmen define, is a certain Nobilitation or Ennoblement to the party honour'd: But Honours ſo called in Nobility-Learning both Civil and Eccleſiaſtical (of which there are large Liſts and Catalogues) are certain real Nobilitations of Eſtate, ſuch as the Honour of the High-Prieſt, Heb. 5. 4. (which was the top-Flower and Crown of Eccleſiaſtical Nobility amongſt the Jews,) the Honour of the Kingdom, Dan. 11. 21. which is the height of mundane Honour; for it is matter of pure Honour unmix'd or unſtain'd with any vileneſs or ſordidneſs, as a Pythagorean hath handſomly diſcours'd touching the Sanctity (unpollutedneſs) and Divinity of the Honour of the Kingdom. (r) The Kingdom is a thing ſincere and incorrupt, and becauſe of its tranſcendency moſt Divine, of difficult acceſs to Man. One in that Station muſt be of a moſt pure Nature, and luminous Qualities, that he may not darken and ſully the moſt illuſtrious thing by the ſpots that are in him, as ſome commaculate the moſt holy places, and polluted Perſons thoſe that meet them. But a King muſt be partaker of an unpolluted Nature and know, how much more

(m) Iſidor. l. 1. ep. 109.

(n) Hotting. de Jur. Hebr. Lex. 13. n. 14.

(o) Lipſ. manuduc. l. 3. diſſ. 13. Grot. Not. in 1. Pet. 2. 9.

(p) Τιμὴ δ᾽ ἐςὶ μὲν σημεῖον εὐεργετικῆς δόξης. Rhet. l. 1. c. 5. Aquin. 22æ qu. 102. art. 2. Buridan. Eth. p. 318.

(q) Numb. 24. 11. 1 Cor. 12. 23, 24. 1 Theſſ. 4. 4. &c.

(r) Αὐτὰ μὲν ὦν βασιλεία χρῆμα εἰλικρινές τε καὶ ἀδιάφθορον ἐντὶ, καὶ δι᾽ ὑπερβολὰν θειότατον, δυσέφικτον ἀνθρώπῳ· δεῖ δὲ καὶ τὸν ἐς αὐτὰν καταστάντα καθαρώτατόν τε ἦμεν καὶ διαυγέσταλον τὰν φύσιν, ὡς μὴ τὸ λαμπρότατον ἀφανίζῃ ἐν σπίλοις τοῖς ἐφ᾽ αὐτῷ· Καθὼ καὶ τὼς ἁγιατάτως τόπως ἐκαλίδωσάν τινες, καὶ τῶν ἀντιασάντων ἔνιοι μιαροὶ τὼς ἀντιάσαντας αὐτοῖς. Βασιλῆα δὲ τὸν ὁμιλήσαντα φύσιός τε ἀχράντω δεῖ μετέχειν, ἐπιστάμεν τε αὐτὸν ὅσῳ τῶν ἄλλων ἐντὶ θειότερος, ὅσα τε ἅτερα αὐτῷ. Ὅς δὲ κατὰ λόγον ἀπεικάζων ἑαυτὸν, ἄριστ' ἂν ἑαυτῷ τε χρῷτο, καὶ τοῖς ὑποτεταγμένοις. Ecphantus de regno.

Divine

Divine he is than others, and others than he, to whom aſſimilating himſelf according to reaſon, he will uſe himſelf and his Subjects after the beſt manner. In ſecular Nobility-Learning (which is not of ſo noble a ſtrain as the Pythagoric Divinity) the King is conſidered as the height and fountain of Honour, and all Honour ceaſeth in the preſence of the King. In the Imperial Lawyers Liſts of Honours inter Nobiles primus eſt Imperator, the Emperor is prime of the Nobility (the Nobilitations of Eſtate;) and thoſe uſual honorary Expreſſions βασίλειον γένος, the Royal-kind, ἐξ αἵματος βασιλικοῦ, of the Blood-Royal, Domini Sanguinis, the Princes of the Blood, Porphyrogenniti of the Imperial Family, expreſs the Honour of the Royal Perſon by the ennoblement of the Family. Go, ſee now and bury this curſed Woman, for ſhe is a King's Daughter. 2 King. 9. 34. Among the Jews (as their Writers ſay) an unſtainedneſs of Birth and Pedigree was requiſite, to capacitate one for the Regial Dignity. (s) They commonly reproach the Herodian Family with Servility. Quotquot dixerint ſe à domo Haſmonæorum ortos eſſe, reverà ſunt ſervi. Thoſe that after the Haſmonæi were extinct, got the Judaical Kingdom, were of ſervile quality and condition. So Mariamne reproach'd Herod's near Kindred, his Mother and Siſter, quod non eſſent de ſemine Iſrael, ſed eſſent profanæ & ignobiles, that they were not of the Seed of Iſrael, but profane and ignoble. They ſuppoſe the Honour of the Kingdom ſo pure and unſtain'd, that 'tis one of their Maxims, (t) He that hath been imploy'd but one day in ſervile work is unfit for the Kingdom.

(s) Regiam nullibi ritè conſtare ajunt, niſi ubi è parentibus quorum filiæ nuptiis ſacerdotalibus fuerint idoneæ (quales tantummodo in Synedriis locum habere poterant) Rex ipſe natus eſſet, id eſt optimo atque puriori jure Iſraelitis originariis, non ſolum non è Proſelyto & Proſelyta, ſed nec è profanis aut Mamzeribus. Seld. de J. Nat. & G. l. 5. c. 20.

(t) Schickard. de jur. reg. c. 1. Theor. 3.

V. The Royalneſs of this Eſtate ſpeaketh it the height of Honour, and reſembleth the Godhead. For although in a vulgar or indifferent acceptation the Name Regial or Royal importeth nothing more than a Relation to the King; as Regia Via the Kings High-way, Regium ferculum, a meſs of Meat from the King, and the Royal City (2 Sam. 12. 26.) may ſignifie nothing more than the City where the King dwelt: Yet the word Regial or Royal uſually ſignifieth in a ſenſe of Excellency (an honorary acceptation,) and in ſuch ſenſe Royalneſs is the height of Nobleneſs, as Royal Dainties are the beſt of Delicacies, Gen. 49. 20. The Law of God is in ſuch ſenſe Royal (Jam. 2.8.) and his Royalneſs is the Royal kind of Royalneſs; whereas mundane Royalneſs is of kind the mean and vile, not the Royal: As mundane riches are the poor and beggarly, ſecular Nobleneſs is of kind the Ignoble and Plebeian. (u) I know, that theſe things are meer Shells, and have nothing within, ſaith the noble-ſervile Philoſopher. At this rate of ignoble Nobilitation ſecular ſupreme Princes Royalize in their whole Eſtate: Their Dignity is the Royal, their Title, Stile, Attributes, Prerogatives, the Enſigns of their Dignity (Crown, Scepter, Diadem,) their Palace, Throne, Apparel, Attendance, and their way of living (like Solomon in his Royalty) are intitled Royal, and they are uſually of Royal Bounty, as the Scripture ſpeaketh. The Royalneſs of their Eſtate is a Law to their Qualities and Actions, which muſt be conſentaneous thereto, if they fill up the Idea of a King. For if they be of place and exteriour Condition Royal, but in their Qualities and Behaviour vile and ſervile, they are unkingly Kings (Kings with great limitation) Kings-no-Kings, and it is too poſſible, that they may be worſe than none. If they are Tyrannical not Regial (μὴ βασιλικοὶ ἀλλὰ τυραννικοὶ, (w) as the Philoſopher diſtinguiſheth,) they are of kind unkingly. The Character of King Antiochus ſirnamed Epiphanes ſpeaketh him leſs than a King. Servili ingenio præditus erat, nihilque regium vel heroicum præ ſe tulit; he was of a ſervile Diſpoſition, devoid of every thing truly Royal or Heroical. But the Philoſopher's Character of a King ſpeaketh him more than a King of Human kind. (x) A Tyrant ſeeketh his own profit, a King the good of his Subjects. For he is not a King, that is not ſelf-ſufficient and eminent in all goods. Such an one wanteth nothing, and therefore looketh not at what is profitable to himſelf, but to thoſe whom he governeth.

(u) Ἐγὼ δ' οἶδα, ὅτι ὀστρακινά ἐστιν, ἔσωθεν δὲ οὐδὲν ἔχει. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 22.

Beneficence is regial. Plutarch. de orac. def. p. 417.

(w) Ariſtot. polit. l. 5. c. 11.

(x) Ὁ μὲν γὰρ τύραννος τὸ ἑαυτῷ συμφέρον σκοπεῖ· ὁ δὲ βασιλεὺς τὸ τῶν ἀρχομένων. οὐ γάρ ἐστι βασιλεὺς ὁ μὴ αὐτάρκης καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς ὑπερέχων· ὁ δὲ τοιοῦτος οὐδενὸς προσδεῖται· τὰ ὠφέλιμα οὖν αὑτῷ μὲν οὐκ ἂν σκοποίη, τοῖς δὲ ἀρχομένοις. Ariſt. Eth. Nicom. l. 8. c. 12.

VI. The Kingdom-Eſtate is the height of Glory, and ſuch the Godhead is. For the Glory of the Lord in Scripture (y) ſignifieth God himſelf. Bleſſed be the Glory of the Lord from his place. Ezek. 3. 12. The Godhead is called the excellent Glory. 2 Pet. 1. 17. his Glory. Iſa. 3. 8. Eph. 1. 12. The Glory of the incorruptible God. Rom. 1. 23. כבוד the Glory is one of the Jews Names for God, by the Schecinah they underſtand the Divine Majeſtatick Glory, and ſome ſuppoſe, (z) that כסא כבור the Throne of Glory denoteth the Divine Majeſty. Agreeably whereunto mundane Potentates are ſtiled δόξαι, Glories, 2 Pet. 2. 10. Solomon is renown'd for his Glory, Matth. 6. 29. and the Kingdom-Eſtate is called the Glory of the Kingdom. Dan. 11. 20. There was given him Dominion and Glory and a Kingdom. Dan. 7. 14. The God of Heaven hath given thee a Kingdom, and Power and Strength and Glory. Dan. 2. 37. Kings are unſtain'd with Meanneſs and Underlingneſs, and may not be ſtain'd with Infamy or Reproach. Their ſublime ſhining Eſtate is the furtheſt remove from Vileneſs or Sordidneſs of exteriour Condition (nothing ſordid muſt be found there, Matth. 11. 8.) the brightneſs and refulgency of it ſtriketh and dazleth the weak Eyes of Men; and reſtleſs Ambition which will break through all Laws Divine and Human for a Kingdom, can climb no higher than to this height of Glory. It is ſummum ambientis animi quaſi ſolſtitium, the full ſtop, and as it were the Solſtice of an ambitious Mind.

(y) Maimon. mor. nev. par. 1. c. 64.

(z) Grot. Not. in Heb. 8.

VII. The Kingdom-Eſtate is the height of Proſperity, Felicity and Beatitude, and ſuch the Godhead is. For there can be no greater Beatitude of Condition than Divinity and Godhead. Beatitudo eſt ipſa Divinitas, Beatitude is the Divinity it ſelf (ſaith Boethius;) whence the Divine King is denominated the bleſſed and only Potentate. 1 Tim. 6. 15. As the Godhead, ſo a Kingdom is the ſupreme Nobilitation and Beatitude of Eſtate. For when Men are arriv'd at the height of Felicity, they are ſaid to be in their Kingdom; as an Heir of the Kingdom ſpeaketh to our Saviour, Luk. 23. 42. Lord remember me, when thou comeſt into thy kingdom. The reigning Eſtate (in the honorary Acceptation) tion) is a magnificent proſperous Eſtate. 1 Cor. 4. 8. Ye have reigned as Kings without us. A commanding, flouriſhing, victorious and triumphant Condition is a reigning Condition, and ſuch is the Kingdom. A King ſhall reign and proſper. Jer. 23. 5. A Kingdom is ſuppos'd to exempt its Poſſeſſors both from Miſcreancy and from Miſery, whence a mundane Kingdom is called the height of Fortune, as the barbarous Maxim in Tacitus ſtileth it (in ſummâ Fortunâ id æquius quod validius, In the height of Fortune might and right are confounded,) and the Greek Orator ſpeaketh the common Senſe of Mankind touching the Kingdom-Eſtate. (a) All Men confeſs the Kingdom is the greateſt and moſt reſplendent of Divine and Human Goods, and worth the fighting for to the utmoſt. Although theſe are blind Conceits, which the Spirit of the World ſuggeſteth touching the felicitative Eſtate of mundane Kings (which ſeveral of them have relinquiſh'd, to ſeek their felicity in privacy and retirement and in a better World,) yet it ſeemeth reaſonable, to ſuppoſe their Superlative Eſtate the top of mundane Felicities; for the World hath no higher Beatitude of Eſtate, to propoſe to its Admirers. And to be a King (or in the Kingdom-Eſtate) is the ſame thing, as to be in an highly felicitative Eſtate; whence the Philoſopher ſaith, (b) There is no ſuch thing as a miſerable King, no more than there is a miſerable God.

Perſarum vigui rege beatior. Horat.

VIII. The Kingdom-Eſtate is the height of Rule and Government, and ſuch the Godhead is. For although (c) amongſt the Athenians an under-Officer was called King (abuſively, the People enjoying full Liberty play'd upon the Name,) the Title is not ſeldom communicated to Subject-Princes, (who tranſcend ordinary Subject-Eſtates, and that great Title King of Kings is no rarity in the Eaſtern Parts; yet in the more generally receiv'd and uſual ſignification the Name of King denoteth the ſupremacy of bearing Rule; in which Notion the Lion is called King of Beaſts (the Poet ſtileth him κλυτὸν βασιλῆα λέοντα,) the Leviathan a King over the Children of Pride (faſtuous Animals,) Death is denominated the King of Terrors, (to denote it the ſupreme Terror,) amongſt the Romans Rex Convivii the King of the Banquet had the ſupreme Rule of the Affairs of the Banquet, (and preſcrib'd the meaſures of drinking,) and every Man is ſaid to be King in his own Houſe, becauſe ſupreme Ruler there. (d)

Αὐτὰρ ἐγὼν οἴκοιο ἄναξ ἔσομ' ἡμετέροιο.

In this Notion ſupreme Princes Reign; for their reigning denoteth bearing Rule, both as it is matter of Eminence (meerly ſuch,) and as it is matter of Office. As it is matter of Eminence, the Holy Ghoſt ſaith of Rome, ſhe reigneth over the Kings of the Earth. Apoc. 17. 18. As it is matter of Office, Wiſdom ſaith of her ſelf, Prov. 8. 15. By me Kings Reign, and Princes decree Juſtice. That is, by Wiſdom they diſcern between good and evil, right and wrong, they have the Science of governing well, which Plato calleth τὴν βασιλικὴν ἐπιστήμην, the Regial Science. It belongeth to the Officiary Dignity (Rectorſhip or Prefectſhip) of Kings, that are in Society with a Liege-people as the regnant and regent party, to adminiſter wiſe and good, juſt and faithful, holy and happy Government, (that all things may go well, and all may live well and happily in Society, which is the end of Government,) and therefore to make wholſome Laws, to exerciſe Judgment, to diſtribute due Rewards and Puniſhments, to protect their People, to ſubdue their Enemies, and to eſtabliſh Piety and Peace in their Borders. Such a King or Sovereign-Eſtate of Government (for his Throne is the Seat of Government, and his Sceptre the Rod of Government) is related to his People as their Sovereign Friend, Father, Guide, Shepherd, State-Phyſician, Patron, Saviour and Benefactour, (being plac'd (e) ἐν ὑπεροχῇ εὐεργεσίας, in an headſhip of Beneficence,) and the Philoſopher calleth him οἰκονόμον, ἐπίτροπον, φύλακα, a diſpenſer of Affairs, Tutor and Royal Guardian to his Liege-People. But the meer Eminence of bearing Rule over a People is ſeparable from the Officiary Dignity of a King over a Liege People; for God reigneth over the Heathen, whom he is not in Society with as their King (in which Senſe the Prophet ſaith, thou never beareſt Rule over them;) and in ſome Human Governments they that Reign, pretend not to the Officiary Dignity of a King over a Liege-People, but to the meer eminence and grandeur of Reigning, (f) regnare ſuper colla nationum, to be Regnant upon the Necks of the Nations.

IX. The Kingdom-Eſtate is the height of Power and Puiſſance, and ſuch the Godhead is. For the Power Imperial of Sovereign Princes (if fully Imperial) is the fulleſt height of Power, and accordingly they ſpeak of their plenitudo poteſtatis Regiæ, fulneſs of Kingly Power, which fulneſs of Kingly Power is made up of their Regalia majora & minora, greater and leſſer Regalities (or Rights of Sovereignty,) which are too numerous to be eaſily recounted. Their Jus Imperii & Regendi, Right of Empire and Government, compriſeth the Legiſlative Power (which ſome call the Nomothetical or Architectonical,) poteſtas judiciaria, the Power of deciding Controverſies (beyond whoſe Sentence there is no Appeal) and the Power of Execution. They have the Power of the Sword, the Power of Life and Death (they have Life and Member in their Power, as our Law ſpeaketh,) the Power of pardoning Criminals and condemned Perſons, of appointing Magiſtrates, giving and limiting their Authority (the King is Caput Republicæ and of all ſubordinate Authorities,) the Power of making War and Peace, of demanding Tribute, of raiſing to Honours and Dignities, with ſuch more. The vaſtneſs and amplitude of their commanding Virtue and Power maketh them ſhadows and reſemblances of the Almighty Sovereign, whoſe height and fulneſs of Power is abſolutely without any want of Power, as his Majeſty is without any Meanneſs, his Excellency without any Vileneſs, his Beauty without any Blemiſh, his Perfection without any allay of Imperfection.

X. The Kingdom-eſtate is the height of Liberties, Immunities and Priviledges, and ſuch the Godhead is. For as a Lord or King is made ſuch by his Eſtate of Liberty and unſubject Condition; as Servitude is ignoble, but Ingenuity or Liberty in Law-ſenſe (that is, free Citizenſhip, or to be civilly unſerviliz'd and unenſlav'd) is noble: So Franchiſes, Freedoms, Exemptions, Priviledges, Preheminences, Prerogatives, are Nobilitations, Tacit. Annal. 15.

(a) Νῦν δὲ πάντες ἂν ὁμολογήσαιεν, τυραννίδα καὶ τῶν θείων ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων μέγιστον καὶ σεμνότατον καὶ περιμαχητότατον εἶναι. Iſocrat. in Evagor.

(b) Ἀτυχὴς βασιλεὺς οὐ γίνεται οὐ μᾶλλον ἢ ἀτυχὴς θεός. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 22.

(c) Syneſ. de regn. p. 19.

Job 41. 34. Ibid. c. 18. 14.

(d) Telemach. ap. Homer. Odyſſ. 3.

(e) Ariſtot. Eth. Nicom. l. 3. c. 13. Simplic. in Epict. p. 253.

(f) Selden Titles p. 105. ed. 3.

tations, they ennoble and dignify Eſtates and Perſons. Hence a Rank of Barons in Germany (g) have the name of Frye, that is, Liberi or Freemen, the ſeveral Honours and Dignities which Nobility-Learning treateth of, are Syſtems of ſeveral Liberties and Priviledges (as the Charter of Hydalguia or Gentry in Spain giveth freedom from all Taxes; according to the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and as Junius obſerveth, to make a Man's Father's Houſe free in Iſrael, was to give him what we now call the Priviledges of Nobility,) and a King of our own Nation pretended to nothing leſs than Imperial Dignity upon this ground; Ipſe omnes Libertates habebat in regno ſuo, quas Imperator vindicabat in Imperio, He had all thoſe Liberties in his Kingdom, which the Emperour challeng'd in the Empire. The Ills that ſuch Supreme Princes are priviledg'd from, are Tribute, Taxes, burdenſome Charges, the Wants and Inconveniencies of Life, (as they are inveſted with the Authority, ſo they are habited with the Pomp of reigning Eſtates, and live in the greateſt affluence of the Secular Accommodations of Life, having all things under them, and their Courts furniſh'd with all varieties of Pleaſure;) they are priviledg'd and exempted from Beggary, Varletry, Meanneſs, Commonneſs, Vulgarneſs, Contempt, Vilipendency, Infamy; for their eximious exalted Condition is unſtain'd both in a real and legal Senſe; they are unſtain'd with Meanneſs and Vulgarneſs, and may not be ſtain'd with any imputation of matter of Infamy or Reproach; which ſpeaketh the height of Nobilitation. They are priviledg'd and exempted from Imputation of erring, dying, doing wrong, no Laches, Folly or Imperfection may be found in the King, all juſt Attainders are purg'd by the Crown. And becauſe they are God's Officers, not the People's, Supreme in Government, and the Civil Sovereigns, theſe Magnificent Priviledges neceſſarily belong to their Eſtate (which yet ought to be limited by Natural Equity) they are priviledg'd from Hoſtile Reſiſtance, Forfeiture of their Eſtate, Subjection to any Civil Authority, and to the Laws or Commands of any, none may ſit in Judgment upon them, call them to account for Male-adminiſtration, inflict Depoſition or Death upon them. They are denominated αὐτόνομοι, αὐτοκέφαλοι, ἀδέσποτοι, αὐτοκράτορες, Self-Sovereigns, as well as παντοκράτορες, Sovereigns over others; which Independency of their Condition is of greater precioſity in the Eyes of two many Secular Kings than their Beneficent Superintendency and Superviſorſhip over others, if a Biſhop of our own hath not wrong'd them in this Character of them. (b) They are exalted above Men, not to conſult the good of Men, but that they may live as they liſt; for this is the Prerogative of Kings. The right alſo of interpreting and of diſpenſing with the Execution of Laws (upon due accounts) belong to this Eſtate, and the power of altering the Laws (when governing Juſtice will allow it) as alſo diſobligedneſs from the Laws, according to that known reſcript of the Emperours Severus and Antonine; Licet Legibus ſoluti ſimus, attamen legibus vivimus, We live by the Laws though diſoblig'd from the Laws.

But although this Prerogative of Diſobligedneſs from the Laws (which doth not extend to thoſe Laws that are fundamental to the Society of the Empire, (i) as the Imperial Lawyers affirm) maketh a great ſhew, yet in a juſt compute of things it amounteth to little. For the Emperour is only ſo far and in ſuch Senſe diſoblig'd from the Civil Laws, that he is not of condition ſubject to them, but he is not diſoblig'd from ſuch an obſervance of them, as the Philoſopher's Maxim requireth; (k) δεῖ δ' ὁ ἄρχων φύλαξ τοῦ νόμου, The Ruler is of place the Keeper and Guardian of what is Law, Right and Due. He is not diſoblig'd from the Law of juſt and equal Government in all things that are matter of Civil Law; and it ſignifieth little, that he hath power to change particular Laws, ſeeing the Society ought to have either the preſent equal Laws, or other Laws every way as good or better than they. He is not diſoblig'd from the Law of due agency in all Circumſtances, the Law of Royal Qualities and Practices, the Law of religiouſly wiſe, faithful and regular governing, nor from the Law of his Place and Office, Beneficence in Government; upon all which accounts the Emperour is vaſtly oblig'd to a cloſe and faithful adherence to the Laws, that are Laws indeed, not peſtes Reipublicæ (as Cicero ſpeaketh) the Plagues of the Publick Weal. The Law alſo of the moſt illuſtrious Virtue and Goodneſs belongeth to this Eſtate. (l) It muſt be thought the vitioſity of a private Man, to do things that are ill and worthy of Puniſhment, which are under the Severity of the Law; but of a Ruler or Prefect not to be ſuperlatively good. The Regency of a King and Emperour is that of a Guide and Shepherd: He is a Benefactor to his People, if being good himſelf, he taketh care of their well-doing, as a Shepherd of his Sheep, (m) ſaith Ariſtotle;) to be the Regent and Lawgiver in a City, Army or Family, importeth much more than the verbal commanding others; it is ſo to command them, as to conduct them (and the great comprehenſive duty of the Subject-eſtates, Children, Souldiers, Diſciples and Flocks of People, is to imitate and follow, to act in conformity to their Leader and Pattern;) the Emperour therefore ought to live by the Laws, that he may be an exemplary Guide and Pattern unto thoſe, to whom the Laws are given (that they may be well guided and govern'd) and that may be properly call'd his Law, which he liveth by himſelf, and which all muſt live by, that are of his Society. As the People have conſented to the Lawgiver's Government, ſo he hath conſented to be their Leader and Governour; therefore the Legiſlative-eſtate is the Eſtate of making the Laws, of governing by the Laws, of living by the Laws. It is alſo an Eſtate of living in Society with others, (n) as συμπολῖται, Fellow-Citizens (conjoyn'd in community of life and living;) therefore the Lawgiver hath conſented, to live by one and the ſame City Law with his People, (o) if there be the ſame reaſon for himſelf as for others; for Laws are made for the ſake and for the good of the whole (the Emperour and his Citizens) and what is uſeful and neceſſary for the whole, is taken care of in the Laws; wherefore all are concern'd to obſerve them in point of common Intereſt, Wiſdom, Goodneſs and Faithfulneſs. If it be Wiſdom and Goodneſs to make them as a Governour, it is Wiſdom and Juſtice, to obſerve them as a Citizen. In Popular Governments the Law is formally, in

Monarchies

(g) Ibid. p. 353, 483, 18, 432.

1 Sam. 17. 25.

(h) Qui ſunt ἐπὶ βαθμῶν conſtituti, non ut hominum ſaluti conſulant, ſed ut vivere poſſint ipſi ut velint. —— τὸ γὰρ γέρας εἶναι ἀνάκτων. Montacut. Orig. T. 1. p. 199.

(i) Vinn. Com. in Inſtit. p. 320.

(k) Ariſtot. Eth. Nicom. l. 5. c. 10.

(l) Ἀλλ' ἡγεῖσθαι ἰδιώτου μὲν εἶναι κακίαν τὸ φαῦλα πράττειν, καὶ ὅσα κολάσεως ἄξια, ὧν ὁ νόμος βαρὺς δεσπότης, ἄρχοντος δὲ ἢ προεστῶτος τὸ μὴ ὡς ἄριστον εἶναι. Gr. Naz. Or. 1.

(m) Eth. Nicom. l. 8. c. 13. Dio Chryſoſt. Orat. 1. de regno. Duck de uſu & authorit. Jur. Civil. p. 37.

(n) Ariſtot. ſupr. l. 5. c. 10.

(o) Suarez de Leg. l. 3. c. 35. Grot. de J. B. ac P. l. 2. c. 4. S. 12. & c. 20. S. 24.

Monarchies the Law is virtually and equivalently, (p) a common Agreement of the City according to which all muſt live, that are in the ſtate and relation of Citizens (as Demoſthenes defin'd it, and from him Marcianus in the Pandects;) in making the City-Law of living none are Diſſenters, none may be Diſſenters in Practice. The Emperour is a Conſenter for the whole (himſelf and his People) his Conſent including theirs that have conſented to his Government. And as the Party Regent in any common Buſineſs being Agent in conſort with others is moſt of all concern'd, to obſerve the Law of that Affair (which is his own Law,) as the Regent of Muſicians at a Muſic-Exerciſe, the Governour of a Ship or Army, or the Biſhop of an Aſſembly of Chriſtians. The Paſtor having choſen and determin'd a way of agency for all his Collegues and Aſſociates, not ſeparately, but in conjunction with himſelf and he with them in one Society, ſtante ea lege, while it continueth the Law of the Aſſembly the Paſtor muſt not fail to obſerve it (what is proper for him to obſerve) not as a Subject-Agent in that Affair, that muſt obey juſſu imperantis, but as the Agent-Regent, that is bound to govern the Affair, and be Agent in it in conſort; nor is it otherwiſe in conducting the Affairs of Civil Life. (q) When you have preſcrib'd to others, you have preſcrib'd to your ſelf, (ſaith S. Ambroſe to Valentinian;) virtually and equivalently the Emperour maketh Laws, for himſelf to keep in the firſt place, and he is to ſee that others obſerve them, if he preſideth over the Commonwealth, (r) as a Charioteer over a Chariot, a Governour over a Ship, to ſteer it and take care of its welfare. Some Rules of Agency (like the Rules of Muſic) the Nature of things maketh Law, and there is no doing otherwiſe in point of Aptitude or tolerable Agency. What is againſt due Order is againſt Law, ἡ γὰρ τάξις νόμος, for Law is Order and due Order is Law: What is not equal, but the contrary, is againſt Law; for as Ariſtotle ſaith, ὁ νόμος τὸ μέσον, what is in due meaſure, is Law; to order all things, ſo as is the beſt, is Law; for doing otherwiſe, is oppoſite to well-doing. Well-doing will be what it is denominated, and intolerable acting amiſs will be ſo, whether we will or no; wherefore it is impoſſible that the Emperour (whoſe ſuppos'd Authority is call'd by Zoſimus ἄλογος ἐξουσία, Brutal Authority) ſhould be exempted from living or governing by good and juſt Laws; and if it was poſſible, it would be a Penalty, not a Priviledge. The maxim of Law touching his diſobligedneſs from the Laws, is a ſlur to the Laws, but ſignifieth little to his real advantage: Nor is it for his real advantage, that his bare Edicts ſhould have the force of Laws (a Priviledge which is deny'd unto Kings in leſs deſpotical and more regular-regial Governments;) for liberty and power to good only is deſirable.

XI. The Kingdom is an Eſtate of Sacredneſs, and ſuch is the Godhead. For the Perſon, Majeſty and Life of the King is uſually intituled Sacred (whence aroſe that ancient evil cuſtom of ſwearing by Kings and Emperours;) about Juſtinian's time the faſhion was, when an Emperour was crown'd at Conſtantinople, (s) to make a Croſs with holy Oyl on the Emperour's Head, the Patriarch in doing it crying aloud Ἅγιος, Sacred, (the People alſo follow'd him with the ſame Acclamation,) and we read at the crowning of Juſtin II.

> —— ·—— Sacro Diademate juſſit
> Auguſtum ſancire caput.———

In the later times of the Empire the Attribute Sacred is affix'd to almoſt every thing appertaining to the Emperour (as in theſe following Expreſſions, Sacrum Imperium, ſacrum palatium, obſequia ſacra, largitiones ſacræ, ſacratiſſimus Imperator, ſacra Equi ejus Lupata, and ſuch more,) and in the ſame ſtile they uſually ſpeak in the German Empire, which is call'd by the Name of The Holy Empire. Such extravagant ſacrating the matters of Secular Pomp and Grandeur is not without a ſtrong tang of Grecanic Vanity; which appeareth alſo in ſacrating little honourary Matters; as conſecrare militem is us'd to ſignifie the making a Knight; (t) the Heralds are look'd upon tanquam ſacrorum cuſtodes & templi Honoris æditui, as the Keepers of the ſacred things, and Guardians of the Temple of Honour: And the Poet Statius (u) is ſaid to be crowned in the Quinquatria —ſanctoque indutus Cæſaris auro, and inveſted with Cæſar's ſacred Gold. But although there is much of Vanity in ſacrating theſe Secular Vanities, yet many things that are meerly Secular or Civil (the things of Civil Society and Civil Life) are, and ought to be, intituled Sacred; (w) as Sacri Tribuni, the Tribunes of the People amongſt the Romans were ſacred, ſancti Legati, ſacred Embaſſadours, Laws made by due Authority are leges ſanctæ, leges ſacræ, Sacred Laws, as the Profeſſors of the Laws ſtile them; and they uſually ſtile themſelves Sacerdotes, becauſe they teach and miniſter about Sacred things. Theodoric's Charge to a Judge (in Caſſiodorus) ſpeaketh the Sacredneſs of his Perſon and Imploy; Eſto innocentiæ templum, temperantiæ ſacrarium, ara juſtitiæ, Be thou the Temple of Innocence, the Sanctuary of Temperance, the Altar of Juſtice. The Sacredneſs of many Civil Things and Perſons of inferiour quality inferreth, that Kings are Sacred at a great rate (being Sovereign Lords and Powers, Dei Vicarii, God's Repreſentatives and Vicegerents, deputed to repreſent his Perſon, and to act in his ſtead, and being the Lord's anointed, whether anointed with material Oyl or not;) accordingly their Regalities are intituled their Sacra Sacrorum, Superlative Sacreds. In our Law it is high Treaſon to imagine only, or intend the Death of the King, or to kill any of his Judges or Crown-Officers, becauſe by theſe the King's Perſon is repreſented. Of ſuch Sacredneſs is the King's Perſon, that High-Treaſon againſt it is puniſh'd with loſs of Life and Honour, the real and perſonal Eſtate of the Criminal, and his Heirs alſo loſe the ſame for ever. Such Sacredneſs the Law may put upon other Perſons that are no Kings (as the Tribunes of the People among the Romans were made Sacroſanct by the Law;) for Sacredneſs is nothing elſe but the Inviolableneſs of Things or Perſons ſegregate and remote from common, and the greater Inviolableneſs they are of, the greater is their Sacredneſs.

XII. The Kingdom-eſtate is a Monarchy (or ſingularity of Rule) and ſuch is the Godhead. For the Writers of Politicks underſtand nothing elſe by theſe Names King and Kingdom, but a certain Species of Political Government called Monarchy (contradiſtinct to Ariſtocracy

(p) Πόλεως συνθήκη κοινή, καθ' ἣν ἅπασι προσήκει ζῆν τοῖς ἐν τῇ πόλει.

q) S.Am- roſ.Ep. 2.

) Dioto- nes de gn.

) *Seld. tles, p. o. ed.*3.

(t) Preſent State of England, Par. 2. p. 256.

(u) *Selden ſupr.p.*339.

(w) Macrob. Saturn. l. 3. *c.*3. Forteſcue de laud. leg. Angl. p. 8, 9. Ferdin. ABDvenſ. orat. pro Jur. Civil. p. 7. Caſſiodor. l. 1. var. 12. *Holiday in Juven.p.*7.

and Democracy) which they thus define; (x) A Kingdom is a Monarchy or the Chieftainſhip of one adminiſtring the publick Affairs to the common good. (y) The Government of a ſingle Perſon by virtue of Law or Cuſtom undertaken and manag'd for the good of the obedient Subjects. From which Political Definitive Notices of King and Kingdom it appeareth; that in Politicks they are contemplated under one Notion, and in Nobility-Learning under another. For in Nobility-Learning by King and Kingdom we underſtand ſuch a Nobilitation and Perfection of Eſtate, as thoſe Names import: But uſually the Writers of Politicks by King and Kingdom underſtand only ſuch a Species of Political Government, as thoſe Names denote. And not conſidering King and Kingdom under this Notion as ſuch an Honour and Nobilitation of Eſtate, but only as ſuch an Office and ſuch a Species of Political Government, they have over-look'd much of the Primary Importance of thoſe great Names, and have form'd a very maim'd, partial, inadequate Idea of the things, robbing them of a principal part of themſelves.

XIII. The Kingdom-eſtate is the Supra-ſubject or Subject-tranſcendent Eſtate, and ſuch the Godhead is. The Eſtate of the Civil Sovereign is Subject-tranſcendent in reſpect of his Stile, Titles, Attributes, Badges and Enſigns of Dignity, Port and Preſence, Rights and Prerogatives, Power and Proweſs, Revennes and Poſſeſſions, Circumſtances of Life, State and Order of Service, the reſpects of Honour and Homage, and Subjection that are due to Him, requiſite Endowments, Abilities, Virtues and Behaviour (magnum eſt in Republicâ tueri perſonam principis; It's a great thing, to maintain and expreſs in every thing the Perſon of the Prince, the Perſon of Quality that he beareth) as alſo in reſpect of his Employment or Part to act, the Rank and Graduality, the Sacredneſs and Precioſity of his Perſon. Thou art worth ten thouſand of us, 2 Sam. 18. 3. (z) If the Habaſſines (as ſome affirm) call their Emperour by a Name that ſignifieth a precious Stone, or incomparable Gem (Belul Gian) as alſo by another that ſignifieth Elect or the Bridegroom (Haze) thereby they denote a peerleſs eſtimation that they have of their Civil Sovereign. But we need not travel ſo far as Ethiopia, to learn the juſt Eſtimation, that we ought to have of him: For in our Engliſh Law his Perſon and Life is ſo precious, that every Subject is bound by his Allegiance, to defend it with his own Life and Limbs; the Sovereign is at ſuch a rate Subject-tranſcendent, that the Law ſaith, The Life and Member of every Subject is at the Service of the Sovereign.

The Application of theſe and our other Notices of Civil Sovereigns to the Godhead is ſo eaſie and obvious, that I forbear it as in great part needleſs; and will remark nothing more touching the Correſpondences between Godhead of Eſtate and the Eſtate of Secular Sovereigns, ſave only the Diſcourſe of a Pythagorean who from the Divine Attributes inferreth a reſemblance between the Godhead and the Kingdom-eſtate of Secular Sovereigns. (a) Jupiter the Supreme Potentate is venerable and honourable, both becauſe of his Celſitude and the greatneſs of his Virtue. Good, as being Beneficent and communicative of Goods, whence he is rightly called by the Ionic Poet The Father of Gods and Men. Formidable, both becauſe he puniſheth the Unjuſt, and becauſe he is dominant and imperant over all. He hath alſo a Thunderbolt in his Hand a Symbol of his Formidableneſs: Upon the account of all this it ought to be remembred, that the Kingdom-eſtate is an Imitamen of God. From theſe numerous Correſpondences between Godhead of Eſtate and the Kingdom-eſtate of Secular Princes, it appeareth, that God muſt be contemplated as a Lord, King or Potentate, an Imperial or Kingdom-eſtate, That Imperial Eſtate the Godhead, which is the Kingdom-eſtate.

CONSECT. 4.

Touching the Supreme Potentate both Theologies agree, that his Imperial or Kingdom-eſtate is Divinity, Deity or Godhead of Condition; for both account it (b) τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς θείας ὑπεροχῆς, the Dignity of the Divine Tranſcendence. In the Pagans Theology the great Eſtate of the Supreme Potentate is more than meer Deity. It is Supreme Deity of Condition; to which Divine Tranſcendence they rais'd their Jupiter ἱστορικῶς (hiſtorically) ſuppoſing him the Lord of all things: And to this Divine Tranſcendence the Imperial Eſtate of the Supreme Potentate the Scripture-Theology raiſeth our Bleſſed Saviour, exalted by God's right hand to be a Prince, Act. 5. 31. Whom he hath made both Lord and Chriſt, Act. 2. 36. The Lord of all, Act. 10. 36. His exaltation to the Place, Eſtate and Dignity of Lord of all, denoteth his advancement to the Kingdom-eſtate of the Supreme Potentate; and this Exaltation is his Ἀποθέωσις, Divinity, Deity or Godhead of Condition; for He is over all God bleſſed for ever, Amen; Rom. 9. 5. In the Pſalmiſts Deſcription of our Saviour's Exaltation both theſe Notions are conjoyn'd, Pſal. 45. 6. Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. For his advancement to the Throne (which is the Seat of Majeſty) ſpeaketh his exaltation to the Imperial Eſtate of the Supreme Potentate: And from his Honourary Stile or Title, O God, it appeareth, that this Exaltation is his Ἀποθέωσις, Deity or Godhead of Condition. The Prophet in like manner hath conjoyn'd theſe two Notions, Iſa. 9. 6. The Government ſhall be upon his Shoulder, and his Name ſhall be called (that is, he ſhall be) the mighty God. Whence it appeareth, that to poſſeſs the Throne of the holy Government, is to be of Imperial Condition God, and that theſe two Notions are but two Notions of the very ſame thing. If the Name God denoteth the Supreme Potentate, his Imperial Eſtate or Condition muſt neceſſarily be Deity or Godhead of Condition. The Metaphorical (or Analogical) Deity or Godhead of Condition which Secular Sovereign Princes enjoy, is the ſame thing with their Imperial or Kingdom-eſtate; therefore the proper Deity or Godhead of Condition which the Supreme King enjoyeth, is the very ſame with his Imperial or Kingdom-eſtate. As one perſon is of Imperial Condition King, another is of Imperial Condition Pope: So God is of Imperial Condition God; therefore if one be rais'd to be of his Imperial Condition, he is rais'd to Deity or Godhead of Condition. Agreeably whereunto our Saviour's Exaltation and Seſſion at the right hand of God muſt

(x) Regnum eſt Monarchia, ſive unius principatus adminiſtrantis Rempublicam ad utilitatem communem. Calvin. Lex. Jurid. in voce Regnum.

(y) Unius imperium moribus aut legibus delatum, ſuſceptum geſtumque parentium bono. Lipſ. Polit. l. 2. c. 3.

(z) Selden Titles, p. 64, 85.

(a) Ὁ κρατίων πάντων Ζεὺς σεμνὸς μὲν ἐντὶ καὶ τίμιος, διά τε τὰν ὑπεροχὰν καὶ τὸ μέγεθος τᾶς ἀρετᾶς. χρηστὸς δὲ διὰ τὸ εὐεργετικός τε ἦμεν, καὶ ἀγαθοδότας ὅκως δὴ καὶ λέγεται ὑπὸ τῶ ἰωνικῶ ποιητᾶ, ὥσκ' εἴη πατὴρ ἀνδρῶν τε θεῶν τε. δεινὸς δὲ διὰ τὸ κολάζεν τὼς ἀδικεῦντας, καὶ κρατὲν καὶ κυριεύεν πάντων. ἔχει δὲ καὶ τὸ κέραυνον μετὰ χεῖρα σύμβολον τᾶς δεινότατος. ἐπὶ πᾶσι δὲ τούτοις μναμονευτέον δεῖ, ὅτι θεόμιμόν ἐντι πρᾶγμα βασιλεία. Diotogenes de regno.

(b) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 3. p. 4.

muſt be underſtood; for he doth not ſit there as a meer Favourite (as Bathſheba ſat on King Solomon's right hand) but as a King, Lord or Potentate, that is rais'd to Conſortſhip with God in his Imperial Eſtate, as amongſt the Roman Emperours the Father ſometimes admitted the Son to a Conſortſhip with him in his Empire. His Seſſion on the right hand of God importeth, that He is rais'd to ſit in his Father's Throne, that he rightfully poſſeſſeth the Kingdom-eſtate of the Supreme Potentate, and (which is the ſame thing) τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς θείας ὑπεροχῆς, the Dignity of the Divine Tranſcendence. For this the holy Writers mean and plainly enough expreſs in their accounts of our Saviour's Exaltation; who is gone into Heaven, and is at the right hand of God, Angels, and Authorities and Powers being made ſubject to him. God hath ſet him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all Principality, and Power, and Might, and Dominion (all created Potentacy) and every Name that is named, not only in this World, but alſo in that which is to come. He is ſet on the right hand of the Throne of the Majeſty on high, and made higher than the Heavens (the utmoſt height of created Nature:) But to which of the Angels ſaid he at any time, ſit on my right hand, until I make thine Enemies thy Footſtool? are they not all miniſtring Spirits? By our Saviour's Exaltation to the right hand of God therefore the holy Writers underſtand his rightful Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom-eſtate of the Supreme Potentate (the Divine Sovereignty) that he is of Imperial Condition, and that his Imperial Condition is no leſs than the Godhead.

*Apoc.*3.22.

1 *Pet.*3.22.
Eph. 1. 20, 21.
Heb. 1. 3, 13, 14. and ch. 7, 26. 8, 1.

In this Notion of our Saviour's Seſſion at the right hand of God the many regial Eminences that are aſcrib'd to him, and which are Branches of his Exaltation, are manifeſtly compris'd; for becauſe he is rightfully poſſeſs'd of the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead (which is Godhead of Eſtate) therefore he is rightfully poſſeſs'd of the peerleſs ſupereminent reigning Eſtate. He muſt reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet; therefore He is King of Kings and Lord of Lords, the Lord of Glory, the Lord of Life, the Lord from Heaven, the Lord of Heaven and Earth, the Sovereign Lord and Judge of Men and Angels; therefore He is Heir of all things (Lord of all things as Heir,) all things are ſubjected to him, put under his Feet (He only is excepted which did put all things under him) and his right of Empire is co-extended with the Univerſe; therefore God hath highly exalted him (ὑπερύψωσε, hath exalted him above all Highneſſes) and hath given him a Name (a perſonal Eminence and Dignity) which is above every Name, that at the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhould bow, of things in Heaven, and things in Earth, and things under the Earth, and that every Tongue ſhould confeſs, that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord. Becauſe he is rais'd to the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead (inſtated in it, inveſted with it) therefore all created Beings are underlings to him, all Rationals ought to pay him their Homage and Subjection as to their Divine Sovereign Lord; therefore all Power in Heaven and Earth is given unto him, his Dominion and Power over the Univerſe is full and plenary, without Reſtriction or Limitation. All Things and Perſons are under his command, having plenary right to poſſeſs, uſe and imploy them to his own ends, to manage Affairs unaccountably (in the ſupreme way of regency) to make and annul Laws, to exerciſe Judgment, to pardon or condemn, to ſave or deſtroy the Souls of Men, to diſpoſe of all their Spiritual-eternal Intereſts, and to conſtitute Principalities and Powers, as being the Head of all Principality and Power, and upholding all things by the word of his power, by him all things conſiſt. All which Height of Imperial Power is nothing leſs than Deity or Godhead of Condition: Accordingly, the Son of God in his Deiform Condition is ſaid to be the Image and Pourtraiture of the inviſible God, He beareth the Stile and Title, carrieth the State and Majeſty of God, hath the honourary Rights and Dues of God, ought to be reſpected, and reverenc'd, and lov'd, and ſerv'd with the uncommon incommunicable Honour and Worſhip of God, and muſt be joyn'd with God in the religious Adorations of Saints and Angels; Apoc. 5. 13. Every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and ſuch as are in the Sea, heard I ſaying, Bleſſing, and Honour, and Glory, and Power be unto him that ſitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. As the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead is the fulleſt height of Dominion and Power; ſo (agreeably to our Notices of the Kingdom-eſtate) of Honour, Glory, Royalneſs and Illuſtriouſneſs, Nobilitation and Perfection Celeſtial and Divine; this therefore our Bl. Saviour is poſſeſs'd of by his exaltation to the right hand of God. Whence the Scripture uſually ſtileth it, His Glorification, His being crown'd with Glory and Honour, His being taken up into Glory, His entrance into Glory, that is, into the Glory of the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, whereby he is ennobled, unſerviliz'd, unvulgariz'd, unſordify'd in abſolute Perfection, his Imperial Perſon is abſolutely unvile and unvileable; and becauſe He is ſo glorify'd, and muſt be accordingly glorify'd by us, therefore He is deify'd in Eſtate and Condition. In his Kingdom-eſtate which is his Glory and Magnificence (according to that of the Prophet, Dan. 7. 13. There was given him Dominion, and Glory, and a Kingdom.) He alſo enjoyeth the fulleſt height of Beatitude, and all felicitative honourary Priviledges and Exemptions from Sin, Sorrow, Sufferings, Wants, Weakneſſes, Imperfections, Inſufficiency, from all Miſcreancy and Miſery, being Immortal, Impaſſible, Incorruptible as God is, and at the rate of God, and living in uninterrupted never-dying Joy, as God liveth. And becauſe He is ſo Beatify'd really, and legally muſt be Beatify'd by us (as the Apoſtle ſtileth Him bleſſed for ever, Rom. 9. 5.) therefore he is Deify'd in Eſtate and Condition. Much more might be added touching this Illuſtrious Argument, The Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead; but thus much may ſuffice for a competent Explication of this fourth Conſectary, which is ſelf-evident, That to be the Imperial Eſtate of the Godhead, is Divinity, Deity or Godhead of Eſtate.

1 Cor. 15. 25,28,47.
Apoc. 19. 16.
Act. 3. 15.
Heb. 1. 2. and 2. 8.
1 Cor. 15. 27.
Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11.
*Matth.*28. 18.
Col. 2. 10. and 1. 17.
Heb. 1. 3.
Col. 1. 16.
*Joh.*7. 39. and 12.16, 23. and 17. 5. and 13. 31.
Heb. 2. 9.
1 Tim. 3. 16.
Luk. 24. 26.

CHAP. III.

1. The Scripture-Theology (as well as the Pagan) ſuppoſeth, that God is King or Monarch of the Univerſe, but in a limitted ſenſe. Firſt, So far as to be the King of Kings. Secondly, So far as that the Deity is a Monarchy, not a Paganical Monarchic Polyarchy. Thirdly, So far as that his Dominion is Univerſal. Fourthly, So far as that he exerciſeth an Univerſal governing Providence. Fifthly, So far as to Rule the Univerſe by an irreſiſtible authoritative Power. Sixthly, So far as to be the Imperial Eſtate of God to the Univerſe of Rationals. 2. According to the Scripture-Theology (which is Diſſonant from the Pagan) God is not ſo the King or Monarch of the Univerſe, as to be the Mundane or Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. The firſt Illuſtration of this great Principle. The ſecond Illuſtration. The third Illuſtration. A fourth Illuſtration. A fifth Illuſtration with an account of the Fall of the evil Angels. A ſixth Illuſtration with ſeveral Explications of this Specific Comprehenſion, Theiſm of Religion and Condition.

I. THAT God is King or Monarch of the Univerſe, is matter of Agreement between the Scripture-Theology and the Pagan; not abſolutely, but with due diſtinction and limitation of Senſe. For according to the Scripture-Theology,

(1.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe, he is the Sovereign Potentate of all Potentates, the King of Kings. For the whole Univerſe is neceſſarily of Subject-condition to him, that is the great King, the King of all Kings, and the Lord of all Lords. In ſuch Senſe the Spaniards fanſie their King the Catholic King, as if all other Kings were his Vicegerents or Viceroys holding their Crowns from him in Fee. So the Pagans intituled their ſupreme Deity Jupiter omnipotens Regum Rex —— whence again it appeareth, that there is a great reſemblance between the Godhead and the Eſtate of ſecular Sovereign Princes; for the Eaſtern Monarchs of elder and later times have affected theſe Attributes of Grandeur (c) King of Kings, and the great King, as the Turkiſh Emperor is ſtiled the Grand Seignior. So Plutarch reporteth in the Life of Themiſtocles, that in his Addreſs to the King of Perſia he told him of the Dodonean Jupiter's Oracle, which bade him go πρὸς τὸν ὁμώνυμον τοῦ θεοῦ, to one that was of the ſame Name with God, which he interpreted of the Perſian King, becauſe He in common with Jove is intituled the great King.

(2.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe, as that the Deity is a Monarchy, not a Paganical Monarchic Polyarchy. (d) We muſt affirm in the firſt place, that no Being is equaliz'd to God, but there is one Ruler and Prince and King, to whom only it belongeth, to govern and adminiſter all things; for that ſaying, the Government of many is not good, let there be one to Govern, one King, is not more accommodate to Men and Cities than to God and the World; for one muſt neceſſarily be the Maker, Father and Lord of one. So Philo diſputeth for a Monarchy over the Univerſe, and ſo the Pagan Theologers uſually plead for a mundane Monarchy as well as Philo (who ſymbolizeth with them in their Polytheiſm;) for their multitude of Deities are ſubordinate, and they aſſert a ſupreme Deity over all, which is a Monarchy; but ſuch a Monarchy, which is more properly call'd a Monarchic Polyarchy. The Fathers call it a Polyarchy, and aſſert a Monarchy oppoſite thereto. (e)

Then let us laud the glorious Monarchy,
And let us loath of Gods a
Polyarchy,
Which ſeems to me no better than Anarchy.

True Religion reſerveth unto God all Divine-potentacy and God-propriety. (f) Omnem divinam poteſtatem neceſſe eſt in uno eſſe, cujus nutu & imperio regantur omnia. All Divine Potentacy muſt neceſſarily be in one, by whoſe beck and command all may be govern'd. In ſuch Senſe true Religion is rightly defin'd. (g) A Doctrine or Diſcipline touching the Monarchy of one God over all oppoſite to a Paganical Monarchic Polyarchy. But the Pagan Theiſts Hypotheſis would be much more groſly a Polyarchy, if they ſuppos'd the Univerſe to be conſtituted according to the Opinion of Xenophanes Colophonius, as it is repreſented in Euſebius. (h) He affirmeth touching the Gods, that there is no Rulerſhip amongſt them; for it is not a Religious thing, that any of the Gods ſhould have a Lord over them.

(3.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe, as that his Kingdom (or Dominion) is Univerſal. Some of the Atheiſtic Philoſophers called the Elements θεοὶ, Gods, becauſe they attributed to them Primacy, Independency and Supremacy of Condition. If the Univerſe of Creatures had not a Lord of them and over them, they would be of Condition Gods not Creatures; and if God was not the Lord, the King, the Potentate as to the Univerſe, he could not be God as to the Univerſe. We are to him (not as Gods, but) as the Creatures, his Creatures, of Condition Creatures, and he is to us as God, which denoteth his Relation of Dominion, which therefore he cannot alienate. (i) The Name God denoteth Relation (the Relation of the Lord) to thoſe things that are of ſervient Condition and of a created Nature. Being the ſupreme Proprietor of the Univerſe of Creatures, Dominant and Regnant over them, having Right to poſſeſs and diſpoſe of them, to command

(c) Selden Titles p. 27.

(d) Λεκτέον οὖν ἐκεῖνο πρῶτον, ὅτι οὐδὲν τῶν ὄντων ἰσότιμον ὑφέστηκε θεῷ· ἀλλ' ἔστιν εἷς ἄρχων ϗ ἡγεμὼν ϗ βασιλεὺς, ᾧ πρυτανεύειν ϗ διοικεῖν μόνῳ θέμις τὰ σύμπαντα· τὸ γὰρ οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη, εἷς κοίρανος ἔστω, Εἷς βασιλεὺς οὐκ ἐπὶ πόλεων ϗ ἀνθρώπων λέγοιτ' ἂν ἐν δίκῃ μᾶλλον, ἢ ἐπὶ κόσμου ϗ θεοῦ, ἑνὸς γὰρ ἕνα ποιητήν τε ϗ πατέρα πάλιν, ϗ δεσπότην ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι. Philo περὶ συγχυσ. διαλεκτ. p. 233. ed. Gr. Pariſ.

(e) Τῷ δὲ μονοκρατίην ἐριλάμπτα κυδαίνωμεν
Μηδὲ θεῶν ἀγορῇ τερπώμεθα τῇ πολυάρχῳ.
Ἶσον γὰρ πολύαρχον ἐμοὶ καὶ πάμπαν ἄναρχον.
Gr. Naz. Arcan. Car. 3. p. 165.

(f) Lactant. de Ira. c. 11.

(g) Περὶ μοναρχίας ἑνὸς τοῦ ἐπὶ πάντων θεοῦ διδασκαλία. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 1. c. 4.

(h) Ἀποφαίνεται δὲ ϗ περὶ θεῶν, ὡς οὐδεμιᾶς ἡγεμονίας ἐν αὐτοῖς οὔσης· οὐ γὰρ ὅσιον δεσπόζεσθαί τινα τῶν θεῶν. Pr. ev. l. 1. c. 8.

(i) Θεὸς μὲν, ὡς πρὸς τὰ δοῦλα ϗ τὰ γεννητὴν ἔχοντα τὴν οὐσίαν ἔχει τὴν σχέσιν. S. Cyr. Theſ. p. 39.

mand over, uſe and imploy them (according to his good Pleaſure,) he is juſtly denominated παμβασιλεὺς, King of all, παντοκράτωρ, Omni-imperial, and κύριος σαβαὼθ, the Lord of Hoſts. Which great Attribute muſt be underſtood in a two-fold Senſe: For ſometimes it ſignifieth in a Military Notion, as R. Bechai ſaith. (k) When God judgeth the Creatures, he is called Elohim: When he maketh War upon the impious, he is called God of Hoſts. The World of Creatures are unto God as ſeveral Hoſts or Armies (he hath his ſuperior and inferior Hoſts, as the Jews diſtinguiſh,) and when commanded they fight the Battels of this great Military Potentate in defence of his People and againſt his Enemies. The Tribes of Iſrael were more eſpecially his Hoſts, Exod. 6. 26. and 12. 41. And he was to them a Military King, the Lord-General of their Armies (1 Sam. 17. 45.) and fought their Battels for them (in the Wilderneſs eſpecially,) whence the pious Men of the Old Teſtament uſually celebrate his invincible Proweſs and Puiſſance in War. Exod. 15. 3. The Lord is a Man of War (a Military Hero,) the Lord is his Name. Pſal. 24. 7, 8. Who is the King of Glory? the Lord ſtrong and mighty, the Lord mighty in Battel, the Lord of Hoſts he is the King of Glory. But oftentimes in Scripture the Name of Hoſt or Hoſts hath no Relation at all to War or Military Affairs, it denoteth nothing more than an orderly Multitude or Multitudes of the Creatures; as Gen. 2. 1. The Heavens and the Earth were finiſh'd, and all the Hoſt of them. From whence it appeareth, that this great Name ſometimes ſignifieth nothing more, than that God is the Lord or Potentate over the orderly multitudes of the Univerſe of Creatures (which ſpeaketh his univerſal Empire;) in which Notion this Attribute is in Senſe coincident with παντοκράτωρ, All-Emperor, and accordingly the one is rendred by the other both in the Greek Interpreters of the Old Teſtament and the Writers of the New Teſtament. Compare Iſa. 6. 3. with Apoc. 4. 8.

(k) Hotting. Diſſ. p. 279.

o Deut. .19. Act. 7. 42. Iſa. 34. 4. and 0. 26. Pſal. 33. 6. and 03. 21. nd 148. .

(4.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe, as to exerciſe a governing univerſal Providence, ſuperintending the whole Univerſe and all its Affairs, and diſpoſing of them like a legitimate King. (l) For God is not a Tyrant exerciſing cruelty and violence, and doing the things of an hard deſpotical kind of Government: But a King whoſe Government is placid, and of the Legal kind, with Juſtice he adminiſtreth the Univerſe. His governing Providence is perfectly wiſe and good, and juſt and equal in all its proceedings; of a Parental Nature (conſerving all things as well as producing them into Being;) it is ſtupendious Manſuetude, Patience and Beneficence in Government, the unwearied Exerciſe of loving kindneſs, judgment and righteouſneſs in the Earth. Jer. 9. 24. In great part it is his care and vigilance for our Welfare; and becauſe God reigneth (or beareth rule) in the Exerciſe of his governing Providence, therefore blind chance doth not Reign, nor do fond and evil Men Reign as Sovereign Lords of Affairs: But the guidance and managery of them is in his hands, who is the faithful Friend and Patron of oppreſſed Innocence and Juſtice, the King of Heaven, all whoſe works are truth, and his ways judgment, and thoſe that walk in pride he is able to abaſe. He hath prepared his Throne for Judgment, and he ſhall judge the World in Righteouſneſs, he ſhall miniſter judgment to the People in Uprightneſs. The Lord alſo will be a Refuge for the oppreſſed, a Refuge in times of trouble. Which ſhould be matter of Joy and Exultation (as it is matter of general felicity) to the whole Earth, and matter of ſatisfaction to the Minds of good Men in all Events. —— Διὸς δ' ἐτελείετο βουλὴ, The Will and Counſel of God was fulfill'd.

(l) Ὀυ τύραννος γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς, μότητα ϗ βίαν, ϗ ὅσα δεσπόης ἀνημέρου ἀρχῆς ἔργα ἐπιτεδευκὼς, ἀλλὰ βασιλεὺς ἥερον ϗ νόμιμον ἀνημμένος ἡμονίαν, μετὰ δικαιοσύνης τὸν μπαντα οὐρανόν τε ϗ κόσμον ραβεύει. Philo ap. Euſeb. pr. v. l. 8. c. 14.

an. 4. 7. Pſal. 9. 7, 9. and 7. 1.

(5.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe, as to rule the Univerſe of Beings in a way of irreſiſtible authoritative Power (which is ſo far irreſiſtible, that it aſcertaineth the determined Event; for ſo he ruleth ſome of them conſtantly, and all of them occaſionally, even the unruly Wills and Affections of Men. The Frame of univerſal Nature and Fabrick of the viſible Univerſe was at firſt ſettled, and is ſince continu'd by the command of his irreſiſtible authoritative Power, whereby he hath ſettled Laws for the heavenly Bodies, and for this Terraqueous Globe, which he will not change, and which none other can change. For he commanded and they were created, he hath eſtabliſhed them for ever and ever: He hath made a Decree, which ſhall not paſs. But upon occaſion he rebuketh the Sea and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the Rivers. He ſhutteth the Heaven, and openeth the Windows of it, maketh the ſhadow of the Sun and the Waters of Jordan, to go backward, and Iron to ſwim, ſuſpendeth the operation of the fire, and turneth the Rock into a ſtanding Water. By the word of his irreſiſtible authoritative Power (in the ordinary courſe of Nature) he ſaith to the Snow, be thou on the Earth, likewiſe to the ſmall Rain and the great Rain of his ſtrength. He bindeth the ſweet influence of Pleiades, and looſeth the bands of Orion. He covereth the Heaven with Clouds, Fire and Hail, Snow and Vapour, and ſtormy Wind fulfil his Word. And (upon extraordinary occaſion) by the ſame irreſiſtible authoritative Power he divideth the Sea by a ſtrong Eaſt-wind, maketh uſe of the treaſures of the Hail (reſerved againſt the time of trouble, againſt the day of battel and war,) maketh the Inſects his great Army (and an invincible Army they are, when the Lord of Hoſts is their General,) reſtraineth the ravenous Nature of the Lions, and commandeth the Ravens to feed a Prophet. The Fates of Men and Kingdoms iſſue from his authoritative irreſiſtible Power, the Devil and his Agents are inchained, the Devices of Politicians fruſtrated, the Counſels of Princes are infatuated by it, and the heart of the King (how much more of meaner Perſons) is in the hand of the Lord, as the Rivers of Water, he turneth it whitherſoever he will. By an authoritative Power which aſcertaineth the Event (and is ſo far irreſiſtible) the Eyes of the Jews were blinded that crucified their Meſſiah; the heart of Pharaoh was hardened; Ahab was perſwaded to go up againſt Ramoth Gilead; ſome have ſtrong deluſions ſent them, that they ſhould believe a Lye; and of ten Kings the Holy Ghoſt ſaith; God hath put in their Hearts to fulfil his Will, and to agree, and give their Kingdom unto the beaſt, until the words of God ſhall be fulfilled. God preſideth over the Univerſe as an irreſiſtible authoritative Power, and nothing can come to paſs without his Commiſſion or Permiſſion; therefore he is a ſort of Univerſal Monarch ruling and over-ruling all.

Pſal. 148. 5, 6. Nahum 1. 4. Luk. 4. 25. Gen. 7. 11. Iſa. 38. 6. Pſal 114. 3. 2 King. 6. 6. Pſal. 114. 8. Dan. 3. 27. Job 37. 6. and 38. 31. Pſal. 147. 8. Pſal. 148. 8. Exod. 14 21. Job 38. 22, 23. Joel 2. 25. Dan. 6. 22. 1 King. 17. 4.

Prov. 21. 1.

Joh. 12. 39. Act. 4. 28. 1 King. 22. 19. 2 Theſſ. 2. 11. Apoc. 17. 17.

(6.) God is ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe of Rationals, as that he is in ſeveral Degrees an Imperial Eſtate, the Imperial Eſtate of God to this divided Univerſe; and conſequently he is in ſome degree the Sovereign Ruler and Governour of the Univerſe of Rationals by a Rule and Government proper to Rationals. For an Imperial Eſtate to Rationals is an Eſtate of Imperial Rule and Government proper to Rationals, who alone are capable of Moral Good and Evil, of diſcerning Right and Wrong, Juſt and Unjuſt, of Holineſs and Wickedneſs, of Duty and Sin (being intelligent free Agents, whereas meer Animals are but vital Engines, neceſſitated by Objects and their Inclinations, their Agency is not their free Self-determining Agency) of proper Rewards and Puniſhments (which reſpect Duty and Sin) of Law-obligation, of authoritative Doctrine or Diſcipline, of Rational Propoſals, of the Relation between Sovereign and Subject, Lord and Servant, of the State and Order of Empire, of a Settlement of right and due conſtitutive of a Body Politick, the Parts whereof are held together by the Bonds of Law and Juſtice, of Right and Due, and which is a Region of Law and Juſtice. In the uſual Senſe of Politicks therefore God can be no Imperial Eſtate to any Beings on this ſide Rationals: But if his Name (God) denoteth an Imperial Eſtate, the God of the Univerſe muſt neceſſarily be an Imperial Eſtate to the vaſt Univerſe of Rationals conſiſting of Angels and of Men good and bad. Theſe are not their own Maſters, they are under a ſuperior Authority; it belongeth to their rightful inviſible Sovereign Lord, to Rule and Reign over them. He is the Lord, the King, the great Imperial Potentate, and they are of Right and by obligation his Liege-Subjects and Servants. The State of his Liege-Subjects and Servants is the State that they ought to be in; the Life of his Liege-Subjects and Servants is the Life which they ought to live; and they owe unto him all the Dues and Rights of the Imperial Eſtate of God, which are the All of Piety, Religion and God-Service. As an Imperial Eſtate (Lord, King or Potentate) to the Univerſe of Rationals he is the Law-giver and Judge of all (of Right and in Fact,) of the Heavenly Citizens, of the Apoſtate Angels, and of Mankind both in reſpect of their Spiritual-eternal and their Secular Intereſts, in their ſingle and their ſocial Capacity. All Men have ſome Notices of his holy Law, which ſpeaketh him univerſal Law-giver. Mic. 6. 8. He hath ſhew'd thee, O Man, what is Good. As univerſal Judge he obſerveth and inſpecteth the Hearts and Works of all Men, and is righteous in his retributions. Prov. 24. 12. Doth not he that pondereth the Heart conſider it? and he that keepeth thy Soul doth not he know it? and ſhall not he render to every Man according to his Works? With reſpect to his Judgment of Life and Death both Temporal and Eternal his words in the Prophet may be underſtood, Ezek. 18. 4. All Souls are mine; they belong to his Juriſdiction, and therefore to his Diſpoſal. And becauſe his Judgment is univerſal, therefore the buſineſs of Piety is every Man's Work and of univerſal Concernment. Eccl. 12. 13. Fear God and keep his Commandments, for this is the whole of Man. For God ſhall bring every work into Judgment. Accordingly, in his Adminiſtration of things and Gubernation of Men God hath regard to the promoting Piety, and the deterring Men from Vice and Wickedneſs by Methods proper to Rationals; Documents, Chaſtiſements, bounteous Bleſſings, extraordinary Deliverances, and ſometimes formidable Judgments, that Men may hear and fear and may do no more any ſuch Wickedneſs. Thus far God is King or Monarch of the Univerſe of Rationals.

II. But God is not ſo far King or Monarch of all Rationals, as he is of his Liege-People, whom he is in Society with as King and People, and to whom he is oblig'd to do all the Offices of their King. Nor is he ſo far King or Monarch of the Univerſe of Rationals as to conſtitute it one City, Kingdom or Monarchic Empire. Nor is there any ſuch Republick as a mundane Monarchy or Kingdom of God. Nor is he ſo far the Sovereign Ruler and Governor of Mankind, as that this World is (in the uſual Senſe of Politicks) a Kingdom, whereof God is the King. Nor muſt we imagine, that God hath the Government of this World, ſo as to be an intrinſic Imperial Eſtate of it, or a Political Head of the Government; that its Form of Government is properly a Theocracy; that Mankind are now the Native Citizens and Deniſons of that Polity which is his Kingdom; that nothing is more requiſite, to conſtitute them the free Subjects of his Kingdom, but their Conſent to his Government in Nature and Providence; and that the Law of his Kingdom is nothing more than the Law of Nature commonly ſo called. All theſe are enormous Miſtakes touching the State of the Univerſe (deſtructive to Chriſtianity,) in oppoſition whereto we will lay down this following Principle touching the Holy Empire, whereby I mean the Church or Kingdom of God (in the largeſt Notion thereof) according to our Religion.

The Scripture-Theology ſuppoſeth, that God is ſo the King or Monarch of the Univerſe of Rationals, as to be only the Holy Empire's (Cities or Kingdoms) Imperial Eſtate, not the mundane or Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate; which is a principal matter of difference between the Scriptural and Pagan Theology. This great Principle deſerveth the Name, which the Jews have given to one of their Articles of Faith; it is Columna Sapientiæ, a Pillar of Wiſdom. But that this Pillar may be firmly eſtabliſh'd, the Senſe and Truth of it muſt have theſe following Illuſtrations.

The Firſt Illuſtration.

Firſt, This Principle may be illuſtrated from Human Imperial Eſtates. For every Imperial Eſtate amongſt Men is ſome Polity's Imperial Eſtate, as being of it, intrinſick to it, conſtitutive of it as the Regent Party thereof. Thus the Father or Maſter of a Family, the King of a City or Kingdom is that Polity's Imperial Eſtate. So the Perſian or Roman Emperor is that Empire's Imperial Eſtate, as being of it, intrinſick to it, conſtitutive of it as the Regent Party thereof. In like manner the holy Imperial Potentate (or the Godhead) is the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate. The holy People are his Domeſticks, Citizens, Societiſts, Collegues and Intercommoners as the Servient and Subject-party, of the ſame Family, Polity, City, and Kingdom that God is of as the Imperial Eſtate thereof. God and his People are conjoin'd into one Political Syſtem, one Family or Houſhold, Eph. 2. 19. and 3. 15. 2 Cor. 6. 18. one City or Corporation, Eph. 2. 19. Heb. 12. 22. one Kingdom of Saints, Jo. 3. 5. Apoc. 15. 3. one Holy-popular Common-wealth, Eph. 2. 12. one holy Catholick Church and Communion of Saints; for God ſtandeth at the head of that renown'd Syſtem and Republick, Heb. 12. 23. 1 Cor. 11. 3. Act. 22. 28. Nothing can be more evident and certain, than that the Imperial Eſtate of God is that Empire's Imperial Eſtate (peculiarly,) which conſiſteth of God's People; that the God-kind of Imperial Eſtate is the holy kind of Imperial Eſtate, and therefore is of kind the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate: As Chriſt being the Chriſtian kind of Imperial Eſtate is of kind the Chriſtian Empire's Imperial Eſtate. None but an holy Empire can be his kind of Empire. If he is of Right an Imperial Eſtate in the Univerſe of Rationals, it muſt be an Empire of holy People, that he hath Right to; and if he actually becometh the Imperial Eſtate of a Polity, that Polity thereby becometh an holy Polity. Therefore it is the holy Empire's (or the Holy-popular Empire's) Imperial Eſtate that God is. Thus far this great Principle appeareth to be unexceptionably clear and intelligible, and of demonſtrable Truth both from the Teſtimony of Scripture and the Nature of the thing. But becauſe it may ſeem a difficulty, to reconcile this Principle with God's being King or Monarch of the whole Univerſe (to which the holy Empire, as the Univerſe is now conſtituted, is not commenſurate,) therefore to make a ſufficient Illuſtration of it, we muſt have recourſe to ſuch an Imperial Eſtate, which is not meerly Secular, but Religious, of which Nature the Papacy is. The Pope is ſometimes intituled Vice Deus (Vice-God,) and he pretendeth, to be a Monarch of our Univerſe. His Holineſs (as being Vice-God) may have Dominion over all, Exerciſe an univerſal Providence, Govern our Univerſe of Beings by an irreſiſtible authoritative Power, may be an Imperial Eſtate to our Univerſe of Rationals in ſeveral degrees, yet ſuppoſing Popery to be the true Religion, and the Papal Church or Kingdom (of which he is the Imperial Eſtate) to be the holy Empire, his genuine Legitimate Idea muſt be this, the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate; and we muſt affirm, that the Pope is not the Mundane, but the holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate. So the Lord Chriſt is according to his true Idea the Chriſtian Empire's Imperial Eſtate, not the Mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate; and yet in a duely limited ſenſe he is King or Monarch of the whole Univerſe. In like manner during the time of the Judaical Typical Oeconomy God was of the ſame Polity with the Iſrael of God, he was their holy Polity's Imperial Eſtate, peculiarly and appropriately their God and King, and they were his Liege-people and Citizens (they alone * and no other People:) yet the holy Writers of the Old Teſtament celebrate the God of Iſrael as King or Monarch over the whole World, and King David ſaith, 1 Chron 29. 11. Thine is the Kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as Head above all. For becauſe of his Eminence above them as a ſupreme Power God is an Head to extraneous Rationals and their Polities (that are without his Church and Kingdom,) but an Extrinſic or Extraſocietive Head: whereas to the Citizens and Deniſons of his Celeſtial Common-wealth he is an intrinſic political Head of Government, as Imperial Eſtates amongſt Men are in their ſeveral Polities. God is in the State of Society with them, and they with him, as King and Subjects, as Lord and Servants, as Father and Children, as God and People. But God cannot be the Imperial Eſtate of any other Kingdom ſave only that of the People of God. If Chriſt be in his Kingdom-eſtate amongſt Men, there muſt be ſuch a Polity amongſt us as Chriſt's Kingdom: So if God be in his Kingdom-eſtate amongſt Men, there muſt be ſuch a Polity amongſt us as the Kingdom of God, of which he is the Imperial Eſtate.

* Amos 3. 2.

The Second Illuſtration.

This great Principle may be illuſtrated from the Atheiſm and Nonſenſe of the contrary Suppoſition, that God is the Mundane or Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. For the mundane Empire ſignifieth a Polity conſiſting of a ſupreme Deity as the Imperial Eſtate and of unholy mundane Mankind as the Subject-party: Which mundane Empire is the ſame with the Pagano-mundane Empire, the World of unholy mundane Mankind being the ſame with the Pagan World. Which World is ſuppos'd to be a Kingdom, whereof God is the King; and if ſo, God is this ſupreme Deity, the mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. The holy God therefore is of the World, of the profane and unholy, of the godleſs and ungodly World; he is of it as to his kind of Polity; he is of it as intrinſic to it, conſtitutive of it as the Regent Party and Imperial Eſtate thereof. Therefore the holy kind of Imperial Eſtate (God) is the Imperial Eſtate of an unholy kind of Polity, of an Empire that doth not own his Imperial Government (and conſequently not his Imperial Perſon,) that doth not acknowledge his holy Law and Religion, that himſelf doth not acknowledge but as an Alien and an Enemy, that is oppoſite and deſtructive to his Empire. Which is, as if we ſhould ſuppoſe, that Chriſt is the Imperial Eſtate of an Un-Chriſtian and Anti-Chriſtian Empire; or that the Pope is the Imperial Eſtate of a Proteſtant Empire. If God is the Imperial Eſtate of this mundane Empire, he is the Kingdom of Darkneſs's Imperial Eſtate; for ſuch is the World. And if the World is the Kingdom of God, then it is the City of God (a City whereof God is the King;) and conſequently the Heathen World and a worſer ſort of Beings are God's Citizens, as the Pagan Theologers ſuppoſe. For this was the Idea of the Univerſe of Rationals, which they had in their Minds; One City, Kingdom or Empire conſiſting of Pagan Gods, Demons and Men (orderly link'd together,) which mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate is the ſupreme Deity. From which Paganical Hypotheſis touching the State of the Univerſe it appeareth,

(1.) The Pagans have ſo conſtituted the Univerſe, as to ſhut out of Being the holy Empire, the Church and Kingdom of God. For if the Univerſe of Rationals is one City, Kingdom or Empire; if all Rationals are Fellow-Citizens, if they be orderly link'd together and united into one Political mundane Syſtem (as conſtitutive Parts and Members of one Empire;) if the Univerſe conſiſteth of Pagan Gods as the Imperant and Pagan Men as the Subject-party; if it be wholly a mundane kind of Monarchy (which is oppoſite to a Church of God-kind of Polity;) if all Men be of Right in Political Society with their Demons; if themſelves and the impure Rabble of their Deities be God's Citizens; if theſe Mundane-Syſtem Theiſts are Citizens πόλεως τῆς ἀνωτάτης, of the Supernal City; if all or any one of theſe Paganical Maxims be true, there can be no ſuch Monarchic Syſtem as Gods Church or Kingdom, which is a Polity Segregate from from the World, that God is appropriately of as the regent party thereof. The Church hath its Name from calling forth; that part of it which is on Earth, is cœtus evocatus, a Congregation called out of the World. But if the World be God's Society, Family, City and Kingdom, it will be Schiſm and Apoſtacy, to go forth out of the Mundane Syſtem into a Society ſegregate from the World. Nor is there any need, that Pagan Mankind ſhould remove their Quarters, to enjoy the ſtate of Society with God, if, as Celſus ſuppoſeth, (m) ὅγε μὴν θεὸς ἅπασι κοινὸς, God is common unto all: This Monarchic Head is link'd and combin'd with the Univerſe, and the Univerſe with this Head (n) as a General with an Army, and a Choragus with his Chorus; and the Platoniſts ſay of their Acroamatical Supreme Deity, (o) ὃ μηδὲν ἐστὶν ἐπέκεινα, καὶ ὃ πάντα ἐφίεται, θεὸς τοῦτο, The ſupreme of all, which all Beings deſire, This is God.

(m) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 392.

(n) Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 3. p. 4.

(o) Procl. Inſtit. Theol. c. 113.

(2.) They that ſhut out of Being any Kingdom or Empire, neceſſarily ſhut out of Being that Empire's Imperial Eſtate as it is ſuch; therefore the Pagans ſhut out of Being the Holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate as ſuch. And conſequently they ſhut out of Being the true kind of God, and God according to his true Idea; as if any do ſhut the Pope out of Being, as he is the Papal Empire's Imperial Eſtate, theſe ſhut out of Being the true kind of Pope, and the Pope according to his true Idea. The truth of this Conſequence may be further illuſtrated from the Papacy and the Papal Empire. For let us ſuppoſe, that the Saracens (whoſe Chaliphs are famouſly known) had no Notices of the Papal Empire, and that they could not know the Pope as the Imperial Eſtate of that Empire: yet (ſuppoſing his Holineſs Vice-God and Monarch of our Univerſe) this hindreth not, but they might have a general indeterminate Notion of a Vicarious Divine Potentate and Imperial Power over them, and they might have Notices of ſeveral Laws of the Papal Empire. In like manner; if the Pagans had no Notices of the Holy Empire, if they knew not God as that Empire's Imperial Eſtate, yet they had a general indeterminate Notion of a Divine Potentate and Imperial Power over them, and they had Notices alſo of ſeveral Laws of God's Empire. But ſuppoſe the Saracens having a general indeterminate Notion of a Vicarious Divine Potentate and Imperial Power over them, ſhould, inſtead of improving, make a perverſe uſe of their dark confus'd and imperfect Notion, if they ſhould ſet up a Saracenical Chaliph (or form an explicit Idea of ſuch a Chaliph) who is a Saracenical Empire's Imperial Eſtate; if they ſhould take ſuch a Chaliph for the Pope, and give him that Name (meaning thereby a Vicarious Divine Potentate and Imperial Power over them,) it is manifeſt, that by this mode of Theologizing they ſet up another kind of Pope from the true Pope, who is another and a contrary kind of Empire's Imperial Eſtate. In like manner, the Pagans made a perverſe uſe of their general indeterminate Notion of a Divine Potentate and Imperial Power over them, they form'd an explicit Idea of a Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate, which they called God; by which impure mode of Theologizing they ſet up another kind of God from the true God, who is of proper kind the Holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate. The Pagan Theiſts agree with us in the general and indeterminate Notion of God; but the God of our ſpecific and individual Determination, ſo far as He is ſuch, Their Principles ſhut out of Being, and not without horrendous Criminality. For let us ſuppoſe, that they could not know him to be the Holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate actually, as not knowing the Holy Empire; yet they might know Him, and had Notices of Him as of kind and quality ſuch. And if He is of kind and quality ſuch, He cannot be the Imperial Eſtate of a Polity, but that Polity muſt thereby become the Holy Empire and the Divine City; ſuch the Mundane Empire muſt be, if God is the Imperial Eſtate of it.

The Third Illuſtration.

Another Illuſtration of our great Principle is from the Scripture-notices of our Pagan ſtate. For (according to the Scriptures) the World of Heathen Mankind are not God's Citizens, but in the ſtate of Aliens from and Enemies unto God; therefore He is, and ought to be conſider'd as the Holy Empires, but not the Mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. Without this Hypotheſis it is impoſſible, that the Horrors of our Gentile State ſhould be underſtood, or that any tolerable Senſe ſhould be made of the Scripture-Names and Notices of the Heathen People; but upon this Hypotheſis they are all hugely plain and intelligible. For if God is peculiarly the Holy Empire's Imperial Eſtate, He muſt be conſider'd in conjunction with that Republick (as the Apoſtle plainly conſidereth Him in his Deſcription of our Gentile-ſtate, Epheſ. 2. 12, 19.) and the Univerſe of Rationals muſt neceſſarily be divided into thoſe two oppoſite parties, which S. Auſtin uſually confronteth, Civitas Dei & Cives hujus mundi, the City of God and the meer Mundane Citizens. Agreeably to which Diſtribution of Rationals Origen (who was not wanting in reſpect to the Gentile World, nor in the obſervation of his own Rule (p) to borrow of the Egyptians Materials, to adorn the Houſe of God) giveth this excellent account of the true Religioniſts. (q) They ſeparate and break themſelves off from thoſe that are aliens from God's Polity and Strangers to his Teſtaments, that their Societive Life may be that which is the Celeſtial Citizenſhip, coming to the Living God and the City of God, the Heavenly Jeruſalem, and to an innumerable company of Angels, and the Church of the firſt-born that are written in Heaven. If they were not ſuch Religious Separatiſts from the Gentile World, they muſt neceſſarily be Separatiſts of a criminal Character, (r) ἑαυτοὺς χωρίζοντες τῆς τοῦ ἐπὶ πᾶσι θεοῦ μερίδος, ſeparating themſelves from the Portion of the God over all. This therefore is the Scripture-notion of the Pagan State; they that are in it are the Aliens, extraneous as to God and the holy Polity which is his Empire, Strangers and Foreigners as to the City and Houſhold of God, alieni à Deo & ab Eccleſia, aliens from the Commonwealth of Iſrael (both the typical and true Iſrael,) Strangers uncircumciſed in Heart and uncircumciſed in Fleſh, Thoſe that are without, as the Jews call the Philoſophers Books חיצונים extraneous, and Gr. Naz. uſually when he citeth an Heathen Author, ſtileth him ἀλλότριος, τὶς τῶν ἀλλοτρίων, an Alien. So our Saviour repreſenteth the State of the Gentiles. If he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee as an Heathen Man, who is of Character an Alien, one that

(p) Phil cal. p.

(q) Ἀποχωρίζουσι καὶ ἀπορρηγνύουσιν ἑαυτοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν ἀλλοτρίων τῆς πολιτείας τοῦ θεοῦ, καὶ ξένων τῶν διαθηκῶν αὐτοῦ· ἵνα τὸ οὐρανοῖς πολίτευμα πολιτεύωνται, προσερχόμενοι θεῷ ζῶντι καὶ πόλει θεοῦ Ἱερουσαλὴμ ἐπουρανίῳ, καὶ μυριάσιν ἀγγέλων πανηγύρει, καὶ ἐκκλησίᾳ πρωτοτόκων ἀπογεγραμμένων ἐν οὐρανῷ. C. Celſ. l. 8. p. 382.

(r) Ibid. p. 383.

Heb. 11. 34.

Eph. 2.12, 19.

Ezek. 44.

Nehem. 13. 30.

1 Cor. 5. 13.

Matth. 18. 17.

that belongeth not to the Holy-popular Fraternity. Hence the Heathen are call'd The World, this World, the Nations of the world (אמות העולם as the Jews ſpeak) as being the Mundane-kind of People that are the Aliens from God, no People (no People of God) the Wild Olive, and thoſe that are far off; for they are as remote and diſtant from God as from the Holy Citizens, whom the Mundane-kind of People have not Alliance and Cognation with, but they are of another Region, and other Countrey-men. Becauſe they are out of the ſtate of Religion or Saintſhip (which is the ſtate of Society with God and his People) they are denominated the Sinners (the Unholy People) as their proper Character, and as contradiſtinct to the Holy People (who are בקדושה in Sanctity, as the Jews ſpeak) profanæ gentes, profani homines, (s) which ſtand oppos'd to conſecratus populus (the conſecrated People;) unclean Perſons repreſented by unclean Animals, Iſa. 52. 1. Act. 10. 12. as in S. Barnabas's Epiſtle (t) impious Men are ſaid to be denoted and ſignify'd by impure Animals, and the Jews ſay, that in their Law unclean Animals ſignifie אמות העולם the Nations of the World. Enemies they are to God, to true Religion and Piety as Aliens; for not to be faithful Friends to Piety, is to be Enemies; and it muſt be ſaid of Piety, as Tertullian ſaith of Truth, (u) Tot hoſtes ejus quot extranei, ſo many as are Aliens are its Enemies. But beſides, they are many ways hoſtile and inimical to God, being not only ἄνομοι, without Law, (1 Cor. 9. 21.) but profeſs'd Adverſaries to his Law, his Life, Service, Godhead, Government and Liege-people, (treading under foot the Holy City, Apoc. 11.2.) of the inimical Kind, Family and Kingdom, inimically affected and addicted, walking in the Vanity and Villainouſneſs of their Mind, abominably nefarious and flagitious both in their Religion and their Lives, which is to be inimical to God (to that Imperial Eſtate of Religion and Government that God is) at a ſuperlative rate; and therefore they are uſually call'd his Enemies (the hoſtile and inimical People) both in the Old and New Teſtament; Judg. 5. 31. Pſal. 68. 1. 1 Sam. 2. 10. Deut. 32. 27. Nah. 1. 2. Rom. 1. 30. Col. 1. 21. Another of their Names is ἄθεοι, (the atheous People) which may beſt be underſtood from what Hierocles ſaith of lapſed Souls; (w) they are become atheous, διὰ τὸ βουληθῆναι φυγεῖν ἀπὸ θεοῦ, ϗ ἀπομερίσαι αὐτοὺς τῆς τούτου ὁμιλίας, becauſe they would flee from God, and ſeparate themſelves from Society with him. So the Gentiles being ſeparated from God's Society became Athe-iſts, without God in the World; for God was not to them a God, they were not to him a People. And as S. Auſtin ſaith of ſuch an Angelical nature, which pretendeth to teach Religion to Mankind; (x) ſi colit Deum, non vult ſe coli pro Deo: ſi non colit Deum, miſera eſt, quia Deo privatur (if it worſhippeth God, it will not be worſhipped for God; if it doth not worſhip God, it is miſerable, becauſe depriv'd of God:) So the ſtate of us Gentiles was therefore extremely both Criminal and Calamitous, becauſe we were not God's Religioniſts (not calling upon his Name, nor being called by his Name,) depriv'd of God and of all the infinite Good which He is in himſelf and to his People, ſubjected to all the contrary Evils, Children of Wrath, and having no portion nor right in Jeruſalem (either the typical or the true,) there was no hope for us, that things would be well with us for ever.

Of this Horrendous Pagan-popular ſtate (the ſtate of Athe-iſts and Antithe-iſts) there are leſſer or greater degrees, as Men make more or leſs approaches to the Holy-popular ſtate, which muſt be diſtinguiſh'd into the viſible, the typical and the true. For multitudes are in a viſible holy-popular ſtate (being within the pale of the viſible Church) that are not the true and genuine People of God, nor his legitimate Citizens, whoſe ſtate muſt be call'd the true holy-popular ſtate: Nor was the State of the greateſt part of the Jews (during the times of their Commonwealth) any thing more than a typical holy-popular ſtate. But to this holy-popular ſtate (which muſt be thus variouſly diſtinguiſh'd) the σεβόμενοι, Gentile-worſhippers, or Proſelytes of the Gate (whom the Jews call the Pious of the Gentiles) made a great approach; for theſe Gentile-Converts (y) renounc'd the Gentile Idolatries, and betook themſelves to the worſhip of the God of Iſrael in hope of the Life to come; and the Jews ſay, they took upon them the obſervation of the Precepts of the Sons of Noah. Of this ſort of Proſelytes were Naaman, 2 King. 5. 17. the Centurion of Capernaum, Luk. 7. 5. the Eunuch of Ethiopia, Act. 8. 27. Cornelius, Act. 10. 2. Lydia, Act. 16. 14. the Father of Timothy, Act. 16. 1. the worſhipping Greeks, Act. 17. 4. and thoſe that fear'd God, Act. 13. 16. Theſe Religious Proſelytes (as they are call'd, Act. 13. 43.) although they ſtill retain'd the Name of Gentiles (becauſe not circumcis'd) and were by the Ceremonial Law unclean Perſons, yet they were imperfectly in the ſtate of God's People (the Holy-popular ſtate;) for they are ſtiled Religious worſhippers, ſuch as fear God, ſuch as joyn themſelves to the Lord, to ſerve him and to love the Name of the Lord, to be his Servants. As their place of Prayer was a part of God's Houſe (according to our Saviour's Argument;) ſo themſelves were a part of God's People. The ſtate of Job and his Friends (who probably liv'd before the time that the Commonwealth of Iſrael was founded) was doubtleſs the Holy-popular; but not the typical Holy-popular, for that was peculiar to Abraham's holy Line. The ſame account muſt be given of Eſau's and Iſhmael's Poſterity, and of Abraham's Off-ſpring by Keturah, if the worſhip of the true God was preſerv'd amongſt them, of which we have no Memoirs. To theſe may be added Melchizedek, Abimelech, Jethro, Nahor and Laban (as ſome ſuppoſe) Hiram, Nebuchadnezzar, and Nebuzaradon, of whom we are told, (z) that he was a Proſelyte of Juſtice, and therefore was emerg'd out of the Pagan-popular ſtate. The ſtate of the preſent rejectaneous Jews muſt be called Pagano-Judaical, and another of like nature Pagano-Muhammedan, and a third muſt be called Pagano-Chriſtian. None of theſe is the Heathen ſtate ſimply and without addition; but ſome of them are not better or more deſirable. The ſtate of the Ninevites is plainly diſtinct from that of meer Heathens (they were not ſo far alienated from God;) but it is not probable, that they emerg'd out of the Pagan State at the ſame rate with the σεβόμενοι, Gentile-worſhippers. The ſtate of the Heathen Philoſophers (ſo far as appeareth) was no other than that of meer Heathens (there is no reaſon, that any of them ſhould be reckon'd amongſt the σεβόμενοι, Gentile-worſhippers) only their Philoſophy diſtinguiſheth them from the Popular Pagans.

The Fourth Illuſtration.

Our great Principle may be further illuſtrated from the Native ſtate of Mankind (oppoſing Native to Factive;) for if God is the Mundane

1 Cor. 1. 21. and 5. 10. Joh. 16. 11. Luk. 12. 30. Deut. 32. 21. Rom. 11. 17. Eph. 2. 13.

Matth. 26. 45. Gal. 2. 15.

(s) Jul. Firmic. p. 60, 61.

(t) Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 1. c. 5. S. 2.

(u) Apol. c. 6.

Eph. 4. 17.

Eph. 2. 12.

(w) In aur. Car. p. 261.

(x) De C. D. l. 10. c. 14.

Jer. 10. 25. Iſa. 65. 1. Eph. 2. 3. Nehem. 2. 20. Eph. 2. 12.

(y) Mr. Mede on Act. 17. 4. Mark 11. 17. Dr. Hamm. on Matth. 23. 15. Act. 10. 4.

Iſa. 56. 6.

Mark 11. 17.

(z) Selden de J. Nat. & G. l. 2. c. 2.

Empire's Imperial Eſtate, Mankind will be natively the Citizens of the Kingdom of God. And if ſo, there can be no ſuch Religion as Judaiſm or Chriſtianity. If the Jews had their ſtate of Society with God as Men and as his Creatures, (a) all the Sons of Men הלבן והשוער White and Black would be equal (as themſelves argue) all being his Creatures as well as they. The Chriſtians pretend not, to have their ſtate of Society and Citizenſhip with God by their firſt birth, but by their new birth. (b) Non naſcimur, ſed renaſcimur Chriſtiani, we are not born, but new born Chriſtians. The Native State of Mankind is the State of Unregeneracy, which is the Heathen State, as being the State of the Carnal Mundane kind of People. For this the Religion of a new birth and the nature of the thing demonſtrateth, that Mankind are, not thoſe that are born after the Spirit, but thoſe that are born after the Fleſh (not the holy kind of People, but an exotick kind, as they are now originated,) that their Birth and their Nativity is of the Land of Canaan (the Pollutions and Foulneſſes of their Unregeneracy requiring a Laver, as Infants are waſh'd from the Pollutions of the Womb;) which native unregenerate ſtate of Mankind is the ſame with the Heathens, that are in the Uncircumciſion of the Fleſh, both in the literal and myſtical Senſe of the Phraſe. Their Gentiliſm was their Uncircumciſion, and that Uncircumciſion (myſtical) was their Unregeneracy; in which Native Heathen State the Holy Spirit is not in us, but the Fleſh is in us (with its Sence, Phancy, Appetites, Affections and Paſſions, that make up the Animal Senſitive Nature) which is a native prevalent Diſpoſition to that Maſs of Error, Sin and Ungodlineſs, which is carnality of Mind and Life, and which conſtituteth Mankind the carnal kind of Livers. Carnality of Mind and Life is the ſame with Heatheniſm of Mind and Life, and ſo far as carnality of Mind and Life is native to Man, Heatheniſm of Mind and Life is native to Man; accordingly, in Clemens's Notion a Believer is one (c) that emergeth ἐξ ἐθνῶν καὶ τῆς προτέρας βιότητος, from amongſt the Gentiles, and the former (Heathen) Life, which was the Life of our Unregeneracy. In which State we were not the Divine, but the Mundane-kind of People, agreeably to what the Pagan Theologers diſcourſe touching the Origination of Mankind. (d) Begin to live according to Nature (ſaith the Philoſophic Emperour) ἔσῃ ἄνθρωπος ἄξιος τοῦ γεννήσαντος κόσμου καὶ παύσῃ ξένος ὢν τῆς πατρίδος, thou ſhalt be a Man worthy of that World that generated thee, and ſhalt ceaſe to be a Stranger in thine own Country. (e) The World generateth Man (ſay the Stoicks) there is one Parent of all, namely, the World: Whether by ſplendid or ſordid Gradations the firſt original of every one's Stemm is carried up ſo high as this. And ſo the Hebrew Doctors call Mankind, (f) בני העולם Sons of the World: Unregenerate Mankind can reaſonably pretend no higher than to the Mundane-kind of Birth, the Mundane Family, and the Mundane Citizenſhip; their native Genius and Diſpoſition alſo is the Mundane (ut ex regionis ingenio ſit & cultoribus ejus ingenium, ſo that the Genius of the Inhabitants is a Native of the Region which they inhabit, as Apuleius ſaith of Demons;) for they are the worldly affected and addicted, the World's admirers and lovers, are mainly intent upon the Intereſts of it, walk after the courſe of it, and are the World's Partiſans and Adherents againſt God and Godlineſs. They are therefore originally and of kind and quality the Mundane People, oppoſite to another Family and Progeny; (g) and this twofold Progeny of diſtinct Generations ſheweth, that there are two Cities, one of the Earthborn (the Mundane-born,) the other of the Regenerate or Heaven-born. The one are Mundani generis, originally of the World and the Mundane-kind; the other are Divini generis (as Arnobius ſpeaketh) originally of God and the God-kind (holy kind) of People. Mankind therefore altogether in their Unregeneracy (which is their native ſtate) are of an oppoſite kind to the genuine Citizens of that holy Polity which is God's Kingdom (Civitas regeneratorum;) they are thoſe that are of the World, not thoſe that are of God; thoſe that are from beneath, not thoſe that are from above; The Children of this World, not the Children of God, nor of the Saint of God-kind and quality. They are therefore neceſſarily Aliens and extraneous to God's kind of Kingdom (which is the native ſtate of Mankind;) for the Kingdom of God muſt be enter'd into, and that by a new birth, Joh. 3. 5. It muſt be ſought, Matth. 6. 33. it muſt be receiv'd, Mark 10. 15. it muſt be taken, Matth. 11. 12. Mankind muſt be tranſlated into it, Col. 1. 13. endeniz'd and infranchis'd, Joh. 8. 36. for they are not free-born. The things of God's Kingdom (h) are not τὰ πάτρια, our Country-inſtitutes, but ξένα καὶ ἀλλότρια, things alien and foreign to us. The holy Life is not innate in us, nor doth the ſtate of Holineſs naturally appertain to us, nor are they diſpens'd in Nature and common Providence. Regenerate Believers come to the City of the living God, but are not natively Citizens or Deniſons thereof. From whence it followeth, that God is not the Mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate; that there is no entring into God's Kingdom but by coming out of the World of degenerate Mankind (who cannot be Citizens of his kind of Kingdom;) that God is ſo the King of the World, as not to be the King of the World (in different Senſe and Notion he is King of the World and not King;) that Heathen Mankind are ſo his Subjects, as not to be his Subjects (for they are not the Subjects of that holy Polity his Kingdom;) that God is their Father, but ſo as not to be their Father; that they are his Family, but ſo as not to be his Family (they are not his Domeſticks;) ſo Magiſtrates are God's Miniſters in one Senſe of the Phraſe, not in another; all Men bear his Image in one Senſe, not in another; all Men are taught of God (Iſa. 28. 26.) but ſo as not to be taught of God; and the old Moſaic Creation of Mankind is, and is not the Creation of God; for it is not the Creation that is of his kind and quality.

The Fifth Illuſtration.

Our great Principle may be illuſtrated from the Polity of Evil Angels according to Chriſtianity, which the Pagan Theology (although it maketh fair approaches towards it) doth not acknowledge. (i) The Chriſtians err moſt impiouſly (ſaith Celſus) their ſuperlatively great Ignorance having its riſe from a miſtake of the Divine Enigms; They make a certain Adverſary to God, whom they call the Devil,

(a) Coſri p. 19, 261. ed. Buxt.

(b) S. Hieron. Ep. 53.

Gal. 4. 29. Ezek. 16. 3, 4, 5, 6.

Col. 2. 13.

Eph. 2. 2, 3. and 4. 17.

(c) Strom. l. 2. p. m. 282.

(d) M. Ant. l. 12. S. 1.

(e) Unus omnium parens mundus eſt: ſive per ſplendidos, ſive per ſordidos gradus, ad hunc prima cujuſque origo perducitur. Sen. de Ben. l. 3. c. 28. Mundus generat hominem. V. Lactant. l. 2. c. 6.

(f) Hotting. de Jur. Hebr. Lex 62 p. 71.

(g) Iſta utraque progenies diſtinctis generationibus duas inſinuat Civitates, unam terrigenarum, alteram regeneratorum. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 15. c. 2

Joh. 3. 4. Joh. 8. 23. Luk. 16. 8. Joh. 15. 19.

(h) Orig. Celſ. l. 1. p. 48.

Heb. 12. 22.

(e) Σφάλλονται δὲ ἀσεβέστατα ἄττα καὶ περὶ τήνδε τὴν μεγίστην ἄγνοιαν ὁμοίως ἀπὸ θείων αἰνιγμάτων πεπλανημένην ποιοῦντες τῷ Θεῷ ἐναντίον τινὰ διάβολόν τε καὶ γλώττῃ Ἑβραΐδι Σατανᾶν ὀνομάζοντες τὸν αὐτὸν. Orig. C. Celſ. l. 6. p. 303. & vid. l. 2. p. 89.

vil, and in the Hebrew Tongue Satan. With reſpect to the Heathen World (and to the Jews alſo,) in great degree the Devils are rightly called by Arnobius (k) ante Chriſtum incogniti, & ab ſolo ſciente detecti, unknown before Chriſt, and detected by him that only knew them. For as in Temptations, if Satan ſhould diſcover himſelf, and viſibly appear, ſuch a diſcovery would ſpoil his Game, and he would not invite, but affright the tempted: So the knowledge of Satan's Polity in the Pagan World muſt neceſſarily have unpaganiz'd it, and ruined its Religion and Theopolity. The Hypotheſis alſo of a Diabolical Empire is inconſiſtent with the grand Maxims of the Pagan Theology; that the Univerſe of Rationals is of one piece, one City, Polity or Republick; that the viſible Univerſe is one magnificent Houſe or Temple; that there ought to be no diviſion from the one Corporation of Rationals; that the World is the Kingdom of God (in the ſenſe of a Polity;) that all things are held together by the Bond of Love: Whereas, if there be a Diabolical as well as a Divine Empire, there are two Kingdoms (of Light and Darkneſs) oppoſite to each other, and the Univerſe is in a State of War. But although the Pagan Theologers do not acknowledge the Imperial Polity of Devils or Satanians, yet themſelves, their Theology and Religion are an uncontrollable Evidence of its Exiſtence. For beſides, that the Theory of it is unexceptionably Rational according to the Pagan Theologers Ratiocinations, that there are in the Univerſe (viſible and inviſible) the contrarieties of Light and Darkneſs (of the two famous Sects amongſt the Chaldeans, the Orcheni and Borſippeni, the former was addicted to the Worſhip of the Principle of Light, the latter worſhipp'd the Principle of Darkneſs;) that in this World of Evils there muſt be a Principle of Evil; and that this lower Air (as all the Regions of the Univerſe) is full of Inhabitants: I ſay, beſides theſe Ratiocinations, (which plainly infer a Polity of Satanians according to the Scriptures) the Pagan World is an uncontrollable demonſtration of the Exiſtence of a Polity of Satanians, who being Diabolici generis, Angelical Natures of the Devil-kind, can be no Citizens of God's Kingdom; and conſequently God cannot be the mundane Empires Imperial Eſtate. (l) Illud verò ubi dicitur Deus Deorum, non poteſt intelligi Deus dæmoniorum, when the Divine Majeſty is ſtiled God of Gods, the Phraſe cannot ſignifie, that he is God of Devils. For the Potentates of the Dark Kingdom belong not to the Scale of Potentates ſupreme and ſubordinate; and becauſe they are of the Dark Kingdom, they are of Godleſs Condition, nor doth God Reign over them otherwiſe than as Enemies, agreeably to their Name Diabolus, which ſome of the learn'd ſuppoſe, (m) to be deriv'd from διαβάλλεσθαι, as it ſignifieth (in ſome Authors) in the Notion of ἀπεχθάνεσθαι, and therefore denoteth, not a falſe Accuſer or Caluminator, but an Enemy or Inimical one, as the Devil's Hebrew Name Satan ſignifieth ὁ ἐχθρὸς, the Enemy. The Devil and his Angels cannot be God's Citizens becauſe of their criminal Condition, nor can they be ſuch upon account of their Penal Condition, being totally and finally exil'd from God's Kingdom, as appeareth from the Scripture-Notices of their Fall. Jude 6. The Angels which kept not their firſt Eſtate, but left their own Habitation, he hath reſerved in everlaſting Chains under darkneſs, unto the judgment of the great day. 2 Pet. 2. 4. God ſpared not the Angels that ſinn'd, but caſt them down to Hell, and delivered them into Chains of darkneſs, to be reſerved unto Judgment. Having compar'd theſe Scripture-notices of the Fall of Angels with the Notices which we have of their Empire, I am of Opinion, that this is the true account of their Lapſe; Satan (together with Myriads of his accomplices) totally relinquiſh'd God, Sanctity and the Kingdom of God, for that mundane Empire, Godhead, unſubject Domination and unbounded ſenſual Liberty, which he hath ſince enjoy'd in this lower World. To juſtifie this account of the Fall of Angels,

(1.) It is obſervable, that all accounts of the Devil's Sin (whereby he fell,) that are on this ſide Apoſtacy, are manifeſtly inſufficient. Such as thoſe of the Ancients, (n) that he fell by envying Man, or by ſwelling with a conceit of his own Power and Excellency, or by inordinate Self-admiration and Self-complacence, or by an Arrogance and Self-attribution (making himſelf the Author of the Goods that he enjoy'd, and as ſome ſay, of his own Being,) or by Luciferian ambition affecting to be equal unto God, and as ſome ſay, greater than he; or by aſſuming the Godhead to himſelf, ſaying, that he was God, and the Angels in Heaven muſt Worſhip him; or by affecting an extravagant Liberty and Domination, to be above all and ſubject to none. All theſe accounts (which yet are not without good Notices) are inſufficient, becauſe the Devil's Sin and Fall can be nothing leſs than a grand total Revolt from God's holy and happy Government, a total and final Apoſtaſy from his Kingdom. Whence the Rabbins call the Devil מָרוּד the Apoſtate. (o) J. Mart. thinketh, that his Name Satanas ſignifieth ἀποστάτης, the Apoſtate. Himſelf and his Angels are uſually intituled Angeli deſertores, the Apoſtate Angels, and the holy Text ſaith, he abode not in the Truth, Joh. 8. 44. They left their own Habitation. Jude 6.

(2.) All thoſe accounts of the Devil's Sin and Fall are manifeſtly inſufficient, which are on this ſide the Deſign of Empire and Dominion. Such are thoſe of the Ancients (but now mention'd,) that the Devil's Sin was Envy, or Self-admiration, or Self-attribution; and ſuch is the accouut of a late Philoſopher and Divine, (p) that the Fall of Angels was their giving up themſelves to the Animal Life and forſaking the Divine (which is ſuppos'd to have happen'd through a Luxuriant growth of the plaſtick Life, by a fond careleſneſs and indulgence thereto:) theſe Accounts are not ſufficient, becauſe there is nothing in them, that looketh like a deſign of Empire and Dominion. Had his Sin been nothing elſe but an addicting himſelf to a ſenſual Life, or a priding himſelf in his own conceit, he might have enjoy'd his Fool's Paradice alone, or ſinn'd with a few ſelect Companions; at leaſt, a world of Accomplices was not requiſite to the Devil's ſenſualizing Trade; nor is it probable, that he ſeduc'd them, to conſpire with him in a vain Imagination; nor is it reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that Parties were made, Seditions rais'd, Governments over-turn'd, and new Monarchies erected from any ſuch Principles: But becauſe the Devil ſeduc'd Myriads of Angels, to be his Partiſans, and to ſubſerve his Deſign, thence it plainly appeareth, that the deſign of his Apoſtaſy and Revolt from God's Kingdom, was Kingdom, Empire and Dominion. Such a deſign he hath accompliſh'd (he hath erected a mighty Empire in the Univerſe,)

(k) Adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 53.

l) S. Aug. C. D. l. c. 23.

m) Dr. eric. Casaubon. ot. in E. Ench. 84. oto non acet peccatum Angelorum iſſe ſuperbiam: edo, ob ſolum, d D. nme acuerat. ves in S. g. de D. l. 12. 6.

(n) Petav. T. 3. l. 3. c. 2.

(o) Dial. cum Tryph. p. 331.

(p) D. H. More Myſt. of Godlin. l. 2. c. 4.

niverſe,) therefore ſuch a deſign was his Original Intention. Such a deſign is uſual in all Kingdoms and Common-wealths, and therefore it is not unlikely, to have happen'd in God's Kingdom. Such a Deſign was Capital, High-Treaſon againſt his Sovereign Lord, his Crown and Dignity, and therefore the more likely to have been the Devil's Sin. Such is the Devil's principal Deſign at this day (to uphold and enlarge his Kingdom,) therefore it was originally his principal Deſign. And how doth God countermine and baffle the Devil's Deſign, but by erecting an oppoſite Empire, the Kingdom of his dear Son? Col. 1. 13. (q) Dominandi Cupido cunctis affectibus flagrantior eſt, the conceit and deſire of Empire and Dominion is tranſporting to Mankind, nothing ſo much; they will ſwim through a Sea of Blood for a Crown, and account nothing unlawful for Dominion. Therefore the conceit or Phantaſm of Empire and Dominion in a ſublime Angelical Nature might excite a vigorous appetite after it, an high Opinion and Valuation of it, and then the Mind or Will comply'd, and form'd a deſign to attain it, ſo Sin entred into the Angelical World.

(q) Tacit. Annal. 15.

(3.) The Kingdom or Empire, which the Devil deſign'd at his Revolt, was in appearance poſſible or feaſible, otherwiſe he could not deſire and deſign it. Being a little finite Creature (although a mighty Angel) he could not deſign to be greater than God, or in all reſpects equal to the Almighty; for he could not be ignorant, that this was impoſſible: Nor could be he ignorant, that it is impoſſible, to erect a Diabolical Empire in Heaven, and therefore he never deſign'd it. For as Alexander told Darius, one World cannot have two Suns (nor one Empire two Emperors;) if therefore Satan hath an Empire, it muſt not be in the heavenly Regions, but in another World. He laid his Plot, and began his Revolt in Heaven, but he knew well enough, that there could be no abiding for him there; for as the Jews ſay, an impure Perſon may not ingredi caſtra Divinæ Majeſtatis (enter the Tents of the Divine Majeſty,) but muſt be baniſh'd from thoſe Divine Territories. Heaven could not be Heaven, if a Diabolical Empire was erected there; for the Place, State, Society, Imployments and Enjoyments of Heaven are diametrically oppoſite thereto. (r) It is impoſſible, that Evils ſhould be wholly deſtroy'd, or that they ſhould exiſt among the Gods (the Celeſtials:) but they muſt neceſſarily exiſt about this Terreſtrial place and this Mortal Nature, ſay the Platoniſts.

(r) Οὐδὲ ἀπολέσαι τὰ κακὰ δυνατὸν, οὔτε ἐν θεοῖς εἶναι, περὶ δὲ τόνδε τὸν τόπον, καὶ θνητὴν φύσιν περιπολεῖν ἐξ ἀνάγκης. Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 257.

(4.) All accounts of the Devil's Sin and Fall are inſufficient, which are on this ſide the Deſign of a Godhead, or ſuch an Imperial Eſtate as being a God importeth. For it cannot be ſuppoſed, that his deſign of a mundane Empire was nothing more than a ſubjecting the World unto himſelf in civil Society, ſuch an Empire is incompetible to an Angelical Nature, and the deſign of it is on this ſide a total Apoſtaſy from God. He deſign'd for himſelf a Creature-tranſcendent Eſtate, to erect a Kingdom oppoſite unto God's, and that the World ſhould be his Religioniſts. For it appeareth from Hiſtory (both ſacred and profane,) that the Devils extremely affect the Divine Honours, (whence they are called by Tatianus (s) λησαὶ θεότητος, Thieves of Deity,) and the King of the Children of Pride cannot be thought leſs ambitious of them (in his deſign of Empire) than Popes and Secular Princes uſually are. His ambition could not be leſs than Luciferian (as the Fathers rightly ſuppoſe,) I will be like the moſt High. Iſa. 14. 14.

(s) Or. c. Græc p. 151.

(t) ——— μεγάλοιο θεοῦ βασιληΐδα τιμὴν
Ἤλπιζο. He hop'd for the Regial Honour of the great God.

(t) Gr. Naz. Arcan. Car. 6.

He tempted our firſt Parents with the Hopes of a Godhead; which is an Indication, that this was his own Temptation; therefore he deſign'd for himſelf an higher State than is competible to Man or Angel or any other Creature. He hath actually attain'd to a Godhead, and enjoy'd it ſome thouſands of Years; therefore he originally deſign'd it; for it is not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that he hath attain'd to ſuch ſublimity of Condition, as he never deſign'd. One of his Names in Scripture, the Prince of this World, inferreth, that his Original Deſign was a mundane Empire. ——— (u) Πλεόνεσσι κακοῖσιν ἔχων πόθον ἐμβασιλεύειν, having a deſire of Empire over Multitudes of the wicked. Another of his Names in Scripture, the God of this World, inferreth, that his Orignal Deſign was ſuch an Imperial Eſtate, which is a mundane Godhead. As Porphyry ſaith of his evil Demons. (w) They deſire to be Gods, and their Preſidentiary Power, to be thought the greateſt God.

(u) Naz. ſupr.

(w) Βούλονται γὰρ εἶναι θεοί, καὶ ἡ προεστῶσα αὐτῶν δύναμις δοκεῖν θεὸς εἶναι ὁ μέγιστος. De Abſt. l. 2. S. 42.

(5.) It is obſervable, that there are but two primary Objects of fleſhly Concupiſcence in Man (which is the ſource of all Diabolical Practices;) the one is the matter of Honour, the other is the matter of ſenſual Pleaſure; for Riches are not ordinarily deſir'd for themſelves, but in ſubſerviency to Honour and Pleaſure. Whence we may reaſonably infer, that the Devil's Sin was an enormous Appetite after unſubject Domination and an unbounded ſenſual Liberty out of God's Kingdom. Not that he ſuppos'd it poſſible, to exempt himſelf from all Subjection to omnipotent Power (for in his higheſt Pretenſions to a mundane Sovereignty, to diſpoſe of all the Kingdoms of the World, he yet acknowledgeth his Dependence, in ſaying, They are deliver'd to him, Luk. 4. 6.) But he preferred the mundane Empire which he hath obtain'd (and which is a Revolt from under God's holy Government) before the State of a Subject in God's heavenly Kingdom, which he relinquiſhed and abandon'd. The State of a Subject in God's Kingdom is inconſiſtent with that unbounded ſenſual Liberty which Mankind are too prone to affect, to walk in the way of their Heart and in the ſight of their Eyes, without any reſtraint upon them from Law, Government, or a Maſter over them; a Faculty to live as they pleaſe, they are apt to think a deſireable Liberty.

Eccl. 11. 9.

Ἔχω λογισμὸν πᾶν ὃ βόλομαι ποιεῖν,
Ναὶ βασιλικόν γε. I am thinking to do
Whatever I liſt, that is Royal.

It is not unuſual with Secular Princes, to affect ſuch abſoluteneſs and unlimitedneſs of Agency as Baſſianus expreſs'd; quod libet, licet. He reſolv'd, to do what he pleas'd. To ſuch an extravagant appetite of Liberty it is reaſonable, to impute the Fall of Angels (called by Tatianus ἄσωτοι καὶ λίχνοι, luxurious and addicted ed to delicacies;) they ſhook off the Yoke of the holy Government, that they might be at liberty to ſwagger and domineer at Pleaſure, to rant, revel and ſenſualize (ſo far as their Nature is capable) in another World.

(6.) It is obſervable, that the Apoſtate Angels by their Apoſtaſy choſe their Proſcription from Heaven and excommunication from the Church Triumphant: As Apoſtates from Chriſtianity, and the impure ſhole of Gnoſticks who ſeparated themſelves (Jude 19.) choſe their Baniſhment and Excommunation from the Church Militant. Or (to illuſtrate this matter by an Inſtance nearer Home) as we Proteſtants have choſen a Proſcription and Excommunication from the Church of Rome. For having revolted from under the Pope's Government, we have choſen a Baniſhment and Excommunication from that Church materially, which is neceſſarily follow'd by a formal Papal Sentence of Excommunication (which cutteth us off from all Memberſhip, Priviledges and Right of Communion in that Church, anathematizeth and damneth us,) ſo that in the true ſtating of things & fugimus, & fugamur, we both go out and are caſt out. In the ſame ſenſe we may juſtly ſay of the Apoſtate Angels, that God caſt them out of Heaven (though no Scripture ſaith ſo;) for they are excommunicated with the greateſt Excommunication (Anathema Maranatha,) which is a total and final Exciſion, nothing leſs than final Reprobation, a devoting them irreverſibly to deſtruction, a cutting them off from all Hope and Comfort. But although in ſome ſenſe God caſt the Apoſtate Angels out of Heaven, this hindreth not, but that it was their own Choice, they formally caſt themſelves out; for their Apoſtaſy is the ſame thing with that part of their Puniſhment pœna damni, the loſs of God and Heaven. Accordingly the Scripture ſaith; they kept not their firſt Eſtate, but left their own Habitation.

Ipſam cauſam naturæ tranſgredientium neque Scriptura aliqua retulit, nec Apoſtolus dicit, nec Dominus docuit. Iren. adv. Hær. l. 2. c. 49.

(7.) It is obſervable, that this lower World and caliginous Air (wherein the Apoſtate Angels have their abode,) is both Satans Kingdom and his Priſon. (x) Regnum ejus quod putas, Carcer ejus eſt. That which thou thinkeſt his Kingdom, (and which himſelf thinketh ſo,) is his Priſon or place of * Confinement. Such is God's Ordination, and ſuch is the Nature of things, that Sin in many reſpects is its own Puniſhment, and the Sinner's Paradiſe is his Purgatory. As it is his Paradiſe, it is his own criminal Election: As it is his Purgatory, it is God's penal infliction. The ſame account muſt be given of Satan's Kingdom and Priſon. For as this lower World is Satan's Kingdom, it is his own criminal Election: As it is his Priſon, it is God's penal infliction.

(x) S. Aug. in Pſal. 103.

* The World is as well the Devil's Field, as the Devil's Gaol. The Tryals of ſeveral Witches in New-England. p. 32.

(8.) The learned are not well agreed touching the Tranſlation of thoſe places of Scripture (before cited) which treat of the Fall of Angels. Jude 6. 2 Pet. 2. 4. The word ταρταρώσας, occurreth not in Scripture ſave only in this one place of S. Peter: If we expound it according to its uſe in Heathen Authors, it muſt ſignifie having condemn'd to Tartarus, or caſt into Tartarus, or impriſon'd in Tartarus. * Which Tartarus (or Hell) of the Apoſtate Angels may either denote their preſent or their future place of abode. If it denoteth their preſent place of abode, it ſignifieth this lower caliginous Air. If it denoteth their future place of abode, it ſignifieth the Lake or Region of Fire and Brimſtone, which is deſign'd for them; and accordingly ſome would have the word ταρταρώσας, rendred, cùm ad Tartari ſupplicia damnaſſet, when he had condemn'd them to the puniſhment of Tartarus, meaning by Tartarus the great Hell of Fire and Brimſtone. In like manner σειραῖς ζόφου, Chains of darkneſs in S. Peter, and δεσμοῖς ἀϊδίοις, everlaſting Chains in S. Jude, may have reſpect either to their preſent or future State. If they reſpect their preſent State, they are Dativus inſtrumenti, and the holy Apoſtles mean (as our Tranſlation rendreth their words,) that the Apoſtate Angels are already deliver'd into Chains of darkneſs; and are now reſerv'd in everlaſting Chains under darkneſs; for that infernal Crew are fetter'd and inchain'd in this caliginous Air, which is the place of their Impriſonment. But if theſe words reſpect their future State, then they are Dativus Acquiſitionis or Finis, σειραῖς is put for εἰς σειρὰς, and δεσμοῖς, for εἰς δεσμὺς, the one being govern'd of τετηρημένυς, reſerved, and the other of τετήρηκεν, he hath reſerved; and ſo the Apoſtles ſenſe is, catenis caliginis ſervandos tradidit ad Diem Judicii, he deliver'd them to be kept for Chains of darkneſs at the Day of Judgment. This various rendring and ſenſing the Apoſtle's words concerneth not at all our Hypotheſis, which is fairly compliant with any tolerable Senſe or Tranſlation of theſe Texts of Scripture. For that great Excommunication, which (as we ſuppoſe) ſhutteth the Apoſtate Angels out of Heaven, neceſſarily condemneth them to Tartarus, or caſteth them into Tartarus; and becauſe Tartarus is downwards, therefore we may retain our Engliſh Tranſlation of the word ταρταρώσας, that God caſt them down to Hell. According to our Hypotheſis they are deſign'd and reſerved for Chains of darkneſs, and in the mean time they are in a place and ſtate of Impriſonment: But as the Stoicks call a great Eſtate in this World a commodious Captivity, ſo the Apoſtate Angels account their Priſon their Kingdom, and have choſen it for their Empire. The Current of things running thus clear from the beginning to the end, it ſeemeth, that no Theory in Philoſophy or Religion can be more unexceptionably clear and intelligible than this Theory of the Fall of Angels. For as to the change of their Bodies or Vehicles (of which I have ſaid nothing,) it is not hard, to ſalve that Phænomenon from the known ſaying of Minucius Felix touching Demons. (y) Simplicitatem ſubſtantiæ ſuæ, onuſti & immerſi vitiis, perdiderunt. Being laden with and immers'd in vicioſity, they loſt the ſimplicity of their Subſtance.

* Τὸ δὲ βάθος τὸ πολλὸν τοῦ ἀέρος τάρταρος καλεῖται. Lucian. περὶ ἀστρολογίας.

(y) p. 242. V. Ficin. Com. in Plotin. p. 198.

The Sixth Illuſtration.

Our great Principle may have a further and a great Illuſtration from the ſpecific comprehenſion of Religion and Condition that God is of; for God is appropriately the Imperial Eſtate of ſuch a ſpecific comprehenſion, which is Theiſm of Religion and Condition; and therefore he cannot be the mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. This mode of contemplating things by way of ſpecific Comprehenſion is wanting in our Books of Logick, but is uſual in common Language and Converſation, and may be illuſtrated from Grammar, Philoſophy and Religion. From Grammar the Senſe of our words may be underſtood; for as a Party of Jews who made uſe of the Greek Tongue, were called Ἑλληνισταί, Helleniſts or Greciſts, they were ſaid Ἑλληνίζειν, to Hellenize or Grecize in Language, and the comprehenſion of their peculiarities or proper kind of Language is called Ἑλληνισμὸς, Helleniſm or or Greciſm of Language: So a party of Religioniſts muſt be ſaid, to Theize in Religion and Condition, and the comprehenſion of their Peculiarities or proper kind of Religionizing, muſt be called Theiſm of Religion and Condition, and themſelves the Theiſts of Religion and Condition, which are diſtinct from meer Theiſts, or Theiſts ſimply and without addition ſo called, who have that Name only becauſe they hold a Deity and a Religion. In Philoſophy there are ſeveral ſpecific Comprehenſions; Platoniſm, Stoiciſm, Carteſianiſm, and ſuch more. Theiſm of Religion and Condition anſwereth to Platoniſm, the Theiſts of Religion and Condition to Platoniſts, and Theizing to Platonizing. In Religion alſo we diſtinguiſh ſeveral ſpecific Comprehenſions; ſome minuter, as Sadduciſm, Arianiſm, Lutheraniſm, Calviniſm: Some larger, as Judaiſm, Paganiſm, Muhammediſm, Papiſm, Chriſtianiſm, which is Theiſm of Religion; (genuin) Chriſtianiſts are Theiſts in Religion and Condition, and Chriſtianizing (ſuch as conſtituteth a genuin Chriſtian) is Theizing. Theſe are general Notices of this ſpecific Comprehenſion, but notwithſtanding theſe it will be ſhaded with obſcurity without theſe following Explications.

(1.) Theiſm of Religion muſt be underſtood, to ſignifie Religion that is according to God, which conſorteth and ſymbolizeth with him (without limitation of Senſe,) the proper matters of it, what is of Kind and Quality ſuch, and the comprehenſion thereof. This may be illuſtrated from the ſignification of Iſlamiſm amongſt the Muhammedans. (z) The Angel Gabriel in the Habit of an Arabian is ſaid to have ask'd Muhammed, Quid eſt Iſlamiſmus? What is Iſlamiſm? To which Muhammed anſwer'd; to confeſs, that there is no God but that God, and that I am the Apoſtle of God, and to obſerve the appointed times of Prayers, and to give Alms, and to Faſt the Month Ramadan, and if you can conveniently, to go on Pilgrimage to the Temple at Mecca for Religion ſake. Theſe are the principal and proper matters of Iſlamiſm, what is of Kind and Quality ſuch, and the comprehenſion of them is called by that Name. So by Judaiſm we underſtand the proper matters of it, what is of Kind and Quality ſuch (the old Ceremonioufneſs and Rituality,) when we complain with Lud. Vives of reductus in Eccleſiam Judaiſmus, that Judaiſm is reduc'd into the Church. So when the Father ſaith a) that ὁ θεῖος λόγος, the Divine Word or Doctrine produceth πράξεις θείας, Divine Practices, (b) and teacheth τὴν θείαν ἀρετὴν, the Divine Virtue; by theſe Divine Practices and this Divine Virtue we are to underſtand Theiſm of Religion, the proper matters of God's kind of Religion, which may be called Divinity (or Sanctity) of Religion.

(z) Pocock. Spec. p. 52, 53.

(a) J. Mart. paræn. p. 40.

(b) Idem, Apol. 1. p. 42.

(2.) Theiſm of Religion muſt be underſtood to ſignifie (in the ſame Latitude with other abſtract Names of ſpecific Comprehenſions) both what is ſuch as to the Nature of the thing, and what is ſuch as to perſonal Condition and Qualification; not only materially, but formally, that is, the being God's kind of Religioniſt, which is the being a Theiſt of Religion and Condition. For in this divided State of the Univerſe God muſt be conſider'd as the Founder of a Sect and peculiar way of Religion; whence the Primitive Chriſtians call themſelves (c) οἱ θεῷ παιδαγωγούμενοι, the Diſciples of God, or thoſe that are inſtituted by him, (d) Dei Secta, the Sect of God. And agreeably to their Senſe our Saviour ſaith, Matth. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before Men, that they may ſee your good works and glorifie your Father which is in Heaven. For uſually amongſt the Jews the followers of any great Rabbi (thoſe that were of his Sect and way) called him Father; as the Diſciples of Hillel and Sammai are called Domus Hillel & Sammai, their Family; Pirke Avoth Capitula Patrum is a Book of the wiſe Sayings of their Doctors; Jubal is called the Father (the Inſtitutor, Teacher and Founder (of ſuch as handle the Harp and Organ; Eliſha calleth the Prophet Elias (his Maſter and Teacher) his Father; and our Saviour ſaith, Matth. 23. 9. Call no Man your Father upon the Earth: for one is your Father which is in Heaven. A great Rabbi amongſt the Jews was called Father by his Sectators, that received all his Dictates, own'd him for the Prince of their School, the Author and Founder of their Dogma or Inſtitution; and in ſuch ſenſe our Saviour calleth God the Father of his Religioniſts. As therefore Platoniſm ſignifieth, not only what is materially ſuch, but formally the being Platoniſts, which importeth a perſonal Relation of Alliance to Plato, the being his γνώριμοι, (as the Philoſophers ſpeak) his Followers or Aſſociates that are of his Sect: So Theiſm of Religion ſignifieth the being Theiſts of Religion (without limitation of Senſe) or God's kind of Religioniſts, ſuch as ſymbolize with him in Sentiment, Diſpoſition, Profeſſion, Practice, State, Relation, are his Domeſticks, Diſciples, Citizens, Servants, Subjects, Partiſans and Allies. Theizing maketh the Theiſts of Religion, as Platonizing maketh the Platoniſts. And as Plato's Inſtitution is neceſſarily an Inſtitution of Platoniſm: So God's Inſtitution is neceſſarily an Inſtitution of Theiſm of Religion. And which is God's Inſtitution of Religion, is not hard to be diſcern'd by them that can make a Judgment in caſe of competition, (e) ὁπότερα μᾶλλον πνεῖ τοῦ ἀληθινοῦ θεοῦ, which more breatheth of the true God.

(c) Clem. pædag. l. 3. c. 11. p. m. 180.

(d) Tertull. Apol. c. 39.

Gen. 4. 21.

2 King. 2. 12.

(e) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 428.

(3.) Theiſm of Religion and Condition importeth Society with God and his People in the ſenſe of Alliance. For as the Papiſts are thoſe that are in Communion with the Pope: So the Theiſts of Religion and Condition may be call'd the God-Societiſts, they are in the State of Society with God and his People; and are therefore אנשי קדש Men of Holineſs, the Saints or holy People, the comprehenſion of whom is called the Church, the Church being of definitive Notion (f) τὸ ἄθροισμα τῶν ἁγίων, Societas ſanctorum, the Univerſality or Society of the Saints. The reſt of Mankind are viſibly (but in different degrees) in the State of Eſtrangement and Hoſtility; and not a few of thoſe that are ſo far God-Societiſts, that they are within the Pale of the viſible Church, are in the main the Exotick and Inimical kind of People (that belong to another Region,) not the God-kind of People; nor could God be the God-kind of God, if (in a Spiritual Oeconomy of things) he was their God. God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all. If we ſay, that we have Fellowſhip (Society) with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we Lye and do not the Truth. He that doth good (that is an holy Well-doer) is of God (originally and as to Kind and Quality:) But he that doth evil (he that is an Evil-doer) hath not ſeen God, he is an Alien from knowing him, and is in the State of Eſtrangement. He that committeth Sin is of the Devil; he that is one of the Committers of Sin (the Evil-doers) is of Kind and Family a Diaboliſt (and therefore in the State of Hoſtility,) not a Theiſt of Religion and Condition.

Exod. 22. 31.

Dan. 12. 7.

1 Cor. 6. 1.

(f) Iſidor. Peluſ. l. 2. ep. 246.

S. Aug. ep. 23.

1 Joh. 1. 5, 6.

3 Joh. 11

Such are not of God's Alliance or Acquaintance; but of a contrary Alliance, Kindred and Party. Yet ſo far they are God's-Societiſts; ſome profeſs his Faith, receive his Sacraments, take an Oath of Allegiance to him, communicate in his Service, make a viſible pretenſion to be his Religioniſts (as thoſe ancient Hereticks did in a ſeraphic degree, who yet for their Filthineſs were ſtiled βορβορῖται) they have a Station in his viſible Church, and are in a bare Political State and Relation (without Affinity, Alliance and Friendſhip) of his Subjects and Servants; as appeareth from the wicked and ſlothful Servant, and the drunken reprobate Servant that beateth his Fellow-ſervants. Matth. 25. 26. and 24. 49. Such a Servant is in the Political State and Relation of a Servant to his Lord; but he is an Unſubject-kind of Subject (being a Rebel and a Traytor) a diſſerving kind of Servant, that is, in juſt computation no Servant, no better than none, worſe than none. A Servant in the meer Political State and Relation of a Servant without Affinity and Alliance to his Lord (ſuch as faithful Servants have) is one of thoſe pretending Acquaintance, to whom his Lord will profeſs, I never knew you. Matth. 7. 23. Such Servants are (in different Senſe) in and out of Society with their Lord at the ſame time. They are in Society, as being in ſome degree in a State and Relation of Society with Him. They are out of Society, as being for the main Aliens, none of his Allies, but the Tares that are the Children of the wicked one, Matth. 13. 38.

(4.) Theiſm of Religion and Condition is oppos'd both to Athe-iſm of Religion, and to Antithe-iſm of Religion; or it is oppos'd to Athe-iſm of Religion, both as that Name ſignifieth privatively, what is not of Quality or Pretioſity, but meer viliſm; and as it ſignifieth oppoſitively, villainiſm alſo. Meer viliſm of Religion is Athe-iſm, Villainiſm is Antithe-iſm; but both may be called Athe-iſm in the uſual acceptation of the word. For ἄθεος, uſually ſignifieth without God. (g) Ψυχὴ ἀφώτιστος ἄθεος, the Soul not illuminated is Godleſs, or devoid and depriv'd of God. And ἄθεος uſually ſignifieth Impious and ἀθεότης Impiety; (h) τοῦτο μὲν ἀθέων δίκη τῶν μολυνάντων τὸ ἐν αὐτοῖς θεῖον, This is the Puniſhment of the Atheous or Impious, who have defiled that which is Divine in them. Taking Athe-iſm in a large Senſe, and compriſing in it both the Notions of Atheous (which ſignifieth both what is Godleſs and what is Ungodly) Religion muſt be diſtributed into ſuch Religion which is Theiſm of Religion and Condition, and ſuch Religion which is Athe-iſm of Religion and Condition. (i) Diagoras the Mileſian, Theodorus the Cyrenean, and Euhemerus of Tegea, who deny'd the Being of any Gods (as Plutarch ſaith) are not the only Athe-iſts; but Homer alſo and Heſiod and the Tribes of Philoſophers, who have their fabulous Orders of many Gods, ſome of them of Servile Condition, and whom themſelves affirm to be Slaves of Humane Paſſions. (k) Theſe are the Myſteries of the Athe-iſts. I rightly call them Athe-iſts, who know not the true God, but a Boy torn in pieces by the Titans, a crying Woman and bodily Members not to be nam'd for ſhame, theſe they impudently worſhip; being involv'd in a twofold Athe-iſm; the one is the Ignorance of God, not knowing Him that is God indeed; the other is this ſecond Error; they ſuppoſe and call them Gods, that are not really ſuch, or rather that have no real being. A Religion (l) of Atheous Polytheiſm, (m) of Error nothing differing from Athe-iſm, ſuch was the Religion of the Gentiles. The beſt of it was on this ſide Theiſm of Religion and Condition, and therefore but Viliſm; and the worſt of it was Villainiſm and Antithe-iſm. But it is not the Heathen alone, that are concern'd in this diſtribution of Religion; for as their Naturaliſm of Religion, ſo the Jews Legaliſm, the Muhammedans Deiſm, the Samaritans blind Devotion (that worſhipp'd they knew not what) is on this ſide Theiſm of Religion and Condition. And which is infinitely to be lamented, much of the Religion of degenerate Chriſtendom (reformed as well as unreformed) is not God's kind of Religion, nor do they Theize as they ought, but in great degree Atheize in Life and Religion. For (to ſay nothing of that ſhole of Heatheniſm which hath invaded Pagano-Chriſtendom, and which is Athe-iſm in the Nature of the thing) the greater part of Religioniſts called Chriſtians do but Chriſtianize in Externals, which is an unchriſtian kind of Chriſtianizing, an Irreligious kind of Religioniſm. Such is the ſubſtituting an Heatheniſh Perfunctorineſs and Lip-labour, a dead external Formality (or other Mock-religion) inſtead of the genuine and legitimate Service of God; and a conjoyning with the Profeſſion of the Chriſtian Faith a wicked Life, which maketh an Athe-iſt, as the Stoicks ſay; (n) That themſelves are Divine; for they have God in themſelves as it were: but a wicked man is an Athe-iſt; and that an Athe-iſt is twofold; both he that is contrary unto God, and he that (after the mode of Speculative Atheiſm) contemneth God. Speculative Atheiſm pretendeth not to a Religion, but Hereſies do (which are ſuch Criminalities in the Faith, as are called by Tertullian, (o) adulteræ doctrinæ, wicked adulterous Doctrines remarkable in the profligate Hereticks of ancient times) and theſe are repreſented by the Apoſtle as a ſort of Athe-iſm of Religion and Condition, 2 Joh. 9. Whoſoever tranſgreſſeth, and abideth not in the Doctrine of Chriſt, hath not God. He is in Athe-iſm, not having God for his God, nor being one of his People.

(5.) Theiſm of Religion and Condition muſt be diſtributed into that which is in Type and that which is in Truth ſuch: For ſo God introduc'd it into the World, (p) agreeably to the Painters, who draw the Lines in the Tablet, and make that Deſcription the Shadow, and then they lay upon it the truth of the Colours. In the elder times of the World Theiſm of Religion in Type was ſometimes conjoyn'd and complicated with Theiſm of Religion in the Truth ſuch; but if it was ſolitary and ſeparate (as it uſually happen'd) it was ſo far Athe-iſm of Religion. The generality of the Jews therefore, although during their Church-ſtate they were Theiſts of Religion and Condition in reſpect of the Externals of Judaiſm, yet as to the main they were Atheiſts of Religion and Condition; for their Theiſm of Religion and Condition was but that which is in Type, not that which is in the Truth ſuch. He is not a Jew, which is one outwardly only; he is a Jew, no Jew, no Jew as to Judaiſm in the Truth ſuch, no genuine legitimate kind of Jew, no Theiſt of Religion and Condition as to the Spirituals and Subſtantials: That is not Circumciſion, which is outward in the Fleſh; it is not Circumciſion in the Truth ſuch; it is not the genuine and legitimate kind of Circumciſion (Regeneracy) which alone conſtituteth a genuine and legitimate kind of Theiſt of Religion and Condition. From whence it followeth, that all ſuch Religionizing which is but meer Naturaliſm, as that ſignifieth meer Unregeneracy of Religion and Condition, (ſuch as the Apoſtle enumerateth, Phil. 3. 5, 6.) is on this ſide Theiſm of Religion and Condition in the main, and ſo far is Athe-iſm; which Heathen-ſtate was the ſtate of the Carnal Jews alſo, and is too viſibly the ſtate of that Profane Rabble, which degenerate Chriſtendom mainly conſiſteth of, which ought to conſiſt of Churches of regenerate and ſanctify'd Chriſtians.

(g) Plotin. En. 5. l. 3. c. 17.

(h) Syneſ. de Inſomn. p. 144.

(i) Οὐδὲ μόνοιγε ἄθεοι Διαγόρας ὁ Μιλήσιος, ϗ ὁ Κυρηναῖος Θεόδωρος, ϗ Εὐήμερος ὁ Τεγεάτης, ϗ οἱ τούτοις ἠκολουθηκότες, παντάπασι φάντες μὴ εἶναι θεοὺς, ὡς ὁ Πλούταρχος ἔφη· ἀλλὰ ϗ Ὅμηρος ϗ Ἡσίοδος, ϗ αἱ τῶν φιλοσόφων ξυμμορίαι· παμπόλλους μὲν θεῶν μυθολογήσαντες ὁρμαθοὺς, ἀνδραποδώδεις δέ τινας, ϗ παθῶν ἀνθρωπείων ἀποφήναντες δούλους. Theodoret. θεραπ. Ser. 3.

(k) Ταῦτα τῶν ἀθέων τὰ μυστήρια. ἀθέους δὲ εἰκότως ἀποκαλῶ τούτους, οἳ τὸν μὲν ὄντως ὄντα θεὸν ἠγνοήκασιν, παιδίον δὲ ὑπὸ τιτάνων διασπώμενον, ϗ γύναιον πενθοῦν, ϗ μόρια ἄῤῥητα ὡς ἀληθῶς ὑπ' αἰσχύνης, ἀναισχύντως σέβουσιν· διττῇ ἐνεσχημένοι τῇ ἀθεότητι· προτέρᾳ μὲν, καθ' ἣν ἀγνοοῦσι τὸν θεὸν, τὸν ὄντως ὄντα μὴ γνωρίζοντες θεόν· ἑτέρᾳ ϗ δευτέρᾳ ταύτῃ πλάνῃ, τοὺς οὐκ ὄντας νομίζοντες, ϗ θεοὺς τούτους ὀνομάζοντες τοὺς οὐκ ὄντως ὄντας, μᾶλλον δὲ οὐδὲ ὄντας. Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 11.

(l) Τῆς ἀθέου πολυθεότητος. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 5.

(m) Πλάνης κατ' οὐδὲν ἀθεότητος διαφερούσης. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 7. c. 16.

(n) Θείους τε εἶναι, ἔχειν γὰρ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς οἱονεὶ θεόν· τὸν δὲ φαῦλον ἄθεον· διττὸν δὲ εἶναι τὸν ἄθεον, τόν τε ἐναντίως τῷ θείῳ λεγόμενον, ϗ τὸν ἐξουθενητικὸν τοῦ θείου. Laert. in Zenon.

(o) De præſcript. c. 6.

(p) Καθάπερ οἱ ζωγράφοι ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ πίνακι τὰς γραμμὰς περιάγουσι ϗ τὴν σκιὰν γράφουσι, ϗ τότε τὴν ἀλήθειαν τῶν χρωμάτων αὐτῷ ἐπιτιθέασιν. S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. p. 557. ed. Savil.

Rom. 2. 28.

(6.) God is neceſſarily the Imperial Eſtate of the Comprehenſion of his Religion, which is Theiſm of Religion and Condition; but cannot be the Imperial Eſtate of the comprehenſion of ſuch a Religion, which is Athe-iſm of Religion and Condition; therefore God cannot be the Mundane or Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. As Plato appropriately belongeth to this Specific Comprehenſion Platoniſm of Philoſophy, and we may call him the Imperial Eſtate thereof; ſo God appropriately belongeth to that Specific Comprehenſion, which is Theiſm of Religion and Condition as the Imperial Eſtate thereof. As the Platoniſts kind of Plato cannot be tolerably notic'd out of Platoniſm, nor can we ſuppoſe him to exiſt as an Imperial Eſtate out of Platoniſm, without making him a Platoleſs kind of Plato: So the Saint of God-kind of God cannot be tolerably notic'd in Athe-iſm of Religion and Condition, nor can we ſuppoſe him to exiſt in it as an Imperial Eſtate, without making him a God-leſs kind of God; therefore the Scripture noticeth him as appropriately the King of Saints, Apoc. 15. 3. The Pope appropriately belongeth to this Specific Comprehenſion Papiſm of Religion as the Imperial Eſtate thereof; and as none but Papiſts of Religion have him for their Pope; ſo none but the Theiſts of Religion and Condition have God for their God, and He appropriately belongeth to this Specific Comprehenſion Theiſm of Religion and Condition as the Imperial Eſtate thereof. In like manner our Lord Chriſt appropriately belongeth to this Specific Comprehenſion Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition as the Imperial Eſtate thereof: He cannot be found out of Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition, nor can he be notic'd as out of it; for if ſo, He would not be the Chriſtian kind of Chriſt. So if God did not appropriately belong to this Specific Comprehenſion Theiſm of Religion and Condition, if He might be found out of it, or be notic'd as out of it, He would not be the Saint of God-kind of God. Our Lord Chriſt is a Kingdom-eſtate over the World, and a Kingdom-eſtate to the World, but he is not the Kingdom-eſtate of the World, or the Mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate. The ſame we muſt affirm of the true God; but with this difference, God is a governing parental Providence to the Animal-World, which Chriſt is not.

CHAP. IV.

A Conſectary from the foregoing Chapter, That the Pagans were ſo far ignorant of the true God, that He is not to be found amongſt the Supreme Deities of their Theopolity. This is prov'd by ſeveral Arguments; 1. The firſt Argument, A Supreme Deity in Paganiſm is the Supreme of Pagan Deities. 2. The ſecond Argument, Such a Supreme Deity is the Deity of Religion in Paganiſm. 3. The third Argument, A Supreme Deity in Paganiſm is the Deity of a Paganical Religion. 4. The fourth Argument, The true God was the unknown God at Athens. 5. The fifth Argument, The Pagan and Antipagan Religioniſts do not acknowledge each others Supreme Deity. 6. A Reflection upon the Arguments of the foregoing Chapter. 7. Additional Remarks to what is before diſcours'd touching the Platonic Hen or T'Agathon.

OUR great Principle inferreth, That the Pagans were ſo far ignorant of the true God, that he is not to be found amongſt the Deities or Supreme Deities of their Theopolity. This great Conſectary is ſo well founded, that it muſt be thought a want of Conſideration in ſome Pious and Learned Writers, to maintain Aſſertions, which are implicit Contradictions unto it. (q) That the Pagans did worſhip the true God and the ſame God with the Chriſtians; that a Supreme Being (in the Pagans Theopolity) Creator and Governour of the World is the true God. (r) That thoſe who direct their Worſhip to a Supreme and Sovereign Being conſider'd as abſolutely Supreme, infinite in all Perfections, the Maker and Governour of the whole World, can under this Notion worſhip no other but the Lord Jehovah, becauſe there is no other Supreme God but He. (s) When the Supreme God commands us to worſhip himſelf, the meaning muſt be, that we pay our Worſhip and Adorations to a Supreme Being conſider'd as Supreme; and he who worſhips ſuch a Supreme Being, worſhips the true God, whom we can diſtinguiſh from falſe Gods only by this Character, that he is Supreme. (t) There is no other Supreme God but the Lord Jehovah, and thoſe who worſhip but one Supreme God, worſhip him and none elſe: It is abſolutely impoſſible, that he who worſhips a Supreme and Sovereign God, ſhould worſhip any other God. Thoſe who worſhip the Supreme God under this Notion as Supreme, worſhip him and no other Being. If theſe Aſſertions are true and ſolid, our great Principle and great Conſectary iſſuing from it muſt be thought great miſtakes. For every one of theſe Aſſertions plainly importeth, that the true God is the Pagano-mundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate, and is (not one of the Subordinate Deities, which are ſuppos'd to be created Beings, but)

(q) Intell. Syſt. p. 279. Def. of the Diſc. concern. the Idol. of the Church of Rome, p. 5, 7.

(r) A Preſervative againſt Popery. p. 31.

(s) Ibid. p. 30.

(t) Ibid. p. 29.

but) a Supreme Deity of the Pagans Syſtem of Deities or Theopolity. But that this cannot reaſonably be ſuppos'd, we will endeavour to demonſtrate by theſe following Reaſons and Arguments, which are deſign'd to prove, That a Supreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity is not the true (or true kind of) God.

I. The Supreme Deity in the Pagans Theopolity is the Supreme or Chieftain of Pagan Deities, of the ſame Kind, Kindred and Family (as is before ſhew'd) and therefore a Paganical kind of Deity, and the Head of the Family of Pagan Deities. The Rabbins Judaical Theology acknowledgeth a Meſſiah, but not the true kind of Meſſiah; the Gentile Theology acknowledgeth a Supreme God, but not the true kind of Supreme God; whereas the Chriſtian Theology acknowledgeth both, according to that of our Saviour, Joh. 17. 3. This is Life Eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. The true God can no more be found in the Pagan's Theology, than the true Chriſt can be found in the Jews Theology, or than the true kind of Paradiſe can be found in Muhammediſm. For they Atheiz'd the Godhead, ſometimes into an Herological or a Pneumatological kind of Jove, ſometimes into a Myſtic-Metaphyſical firſt Nature, ſometimes into Mundane Animative Nature (a deifying Mind or Soul of the World) the viſible Univerſe or Animated Heaven, and ſometimes into the viſible animated Sun. Pliny and Anaximander proceeded but a little further, the one in Atheizing the Godhead into plaſtick unknowing Nature, the other into infinite Matter. But they did well in acknowledging a Deity in the Notion of an Imperial Eſtate, which is the genuine Theiſts Notion (they were therefore a ſort of Theiſts, becauſe they were a ſort of Religioniſts) as the Jews do well in acknowledging a Meſſiah in the like Notion (they call him the King Meſſiah) and the Muhammedans do well in acknowledging a Paradiſe in the Life to come: Yet as the Paradiſe of the one and the Meſſiah of the other are of oppoſite kind to the true (the one being Senſitive the other Secular;) ſo not one of the whole Syſtem of the Pagans Deities is the Sanctity or true Religion-kind of God, but all of them (though called by them Holy) are of kind and quality Atheous and Vile, at beſt Mundane, and at worſt Diabolical, Fabulous, without any God-kind (or Saint of God-kind) of thing; and ſuch is their Jove or Jupiter (the beſt and greateſt of them) who was their kind of God, but never was a truly godly Man's kind of God. (u) It is much more eaſie, to deviate from the true God than from the true (partial) Notion of the Deity; for the Gentiles, how good ſoever their Notion of the Divinity was which they had in their Mind, yet in this they ſeem to have miſcarry'd in the firſt place, they did not attribute it to Him, to whom it belong'd. The Gentiles had as good a Notion of the Deity, as the Jews have of the Meſſiah; the Notion of both of them underſtood without ſpecific or individual determination is true and good; but herein both of them alike miſcarry, they do not apply their Notion to him, to whom it belongeth, becauſe they apply it not to ſuch a kind of Imperial Perſon as He is, to whom it belongeth. The Rabbins have this true Notion of the Meſſiah; they ſuppoſe him, to be the King of the Jews, the Redeemer and Conſolation of Iſrael, and the Star of Jacob (whence an impoſtorous Meſſiah was ſtiled Barchocab;) yet every Ideal or Imaginary Meſſiah that is of theſe Attributes, is not the true Meſſiah, nor the true kind of Meſſiah, nor is the Jews Meſſiah ſuch. In like manner, the Heathen had a true Notion of the Deity; they ſuppos'd him, to be the grand Father of Nature, the Former of the Univerſe, the Hegemonic Principle and Governour of the World; yet every Ideal or Imaginary Deity that is of theſe Attributes is not the true God, nor the true kind of God, nor is the Heathens Deity ſuch. The ſame Judgment muſt be made touching theſe Attributes the Supreme Being or the Supreme God.

The Ancient Heretical Pagans (the Gnoſticks and others) had their Supreme Deity or Deities, but it is not poſſible for an intelligent Man, to pitch upon any one of them, and to affirm, that this is the true God. (w) Almoſt all Hereſies confeſs one God, but they change the true, and ſet up another God by their wicked Opinion. (x) Every Heretick feigneth what he pleaſeth, and adoreth his own Figment; as Marcion a good God and an idle, as Valentinus thirty Æons (his Supreme Deity was Bythus) as Baſilides, who calleth an Omnipotent God by a portentous Name Abraxas. S. Auſtin ſaith of himſelf when a Manichee, (y) It was not thou, which was my God, but a vain Phantaſm of mine, which mine Error deify'd. The Cerinthians, Marcionites and others are called by Tertullian, alterius Divinitatis Hæretici, The Heretical Religioniſts of another God. And if this was the caſe of the Hereticks, who are in ſome degree within the City of God, (z) as Maimonides conſidereth them; is it not much more the caſe of the Infidels, who are conſider'd by the ſame Author as altogether without the City? The Heretical Pagans were the Religioniſts of another Supreme Deity, therefore the perfect Pagans were ſo. As the Heretical Pagans had various Supreme Deities, ſo the perfect Pagans had four (at leaſt) the Herological, the Pneumatological, the Coſmical and the Acroamatical. And is it poſſible for an intelligent Man, to pitch upon any one of theſe different kinds of Supreme Deities, and to affirm, that this is the one true God and the only Supreme Deity? If every imaginary Supreme Deity ſuppos'd to be the Maker and Governour of the World, (a) and infinite in all Perfections, is the one true God; then the Supreme Deity of the Pagans Acroamatical Theology (the Platoniſts T'Agathon) is the one true God. Again, If every imaginary Supreme Deity ſuppos'd to be the Maker and Governour of the World and Infinite in all Perfections, is the one true God; then the Supreme Deity of the Pagans Exoterical Theology (the Popular-Pagan Jove) is the one true God. But if the former of theſe Paganical Supreme Deities be the one true God, then the one true God was not at all known, nor at all worſhipp'd throughout almoſt the whole World of Pagan Religioniſts. On the contrary, If the latter of theſe Paganical Supreme Deities be the one true God, then the one true God was familiarly known and ſedulouſly worſhipp'd throughout the whole World of Pagan Religioniſts. Both theſe Paganical Supreme Deities therefore cannot be the one true God, the one Supreme Deity. Nor can either of them be the one

(u) Proclivius eſt à vero Numine quàm à vera Deitatis ratione deviare; Gentiles enim qui utcunque probam Divinitatis notionem mente erant complexi, in hoc primum impegiſſe videntur, quod illam non cui debebant attribuerunt. Arminii orat. de object. Theolog.

(w) Omnes ferè quotquot ſunt Hæreſes Deum quidem unum dicunt, ſed per ſententiam malam immutant. Iren. adv. Har. l. 1. c. 19.

(x) Unuſquiſque fingit quod voluerit, & adorat figmentum ſuum: ut Marcion bonum Deum & otioſum, ut Valentinus αἰῶνας triginta, ut Baſilides qui omnipotentem Deum portentoſo nomine appellat ἄβραξας. S. Hieron. in Amos 3. T. 5.

(y) Non tu eras, ſed vanum Phantaſma & error meus erat Deus meus. Confeſſ. l. 4. c. 7.

(z) Mor. Nev. par. 3. c. 51.

(a) Procl. Th. Plat. p. 101. Plotin. En. 5. l. 3. c. 12.

one true God, the one Supreme Deity. Not the former; for if ſo, the World of Pagans did not (as it is ſuppos'd) worſhip the true God. Not the latter of them; for if ſo, the Worſhippers of the true God did ſet a Supreme Deity above the one true God, the one Supreme Deity, which cannot be ſuppos'd. But the Pagans agree not among themſelves touching the Supreme Deity. One that the moſt of them account the Supreme Deity, their ſublime Sects (the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts) deny to be the Supreme Deity. Theſe ſuppoſe therefore, That Men may worſhip a Supreme God under this Notion as Supreme, and yet not worſhip the true Supreme God. And this they rightly ſuppoſe; for the moſt of the Pagans worſhipp'd the Supreme God of the Exoterical Theology under this Notion as Supreme; but the Myſtic-Metaphyſical Theologers worſhipp'd the Supreme God of the Acroamatical Theology under this Notion as Supreme; whereas both theſe Deities cannot be the one Supreme Deity, nor the one true God. They are indeed two oppoſite kind of Supreme Deities; the one being an abſolutely Unpopular-Pagan Supreme Deity, the other being a perfectly Popular-Pagan Supreme Deity; but becauſe the one is an abſolutely unpopular kind of Supreme Deity, He is not the true kind of God; and becauſe the other is a Popular-Pagan kind of Supreme Deity (not the Holy-popular kind) neither is He the true kind of God. Nor can ſuch a God be thought an Aſſociate of the Wicked Herological and Pneumatological Jupiter.

II. The true God could be no Deity or Supreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity, becauſe He was not the Deity of Religion amongſt the Pagans. Which cannot be ſaid of the Jews in the worſt times of their Idolatry, nor of the Ten Tribes in the times of their partial Apoſtacy. But if the Ten Tribes have totally apoſtatiz'd and degenerated into perfect Heatheniſm, (as doubtleſs they have done) the true God is no longer the Deity of a Religion amongſt them; therefore He was not the Deity of a Religion in the World of Heathens, and conſequently was not a Deity of their Theopolity. A Supreme Deity of their Theopolity muſt be that People's God and an Imperial Eſtate of Religion amongſt them, as the Capitoline Jupiter was amongſt the Romans; to which Supreme God they perform'd their Sacra, (b) as a Learned Man hath ſhew'd, who ſuppoſeth, that this Supreme God was the true God. But if ſo, the Pagan Romans were the People of the true God, as well as the Jews; Rome Pagan was the City of God, as well as Jeruſalem; the Capitol was his Houſe or Temple as well as Solomon's Temple; He was ſerv'd and worſhipp'd with as much State, Magnificence and Solemnity upon the Tarpeian Mountain as upon Mount Moriah (or Mount Sion;) and we muſt ſuppoſe, that the true God had the Flamen Dialis for his Prieſt, the Augurs for his Prophets, the Birds for his Angels, the Plays and Agones were his holy Solemnities, and Juno and Minerva (plac'd on each ſide of him) were his Cherubims of Glory. But the Capitoline Jupiter had his Nurſe alſo for one of his Conſorts, which ſheweth, that the Fables of the Gods were far from being duely rejected at Rome, that the Cretian and Coſmical Jupiter were confounded by the Romans; and what great miſtake was there in confounding two ſuch Supreme Deities, that are both of the ſame Paganical Kind and Religion? But where is our Sagacity and Senſe of Diſcernment, if we confound the true God with thoſe Rival and Inimical Supreme Gods, that deſtroy his Religion, and whom he threateneth to deſtroy? Jer. 10. 11. The Capitoline Jupiter of Rome is the very ſame Supreme God with Bel of Babylon threatned Jer. 51. 44. the very ſame Supreme God with Jupiter-Olympius, whom Antiochus Epiphanes endeavour'd to ſubſtitute inſtead of the true God, and to have the Temple in Jeruſalem call'd the Temple of Jupiter Olympius, who is therefore call'd the Abomination that maketh deſolate; Dan. 11. 31. 2 Maccab. 6. 2. The Capitoline Jupiter is the very ſame Supreme God with Baal, Moloch, Milchom or Malcham, which are Names that ſignifie a Supreme God ſo extremely diſſonant from the true God, that an attempt to reconcile them, would be much like the Old Monks, who endeavour'd to reconcile God and the Devil; but the Devil (as 'tis ſaid) bade him ſpare his pains, for they were everlaſtingly fallen out. The Capitoline Jupiter is the very ſame (c) with Jupiter Ammon, the chief God of the Egyptians, and of their City (anciently their Metropolis) No or Dioſpolis, whom God threatneth to viſit, Jer. 46. 25. The Lord of Hoſts, the God of Iſrael, ſaith, behold I will viſit Amon de No, that is, not the Multitude of No, as our Tranſlation rendreth it, but Amon (or Ammon) the God of No, as the Learned underſtand it. The God of No was alſo the God of Athens and of Rome, the Capitoline Jupiter, the Conſort of Summanus, as S. Auſtin deſcribeth him. (d) Amongſt the ancient Romans, Summanus, to whom they attributed the Nocturnal Thunderbolts, was had in greater veneration than Jove, to whom the Diurnal belong'd; but after that a magnificent Temple (the Capitol) was built to Jove, there was ſuch a conflux of the People to him, becauſe of the Magnificence of his Temple, that the Name of Summanus is now no more heard of, ſcarce any one remembreth, that he hath read of it. Summanus (Summus Manium) is a proper name for the Capitoline Jupiter himſelf, and denoteth what he is in the beſt Notion of him, the Chieftain of the Family of Pagan Deities. For this is he, that in the beſt Notion of him is ſaid (e) to have Hercules for his genuine Son. And this is he, that in the beſt Notion of him is ſaid to be left alone in the general Conflagration, (f) having neither Juno, nor Minerva, nor Apollo with him, neither any Brother, nor Son, nor Nephew, nor Kinſman. The Supreme of theſe Deities is this Supreme God, who is a Deity ſo perfectly Paganical, that no Chriſtian dareth to give him Religious Worſhip; therefore the Romans muſt not be thought to worſhip the true God, becauſe they were his Religioniſts. This is not agreeable to the Senſe of the Fathers, nor do the Fathers ſuppoſe, that the true God was the Deity of a Religion in Paganiſm, but the contrary. (g) Omnia colit humanus error præter ipſum omnium conditorem: The Error of Mankind worſhippeth all things except the Creator of all things. (h) Apud vos quodvis colere jus eſt, præter verum Deum; with you Romans any thing may be worſhipp'd ſave only the true God. (i) Solus diſplicet Dei cultor, no Religioniſt is diſpleaſing but only a Religioniſt of the true God. Deus ſolus in terris aut non colitur, aut non eſt impune quod colitur; the true God only either is not worſhipp'd upon Earth, or is not worſhipp'd without Puniſhment and Perſecution. (k) The Romans that would be the Religious Worſhippers of all Gods, and made them their Gods, that made their City a Pantheon or Receptacle of them all (a Sink of all Superſtition) yet would not be the Religioniſts of the one true

God,

(b) Dr. Stilling-fleet Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 33, &c.

(c) Octav. in Min. Fel. p. 155.

(d) De C. D. l. 4. c. 23.

(e) Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 16. l. 3. c. 24.

(f) Ibid. l. 3. c. 13.

(g) Tertul. de Idol. c. 4.

(h) Idem Apol. c. 24

(i) S. Cypr. ad Demetr.

(k) Arnob. c. Gent. l. 6. p. 194. Min. Fel. p. 49.

God, becauſe his Deity and Religion is unſociable with the Pagan Deities. (l) Why is not the God of Iſrael one of the number of their Deities ? Why is he alone not worſhipp'd by them ? Who is that ſo unknown a God, that in ſuch a multitude of Gods he alone is not found ? (He is not one of the Deities of the Pagan Theopolity.) The only reaſon they can pretend, why they receive not his Religion, is, becauſe he appropriateth Religious Worſhip to himſelf, forbidding the Worſhip of their Gods. Had the Romans receiv'd the true God for their Deity, he muſt have been the Deity of a Religion amongſt them, as Jupiter, Mars, Ops, Iſis, Cybele, and other Deities were; they muſt have received his Religion, as they did the Religion of thoſe other Gods; for where the Religion of a God is rejected, the God is rejected. But the Religion of the true God being ruinous to the Pagan Theiſm, the true God could be no Deity of a Religion in Paganiſm.

Clemens indeed (forgetting ſeveral of his own Sayings) from an idle Book the Preachment of S. Peter, would ſhuffle off the buſineſs in this manner. (m) The Preachment of S. Peter doth not ſay, do not Worſhip the ſame God that the Greeks Worſhip, but do not Worſhip as the Greeks; changing the manner of the Worſhip of God, not ſhewing or preaching another God. He plainly declareth (ſaith Clemens) the one only God, to be known by the Greeks Paganically, by the Jews Judaically, but by us newly and ſpiritually. And that the ſame God who gave the two Teſtaments, (to the Jews and Chriſtians,) gave the Grecanic Philoſophy to the Greeks, δι᾽ ἧς ὁ παντοκράτωρ παρ᾽ Ἕλλησιν, δοξάζεται, by which the Almighty is glorified amongſt the Greeks. But in this Philoſophic-Pagan Preachment there are groſs abſurdities and an inconſiſtence with it ſelf. For it is groſly abſurd, to ſuppoſe the Greek Philoſophy a Religion like the two Teſtaments, which are the Jews and Chriſtians Religion (whereas the Greek Philoſophy pretended not to any Religion but that of the Popular Pagans;) and it is groſly abſurd, to ſuppoſe Philoſophic Heatheniſm, to be God's Religion as well as Judaiſm and Chriſtianiſm; and it is not leſs abſurd, to ſuppoſe, that the Greeks did know and worſhip God Paganically (for there is no ſuch Species of knowing and worſhipping God;) and it is a Self-inconſiſtence, to ſuppoſe, that it was by the Greek Philoſophy only, that the Almighty was glorified amongſt the Greeks, and yet that the Greekiſh Popular Pagans, who underſtood it not, did Worſhip God as well as the Jews and Chriſtians. Theſe are Philoſophic-Pagan Preachments, that have no Affinity with the Scripture-Theology; for throughout the whole of it the Gentiles are ſaid to worſhip Idols, but never to be God's Worſhippers (the Aſſyrian Colonies in their perfect Heatheniſm feared not the Lord, 2 King. 17, 25.) all the Deities of a Religion amongſt them are conſtantly intituled no Gods, Idols, other Gods, ſtrange Gods, themſelves are called the People of a ſtrange God, the true God is conſtantly oppos'd to the Gods of the Heathen Nations, and is repreſented as to them an alien Deity, (n) ἔρημα γὰρ ἦν πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ἀληθινοῦ θεοῦ, for all the Nations were without the true God. The Apoſtle ſaith Rom. 1. 21. When they knew God (had Natural notices of the true Deity of Religion) they glorified him not as God (they did not acknowledge him for their God, nor make him the Deity of their Religious Worſhip) Creaturas pro Creatore venerati, worſhipping the Creature inſtead of the Creator, as the Author of the Commentaries under S. Hierome's Name ſaith of them. And the Apoſtle ſaith the ſame, v. 25. ἐσεβάσθησαν καὶ ἐλάτρευσαν τῇ κτίσει παρὰ τὸν κτίσαντα, which our Tranſlation thus rendreth; they worſhipped and ſerved the Creature more than the Creator. The words are capable of this other rendring; they worſhipp'd and ſerved the Creature beſides the Creator. And according to either of theſe Verſions, as ſome obſerve, (o) it is ſuppos'd that the Pagans did worſhip the true God, though they worſhipped the Creature alſo beſides him, or perhaps in ſome ſenſe above him and more than him alſo. But the words are capable of a third rendring (moſt probably the true;) for the Præpoſition παρὰ, is by the vulg. Lat. and the Latin Fathers rendred potius quàm rather than (as it uſually ſignifieth,) and in this Verſion there will be no difficulty, if the word Creature be underſtood to ſignifie that which is not the Creator (and therefore of vile Rank and Quality;) for according to this third rendring the Apoſtle's words will run thus. They worſhipped and ſerved that which is not the Creator rather than the Creator. This Verſion is unexceptionable, and manifeſtly ſpeaketh the Apoſtle's Senſe, as appeareth from his words v. 28. They did not like to retain God in their knowledge. Therefore they choſe the Creature-worſhip as more agreeable, rather than the Creator-worſhip. The true God therefore was not the Deity of their Religious Worſhip, nor the Deity of a Religion amongſt them; and therefore he was not one of the Deities of their Theopolity. They lik'd a governing Providence, but not a Deity which is to them and all the World a Deity of true Religion and Godlineſs.

III. A ſupreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity is neceſſarily the Deity of a Paganical Religion: But ſuch is not the true God; therefore he is no Deity or ſupreme Deity of their Theopolity. All their Deities ſupreme and ſubordinate were Deities of a Paganical Religion and God-ſervice (for in perfect Paganiſm there was no other Religion or God-ſervice:) But their Paganical God-ſervice was falſe God-ſervice, as the Apoſtle argueth, Act. 17. 24, 25, 29. God that made the World and all things therein, ſeeing that he is Lord of Heaven and Earth, dwelleth not in Temples made with hands. Neither is worſhipp'd with Men's hands, as though he needed any thing, ſeeing he giveth to all life and breath and all things. Foraſmuch then as we are the offſpring of God, we ought not to think, that the Godhead is like unto Gold, or Silver, or Stone, graven by art and Man's device. The Apoſtle inſiſteth, that the Athenians Paganical God-ſervice was not agreeable unto God, who is no Mechanic-Temple Deity (nor was he ſuch during the Moſaic Oeconomy ſave only κατ᾽ οἰκονομίαν, by way of Adminiſtration and typical Adumbration, not in the real truth of the thing:) But their Religion was the Religion of a Mechanic-Temple Deity. For the Heathens look'd upon their Temples as (p) θεῶν οἶκοι, the dwelling Houſes of the Gods (and in ſuch ſenſe called them ἱεροὶ δόμοι, ſacræ Ædes, ſacred Houſes,) and theſe Mechanic-Temples were connex'd with their Mechanic-Idols (no Temple properly ſuch could be without

(l) Cur à numero cæterorum iſte rejectus eſt ? Cur ab eis ſolus non colitur ? Quis eſt Deus iſte ita ignotus, ut in tam multis Diis ſolus adhuc non inveniatur ? Nihil reſtat, ut dicant, cur hujus Dei ſacra recipere noluerint, niſi quia ſolum ſe coli voluerit, illos autem Deos gentium quos iſti jam colebant, coli prohibuerit. S. Aug. de Conſenſ. Evangel. l. 1. c. 17, 18.

(m) Μὴ τοίνυν φησὶ, σέβεσθε οὐκ εἶπεν, θεὸν ὃν οἱ Ἕλληνες ἀλλὰ μὴ κατὰ τοὺς Ἕλληνας· τὸν τρόπον τὸν τῆς σεβήσεως ἐναλλάττων τοῦ θεοῦ, οὐχὶ δὲ ἄλλον καταγγέλλων. Strom. l. 6. p. m. 458.

Pſal. 96. 5. Gal. 4. 8. Jer. 7. 9. Joſh. 24. 20. Mal. 2. 11. Iſa 63. 19. Jer. 2. 11. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9.

(n) J. Mart. Apol. 2. p. 88.

(o) Intellect. Syſt. p. 472, 473.

(p) Herald in Arnob. p. 233.

out the Image or Statue of a Deity,) both which are oppoſite to the Godhead in truth ſuch. (q) ὐ περιγράφεται τόπῳ θεὸς, ὐδὲ ἀπεικονίζεται ποτὲ ζώυ σχήματι, God cannot be incloſ'd in a place, nor can he be repreſented by any Animal-Form. The Athenians Paganical God-ſervice was alſo oppoſite unto God, as his Worſhip conſiſteth not in bodily Miniſteries, the ſervices of Mens hands, which was the Heathen mode of God-Service. (r) Ritus ejus in manu & digitis eſt, its Rite is in the Hand and Fingers, not in the Soul. (s) You amplifie the Gods with new Meats, (ſaith Arnobius) and honour them with Nidours and Juices: And becauſe the things that are nutritive to you, are pleaſing and grateful to you, do you think it is ſo with the Gods, that like Dogs they are appeas'd by Morſels, and fawn upon them that reach to them often? The Athenians Paganical God-ſervice was alſo incongruous unto God, who is not worſhipped with Men's hands, as though he needed any thing; for the Services of Men's hands relate to bodily Neceſſities; as the Apoſtle ſaith, theſe Hands have miniſtred to my Neceſſities. But the Heathens Religion was ſuch a God-ſervice, as if they were miniſtring to the bodily Neceſſities of their Gods, providing Houſes for them, inlightning their Dwellings, clothing them, adorning them, incenſing them, offering them Food (as the Papiſts worſhip the Saints,) ſuch was their God-ſervice. (t) They meaſur'd the Gods by Human Neceſſities. To what uſes of the Gods are Temples neceſſary? To ſhelter them from the Winter-cold, and Summer-heat, and Wind and Rain? Is not this the greateſt contumely, that the Gods ſhould have their little Cottages, Apartments and Cells, and that ſuch things ſhould be thought neceſſary for them, that are neceſſary for Men and other Animals? (u) If the Divinity be of the ſame form with Man, he will need the ſame things with Man, nutriment and indument and houſe and the conſequent Human Paſſions. They that are of like Form and like Paſſions will need the like Diet. In this reſpect therefore the Athenians God-ſervice was oppoſite unto God; we ought not to think, that the Godhead, which is the σίβασμα the object of Religious Worſhip, is like unto Gold, or Silver, or Stone graven by art and Man's device: But they worſhipping Images or Statues did think the σίβασμα (the object of Religious Worſhip) ſuch. And of this their Paganical Religious Worſhip their Jove was their Deity, who never made any, the leaſt Proteſtation againſt it: But the true God is not the Deity of it; therefore he is not the Pagan Jove.

But the principal thing obſervable in this Diſcourſe of the Apoſtle is the drift and deſign of it; and this muſt be debated with thoſe learned Men, who ſuppoſe, that the Pagans worſhipp'd the true God, and that he is the ſame with their Jove. For theſe ſuppoſe alſo (w) that the Athenians worſhipp'd the true God by their Images; and conſequently the drift and deſign of the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe was not to perſwade the Athenians to change the great object of their Worſhip, but only their corrupt mode of worſhipping him. Which caſe of the Athenians is the very ſame with that of the ten Tribes of Iſrael in their partial Apoſtaſy (when they worſhipp'd God in their Calves,) yet it is acknowledg'd, (x) that their Caſe was different from the Idolatry of meer Heathens, as is alſo the Caſe of our Pagano-Chriſtians. If this was the Caſe of the Athenians, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that they were in ſome degree within the ſpecific Comprehenſion of Theiſm of Religion, that God was in ſome degree the Deity of a Religion amongſt them and the Deity of their Religion (and conſequently in ſome degree they were his People:) But they ought to have been told, that Religion was very much corrupted amongſt them, and the State of it needed a great Reformation, ſuch as ought to be made in Pagano-Chriſtendom, or as was requiſite in the degenerate ten Tribes. The Apoſtle ſhould not have preach'd to them in ſuch a ſtile as he doth, telling them of their profound Ignorance of God, that his deſign was to declare God to them, and exhorting them, to ſeek the Lord, if happily they might feel after him (the word ſignifieth, to grope after him like blind Men, or Men in the dark) and find him. Which ſheweth their horrendous alienation from God, that they did not acknowledge him to be their God, nor make him the Deity of their Religious Worſhip, that they did not erect and worſhip their Idols (a Wooden Jupiter, a Stone Diana, a Brazen Ceres, a Golden Anaitis) with intention and deſign, that thereby they might give the Religious Worſhip to him, that is the only true God, but to the imaginary Deities of their Theopolity, according to that of Seneca. (y) They dedicate (to be worſhipp'd) the ſacred, immortal and inviolable God's in the vileſt matter and that which cannot move, and put upon them the Habits of Men, and wild Beaſts and Fiſhes. Seneca as well as S. Paul condemneth the Heathens mechanical Idols, but with different deſign. For as it is one thing, to reform the Religion of God and his People corrupted by Idolatry; and another thing, to take away an Idol-Inſtitution ſimply and without addition ſo called: So Seneca deſigneth the Pagan Theiſm, not corrupted, but reform'd; S. Paul deſigneth, that there be no Pagan Theiſm neither corrupted nor reformed. The one accounteth the Religion of Paganiſm Theiſm of Religion and Condition; the other accounteth it Athe-iſm. And therefore the Senſe and Deſign of his Diſcourſe to the Athenians is, not only to Convert them from a wrong mode of ſerving God; but to ſhew them, that they were Aliens from God and his Service at the Heathen rate, and that their Religion was an Idol-Religion ſimply ſo called. So to turn them from the Power of Satan unto God. Act. 26. 18. to make them his People, that were none of his People. 1 Pet. 2. 10. To turn them to God from Idols, to ſerve the living and true God. 1 Theſſ. 1. 9. For they were Gentiles that knew not God, and did ſervice (not to the living and true God, but) unto them which by Nature are no Gods. Gal. 4. 8. The Apoſtle therefore deſign'd, that the Athenians ſhould make a change, not only in their mode of God-ſervice, but in the great object thereof; as S. Chryſoſtom ſaith, (z) ἵνα μὴ νομοίσωσιν ἕνα τῶν πολλῶν εἶναι, that they may not think the true God, to be one of their many Gods (one of their Theopolity,) the Apoſtle addeth, that God dwelleth not in Temples made with hands, nor is worſhipp'd with Mens

(q) Clem. Str. 7. p. m. 514.

(r) Lactant. l. 4. c. 3.

(s) Cibis novis auctificatis Deos, nidoribus cohoneſtatis, & ſuccis: Et quia vobis jucunda & grata ſunt, ea quæ vos alunt, Deos etiam creditis in eorum affluere voluptates, latratorum & canum ritu offis ſævitias ponere, atque alludere porrigentibus ſæpius? Arnob. c. Gent. l. 7. p. 224. Sen. Ep. 95. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 6. c. 10. Lactant. l. 6. c. 1.

(t) Arnob. ſupr. p. 191, 192.

(u) Εἰ δὲ ἀνθρωποειδὲς τὸ θεῖον, τῶν ἴσων δεήσεται τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, τροφῆς τε καὶ σκέπης, οἰκίας τε καὶ τῶν ἀκολούθων παθῶν, οἱ ὁμοιοσχήμονες γὰρ καὶ ὁμοιοπαθεῖς τῆς ἴσης δεήσονται διαίτης. Clem. Str. l. 7. p. m. 514.

(w) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 350, 351, 358, 373, 374, 380, 382.

(x) Ibid. p. 778, 779.

Act. 17. 23, 27, 30.

(y) Sacros, immortales, inviolabileſque Deos in materia viliſſima atque immobili dedicant, habitus illis hominum ferarumque & piſcium induunt. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 6. c. 10.

(z) Hom. 38. in Act. p. 820.

Mens hands. But they that ſuppoſe the Athenians to have worſhipp'd the true God by their Images, (a) cite this Father as condemning the Greeks for their folly in ſeeking a ſpiritual and incorporeal Being (the true God) in corporeal Images. But who can imagine, that the Greeks which did not like to retain God in their knowledge, ſhould be ſo intent in ſeeking after him, as to ſeek him in corporeal Images? Doubtleſs ſuch interpretations of Scripture are a ſubſtituting white for black, and black for white.

Candida pro nigris & pro candentibus atra.

IV. The true God is intituled the unknown God at Athens in the ordinary, not in an honourary Senſe; therefore he is not to be confounded with the Grecanic Zeus or Jupiter in the beſt Notion of him, nor is he a ſupreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity. In the Theology of the Gentiles the Epithet unknown is us'd in an ordinary Senſe, (without any intention of honouring,) and ſometimes their Deities are called unknown in an honourary Senſe, and there is ſomething honourary in the Title. As when the Platoniſts ſtile their firſt Deity (b) παντελῶς ἄγνωστος, altogether unknown. And of the Peruans ſupreme Deity (Pachacamac) we have this account. (c) They ſaid, he was to them inviſible and unknown, not daring to pronounce his Name; if at any time they muſt do it, they did it with the greateſt Reverence, having often kiſs'd the Air and Earth, and ſcarce without trembling. Probably in an honourary Senſe the ſupreme God was intituled by ſome of the Heathen πάγκρυφος, one altogether hidden, (d) as J. Mart. ſaith. The Egyptians intituled their ſupreme Deity Ammon or Amûn, which ſignifieth Occult; and the ſame ſignification is in the Name Saturn according to its uſual Etymology from סתר to hide. So the unknown God in the Athenians Inſcription is rendred by the Syriac the hidden God (doubtleſs) in an honourary Senſe: As ſome of the Learned ſuppoſe, that the Athenians deſign'd it to ſignifie (e) the Deity inviſible and incomprehenſible by Mortals, of whom Joſephus againſt Appion writeth, that he is knowable to us only by the Effects of his Power, but as to his Eſſence is unknowable. As the Attribute unknown ſometimes ſignifieth in an honourary Senſe, ſo when any Deity was to the Pagans Foreign, Alien, and not of their Acquaintance, when they knew not the Name of a Deity; nor to what determinate individual Diety to attribute a Benefit or Diſaſter, (f) they ſignified ſo much by ſtiling the Deity unknown in an ordinary Senſe. (g) So moſt learned Expoſitors (ſaith a Divine of our own) probably think that Altar which S. Paul found at Athens, had been erected upon occaſion of ſome famous Victory, whoſe procurement the Athenians not knowing by any circumſtance unto what known God it might be aſcrib'd, and hence fearing leſt by attributing it to any of thoſe Gods whom they worſhipped, the true Author of it might be wronged or neglected, they aſcrib'd it Ignoto Deo to the unknown God, or to an unknown God. Theſe learned Expoſitors ſuppoſe, that the Athenians intended their Altar-Inſcription, to ſignifie in the ordinary Senſe (that the Deity to whom that Altar was erected, was to them Foreign and Incognito;) and ſo in all other Altar-Inſcriptions of like Nature, which were uſual amongſt the Pagans, as appeareth from Pauſanias and ſeveral other Authors (whence we read of (h) Ara ignoti Dei, ἀγνώστων θεῶν βωμός, the Altar of the unknown God or Gods in divers places, with other the like Inſcriptions) the Epithet unknown always ſignifieth in the ordinary Senſe. And thus all Eccleſiaſtical Writers have underſtood it to ſignifie. Nam & Athenis ara eſt inſcripta ignotis Diis, colit ergo quis quod ignorat? There is an Altar at Athens inſcrib'd to the unknown Gods, doth any one Worſhip what he doth not know? (i) ſaith Tertullian. J. Mart. ſaith (k) that Socrates (he ought to have ſaid S. Paul) exhorteth the Athenians, πρὸς θεοῦ τοῦ ἀγνώστου αὐτοῖς ἐπίγνωσιν, to the knowledge and acknowledgment of God to them unknown. According to Theophylact and Oecumenius the Inſcription upon their Altar was θεῷ ἀγνώστῳ καὶ ξένῳ, to an unknown and ſtrange God, the Inſcription was, ſaith S. Hierome (upon Titus) Diis Aſiæ, Europæ & Africæ Diis ignotis & Peregrinis. To the Gods of Aſia, Europe and Africa, the unknown and ſtrange Gods. The Eccleſiaſtical Writers underſtand the unknown God in the Athenian Inſcription, to ſignifie in the ſenſe of M. Antoninus in J. Mart. (l) who ſpeaking of the thundring Legion ſaith, they pray'd θεῷ ᾧ ἐγὼ ἠγνόουν, to a God to me unknown. Thus it is ſaid in Min. Fœl. (m) Aras extruunt etiam ignotis numinibus, they erect Altars even to unknown Gods. (n) Athenienſibus ignotus Deus, in Judæa notus, ſed non receptus. To the Athenians (ſaith S. Ambroſe) God was unknown; in Judea known, but not receiv'd. S. Chryſoſtom alſo and (o) S. Auſtin underſtand the Epithet unknown in the Athenians Inſcription in the ordinary Senſe; and their mode of ſacrificing τῷ προσήκοντι θεῷ, to the God to whom theſe matters appertain, and their βωμοὶ ἀνώνυμοι, Altars without a Name, as alſo the Title which the Pagans gave to the God of Hebrews, ſtiling him in Lucan, the uncertain God, (for an uncertain God to them was an unknown God) confirm that interpretation. Which may be further confirm'd both from an extravagant devout Humour amongſt the Pagans generally, and from the Athenians eſpecial ſuperlative Paganical Devotion together with the Effects thereof. The Heathens generally were ſo extravagantly devout, (p) that in their publick Adorations after the Invocation of particular Deities they uſually added ſome general Clauſe comprehenſive of all their Deities (Dii Deæque omnes,) that they might not offend any of them by ſeeming to neglect them and paſs them by. So S. Chryſoſtom thinketh, that the Athenians erected their Altar ὑπὲρ πλείονος ἀσφαλείας, for the greater ſecurity, fearing, leſt there might be ſome other God not known to them, but worſhipp'd elſewhere, they erected an Altar to this God, ſtiling him the unknown God. (q) One that is no Enemy to Paganiſm, will entertain no other account of this Athenian Inſcription ſave only this; ne aliquis forſan incultus apud illos eſſet Deus, that no God might miſs of his Worſhip there. For agreeably to the extravagant devout Humour of the Heathen in general, the Athenians are known to have been moſt exceſſively addicted to Paganical Devotion (Idolatry, Superſtition, Polytheiſm,) which cauſed an extraordinary Commotion in S. Paul. Athens was reputed (r) the chief head of Piety, there was nothing almoſt there, which was not ſacred (ὅλη βωμός,) the ſeveral parts into which the City was divided, were called by the Name of their Gods, and

(a) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 381.

(b) Procl. Th. Plat. l. 3. c. 7, 14.

(c) Dicebant inviſibilem ſibi & ignotum, nomen non auſi pronunciare, ſi quando ad id compulſi, ſummâ reverentiâ, oſculato ſæpius aere & terrâ, ferè tremuli id faciebant. Hoffman. Umbr. in Luc. p. 72.

(d) Paræn. p. 37.

(e) Intell. Syſt. p. 474. Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 151.

(f) Beyer. addit ad Seld. p. 139. Seld. de Synedr. l. 3. c. 13. S. 1.

(g) Dr. Jackſon Orig. of Unbelief, c. 17.

(h) Annot. in Min. Fœl. p. 52. Beyer ſupr. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 2.

(i) Ad Nation.

(k) Apol. 1. p. 48. Petav. de Trin. præfat. c. 3. S. 4.

(l) Apol. 2 ſub. fin.

(m) p. 52.

(n) Ibid. p. 332. in Annot.

(o) C. Creſcon. l. 1. c. 29.

(p) Dr. Cave Life of S. Paul. p. 77.

(q) De Rel. Gentil. p. 166.

(r) Τὸ μέγιστον τῆς εὐσεβείας κεφάλαιον. Phot. cod. 243. col. 1086. Dr. Hamm. of ſuperſtit. S. 11. Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 358. Owen Θεολογουμ. παντοδ. l. 3. c. 12.

Idols were not only in their Temples, but in the Streets and Forum, where (as Thucydides ſaith,) there were twelve Altars. This ſuperlative Paganical Devotion of the Athenians had this Effect, θεοὶ ξενικοὶ, ſtrange Gods (as Heſychius ſaith) were honoured at Athens. (s) They were not more fond of novelties and ſtrange things, than apt to entertain foreign Deities, ſaith Strabo. Apollonius Tyanæus looketh upon the Athenians erecting an Altar to an unknown God as an effect of their ſuperlative Paganical Devotion (as S. Paul alſo look'd upon it;) for he telleth Timaſion, (t) that the ſafeſt way was, to ſpeak well of the Gods, eſpecially at Athens, where Altars were dedicated even to unknown Gods. He underſtandeth this Epithet in the ordinary ſenſe; and ſo doth an honourable Perſon of our own, who ſpeaking of this Inſcription ſaith, (u) By which immediately they fell into the Worſhip of the true God, before they were aware; for the unknown God among them was indeed the true God. In this Senſe S. Paul himſelf underſtandeth and interpreteth the Athenians Inſcription, as manifeſtly appeareth, not only from his uſual Character of the Gentiles (the Gentiles that know not God,) but from his Diſcourſe to the Athenians, Act. 17. 23. As I paſſed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an Altar with this Inſcription, to the unknown God. * Whom therefore ye worſhip not knowing, him declare I unto you. That is, I make him known. Therefore he was unknown to the Athenians in the ordinary ſenſe; and it was no unknowable Deity whom Paul preach'd to them, nor one that they knew to be unknowable. Having thus aſcertain'd the common and genuin Senſe of the Athenians Inſcription, we may deduce from it theſe three remarkable Conſectaries.

(1.) The true God cannot be one of the Deities or ſupreme Deities of the Pagans Theopolity (ſpeaking of the popular Pagans Theopolity, as hitherto we have done;) for all theſe were ſufficiently well known Deities. All the Deities of the Athenians Theopolity were to them well known Deities; therefore the true God could not be one of them, whom S. Paul hath intituled τὸν Ἄγνωστον ἐν Ἀθήναις, the unknown God at Athens. And this probably was the reaſon, why the Philopatris in Lucian's Works (written ſince the times of Chriſtianity) uſeth this Name, to ſignifie the ſupreme Deity.

(2.) The true God had amongſt the Pagans at ſome time and in ſome places ſome Particles of Worſhip given to him as to a foreign ſtranger Deity. For an Altar was erected to him at Athens as to the unknown God. And if beſides this Rite of Worſhip another was us'd amongſt the Athenians, if ſome did him Worſhip (w) by ſtretching out their hands towards Heaven (as the Philopatris ſeemeth to ſay,) yet if theſe Rites were all his Worſhip, this inferreth and demonſtrateth, that he was not the Deity of a Religion amongſt the Pagans, not one of their Deities, which had a full ſtated Religious Worſhip amongſt them. An Altar to an unknown God was probably erected upon ſome extraordinary emergence and occaſion (as the Romans upon an Earthquake appointed Religious Rites to an uncertain God,) and if ſo, he was (in a very ſlender degree) worſhipp'd at Athens (x) οὐ προηγουμένως, ἀλλὰ κατὰ περίστασιν, as the Stoicks diſtinguiſh) not primarily and out of choice, but his worſhip was an occaſional thing, and as the Exigence of the time required.

(3.) Some very learned Writers are doubly miſtaken; for they miſinterpret the Epithet unknown to an honourary Senſe (ſuppoſing it in the Athenian Inſcription to ſignifie an inviſible and incomprehenſible Deity;) and having miſinterpreted the Name they confound theſe Diſſonant things, the unknown God at Athens with the Grecanic Zeus. The Apoſtle citing Aratus's Hemiſtichium —— τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμὲν, (for we are his Off-ſpring,) is ſaid (y) to interpret it of the true God; which is ſuppos'd to be a plain Scripture-acknowledgment, that by the Zeus of the Greekiſh Pagans was ſometimes at leaſt meant the true God. (z) Jupiter is the true God bleſſed for evermore. If Jupiter is the true God, he is neceſſarily the ſame with the unknown God at Athens; from whence it followeth, "That the Athenians intituled their own Popular-pagan Jupiter the unknown God, that they were in profound ignorance of their own Jupiter, that they worſhipp'd him not knowing him, that they ought to have grop'd after him, that S. Paul's buſineſs at Athens was to preach the Pagan Jupiter; to declare him and make him known to them, that in ſome reſpect were better acquainted with him than himſelf; that the Pagan and Pagan-Religion Jupiter is the great Anti-pagan Deity, the Deity of thoſe Anti-pagan Religions Judaiſm and Chriſtianity; that the great crime of the Gentiles was, they knew not their own Jupiter, nor glorified him as God, nor made him their God (the Deity of their Religious Worſhip,) nor the Deity of a Religion amongſt them; that they did not like to retain in their Knowledge their own Jupiter, but went a whoring after other Gods, were Aliens from him and Enemies to him (to his Laws, Life, Service, Godhead, Government and Liege-people) and extraneous to his Republick; that they impriſon'd in Unrighteouſneſs their Natural Notices of their own Jupiter, the true Deity of Religion, whoſe Worſhip is the Worſhip of God, whoſe Temple is the Temple of God, whoſe Prieſts are the Miniſters of God, whoſe People are the People of God, whoſe Oracles are the Oracles of God, whoſe Imperial Polity is the Kingdom of God, and who is ſuppos'd to be the holy jealous God, though all the Pagan Deities are Good-fellows. Can the mind of Man excogitate or entertain more portentous Conceits than theſe (and innumerable ſuch as theſe,) which muſt unavoidably follow from an irreligious confounding Aratus's Zeus with the unknown God at Athens and from this bad Aſſertion, that Jupiter is the true God bleſſed for evermore? To Patronize this Aſſertion, the Teſtimonies of the Fathers are produc'd in great plenty (a) by the learned Author of it. But they do not reach home to the purpoſe. For although the Fathers from the Writings of the Pagans do prove their knowledge and acknowledgement of a ſupreme God, yet they do not prove, nor was it their intention, to prove, that the ſupreme God underſtood with the Pagans ſpecific and individual determination is the true God. Such an intention and deſign would have made the Fathers Pagans, not Chriſtians. Moreover, though ſeveral of the Fathers (agreeably to that extravagant Philoſophic-paganizing humour which very eaſily invaded the Church) J. Mart. Clemens, Origen and S. Auſtin do too plainly and expreſly ſay, that the Platoniſts Acroamatical Deity is the true God (which is deſtructive to this

(r) Ὥσπερ περὶ τὰ ἄλλα φιλοξενοῦντες, οὕτω καὶ περὶ τοὺς θεούς. Strabo l. 10. p. 325.

(t) Philoſtrat. l. 6. c. 2.

(u) Sir Ch. Wolſley Reaſ. of Script. Belief. p. 100.

* Ὃν οὖν ἀγνοοῦντες εὐσεβεῖτε, whom therefore ye Worſhip not knowing (not knowing him.)

(w) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 8. c. 2.

(x) Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 14. Schmid. Not. in Heb. 12. 1. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 4. p. 172.

(y) Intel. lect. Syſt. p. 475.

(z) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 7.

(a) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 6, 25, & 75, &c.

this Hypotheſis, that the Popular-pagan Jove is the true God,) yet ſcarce one of the Fathers doth plainly and expreſly ſay, that the Zeus of the Exoterical Theology is the true God, moſt of them plainly and expreſly ſay the contrary, all of them did believe the contrary, as ſhall be prov'd preſently. In S. Auſtin's Works indeed I find this ſaying; (b) the Apoſtle when he diſcours'd to the Athenians, manifeſtly ſhew'd, that the wiſe Men of the Gentiles found out the Creator; for having ſaid, that in him we live and move and have our being, he added, as certain alſo of your own have ſaid. But this ſaying muſt not be thought of any great regard; both becauſe it is not wiſe (for it is an unwiſe thing, to ſuppoſe the Philoſophic Pagans the Diſcoverers of the Popular-pagan Jupiter,) and becauſe it is contrary to S. Auſtin's known and uſual Senſe, to ſuppoſe the Popular-pagan Jove the true God. (c) So ſome Modern learned Writers (Grotius and Voſſius) who have entertain'd this Conceit, that Aratus's Zeus is the true God, expreſly contradict themſelves, they ſay it (d) and unſay it, which maketh their ſayings of no regard. And that this Conceit touching Aratus's Zeus (or the Pagan Jupiter in the Coſmical notion,) that he is the true God bleſſed for evermore, is a miſtake altogether groundleſs, will manifeſtly appear from this following Parallel of the Gentiles Caſe.

(b) Expoſ. quarund. prop. ex. ep. ad Rom. T. 4.

(c) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 1. in Annot. Not. in Act 17. 27, 28. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 2.

(d) Grot. Not. in Act 17. 23. Voſſ. de Idol. l. 1. c. 2. ſub fin. ignotus diſtinctè & actu.

The Gentiles acknowledge a Deity or a ſupreme God, as the Rabbins acknowledge a Meſſiah; and in the Gentiles Theology there are many true deſcriptive Notices and other Documents of the Deity, which ought to be interpreted of the true God, as in the Rabbins Theology there are many true Notices of the Meſſiah, which ought to be interpreted of the true Meſſiah. They that believe the true Meſſiah, muſt ſay of this Name and theſe Notices, they are all meant of him. Not as if this was the meaning of the Hebrew Doctors, but this is the meaning of their Names and Notices; for they properly denote and ſignifie him, and the Name is his honourary Name. But the Hebrew Doctors have no ſuch diſtinct determinate meaning, they do not determinately mean them of him, nor of any ſuch kind of Meſſiah. Unleſs they ſpeak of the Meſſiah in a general indeterminate Notion, they mean a Judaical kind of Meſſiah (but touching the Meſſiah underſtood in a general indeterminate Notion their Notices are the ſame with ours;) And if they do ſpeak of the Meſſiah in a general indeterminate Notion (without ſpecific or individual determination) they cannot mean their Name and Notices of him otherwiſe than generally and indeterminately. So the Muhammedans by their Name and Notion of Paradiſe cannot mean that which is really and materially ſuch, nor ſuch a kind of Paradiſe any otherwiſe than generally and indeterminately; which is ſo to mean it, as not to mean it, to mean it without knowing or underſtanding it. Now the Name God, ſupreme God, Zeus, Jupiter, Dios, (which are Synonymous) in the Heathen Doctors is in the ſame Senſe meant or not meant of him that is the true God, as the Name Meſſiah in the Hebrew Doctors is meant or not meant of him that is the true Meſſiah; or as the Name Paradiſe amongſt the Muhammedans is meant or not meant of that which is the true Paradiſe. He that believeth the Theology of the true God, muſt ſay of thoſe Names and theſe Notices, we are the Off-ſpring of Zeus or God, and live and move and have our Being in him, that they are all meant of him. Not as if this was the meaning of the Heathen Doctors: But this is the meaning of their Names and Notices, they properly denote and ſignifie the true God, who is comprehenſively and incluſively the great Father of Nature and Vivificator of the World, and muſt be conſider'd as ſuch without ſetting up ſuch a mundane animative Nature kind of Deity (a mundane or undivine kind of Divinity,) as the Heathen imagined. And as the Chriſtian Theologer diſcourſeth of the Meſſiah from a Jewiſh Author to Jewiſh Auditors, citeth the Sayings of a Rabbi touching the Meſſiah as true Notices of him, that is of Kind and Quality the true Meſſiah (which are ill applied to and underſtood of a Judaical kind of Meſſiah, but are rightly applied to and underſtood of him that is the true Meſſiah,) repreſenting him according to their own Notices, but without affirming or intending to ſay, that by the Meſſiah the Rabbi determinately meaneth him, that is the true Meſſiah: So the Apoſtle diſcourſeth of the Deity from an Heathen Author to Heathen Auditors, citeth the Saying of a Poet touching the Deity as a true Notice of him, that is of Kind and Quality the true God (which is ill apply'd to, and underſtood of an Heathen kind of Deity, but is rightly apply'd to and interpreted of him that is the true God,) repreſenteth him according to their own Notices, but doth not affirm, or intend to ſay, that by God, the ſupreme God, Zeus, Jupiter or Dios the Poet meaneth determinately him that is the true God. No Logick can infer from S. Paul's interpretation of a paſſage in Aratus, a plain Scripture-acknowledgment, that the Greekiſh Pagans did by their Zeus ſometimes mean the true God, or that their Jupiter is the true God bleſſed for evermore. Is it reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that a deifying Soul of the World (which their Zeus or Jupiter is in the beſt Notion of him) is God bleſſed for evermore?

V. The Pagan and Anti-pagan Religioniſts do not acknowledge each others ſupreme Deity, therefore the true God is not a ſupreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity. This Argument is not ſo unexceptionably clear and firm, but that ſeveral objections may be rais'd againſt it, for the removal of which it is requiſite, to diſtinguiſh the occaſional Sayings of particular Perſons both from the general ſenſe of the Community, and from their own Principles of Belief and Practice. Things alſo as they were in themſelves muſt be diſtinguiſh'd from what they are, as they are ſpoken of and repreſented in the ſtile of Scripture-Writers. For as the Writers of the New Teſtament ſpeak of Old Teſtament things in New Teſtament-language: 1 Cor. 10. 9.
So it is reaſonable, to ſuppoſe that Paganical things are ſometimes in Scripture repreſented Heb. 11. 26. and related in the Holy-popular ſtile, all People naturally ſpeaking in their own ſtile. Gen. 39. 3. Joſeph's Maſter ſaw, that the Lord was with him, and that the Lord made all that he did to proſper in his hand. Adoni-bezek's acknowledgment of the Juſtice of Providence ſeemeth, to have ſomething of the Holy-popular ſtile in it. Judg. 1. 7. Adoni-bezek ſaid, threeſcore and ten Kings having their Thumbs and their great Toes cut off, gathered meat under my Table: as I have done, ſo God hath requited me. The Proclamation of King Cyrus was either written Originally in, or afterwards was put into the Holy-popular ſtile; for it is evident beyond all contradiction, that the Stile of it is Holy-popular and Anti-pagan, diametrically oppoſite to the very Pagan Polytheiſm; Ezra 1. 2, 3. Thus ſaith Cyrus King of Perſia, The Lord God of Heaven hath given me all the Kingdoms of the Earth, and he hath charged me, to build him an Houſe at Jeruſalem, which is in Judah. Who is there among you of all his People? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jeruſalem which is in Judah, and build the Houſe of the Lord God of Iſrael, He is the God; which is to acknowledge him the true and only God. It may be ſuppos'd, that Cyrus and ſome other Inſtances of like nature were not meer Heathens, that they made an approach to the Holy-popular State, at leaſt in a lucid Interval, which was (doubtleſs) the caſe of the great Nebuchadnezzar. But thoſe Learned Pagans Themiſtius and Symmachus (of which the former was really a Perſon of great Moderation, Gr. Nazianzen's Friend and Theodoſius's Favourite) do not appear to have made any approach to the Holy-popular State; but being Politick Men and deſigning to gain their Point (a Toleration for Paganiſm) they invented a Plea accommodate for their purpoſe; That the ſeveral Parties of Religioniſts worſhip one and the ſame Supreme God (all agreeing in the acknowledgment of one Supreme, one Prince of the Univerſe, one governing Mind or Providence) that the diverſities of his Religious Worſhip are wholly indifferent, and that (in reſpect of his ſpecific or individual Determination) He is wholly unknown. Themiſtius pretendeth, (e) That the Prince of the Univerſe is delighted with this variety of worſhip; He would have the Syrians (or Chriſtians) to religionize one way, the Greeks another, and the Egyptians another. Symmachus pleadeth, (f) It is reaſon to think, that what all Worſhip is one and the ſame; we all behold the ſame Stars, have the ſame Heaven in common, the ſame World involveth us. What matter is it, by what methods of Prudence every one ſeeketh the Truth? By one only way there is no coming at ſo groat a Secret. But before the Roman Empire became Chriſtian (while Chriſtianity was under the Hatches) Paganiſm did not talk at this rate; the Sayings of theſe Authors are not the Senſe of the Community of the Pagans, nor the Principles of their Belief and Practice as Pagan Religioniſts; but they are occaſional Sayings and politick Fetches, to ſerve a Deſign. Nor ought we to think, that this is the true Supreme God which theſe Mundane Syſtem Theiſts acknowledge; for it is nothing better than a Godleſs-kind of God, not a Supreme Deity of our Specific Determination. They groſly impoſe upon themſelves, or ſeek to impoſe upon others in over-looking the ſpecific and individual Determination of the Supreme Deity, as if a Supreme Deity could exiſt without it, or as if it was wholly unknown. (g) How can I believe you (ſaith S. Ambroſe) who acknowledge that you know not what you worſhip? But agreeably to theſe Pagans and on a like Deſign, a ſuppos'd Jewiſh Proſelyte, Ariſtæus in Joſephus, that he might procure from Ptolomee Philadelph liberty for the Jews to return to their own Country, thus pleadeth with him on their behalf: (h) For both they Jews and we Greeks do worſhip the God that conſtituted all things, fitly calling him Zene or Zeus, becauſe he inſpireth Life into all: But this occaſional Saying (agreeably whereunto (i) a ſuppoſititious Ariſtobulus diſcourſeth) is not agreeable to a Jewiſh Proſelyte's Principles of Belief and Practice, nor to the Senſe of the Community of the Jewiſh Church: It is a politick Pretenſion, accommodate to ſerve a Deſign, and as accommodate to the Humour of Joſephus, a known Flatterer of the Pagans.

Some of theſe Anſwers that we give to Joſephus's Ariſtæus, are alſo an Anſwer to another Objection againſt our Argument from the Sayings of the Modern Rabbins; for theſe alſo ſay, (k) that the Gentiles worſhipp'd the true Supreme God together with his Subordinate Miniſters; but this their Saying is not agreeable to the Senſe of the Jewiſh Church, nor to the Principles of their own Belief and Practice; beſides, they ſay it, and gainſay it, as the Humour taketh them, or as may beſt ſerve their turn, and commonly their Sayings are none of the wiſeſt. They generally ſay, (l) that in proceſs of time, till Abraham was born (the Pillar of the World and our Father) the venerable and terrible Name was loſt מפי ומדעת out of the Mouth and out of the knowledge of all Men, and they did not acknowledge it. They ſuppoſe therefore, that the Gentiles in the elder times (and in after-times they did not amend their Manners) were not Worſhippers of the true God. If the Jews of old had thought them ſuch, if they had ſuppos'd, that the Capitoline Jupiter (in any Notion under which the Romans worſhipp'd him) was the true Jehovah, they might with great ſatisfaction have paid their Temple-tribute to the Capitol at Rome, as Veſpaſian order'd it: The Emperour Adrian would ſcarce have provok'd them to a Rebellion by erecting a Temple to Jove in the place where their former Temple ſtood. Had they but diſtinguiſh'd the ſeveral Pagan Notions of Jove, and pitch'd upon the beſt (rejecting the other) which is the Coſmical or that of Aratus, it is ſuppos'd, that they had pitch'd upon the true God. In this Notion therefore they might and ought to have own'd Jove for the true Jehovah, and Jupiter Olympius for the God of Heaven, which would have gone a great way to ſave them harmleſs in the times of Antiochus Epiphanes; but for want of underſtanding an happy diſtinction the Church of the Jews (thoſe that knew their God) ſuffer'd a tragical Perſecution. They thought none of the Heathen Deities were real, and therefore ſome Heathens accounted them Atheiſts, ſuch as ſay, there are no Gods (as Ariſtides in Photius (m) reproacheth them;) and thoſe of them that liv'd at Rome could not be believ'd upon their Oath, when they ſware by the Capitoline Jupiter (ſirnam'd the Thunderer) therefore the Pagans thought it requiſite, that they ſhould ſwear by their own God, neither Jews nor Pagans ſuppoſing, that the Paganical Jove was the Iſraelitical Jehovah.

(n) Ecce negas, juraſque mihi per Templa Tonantis,
*Non credo, jura Verpe per * Anchialum.*

As the Jews ſometimes, ſo the Primitive Chriſtians uſually were charg'd with Atheiſm by the Pagan Religioniſts; the common cry in the Amphitheatres was αἶρε τοὺς ἀθέους, away with the Atheiſts. And the Chriſtian Apologiſts are ſo far from denying the Charge, that they acknowledge themſelves Atheiſts (o) with reſpect to the (c) Orat. 12.

(f) Æquum eſt, quicquid omnes colunt, unum putari: eadem ſpectamus Aſtra; commune Cœlum eſt; Idem nos mundus involvit: Quid intereſt, qua quiſque prudentia Verum inquirat? uno Itinere non poteſt perveniri ad tam grande ſecretum. L. 10. Ep. 54.

(g) Quomodo poſſum vobis credere, qui fatemini vos ignorare quod colitis? S. Ambr. l. 5. Ep. 31.

(h) Τὸν γὰρ ἅπαντα συστησάμενον Θεὸν καὶ οὗτοι καὶ ἡμεῖς σεβόμεθα, Ζῆνα καλοῦντες αὐτὸν, ἐτοίμως ἀπὸ τοῦ σύμπασιν ἐμφύειν τὸ ζῆν τὴν ἐπίκλησιν αὐτοῦ νοήσαντες. Grot. Not. in Act. 17. 27.

(u) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 13. c. 12.

(k) Intell. Syſt. p. 457, &c.

(l) Maimon. de Idol. c. 1. S. 5.

(m) Cod. 248. ſub fin.

(n) Martial. l. 11. Ep. 95.

* Id eſt per Elohim Hebræorum. v. Scalig. de emend. Temp. in Append. Harmenop. in Plin. l. 5. c 27.

(o) J. Mart. Apol. 2 p. 56.

νομιζόμενοι θεοὶ, reputed Heathen Deities univerſally and without exception. (p) They pretend not to worſhip any of the ſame Gods with them, expreſly and in terms they diſavow the Worſhip of Jove without any diſtinction or limitation, which they could not have done without the Conſcience of Atheiſm and of Blaſphemy, if they had ſuppos'd, that the Zeus or Jove of the Exoterical Theology is in any Notion of him the true God. (q) Nec Romani habemur, quia non Romanorum Deum colimus; we are not counted Romans, becauſe we worſhip not the God of the Romans, ſaith Tertullian. (r) Deum tangimus, & cum miſericordiam extorſerimus, Jupiter honoratur: We move God to ſhew mercy (by our Prayers in Droughts and other publick Calamities) and Jupiter getteth the praiſe. (s) Quid aliter feciſſet Ethnicus, qui Jovem Deum credidit? would an Heathen have done otherwiſe, who believ'd Jupiter to be God? (t) Why is the mention of our Name ſo horrid to you, if we worſhip the ſame God with you? that our God is not Jove, is plain from the Anger of your Gods againſt us. Theſe Sayings of the Chriſtian Apologiſts are of the greater Remark, becauſe they are not occaſional (for the ſerving an Hypotheſis or Deſign, as many are in Clemens Stromata) they ſpeak the Senſe of the Community of Chriſtians, they are the Principles of their Faith and Practice, and upon theſe Principles (for refuſing the worſhip of Jove in any of the Pagans Notion of him) the Martyrs laid down their lives. None of the Chriſtian Theiſts dareth to worſhip the Pagan Jove as the true Supreme God; though ſome of them have fallen into miſtakes in Speculation (through the difficulty and intricacy that is in this Theory) and though all of them ſpeak not as Origen, yet all of them believe and live, as Origen ſpeaketh, (u) we will rather undergo any Torment, than confeſs Jupiter to be God. For ſuch a Deity is of this Specific Determination, a Pagan and Pagan-religion kind of Deity, and ſuch Theiſm is Pagan-kind of Theiſm, incompetible to any genuine and legitimate Theiſt, conſtitutive and characteriſtical of a Pagan-kind of Theiſt; as in the elder times of Judaiſm when Baal, Moloch, Milchom, was reputatively the Supreme Deity, to confeſs ſuch a reputed Deity to be God (meaning thereby either a diſtinct Deity from the God of Iſrael, or confounding him with the God of Iſrael) muſt neceſſarily conſtitute a Pagan-kind of Theiſt. (w) Light hath nothing in common with Darkneſs, not a God in common. Therefore the Pagan Polytheiſm was a paſſing by the true God, as Prudentius telleth his Pagan Adverſary in another caſe.

Tu me præterito meditaris numina mille.

As no genuine Jew or Chriſtian Theiſt acknowledgeth any one of the Heathen Deities; ſo no meer Heathen can acknowledge the Deity of theſe Anti-pagan Religioniſts; for if he did, he would be no meer Heathen. A meer Heathen muſt either deny him and explode him, or if he doth diſtinctly and determinately acknowledge him in any wiſe, he muſt account him one of his Paganical Deities; but ſuch an acknowledgment of him the Anti-pagan Religioniſts do not count an acknowledgment of their God. Celſus (who is not wanting in devout acknowledgments of the Heathen Deities) wholly denieth him and explodeth him; (x) jeereth at the Jews Altiſſimus, moſt High, preſaging how ill the Romans were likely to fare, if relinquiſhing their ancient Rites they ſhould receive his Worſhip, whoſe People having promiſes of great things, and hoping for the Dominion of the World, were left deſtitute of Houſe and Land. Of the Platoniſts Supreme Deity he ſaith, (y) the Jewiſh Nation knew not the great God. Of the Chriſtians Supreme Deity he ſaith, (z) Like Father like Son. (a) Nonne Romani ſine veſtro Deo imperant, regnant, fruuntur orbe toto, veſtrique dominantur? Do not the Romans (ſaith Cæcilius) without your God rule, reign, enjoy the World, and Dominion over you? But the Learned Varro did not thus rudely explode the God of the Hebrews; he ſo far acknowledgeth him, as to make him one of his Paganical Deities; for he is of Opinion, (b) that the God of the Hebrews is the ſame with (the higheſt Deity of his Acquaintance) the Capitoline Jove in the beſt Notion of him, which is that of Aratus. S. Auſtin himſelf in anſwer to that uſual demand of the Pagans, Quis iſte Deus eſt? who is that God that ought alone to be worſhipp'd? maketh anſwer; Ipſe eſt Deus quem Varro doctiſſimus Romanorum Jovem putat, quamvis neſciens quid loquatur: He is the God, whom Varro the moſt Learned of the Romans thinketh Jove, although not knowing what he ſaith. And thus he bewaileth Varro's Infelicity. (c) The Supreme Deity or the true God (for the true God is not the Soul of the World, but the maker of Soul) thy ſo learned and ingenious Soul could by no means arrive at. Clemens ſaith (not without miſtake) of the Father of the Peripateticks, (d) Not underſtanding the Supreme Father, he ſuppoſeth the Soul of the World to be God. Him I pronounce moſt extremely impious, ſaith Euſebius, (e) that ſaith the Parts of the World are the Members of God; Him much more, that affirmeth God and the World to be one and the ſame thing; and laſtly, τὸν ἡγούμενον τοῦ κόσμου νοῦν τῶν ὅλων δημιουργὸν, Him that ſuppoſeth the Mind of the World, to be the Opificer of all things. (f) The Apoſtate Julian is not ſo reſpectful to the God of the Hebrews as the Learned Varro; for although in an humour he pretendeth, to worſhip the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob the greateſt and moſt potent God (he ſaith it, and ſweareth it alſo:) yet in another humour he maketh the God of the Hebrews nothing higher than one of his Topical Preſidentiary Deities; yet is not unwilling to ſuppoſe him the next and immediate Opificer of the World in the Platonic Notion. Whatever his Exteriour Pretenſions were, his Interiour Sentiments are evident from his Character; for being an Apoſtate Pagan Theiſt, he either thought the God of the Hebrews no Deity, or one of the Pagan Deities. Being an Apoſtate Pagan Platoniſt, he either thought the God of the Hebrews no Deity, or one of the Platonic Syſtem of Deities, amongſt which Platonic Deities the next and immediate Opificer of the World is of a Rank below the Supreme Deity. (g) The grave and judicious Plutarch is far more out in his Notices of the God of the Hebrews than Varro or Julian; becauſe the Jews were notoriouſly addicted to Drunkenneſs (as they are at this day) revelling

(p) Ibid. p. 68.

(q) *Tertul. Apol. c.*24.

(r) Ibid. c. 40.

(s) Idem de Idol. c. 21.

(t) Quid ut ominis peſſimi, noſtri nominis inhorreſcitis mentione, ſi quem Deum colitis, eum & nos? quem Jovem non eſſe, ipſis clarum eſt indignationibus numinum. Arnob. c. Gent. l. 1. p. 19.

(u) Πᾶσαν αἰκίαν ὑπομένειν μᾶλλον αἱρούμεθα, ἢ τὸν Δία ὁμολογῆσαι Θεόν. C. Celſ. l. 5. p. 262.

(w) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 1. p. 7.

(x) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 423, 424.

(y) Ibid. l. 5. p. 259.

(z) Ibid. l. 7. p 355, 358.

( ) Min. Fæl. p. 105.

(b) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 19. c. 22. de Conſenſ. Evangel. l. 1. c. 22.

(c) Anima tua tam docta & ingenioſa ad Deum ſummum (Deus enim verus non Anima, ſed Animæ eſt effector & conditor) nullo modo potuit pervenire. De C. D. l. 4. c. 31. l. 7. c. 5.

(d) Οὐ νοήσας τὸν πατέρα τὸν καλούμενον ὕπατον, τοῦ κόσμου τὴν ψυχὴν θεὸν ὑπολαμβάνων. Προτρεπτ. p. m. 33.

(e) Pr. Ev. l. 3. c. 10.

(f) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 10. p. 354. l. 4. p. 142.

(g) V. Cunæum de Rep. Hebr. l. 2. c. 24.

upon the Sabbath, Plutarch entertain'd a Conceit, that the God whom they worſhipp'd was Bacchus, and that their Sabbath had its Name from Sabi, a word which was uſual in the Feaſts of Bacchus. Some other Paganical Conceits of like nature touching the God of the Hebrews will occurr preſently.

VI. If a Supreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity is the true God, or (which is the ſame thing) if God is a Supreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity, then God is the Mundane or Paganomundane Empire's Imperial Eſtate; but if this Hypotheſis be falſe (as we have plainly demonſtrated) God cannot be a Supreme Deity of the Pagans Theopolity. The difference between the Pagan and Anti-pagan Theology is a Diſpute between two pretending Wholes or Catholic Syſtems, the Church (or the Kingdom of God) and the World. Both Theologies have the ſame Notion of a City, Polity and Kingdom; both agree touching the Rules and Meaſures of Duty to the whole, and both agree, that there is a Catholic Syſtem, which is the City and Kingdom of God. But theſe Attributes the Pagan Theology appropriateth to the World, the Chriſtian Theology appropriateth them to the Church. The Diſpute between theſe two Theologies, (h) de intelligentia veri Dei, touching the underſtanding the true God, is really a Diſpute, to which of theſe two Catholic Syſtems the true Supreme God belongeth? Both Theologies agree, that He cannot belong to both theſe Catholic Syſtems; for they are ſuch pretending Catholic Syſtems, that are manifeſtly inconſiſtent. The Pagans Catholic Syſtem ſhutteth out of Being the Holy Empire, the Church of God. And the Hypotheſis of this Holy Empire is of a ruinous nature to their Whole or Catholic Syſtem, to the Supreme Deity of their Theopolity, to their native ſtate of Mankind (for they ſuppoſe, that Pagan Mankind are (i) God's Societiſts, Fellow-Citizens, Domeſticks and Sons) to their Duty unto their Whole, to their Bravery and Virtue, and to their Inſtitution thereof. (k) All good Inſtitution (ſay they) is compris'd in this; in conjoyning one's ſelf with the Whole, in willing to be wholly univerſaliz'd, not to make a Diſcerption of one's ſelf from the Whole, and circumſcribing one's ſelf into a parvitude and nullity, to be repugnant to the Univerſe, willing the Univerſe to be obſequious to a part of ſuch Vilities. An appearance there is of a ſublime and generous Sentiment in this Abridgment of the Philoſophic Pagans Inſtitution of Virtue; but it is founded upon a falſe imaginary ſtate of the Univerſe. Upon this they founded their Rules of Active and Paſſive Virtue; (l) to have ſuch Citizenſhip with the Gods and Men, as neither to complain of them for any thing, nor be condemn'd by them; always and in all things to obey the City-Law; for one little Shank (ſaith Epictetus) wilt thou find fault with the World? wilt thou not ſurrender it to the Whole? (m) Man is part of a City, the City which conſiſteth of God's and Men, (as the Foot is part of an Humane Body) and muſt conflict with Poverty and Danger, be ſick and die ὑπὲρ τοῦ ὅλου, for the whole. Some of them thought it ſuch a Bravery, to be a Coſmopolite (a Citizen of the whole) that they would be initiated into all Paganical Religions; others of them religiouſly obſerv'd the Rites of all ſuch Religions, making their own Religion (what the Stoicks (n) call the World) τὸ παμμιγὲς, a Meſs of all together; for Marinus ſaith of Proclus; that moſt Religious Man uſually ſaid, (o) That a Philoſopher ſhould not only be a religious obſerver of the Inſtitutes of ſome one City, or the Country-rites of a few; but he ſhould be in common a Prieſt of the Sacra of the whole World. Such is their Catholic Syſtem, not the Catholic Church, but the grand oppoſite thereto the Paganomundane Empire, of which the true God cannot be the Imperial Eſtate. Paganiſm can no more admit of ſuch a Deity for its Imperial Eſtate, than it can admit of ſuch an holy Polity or Monarchic Syſtem as the Church or Kingdom of God (according to Chriſtianity;) for He is the Kingdom of God-kind of Imperial Eſtate, and may be denominated The Kingdom of God-kind of God.

VII. There is nothing in Paganiſm ſo like to the true God as the Popular-pagan Jupiter in the Coſmical Notion; from whence it followeth, that there is nothing more unlike the true God than that Clandeſtine, hidden and unpopular Deity, the Platoniſts Hen or T'Agathon; of which a competently good account hath been given already; but becauſe ſeveral of the Fathers have ſuppos'd, that this Platonic Principle is the true God, and this is a matter that nearly concerneth the Theory of the Chriſtian Trinity, therefore we will make ſome additional Remarks touching this Deity.

Remark I.

This Platonic Supreme Deity is Idiotically Philoſophic (or Unpopular) and never was, nor ever can be any People's Deity, as the true God is. If Philoſophers will have ſuch a Deity, they muſt have him alone, appropriate to themſelves and their Schools, according to a celebrated Saying of Plato in his Timæus. (p) It is a difficulty to find out the Opificer and Father of this Univerſe; and when he is found out, it is impoſſible to declare Him to the generality of Men. Whether this Saying is meant of Plato's Supreme Deity, (q) as Origen and Celſus underſtand it; or of ſome other of his Deities, (as the moſt and beſt of the Platoniſts underſtand it;) there can be no doubt, but that his Supreme Deity is of this Character, He is wholly an Unpopular-kind of Deity, as this celebrated Saying repreſenteth him. But although the Saying is manifeſtly abſur'd, becauſe the true God is certainly no ſuch Deity, (r) yet Origen thinketh it generous, and Clemens ſuppoſeth, that Plato ſpake thus of God, (s) becauſe he had heard, that when Moſes aſcended the Mountain by holy Contemplation, he forbad all the People to go up with him. Minucius Fœlix having applauded Plato for his plain and clear Speeches of God (whereas nothing can be more obſcure and unintelligible than his Deity) citeth this Saying in the Timæus, and parallels therewith the Religion of Chriſtians. (t) Those things are almoſt the ſame with ours; for we also

(h) Oroſ. Hiſt. l. 6. c. 1.

(i) Sen. Ep. 94. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 24. l. 1. c. 9.

(k) Συνεκτικὸν δὲ ὅτι τοῦτο πάσης εὐαγωγίας, τὸ συντάττειν ἑαυτὸν τοῖς ὅλοις, καὶ θέλειν ὅλον εἶναι μετ' ἐκείνων, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἑαυτὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ ὅλου ἀποσπῶντα, καὶ εἰς μικρὸν καὶ οὐδὲν περιγράφοντα, ἀντιτείνειν τοῖς ὅλοις, καὶ βούλεσθαι καὶ τὰ ὅλα τῷ οὕτως εὐτελῶν μέρει ἀκολουθεῖν. Simplic. in Epict. Ench. c. 78.

(l) Θεοῖς τε καὶ ἀνθρώποις οὕτω συμπολιτεύεσθαι, ὡς μήτε μέμφεσθαί τι αὐτοῖς, μήτε καταγινώσκεσθαι ὑπ' αὐτῶν. M. Ant. l. 10. S. 1. Ἀεὶ τῷ νόμῳ τῆς πόλεως πείθεσθαι ἐν παντί. Epict. Diſſ. l. 3. c. 24. Δι' ἓν σκελύδριον τῷ κόσμῳ ἐγκαλεῖς; οὐκ ἐπιδώσεις αὐτὸ τοῖς ὅλοις; Ibid. l. 1. c. 12.

(m) Epict. Diſſ. l. 2. c. 5.

(n) M. Ant. l. 11. §. 48.

(o) Ὅτι τὸν φιλόσοφον προσήκει, οὐ μιᾶς τινος πόλεως, οὐδὲ τῶν παρ' ἐνίοις πατρίων εἶναι θεραπευτήν· κοινῇ δὲ τοῦ ὅλου κόσμου ἱεροφάντην. In Vit. Procl. ſub fin.

(p) Τὸν μὲν οὖν ποιητὴν καὶ πατέρα τοῦδε τοῦ παντὸς εὑρεῖν τε ἔργον, καὶ εὑρόντα εἰς πάντας ἀδύνατον λέγειν.

(q) l. 7. p. 360.

(r) Ibid.

(s) Str. l. 5. p. m.

(t) Eadem ferè & iſta quæ noſtra ſunt. nam & Deum vimus, & parentem omnium dicimus, & nunquam publice niſi interrogati prædicamus P. 144, 145.

alſo know God, and call him the Parent of the Univerſe; and never publickly declare him, unleſs we be queſtion'd. From which Saying of a Chriſtian Apologiſt (and many other like Inſtances) it is manifeſt, that the elder times of the Church were guilty of unskilful tampering with the Chriſtian Religion, to accommodate it to the Sentiments of the School of Plato. For what can be more Unchriſtian than this Platonic-kind of Chriſtianiſm, never to ſpeak of God publickly unleſs queſtion'd! And in this Apologiſt Plato's applauded Saying is thus rendred; in publicum dicere impoſſibile eſt, it is impoſſible to declare God publickly: Whereas all Mankind have their natural Notices of the true God, and the light of the true knowledge of God (true Piety) is indiſpenſably and univerſally neceſſary, and ought to be as publick as the Light of the Sun, and Chriſtians are bound to do their beſt, to make it ſo. The Rabbins (that are Acroamatical Theologers, yet) ſay; (u) ſummè neceſſarium eſt, at the higheſt rate it is neceſſary, that this Doctrine be diffus'd amongſt the Vulgar, and Children be initiated in it, that God is one, and that no other is to be worſhipped but He alone. So the Pagan Theologers ought to have begun their Number-Theology, not like Mathematicians from a Point or an Arithmetical Unite, but like Theiſts, from one God, who is the true Unite, the oppoſite to the Polytheiſts number. (w) Duo enim non ſunt, quod pertineat propriè ad numeri retractatum; for there are not two Gods, which would be Number and Multitude. But inſtead of one God the old Metaphyſical Theologers ſubſtituted a meer Henotety or Unite-Nature, that is nothing but Ipſum Unum, which none have reaſon to concern themſelves about, ſave only they that philoſophize (ſpeculate the World of Platonic Intelligibles) which can be of no concern to the unphiloſophic generality of Mankind, and that is ſuch a Super-metaphyſical Tranſcendental, to which the People can make no approach, nor the Metaphyſicians themſelves otherwiſe than by blind methods of Enthuſiaſm. (x) Plato ſaith of his Supreme God, as Apuleius affirmeth, that it is He alone, who cannot by the Poor nothing of Humane Language be in the leaſt meaſure comprehended in any Speech; ſcarce to the Wiſe Men, when by the vigour of the Mind they have removed themſelves as far as may be from the Body, the Perception of this God (appeareth) as a candid Light with a moſt rapid Brightneſs, and that ſometimes as ſhining in the midſt of deepeſt Darkneſs.

REMARK 2.

This Supreme Deity is Idiotically Philoſophic in a ſecond Senſe, as Philoſophic is oppos'd to Religious; for it never was, nor can be a Deity of Religion, as the true God is. The Deity muſt be worſhipp'd (y) Νόμῳ πόλεως, according to the Law of our City, and κτ̀ τὰ πάτρια, according to the Inſtitutes of our Country, (as the Pagan Theologers agree;) therefore ſuch an Acroamatical Unpopular kind of Deity, which City-Laws and Country-Inſtitutes can have no acquaintance with (which yet Numa might have reſpect to in ſome of his Inſtitutes) could never be a Deity of Religion. Religion is the Duty and Intereſt of the Publick, the common concern of Mankind and of all Societies of Men; ſuch a Deity therefore that cannot be publickly declar'd, can never be a Deity of Religion. Mankind are not thought to be under any Law or Obligation, to be Religious to this kind of Deity, to know him, ſerve and obey him; for which reaſon it was, that Plato made no mention of him in his Book of Laws or his Epinomis, and not for that fooliſh reaſon which Joſephus imagineth, (z) That the Greek Philoſophers had right Apprehenſions concerning God, but durſt not ſpeak them out. The generality of Mankind have no Notices at all of this Deity, following their natural Notices they deny his Exiſtence; for (as the Chalday Oracles obſerve) all Mankind ſuppoſe, that Mind or Intellect is the firſt and ſupreme Deity, ἀγνοοῦντες τὴν πατρικὴν ὑπεροχήν, not knowing the Eminence of the Father (ſaith Pſellus;) therefore this Deity cannot be a Deity of Natural Religion. Nor was he ever, or is now, the Deity of any Religion Pagan or Anti-pagan; and not being the Imperial Eſtate of a Religion (although the Platoniſts aſcribe to him βασιλείαν τῶν ὄντων, a Kingdom or Headſhip over their Entia,) he is not ſo much as a counterfeit reſemblance of that Imperial Eſtate which the true God is. Nor doth he pretend to any thing like a Religion or God-ſervice; (a) for Temples, Sacrifices, Solemn Invocations, Hymns of Praiſe, all Material Worſhip, all External Worſhip, all Publick Worſhip (as the chief of the Platoniſts ſay) are incompetible to this Metaphyſical Super-tranſcendental. One that is his Devotioniſt muſt (b) ὁμιλῆσαι τῷ ἀγαθῷ μόνῳ μόνος, ſolitarily converſe with the ſolitary T'Agathon; and an aſpire after Union with this Principle is (c) φυγὴ μόνου πρὸς μόνον, the flight of a ſolitary one to the ſolitary one. His Philoſophic Devotioniſts exerciſe a rapturous Love (which is ſtiled (d) ἐρωτικὴ μανία, amatorious Madneſs;) but will allow no ſuch thing as Fear; for as the Oracles ſay, (e) πατὴρ οὐ φόβον ἐνθρώσκει, The Father doth not cauſe Fear. Not being the cauſe of Evil to any, to make him fearful, He is belov'd by all (ſaith Pletho;) therefore the impious Heathens were no haters of this kind of Deity. Had they known him, there is no cauſe imaginable, why they ſhould not like to retain him in their knowledge: but the generality of them not knowing him at all, this could not be the God, whom they did not like to retain in their knowledge. Nor could this be the unknown God at Athens; for that was a Deity declarable to the People by preaching, this is undeclarable and not to be preach'd to the People. The Athenian Philoſophers were no Acquaintance of that unknown God; but the Principal of them were the great Intimates of this, and his Hierophantæ, ſo far as he is capable of any. That unknown God is the σέβασμα, the worſhip of Religion objectively; ſcarce any thing of Religious Worſhip (not ſo much as an Altar at Athens) is competible to this Arcane Deity.

REMARK 3.

This Supreme Deity is not only an Idiotically Philoſophic, but an Idiotically Platonic Deity, peculiar to the School of the Platoniſts and Pythagoreans, which cannot be ſuppos'd to have inclos'd and monopoliz'd the true God, nor can it be ſuppos'd, that the other Philoſophers were Atheiſts, who rejected this Platonic Monad, affirming, that Mind (or Intellect) was the firſt and higheſt Principle. If Proclus (f) and Apuleius (g) ſay true, Plato's Theology and Sect inveſtigated this Deity, which was certainly excogitated by ſubtil Metaphyſical Theologers, who agreeably to their faculty invented a Deity more thin and ſubtil and leſs ſolid than Epicurus's monogrammous Deities. Excogitating this Deity they robb'd the Metaphyſicians Ens of two of its Attributes, Unum & Bonum (one and good,) but they omitted the third, Verum (or True,) which they have degraded unto a ſecond Nature. And the reaſon of their omiſſion is plain; for if they had conjoin'd Verum with Unum & Bonum, they muſt have made their firſt Principle an object of Underſtanding and Science; whereas now it is ſo highly elevated a Principle, that they ſay of it, (h) ſupereminet genus intelligibile, eſt igitur Ente ſuperius, it ſurmounteth the intelligible kind, and is therefore beyond Ens. But if it is no Entity, no Eſſence, no Verity, it can be no true reality, and therefore is but a Figment. Which alſo appeareth from the Queſtion between the Platoniſts and the other Philoſophers thus rightly ſtated. (i) Whether beyond Soul-Nature and beyond Intellectual Nature there is not a third kind of incorporeal Nature (or Subſtance,) which is Un-intellectual, Super-intellectual, meer Henotety, Unity and Indiſtinction? They that deny it, have great reaſon on their ſide; for to the Intellectual Nature the ſupreme Guidance and Government of all things manifeſtly belongeth (which ſheweth, that there can be no higher incorporeal Nature;) and if there may be an higher kind of incorporeal Nature or Subſtance than the Intellectual, there muſt be ſome Perfection incompetible to the Intellectual Nature: But all poſſible Perfection (Wiſdom, Power, Goodneſs, Holineſs, the Life Divine) is competible to the Intellectual Nature; there can be therefore no higher kind of Incorporeal Nature. On the contrary, the Platoniſts (k) alledge divers Reaſons (without any ſound Reaſon,) to prove, that Intellect, Intellection and Knowledge cannot belong to the firſt and higheſt Principle. Which is ſo monſtrous a Paradox, that the Platoniſt Simplicius rejecteth it, and a learned Abettor of the Platonic Theiſm thus deſcanteth upon it. (l) Shall we ſay, that the firſt Hypoſtaſis or Perſon in the Platonic Trinity is ἄνους, and ἄλογος, ſenſleſs and irrational, and altogether devoid of Mind and Underſtanding? Would not this be to introduce a certain kind of myſterious Atheiſm? Doubtleſs ſuch an unintellectual kind of Deity is a grand abſurdity: But if ſuch a Deity muſt be exploded, what will become of the Platonic Triad? And of the 'Εμπεριχώρησις, Circuminſeſſion of the Perſons of it, (m) which is explain'd by ſuppoſing the firſt Archical Hypoſtaſis unintellectual? Is it not far better, that the learned Abettors of Platonic Theiſm ſhould throughly contradict it and abandon it, rather than contradict themſelves in maintaining it? And it is abandon'd at a great rate by ſuppoſing with Simplicius, (n) that the firſt and higheſt Principle is not devoid of Wiſdom, but hath the moſt perfect Knowledge; for according to this Hypotheſis this ſublime Principle is Intellect (νοῦν γὰρ δεῖ γενέσθαι, ἵνα νοῇ, (o) for it muſt be Intellect, or it cannot underſtand) not a pure Tranſcendental to Mind and Intellect; not a Divinity of Nature becauſe it is tranſcendental to intellectual Nature; not the firſt in the Number-kind of Theology, but Multitude and Number; not a Myſtic-Metaphyſical firſt Nature devoid of all Multiplicity, Duplicity, Form, Species and Idea; the Hypotheſis of the Anti-platonic Philoſophers is the true Hypotheſis, that Mind and Intellect is the firſt and higheſt Principle; and there are not theſe three Ranks of ſubordinate incorporeal Natures, Soul-Nature, Intellectual-Nature, and the Unity. All the Platoniſts Notices of it, Diſputes about it, Modes of honouring it, and Methods of enjoying it, would be Nonſenſe, if this Deity was Intellectual Nature: Nor could he be an Acroamatical and purely Platonic kind of Deity, if he was eaſily intelligible Intellectual Nature: To ſuppoſe him ſuch, is ruinous to the Platonic Trinity; for it deſtroyeth one of the three incorporeal Natures; the ground of introducing the firſt Archical Hypoſtaſis (which is introduc'd upon this ground, becauſe, there muſt be a pure ſimple Monad before Multitude and Intellect;) and 'tis a jumbling into one Hypoſtaſis what is conſtitutive and diſtinctive of two, whereby one Archical Hypoſtaſis is neceſſarily loſt. For ſo it fareth with Simplicius in his account of the Deity (p) becauſe he attributeth to the firſt Hypoſtaſis a moſt perfect Knowledge and therefore an intellectual Nature (which no genuin Platonic Triadiſt ever did,) he is neceſſitated wholly to omit and leave out the ſecond Hypoſtaſis, contenting himſelf with two Hypoſtaſes and two Natures; the one Moveable (which is Soul-Nature,) the other immoveable and unchangeable. Some profeſs'd Platoniſts pervert the Platonic Philoſophy, as Origen (not the Chriſtian Origen) enormouſly did; who was a profeſs'd Platoniſt, yet in his account of the Deity he aſcended no higher than Mind making that the firſt and higheſt Principle: But Proclus demonſtrateth, (q) that his Opinion was extremely Diſſonant from the Platonick Philoſophy, and that Plato would not own him for one of his Allies. Such Platonizing is Anti-platoniſm, it is a taking part with the Platoniſts Adverſaries in the great Diſpute, whether Mind be the Senior of all things?

(u) Maimon. Mor. Nev. par. 1. c. 35.

(w) Tertul. c. Marcion. l. 1. c. 5. & 7.

(x) Deum ſummum ſic à Platone prædicari aſſeverat Apuleius, quod ipſe ſit ſolus, qui non poſſit penuriâ ſermonis humani quavis oratione vel modice comprehendi; vix autem ſapientibus viris, cùm ſe vigore animi, quantum licuit, à corpore removerint, intellectum hujus Dei, & id quoque interdum velut in altiſſimis tenebris rapidiſſimo coruſcamine lumen candidum intermicare. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 9. c. 16.

(y) Marcil. com. in car. Pythag. p. 344.

(z) Ap. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 8. c. 8.

(a) See p. 141, 142. and Gale in Jambl. p. 199.

(b) Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 22. Procl. in Tim. p. 65.

(c) Plotin. En. 6. l. 9. c. 11.

(d) Procl. Th. Plat. l. 1. c. 25.

(e) P. 49. 50 Procl. Plat. Theol. p. 105.

(f) Eugub. de per. Phil. l. 2. c. 8.

(g) Apolog. p. 515. ed. Beroald.

Which Diſpute we have hitherto conſider'd only with deſign, to reflect upon the Platoniſts Acroamatical ſupreme Deity: But this Diſpute is of more large extent and uſe; for it effectually ruineth the Aſſertion of ſome Divines, that every ſupreme Deity ſuppos'd to be infinite in all Perfection and Maker of the World, is the one true God. For here we have two Parties of Philoſophic Papans diſputing, whether Mind or a ſupra-mental Monad (both ſuppos'd to be infinite in all Perfection and Makers of the World) is the ſupreme God? Both cannot be the true ſupreme God (if Mind is the ſupreme God, the Platoniſts Monad is but a figment;) therefore every imaginary ſupreme Deity (ſuppos'd to be infinite in all Perfection and the Maker of the World) is not the one true God. The ſame Concluſion may be inferr'd from another Diſpute amongſt the Platoniſts themſelves. (r) For Proclus and Jamblichus alſo (as ſome ſuppoſe) diſputeth, and pretendeth to demonſtrate that before Plato's Triad of Archical Hypoſtaſes, and conſequently before his ſupreme Deity, there is a Monad ſtanding alone by its ſelf, and the head of all. This Monad is a ſuperiour Monad to Plato's, a Deity beyond his ſupreme Deity; both theſe ſupreme Monads or Deities cannot be the true ſupreme God; therefore every imaginary ſupreme Deity (ſuppos'd to be infinite in all Perfection and the Maker of the World) is not the one true God. This doubtleſs is a Demonſtration, or elſe there is no ſuch thing in Mathematicks; and who would Deifie ſuch Platonic Monads, of which every phanciful Platoniſt can be a Demiurgus?

RE-

(h) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 525.

(i) Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 1. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 3.

(k) Intell. Syſt. p. 584, 585.

(l) Ibid. p. 585.

(m) Ibid. p. 591.

(n) Ibid. p. 558, 586.

(o) Plotin. En. 5. l. 6. c. 2. Mentem tranſcendere, nihil aliud eſt, quam ab ipſa mente jam cadere. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 9.

(p) In Epictet. p. 210. ed. Cantabr.

(q) Plat. Th. l. 2. c. 4. p. 89, 90.

(r) Intell. Syſt. p. 626, 627. Petav. de Trin. l. 1. p. 3, 4.

Remark 4.

This ſupreme Deity is an Idiotically Philoſophic-pagan Deity; and being of Kind and Quality Pagan, upon that account (as well as the Popular-pagan Jove) he cannot be the true ſupreme God. For agreeably to the Popular-pagan Jove this ſupreme Deity is the ſupreme of Pagan Deities, one of them and Head of the Family. And accordingly he is called by the Names of Pagan Deities; (s) for the Pythagoreans called him Apollo (as being unum non multa, one the oppoſite to multitude,) the Egyptians called him Eicton, and the Platoniſts call him Cælius or Uranus, interpreting of this Deity this piece of their impure fabulous Theology, Saturnus caſtrat Cælium, id eſt ipſum bonum. Is this God's Name and Honour, which is the holy Name and Honour, that is to be hallowed and ſanctified by Men and Angels? They are profane Deities, that are ſuppos'd, to iſſue from this ſupreme Deity, (t) the Univerſe of Pagan Gods and Demons are united to this central Deity (u) they were Pagans, that ſtiled themſelves his Prieſts, and the World his Temple; it is they that pretend to have Union with him and the enjoyment of him, ſome in the Philoſophic and ſome in the Hieratic way; and to the Pagan Theamatiſts this Deity is ſaid, to make his appearances, (w) which Plotinus reſembleth to the Spectacles that they enjoy'd in the Idol-Temples, and to the converſe which Minos had with Jove. This Monad is ſuppos'd to be the cauſe and ſource of infinite Pagan Polytheiſm; (x) He is the cauſe of all Godſhip; for all the Gods have their being Gods becauſe of (or by) the firſt God. In the Proclo-Platonic Theology the ſuper-eſſential Henades and Agathotetes (by Union with which, and by Participation of whom other Platonic Beings become Gods) are therefore ἁπλῶς θεοὶ, ſimply and primarily Gods, (y) becauſe Hen is God. The Pythagoreans and Platoniſts univerſally reject the Monothé-iſm of one God, and are hugely taken with Polytheiſm, becauſe they ſuppoſe, that the ſublimity and tranſcendency of this their ſupreme Deity requireth it. (z) Such as ſay, there is but one God, not many, do err (ſaith a Pythagorean;) for they do not conſider the ſupreme Dignity of the Divine Tranſcendence, which conſiſteth in bearing Rule and being Imperial over the like, in precellency above all and being ſuperior unto others. Celebrate above all (a) the great King, whoſe greatneſs is chiefly ſhew'd in a multitude of Gods. For not to contract into one, but to ſhew and expand very much the Divinity, as much as himſelf hath expanded it, this is the part of them that know the Power of God.

Remark 5.

This ſupreme Deity is an Idiotically Myſtic Philoſophic-pagan Deity (whoſe Theology and Religion is that of the Philoſophic-pagan Myſtics;) therefore he is extremely Diſſonant from the true ſupreme God. The Myſtic Character of this Deity (that ſpeaketh him a Deity not leſs irrational than irreligious) appeareth in his uſual Names and Notices; as it will further appear by conſidering what he is ſubjectively, objectively and in reſpect of his Congruities and Correſpondences; whence we will infer the impoſſibility of his Exiſtence.

(1.) Agreeably to Plato's account in his Parmenides of his Enigmatical unum ſome Chriſtian Platoniſts (from the counterfeit Dionyſius) have dar'd to ſay of God; (b) he neither ſtandeth, nor moveth, nor reſteth, neither hath Vertue, nor is Vertue, nor Life, nor Subſtance, nor Science, nor Sapience, nor Unum, nor Unity, nor Deity, nor Bonity, nor Spirit (ſo far as we know) nor Son, nor Father, nor any of thoſe things that are not, nor of thoſe that are, nor Darkneſs, nor Light, nor Error, nor Truth. This doubtleſs is very edifying Doctrine from them that deſire a Deity of inconſiſtences (that is no Deity at all;) and for this purpoſe the Platoniſts Acroamatical Deity is of excellent uſe; he ſerveth the idle Sophiſts, to make Riddles of, and is the ſubject of innumerable inexplicable Subtilities and unintelligible Myſticks, which do not ſpeak him Light, but rather make him a blind Principle like the Valentinians blind Æon. For the Platonic Myſticks deſcribe their Principle as perfectly beyond the Orb of Reaſon, underſtanding and intellectual Light. (c) There is nothing for it to underſtand (no νοητὸν intelligible,) becauſe it ſelf is the firſt. T'Agathon ought not to underſtand any thing, (d) for there is not any thing, to be a Good to it. (e) Before Mind the Unity muſt neceſſarily be. For Mind although immoveable is not Henotety. For it underſtandeth it ſelf and operateth about it ſelf. But nothing of this is competible to the firſt Principle; (f) It is beyond and better than Self-conſciouſneſs or conſenſe with it ſelf, and all underſtanding. It is not abſurd, to ſay, that it knoweth not it ſelf, (g) for it hath nothing in it ſelf to learn, nor ought it to know other things. (h) But there is a certain watchfulneſs beyond Eſſence, Intellect and a wiſe Life, a Super-intelligence, and theſe he is. As the Principle is not an Eſſence, ſo the Platoniſts will not ſay, It is (exiſteth;) for this they ſuppoſe incompetible to it. (b) Ἐπεὶ ϗ τὸ ἔστιν ἀφαιροῦμεν, even this that we call Is we abſtract from it. As it is not a Life, ſo Affection and Deſire are incompetible to it, (i) τὸ δὲ οὐδενὸς ἐφίεται, it is incapable of deſiring any thing. As it is not an Underſtanding, ſo neither is it a Will; for they affirm it (k) μείζονα παντὸς τοῦ θέλειν, tranſcendent to all willing, and that it doth not act according to goodneſs, (l) οὐκ ἐνεργοῦντα κατὰ τὸ ἀγαθὸν, not operating according to good. (m) Liberty of Agency is alſo a thing Poſterior to the Principle: Nor is he Lord and Maſter of his own Actions. (n) For his Subſtance and Operation are altogether indiſtinct, we may not make two there though diſtinct only in Reaſon. If this fecund Principle procreateth all things, it is neither fotuitouſly, nor yet with Wiſdom and Counſel ſuiting means to End and Deſign. (o) For he muſt not be thought, to produce by chance, nor yet thinking with himſelf what to do. He is ſaid to produce without Power or Operation. (p) Let him therefore be T'Agathon only, before Power and before Operation; for all Operation is from Faculty or Power. Although the Platoniſts uſually call him Unum, One, yet ſometimes they find fault with that Name, (q) as not ſignificative of the firſt Nature, (r) κρεῖττον γὰρ καὶ τοῦ ἑνὸς, for he tranſcendeth One it ſelf. Uſually they call him Cauſe and Principle, but ſometimes (s) they refuſe thoſe Appellatives. And ſometimes they call it by theſe abſtract Names (which in the judgment of common Senſe cannot be thought to ſignifie any perſonal or ſubſtantial reality) Unitas ipſa, ſimplicitas ipſa, primitas ipſa, cujus ratione cætera ſunt priora; Unity it ſelf, ſimplicity it ſelf, primity it ſelf, by reaſon whereof all others have priority.

(s) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 6. & l. 8. c. 13.

(t) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 25.

(u) Porph. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 46.

(w) En. 6. l. 9. c. 7, 11.

(x) Πάσης ἐστὶ θεότητος αἰτία· τὸ γὰρ εἶναι θεοὶ πάντες οἱ θεοὶ διὰ τὸν πρῶτον ἔχουσι θεόν. Procl. ſupr. l. 3. c. 7. p. 132.

(y) Idem Inſtit. Theol. c. 113.

(z) Τοὶ δὲ λέγοντες ἕνα θεὸν εἶμεν ἀλλὰ μὴ πολλῶς, ἁμαρτάνοντι. Τὸ γὰρ μέγιστον ἀξίωμα τῆς θείας ὑπεροχῆς οὐ συνθεωρεῦντι. Λέγω δὴ τὸ ἄρχεν, ϗ καθηγέεσθαι τῶν ὁμοίων, ϗ κράτιστον, ϗ καθυπέρτερον ἦμεν τῶν ἄλλων. Onat. ap. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. c. 3.

(a) Τὸν μέγαν βασιλέα ἐν τῷ πλήθει μάλιστα τῶν θεῶν τὸ μέγα αὐτοῦ ἐνδεικνυμένους. Οὐ γὰρ τὸ συστεῖλαι εἰς ἕν, ἀλλὰ τὸ δεῖξαι πολὺ τὸ θεῖον, ὅσον ἔδειξεν αὐτὸς, τοῦτ᾽ ἐστι δύναμιν θεοῦ εἰδότων. Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 9.

(b) Mut. Panſa de Oſc. Ethn. & Chriſt. Philoſ. c. 24.

(c) Οὐ γὰρ ἔχει ὃ νοήσει, αὐτὸ γὰρ πρῶτον. Plotin. En. 5. l. 6. c. 6.

(d) Οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἄλλο αὐτῷ τὸ ἀγαθόν. Ibid. c. 5.

(e) Ἀλλὰ μὲν πρὸ τοῦ νοῦ τὸ ἕν· νοῦς γὰρ εἰ ϗ ἀκίνητος, ἀλλ᾽ οὐχ ἕν· νοεῖ γὰρ ἑαυτὸν, καὶ ἐνεργεῖ περὶ ἑαυτόν. Procl. Inſt. Theol. c. 20.

(f) Ἀλλ᾽ ἔστι τὸ αὐτὸ καὶ συναισθήσεως, ϗ πάσης κρεῖττον νοήσεως. Plotin. En. 5. l. 6. c. 5.

(g) Οὐ γὰρ ἔχει παρ᾽ ἑαυτῷ ὃ μάθῃ εἷς ὤν. Ibid. c. 6.

(h) Ἡ δὲ ἐγρήγορσίς ἐστιν ἐπέκεινα οὐσίας ϗ νοῦ ϗ ζωῆς ἔμφρονος [ϗ ὑπερνόησις] ταῦτα δὲ αὐτός ἐστιν. Idem En. 6. l. 8. c. 16.

(h) Ibid. c. 8.

(i) Idem En. 3. l. 9. c. 3. En. 5. l. 3. c. 12.

(k) En. 6. l. 8. c. 9.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Ὕστερον ϗ τὸ αὐτεξούσιον. Ibid. c. 8.

(n) Ὅτι μὴ ἕτερον ἐνέργεια ϗ αὐτός. Οὐ ποιητέον, οὐδ᾽ ὡς εἰς ἐπίνοιαν δύο. Ibid. c. 12, 13.

(2.) As this Deity ſubjectively conſider'd is repreſented as a blind Principle: So objectively conſider'd he is as dark as Jacob Behmen's Deity, who is a dark Vale. For as Non Ens is an intelligible Notion, but is not the Notion of any thing intelligible: So this Platonic Notion τὸ καθαρῶς ἓν, meerly and purely one, ἁπλῶς ἓν, one ſimply and without addition, τὸ μόνως ἓν, that which is only one, μὴ πλέον ἑνὸς, nothing more than one (μόνον γὰρ ἓν ἐκεῖνο, ἄλλο δὲ οὐδὲν, for the Principle is nothing more than one, one is the All that it is) ἓν καθ' αὑτὸ, one without Participation of another's Nature, πάντη ἁπλοῦν, πάντη ἓν, altogether ſimple, omnimodouſly one; this Platonic Notion (I ſay) is an intelligible Notion, but is not the Notion, of any intelligible, conceivable or explicable kind of thing. (t) The Principle neither underſtandeth, nor is there any underſtanding of it. (u) For to know, is knowing one ſomewhat (one Subſtance or Accident, one Star or Plant:) But the Principle is without an one ſomewhat; for if it was an one ſomewhat, it could not be one it ſelf. (w) Making it a cognoſcible, we make it many; for in knowing and ſaying any thing of it, ſomewhat muſt be known and ſaid of it: Nor can this be without diſtinguiſhing or disjoining, concourſe or compounding; all which is making it many or more than one. (x) Λόγος γὰρ ἡ ἐπιστήμη, πολλὰ δὲ ὁ λόγος, Knowledge or Science is Reaſon, and Reaſon is Multitude (the Soul therefore doth not reach the Principle by Science, but miſſeth it, being fallen into Multitude and Number;) for in every intelligible Species, Form or Idea, in every νόημα, definite or determinate Conception, in Definition, Deſcription, Character, Judgment, or Enunciation, Diſcourſe and Illation, (y) there is variety of Perception; ſo that all our ſeveral Knowledges or Intellections are incompetible to the Principle. It affordeth no matter for knowing and underſtanding; it is not qualified to exerciſe, entertain and imploy the Mind in her ſtudious reſearches in the knowing and underſtanding way; (Socrates complain'd that Non Ens was a troubleſome Contemplation, and the Principle is eminently ſo;) for whatever is a determinate Intelligible, or of the kind of Intelligibles, this the Principle is not. (z) There can be no Knowledge without ſeveralty or alterity. (a) Intelligible is neceſſarily conjoin'd with Intellect; if therefore it is not the Intellect, it is not an Intelligible. But the ſecond Hypoſtaſis being the firſt Intellect, and the firſt Ens or Eſſence (οὐσία ἡ πρώτη τὸ νοητὸν, the firſt Eſſence is that which is intelligible) is neceſſarily the firſt Intelligible. The Principle therefore by the Frame and Contexture of this Philoſophy is mounted up beyond the Region of Intelligibility (it may not be called (b) the intelligible Good;) yet in a large Senſe this Non-intelligible and Super-intelligible is ſometimes called Νοητὸν, Intelligible. For the ſecond Hypoſtaſis is ſuppos'd to turn it ſelf to the firſt by its Unity, and this is called (c) Intelligence beholding the Intelligible and turned to it. Looking unto T'Agathon it underſtandeth it, and underſtanding it is Boniform. So the Chalday Oracles call the Principle Νοητὸν, Intelligible, becauſe it is capable of ſimple Viſion or intuition, and may be underſtood by the Flower of the Mind (the Unity) though not by Intellect, as Pſellus ſaith. (d) For the primary Hen is in ſome ſort apprehenſible by our Henotety, but not by Mind or Intellect. Wherefore the Principle is by Equivocation of words Intelligible and not Intelligible; ſo there is (as Plato ſpeaketh) Ἰδέα Τ'Ἀγαθοῦ, an Idea of T'Agathon, and yet T'Agathon is not any intelligible Species or Idea. So μέγιστον μάθημα, the the greateſt Diſcipline (as Plato ſpeaketh) is competible to T'Agathon; for there are ſeveral Notices antecedent to the Viſion of it, (e) ἀναλογίαι, Analogies, ἀφαιρέσεις, Negations, γνώσεις τῶν ἐξ αὐτοῦ, the knowledges of things that iſſue from it, ἀναβασμοί τινες, certain Scales of aſcent to it: Yet in the proper Senſe of Language no Learning, Doctrine or Diſcipline is competible to T'Agathon. For Underſtanding, Reaſon, Speech, Name, is as incompetible and unapplicable to this Principle, (f) as ſeeing is to audibles, or hearing to things viſible. (g) All Knowledges, all Cognoſcibles, all Speeches and all that may be compris'd in Speech were produc'd by him, (and therefore he is none of them;) himſelf being not knowable by any Beings, nor ſayable by any of them: But exempt from all Knowledge and all Speech, unapprehenſible. (h) As ignote as the informous Matter, or as naked Subſtance without any Attribute, Property, Habitude, Aptitude, Operation or Relation. He can neither be known, nor made known (Super-ignote is the counterfeit Dionyſius's Language;) for uſually he is denominated (i) unſayable by any Speech, and inexpreſſible, unknowable by all Knowledge and unapprehenſible, altogether unknown, (k) not ſuſceptible of any either Speech or Knowledge. (l He is above the Name Father as well as other Names:

(o) Οὐ γὰρ ὡς ἔτυχε, μηδ' ἐνθυμηθεὶς ὃ ποιήσει, ποιήσει ὅμως. Idem En. 5. l. 3. c. 15.

(p) Μόνον οὖν τ' ἀγαθὸν ἔστω, καὶ πρὸ δυνάμεως, καὶ πρὸ ἐνεργείας· Πᾶσα γὰρ ἐνέργεια δυνάμεως ἐστὶν ἔκγονος. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 2. c. 4.

(q) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 6.

(r) Procl. Plat. Theol. p. 132.

(s) Plotin. En. 6. l. 8. c. 8. Gale Not. in Jambl. 301.

(t) Οὐδ' αὐτὸ νοεῖ, οὔτε ἐστὶ νόησις αὐτοῦ. Plotin. En. 5. l. 3. c. 13.

(u) Ἓν γὰρ τι καὶ τὸ γινώσκειν· τὸ δὲ ἐστιν ἄνευ τοῦ τὶ ἕν. εἰ γὰρ τὶ ἕν, οὐκ ἂν αὐτὸ ἕν. Τὸ γὰρ αὐτὸ πρὸ τοῦ τί. Ibid c. 12.

(w) Πολὺ αὐτὸ ποιοῦμεν γνωστόν. Ibid. c. 13. Confer En. 6. l. 9. c. 3.

(x) Ibid. En. 6. l. 9. c. 4.

(y) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 730.

(z) Ἑτερότητος μὴ οὔσης, μηδὲ γνῶσις ἐστι. V. Gale in Not. in Jambl. p. 186.

(a) Τὸ νοητὸν συνέζευκται τῷ νῷ· εἰ οὖν μήτε νοῦς, μήτε νοητὸν εἴη. Plotin. En. 3. l. 8. c. 8.

(b) Ficin. Supr. p. 17.

(c) Νόησις τὸ νοητὸν ὁρῶσα καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο ἐπιστραφεῖσα. Plotin. En. 5. l. 4. c. 2. Πρὸς τὸ ἀγαθὸν βλέπων αὐτὸ νοεῖ, ἀγαθοειδὴς τῷ τὸ ἀγαθὸν νοεῖν. Ibid. l. 6. c. 4, 5.

(d) Τὸ γὰρ πρώτως ἓν μόνῳ τῷ παρ' ἡμῖν ἑνὶ ληπτόν πως ἐστὶ, καὶ οὔτε Διανοίᾳ οὔτε νῷ. Orac. Mag. p. 98.

(e) Plotin. En. 6. l. 7. c. 36. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 7. p. 360.

(f) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 12.

(g) Οὔτε γνωστὸν τοῖς οὖσιν, οὔτε ῥητὸν οὐδενὶ τῶν πάντων· ἀλλὰ πάσης γνώσεως ἐξῃρημένον, καὶ παντὸς λόγου, καὶ ἄληπτον ὑπάρχον. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 2. c. 4. p. 95.

(h) Idem de An. & Dæm. p. 232.

(i) Ἄρρητος μὲν παντὶ λόγῳ καὶ ἄφραστος, ἄγνωστος δὲ πάσῃ γνώσει καὶ ἄληπτος, παντελῶς ἄγνωστος. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 3. c. 7, 14.

(k) Τὸ μηδενὸς λόγου μηδὲ γνώσεως δεκτικόν. Ibid. l. 2. c. 4.

(l) Ibid. l. 5. c. 16. p. 2

Nor is he properly called T'Agathon or Hen διὰ τὴν ἄῤῥητον ἑαυτοῦ ϗ ἄγνωςον ὑπεροχὴν, because of his unſpeakable and unknowable Eminence. He is unſpeakable in the Platonic Senſe, (m) in truth unſayable; for whatever you ſay, you will ſay ſomewhat, (and thereby make the Unity one ſomewhat;) therefore Plato ſaith of this Primogenial and fontal Unite, there is no ſpeaking it, no writing it. Nor is there Science, or Opinion, or Senſe, or Speech, or Name of it. as his Parmenides ſaith.

(m) Διὸ ϗ ἄῤῥητον τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. Ὅτι γὰρ ἂν εἴπῃς, τὶ ἐρεῖς. Διὸ οὐδὲ ῥητόν, οὐδὲ γραπτόν, φησιν. Plotin. En. 5. l. 3. c. 13. En. 6. l. 9. c. 4.

(3.) The Principle is of ſuch Congruity with Numbers, that Numenius ſaith, (n) to contemplate Numbers, and to ſtudy the Number One, is a good way, to get ſome acquaintance with it. But reaſoning and underſtanding is ſo incongruous to the Principle, that it muſt be intirely ſtifled and ſilenced, (o) ſo to touch it by Congruity. (p) It is not audible, to be underſtood by any Hearer, but only by the intuitive Beholder. (q) Who muſt be careful, to put off all Multitude, to expell all Motion, multiplicity and determinateneſs out of his Mind, all inclinations to any thing out of his Phanſie, all rational Diſcourſings, intellectual Species, congeries and ſeveralities from Intellect, that ſo the Soul may loſe her intellectual Form, and be transform'd into Henotety. (r) For we ſay, that like is every where known by like. The Soul therefore muſt contract and reduce her ſelf into her own Unity (which is the Signature of the Principle) ϗ τὸ μὲν νοεῖν ἀφίησιν, εἰς τὴν ἑαυτῆς ὕπαρξιν ἀναδραμοῦσα, and then ſhe diſmiſſeth underſtanding, having betaken her ſelf to her Unity, which is beyond her Faculties. (s) She muſt ſufflaminate all further Motion and intirely reſt in Uniteneſs, not at all receding from it; for the beholding the Principle muſt be by a ſudden and ſimple intuition; and it is not known as other Intelligibles, but κατὰ παρουσίαν ἐπιςήμης κρείττονα, by a Preſence better than Knowledge, to touch it (ἐφάψασθαι ϗ θίγειν,) is the way of Commerce with it. And now we are got into a Region of perfect Myſticks (ſuch are the matters of Commerce with this Platonic Principle,) where nothing is talk'd of but σιγὴ, Silence, πίςις, Platonic Faith, ἕνωσις, Union, ἄῤῥητος ἕνωσις, ineffable Union, συναφὴ ὡς ἑνὸς πρὸς ἕν, the Conjunction as of one unto one, σύγκρασις ἑνοποιὸς, unific Conjunction, ϗ τὸ μηδὲν γινώσκειν, ὑπὲρ νοῦν γινώσκων, not to know any thing, as knowing above Mind, (t) φῶς ἀγαθοειδὲς μεῖζον ἢ κατὰ νοῦν, Boniform Light, which is beyond that which is intellectual, and (that which is the ſcope of all) the Deification of the Soul. Although this Deity is ſaid to be (u) exempt both from Silence and Speech, yet theſe Myſticks ſay, (w) Let this be venerated by us by Silence, and by Unity antecedent to Silence. For this Deity is (x) more unſayable than all Silence, and more unknowable than all naked Subſtance. Silence is the Fruit of the Platonic Faith, (y) which is operating, not according to Mind and Intellect, but the Unity of the Soul. Whence Picus Mirandula thus deſcribeth it. Sicut Fides quæ eſt Credulitas, eſt infra ſcientiam; ita Fides quæ eſt vere Fides, eſt ſuperſubſtantialiter ſupra ſcientiam & intellectum, nos Deo immediate Conjugens. As the Faith which is Credulity, is below Science; ſo Faith which is truly ſuch, is ſuperſubſtantially above Science and Intellect, immediately conjoining us to God. Becauſe it is ſuper-intellectual and unitive with T'Agathon, (z) it ſurceaſeth our Operations and Motion, and therefore is the Myſticks Quietiſm; for thoſe Myſticks are Deſcendents from the Platonic Myſticks, and ſuch are alſo the more ancient Myſticks of the Chriſtian Church. One of which in the Commentary of Nicetas on Gr. Nazianzen's forty ſecond Oration preſcribeth this Myſtic-Platonic Method of attaining Deification. Not he that turneth himſelf to Soul, nor he that turneth himſelf to Intellect attaineth Deification (for the one maketh but an Animal, the other but an Intellectual Man;) but if he penetrateth into that Arcane darkneſs, and is converſant with God, then he is ſaid, to be carry'd ſo high as God, to attain the Divinity, to behold the ſplendor of God, and to be made Deiform.

Quòd ſi per mentem in arcanam illam caliginem penetraverit, ac cum Deo verſetur, tum verò ad Deum jam ferri, & divinitatem aſſequi, & Dei ſplendorem intueri, ac juxta effingi atque efformari dicitur.

(n) Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 11. c. 22.

(o) Ὥσπερ ἐφαρμόσαι ϗ θίγειν ὁμοιότητι. Plotin. En. 6. l. 9. c. 4.

(q) Idem En. 5. l. 5. c. 6.

(q) Ficin. in Plotin. p. 342, 515, 527, 769, 727.

(r) Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 1. c. 3. & 25.

(s) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 4. En. 6. l. 7. c. 39. & l. 9. c. 4. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 4. c. 9. & l. 3. c. 7. Gale in Jambl. p. 185, 280, 290.

(t) Plotin. En. 6. l. 8. c 5.

(u) Procl. ſupr. l. 5. c. 28.

(w) Αὕτη μὲν ἡμῖν σιγῇ ϗ τῇ πρὸ σιγῆς ἑνώσει τιμάσθω. Procl. ibid. l. 3. c. 7

(x) Πάσης σιγῆς ἀῤῥητότερον, ϗ πάσης ὑπάρξεως ἀγνωςότερον. Ibid. l. 2. c. 11.

(y) Ibid. l. 1. c. 25.

(z) Ibid. p. 61.

(4.) From this Remark touching the Platoniſts ſupreme Deity it appeareth, that he is peculiarly the Myſtick Theologers kind of Deity, that no other Theology is competible to him but the Myſtic-philoſophic-pagan; this therefore muſt be the true Theology, or this Deity cannot be the true God. It appeareth alſo, that this Deity is a dark Principle as to any intellectual kind of Light; inſomuch, that the Platoniſts themſelves, who call their Principle Light (comparing it to the light (a) which a Man ſeeth when he preſſeth his Eye, when he ſeeth a light, but no luminous object) acknowledge and inſiſt, that its abſolute Indiſtinctneſs is abſolute darkneſs as to the Underſtanding. Whence the Egyptians denominated this Principle unknown darkneſs, or darkneſs beyond all Underſtanding, making this Acclamation three times: But becauſe they made three Acclamations touching their unknown darkneſs, hence Eugubinus (like himſelf) maketh this Inference; (b) claruiſſe priſcis ſeculis magnam de Tribus illis Lucem, that thoſe ancient times (times of darkneſs undoubtedly) enjoy'd great Light touching the Chriſtian Trinity. From this account of the Platoniſts Myſticks we muſt infer further; that this dark Deity neither hath, nor can have any ſpecifick or individual determination; and therefore it neither doth, nor can exiſt. It is not τὸ δέ τι, any ſomewhat, any thing definite or determinate; therefore it is neither Man, Demon, nor God. It is incapable of any additional; for it is meerly and purely One; not one Ens, or Mind, or Soul, or any thing elſe; therefore it cannot be one God. It is neither, a great One, nor a little One, nor an high One, nor a low One, an holy One, nor a common One, (c) ὅτι μηδὲν κατ᾽ αὐτοῦ, for nothing can be predicated of it. It is no kind of thing; neither of God-kind, nor Angel-kind, nor Mankind (nor of any other kind;) therefore it is neither the true God, nor any true reality. Nor is it any true Good; neither an intelligible, nor ſenſible; neither a Divine, nor an Human Good (nor any other kind of Good; and conſequently this Ipſum Bonum is no reality, but only a Notion of the Mind. Theſe things are ſo plain and demonſtratively certain, that it is marvellous, ſo many good Underſtandings both in the ancient and later times of the Church ſhould be impos'd upon by Platonic Theiſm (againſt other parts of Platoniſm I diſpute not,) and that excellent Men and great

(a) Plotin. En. 5. l. 5. c. 7.

(b) De Per. phil. l. 2. c. 6.

(c) Plotin. En. 5 l. 3. c. 13. vid. En. 2. l. 9. c. 1.

Lights of the Church ſhould ſubſtitute a Theology of wild Myſticks inſtead of what is truly Divine and Chriſtian. And it is the more marvellous, becauſe all Philoſophers explode the Platonic Monad or Unity in their Contemplations of the Soul of Man; and they have like reaſon to explode it in their Contemplations of the Univerſe.

REMARK 6.

This Supreme Deity is an Heretical-Pagan kind of Deity, the Deity of an Heretical-Pagan Cabala, being the ſame with the Supreme Deity of the Gnoſticks (who introduc'd their Cabala containing their fabulous Genealogies and Pleroma or Fulneſs of the Godhead in oppoſition to Chriſtianity;) this Deity therefore cannot be the true God. Many Affinities and Reſemblances between the Gnoſticks and the Platoniſts (d) are before obſerv'd; yet they were far from being genuine Platoniſts; but as Plotinus ſaith of the Gnoſticks, which he diſputeth againſt. (e) Several things they take from Plato, other things they innovate, to make a Philoſophy of their own. They differ'd from Plato touching intelligible ſubſtance, the Mundane Soul, the Rectours of the World, and many of their Deities were Innovations; but their Supreme Deity could be no Innovation, nor any other than Plato's Supreme Deity, as appeareth from Plotinus's Argument againſt them. (f) He that loveth any thing, loveth every thing that is congenial thereto. He loveth the Children that loveth the Father; now every Soul is the Daughter of that Father. The Gnoſticks were wanting in reſpect to the Mundane Soul (for they vilify'd it, ſuppoſing it degenerate) which diſreſpect of theirs was inconſiſtent with their great reſpect to the Father, as Plotinus argueth; therefore they pretend a great reſpect to the Platonic Father; from whence it followeth, that their Supreme Deity (uſually call'd Propator or Bythus) is the ſame with the Platoniſts Father, Hen or T'Agathon. (g) The Gnoſticks Platonize in ſtiling their Principle Bythus and Propator (for the Platoniſts ſay, that the principle is beyond the name Father, (h) and they attribute thereto, not Exiſtence but Pre-exiſtence, not Intelligence but Pre-intelligence, which mode of Theologizing the Gnoſticks imitated) and they agree with the Platoniſts in ſtiling their Supreme Deity ἄγνωστος, ἀκατανόμαστος, ἄῤῥητος, unknowable, innominable, undeclarable, unſayable. The Valentinians Copulation of (i) Sige or Ennœa with their Bythus, their making Nous his next Production or Emiſſion, his Son and his Unigenit (with whom they coupled ἀλήθεια, Truth) demonſtrate, that their great Principle is the very ſame with the Platonic; for theſe are expreſs Marks and Characteriſticks thereof. But there are many more, that are much more clear and expreſs; (k) for the Gnoſticks ſtile their Ignote Father (or Propator) Eſſentiam non habens, Non-eſſence, Super-eſſence; they call him Proonta before On or Ens, and they ſay, He is the Center (or as a Center) in the immenſe greatneſs of the Univerſe; which are expreſs Characteriſticks of the Platoniſts Henotety, which they ſuppoſe to be (l) the Center of the Univerſe. Irenæus ſaith of them, (m) Omnia ad numeros deducunt, & ex unitate ac dualitate univerſa conſtare aſſerunt, & ab unitate uſque ad quatuor numerantes, ſic denarium generant. They draw all things to Numbers; as the Pythagoric and Platonic Theology is a Number-kind of Theology; therefore Hen or One it ſelf, the Head and Origin of Number, is the Firſt and Supreme Deity of the School of Gnoſticks. They ſay, that all things conſiſt of Unity and Duality (ſaith Irenæus;) which Saying of theirs is exactly the Senſe of Plotinus; (n) wherefore it is ſaid, that Ideas and Numbers have their original from infinite Duality and Unity. The Gnoſticks number from One to Four, and ſo generate the Denary (ſaith Irenæus) therefore they affected the Tetractys (and conſequently their Theology was Pythagoric) which was the four firſt Numbers as conſtituting the Denary. The principal Dogma of the Heretical Gnoſticks was; (o) Their Supreme Deity was a Deity different from, and ſuperiour to the Creator of all things (ſo accounted by themſelves or by others;) they pretended to a recondite God far above (our) God. And ſo we have ſeen, that the Platoniſts ſay of the Hebrews, that they knew not the great God, and they make our God no higher than the next immediate Opificer. They ſuppoſe their Supreme Deity in ſome ſort the maker of the World (for they derive all Beings from him;) yet they alſo ſuppoſe him ἀνενέργητος, above all Operation (as Plotinus ſaith,) and they will not allow him to be counted the Opificer of the World; (p) for it is not meet (ſaith Numenius) to count the Firſt God the Opificer. How highly their firſt God tranſcendeth our God the Creator, appeareth from the ſwelling nonſenſical Grandiloquies, which the Platoniſts of the Chriſtian Church derive from their School; for they do not only entitle God (q) οὐσία ὑπερούσιος, the ſuper-ſubſtantial Subſtance, ὑπερούσιος ἀοριστία, the ſuper-eſſential Infinitude, but τὸ ὑπερούσιον, τὸ ὑπεραγαθὸν, τὸ ὑπέρζωον, τὸ ὑπέρσοφον, τὸ ὑπέρθεον, ſuper-ſubſtantial, ſuper-good, ſuper-living, ſuper-wiſe, ſuper-God. The Attribute of αὐτοτελής, independently perfect is not enough, but they will have him intituled ὑπερτελής, beyond all Perfection; not only αὐτοκαλόν, the Pulchritude it ſelf and of it ſelf, but ὑπερκαλόν, beyond Pulchritude; αὐτοαγαθότης, Self-goodneſs and Goodneſs it ſelf is not ſufficient, but they proceed to ſuper-deifying Tranſcendentals (as Phantaſtry knoweth no Bounds) ſtiling the Deity τὴν ὑπερηνωμένην ἑνάδα, the Super-unite Henotety, αὐτο-ὑπεραγαθότητα, Super-bonity itſelf, ὑπέρθεον θεότητα, Super-God Deity. The Platoniſts differ'd from the Heathen World, as the Gnoſticks differ'd from the Chriſtian Church, for the Popular Pagans acknowledg'd no higher Deity than the Former of the Univerſe. (r) For they doing Service to the Creature rather than the Creator, and to thoſe things that are no Gods, yet attribute the true firſt-place of the Deity to the God the Former of this Univerſe. The Gnoſticks therefore did not ſymbolize with the Popular, but with the Philoſophic-Pagans and the ſublimer ſort of them; their Supreme Deity was Acroamatical and a Philoſophic-Pagan Cabala (as their Name importeth;) therefore it was the Platoniſts Supreme Deity. But their Impiety in blaſpheming the Creator was tranſcendent both to the Philoſophic and Popular Pagan Religioniſts, as Irenæus obſerveth.

Theſe were the Anti-Judaical and worſer ſort of Gnoſticks, that blaſphem'd the Creator; but if their Supreme Deity was the ſame with the Platoniſts,

(d) P. 129, 138.

(e) Τὰ μὲν παρὰ τῦ Πλάτωνος εἴληπται· τὰ δὲ καινοτομῦσιν. En. 2. l. 9. c. 6.

(f) Ὁ γὰρ φιλεῖν πρός ὁτουοῦν ἔχων, καὶ τὸ συγγενὲς πᾶν ὃ φιλεῖ, ἀσπάζεται· καὶ τοὺς παῖδας ὧν τὸν πατέρα ἀγαπᾷ. Ψυχὴ δὲ πᾶσα πατρὸς ἐκείνου. Ibid. c. 16.

(g) Gale in Jambl. p. 301, 190.

(h) J. Bapt Criſp. p. 9. Fcin. in Plotin. p. 510.

(i) Gale ſupr. & p. 213, 298.

(k) Iren. adv. Hær. l. 1. c. 10. l. 2. c. 1. & c. 57.

(l) Procl. Plat. Th. l. 1. c. 25. & p. 57.

(m) L. 1. c. 15.

(n) Διὸ καὶ εἴρηται, ἐκ τῆς ἀορίστου δυάδος καὶ τοῦ ἑνὸς τὰ εἴδη καὶ οἱ ἀριθμοί. En. 5. l. 4. c. 2.

(o) Iren. l. 2. c. 1. l. 3. c. 3. &c. & l. 2. c. 10, &c.

(p) Καὶ γὰρ οὔτε δημιουργεῖν ἐστι χρεὼν τὸν πρῶτον. Euſeb. pr. Ev. l. 11. c. 18.

(q) Petav. T. 1. l. 1. c. 6. & p. 431, 442, 292, 386, 161. & T. 2. p. 410.

(r) Illi enim creaturæ potius quàm creatori ſervientes & his qui non ſunt Dii, verum tamen primum Deitatis locum attribuunt Fabricatori hujus univerſitatis Deo. Iren. l. 2. c. 9.

Platoniſts, it muſt be the ſame with that of the Judaical and better ſort of Gnoſticks, who, although they had a Philoſophic-Pagan Cabala, and Speculations touching an Arcane Supreme Deity, yet they adher'd to the God of the Jews Religion, and were not profeſs'd Adverſaries to the Creator of all things. For the Supreme Deity of this ſort of Gnoſticks was a Philoſophic-Pagan Cabala, they were Chriſtiano-Judaical Pythagoriſts (as the Apoſtle's Character ſpeaketh them;) therefore their Supreme Deity could be no other than the Pythagoric or Platonic; which is the more probable, becauſe the Platonic Supreme Deity is (for the main) of the ſame Nature and Notices with the Supreme Deity of the Cabaliſtical Jews of later times, (s) as Reuchlin and Picus Mirandula ſuppoſe. The ten Sephiroth or Numerations of theſe Cabaliſtical Jews are Emanations from a Myſtic or Arcane Supreme Deity call'd Enſoph (אין סוף) Abyſs or Infinitude. Their ſecond Sephirah is of the ſame Names with the Platoniſts ſecond Archical Hypoſtaſis; for it is called Ens, Eſſentia, Semitæ Idearum, Being, Eſſence, the Paths of Ideas. The Supreme Deity is called Enſoph, Arich Arpin (the ſame with Enſoph) Aleph tenebroſum, privatio, color niger, Nihil, Tenebroſe Aleph, Privation, Colour of Black, Nihility; which Cabaliſtical Appellatives are (t) rightly parallell'd with the Pythagoreans Appellatives of their Firſt Principle, βάραθρον, χάσμα, ἀλαμπία, σκοτωδία, Gulf, Chaſm or wide Vacuity, Obſcurity. Tenebroſity. This firſt Principle is called אין Non-Ens, (u) becauſe it cannot be apprehended, nor can we have any notion thereof (Non Ens eſt privatio apprehenſionis) in Non Ens, neither Eſſence, nor Quiddity, nor Difference is apprehended. Agreeably to the Platoniſts theſe Cabaliſts ſay of their Primordiality or Supreme Deity, (w) Neither the number One, nor Multitude, nor Exiſtence is predicated of it; and thus the Wiſe Men of the Cabala deſcribe it. (x) This is the Firſt without beginning, and this is the laſt without end, whither our very thoughts cannot reach, and is nam'd Enſoph, that is, Infinitude, which is a certain ſupreme thing, in it ſelf incomprehenſible and ineffable, retracting and covering it ſelf in the moſt remote retreat of its Divinity, and the moſt inacceſſible Abyſs of Fountain-light, ſo that nothing is to be underſtood to proceed therefrom, as a moſt abſolute Deity without Imployment remaining in it ſelf by an omnimodous ſhutting up of it ſelf in it ſelf, naked without any Veſtment, and without the Cloathing of any thing circumſtant, not profuſe of it ſelf, nor having its Goodneſs and Splendour dilated, indifferently Ens and Non-Ens, and as a ſegregate and free Unite moſt ſimply implying all things, which as to our reaſon ſeem contrary and contradictory to one another. The Myſtic Theology of the Cabaliſts being manifeſtly a deſcendent from the Pythagoric and Platonic (agreeably whereunto the ten Sephiroth (y) are ſaid to be the Type and Form of all Being) it is not ſtrange, that the Anti-Judaical Gnoſticks ſhould Cabalize as well as Platonize in their Notices of their Deities, as the Valentinians manifeſtly did in calling one of their Æons Achamoth, (z) which is the ſame Name with the Cabaliſts חכמה Chokmah (Sapience) or according to the Egyptian Termination Chokmoth.

REMARK 7.

Although this Supreme Deity conſider'd only with reſpect to a realizing his Names and Notices muſt be called a Figment, yet the Philoſophick Pagans under thoſe Names had to do with a perſonal Reality, with reſpect unto whom this Deity muſt be call'd a Magical kind of Deity. For he is the Theurgiſts Deity (their God) the Arcane Deity of the Magic Oracles (the Arcane Philoſophic Theurgical Theology;) and as a Deity whoſe Theology is the Heathen, the Chriſtian, the Myſtical, Acroamatical, or Exoterical, is neceſſarily an Heathen, Chriſtian, Myſtical, Acroamatical, or Exoterical kind of Deity: So a Deity whoſe Theology is the Magical, is neceſſarily a Magical kind of Deity. The ancient Magi introduc'd this Deity, he is of their Inſtitution of Theurgy (as the Supreme Deity thereof,) they reach'd him by their Theurgic Myſticks, though the pureſt Reaſon cannot. It is they, and ſuch as they, that were of his Acquaintance, Alliance and Correſpondence, and that had Divine Light, Enthuſiaſms and Divination from him. His Saintiſts and Theologers amongſt the Pagans of greateſt remark were eminent Theurgiſts (ſuch as Zoroaſter, Numa, the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts) and the Heretical Pagan Gnoſticks are known to have been great Magicians. Porphyry ſaith of Plotinus, That his End and Scope was to be united to, and conjoyn'd with the God that is above all; which Scope he attain'd four ſeveral times whilſt I was with him. That God ſometimes appear'd to him, who hath neither Form nor Idea, but is plac'd above Intellect, and all that is Intelligible. To whom I Porphyrius affirm my ſelf, to have been once united and conjoyn'd in the ſixty eighth Year of my Age. A Judgment may be made of this Deity from ſuch an Acquaintance, as Porphyry was; from the End and Scope of Plato's Philoſophy, (a) which was to conduct Men to ſee God; and from the kind and quality of thoſe Deities wherewith he is conjoyn'd and aſſociated in the Chalday Oracles. For that Arcane Theurgical Theology's Syſtem of Deities is an immenſe rabble of Deities manifeſtly Magical (if the Hecatine Circle is manifeſtly Magical;) and to conſort the Chriſtian Trinity with this Paganical Rabble, to ſuppoſe, that the true God ſtandeth at the Head of this Magical Syſtem, is to make ſuch a Compoſition as the Fable or Fiction of Scylla, which is a comely Virgin in the upper parts, but downwards all is deformed Monſtroſity.

Candida ſuccinctam latrantibus inguina monſtris.

Nor is it poſſible to have Society with God (the true God) in Theurgy; but the Society, Appearances, Gifts and Communications of this Supreme Deity are in Theurgy; therefore he is a Magical-Pagan kind of Deity in the Senſe of the Chriſtian Apologiſts, who tell the Pagans, (b) That evil Spirits ſubſtituted themſelves inſtead of their Gods, and receiv'd the Honour of Sacrifice under their Names. To this Supreme Deity the Theurgiſts had reſpect in compounding together the things of Nature, to attract Influxes upon themſelves, convoke their Deities into preſence, and to make their Statues receptive of them. (c) Ipſi componendo unum ex multis conficiebant, aſſimilabant ipſi Uni, quod eſt ſuper multa: They by compounding made One of many, aſſimilated to One it ſelf, which is above many.

(s) Reuchlin. de Art. Cabal. fol. 22, 23. *Hotting. Theſ. Philol. p.*442.

(t) D. H. Mori oper. Vol. 1. p. 433, 441.

(u) Rittangel. in libr. Jezirah p. 43, 52, 167.

(w) Ibid. p. 61.

(x) Hic eſt primus abſque initio, & hic eſt ultimus abſque termino, ſane quo nè cogitatus quidem noſtri pertingere poſſunt, & nominatur Enſoph, id eſt Infinitudo, quæ eſt ſumma quædam res ſecundum ſe incomprehenſibilis & ineffabilis, in remotiſſimo divinitatis ſuæ retroceſſu & in fontani luminis inacceſſibili abyſſo ſe retrahens & contegens, ut ſic nihil intelligatur ex ea procedere, quaſi abſolutiſſima Deitas per otium omnimoda ſui in ſeipſa clauſione immanens, nuda ſine veſte, ac abſque ullo circumſtantiarum amictu, nec ſui profuſa, nec ſplendoris ſui dilatata bonitate, indiſcriminatim Ens & non Ens, & omnia quæ rationi noſtræ videntur inter ſe contraria & contradictoria, ut ſegregata & libera Unitas ſimpliciſſimè implicans. Reuchlin. ſupr. Fol. 21.

(y Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. Col. 1535.

(z) Hotting. Theſ. Phil. p. 444. Windet. de vit. funct. p. 37.

(a) J. Mart. Dial. cum Tryph. p. 219.

(b) Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 4. p. 134.

(c) Proclus de Magia.

CHAP. V.

1. The Pagans Character, that they are Gentiles that know not God. The various Senſes of knowing God. 2. How far the Gentiles did know God. 3. In what Senſe they did not know God. Conſect. 1. We are in Atheous Ignorance while we are in Heatheniſm. Conſect. 2. In Heatheniſm our Life is the Atheous. Conſect. 3. Man is ſo Atheous, that Heathen Religion is agreeable. In theſe Conſectaries an Account is given of Unregeneracy as the State of reigning Ignorance. Of Original Sin. Of Heatheniſm as our Original Condition. Of Paganiſm's Foulneſs and Purity.

I. THE Pagans Theopolity (rightly underſtood) enlightneth and explaineth this their Character; That they are ſo far ignorant of God, as to be juſtly denominated the Gentiles that know not God. Such is their Character and their Definition; for that which maketh them the Heathen (which conſtituteth, diſtinguiſheth and denominateth them) is their being the extraneous People, the People that know not God. The not knowing God is diſtinguiſhable into ſeveral ſorts and kinds; that which is Unprophetick, that which is Unphiloſophick, and that which is Irreligious. That which is Unprophetick relateth only to matters of Intercourſe between God and his Prophets, and his methods of manifeſting himſelf to them; 1 Sam. 3. 7. Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet reveal'd unto him. That which is Unphiloſophick relateth only to Philoſophick Diſquiſition, Contemplation and Comprehenſion; Job 36. 26. God is great and we know him not, neither can the number of his Years be ſearched out. That which is Irreligious, is the oppoſite to ſuch knowing God, which belongeth to Religioniſts as ſuch, and conſtituteth the Theiſts of Religion and Condition; 2 Theſſ. 1. 7, 8. The Lord Jeſus ſhall be revealed from Heaven with his mighty Angels, in flaming fire, taking Vengeance on them that know not God. A truly Religious knowing God (a knowing him, ſo as to be truly Religious towards him) is the Eſſence and Summary of true Religion, the whole of Piety; (d) therefore ſome judicious Interpreters expound the knowledge of God by Piety (or Godlineſs;) and the Chaldee Paraphraſe expoundeth it by the Fear of God. It ſignifieth the knowing God, ſo as to be truly Religious towards him (which is Piety) Hoſ. 4. 1. There is no Truth, nor Mercy, nor knowledge of God in the Land. Jer. 9. 6. They refuſe to know me, ſaith the Lord. Jer. 22. 16. Was not this to know me? ſaith the Lord. In this Senſe the knowledge of God is preferr'd before Burnt-Offerings; Hoſ. 6. 6. and this knowledge of God will make holy and happy Times: Iſa. 11. 9. They ſhall not hurt nor deſtroy in all my holy Mountain; for the Earth ſhall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. When God foretelleth by the Prophet, Jer. 24. 7. I will give them an Heart to know me, that I am the Lord; the meaning is, they ſhall be true Pietiſts towards him; and by another Prophet, Hoſ. 2. 20. Thou ſhalt know the Lord; it is to ſignifie, that he on his part would enter into a League of Amity with them, and make himſelf known to them at a more than ordinary rate; and they on their part ſhall be true Pietiſts. But the Sons of Eli were gigantick Impietiſts and their being ſuch was a not knowing the Lord, 1 Sam. 2. 22. They knew not the Lord, as David chargeth his Son Solomon, Know the Lord God of thy Father, and ſerve him with a perfect Heart, 1 Chron. 28. 9. (e) So Kimchi explaineth the Hebrew Verb לרעת to know, by לעבדו to ſerve him, which is a knowing God as we ought.

Sometimes the Phraſe of knowing God is beſt expounded by Theoſophy (which is an Interpretation near to the former) meaning by a Theoſophiſt one that is wiſe in the matters of God; 1 Cor. 15. 34. Some have not the knowledge of God. Col. 1. 10. Increaſing in the knowledge of God. So he that underſtandeth and knoweth me, that I am the Lord (Jer. 9. 24.) denoteth a genuine Theoſophiſt, Dan. 11. 32. the genuine Theoſophiſts are intituled the People that do know their God. And God foretelleth by the Prophet, that the meaneſt Chriſtian ſhall be a Theoſophiſt, Jer. 31. 34. They ſhall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, ſaying, Know the Lord; for they ſhall all know me, from the leaſt of them unto the greateſt of them. In Theoſophy there muſt be θεογνωσία (the Comprehenſion of what is and ought to be known of God) conjunct with Piety.

Sometimes the Phraſe of knowing God muſt be expounded by that Affinity which we commonly call Acquaintance; for when our holy Writers ſay of evil Men, that they know not God, this is uſually part of their Senſe, that God and they are not of an Alliance and Acquaintance, they are not ſuch as the Philoſophers call γνώειμοι, but as to God they are Aliens and of the Exotick kind; 1 Joh. 4. 7, 8. Every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is Love. His Family of Alliance and Acquaintance is the Divine Love-family, who in reſpect of their Genius and Diſpoſition, their Life and Practice, are of Cognation with God, and Symbolize with him. And as the Prophet ſaith of crooked Paths, whoſoever goeth therein ſhall not know Peace (ſo as to have any dealings therewith) the way of Peace have they not known; the Apoſtle ſaith of Chriſt, He knew no Sin (ſo as to have any dealings with it;) and our Saviour will ſay to ſome as being none of his Acquaintance) I never knew you: So our Evangeliſt ſpeaketh of that Cognition, which is the Cognation of Acquaintance, when he ſaith, 1 Joh. 2. 4. He that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his Commandments, is a liar. This is part of his Senſe; but this is alſo his meaning, that atheous and wicked Men can be no genuine Gnoſticks in reſpect of God (or Chriſt;) for they are not of his Specific Comprehenſion, but of another Region, where God is not ſeen or known. Accordingly he ſaith, 1 Joh. 3. 6. Whoſoever ſinneth (is a committer of Sin) hath not ſeen him, neither known him.

The Phraſe of knowing God therefore muſt ſometimes be expounded of that due diſcernment and underſtanding of God (what he is) which is conſtitutive of the Spiritual and Divine Family. For their knowing God and ſuch kind of things, their proper kind of knowing them (which is incompetible to the Unregenerate) is nothing elſe but the due diſcernment and underſtanding of

them

(d) Grot. Not. in Hoſ. 4. 1.

(e) Pocock on Hoſ. 6. 3, 6.

Iſa. 59. 8.

Rom. 3. 17.

2 Cor. 5. 21.

Matth. 7. 23.

them, which is requiſite to conſtitute them the Spiritual and Divine-kind of People (the oppoſite to the Mundane and Carnal) who muſt be Spiritual and Divine in their diſcernment and
Joh. 8. 12. underſtanding of things, and their being ſo is 2 Cor. 4.6. that Light, Wiſdom and Knowledge, which ma-
Eph. 5. 8. keth a great part of their Character; 1 Joh. 5. 20. The Son of God is come, and hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him that is true. Which due underſtanding and diſcernment of God conſtituteth them that have it the Regenerate Children of God and the Sons of the Heavenly Family, as the ſame Apoſtle ſaith, Ch. 2. 13. I write unto you little Children, becauſe ye have known the Father. Not only the Gentiles, but the Jews alſo in their Carnality of Mind and Life were deſtitute of this knowing God, as our Saviour telleth them; Joh. 8. 55. Te have not known him. Joh. 15. 21. and 16. 3. Theſe things will they do unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father nor me. The World (being in the Specific Comprehenſion of Athe-iſm) is in Atheiſtic Ignorance of God, Joh. 17. 25. O righteous Father, the World hath not known thee.

Sometimes the Phraſe of knowing God muſt be expounded of knowing him as a People know their God, (or as the Theiſts of Religion and Condition know him) as when the Pſalmiſt ſaith, Pſal. 9. 10. They that know thy Name will put their truſt in thee. When our Saviour ſaith, *Joh.*17.3. This is Life Eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God; the meaning is, that to know God as (in truth, not in type only) one of his Pietiſts, Theiſts, Theoſophiſts, Acquaintance and Divine Familiſts, is Life Eternal to a Man.

But ſometimes the Phraſe of knowing God muſt be expounded by Intelligence of God and his Matters (ſpeaking of God in ſuch a Senſe as we ſpeak of Kings and great Governments) as our Saviour ſaith, Matth. 11. 27. No Man knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any Man the Father ſave the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him. As to that great and only ſaving Revelation of himſelf the Chriſtian Religion, God did not make himſelf known to any meer Man,
Joh. 1.18. the only begotten Son which is in the Boſom of the Father, (highly beloved by him and moſt intimate with him) he only hath declar'd him.

And ſometimes Mens knowing God muſt be expounded of his being barely notic'd to them (of their having Notices of him) which is competible to the greateſt Athe-iſts of Religion and Condition; as when the Apoſtle ſaith of the Gentiles, Rom. 1. 21, 28. They knew God, but did not like to retain God in their Knowledge, or to make an acknowledgment of him (as the words may be rendred) which is a Religious knowing God. But thus the Gentiles knew him not; for as the acknowledg'd Deity of a Religion and People, there is no God in all the Earth but in Iſrael, 2 King. 5. 15.

II. The Gentiles therefore in a certain Senſe knew God, but ſo as not to know him in the more uſual Senſe; Rom. 1. 19, 20. That which may be known of God is manifeſt in them; for God hath ſhew'd it unto them; for the inviſible things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the things that are made, even his Eternal Power and Godhead. (f) We all naturally know the Exiſtence of God; whether we make Exclamation, O God, or ſuppoſe God a Witneſs of the Facts of the Improbous, and as ſeeing us liſt up our Face unto Heaven. (g) For ſome things are known naturally, as the Immortality of the Soul amongſt the generality, our God amongſt the univerſality of Men. (h) We worſhip one God (ſay the Chriſtian Apologiſts) whom ye all naturally know. All Men ſpeak on this manner, which God grant, God ſeeth, I commend to God, God will recompenſe, which forms of Speech are a teſtimony, that the Soul is naturally Chriſtian. (i) An Heathen ſaith, God bleſs thee, as readily as a Chriſtian. (k) It is the natural Language of the Vulgar. (l) When they Swear, or Wiſh, or Pray for help, they name God, and their form of begging is by God. (m) Hæc eſt ſumma delicti, nolle agnoſcere, quem ignorare non poſſis: This is the Summary of the World's Criminality, they will not acknewledge that God whom they cannot but know. Agreeably to theſe Apologiſts (n) the Metaphyſicians (and others) diſpute, that God is knowable by natural Light, and is actually known by all Nations; nor is it reaſonable, or religious, to contradict what they ſay. But the Intereſt of true Religion requireth, that their Sayings be underſtood with due Diſtinctions and Limitations touching the Bounds and Meaſure of the Gentiles knowledge of God; ſuch as theſe following.

(1.) The Heathen World knew God as underſtood without Specific and Individual Determination. (o) They were not ſo ignorant, but that they acknowledg'd one Cauſe or Principle, whence all things have their origin, the things Celeſtial, Terreſtial and Infernal. (p) Both our Eye-ſight and the Law of Nature teacheth us, that God is, (or that there is a God) a Cauſe efficient and conſervant of the Univerſe. This is ſo conſpicuous in Nature, that Natural Light cannot miſs of him; nor is this his Exiſtence matter of Faith ſo much as of common Reaſon or Demonſtration by Argument. (q) The pulchritude of the World and the order of the Celeſtial Bodies forceth an acknowledgment, that there is a certain excellent eternal Nature, which is to be honour'd and ador'd by Mankind. The Pagan Theologers (in Terms) agree with the Chriſtian, that the viſible World proclaimeth the inviſible God, and ſpeaketh audibly with a Voice that is gone out through all the Earth, (r) ὡς ἐμὲ πεποίηκε θεός, that God made me. One that was no undergraduate in Atheiſm, yet in a lucid interval ſaith; (s) If any Man ſhall view throughly all the Organs both of Generation and Nutrition, and doth not perceive them to have been made, and order'd to their reſpective Offices by ſome Mind, he is to be reputed himſelf void of Mind. To ſuppoſe therefore, that the Exiſtence of God is not diſcoverable by meer Reaſon or natural Light, is a grand Extravagance in Socinus, with whom ſome of the Schoolmen Symbolize, who aſſert, (t) Lumine naturali non poteſt cognoſci dari aliquod Ens ſupernaturale. It cannot be known by natural Light, that there is a ſupernatural Being.

(f) Deum eſſe omnes naturaliter ſcimus ſive cùm exclamamus, ô Deus, ſive cùm illum teſtem Deum conſtituimus improborum, & quaſi nos cernat, faciem ſublevamus ad cœlum. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 43.

(g) Quædam enim & natura nota ſunt, ut immortalitas animæ penes plureis, ut Deus noſter penes omneis. Tertull. de Reſur. Carn. c. 3.

(h) Nos unum Deum colimus, quem omnes naturaliter noſtis. Idem ad Scap. Quod Deus dederit, omnium vox eſt. Judicem quoque conteſtatur illum, Deus videt, & Deo commendo, & Deus mihi reddet. O teſtimonium animæ naturaliter Chriſtianæ! Idem Apol. c. 17.

(i) Benedicat te Deus tàm facile pronuncias, quam Chriſtiano neceſſe eſt. Idem de Teſt. Anim. c. 2.

(k) Vulgi iſte naturalis ſermo eſt. Min. Fœl. p. 144.

(l) Lactant. l. 2. c. 1. *vid. Scultet. Exercit. Evangel. c.*106.

(m) *Tertul. Apol. c.*17. S. Cyprian. de Idol. van.

(n) Th. Barlow exercit. Metaphyſ. 4.

(o) Uſque adeo non ignoraverunt, ut faterentur unum eſſe principium, à quo omnia initium ſortita ſint, cæleſtia & terreſtria & inferna. S. Ambroſ. com. in Rom. 1. 21.

(p) Τὸ μὲν γὰρ εἶναι θεὸν καὶ τὴν πάντων ποιητικήν τε καὶ συνεκτικὴν αἰτίαν, καὶ ὄψις διδάσκαλος, καὶ ὁ φυσικὸς νόμος. Gr. Naz. orat. 34.

(q) Eſſe præſtantem aliquam æternamque naturam, & eam ſuſpiciendam adorandamque hominum generi, pulchritudo mundi ordoque rerum cœleſtium cogit confiteri. Cic. de N. D. l. 2.

(r) Plotin. En. 3. l. 2. c. 3.

(s) Hobbs de Hom. c. 1.

(t) Gonet. Clyp. Theol. Thom. T. 1. Tr. 2. Diſp. 1. p. 565.

(2.) God as of the true ſpecific and individual determination (being plainly noticed unto them in the Nature of the thing) † was in Nature fairly notic'd to the Heathen World. For as in the Old Teſtament a Meſſiah is notic'd and reveal'd to the Jews, not without, but with true ſpecific and individual determination (the true Meſſiah, the true kind of Meſſiah is there in good degree reveal'd,) and in like manner a Paradiſe is notic'd to the Muhammedans : So in Nature God is fairly notic'd to the Gentiles, not without, but with true ſpecific and individual determination. They are blind and unintelligent in the Nature of things, that do not diſcern in caſe of competition, which is the true Paradiſe and which is the true Meſſiah : and in like manner, they are blind and unintelligent in the Nature of things, that do not diſcern in caſe of Competition which is the true God. The Muhammedans Senſualiſts-kind of Paradiſe in the future State is an Unparadiſaical, an Anti-paradiſaical kind of Paradiſe. The Jews mundane kind of Chriſt a Chriſtleſs and an Anti-Chriſt kind of Chriſt. So the Gentiles Paganical kind of God (their Jove) being in one part meerly mundane, and in the other Diabolical and wicked, and being the Deity of a Religion that is in one part meerly mundane, and in the other diabolical and wicked, is a God-leſs and an Anti-God kind of God. All theſe matters are ſo plain in the Nature of the thing, that it muſt be ſaid, a Chriſt is in Scripture ſo notic'd to the Jews, as that the true Chriſt (the true kind of Chriſt) is fairly noticed unto them ; a future Paradiſe is in Nature ſo notic'd to the Muhammedans, as that the true Paradiſe (the true kind of Paradiſe) is fairly notic'd unto them ; a God is in Nature ſo notic'd to all Mankind, as that the true God (the true kind of God) is fairly notic'd unto them. (u) A Philoſopher is no other than a true Philoſopher, but becauſe ſome counterfeit Philoſophy, therefore the Epithet of true was added. So Paradiſe is no other than the true Paradiſe, Chriſt is no other than the true Chriſt, God is no other than the true God : If God therefore (or a God) was in Nature made known to the Gentiles, the true God muſt neceſſarily be notic'd unto them. And ſome learned Men ſomewhat miſtake the Caſe, when they ſay. (w) As Oedipus knew himſelf to have a Father, yet did not know, that Laius was he : So the Gentiles by the light of Nature might reach ſo far as to know, that there is one God, and that he is the Fountain of all Good, without knowing who was this God, as ſuppoſe the God of Iſrael. For in the caſe of Oedipus there was no Competition between two pretending Fathers, whereas in the Gentiles caſe there was a Competition between two pretending Gods. And Laius (being but a particular Man) could not be known but only by an individual Determination : Whereas in caſe of Competition the true God is diſtinctly and certainly notic'd by a meer ſpecific Determination ; for as the God-kind or Divine kind of Paradiſe and Meſſiah is the true Paradiſe and the true Meſſiah : So the God-kind or Divine-kind of God (and the Deity of ſuch a kind of Religion) is the true God, but the Godleſs and Ungodly kind of God (and the Deity of ſuch a Religion) is the falſe God. It is not a Divine Being, nor a Supreme Being, nor a Supreme God, that is the ſpecific Determination of the true God, but the God-kind, or the Divine-kind of God (and God being an Imperial Eſtate, this is the ſame with the holy Empire's kind of Imperial Eſtate,) which ſpecific Determination is plainly notic'd in the Nature of the thing ; and therefore God as of true ſpecific Determination is in Nature fairly notic'd to the Reaſon of all Men. For ſuppoſe, that Oedipus could not know, that the Man Laius was his Father, yet in the Nature of the thing this was plainly notic'd, that one of Mankind was his Father : So in the Nature of the thing (and therefore in Nature) this is plainly notic'd to the Reaſon of all the World, that God is (not a vile or unholy and ungodly, but) the God-kind or the Divine kind of God. If this God (the Deity of true Holineſs and Godlineſs) was not as ſuch fairly notic'd to the Heathen World, if they had not much of the knowledge of him and of his Truth (touching his Service, their Duty and their Sin, his Rewards and Puniſhments) this Knowledge could not be ſaid, to be manifeſt in them, becauſe God hath ſhew'd it unto them : Nor could they be ſaid, to hold the Truth (ſtifled, ſmother'd and impriſon'd) in Unrighteouſneſs. This being their great Criminality, from thence it appeareth, that the true God was ſo far notic'd to them, as that they were under an obligation, to erect an holy Empire (imperfectly ſuch) by being in common his Religioniſts.

(3.) As the Jews reject the true Divine kind of Meſſiah, and the Muhammedans the true Divine kind of Paradiſe (which are notic'd unto them) theſe not being grateful and agreeable to them, nor ſuch as they like and love ; they are for a Meſſiah and a Paradiſe of another kind : So the Gentiles did not like that of the true Divine kind of God his Truth and his God-ſervice, which was notic'd unto them, they were for another kind of ſupreme God, which was more grateful to them, becauſe of their own Kind and Quality ; and ſo far (in ſetting up their Jove of ſeveral Notions jumbled and confounded together) they transform'd the Godhead into their own Similitude. According to that of Xenophanes the Colophonian ; (x) if Horſes and Oxen could draw Pictures, they would pourtray the Gods like Horſes and Oxen, as of their own Form and Family. The ſame Philoſopher obſerveth, (y) that the Ethiopians paint the Gods black and flat noſ'd, the Thracians paint them reddiſh and cæruleous, (aſſimilating alſo the Minds or Morals of the Gods to their own, ſaith Clemens,) the Barbarians ſuppoſe them wild and ferine, the Greeks ſuppoſe them more gentle and placid. So mundane and ungodly Mankind form'd a mundane and ungodly kind of Deity, as their God-ſervice was alſo a ſort of Anthropomorphitiſm. (z) They fell into ſuch Conceits, that they form'd the Gods from themſelves as the Pattern, and ſuch as their Nature is, they ſuppos'd, that the Nature of

Scripturarum locis dicuntur. Voſſ. Hiſt. Pel. l. 3. par. 3. Theſ. 6.

† Licet exceptum ſibi populum ſpecialibus ad pietatem direxerit inſtitutis, nulli tamen nationi hominum bonitatis ſuæ dona ſubtraxit, ut Propheticas voces & præcepta legalia convincerentur in elementorum obſequiis ac teſtimoniis accepiſſe. Script. de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 2.

(u) 'Ουδ' ἄλλο μὲν φιλόσοφος, ἄλλο δὲ ὁ ἀληθινός· ἀλλ' ὅτι τὸ ὑποδυόμενον ἦν φιλοσοφίαν, ἡ προσθήκη τȣ͂ ἀληθινȣ͂ ἐγένετο. Plotin. En. 3. l. 7. c. 5.

(w) Quemadmodum Oedipus, cùm ſe, ut Poetæ ajunt, patrem habere ſciret, eum tamen Lajum eſſe ignorabat : Itidem gentes eo naturæ lumine pertingere potuerunt, ut unum eſſe Deum cognoſcerent, eúmque omnis boni fontem ; nec tamen, quis Deus ille foret, noviſſent : Unde & hunc ἄγνωςον θεὸν, annuntiari iis opus fuit. Act. 17. 23. Duplex igitur Dei cognitio eſt : Prior ſimplex, qua ſcitur eſſe Deum, eumque ſapientem, bonum, potentem, colendum, juſti remuneratorem, injuſtitiæ vindicem : Altera vero applicata ad certum ſubjectum, puta Deum Iſraelis. Generalem illam notitiam gentibus concedimus : Poſteriorem non item, quia præclaras illas de Deo notitias in mendacio & impietate detinuerunt, tribuentes illas non vero, ſed falſo numini : Unde non noviſſe Deum plurimis

(x) Clem. Strom. l. 5. p. m. 438.

(y) Ibid. l. 5. p. 511.

(z) In eas ſunt opinationes lapſi, ut Deos ex ſe fingerent, & qualis ſibi natura eſt, & illis talem darent actionum, rerum, of the Actions, Affairs and Volitions of the Gods is the ſame. (a) The more of Ornament the Temples have, and the more of Pulcbritude the Images, ſo much more of Majeſty they are thought to have, ſo that the Religion of the Gods is nothing but the things admir'd by Human Appetite.

voluntatumque naturam. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 7. p. 239.

(a) Quanto fuerint ornatiora Templa, & pulchriora ſimulachra, tanto plus Majeſtatis habere creduntur. Adeo Religio Deorum nihil aliud eſt, quam quod cupiditas humana miratur. Lactant. l. 2. c. 7.

(4.) The Heathen having form'd their Theopolity, and ſet up Jove as Chieftain of their Deities, the true God was hid from the Eyes of their Mind, and although he was notic'd to them and known by them yet no otherwiſe than as an extraneous and Stranger-Deity (Foreign to their Theopolity,) as they were extraneous and the Aliens from knowing him. For ſuch a degree of knowing is knowing not knowing, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Rom. 10. 19. did not Iſrael know? They knew, but ſo as not to know. The Heathens knowing not knowing conſtituted them the Heathen People. For (b) aberrantes à notitia Dei gentes eſſe cœperunt, they began to be Gentiles by loſing the Knowledge of God. To ſuch a degree the Athenians knew God, when they erected an Altar to the unknown God. To ſuch a degree the Kings of the Amorites and the Canaanites knew God, whoſe Hearts melted, when they heard that the Lord had dried up the Waters of Jordan from before the Children of Iſrael. Joſh. 5. 1. And the God of Iſrael ſaith of himſelf, Mal. 1. 14. My Name is dreadful among the Heathen. To ſuch a degree thoſe Pagan Magicians knew God, who made uſe of this Name the God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob in their inchantments, (c) as Origen reporteth. And Arnobius ſuppoſeth, that the Magicians ſometimes experimented his Power, when he telleth the Heathen; (d) Ask the Egyptians, Perſians, Indians, Chaldeans, Armenians, and all thoſe others that have ſeen and known theſe things in their interiour Arts; ſo you ſhall learn, who is the one God.

(b) Lactant. l. 2. c. 14.

(c) C. Celſ. l. 4. p. 184.

(d) Egyptios, Perſas, Indos, Chaldæos, Armenios interroget, omneſque illos alios, qui in interioribus viderunt, & cognoverunt hæc artibus; jam profectò diſcetis, quiſnam ſit Deus unus. Adv. Gent. l. 4. p. 134.

III. That extraneous People the Gentiles knew not God as a People know their God, who is the Imperial Eſtate of their Religion, and who are none of the Strangers, Foreigners and Aliens from his Theology and Religion. In ſuch Senſe the Gentiles Character ſignifieth in Scripture, wherein the Gentiles that know not God are oppo'd to God's People, (the Theiſts of Religion;) and in ſuch Senſe the God of Iſrael ſaith to Cyrus, Iſa. 45. 5. I girded thee, though thou haſt not known me. So in Eccleſiaſtical Writers the Converſion of a Pagan to be one of God's People, is expreſs'd by a Tranſition (e) from the Heatheniſm of the World to the acknowledgment (or knowledge) of the true God. So Tatianus expreſſeth his Converſion. (f) Being inſtituted at firſt in your Theology, but now knowing who God is, and what is his Creation. (g) For the Pagans Mythologize many thouſands of Gods, but are totally ignorant of the one God really and truly ſuch. Which words of the Alexandrian Cyril muſt be underſtood with diſtinction and limitation of Senſe, or elſe he hath overſtretch'd the String. But the ſame Father ſaith of the dealings of the Apoſtate-Angels with the Pagans; (h) Not ſuffering them to know at all, who is really and in truth the God and Lord of the Univerſe, that hath eſſentially the Empire over all, they perſwaded them to Worſhip the Creature rather than him. In which Paſſage of S. Cyril it is obſervable, that the Præpoſition παρὰ, muſt be rendred Præ or Potius (the Gentiles were perſuaded, to Worſhip the Creature rather than the Creator; for he ſuppoſeth, that the Gentiles did not at all know God, which is true in this Senſe, they were not at all Theiſts of Religion. Origen calleth them (i) ſuch as before the reception of Chriſt's Theology were in darkneſs concerning God and Ignorance of the Creator. And although he was a Platoniſt, and ſuppos'd Plato's Deity to be the true God, yet (contradictorily to himſelf) he ſaith of his Adverſary Celſus (who was no Stranger to Plato's Deity,) that he knew not God; and of Paganiſm, (k) that it is a Region devoid of the knowledge of God and the Life according to him, and hugely alien from Divinity. (l) The Pagans (ſaith S. Auſtin) had their felicity and proſperity à quodam Deo quem neſciebant; ipſe ergo quæratur, ipſe colatur, & ſufficit. From a certain God whom they knew not; let him therefore be ſought, let him be worſhipp'd, and it ſufficeth. So S. Chryſoſtom repreſenteth their State, expounding the Athenians Inſcription to the unknown God. Of whom may this properly be ſpoken (ſaith he) of the Creator or the Demon called Zeus? It is manifeſt of the Creator; for him they knew not, the other they knew. Paul therefore (one of the Martyrs in Paleſtine) exhorted at his Martyrdom (m) the Gentiles that are in Error and Neſcience of God, to come to Knowledge. Their uſual Quære, Quis iſte Deus eſt, who is that God, which ought alone to be ſerv'd? Demonſtrateth their prodigious alienation from the Knowledge of God, and that the true God was no Deity of their Theology or Theopolity. Which alſo appeareth from their wild Conceits touching the God of the Hebrews. (n) One of the Philoſophers upon inquiry into the Jews Religion pretended, to have found out what God they worſhipp'd, namely, one that preſideth over the Elements, which this viſible World conſiſteth of; for in the Scriptures of the Prophets the People of Iſrael are commanded to Worſhip that God, that made Heaven and Earth. Cicero hath remark'd the wild Conceits of the Stoicks touching (the Hegemonicon of the World, or) the Godhead. (o) Zeno and the generality of the Stoicks ſuppoſe, that the Ether is the ſupreme God, having a Mind whereby all things may be govern'd. Cleanthes a prime Stoick and Scholar of Zeno thinketh the Sun hath the Dominion, or is Lord of us and all and ſwayeth all. Therefore by the Diſſenſion of the wiſe we are neceſſitated to ignore, who is Lord over us, for we know not whether to pay our ſervice to the

(e) A Seculari errore ad agnitionem veræ Divinitatis. Pontius in vit. S. Cypr.

(f) Παιδευθεὶς μὲν πρῶτον τὰ ὑμέτερα· γινώσκων δὲ λοιπὸν τίς ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ τίς ἡ κατ' αὐτὸν ποίησις. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 10. c. 11.

(g) Μυρίους γὰρ ὅσους μυθολογοῦσι θεοὺς, τὸν ἕνα δὲ φύσει καὶ ἀληθῶς εἰσάπαν ἠγνοήκοτες. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 7. p. 232.

(h) Οὐκ ἐφιέντες ὅλως εἰδέναι, κἂν γοῦν τίς ὁ φύσει καὶ ἀληθείᾳ τῶν ὅλων ἐστὶ Θεὸς καὶ κύριος, καὶ τὸ κατὰ πάντων κράτος οὐσιωδῶς ἀνημμένος, λατρεύειν ἀναπεπείκασι παρ' αὐτὸν τῇ κτίσει. Ibid. l. 4. p. 122.

(i) Τοὺς πρὸ τῆς παραδοχῆς τῶν Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ δογμάτων ἐν σκότῳ τῷ περὶ Θεοῦ καὶ ἀγνοίᾳ τῇ περὶ τοῦ κτίσαντος ἐνδιατρίψαντας. C. Celſ. l. 8. p. 380.

(k) Ἔνθα ἐρημία ἐστὶ γνώσεως Θεοῦ καὶ τοῦ κατ' αὐτὸν βίου, ἢ ἔνθα πολύς ἐστιν ὁ τῆς θεότητος ἀλλότριος. Ibid. p. 399.

(l) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 25.

(m) Τοὺς ἐν πλάνῃ καὶ ἀγνωσίᾳ Θεοῦ τῶν ἐθνῶν ὄντας, εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν ἐλθεῖν αὐτούς. Euſeb. Hiſt. l. 8. de Mart. Pal. c. 8.

(n) S. Aug. de Conſ. Evang. l. 1. c. 29.

(o) An ipſis inter ſe diſceptare, mihi cum iis non licebit? Zenoni & reliquis ferè Stoicis æther videtur ſummus Deus, mente præditus, quâ omnia regantur. Cleanthes, qui quaſi majorum eſt gentium Stoicus, Zenonis auditor ſolem dominari & rerum potiri putat; igitur cogimur diſſentione ſapientum dominum noſtrum ignorare: Quippe qui neſciamus, ſoli an ætheri ſerviamus. Acad Qu. l. 4.

Sun or Æther. Theſe were a principal Sect of the Philoſophers, (p) who are ſuppos'd to have attain'd the Knowledge of God by the Works of Creation: The Philoſophers had the true Knowledge of God, (q) as ſome ſay. But the Apoſtle ranketh their Theoſophy with the Popular Pagan. 1 Cor. 1. 21. Seeing that in the Wiſdom of God (that inſtructive Wiſdom which God furniſheth in Nature) the World by Wiſdom knew not God (by Philoſophy they did not attain to that Knowledge the Knowledge of God,) it pleas'd God by the fooliſhneſs of preaching to ſave them that believe.

Clemens ſometimes ſaith of them, (r) but as it ſeemeth, the Greek Philoſophers that Name God, do not know him; for they do not Worſhip God according to God. Uſually he ſaith (s) They knew and worſhipp'd God, οὐ κατ' ἐπίγνωσιν, οὐ κατὰ τὴν γνῶσιν, not according to Agnition or Cognition, ἀλλὰ κατὰ περίφασιν, περίφασιν ἀληθῆ, περίφρασιν τὴν ἑλληνικὴν, but according to Periphaſis, true Periphaſis, Grecanic Periphraſis. In this Author Periphaſis (or Periphraſis) ſeemeth to ſignifie the circumdeſcription of a Thing or Perſon, whereby he meaneth the true notionality as underſtood without the true reality (without the true ſpecific and individual Determination,) which is on this ſide the Knowledge of the true reality, to which that notionality belongeth. This Idea the King, or he that reigneth over us, may be underſtood and taken either without or with that individual Perſon who is King and doth Reign; it admitteth both of an indefinite and incomplex, and alſo of a definite and complex acceptation, as ſome Logicians ſpeak. He that knoweth and honoureth the King only, as that Idea is underſtood and taken indefinitely and incomplexly, according to Clemens he knoweth and honoureth the King κατὰ περίφρασιν, according to his circumdeſcription (the true notionality as underſtood without the true reality,) οὐ κατὰ τὴν γνῶσιν, not according to knowledge of the true determinate reality or individual who is the King. Many are for Truth, for Juſtice, Virtue and Piety, κατὰ περίφρασιν, according to their Circumdeſcription (the true notionality as underſtood without the true reality,) that are not for them κατὰ τὴν γνῶσιν, according to knowledge of the true reality to which that notionality belongeth: But are adverſaries to that which is really and materially the Truth, Juſtice, Virtue and Piety. So Mankind have in their Mind the Notion of Good, the chief Good (ſummum bonum,) Happineſs and Beatitude: But they ſeek it (t) as Men that are ſeeking Gold and Silver in the dark, and through their Expectation and Ignorance of good (conjoin'd) bring upon themſelves innumerable Evils; for God hath enkindled in Mankind this live Spark, the expectation of Good, ἀπέκρυψε δὲ αὐτῶ τὴν εὕρεσιν, but hath not taught them where to find it. S. Auſtin was puzzled with this difficulty, beatitudo amatur ab omnibus, nec tamen ſcitur ab omnibus, beatitude is belov'd by all, yet not known by all: But he might have ſalv'd the difficulty, if he had diſtinguiſh'd the knowing it into knowing it κατὰ περίφασιν, according to Periphaſis and κατὰ γνῶσιν, according to Knowledge. The Heathen that are ſaid, to know and honour God, κατὰ περίφρασιν, according to Periphraſis only, had this or the like honourary Idea in their Mind, the King of the World, the Lord of all that ſwayeth all; but with this honourary Idea ſome of them inveſted a Star, others an Hero, others a Demon, and others a Platonic Idea. Some apply'd it to the viſible Univerſe (being Pan-Theiſts.) others were altogether uncertain to what definite ſpecific-individual Nature it ought to be apply'd (and therefore were Vago-Theiſts, or Theiſts at random, not determin'd πρὸς ἕν, to any one thing;) Tu Jupiter, ſive Cœlum es, ſive Æther, ſive Terra, Thou Jupiter, whether thou be Heaven, or the Ether, or the Earth, ſaith one in the Poet. Such Theiſts although they have this true Notion of God in their Mind, the Lord of the World, the Lord of all (or the like,) yet becauſe they apply it not to him, to whom it belongeth, they are not Theo-Theiſts, they do not know or acknowledge him, who is Lord of the World, or Lord of all. So Clemens ſaith of Homer, (u) he talketh of the Father of Gods and Men, not knowing who is the Father, or how he is the Father, Of the Heretical-Pagan Gnoſticks he ſaith, (w) Τὸν ὄντα μὴ γνώσκουσαι θεὸν, Thoſe Hereſies know not the true God. If this great Author contradicteth himſelf in this Argument, it is no more than is uſual with the Jewiſh Rabbins; for Abarbinel (agreeably to many others of his Fraternity) diſcourſeth, (x) that the Gentiles did acknowledge the true God, only they err'd in ſetting up Mediatours. Yet he alſo ſaith; in aliis locis quia non agnoverunt Iſraelem, etiam non cognoſcunt Deum. In other places becauſe they have not known Iſrael, they alſo know not God. So in the Talmud the Iſraelites are often oppos'd unto עובדי כוכבים ומולות the Gentiles the Worſhippers of the Stars and Planets, (y) quaſi Deus à ſolis Iſraelitis agnoſceretur, as if God was known or acknowledg'd by the Iſraelites alone. The Jews are known to be Idiotical and abſurdly fond of their own Nation: But without any thing of that extravagant Humour they may juſtly ſtile the Gentiles, as ſome of them have done (z) not Gods Portion, but חלק חאלילים the Portion of the Idols whom they ſerve. (a) The Jews (ſaith Tertullian) in time paſt belonged to God, afterwards ejected for their Crimes they began to be without. The Gentiles were never within as to God, but as a drop out of the Bucket, and duſt out of the Floor, and always without. A Biſhop therefore and a Confeſſor in one of the Councils of Carthage hath very much miſtaken the Gentiles Condition, Religion and Profeſſion. (b) Gentiles quamvis Idola colant, tamen ſummum Deum Patrem Creatorem cognoſcunt & confitentur. Although the Gentiles worſhip Idols, yet they know and confeſs the ſupreme God the Father, the Creator. If this account of Gentiliſm be not a foul miſtake, Jews, Heathens and Chriſtians are well agreed touching their Deity of Religion, as a certain Paſſage in the Emperor Adrian's Epiſtle to Servianus ſeemeth to repreſent them. (c) Unus illis Deus eſt. Hunc Chriſtiani, hunc Judæi, hunc omnes venerantur & gentes. They have one God (Serapis,) him the Chriſtians and the Jews and all the Nations Worſhip. But this Paſſage (as alſo ſome others of the ſame Nature in that Epiſtle) ſpeaketh the Senſe and Practice of no other Jews and Chriſtians ſave only of certain Egyptian Mongrel Pſeudo-Jews and Pſeudo-Chriſtians. The genuin Jews and Chriſtians are no Religioniſts of Serapis (the ſame with Jupiter Olympius:) Nor is it poſſible, that God's Religioniſts ſhould have the ſame Deity of a Religion in common with the Gentiles that know not God. Which being

(p) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 21.

(q) Ibid. p 378. v. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 4. p. 181. l. 7. p. 364.

(r) Ἀλλ' ὡς ἔοικεν οἱ φιλόσοφοι τῶν Ἑλλήνων, θεὸν ὀνομάζοντες οὐ γινώσκουσιν· Ἐπεὶ μὴ σέβουσι κατὰ θεὸν, τὸν θεόν. Strom. l. 6. p. m. 495.

(s) Ibid. p. 231, 446, 457.

(t) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 39.

(u) Μὴ εἰδὼς τίς ὁ πατὴρ, ἢ πῶς ὁ πατήρ. Strom. l. 6. p. m. 497. v. Theodoret. Θεραπ. Ser. 2.

(w) Ibid. l. 7. p. 543.

(x) Ap. Vorſt. de cap. Fid. p. 76, 45.

(y) L'Emper. not. in Jacchiad. p. 209.

(z) Jac. chiad. Paraphr. in Dan. 7. 3.

(a) Judæi retro penes Deum fuerant, dehinc ejecti ob delicta, extra Deum eſſe cœperunt. Nationes verò nunquam penes Deum, niſi ſtillicidium de ſitula, & pulvis ex area, & foris ſemper. Tertull. de Præſcript. c. 8.

(b) Sentent. Epiſc. Concil. Carth. inter op. S. Cypr. p. 232. ed. Pamel.

(c) Vopiſc. in Saturnin. Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 768.

being their genuin and uſual Character we may infer from it by way of Conſectary theſe five Branches of their and our Heatheniſm. 1. Our atheous darkneſs as to matter of Underſtanding. 2. Our atheouſneſs and flagitiouſneſs of Life. 3. Agreeableneſs of Religion. 4. The badneſs of our Virtue and Goodneſs. 5. The deadlineſs of our State and Condition. For all theſe are our Criminal not knowing God (that Deity of Religion which he is) and our State of not knowing God (which is the atheous State) is all theſe.

CONSECT. I.

Our Heatheniſm is the State of Atheous Ignorance.

I. THE Heathen World that abounded with common Learning and Knowledge, yet being in the Atheous State was in the State of Ignorance. The Ignorance of the Atheous State as ſuch is not meer Ignorance, but an Atheous kind of Ignorance, which Men emerge out of by their Converſion to God; as they that were initiated into the Gentiles Myſteries, are ſaid to have relinquiſh'd (d) τὴν ἄθεον δόξαν, the Atheous Sentiment. To this foul and criminal blemiſh of the Mind the ancient Theologers (e) both the Pagan and the Chriſtian have thought fit to apply the Name of Darkneſs, which is the Enemy both to Light and Sight, and hideth and obſcureth every thing. For the Light which Heatheniſm ſtandeth oppos'd to in the Chriſtian Theology, is not meer Knowledge, but the Saint of God-kind of Knowledge, which is Theiſm of Religion and Condition. Which Saint of God-kind of Knowledge and Wiſdom is conſiderable under a twofold Notion (agreeable to the Schools diſtinction of Logica docens & utens) as Inſtitutive and as Conſtitutive. As Inſtitutive it is the Law of Light, Prov. 6. 23. (An Inſtitution which is that which is Knowledge, Truth and Wiſdom.) As Conſtitutive (conſtitutive of the Saints of God) it denoteth univerſal Sanctity on our part, but more eſpecially that eminent Branch of it the Light of Knowledge which reſideth and ſhineth in holy Souls and conſtituteth the Children of Light, 2 Cor. 4. 6. So Heatheniſm conſider'd as a Diſcipline and Inſtitution (which may be called Heatheniſm inſtitutive) is the oppoſite to the Light of the Law of true Religion, and therefore is made up of that which is really and materially Atheous Ignorance, Error and Folly. And Heatheniſm of Mind (as to matter of Underſtanding) is the oppoſite to the Saint of God-kind of Knowledge and good Underſtanding Conſtitutive, and therefore is the Atheous kind of Ignorance, Error and Folly.

(d) Clem. Str. l. 7. p. m. 513.
(e) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 57.

II. As the Platoniſts therefore and the ancient Magi confront and oppoſe two contrary Natures which Man conſiſteth of, Soul and Body (f) τὴν μὲν θείαν, τὸν δὲ σκοτεινὸν ϗ ζοφώδη, the one divine and luminous, the other dark and caliginous: So the Chriſtian Theology contradiſtinguiſheth two oppoſite Specific Comprehenſions, two oppoſite States and Conditions, and two oppoſite kind of People, Parties and Families, the one Divine and of Light, the other Atheous and of Darkneſs. Matth. 5. 14. Luk. 4. 18. Joh. 9. 6. and 12. 46. 2 Cor. 4. 6. Col. 1. 13. 1 Theſſ. 5. 5. 2 Pet. 1. 9. 1 Joh. 2. 8, 9. Apoc. 3. 17. As amongſt (g) the Theurgical Philoſophers, ſo in the Scripture-Theology τὸ θεῖον ϗ τὸ λαμπρὸν, that which is Divine, lucid and luminous, ſtandeth oppos'd unto τὸ ἄθεον ϗ σκοτεινὸν, that which is Atheous and Tenebricoſe. So the Apoſtle of the Gentiles was ſent upon this Errand, to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, from Heatheniſm to Theiſm and Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition; which was a calling them out of Darkneſs into marvellous Light. As Heathens they were their Heatheniſm (Darkneſs,) and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, ye were ſometimes Darkneſs, but now are ye Light in the Lord. Heatheniſm is the Darkneſs of this World, of which the infernal Powers are the Rulers, Eph. 6. 12. and becauſe it is Atheiſm, the oppoſite to Theiſm and Chriſtianiſm of Religion and Condition, therefore the Apoſtle asketh, what communion hath Light with Darkneſs? 2 Cor. 6. 14. The Specific Comprehenſion of Theiſm of Religion and Condition is the Region of Light, and the Specific Comprehenſion of Athé-iſm is the Region of outer Darkneſs; which Phraſe ſignifieth the blindneſs of the wicked, as Origen thinketh. His Allegorical Interpretation is not amiſs; for this is the Region of Blindneſs (undiſcerningneſs) as well as of Darkneſs, and the Inhabitants of it are the Fools and blind (ſo called by our Saviour,) the blind Leaders of the Blind, the blind People that have Eyes and ſee not (ſeeing with their bodily Eyes, but as to the Eyes of their mind not ſeeing,) the wretched and miſerable Poor and Blind, ſuch as want their Eye-ſight. He that lacketh theſe things (Divine Graces) is blind. 2 Pet. 1. 9. All Mankind called Heathens, Jews or Chriſtians, that are in the State of Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs, are in the main of the Atheous People, in the Atheous State; in the main they are in the Region of Darkneſs (the Specific Comprehenſion of Athé-iſm) and are thoſe that want their Eye-ſight. Such is their Caſe, their Character, and their Crime.

(f) Julian. Hymn. in Sol.
(g) Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 173.
Act. 26. 18.
1 Pet. 2. 9.
Eph. 5. 8.
Matth. 13; 13. and 15. 15. and 23. 19
Iſa. 43. 8.
Apoc. 3. 17.

III. The Heathen in their State of Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſneſs wanted their Eye-ſight; for they had need to have their Eyes open'd. Act. 26. 18. They were Prodigies of blindneſs and unintelligentneſs in the matters of Sanctity and Salvation, walking in the (heatheniſh or atheous) vanity of their Mind, having the Underſtanding darkned (being heatheniz'd and atheiz'd as to underſtanding things, having obliterated or at leaſt obſcured their natural Notices of the matters of God and Godlineſs,) being alienated from the life of God through the (Atheous kind of) Ignorance that was in them, becauſe of the blindneſs of their Heart. Their wiſe Men profeſſing themſelves to be wiſe, became Fools (unwiſe and unintelligent in the Matters of God,) and becoming vain in their Imaginations (full of heatheniſh and Idolatrous Conceits which are Atheous) their fooliſh Heart was darkened. They liv'd (h) as in deep Darkneſs, a Moon-leſs and a Winter-night, or rather as in a be-nighted Sun-leſs Region, like that of the Cimmerians in Homer, which was never irradiated by the Sun-beams.

Eph. 4. 18.
Rom. 1. 21, 22.

(h) Ὡς ἐν σκότῳ βαθεῖ ϗ ἀσελήνῳ ϗ χειμερίῳ νυκτί. S. Chryſoſt. in Rom. Hom. 26.

—— οὐδέ ποτ' αὐτοὺς
Ἠέλιος φαέθων ἐπιδέρκεται ἀκτίνεσσιν.

This had been our Caſe, (i) if we had not known the Word and been illuminated by it: As if the Sun was not, notwithſtanding that there are Stars there would be nothing but an univerſal Night. According to that of Heraclitus, εἰ μὴ ἥλιος ἦν, εὐφρόνη ἂν ἦν, if the Sun had not been, Night would would have been. The words of Philo are lively expreſſive of the ſad benighted Eſtate of the Heathen World; (k) the Region of the Wicked, where there is no Sun, but depth of the Night, endleſs Darkneſs, and vaſt multitudes of Shades, Ghoſts and Spectres, and Dreams. Theſe are always ſtirring in the Night-time of ſottiſh Superſtition (the Day-light profligateth them) they are the Iſſue and reſembling Progeny of the dark Region of Paganiſm, wherein Mankind ſeem to have been fettered by a long Night as Priſoners of Darkneſs, Wiſd. 17. 2. Such Darkneſs as may well be called in Plotinus's Language (l) βόρβορος σκοτεινὸς, tenebricoſe Dirt; for their Deities were אלילים & גלולים Nothings, and Dunghill-Gods; an ancient Writer ſaith, (m) The Mind is ſordifiſ'd and dirtifiſ'd by evil Concupiſcences; and another ſaith, (n) The Mind of the Heathen was replete with the Dirt of Deceit. Such was their foul Idolatry and blind Superſtition, which ſheweth, that they wanted their Eye-ſight; for, as S. Chryſoſtom ſaith to an Heathen, (o) When thou goeſt into a Temple, and ſeeſt a naked Statue, a Mute Stone, and ſayeſt, This is a God, haſt thou Eyes? haſt thou not need that I ſhould make thee Eyes, to ſee Stone to be Stone, and Wood to be Wood? Had the Egyptians Eyes, (p) who deify'd that blind Animal Mus Araneus (becauſe they ſuppos'd Darkneſs older than Light?) or the generality of the Pagans, were they not as blind as that Egyptian Deity, (q) who affix'd all manner of Infamy and Villainy to their Gods, yet thought themſelves Pious? They had a Notion of Piety, Purity, Sanctity and Juſtice towards their Deity; but their Sanctity was Sin, their Piety was Villainy, their Purity Pollution, their Laver was their Stain, and their Righteouſneſs the higheſt Wickedneſs; they counted Evil Good, and Good Evil, Darkneſs Light, and Light Darkneſs; as Hierocles intituled his Nefarious Book againſt Chriſtianity Philalethes, (lover of Truth;) whereupon Lactantius juſtly exclaimeth, (r) O cæcum pectus, O mentem cimmeriis tenebris atriorem! O blind Mind, more black than the Cimmerian Darkneſs! So Zoſimus ſuppoſeth, that Theodoſius's forbidding the exerciſe of the Pagan Religion was downright Atheiſm and Irreligion. (s) Thoſe were times of danger (ſaith he) to all that thought there were any Gods, or that look'd up at all unto Heaven. Theſe virulent Pagans were like the Night-birds, (t) they eſchew'd the Light as inimical, and embrac'd Darkneſs as Salutary, the Darkneſs of the Atheous State, which is juſtly call'd by the ancient Writers of the Church, (u) nox cæca, blind Night; (w) oculi ſuperfuſi nigroris tenebris & nocti contecti, Eyes cover'd with black Darkneſs and with the Night; (x) tenebrarum profundum, the Deep of Darkneſs; (y) ἀγνοίας ὕπνος βαθὺς, the profound (and therefore pleaſing) Sleep of Ignorance; (z) Nox media, Midnight; (a) horrenda quædam profunditas ignorantiæ, ex qua omnis error exiſtit, qui omnes filios Adam tenebricoſo quodam ſinu ſuſcipit, ut homo ab illo liberari ſine labore, dolore, timore, non poſſit: An Horrendous Deep of Ignorance, whence all Error ariſeth, which infoldeth all the Children of Adam as a tenebricoſe Cavity or Boſom, ſo that Man cannot be freed from it without Labour, Dolour, Fear.

(i) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 52.

IV. All Mankind therefore natively and originally want their Eye-ſight, and muſt be denominated ſuch as are born blind; for this horrendous Deep of Ignorance (as S. Auſtin ſuppoſeth) is an effect of Man's original lapſe, and ſome degree of it is a Branch of his Original Corruption and Vitioſity: Which Hypotheſis Platoniſm hath ſome affinity with; for it ſuppoſeth, (b) ἄγνοιαν, νηπιότητα, παραφροσύνην, σκότωσιν, Ignorance, Fooliſhneſs, Madneſs, Obtenebration, to be the Conſequents of the Souls deſcent into the Body. The Man in the Goſpel that was born blind and recover'd his Eye-ſight, would not be an Emblem of our Saviour's Cures, nor would there be any need of a Divine Phyſician, to heal and open the Eyes of Men; nor of Divine Illumination, nor of a New-birth, (whereby we are born into the Region of Light) if Mankind were not in ſome degree born blind. (c) Regenerate Chriſtians are brought forth into one and the ſame Light of Truth out of one Womb of the ſame Ignorance. No account can be given of that Midnight Darkneſs, which for many Ages invelop'd the World of Mankind, but from this Hypotheſis, that they are born without their Eye-ſight; as without the Life, ſo without the Light Spiritual; as in ſome degree Heathen Ungodly Sinners, ſo Heathen Sons of Darkneſs. Darkneſs Metaphorical and Spiritual ſignifieth both the privation of Light and the oppoſitive thereto. For the Soul of Man in her degenerate condition having loſt the Divine Image hath loſt her Clarity and Brightneſs, her Purity and Vital Sanctity, and that Light which is a Branch of it, whereby ſhe is become devoid of the Saint of God-kind of Knowledge and Wiſdom conſtitutive; and thoſe kind of things which are peculiarly the matters thereof, are now an unknown Land; as they that have been always ſick, never ſaw the Face of Health; as a Fiſh that hath been always under Water, knoweth not any thing of the Fire (ſaith Maimonides;) whence the ſtate of degenerate Souls is that of Heathens, (d) μηδὲ φαντασιωθέντων τὴν θείαν αἴσθησιν, that (uſually) have not ſo much as a thought, which is Divine Senſe and Diſcernment Upon the loſs of the Divine Image (which is the Soul's Life and Light) an oppoſitive Darkneſs ſucceedeth; for ſuch is the Reign of the Animal Senſitive Nature (the Fleſh) which is blind and fooliſh, unintelligent and unreaſonable, and is cauſally blindneſs, error and folly to the Mind; as ſuggeſting atheous Conceits (vain and heatheniſh Imaginations, Rom. 1. 21.) as being full of (e) vile and corrupt Affections; as being parturient of all Vice and Wickedneſs (their own Wickedneſs hath blinded them, Wiſd. 2. 27.) and the Mind ſymbolizing therewith and being Uniſon thereto becometh a fleſhly Mind, Col. 2. 18. Rom. 8. 5. Eph. 2. 3. For being moulded after the Fleſh, ſhe becometh carnally minded (affected and addicted) of an Atheous, Carnal and Mundane Genius and Diſpoſition, which is an Ineptitude and Indiſpoſition of the Soul, to theize and ſymbolize with God in any reſpect (in her Diſcernments, Apprehenſions and Conceits, Opinion and Judgment, Sentiment and Eſtimation of things, as alſo in her Deſigns, Elections and Purſuits,) and an aptitude or diſpoſition to Atheize in all reſpects; which importeth a Propenſion to the blind and carnal Conceits of Mundane Religioniſts, and to the various ſorts of Atheous Error and Folly. Such an Atheous and Heathen-kind of Genius is now in a degree of Inchoation native and original to Mankind (who therefore ought to be reputed of the Atheous Heathen and Mundane-kind and Family) which by degrees is increas'd, as vitious Affections grow to greater height, and as ſinning againſt God becometh their Trade and Practice; for (f) the evil Life cauſeth Mens ignorance of that knowledge the knowledge of God. Bad Education alſo, Converſe and Company, Example, prevailing Cuſtom, publick reigning Error and Vice, bad Government and Laws, beget, confirm and increaſe Atheouſneſs of Mind, and by the Tempter's Artifices and Impoſtures, (g) ἡ ψυχὴ ἀσαφείας ἐμπέπλησται, the Soul becometh opacous and caliginous, and is replete with Darkneſs. From theſe concurrent cauſes (all or many of them) Act. 17. 30. the ancient times of the Heathen were the times of Ignorance: And thence it is, that the generality of Mankind in all times are criminally involv'd in Atheous Darkneſs, Error, Ignorance and Fooliſhneſs touching matters of Good and Evil, Right and Wrong, Juſt and Unjuſt, Virtue and Vice, Gallantry and Baſeneſs, Sanctity and Sin, God and his Service, and the God-kind of things; (h) for they that know not God, are neceſſarily ignorant of the Matters of God, becauſe no Treaſure lieth open to the extraneous. Touching the World alſo and its ſenſitive Goods and Evils, touching themſelves, their Intereſt, and their Happineſs, their Souls and their future ſtate, they prodigiouſly deceive themſelves (through Pride and Self-love) and touching their preſent ſtate and their ways, Luk. 23. 34. not knowing what they do, nor whither they are going, becauſe the Darkneſs hath blinded their Eyes, 1 Joh. 2. 11.

(k) Ἀσεβῶν ἀνήλιος χῶρος, ὃν ἐπέχουσι νὺξ βαθεῖα, σκότος ἀτελεύτητον, καὶ εἰδώλων καὶ φασμάτων καὶ ὀνειράτων ἔθνη μυρία. Περὶ ὀνειρ. l. 3. opuſc. p. 163.

(l) En. 1. l. 8. c. 13.

(m) Mens malis cupiditatibus ſordidatur. Lactant. l. 5. c. 20.

(n) Τῆς ἑλλήνων διανοίας τοῖς τῆς ἀπάτης βορβόροις ἐμβεβυσμένης. S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 5. p. 172.

(o) Phot. Cod. 277. Col. 1557. v. Orig. c. Celſ. l. 6. p. 322.

(p) Plut. Sympoſ. l. 4. c. 5.

(q) Arnob. c. Gent. l. 4 p. 147.

(r) L. 5. c. 3.

(s) Hiſt. p. 245.

(t) Theodoret. θεραπ. Ser. 2.

(u) S. Cypr. Ep. 2.

(w) Idem de oper. & eleemoſ.

(x) Min. Fel. p. 6.

(y) Clem. pæd. l. 2. c. 10.

(z) S. Aug. de verb. Dom. Ser. 29.

(a) Idem de C. D. l. 22. c. 22.

(b) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 86. Gale Not. p. 241, 242.

(c) Chriſtiani de uno utero ignorantiæ ejuſdem ad unam lucem expiraverunt veritatis. Tertull. Apol. c. 39.

(d) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 391.

(e) Grot. Not. in Joh. 9. 6.

V. The principal and ſummary reaſon of the Heathens Blindneſs was, They did not emerge out of the ſtate of Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs, and therefore they were in the ſtate of Atheous Ignorance. From whence it followeth, that all Men who are in the ſame ſtate of Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs (although they do not Atheize ſo enormouſly as the Heathen, yet) are in the ſtate of Atheous Ignorance and want their Eye-ſight as well as they. Flaſhes of Light and ſome convictions of Mind are conſiſtent with this eſtate; and there may be in it a ſuperficial, ineffectual and graceleſs kind of knowing the matters of Sanctity and Saving Religion (all ſuch knowledge which is a knowing not knowing them, 1 Cor. 13. 2.) yet becauſe all that are in it, (i) in nocte peccatorum vitiorumque velantur, are hoodwink'd in the Night of their Sins and Vices, and have a Vail upon their Minds, they are neceſſarily in the ſtate of Atheous Ignorance: Reigning Graceleſneſs and Wickedneſs is formally and efficient-cauſally reigning Ignorance, Darkneſs, Error, Deceit, Fooliſhneſs. Οὐδὲν οὕτως ποιεῖ μωροὺς ὡς πονηρία, S. Chryſoſt. in Joh. Hom. 41. Nothing ſo maketh Fools as Wickedneſs. The Wicked and Ungodly could not be ſuch, if they were not the Ignorant and Unintelligent, the Fooliſh and Unwiſe, the Blind and Undiſcerning, erroneous, deceived and deluded; Fools in the main and therefore Fools in grain. And if in the main they are the Ignorant and Unintelligent, they are neceſſarily ſuch in the matters of Sanctity and Saving Religion. They have not the due knowledge and underſtanding of them, which conſtituteth the Men of Knowledge and Underſtanding; they know them but ſo, as to be in the ſtate of Ignorance concerning them; as thoſe falſe Religioniſts the Carnal Jews were; who if they had had their Eyes, muſt have diſcern'd the Light of the World ſhining in their view, could not have miſtaken God for the Devil, nor could they have miſtaken ſhews for ſubſtance; or thought themſelves Virtuous when they were Vile, or Wiſe when they were Fools; or ſafe, when they were in their Sins; nor could they have made their Religion their Sin and Deluſion. Both Jews and Gentiles ſhew, what Man is in his (now) Original and Unregenerate State; that this being the ſtate of reigning Wickedneſs and Ungodlineſs, is the ſtate of reigning Atheous Ignorance, Error and Fooliſhneſs; whence all the Ungodly are ἀπειρόκαλοι, lamentably unskilful in the Science of Good and Evil.

Deut. 32. 28, 29. Job 28. 28. Pſal. 111. 10. Prov. 4. 19. and 15. 21. and 24. 9. Iſa. 27. 11. and 44. 20. Dan. 12. 10. Rom. 3. 11. Matth. 23. 17. Eph. 4. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 9. Tit. 3. 3. Heb. 3. 10. and 9. 7. Jam. 5. 20. 2 Pet. 2. 18.

VI. If Atheous Ignorance, Error and Folly together with Sin and Wickedneſs reigneth in Unregenerate Mankind, a Syſtem of that which is Unreaſonableneſs neceſſarily reigneth, (not as if we wanted the natural faculty of Reaſon and Underſtanding, but the good underſtanding is wanting,) whence the ancient Writers ſay, (k) By the coming of Chriſt Man, who was unreaſonable (unreaſonably affected and addicted) is made reaſonable; before we were like the Brutes that know not reaſon, we were carnal, we were terrene. Atheous Mankind being themſelves (in great degree) unreaſonable, the things of the Holy Spirit (thoſe which are originally and of kind and quality ſuch) ſeem to them abſurd, fooliſh, unreaſonable, as the Apoſtle ſaith, 1 Cor. 2. 14. The natural Man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are Fooliſhneſs to him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcern'd. He that is Non-ſpiritual both as to extraordinary Spiritual Revelation, and as to ordinary Spiritual Regeneration, is the Natural Man. But he is here conſider'd as oppos'd to the Spiritual Man of extraordinary Spiritual Revelation, who hath Intelligence of the things of the Holy Spirit, and communicateth them; which the Natural Man (without being better qualify'd) receiveth not; neither can he know them (as the World cannot receive the Holy Spirit,) but they are Fooliſhneſs in his Eyes, 1 Cor. 1. 18, 21, 23, 25. Joh. 14. 17. Mankind in their Mundane Naturaliſm (antecedently to their Converſion) are ſo atheouſly affected, that the Apoſtle ſpeaking their Senſe of things in his time, calleth the Word of the Croſs (profundum Crucis, the deep Myſtery of the Croſs, as S. Auſtin ſpeaketh) the fooliſhneſs of Preaching. Time was when the Chriſtians thought it ſo, as their Apologiſts tell the Heathen; (l) Theſe matters of the Chriſtian Faith we have ſometime derided as well as you, for we were of you, being made, not born Chriſtians. So the matters of the Holy Chriſtian Life have always ſeem'd ridiculous and fooliſh to Men of the Atheous, Mundane and Profane Genius, which ſo prevaileth in Nations called Chriſtian, that ſerious Piety is not matter of Honour and Eſtimation, but of Diſparagement with the moſt and greateſt, and to be a Chriſtian indeed, is to be vile in their Eyes, if not to have the uſage, which ſuch as departed from Iniquity in ancient times had * τὸν γέλωτα καὶ τὴν χλευασίαν,

---

(f) Τὸ δὲ ἀγνοεῖν τὸν θεὸν, ἡ τοῦ βίου πολιτεία παρίστησιν. Clem. Str. l. 3. p. m. 324.

(g) M. Tyr. Diſſ. 28.

(h) Ignorantes quique Deum rem quoque ejus ignorent neceſſe eſt, quia nullus omnino theſaurus extraneis patet. Tertull. de Pœnit. c. 1.

(i) S. Aug. de Mor. Eccl. Cathol. c. 2.

(k) Per adventum Christi, homo qui erat irrationabilis, rationabilis factus eſt. Ante eramus ſimiles beſtiarum, quæ rationem neſciunt, eramus carnales, eramus terreni. Vid. Petav. T. 4. par. 1. l. 2. c. 7. p. 152. & par. 2. l. 12. c. 15. p. 242. & ibid. p. 540. Montacut. Apparat. p. 25.

(l) Hæc & nos riſimus aliquando, de veſtris fuimus; fiunt, non naſcuntur Chriſtiani. Tertull. Apol. c. 18.

* S. Chryſoſt. in Gen. Hom. κγ. p. 165.

Laughter and Deriſion. (m) Amongſt Chriſtians they that will be the more diligent and better, muſt be inſulted over by Chriſtians, (n) the bad Chriſtians that tranſcend all (Jews and Pagans) in wickedneſs of Life. Theſe ſuppoſe, that they may be leud, ſenſual and worldly, yet genuine Chriſtians; that Sin is a very ſmall matter (and accordingly their Life is the Sinning Trade;) that God is the God and Patron of the Ungodly, that it is needleſs and ridiculous to be a Saint of God, and a ſneaking thing to be Religious; that Heatheniſh Perfunctorineſs and Outſide Modiſhneſs in God's Service is good Devotion, that high Profaneneſs is Gallantry, that a Life of Fleſh-pleaſing Vanity is better than an Holy, that the World's deluſive Phantaſms are the great and goodly things, that the Concernments of this Animal Senſitive Life are chiefly to be minded; and that (o) it is madneſs to bear the Croſs and to ſuffer for Righteouſneſs ſake. In Chriſtendom, in Reform'd Chriſtendom, ſuch Atheous Ignorance, Error and Folly prevaileth, which is (as Plato in his Sophiſta defineth Ignorance) οὐδὲν ἄλλο πλὴν παραφροσύνη, nothing elſe but Madneſs; for that which is an high degree of Unreaſonableneſs (highly contrary to underſtanding Agency) both Philoſophers and the Vulgar call Madneſs, Phrenzy and Deliration. "It is Madneſs, for Men to dream of "a worldly happy Eſtate, and a ſenſual Feli"city, and to make it their chief End and "Good; to be the World's admirers and lovers, "that are deluded by Shadows (at the rate of "Plato's Cave-men) and idolize momentaneous "phantaſtick nothings, and purſue a Feather, "and dote upon Dung and Carrion, and Thorns "and Briars, (making them the chief or All of "their regard and concern) but neglect and loſe "the true ineſtimable Goods of the Kingdom of "God and of the Soul; to chuſe the Evil and re"fuſe the Good, running counter to their own "intendment (deſigning to be honourable and "happy, yet making themſelves vile and miſe"rable to extremity;) to ſin againſt God "(which is an Immenſity of Madneſs;) in a ſtate "of preſent danger wherein they are ſurroun"ded with Enemies, to be regardleſs of their "Safety, and as regardleſs of the future over"whelming Calamities, which few forecaſt to "prevent; to be merry and jovial in a mourn"ful ſtate, and fearleſs and careleſs in a fear"ful caſe; to loſe their Salvation for want of "a little ſerious care and pains (an Hog for an "Half-penny worth of Tarr) to ſpend their "care and time (their only time of making "themſelves) about that which is not worth the "while, to part with their All for nothing "(Hoc aliquid nihil eſt) to ſell their Salvation "for an old Song, and for a Moments Foolery "and Gullery (the Pleaſures of Sin and Vani"ties of the World) to plunge themſelves into "endleſs Miſeries; to be deluded and befool'd "in the plaineſt things, and in all their great "concerns, not knowing what is good for "themſelves, preferring a Cup of Ale before "Immortality, ſporting themſelves in their own "deceivings, and to manage their Affairs at ſo "mad a rate, as to loſe themſelves and be "caſt away! Ignorance by ſome of the Ancients was accounted (p) μανίας εἶδος, a Species of Madneſs: So the Heathen that were in the ſtate of Atheous Ignorance, are reproach'd with Madneſs by the Chriſtian Apologiſts. (q) They are mad rather than drunk, that make haſt to the Temples, and do worſhip to Statues or Animals as Gods; nor are they leſs mad, who ſuppoſe, that ſuch Works and Devices of ſordid and nefarious Artifices are honourary unto true Gods. (r) Mankind are taken with Madneſs (one of the greateſt Blemiſhes and Calamities,) which Chriſtianity is deſign'd to cure them of, and to reduce them to Godly-mindedneſs.

CONSECT. 2.

In Heatheniſm we live the Atheous Life.

I. A Theizing in Life and Practice is connex'd with Atheizing as to Underſtanding both as an Antecedent Cauſe, a Concomitant and a Conſequent thereof. For the Atheous kind of Life and Practice cauſeth the Atheous kind of Ignorance, Error and Fooliſhneſs, (s) as Steams and groſs Exhalations from the Earth cauſe a Caliginous Air. Sins and Vices, Luſts and Paſſions are to the Mind, (t) what a Suffuſion is to the Eye, (u) what Ruſt and Corruption is to a Looking-Glaſs (which fouleth it and eateth away its Brightneſs) an Atheous Temper and Diſpoſition is prone to Atheous Conceits and affecteth Atheous Opinions, Carnal Affections ſo powerfully blind the Underſtanding and biaſs the Judgment, (w) that evil Men muſt be ſuppos'd to have bad Notions of God. All Men judge as they are affected, (he that hateth any Man, is prone to believe and judge all manner of Evil of him; and when he is otherwiſe affected towards him, he will be prone to believe and judge the contrary;) therefore the Lovers of the World magnifie the things of the World; they ſee no Errors in their Patrons that raiſe them to Wealth and Greatneſs, and they form to themſelves a worldly kind of Religion: So the lovers of Fleſhly Pleaſures are averſe from believing a Reſurrection and Future Judgment, and (as Chaucer ſaith of the People of England) what they not like they never underſtand; the Truth is againſt the Improbous (whilſt ſo affected and addicted) and they are againſt the Truth. The Jews ſay, (x) that the Sin of Eve ſo extinguiſh'd the Light of the Sun, that it ſhineth not now, as it did before (for they ſuppoſe, that it ſhone before, as it will ſhine to the Juſt in the other Life;) which is a true ſaying, if it be underſtood of the lapſe of the Soul into Vice and Wickedneſs, and the extinction of her Intellectual Sun, which is an unavoidable Conſequence thereof. For the Soul in the Atheous State and Life and of the Atheous kind is neceſſarily bereft of the Saint of God-kind of Knowledge and Wiſdom conſtitutive, and hath but an obſcure diſcernment of the turpitude of Sin and Vice, or of the pulchritude of Virtue. (y) Vitiis circundati non poſſunt videre virtutes, they that are ſurrounded with and involv'd in the Vices, cannot ſee the Virtues. (z) One of an impure Life knoweth not the Virtue of Temperance or Chaſtity, nor the Pulchritude of Philoſophy.

Ignorance is connex'd with Vice and Wickedneſs as a Concomitant (inſeparable;) for it is impoſſible to be wiſe and wicked at the ſame time; (a) Nor is there any improbous Man, in whom Ignorance is not predominant and reigning, as Plato and

---

(m) Inter Chriſtianos qui voluerint eſſe diligentiores & meliores, ab ipſis Chriſtianis audituri ſunt inſultationes. S. Aug. in Pſal. 90.

(n) Omnibus (Paganis Judæis) pejus vivunt mali Chriſtiani. Idem in Pſal. 30. con. 2.

(o) Tertull. Apol. c. 27. Lactant. l. 5. c. 19.

(p) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. m. 56.

(q) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 157.

(r) Μεμηνὸς δὲ τὸ γένος τῶν ἀνθρώπων. Idem ibid. l. 4. p. 172.

(s) Clem. Str. l. 2. p. m. 200.

(t) Idem pædag. l. 1. c. 6.

(u) Theophil. ad Autol. l. 1. p. 70.

(w) Clem. Str. l. 7. p. m. 811.

(x) Buxt. Syn. Jud. c. 10. p. 249.

(y) S. Hieron. in Jonam. c. 3.

(z) Ὁ βίον ἀκάθαρτον ἔχων οὐκ οἶδε τῆς σωφροσύνης τὴν ἀρετὴν, οὐδὲ τῆς φιλοσοφίας τὸ κάλλος. S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 5. in Joh.

(a) Nec ullus eſt malus, in quo ignorantia non dominatur, ſicut Plato & eum ſecutus Ariſtoteles docent. Vives in S. Aug. de C. D. l. 11. c. 11.

Ariſtotle following him both teach. The being wicked is to be a Fool, the greateſt of Fools; reigning Wickedneſs therefore is neceſſarily connex'd with the greateſt Ignorance, Errour and Fooliſhneſs: Nor do any commit a ſinful Fact (preferring the Evil before the Good,) but upon their Repentance they acknowledge themſelves, to have been deceiv'd and befool'd (in making a falſe Valuation of ſome appearing Good connex'd with great Evil) according to that of Menander.

Οἴ μοι τάλας ἔγωγε, ποῦ ποθ' αἱ φρένες,
Ἡμῶν ἐκεῖνον ἦσαν, ἐν τῷ σώματι
Τὸν καιρὸν, οὐ ταῦτ' ἀλλ' ἐκεῖν' αἱρομένοις.

O miſerable I! where was our Mind,
In what part of our Body? When ſo blind,
That we thoſe Ills choſe, and thoſe Goods declin'd.

Atheizing in Life and Practice is alſo connex'd with atheous Ignorance as a Conſequent thereof. For (b) Ignorance introduceth Wickedneſs. The groſly ignorant in matters of true Religion and Godlineſs do not know them, and therefore can neither will nor do them, nor decline the oppoſite Evils; their ſinful Ignorance therefore is both in it ſelf and in its Conſequence * κακία ἐναργής, (as Plato ſpeaketh) manifeſt Wickedneſs. The whole of true Religion, Virtue and Duty is matter of Wiſdom and Knowledge; for they muſt be Men of good Underſtanding, that know the Divine Empire and the Laws thereof, and underſtand the matters of the Saint of God-kind of Learning and Philoſophy; that know the great things, which alone are worthy to be known, and underſtand the true Nature, worth and uſe of things; that diſcern between Truth and Falſhood, true and falſe Religion, between Good and Evil (chuſing the one and declining the other,) between Realities and Reſemblances, and are not impoſ'd upon by ſhews and appearances, that eſcape Error, Deceit and Deluſion (in their Opinions, Elections, Hopes and Confidences) and the many tempting Baits of Sin; that underſtand the true Rates of Things and eſtimate them aright; that know their Bounds and obſerve them, their Dangers and avoid them, their Enemies and how to vanquiſh them, their Diſeaſes and how to cure them; that conduct themſelves by wiſe Maxims, and do well and wiſely; that know how to demean themſelves aright in all Caſes and Circumſtances, and do their Buſineſs and Office well; that are not fooliſhly and viciouſly affected, but agreeably to the Nature of things (contemning what is contemptible, fearing what is really fearful, loving what is aimable in due degree and meaſure,) that govern themſelves well, and are well adviſ'd in their doings, foreſeeing and preventing the great Evils, making ſure of their true Happineſs, and ſo ſucceſsfully managing their Affairs, that they are eternally ſafe and ſecure. But they that lack Underſtanding, are like Children, who through Ignorance touch the fire (Clem. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 530.) they underſtand not their Sin, fear not their Danger, regard not their great Intereſts, diſcern not the things that differ, are cheated with falſe Wares in the dark, miſtake Traſh for Treaſure, and delirous Fables for Truth and Wiſdom. (c) Ἀκρότητες ἄρα ἀμαθίας ἀθεότης καὶ δεισιδαιμονία, to live in impiety, is one extremity of Ignorance, and Superſtition is another. Their Mind in the State of Ignorance and Blindneſs is replete with ignorant and fooliſh Cogitations, Conceits and Opinions; their jugdments and eſtimations of Things, their deſigns and elections are ignorant and unwiſe; they run upon thoſe Evils, which in general they deſire to avoid (for they wiſh well to themſelves;) their atheous Life ingendreth atheous Opinions and Errors, and their atheous Opinions and Errors neceſſarily lead to atheous Life and Practice.

II. Ignorance and Unintelligentneſs is ſo prolific a Principle of Sin, that as an ancient Writer ſaith, (d) It floweth from it as a Stream from a Fountain. The Philoſophers ſuppoſe, that every thing which the ignorant and fooliſh do, is unholy and impious, (e) ſaith Clemens. And himſelf ſaith, (f) whatever is done by the knowing and skilful (in well-doing) is good Practice, (as in Writing or Limning what the skilful do is well done;) but whatever the ignorant and unskilful doth, is bad Practice. The Practice of Well-doing is neceſſarily wanting there, where the requiſite Skill or Science of Well-doing is wanting. In which ſenſe the Saying of Lactantius may be underſtood, and may be made a true Propoſition. (g) He that is ignorant and fooliſh, knoweth not what is Juſt and Well-doing, and therefore always doth amiſs. As Minerva in Homer ſaith Plato (Alcibiad. 2.) took away the Cloud of darkneſs from Diomedes's Eyes.

Ὄφρ' εὖ γιγνώσκοι ἠ μὲν θεὸν ἠ δὲ ϗ ἄνδρα·

That he might well diſcern a God from a Man:

So thou oughteſt to have the Cloud of darkneſs taken away from thy Mind, which is now upon it, and then to apply thoſe Faculties by which thou mayeſt know — ἠ μὲν κακὸν, ἠ δὲ ϗ ἐσθλὸν, Good and Evil, that ſo thou mayeſt know, how to behave thy ſelf towards the Gods and Men. How great an evil Ignorance is, this Philoſopher obſerveth, ſeeing Men through Ignorance deſire and pray for what is hurtful to themſelves, ſuppoſing it to be good and profitable: (h) and becauſe of Ignorance we know not, that we do Evil. Nor do evil Men know what they are (abject, baſe and miſerable) as this Philoſopher ſaith in his Theætetus, τοσούτῳ μᾶλλον εἰσὶν οἷοι οὐκ οἴονται, ὅτι οὐχὶ οἴονται, They are the more ſuch as they think not themſelves to be, becauſe they do not think themſelves ſuch; for none would be wicked and unjuſt, if they thought, that being ſuch, they are abject, baſe and miſerable to extremity, as indeed they are. For (i) there being two Paradigms in the order of things, the one divine, the moſt happy; the other atheous, the moſt miſerable; they not ſeeing this, through their ſtolidity and extreme unintelligentneſs, unwittingly by their unjuſt Practices they become like to this, and unlike to that, for which they ſuffer puniſhment, living a life like that

to

(b) Ἡ ἄγνοια τὴν κακίαν εἰσηγεῖται. Hier. in aur. car. p. 178.

* Plato in his Theætetus ſaith of his good Doctrine concerning God, (that he is moſt juſt, and nothing more like him than a Man that is moſt juſt.) ἡ μὲν τούτου γνῶσις, σοφία ϗ ἀρετὴ ἀληθινή· ἡ δὲ ἄγνοια, ἀμαθία καὶ κακία ἐναργής. To know this is Wiſdom and true Virtue: But to be ignorant of it is illiterateneſs and manifeſt wickedneſs.

(c) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. 12.

(d) Ap. Petav. T. 4. Par. 2. l. 11. c. 1. S. 3.

(e) Προτρεπτ. p. m. 56.

(f) Πᾶσα ἡ διὰ τοῦ ἐπιστήμονος πρᾶξις, εὐπραγία· ἡ δὲ διὰ τοῦ ἀνεπιστήμονος κακοπραγία. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 527.

(g) Qui enim Stultus eſt quid ſit juſtum ac bonum neſcit, & ideo ſemper peccat. l. 5. c. 18.

(h) Λελήθαμεν ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς διὰ ταύτην καὶ πράττοντες.

(i) Παραδειγμάτων ἐν τῷ ὄντι ἑστώτων, τοῦ μὲν θείου εὐδαιμονεστάτου· τοῦ δὲ ἀθέου ἀθλιωτάτου· οὐχ ὁρῶντες, ὅτι οὕτως ἔχει, ὑπὸ ἠλιθιότητός τε ϗ τῆς ἐσχάτης ἀνοίας λανθάνουσι τῷ μὲν ὁμοιούμενοι διὰ τὰς ἀδίκους πράξεις τῷ δὲ ἀνομοιούμενοι. Οὗ δὲ τίνουσι δίκην, ζῶντες τὸν εἰκότα βίον ᾧ ὁμοιοῦνται.

to which they are aſſimilated. They degenerate into Brutiſts, but ſee not their own vileneſs, (k) nor their own true Intereſts (at moſt but obſcurely and ineffectually,) and ſuppoſing themſelves, to hurt others, they hurt themſelves moſt of all, not knowing it, (l) which is extreme unintelligentneſs. (m) Knowledge and Prudence being that in the Mind, which the Eye is in the Body (the Hegemonic,) and as the Sun in the Firmament, the Ignorant muſt neceſſarily travel in the Night (or according to the ancient Proverb πλεῖν ἐν τῇ νυκτί, navigate in the Night,) without ſeeing their way or their end, running upon Snares and Temptations, and Sin and Puniſhment, as upon Rocks and Shelves, eaſily ſeduc'd or miſled, or of themſelves wandring out of the way, through the greatneſs of their folly going aſtray, ſtumbling and tumbling into the Ditch. So (n) through Ignorance of God Men are many ways impious againſt God, defrauding God of his due Honours, attributing them to no Gods, deifying the parts of the World, and ſome ſuppoſing two repugnant Opificers thereof. So the Jews through ignorance crucify'd their Meſſiah, and the Samaritans worſhipp'd they knew not what. (o) Ἁμαρτάνομεν ἀπαίδευτοι ὄντες, we do Sin not being the Men of Learning in matter of Good and Evil.

Which is not to be underſtood in the Senſe of Arnobius, who from the School of the Platoniſts and the Stoicks deriv'd this Conceit, (p) that Mankind do not Sin by Will, but only by ignorance and weakneſs of Judgment; that really we would not Evil, nor do we chuſe it, but through ignorance we judge that Good, which yet is really Evil. But this Conceit is a grand Extravagance; for nothing is more apparent, than that Men uſually will and chuſe, intend and deſign (which is a perverſe Appetite and Will) the Evil of manifeſt injuſtice for carnal Self-gratification and advantage; a Conceit therefore which ſuppoſeth all their Sins, to be Sins of excuſable Ignorance, is it ſelf a Branch of Ignorance inexcuſable. Yet becauſe there is Ignorance in every actual Sin, and it is in part the Principle of it, the Maxim is true, (q) All Sin hath its riſe from Ignorance and Unintelligentneſs, (r) whereby Men are filled with all Evils, as Knowledge is the Fountain of all Goods to them. The Nature of Well-doing requireth, that the Mind be duely knowing as to her Agency; and to the Mind it belongeth, to guide and govern the whole Man, and to ſteer our whole courſe: But how exorbitantly and unhappily will that Man, or that Ship be ſteer'd, whoſe Pilot is ignorant and blind? They that are ignorant (in Phyſick, Navigation, Architecture or the like) and conſcious to themſelves of their own Ignorance, will not Practiſe, and therefore they commit no Errors, ſaith Plato (Alcibiad. 1.) But they that are ignorant and yet ſuppoſe themſelves knowing, will take upon them to Practiſe, αὕτη ἄρα ἡ ἄγνοια τῶν κακῶν αἰτία, this Ignorance therefore is the cauſe of all Evils. So the World of fooliſh Sinners taking upon them to practiſe, yet remaining in the State of atheous Ignorance, their Practice is that of Sin and Iniquity; for this is the Practiſe of that State, wherein they are. And the only remedy for theſe Evils is the care and cure of their Eyeſight (the want of which is the deadly Evil and the ſource of other deadly Evils;) for none are hurt by being deceiv'd (and therefore blinded,) they do not well underſtand what they are, or what they do.

III. So in Heatheniſm (s) τοῦ ἡνιόχου διαφθαρέντος, the Charioteer being ſpoil'd, all was overturn'd. For being in the State of atheous Ignorance (and therefore Aliens from that Knowledge, the Knowledge of God and the Life according to him) all were improbous deadly Sinners and liv'd the ungodly Life, being alienated from the Life of God through the Ignorance that was in them. The atheous Life of profane Drunkards, Swearers, Whoremongers, and Worldlings mainly intent upon the Concerns of this Animal ſenſitive Life was the Heathen Popular Life (notwithſtanding the Inſtitutions of Virtue and Philoſophy and the arcane Inſtitutions of Religion that were in Paganiſm;) their brutal Appetites concurr'd with the ignorant Conceits of their Minds touching a ſenſitive Felicity, to inſtigate them to unclean Practiſes; and being paſt feeling (having loſt the ſight and ſenſe of the turpitude and criminality of their Practices, which ſhould have reſtrain'd them, adimit nox atra colorem) they gave themſelves over unto laſciviouſneſs, to work all uncleanneſs with greedineſs. The Sins of Uncleanneſs were the Pagans eminent Vice; for although there are amongſt them (t) Inſtances and Inſtitutions of Continence, yet ſo generally and outragiouſly were thoſe Heathen Sons of darkneſs addicted to the Sins of Unchaſtity of all ſorts (ſome of which were not only thought allowable, but gentile and creditable) that the Pagan World may juſtly be thought nothing better than a Brothel-Houſe of Uncleanneſs. The principal Corruption in the World was through this ſort of Luſt (wherein the Heretical-pagan Gnoſticks wallowed alſo,) and becauſe of theſe things (principally) the Wrath of God came upon (theſe nefarious Sinners) the Children of Diſobedience. The Gentiles are characteriz'd by the Luſt of Concupiſcence, as a conſequent of their Ignorance and their not knowing God. And the New Teſtament in its black Catalogues of atrocious Sins commonly conjoineth the Sins of Uncleanneſs with Heathen Idolatry, and eating things offer'd to Idols with committing Fornication (which in a large Senſe ſignifieth all Whoredom, and which was a principal allective to Apoſtaſy from Chriſtianity and defection to Gentiliſm,) the Gentile Converts are by a ſpecial Decree forbid Fornication as a Rite of groſs ſymbolizing with the Gentiles, who are uſually called by the holy Writers οἱ πόρνοι, (Fornicators) the Heathen World being a World of impure Fornicators. (u) Their Doctrine did not condemn Fornication and Stews, (w) both Sexes were proſtituted in their Stews, which were every where allow'd and pay'd their Tribute, (x) the Perſians, Egyptians and Athenians are infamous for inceſtuous Marriages, (y) the Stoicks and Chryſippus for allowing them, (z) they are infamous alſo for unnatural Luſts, (a) their wiſe Man is not averſe from Love, (b) community of Women was practis'd in ſeveral Pagan Nations, (c) ſome are ſuperlative Inſtances of Scor-

tation

(k) Hier. in aur. Car. p. 250, 253.

(l) S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 41. in Joh.

(m) Clem. Str. l. 3. p. m. 324. Jambl. προτρεπτ. p. 12.

(n) Ἕνεκεν ἀγνοίας Θεοῦ πολυτρόπως ἀσεβοῦσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι. J. Mart. Qu. & R. ad Græc. p. 167.

(o) Simplic. in Epict. p. 63.

(p) Herald. in Arnob. p. 50. Epict. diſſ. l. 1. c. 26. Procl. in Tim. p. 357.

(q) Πᾶσα πονηρία ἐξ ἀγνοίας ἔχει τὴν ἀρχήν. S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 41. in Joh.

(r) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 57.

(s) S. Chryſoſt. in Rom. Hom. 5.

Eph. 4. 18, 19.

(t) Theodoret. Serm. 12. Tertull. de exhort. caſtit. ſub fin.

2 Pet. 1. 4. Eph. 5. 6. 1 Theſſ. 4. 5. 1 Pet. 1. 14.

Act. 15. 20

(u) Spencer. Not. in Orig. p. 5

(w) J. Mart. Apol. 2. p.

(x) Min. Fel. p. 304, 305.

(y) Orig. C. Celſ. l. 4. p. 4. 15 Laert. in Chryſip.

(z) Holyday on Juv. p. 29.

(a) Caſaubon. Not. in Laert. p. 96.

(b) Sext. Emp. Pyr. Hyp. l. 1. c. 24, 25. Euſeb. pr. ev. l. 6. c. 10.

(c) El. Cretenſ. in Gr. Naz. or. 3. n. 83, 84.

tation and Maſculine mixtures, (d) the Lacedæmonians are noted for lending their Wives, (e) Plato for countenancing Perjury in Love-matters, Plato and Lycurgus baniſh'd Modeſty from their Commonwealth (for they will have Men Spectators of naked Women,) Plutarch was ſhameleſs, when he wrote his Amatorius; (f) the Greek Philoſophers are remark'd for their impure Maſculine Amours, (g) not only the Athenians, but the Roman Senators were addicted to that atrocious Villany; (h) and the Oracle of Apollo alloweth it. (i) Their 'Αῤῥητοποιῖαι, not to be named are uſually mention'd in their own Authors, and the Apoſtle hath remark'd their Monſtroſities of Uncleanneſs (Rom. 1. 28.) which he looketh upon as the Conſequents of a reprobate Mind. Which Phraſe ſignifieth a Mind utterly deprav'd and ſpoil'd and loſt and gone (as to the good diſcernment and ſenſe of things;) for things or perſons finally reprobated are utterly loſt and gone in a twofold Senſe: They are utterly vitiated and ſpoiled (like the depraved ground, Heb. 6. 8.) which bringeth upon them the Curſe of Reprobation, whereby they are caſt away. But theſe foul Carnalities (the Sins of Uncleanneſs) are only one eminent Limb or Member of the Heathen old Man, that hath his Converſation in the Luſts of the Fleſh, fulfilling the Deſires of the Fleſh and of the Mind, walketh according to the courſe of this World, according to the Prince of the Power of the Air, in Laſciviouſneſs, Luſts, exceſs of Wine, Revellings, Banquettings, and abominable Lewdneſſes, which were ſo faſhionable in the Heathen World, that it was an unwonted admirandous thing, that the Chriſtians (who ſeem'd an odd heterogeneous People) did not run with them to the ſame exceſs of Riot. Being fill'd with all Unrighteouſneſs, Fornication, Wickedneſs, Covetouſneſs, Maliciouſneſs, full of Envy, Murder, (Homicide was the Gladiators Diſcipline and matter of Glory, they ſlew their Slaves at Pleaſure, uſually expos'd their Children, Romulus made a Law, that Children born deform'd ſhould be expos'd and ſtifled, and their unrighteous Wars were publick Murders,) Debate, Deceit, Malignity, Whiſperers, Back-biters, Haters of God, Deſpiteful, Proud, Boaſters, inventors of evil Things, diſobedient to Parents, without Underſtanding, Covenant-breakers, without natural Affection, implacable, unmerciful. Such were the worſer and the greater part of them, and of all of them it muſt be ſaid, that by ſeveral degrees of Wickedneſs they conſtituted a World of flagitious People, an evil World (a World of Evil Men and a World of Evils), a World of the Luſt of the Fleſh, and the Luſt of the Eyes, and the pride of Life (that take place and are predominant in it,) which are not of the Father (of the Divine Family,) but are of the World; they are originally and of Kind and Quality mundane, as regenerate Chriſtians are originally and of Kind and Quality thoſe that are of God. We know, that we are of God, and the whole World lieth in Wickedneſs. As a drunken Man is ſaid to be in Drink, in the ſame ſenſe the World is in Wickedneſs; and this being its permanent Poſture and Situation it is ſaid, to lie in Wickneſs.

The Heathen World were generally ſuch lewd Debauchees, of ſo enormouſly wicked Lives, that for this reaſon in Contradiſtinction to the Jews (as alſo becauſe they were Heathen Idolaters and not of the holy People) they are intituled Sinners, they are join'd with Publicans, both being Sinners (the lewd and profane,) and they are called ἄνομοι, lawleſs Perſons, being without and againſt the Law of God. They are the Heathen kind of Livers, that are under a damnatory Sentence. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Eph. 2. 2. and which are excluded from Citizenſhip in the New Jeruſalem and doom'd to Sodom's Lot, Apoc. 21. 8. The fearful and unbelieving and the abominable (that perpetrate ſome abominable Sins of Uncleanneſs) and Murderers, and Whoremongers, and Idolaters and all Liars ſhall have their part in the Lake which burneth with Fire and Brimſtone. (k) The Heathen were not only Satanical in their Dogma, but (in ſeveral degrees) Diabolical in their Life. (l) When Man liveth according to Man (or the Fleſh,) not according to God, he is like unto the Devil. And hence there emergeth two Cities different from and contrary to each other; ſome live according to the Fleſh, others according to the Spirit. The Carnal and the Spiritual kind of Livers conſtitute two contrary Parties, Alliances, Kindreds, Families, Cities and Societies; the one this mundane, the other the heavenly. For originally and of Kind and Quality the Carnal kind of Livers are thoſe, that are of the World, of this World, the Children of this World, the Men of this World that conſtitute it and walk after the courſe of it; and therefore the World of Mankind (as contradiſtinct to the heavenly Citizens) is a World of carnal, atheous mundane kind of Livers. They are thoſe that are in the Fleſh (devoid of the holy Spiritual Life,) after the Fleſh, that mind the things of the Fleſh and are carnally minded; thoſe that walk after the Fleſh, and bring forth the Fruits thereof, which are Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hatred, Variance, Emulations, Wrath, Strife, Seditions, Hereſies, Envyings, Murders, Drunkenneſs, Revellings and ſuch like. Thus the Converts from Heatheniſm ſometime liv'd; they were the atheous, carnal and mundane kind of People in Genius, Life and Practice, walking in Darkneſs, living in Errour, the vain Converſation, uncircumciſed and unclean, not waſh'd nor ſalted at all, the vile Perſons in Temper and Converſation, the Friends of the World and Enemies of God, not of the God-kind but the Brute-kind (the Dogs and Swine) and Diabolici generis of the Satanical Cognation and Alliance. At their ſerious Undertaking Chriſtianity and Godlineſs they ceas'd to be the Servants of Sin, they put off the old Man with his Deeds, the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh; therefore in their unheatheniz'd State they were in the State of Servitude unto Sin, the whole Maſs or Body of Sin, Vice and Wickedneſs liv'd and reign'd in them, and they liv'd in it. Which comprehenſion of Sin, Vice and Wickedneſs the holy Writers fitly call the Darkneſs; for as vital Sanctity (the life of Grace) is the pure immaculate kind of thing, the vital brightneſs and beauteouſneſs, a luminouſneſs of Mind and Practice, and therefore is fitly called the Light: So the vital carnality and wickedneſs (the Fleſh) is of the Nature

---

(d) Grot. de V. R. C. l. 2. c. 13.

(e) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. p. 187.

(f) Voſſ. de Idol. 1. c. 4. Grot. ſupr.

(g) Tatian. or. c. Grec. p. 165.

(h) Theodoret. θεραπ. Ser. 10. p. 141.

(i) Spencer in Orig. p. 59.

Eph. 2. 2, 3.

1 Pet. 4. 3, 4.

Rom. 1. 29, 30, 31.

Joh. 2. 5.

Joh. 5. 9.

Math 26. 45. Gal. 2. 15. Math. 18. 17.

(k) Ου τὸ δόγμα αὐτοῖς Σατανικὸν μόνον ἦν, ἀλλὰ ϗ ὁ βίος διαβολικός. S. Chryſoſt. Hom. 4. in Rom.

(l) Cum vivit Homo ſecundum hominem [Carnem.] Non ſecundum Deum, ſimilis eſt Diabolo. -- hinc extitiſſe diximus Civitates duas diverſas inter ſe atque contrarias; quod alii ſecundum Carnem, alii ſecundum Spiritum viverent. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 14. c. 4.

1 Joh 4. 5. Joh. 8. 23. Luc. 16. 8. Pſal. 17. 14.

Rom. 8. 1, 5, 6. Gal. 5. 19.

1 Joh. 1. 6. 2 Pet. 2. 18. 1 Pet. 1. 18. Iſa. 52. 1. Ezek. 16. 4. Iſa. 32. 6. Jam. 4. 4. 2 Pet. 2. 22. 1 Joh. 3. 8, 10, 12. Rom. 6. 17. Col. 2. 11. and 3. 9.

of Darkneſs; for all the Branches of it ariſe from the dark unintelligent Nature, darken the Mind; and it feareth and ſhunneth Diſcovery, and is full of Fears and Terrours, as darkneſs is. And (which is more conſiderable) in all the Branches of it, it is a vital foulneſs, uglineſs, horridneſs, (m) μέλαν ἦθος, the black kind of Morality (the foul Fiend-kind of thing) Ἀλαμπία, Un-illuminouſneſs and Anti-luminouſneſs of Mind and Practice. In oppoſition unto which ſort of Darkneſs God is ſometimes ſaid, to be the Father of Lights, the things that are of ſpiritually good and unvile Quality, which are the lucid luminous kind of things. Sometimes he is ſaid to be in the Light (the Light which vital Sanctity is, in which all that Theize in Life and Practice are and walk,) and out of it there is no Society with him. Sometimes he is ſaid to be Light, this Light which vital Sanctity and Purity is (which is his kind of Excellency,) which admitteth of no defilement, vicioſity or criminality; and therefore in him there is no Darkneſs at all. But in this ſort of Darkneſs (which is vital Atheouſneſs) the World of Mankind are ſo invelop'd, that Euſebius had too much cauſe, to ſay of the Heathen (n) Through an omnimodous obtenebration of Soul they ſunk to the bottom of Wickedneſs.

(m) M. Ant. l. 4. S. 48.

Jam. 1. 17.

1 Joh. 1. 7.

1 Joh. 1. 5.

(n) Παντοίᾳ ψυχῆς ἀμαυρώσει περιβαπέντες κατὰ βυθὸν ἀσεβείας ἠνέχθησαν. Pr. ev. l. 2. c. 6.

IV. This degenerate ſunken Condition of the World of Mankind is an uncontrolable Evidence of Original Sin in ſome ſignifications of it. For in the Firſt place, Original Sin may ſignifie, that Mankind antecedently to their being holy (which Prior Condition may be called their Original Condition) are ungodly Sinners. Of this original Sinnerſhip the current of Scripture, the frame of Chriſtianity and Judaiſm, the frame of Man, the degenerate Condition of the World, the order and courſe of things in it is an uncontrolable Evidence. For Darkneſs is now before Light, antecedently to learning we are unlearn'd, antecedently to Sanctity we are unholy, antecedently to Circumciſion the Jews were uncircumcis'd, and the Proſelytes were Aliens antecedently to their Proſelytiſm, in Chriſtianity Unregeneracy is before Regeneracy, the Old is before the New Man, Servitude is before Liberation, all the holy People were of the World before their coming out of the World, their original Condition is that of the meer mundane People, and in that Condition their Life cannot be the holy Popular, but is neceſſarily the mundane Popular, which is the ſame with the Heathen-popular. Eph. 2. 2. The Religion alſo of a Saviour-King, of Redemption and an Expiatory Sacrifice, of ſaving Faith, Repentance and Converſion to God, of a new Covenant and a new Kingdom of God, of Regeneration and Remiſſion of Sins, of Juſtification and Sanctification, proclaimeth this Original Sinnerſhip, which inferreth the Exiſtence of Original Sin in another Notion. For

In the Second place, Original Sin may ſignifie, That Mankind are now, natively and originally ungodly Sinners in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent tendency that way: Or (which is the ſame thing) Original Sin may ſignifie, that the Original of Sin, both the privative and the oppoſitive (which is Concupiſcence) is in ſuch degree originally in Man. If Mankind are now the Fleſh-born and mundane People in all Reſpects, in reſpect of what is privative, being born without the life of Grace (or the Divine Love,) and in reſpect of what is poſitive, a vicious carnal ſelfiſhneſs of Nature being now our Nature (which is vital carnality and wickedneſs, and ſo far as it is ſuch, is called by the Schools Concupiſcence;) if this Original of Sin is now natively Original to Mankind (ſo that they are natively ungodly Sinners in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way,) this Moral Vicioſity of Nature muſt be counted an Original Sin. And an Original Sin of this Nature and Notion muſt be look'd upon, not as the whole, but as a Branch of the Article of Original Sin, and is certainly a Branch of the Chriſtian Religion. Joh. 3. 6,7. That which is born of the fleſh, is fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit. Marvel not, that I ſaid unto thee, ye muſt be born again, or born from above. Our Saviour plainly affirmeth (as the New Teſtament ordinarily doth,) that there are two oppoſite Families of Men: The one thoſe that are born of the Spirit, the Heaven-born; the other thoſe that are born of the Fleſh only, the Mundane-born. That by Natural Generation none are of the Spirit-born or Heaven-born, but all are of the Fleſh-born or Mundane-born Family. That thoſe of this Family are ſo in reſpect of what is privative; for they have not that which is born of the Spirit, our Divine vital Nature; and alſo in reſpect of what is poſitive; for they have that which is born of the Fleſh, our Animal-vital Nature. Natural Generation originateth this Family (the fleſhly or mundane vital Family) and thus it originateth them. Becauſe it originateth this Family, therefore Mankind are natively the Family of ungodly Sinners in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way. Becauſe it thus originateth them, therefore they have in them natively that which is an Original of Sin, and that which is vital Carnality and Wickedneſs in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way. That which is born of the Fleſh, is Fleſh, it is that which conſtituteth the Animal-vital Family: That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, it is that which conſtituteth the Spiritual-vital Family. Man is therefore natively ſo conſtituted, as to be one of the Animal-vital, not one of the Spiritual-vital Family. And of Man ſo conſtituted impartial Chriſtian Reaſon cannot but pronounce, that he is natively a carnal and mundane kind of Man, a carnal and mundane kind of Liver in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way.

V. Agreeably to our Saviour the Apoſtles Confront two oppoſite Families. Gal. 4. 29. As he that was born after the Fleſh (that was of Natural Generation) perſecuted him that was born after the Spirit (who was of ſupernatural Generation) even ſo it is now. Rom. 9. 8. They which are the Children of the Fleſh (of Abraham's Linage by Natural Generation) theſe are not the Children of God. Joh. 1. 13. Which were born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of Fleſh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. From this Apoſtolic diſtribution of Mankind into two oppoſite Families, it appeareth, that the firſt Birth originateth a Family that are of Natural Generation, the Children of the Fleſh, born of or after the Fleſh in the diviſive or contradiſtinctive Senſe; that Infants by their firſt Birth belong to that Family, which is the oppoſite to the Spiritual and Divine Family, (both as Natural and as Carnal is oppos'd to Spiritual,) they belong to the Family of thoſe that are in the Fleſh devoid of the holy Spirit. At the time of their Conception and Σύμπτ [illegible]

Sopater
Grot. Di
Poet. in Proleg.
Σῶμα [illegible]
[illegible] Plo
tin. ibid

Nativity thus far they are of this Family; They are then the carnal and mundane kind of Livers in a degree of Inchoation and of prevalent Tendency that way. And in ſuch ſenſe the Pſalmiſts words may commodiouſly be interpreted as a proper Speech containing a manifeſt Truth (and therefore ought not to be look'd upon as a meer Hyperbolical Expreſſion) Pſal. 51. 5. Behold I was ſhapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me. The Animal-vital Nature in Brute-animals is the Comprehenſion of vital Carnality and Wickedneſs (according to that Saying of the counterfeit Triſmegiſt, ἡ κακία σύμφυτος τοῖς θηρίοις, Wickedneſs is congenial and connatural to the Btute-animals;) the Animal vital Nature in Mankind is manifeſtly the ſame with that in Brute-animals; therefore it is the comprehenſion of vital Carnality and Wickedneſs. This Animal-vital Nature as it is ſuch vital Carnality and Wickedneſs predominant and reigning, is in Infants (before the uſe of Reaſon and Underſtanding) in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way; therefore they are in ſuch degree (imperfectly and inchoatively) the carnal and mundane kind of Livers, and conſequently they are in ſuch degree by Nature the Children of Wrath. (o) σαφῶς γὰρ φαίνεται, ὅτι πάντες μὲν ἄνθρωποι πρὸς τὸ ἁμαρτάνειν πεφύκαμεν, ἔνιοι δὲ οὐ μόνον πεφύκασιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰθισμένοι εἰσὶν ἁμαρτάνειν. For it is manifeſt, that all of us Men practiſe Sin by our Nature, ſome not only by Nature, but by Cuſtom alſo. Which is not ſo to be underſtood, as if Mankind committed Sin φύσει καὶ οὐ γνώμῃ, by a faulty Nature and not through the fault of their Will (which was the Conceit of one called Aram (p) refuted by Theodorus Antiochenus,) for all the Servants of Sin are more or leſs Volunteers, the Sins which they commit at the time of their commiſſion are their Will and Choice, although at other times (uſually in their ſober retired Thoughts) they are otherwiſe minded. But Man's Nature is full of Inclinations to that which is Evil (all ſort of Wickedneſs iſſueth from the Heart or inward Man, and Man is warn'd to take heed of walking in the ways of his Heart and in the ſight of his Eyes;) and not only ſo, but the Soul having loſt her Life, unregenerate Mankind are become graceleſs and unholy, and there is now no other vital Nature in them ſave only the Fleſh (which is full of evil Concupiſcence) in reigning Power and Puiſſance, whereby it is with prevalent Power and Puiſſance ſpontaneouſly parturient of all ſorts of actual Sin and Wickedneſs. Whence Origen rightly inferreth, (q) κακίαν ὑφίστασθαι ἀναγκαῖον πρῶτον ἐν ἀνθρώποις, Wickedneſs ſubſiſteth amongſt Men in the firſt place, and (morally ſpeaking) it cannot be otherwiſe. If (morally ſpeaking) it cannot be otherwiſe, or if de facto it never is otherwiſe; if all Men in their Unregeneracy live in that which is Carnality and Wickedneſs of Mind and Life, and it liveth and reigneth in them; if they are the Servants of the Fleſh (of Sin and Vice) and under the Power of it, this is a demonſtration, that Infants at their Birth are the Servants of Sin in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way.

All the Wickedneſs that is in the Animal Nature involveth in it an inordinate Self-love, whence it iſſueth and ariſeth. The Schools therefore ſay, (s) A certain general Concupiſcence which is an inordinate appetite of our Self-good is the root and Principle of all Sins. Others ſay, (s) A Propenſion to Sin from Self-love is Original Sin. S. Auſtin diſcourſeth, that the ſeveral ſorts of vital Carnality and Wickedneſs (the Luſts and Paſſions of the Fleſh) are ſo many Branches of vicious carnal ſelfiſhneſs of Life and Nature, which is virtually and radically all ſuch Sins in one. (t) They are Evils that ariſe from that root of perverſe Love, wherewith every Child of Adam is born. Self-love is unqueſtionably innate in all, and a vicious carnal Self-love is innate in all in a degree of Inchoation and prevalent Tendency that way (for it is a root of bitterneſs in all Men;) therefore in that degree the ſourſe and ſummary of Wickedneſs is innate in all Men; and ſo are the reigning Luſts and Paſſions of the Fleſh, which are nothing elſe but its prevalent ὁρμαὶ, impetuous Propenſions and Tendencies. The Fleſh is in Man a live-vicioſity of Nature (which may be called (u) ἡ τῆς ἁμαρτίας φύσις, the Live-ſin Nature,) in the unregenerate there are frequent conflicts between the upper and lower Soul, (w) τὰ τῆς ἀλόγου κινήματα φύσεως, the Motions of irrational Nature; and in the regenerate the holy Spiritual Life conflicteth with a live-vicious Nature, which is contrary, inimical and deadly to God and Holineſs, to the Law and Life of God. Gal. 5. 17. Rom. 8. 7. Rom. 7. 20. And ſeeing this vital vicious Nature (proud, ſenſual and worldly) is a diſtemper'd irrational vital Nature (not cuſtom in Sin,) which in ſome degree is coeval with Man, groweth up with him, is his corrupt Nature, Diſpoſition, Life, Temper, and maketh his Genius and Temper of Mind in his Unregeneracy, hence it is evident, both that Man in his (now) Original and Natural Condition is in ſome ſort and degree an improbous ungodly Sinner, and that there is in him originally in ſome degree a Body of Sin and of Death. Rom. 6. 8. and 7. 24. and 8. 10.

VI. Agreeably whereunto, (x) as ſome of the Learned ſuppoſe, the Pythagoreans and Platoniſts diſcourſe of ἔρις σύμφυτος, a Strife innate in Man, τὸ συμπεφυκὸς ἡμῖν ἀπὸ τῆς γενέσεως ἀλλότριον ζῶον, an alien Animal agnate to us from Generation, which ſome call πολυκέφαλον θηρίον, the many headed Beaſt, others call it θνητόν τι ζωῆς εἶδος, a certain mortal Species of Life, and others call it φύσιν γενεσιουργόν, Geneſiurgic Nature. They talk of cutting off (y) τὰς τῆς γενέσεως ξυγγενείας, the things cognate to generation. They ſuppoſe, that every Man from his birth hath a bad Genius inclining him to Evil, that a Purgation is neceſſary for Humane Souls, that they have loſt their Wings, are eſtrang'd from God, obnoxious to Inordinate Paſſions (and are infeſted with other before-mention'd Evils conſequent upon Generation) and Archytas the Pythagorean ſaith, We cannot arrive at the top of true Good διὰ φύσιν μοχθηράν, becauſe of a bad Nature. So the Hebrew Doctors ordinarily ſpeak of (z) שאר שבעסה the Ferment which is in the Maſs (evil Concupiſcence) and יצר הרע the evil Formation or Figment, of which they ſay; The evil Figment is born with a Man, and goeth about with him all his Days, as 'tis ſaid, The Imagination of Man's Heart is evil from his Youth: Which Character of Mankind ſpeaketh an high degree of Wickedneſs of Life through a powerful proclivity in Man's Nature to that which is evil; which implieth both an averſation from and an impotency to that which is good. Touching which Impotency an Hebrew Doctor, when he had ended his Prayers, was wont to ſay, (a) Lord of the World, thou knoweſt my Will is to do thy Will, but who hindreth me? שאר שבעסה the Ferment which is in the Maſs. Agreeably whereunto the Apoſtle ſaith, The Law was weak through the Fleſh, therefore the Fleſh was more powerful, to make Men improbous ungodly Sinners, than the Law was to reform them. And if they are improbous ungodly Sinners through the Fleſh, then through the Fleſh they are of kind and quality Carnal, ſold under Sin, not doing what they like, the Good they would, but what they hate, the Evil that they would not, a Law in their Members warring againſt the Law of their Mind, and bringing them into captivity to the Law of Sin, which is in their Members. Againſt their Knowledge and Convictions of Mind, againſt the Dictates of Prudence and of Conſcience, againſt their own Reſolutions and Vows, Mankind in their Unregeneracy are frequently carry'd Captive to perpetrate Wickedneſs; Convictions of the Mind are not a match for the Fleſh, Life againſt Notion is an unequal Conteſt. Lucilius's words in Varro (b) rightly repreſent their caſe, if one of his Expreſſions be ſomewhat mollify'd.

(o) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 3. p. 151.

(p) Phot. cod. 177. Col. 395.

Matth. 15. 19. Prov. 4. 23. Eccl. 11. 9.

(q) Supr. p. 149.

Rom. 8. 6, 7.

(r) Cupiditas quædam generalis quæ eſt inordinatus appetitus proprii boni, principium eſt omnium peccatorum. Aquin. apud Davenant. Determin. Qu. 1. p. 1.

(s) Eſt ergo iſta ad peccandum amore ſui propenſio, peccatum originale: Zuingl. ap. Bellarm. de Amiſſ. Grat. l. 4. c. 2.

(t) Mala ab illa perverſi amoris radice venientia, cum qua omnis filius Adam naſcitur. De C. D. l. 22. c. 22.

(u) Orig. c. Celſ. ſupr. p. 150.

(w) Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 3. S. 27.

(x) Grot. Not. in Luc. 2. 22. Caſaubon. in Perſ. Sat. 5. p. 439.

(y) Jambl. προτρεπτ. p. 100.

(z) Buxtorf. Lex. Talm. col. 2303. v. Dr. Ham. on Pſal. 51. not. b. Spencer Not. in Orig. p. 88.

) Buxt. pr.

m. 8. 3.

Rom. 7. 14, 15, 19, 23.

(b) Orig. Lat. l. 4.

Vis eſt vita vides, quæ nos facere omnia cogit.
Life is a certain vivid force, which maketh us do every thing.

Servitude under Sin therefore, with all the other Evils of an Unregenerate Condition, is as it were our Inheritance by our firſt birth (whence the Saints do not celebrate their Birthday, none of them keep it Feſtival, (c) as Origen ſaith) without which Hypotheſis no tolerable Senſe can be made of the Chriſtian Religion, no tolerable Account can be given of the World's Wickedneſs. For what is this Lower World but the Sink of all Impurity, a vaſt Sea of Wickedneſs, a Stie of Senſualiſts, a Sodom of Uncleanneſs (O Munde immunde, (d) as S. Auſtin exclaimeth) a Den of the Sons of Darkneſs, a Shop of Frauds, a Cockpit of Contention, an Egypt for Oppreſſion, a Bedlam for Delirations, an Amphitheatre of Gladiators, a Wilderneſs of noxious and venenate Animals; inſomuch that an Hebrew Doctor had reaſon (e) to ſtile it קרוב לגיהנם very near to Hell. Mankind univerſally in all times and places are degenerate into Vice and Wickedneſs, it operateth early, uſually it beareth down all Obſtacles, fruſtrateth all Remedies, it floweth in upon the World with ſo high a Tide and ſo ſtrong a Torrent, that in all Ages, not only Vice and Wickedneſs, but Prodigies and Outrages of Vice and Wickedneſs, have been the general currant practices, as one of the Fathers hath drawn the World's Character. (f) Madet orbis mutuo ſanguine. —— Paratur gladiatorius ludus. —— Contagia in theatris. —— Forum videatur. Flagrant ubique delicta. (g) With ſo great Ignorance of the Truth and ſuch vain Worldly Deſires Man cometh into this Life, that if left to his liberty, to do as he pleaſeth, and live as he liſteth, he will not fail to run into multifarious Enormities. The Age of Youth is rude, unskilful and unwiſe (without governing Prudence, of little inſight into things, and leſs foreſight) incautelous, careleſs and inconſiderate, raſh, heady and fearleſs, full of Confidence and fooliſh Hopes, hardly governable or manageable by the greateſt Wiſdom; or capable of good Counſel, of vehement and fervid Deſires, Purſuits and Paſſions, of flagrant Luſts, enormouſly addicted to ſenſual Mirth and Pleaſure, of gay and wanton Humour, averſe from Seriouſneſs (as apt to contemn and deride ſerious Piety as to contemn Danger) extremely proud and apt to take a pride in Pranks of Lewdneſs * and Injuriouſneſs (nor is there any ſort of Wickedneſs, to which untam'd Youth is not apt to be carry'd by Pride) full of diſorderly Motions and Appetites, and abounding with Vice, as fat and rank Grounds abound with Weeds. (h) As the Age of Manhood ſucceedeth that of Youth, ſo the Manly Vices ſucceed the Youthful; and ſo groſs and palpable Vice gradually ariſeth in the Nature and Life of Man commencing its Reign from his Birth. Several particular Temperaments alſo ſtrongly incline to ſeveral Vices, ſome are naturally of a bad temper, and ſome are obſerv'd (i) to be of a natural Malignity; which common Obſervations befriend the Hypotheſis of Original Sin.

(c) Spencer. Not. in Orig. p. 54. Annot. in Min. Fel. 310.

(d) De Symbol. ad Catechum. l. 2.

(e) Hotting. diſſ. de reſur. mort. p. 33. v. Arnob. adv. Gent. l. 2. p. 72, &c.

(f) S. Cypr. Ep. 2.

(g) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 22. c. 22.

* By inju-ring and a-buſing they ſeem [illegible] Herald. in Arnob. p. 54.

(h) Grot. Not. in Matth. 12. 3, 4.

(i) Lord Bacon Eſſay of Goodneſs.

VII. Againſt this Name the Pelagians object (their principal Objections reach not to the thing, but the name only) that no defect in Infants without the uſe of Reaſon and Underſtanding can be truly and properly Sin; for Sin is ſo voluntary, that if it is not voluntary, it is not Sin. Sin is alſo that which is the Tranſgreſſion of a Law, where no Law is, there is no Trangreſſion; but Laws are not given to meer Infants that are not capable of Law-obligation, or as the Jews ſay, they are not Sons of the Precepts, no more than Brute-Animals; for Leges non dantur Infantibus & Amentibus, Laws are not given to Infants, nor to any that have loſt their Underſtanding. Theſe are great Objections, but thus they may be anſwer'd.

Adeo voluntarium eſt peccatum, ut ſi non ſit voluntarium, non ſit peccatum.

(1.) The inordinate Concupiſcence of which our Animal-nature is full, may be contemplated in Brute-Animals; for in them there is a Pravity of Nature, which being predominant conſtituteth many of them Evil Beaſts; as in Mankind there is a Pravity of Nature, which being prevalent in them conſtituteth them Evil Men. In Brute-Animals we may contemplate the very Nature and Idea of the ſeveral Branches of Vice and Wickedneſs (of inordinate Selfiſhneſs, Luſt, Pride, Wrath, Cruelty, and ſuch more;) for there the very Face and Form of them appeareth, Evil Men may ſee their own Face in this Glaſs, and every Man may diſcern what inordinate Concupiſcence is in his own Animal-Nature, that the Luſt of the Fleſh, the Luſt of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life is ſeminally and radically there. The Morals of degenerate Mankind that live after the Fleſh (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh) have the ſame origin with thoſe of Brute-Animals, which they lively reſemble, (k) ſome being Wolves, others Foxes, others Serpents, others Neighing Horſes, others Dogs and Swine, or other filthy and unclean Animals.

(k) S. Chryſoſt. T. 5. p. 645. S. Cyril. Catechiſm. p. 80.

(2.) The inordinate Concupiſcence of which our Animal-Nature is full, is Sin with due Limitation of Senſe. For it muſt be thus deſcrib'd; It is the very Nature of that which is Sin, Vice, and Wickedneſs, ſo far imputable to us, as it is in any degree voluntary and no further. As it is in the Animal-nature of Brutes, it is the very Nature of that which is Sin, Vice and Wickedneſs; the Pride and Selfiſhneſs which we contemplate there, is the very Nature of the Sins of Pride and Selfiſhneſs, and ſheweth the odious

Face of them: Theſe therefore have in Brutes the materiality of Sin, without the formality; for they are not imputable to them as Sin, nor do they conſtitute them in a proper ſenſe Sinners. But in Man inordinate Concupiſcence is imputable as Sin, Fault and Crime ſo far as it is in any degree voluntary; in Man therefore it muſt be accounted Sin, Vice and Wickedneſs at a great rate, as the Apoſtle repreſenteth it, who often calleth it Sin, ſometimes Sin that dwelleth in me, and ſometimes Sin in the Fleſh. The Fleſh (our Animal-nature) with its inordinate Appetites and Inclinations, Affections and Paſſions, is Sin and Pravity in our Nature, our Sinful Nature, Innocent Nature in the courſe of Lapſed Nature become unnatural (or inordinate) againſt the rectitude of our Nature (our Rectitude) that conſtituteth our being Evil (which is worſe than meer doing Evil) the Seminary of all Wickedneſs, (as containing the Seeds of it or Propenſions to it) the Fountain of actual Sins (the inordinate motions whereof are a beginning of thoſe Sins) the Maſs or Body of Sin conſiſting of many Members, the very nature of that which is Sin (therefore extremely odious, and which muſt be mortify'd as Sin) the live-nature of Sin, vital Carnality and Wickedneſs, touching which the Stoicks would think it reaſonable to ſay, (l) Wickedneſs is ſubſiſtent, becauſe it is the (Vital) oppoſite to Virtue. Sin liveth and reigneth in them, it reigneth in their Mortal Body (which Plotinus calleth θηρίον ζωωθὲν, an enlivened Brute) that have not crucify'd the Fleſh with the Affections and Luſts, and conſtituteth them improbous ungodly Sinners.

Rom 7. 17. and 8. 3.

(3.) This Branch of Original Sin which we have under conſideration, doth not imply, that inordinate Concupiſcence or the Reign of it is actually inexiſtent in meer Infants, much leſs doth it imply, that inordinate Concupiſcence is imputable to them as their Sin, Fault and Crime, or that they offend againſt any Law of God, or any commanded Duty. It only ſuppoſeth, that by a Fall or Lapſe inordinate Concupiſcence and the reign of it is in them in ſuch a degree of Inchoation, which is in prevalent tendency that way. So that if Grace doth not interpoſe, the Infant will be like the reſt of unregenerate Mankind, an Alien and an Enemy, living the Carnal and Mundane-kind of Life, loving that kind of Life, and inordinately loving the Gratifications thereof, having a Soul deſtitute of its true Pulchritude, Health and Vigour, naked, deformed, diſeaſed, weak and languiſhing, and that is a Dungeon of ſuch Darkneſs, Foulneſs, deadly Impiety and Impurity, as ſhe cannot otherwiſe extirpate (m) ἡ μακρὰ φιλοσοφία παιδαγωγήσασα, but by the Inſtitution and Exerciſe of a long Philoſophy.

Consect. 3.

Mundane Mankind are ſo Atheous, of ſuch an exotic and extraneous Kind and Family, that Heatheniſm of Religion is their Religion, and is to them agreeable.

I. THE Mundane-popular and the Heathen-popular Religion is the ſame as the Mundane-popular and the Heathen-popular State, Life and Genius is the ſame; which is a plain demonſtration of Original Sin; for it ſheweth, that Mankind are born the Heathen-kind of Religioniſts in a degree of Inchoation and a mighty tendency that way. All Mankind without a preternatural adventitious Inſtitution of Religion would be of the Heathens Religion (or none at all;) for other Religions were introduc'd by extraordinary ſupernatural Methods of Providence, under the œconomy of meer Nature and general Providence this Religion was univerſal; the World of Mankind therefore may juſtly be ſaid to be born Heathen Religioniſts. This appeareth alſo from the continued Hiſtory of the Jewiſh Church, the riſe and the progreſs of it; (n) for the Progeny of Noah, the Offſpring of Shem even in the Family of Heber (the Father of the Hebrews) while Noah, Shem and Heber were yet alive, fell to Heathen Idolatry, Joſh. 24. 2. Abraham was (doubtleſs) bred an Heathen, the God of Nachor is thought an Heathen Deity, Gen. 31. 53. Laban's Images (called his Gods) ſhew, that he was not clear of Heathen Idolatry, and Jacob's Houſe was infected with it, Gen. 31. 30. and 35. 2. When the Children of Iſrael went into Egypt, they fell to Egyptianize in Idolatry; and when they came out of Egypt they were far from caſting away the Idols of it (the Abominations of their Eyes) as they were charg'd, for they made them a Molten Calf, they worſhipp'd the Hoſt of Heaven, they joyned themſelves to Baal-peor and ſacrific'd to Sehirim. When God had brought them out of their Wilderneſs-Condition into a Canaan-eſtate, and caſt out the Heathen Nations for their Idolatries and Impieties, and warn'd the Iſraelites to take heed of their Abominations, and of doing as they had done, yet they forſook the Lord God of their Fathers, ſerved Baalim and the Groves (Idols in the Groves) and ſucceeded the Heathen Nations in their Morals as well as in their Land. Thus they Religioniz'd during the time that they were govern'd by Judges; their Heathen Idolatry brought them into heavy Calamities, and no ſooner were they deliver'd, but they relapsd to their old trade again. For this was the ſtate of things in Samuel's Days. Solomon the wiſeſt of their Kings (though the Lord appear'd unto him twice, and warn'd him againſt the Idolatry of the Heathen, yet) fell to this foul Impiety. After his Days the Ten Tribes fell to the Idolatry of Jeroboam (who turned Bethel into Bethaven) whoſe Idolatry was in part Heathen and Egyptian, and uſually complicated with the Idolatry of Baal; and after they were plung'd into this Idolatry, they never emerg'd out of it, but continu'd it (during the Succeſſion of Nineteen Kings) ſo long as their Commonwealth ſtood. Nor were things much better in the Tribe of Judah, that adher'd to the Houſe of David; for although Rehoboam had loſt the greateſt part of his Kingdom for the Heatheniſm of his Father, yet he (together with Maacah his Wife) trod in his Father's Steps, as Abijam his Son did in his, and was like Father like Son. The Tribe of Judah being thus ſeiz'd with the Diſtemper of Heathen Idolatry, could never after during Life perfectly recover its Health again, but was always obnoxious to the Diſeaſe; for although ſome good Princes attempted the cure of it, yet they made but imperfect Reformations of the State of Religion, nor were they long laſting, but the Diſeaſe preſently return'd again. For after Aſa's and Jehoſhaphat's imperfect Reformations Jehoram (Jehoſhaphat's Son) and Ahaziah his Son, ſymboliz'd with the Houſe of Ahab, the latter of them having Athaliah his Counſel-

Ezek. 23. 2. and 20. 7, 8. Exod. 32. 31. Act. 7. 43. Pſal. 106. 68. Lev. 17. 7.

Judg. 2. 11. —19. and 3. 7. Ezek. 16. 3.

1 Sam 7. 3. 1 King. 11. 7, 10.

2 Chron. 12. 1. 1 King. 14. 22, 23. and ch. 15. 3, 13.

2 Chron. 21. 6, 10, 11. and ch. 22. 3, 4. and ch. 24. 7. 18. 21. and ch. 25. 14.

(l) Εἶναι δὲ τὴν κακίαν ὑπαρκτικὴν διὰ τὸ ἀντικεῖσθαι τῇ ἀρετῇ. Laert. in Zenon. p. 492.

(m) Gr. Naz. or. 1. p. 36.

(n) Voſſ. Hiſt. Pelag. l. 3. par. 3. Theſ. 6.

Counſellour, to do wickedly. Joaſh who ſucceeded her in the Government, was courted out of his Religion by the Princes of Judah. Amaziah (Joaſh's ſucceſſour) after ſome time of reigning lapſed into Heathen Idolatry at a great rate. Uzziah and Jotham ſucceeding Amaziah the Affairs of Religion were in a tolerable good poſture; but Ahaz (Jotham's Son and Succeſſour) was mad after his Idols, and proceeded to the height of Idolomany. In the Days of Hezekiah true Religion recover'd its Luſtre (which had ſuffer'd a ſad Eclipſe in the Days of Ahaz) and a conſiderable Reformation was made; but no ſooner was Hezekiah dead, but all things ran to ruin again in the Days of Manaſſeh, whom Amon his Son imitated in his outragious Heathenizing. Joſiah made a great Reformation, but his Reformation was a ſtriving againſt the Stream; for the People ſtill retained their Affection for their old Heatheniſm, and thoſe Heatheniſh Practices were in his Days, which God menaceth by the Prophet, Zeph. 1. 4, 5. I will cut off the Remnant of Baal from this place, (Jeruſalem) and the Name of the Chemarims with the Prieſts; and them that worſhip the Hoſt of Heaven upon the Houſe-tops; and them that worſhip and that ſwear by the Lord, and that ſwear by Malcham. After the Death of Joſiah God began to do unto Judah as he had done to the Tribes of Iſrael, they being alike obſtinate in their Heathenizing. No Perſwaſions, no Menaces, no Warnings, no Puniſhments or Diſaſters which befell them, were of avail to reclaim them, as if Heatheniſm was bred in their Bone, and could not be got out of their Fleſh. The ſucceeding Kings of Iſrael took no warning by their Predeceſſour's Calamities; the Tribe of Judah took no warning by the Captivity of the Ten Tribes, they would not deſiſt from their Heatheniſm of Religion, when they were upon the brink of Ruine; they went on in their old track in the very times of their Babylonian Captivity, and thoſe of them that went into Egypt (after their City and Temple was ruin'd) were reſolv'd Heathen Idolaters, Jer. 44. 17. The prevalency of this Religion amongſt God's ancient People ſpeaketh it a Darling to Animal Senſitive Nature; ſo agreeable to its Inclinations and Intereſts, that it affecteth nothing more. And as it is from this Nature that Mankind are (not ſpeakers or practiſers, but) the atheous-kind of ſpeakers and practiſers; ſo it is from this Nature that Mankind are (not Theiſts, Religioniſts or Pietiſts, but) the Atheous-kind of Theiſts, the Irreligious kind of Religioniſts, the Impious-kind of Pietiſts; they beſtow their Devotional Eſteem, Affection and Service upon what Animal Senſitive Nature liketh, and accounteth fine things. By an Idolatrous Superſtition (the Adulterous kind of Devotion) their Devotional Propenſion is gratify'd, and the way of doing it is pleaſing to Senſitive Nature, which they follow.

2 King. 16. 10, 11.
2 Chron. 28.
2 Chron. 33. 22.
2 King. 25. and ch. 21. 21, 22.
2 Chron. 4.
2 King. 23.

II. As from the Hiſtory of the Jewiſh, ſo from the Hiſtory of the Chriſtian Church the proneneſs and addictedneſs of Mankind to the Religion of Idolatry is apparent; for although in the three firſt Centuries and ſometime after there is no appearance of a lapſe of the Church into Idolatry (or into any thing more than an incongruous Rituality) yet the time was not long before the holy City was trodden under foot by the Gentiles; when the World was come into the Church, the Church became Mundane-popular, and then ſhe began by degrees to Religionize after the old Heathen Guiſe, and degenerated at ſuch a rate into Paganiſm, that the Religion of unreform'd Chriſtendom hath been for many Ages an Imitation of the Rites and Vices of that Idolatrous Religion, and muſt be denominated (yet not without Limitation of Senſe) An Heathen-popular kind of Religion. It is manifeſtly a Parallel for old Heatheniſm in atheous Blindneſs, Darkneſs and Ignorance; in its Ghoſts, Spectres and Dreams; in blind Heatheniſh Superſtitious Conceits, Apprehenſions and Opinions; in the Heathen-popular Life and all the Limbs and Branches of the Old Man; in Swearing, Revelling, Drunkenneſs, Debauchery; in Fornication, Harlotry, Inceſt, Sodomy, Stews, Curteſans, Carnavals, and in making the World a Brothel-houſe or Sodom of Uncleanneſs; in encouragements as well as practiſes of looſeneſs and lewdneſs of Life, and the old Heathen Profaneneſſes; in Heatheniſh pretenſions to Antiquity, Duration, Univerſality, Unity; in Heatheniſh Worldlineſs, Pride and Ambition, State and Grandeur; in Heatheniſh Infidelity, and an Heatheniſh Traditional kind of Faith; in Heatheniſh Vice and an Heatheniſh kind of Virtue; in numerous Feſtivals celebrated at the Heathen rate; in unclean Inſtitutions of Continence and Virginity; (o) in a Phariſaical kind of Monaſticks and Aſceticks (the Inſtitution whereof (p) is originally Paganical;) in the Theology and Devotion of the Myſticks; in lying Stories and Legends; in proceſſionary Pomps and Jubilees (which anſwer to the ancient Ludi ſeculares;) in ſlight methods of obtaining Pardon for Sin; in the extravagant Pomp of their God-ſervice, the Conſecration of their Altars and of their Temples, and Celebrations of the Dedication of them; in their holy Water, the ſhaven Crowns of their Prieſts, and injoyned Celibacy; in their barbarous Rites (ſuch as Flagellation) and monſtrous Barbarity and Cruelty; in their Purgatory (q) and Funeral Rites; in their Reliques and Theurgical Conſecrations (of Grains, Agnus Dei's, and other Trinkets;) in the external Modiſhneſs and Perfunctorineſs of their God-ſervice; in ſubſtituting ſilly exteriour Rituality inſtead of true Religion, and Antick inſtead of true Devotion (for ſuch are their multifarious turnings, bowings, croſſings, changes of poſture, mutterings, droppings of Beads, kiſſing the Pax, praying in an unknown Tongue, praying for Souls in Purgatory, ſaying ſo many Maſſes, offering Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead, repeating the name Jeſus ſo many times in a Breath, tranſlating Reliques, making Pilgrimages to Images and Shrines, and making Oblations to them; holy Veſtments, holy Scapularies, holy Oyl, Anointings, holy Salt and Candles, with many the like uſages;) In their Incenſe, lighted Candles and Tapers in their Temples, Proceſſion with burning Candles in their Hands (on Candlemas-day,) conſecrated Bells and Baptiſmal Spittle; in the Canonization, Patronage and Offices of the Tutelar Saints or Deities (for ſo Eugubinus telleth the Pope, (r) Deorum Templa exornas, which is (s) a dividing the Divine World אל מדרגות into degrees, making a Sovereign and ſubordinate Deities;) in conſecrating the Pantheon at Rome to them, and the ſeven Hills of the City to ſo many Saints; in aſcribing miraculous Feats to them, making magnificent Preſents and Oblations to them, ſwearing profanely by their Names (as the Heathen did by their Gods;) in conſecrating, adorning, adoring their Images,

Apoc. 11. 2.

(o) V. Bernald. in Apul. p. 984.

(p) L. Holſten. de vit. & ſcr. Porphyr. p. 72.

(q) J. Bapt. Criſp. Quinar. 1. p. 441.

(r) De per. Phil. ep. dedicat.

(s) Coſi p. 38

Images, carrying them in Proceſſion, and concealing them in Lent (as the Heathen for ſome time conceal'd their Idols from the People;) in having (t) inhoneſtas imagines, impure and profane Images in many of their Churches (like the Heathen;) in the whole buſineſs of Church Demonolatry, (u) the deſign of it and method of introducing it, whereby the Idolatrous Roman Empire recover'd of its deadly Wound, and Paganiſm liv'd again. A principal method of introducing Paganiſm (in ſeveral Branches of it) was by (w) impoſtorous Viſions, Apparitions, Revelations, Miracles; and by the ſame Artifices Demonolatry was re-introduc'd, and Chriſtianity was chang'd into a Chriſtiano-Paganiſm. For theſe Inſtitutes, Uſages and Vices, are not only originally Paganical (as the Learned Men of the Church of Rome (x) generally acknowledge;) but they are alſo of kind and quality Heatheniſh and Paganical. Some of the Learned of that Communion endeavour to perſwade their Brethren, to make uſe of the ſame Prayer to the Bl. Virgin which Apuleius uſeth to the Goddeſs Iſis. (y) Innumeri ſunt hymni, precationes, orationes, compoſitæ à doctiſſimis ad Divam Virginem: ſed nihil eſt (quod bona cum venia illorum dictum ſit) cum hac Apuleianâ precatione comparandum. hæc doctrinæ & elegantiæ omnis eſt refertiſſima, hàc rogata Dea noſtra non minus placaretur, fieretque propitia, quam omnibus ſanctorum orationibus. Innumerable Hymns and Prayers are compos'd by the moſt Learned to the Goddeſs Virgin; but there is nothing (with their good leave be it ſpoken) to be compar'd with this Prayer of Apuleius. This is full of all Learning and Elegance; our Goddeſs would be no leſs placated and propitious, if ſupplicated and intreated by this Prayer than by all the Prayers of the Saints. According to this Learned Author the Bl. Virgin is ſubſtituted in the place of the Goddeſs Iſis, is to be ennobled with the ſame Attributes, deify'd at the ſame rate, ſerv'd with the ſame Devotions, wherewith that ancient Goddeſs was ſerv'd, whoſe Religion was undoubtedly a Paganical Idolatrous kind of Religion (there is the ſame reaſon for other deify'd Patron-Saints) which is to ſay, that the Chriſtian Church hath imitated the ancient Jewiſh Church in her lapſe into a Religion of Idolatry, and hitherto ſhe continueth to imitate her Obſtinacy and Irreclaimableneſs.

III. But Mundane Mankind moſt properly and plenarily ſuch, are thoſe that are without the Pale of the viſible Church, the Univerſality of whom in ancient times were the Mundus Humanus, and this World of Men were either of no Religion, or of the meer Heathen Religion. This was the Religion of the World of Mankind (which was of kind and quality Mundane) whoſe addictedneſs thereto appeareth from the great Antiquity of it, its ample diſpread, the long uninterrupted duration of it, the World's reſolved and firm adherence to it (for the Heathen World reſolved (z) not to change the Religion of their Anceſtors) the Laws that were made in favour of it (a) and againſt the Introduction of any new Religion (which was thought a thing not to be endur'd according to Mecænas's advice to Auguſtus ap. Dion l. 52.) the many violent Perſecutions which Chriſtianity ſuffer'd in its attempts to undermine and ruine it. (b) Ecce in eo eſt errore Civitas, vel potius orbis ipſe totus, ut bonos & juſtos viros tanquam malos & impios perſequatur, excruciet, damnet, occidat: The City or rather the whole World it ſelf is in this error, to perſecute, torture, condemn and kill good and juſt Men as evil and impious, becauſe they were Adverſaries to its Religion. Nor was it only the Popular-Pagans, that were ſo vehemently addicted to their Heatheniſm of Religion; for the Philoſophic Pagans were (for the main) of the ſame Mind in Religion with the Popular; their Rule was (c) to worſhip the Divinity according to the Law and Rites of their Country, and the Cuſtom of their Anceſtors. Some few Branches of this Heathen-Popular Religion were diſlik'd by the Philoſophers (Socrates, Plato, Plutarch, Cicero, Seneca, Porphyry, Varro and the Stoicks;) but themſelves were in good earneſt Pagan Religioniſts, Pagan Theologers, the eminent Pagan Saintiſts, and the Champions for Paganiſm. They were far from deſigning a change of Religion (as Plato affirmeth in his Apology for Socrates;) Plutarch ſtileth it, (d) the Pious Faith deriv'd from their Anceſtors. And again, (e) the Divine Dignity of Piety receiv'd from their Anceſtors. He ſuppoſeth it a plain caſe, that their Deities were truly ſuch, and their Religion of right Catholick; (f) that the Sun and Moon are animate, whom all Men ſacrifice and pray to and worſhip. Others of them ſtile their Paganical Devotion, (g) the pure worſhip of the Divinity. They affect an higher ſtrain of Devotion towards their Deities than the Popular-Pagans, and it was thought a grand Incongruity in a Philoſopher, to violate their Religious Rites; whence Stilpo the Philoſopher ſleeping in the Chappel of the Mother of the Gods contrary to Law (which forbad any Garlick-eater to enter thither) was thus reprimanded by the Goddeſs in a Dream; (h) Philoſophus es, O Stilpo, & ſacras leges violas? Art thou a Philoſopher, and doſt thou violate the Sacred Laws? (i) Philoſophers were leaſt of any addicted to change their Religion; yet Plutarch who maketh ſuch high Elogies of his Heathen-Popular Religion ſometimes ſaith of it: (k) The ridiculous Practiſes and Paſſions of Superſtition, and Speeches, and Geſtures, and Inchantments, and Magical Tricks, and Circumſitations, and Drummings, and impure Luſtrations, and ſordid Purifications, and barbarous and abſonous Caſtigations in the Temples and contumelious uſages give occaſion unto ſome, to ſay, That it is better there were no Gods at all than ſuch Deities, that accept, and are pleas'd with ſuch things as theſe, of ſo petulant, ſo mean, ſo peeviſh an Humour: Were it not better for the Gauls and Scythians, to have no Notion at all, no Imagination, no Hiſtory of Gods, than to ſuppoſe, that there are Gods which delight in the Blood of ſacrific'd Men, and account that the moſt perfect Sacrifice and Religious Service? Had it not been better for the Carthaginians at the firſt, to have taken Critias or Diagoras for their Lawgiver, to ſuppoſe, that there is neither God nor Demon, rather than to make ſuch Sacrifices as they do to Saturn? (l) It is not eaſie to judge, which of theſe

(t) Baron. ad ann. 392. n. 60.

(u) Gale in Jambl. p. 273.

(w) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 1. p. 124, 126 l. 3. p. 113. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 4. c. 26. Val. Max. l. 1. c. 8. Baron. ad ann. 324. n. 115. ad ann. 392. n. 57.

(x) Idem ad an. 44. n. 86, 87, 88. ad an. 53. n. 76, 77.

(y) Beroald. in Apul. p. 1008.

(z) Witzii Ægypt. l. 2. c. 4. Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 43. Clem. Στρωμ. p. m. 42.

(a) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 6. p. 189. Cic. de Leg. l. 2. Lex eſto antiquiſſima, æternæque auctoritatis in Attica, venerandos eſſe Deos atque Heroas patrios & indigenas publice ſecundum patriæ ſanctionem. Lex Attica.

b Lactant. l. 5. c. 12.

(c) Ὥς κε πόλις ῥέζῃσι· νόμος δ' ἀρχαῖος ἄριστος, Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 18. Marcil. com. in Car. Pythag. p. 344.

(d) Τὴν εὐσεβῆ καὶ πάτριον πίστιν. De Pyth. orac. p. 402.

(e) Τὸ θεῖον καὶ πάτριον ἀξίωμα τῆς εὐσεβείας. De Superſtit. p. 166.

(f) Τὸν ἥλιον ἔμψυχον εἶναι καὶ τὴν σελήνην, οἷς πάντες ἄνθρωποι θύουσι καὶ προσεύχονται καὶ σέβονται. Adv. Colot. p. 1123.

(g) Ἡ περὶ τὸ θεῖον εἰλικρινὴς θεραπεία. Procl. Plat. Theol. l. 5. c. 36.

(h) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 5. c. 46.

(i) Jambl. de Myſt. p. 155.

(k) De ſuperſtit. p. 171.

(l) Vix prope eſt judicare, utrum magis conducat generi hu- mano, quando aliis nullus eſt Deorum reſpectus, aliis pudendus. Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l. 2. c. 7.

theſe two extremes is moſt conducive to Mankind, ſome have no reſpect for any Gods, the God-ſervice of others is ſhameful.

IV. Such was the Heathens Idolatry, an abominable ſhame, as their Idols are called Shikkutzim, abominable things, Tognebotb, abominations, Gillulim, Dii Stercorei, Dunghil-gods, or excrementitious Deities (Dung contaminateth) and Boſheth, ſhame (whence Jerubbaal and Jerubeſheth are the ſame Name, 2 Sam. 11. 21;) They went to Baal-Peor and ſeparated themſelves unto that Shame. Hoſ. 9. 10. Their mode of ſerving their fictitious Deities was extremely ſhameful and abominable, as is viſible in their Lupercalia, Floralia, Bacchanalia, the uſual drunkenneſs of the Women amongſt the Romans, when they ſacrific'd to Bona Dea; the infamous drunkenneſs, madneſs and antic geſtures of Cybele's Prieſts, Priapus's Sacra, their Worſhip of the Goddeſs Venus, their naſty Eleuſinian Myſteries, their putid unclean Fables touching their Deities, and their Images of them, (m) which ſometimes repreſented the Painters Harlots (and uſually in their Houſes they ſet up the repreſentations of nefarious Luſt,) τῶν φαλλῶν στάσις ϗ αἰσχρολογία, (n) the obſcene Spectacles and Speeches uſual in their Sacra (of which their Theologers ſay, that they were deſign'd to cure them of their filthy Affections by gratifyng them,) their perpetrations of Uncleanneſs and Sodomy in honour of their Deities and under pretext of Holineſs and Religion in many places, the Memoirs in Scripture of Sodomites doing according to the abominations of the Nations, and the conjoining of Idols with Sodomites. 1 King. 14. 24. and 15. 12. 2 King. 23. 7. S. Auſtin having ſeen and heard the horrible obſcenities both of Words and Actions uſual in the Megaleſia, on the day of Cybele's waſhing, had great reaſon to ask the Pagans, (o) what are things ſacrilegious, if thoſe be ſacred? Or what is Inquination, if that be Lavation? Uncleanneſs, Drunkenneſs, Revelling and Debauchery were not only the Sins of their Lives, but of their Religion; for their principal Religious Myſteries were (p) αἶσχος κοσμικόν, the ſhame of the World. The Hiſtories of their impure Deities inſtigated them to the Practices of Uncleanneſs, their ſhady Groves were an invitation to perpetrate them, they perpetrated them in their ſacred places, Fornication was annex'd to their Revelling Idol-Feaſts, their Idolatries are ſtiled abominable becauſe attended with the abominations of Uncleanneſs; and ſo great an Affinity have the Sins of Uncleanneſs with their Idolatry, that they are called by that Name in the New Teſtament. For in many places of it (q) πλεονεξία, muſt be interpreted, to ſignifie (not Covetouſneſs, as our Tranſlation rendreth it, but) the inordinate Concupiſcence eſpecially and eminently ſo called, of which the Apoſtle affirmeth, that it is Idolatry, and that every one who is a πλεονέκτης, or one that followeth that inordinate Concupiſcence is an Idolater. Col. 3. 5. Eph. 5. 5. which is not ſo to be underſtood, as if the Notion of Devotional Idolatry was competible to the Sins of Uncleanneſs: But the inordinate Concupiſcence (eminently ſuch) is of that party of things the things of Idolatry (a proper Branch of them,) it is Idolatry in the ſame ſenſe, that Stews and Curteſans are Popery, and every one that liveth in it, is an Idolater in this ſenſe; he is one of the Party of Idolaters, as he that keepeth a Curteſan is a Papiſt; (r) id enim facit, quod ad Idolorum mancipes pertinet, for he doth that, which properly belongeth to the Servitors of Idols. The Luſts of Uncleanneſs to the height of Prodigy were a part of the Spawn and Iſſue of the Heathen Idolatry, and but a part of it; for as the Jews ſay (s) all Vices and Crimes iſſue from it (Idololatria eſt radix omnium iniquitatum,) it is the inlet to a deluge of all ſorts of Wickedneſs. Wiſd. 14. 23 – 27. As it is a falſe Religion, it is like the Oriental Languages, and muſt be read backward; for its Holineſs in many parts of it is the groſſeſt Lewdneſs and Profaneneſs; its Deities are abominably Profane, as is alſo their Service and their Sacra; (t) it maketh the Divinity a Drama, Heaven a Scene, and Religion a Stage-Play; it venerateth its Deities in the Temples, and expoſeth them to deriſion upon the Theater; its καθαρμοὺς, Purifications Clemens calleth (u) ἀκαθάρτους, impure and unclean (agreeably to that of the Prophet;) They that ſanctifie themſelves and purifie themſelves in the Gardens behind one in the midſt (an Idol) eating Swines fleſh, and the Abomination and the Mouſe (an unclean and a magical Animal) ſhall be conſumed together, Iſa. 66. 17. and in the main it is devoid of Religion, Truth and Righteouſneſs, and is made up of Lyes, folly and madneſs and conſummate Wickedneſs. Yet this their Religion (Religio Deorum immortalium) the Pagans counted their Glory; not themſelves but the Chriſtians they counted (w) μιαροὺς ϗ βδελυρωτάτους, nefarious and moſt flagitious; they furiouſly perſecuted them (x) calling them impios (the impious) ipſi ſcilicet pii, ſuppoſing themſelves the pious. (y) How great Caliginouſneſs, how great a cloud of Darkneſs and Errors hath invelop'd the Minds of Men, who when they think themſelves the moſt pious (worſhipping the Gods ſedulouſly) are then the moſt impious?

(y) Quanta caligo, quanta tenebrarum & errorum nubes hominum pectora obduxit, qui cùm ſe maximè pios putant, tùm maximè fiunt impii? Lact. ibid. c. 10.

V. The Pagans Religion (as bad as it was, yet) was hugely agreeable to their Genius and Humour; which ſpeaketh the World of Mankind a blind and improbous Generation, extremely atheous, ſunken and degenerate from God, and ſuch as Seneca calleth (z) the Herd of Pagan Religioniſts, inſanientium turba, a mad Rabble. For the Pagan Writers themſelves uſually impute madneſs to the Egyptians (a learned Nation, but a Fountain and Store-houſe of Idolatry as well as of Grain) becauſe of their portentous Worſhip of Animals. And what were Hercules's Sacra at Lindus but height of madneſs, (a) which were celebrated with Evil-ſpeakings and Curſes, and if any one by chance let fall a good word, it was thought a violation of them? In this wild Religion there was a great mixture of profane frolick and jovialty (as the Sibylline Oracles injoin touching the ludi ſeculares, (b) σπουδὴ γέλως τε μεμίχθω, that ſeriouſneſs and laughter ſhould be commix'd,) which rendred it hugely agreeable to the humour of the Popular Pagans. Whence it is generally reported of Greg. Thaumaturgus (who in this was far from imitating the Apoſtles,) that he obſerving (c) that corporeal Delights and Pleaſures allur'd the vulgar, and caus'd them to perſiſt in their Idolatry, permitted them in lieu of their former Jollities to jovialize in memory of the holy Martyrs. The Heathen had their numerous

Feſtivals

(m) Clem. προτρεπτ. p. 26, 30.

(n) Jambl. de myſt. p. 21, 22.

(o) Quæ ſunt ſacrilegia, ſi illa ſacra? aut quæ inquinatio, ſi illa lavatio? De C. D. l. 2. c. 4. Hæc ſacra Sacrilegiis omnibus tetriora. Min. Fel. p. 88.

(p) Clem. ſupr. p. 16. Iſa. 57. 5. 1 Pet. 4. 3.

(q) V. Dr. Hammond of Idolatry.

(r) Tertull. de Idol. c. 1.

(s) Buxt. Lex. Talm. col. 1653.

(t) Jul. Firmic. de er. prof. rel. p. 26. Lactant. l. 5. c. 21.

(u) Strom. l. 7. p. m. 512.

(w) S. Cyr. c. Jul. l. 8. p. 252.

(x) Lactant. l. 5. c. 9, 12.

(z) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 6. c. 10.

(a) Lactant. l. 1. c. 21.

(b) Zozim. Hiſt. p. 77.

(c) Baron. ad an. 44. n. 45. Spencer. de Leg. Hebr. l. 3. diſſ. 1. c. 8. S. 2.

Feſtivals celebrated (after the Iſraelites mode, who ſate down to eat and drink and roſe up to play, Exod. 32. 6.) with Sports, Dancings, Shews, Pomps, Muſick, Banquets, (d) Drunkenneſs, Laſciviouſneſs. (e) Their Gods gave them no Precepts of good Life, but licens'd Wickedneſs, authoriz'd Vice, encourag'd Lewdneſs (their Oracles patroniz'd it,) and therefore it was a Fleſh-pleaſing kind of Religion. Which alſo had the glories of Antiquity, Univerſality, uninterrupted Duration and Succeſſion, and ſhews of Sanctimony. It abounded with Inſpirations, Viſions, Revelations, Oracles, Miracles, Prophets, Saints, and which is extremly taking and deſirable (f) The Pagans had their Gods nigh unto them, to ſpeak to them, to converſe with them, to conſult them in difficulties, to have preſent acceſs to them and their help at hand; by viſible Signs their Gods teſtify'd their Preſence, they ſaw them in their Effigies, and often had ἐμφάνειαι, appearances of the Gods themſelves. Their Religion was alſo a Temple-kind of Religion, the Religion of a Temple-ſtate and Statelineſs, ritual and external, pompous and ſplendid, which is a Religion after the mode that unregenerate Mankind affecteth. Their Temples, Altars, Images (groſs and viſible objects of Worſhip which ſenſitive Souls dote upon,) their Prieſts, Sacrifices, Feaſts, Aſperſions, Luſtrations (eaſie methods of cleanſing themſelves from Sin) belong to their Temple-ſtate of Religion. Which when it was got out of its Infancy, (g) was pompous and ſplendid (the Heathen affected * State and Grandeur,) they had their ſplendid and magnificent Temples, (h) their Idols ſumptuouſly adorn'd, their mode of God-ſervice ſtately, with Lights, Muſick, Odours, Veſſels ſhining with Pearl, and the Prieſts Garments ſhining with precious Stones, the proceſſionary pomps of their Gods alſo, their Triumphs, Games and Sights, (Sword-fightings, Scenical Plays, and ludi ſeculares, which were in Honour of their Gods,) were part of the Pomps and Vanities of this World, which are hugely taking to a carnal Mind. As themſelves were a mundane kind of People, ſo the principal deſign of the Heathen-popular Religion was a mundane Felicity. (i) The mundane City hath its chief good here. And this is proper to the mundane City, to worſhip a God or Gods, by whoſe aid ſhe may Reign in Victories and mundane Peace. The Idolatry both of Rome Pagan and Pagano-Chriſtian is in the deſign of it a worldly Religion, (it deſigneth to ſwim in worldly Felicity and the Enjoyments of this preſent Life,) both have been attended with ſecular Pomp and Grandeur, Plenty and Proſperity. Idolatry hath her τὰ λαμπρὰ καὶ τὰ λιπαρὰ, fair and fat things (which make Mens Mouths water, and which ambitious and worldly Minds longingly hanker after,) all things that are dainty and godly are to be found in the Religion of Idolatry, and therefore it is the Temptation of a very fine and brave Religion.

VI. Debauch'd Paganiſm had a further recommendation; for there was in it not only ſhews of Sanctimony, but a great regard for the Heathen Piety, Purity and Sanctity. Which may ſerve, to exprobrate, to debauched Chriſtendom (both reformed and unreform'd) its profane neglect and contempt of real Piety, Purity and Sanctity. For the Pagan Theologers ſay, (k) the head and ſummity of Virtue is Holineſs about the Gods. Their Gods could not have been their Gods, if they had not reputed them holy: Nor could their Religion have been their Religion, if it had not been an Inſtitution of their Holineſs. No Name was more honourable in Paganiſm than the Name of Holineſs (this was the Glory of Athens, that it was all Holy, and Vir ſanctus was a Philoſopher's Title of Honour,) as no Name was more infamous than that of profane and polluted. It was with deſign to be, and be accounted more Holy that the Pagans were (by Expiations and Luſtrations) initiated into their Myſtic-Religious Inſtitutions; and great numbers of them became Monaſticks and Aſceticks (ſuch as the Gymnoſophiſts, the Hylobii, the Druids, the Bactrian Samanæi,) who by their ſevere Abſtinences, Auſterities and bodily Rigours, abſtract Philoſophic Life, renouncing Marriage and ſecular Affairs, and devotedneſs to the Service of the Gods gain'd to themſelves a great Reputation for Sanctity. The Indian Bramans are ſaid to have in their publick Devotions (l) long Leſſons about the Lives and Miracles of their Saints. (m) A ſorry Indian Gymnoſophiſt of late times was thought ſo great a Saint, that the King of the Iſland where he liv'd, religiouſly drank the Water wherein he waſh'd his Feet. So Sidonius Apollinaris and ſome other Writers of the Chriſtian Church (n) admire and celebrate the Sanctity of Apolloneus Tyanæus upon the account of his Philoſophic Life, and others applaud Symmachus for his rare Sanctimony of Manners. The Egyptians had ſo high an Eſteem of their own Sanctimony, that they counted it an Abomination, to eat with the Hebrews, as ſuppoſing them unclean. Gen. 43. 12. And of late ſome Chriſtian Travellers in the Kingdom of Caſubi (o) were thought polluted by the Pagan Prieſts there, who refus'd to eat the Meat which the Chriſtians had touch'd, and after diſcourſing with them waſh'd their Clothes becauſe of Defilement.

When Apuleius was to be initiated and made a Prieſt of Iſis, he made difficulty of it, conſidering (p) he muſt obey his Superiors and attend upon his Miniſtery, which is a difficulty; he muſt be pure from Women, Wine, Fleſh (and the like,) and renounce the care of any thing but his Gods and their Service, and his Life muſt be with Caution and Circumſpection. (q) The Prieſts of Iſis had their Heads ſhaven upon the account of Purity, and all the Egyptian Prieſts had their whole Bodies ſhaven and ſcrap'd every third day, leſt any ſordes ſhould lie under their Hair, who miniſtred to the Gods. Their Garments were Linen newly waſh'd, (not Woollen) for Purity ſake; and their Bodies were waſh'd twice every Day and twice every Night; they daily waſh'd their Cups alſo, and their Circumciſion was καθαριότητος ἕνεκεν, for Purity ſake. The uncircumcis'd they look'd upon as unclean (whence Pythagoras was circumciſed, that he might converſe with them,) none might have acceſs to them, unleſs they purg'd themſelves and abſtain'd from many things, and in the time of their Purifications they were ſhy of their Friends, leſt they ſhould contaminate their Purity. The Water which they us'd for cleanſing themſelves, was none but that whoſe Purity the Bird Ibis (the moſt cleanly Bird) had

---

(d) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 393.

(e) S. Aug. de C. D. l. 2. c. 4. Theodoret. Θεραπ. Ser 10. p. 141.

(f) Spencer ſupr. c. 2. S. 3. & diſſ. 6. c. 1. S. 2, 5, 7. Herald. in Arnob. p. 234.

(g) Spencer ſupr. diſſ. 1. c. 2. S. 5.

* Gr. Naz. or. 3. p. 103.

(h) Lactant. l. 2. c. 7.

(i) Terrena civitas hic habet bonum ſuum. Et hoc eſt proprium terrenæ civitatis Deum vel Deos colere, quibus adjuvantibus regnet in victoriis & pace terrena. S. Aug. de C. D. l. 15. c. 4, & 7.

(k) Τὸ κεφάλαιον τῆς ἀρετῆς ἡ περὶ θεοὺς ἐςὶν ὁσιότης. Procl. in Tim. p. 65.

(l) Def. of the Diſc. concern. Idol. p. 116.

(m) Maffeius Indic. l. 4 p. 626.

(n) Beroald in Apul. p. 697.

(o) Spencer ſupr. l. 3. diſſ. 3. c. 3. S. 1.

(p) Difficile religionis obſequium & caſtimoniorum abſtinentiam ſatis arduam, cautoque circumſpectu vitam. Beroald. ſupr. p. 1002.

(q) Annot. in Min. Fel. p. 165. Herodot. l. 2. c. 37. Porphyr. de Abſt. l. 4. S. 6, 7. Spencer ſupr. l. 3. diſſ. 3. c. 1.

had approv'd by drinking of it. They abſtained from exotick Meat and Drink, from carnivorous Birds, ſeveral fourfooted Beaſts, from Fiſhes alſo (which are not ſacrific'd to the Gods, and being drench'd in the Deep look not up to Heaven, whence in ſome Pagan Nations it was an inſtitute of their Sanctimony, to abſtain from them,) and they would not endure the ſight of Beans ſuppoſing them unclean. Their Abſtinences were extraordinary in the time of their Purifications, and when they prepar'd themſelves for the ſacred Worſhip, in which Preparation they ſpent ſeveral Weeks or Days at leaſt. They are celebrated for their Gravity (not laughing,) for their Frugality, Temperance, Juſtice, Tolerance, Continence (never uſing the Maſculine mixtures,) they were always ſeen amongſt the Images of the Gods, relinquiſhing other Buſineſs and ſecular Negotiations they gave themſelves through their whole Life to the ſtudy of Wiſdom and the Service of the Gods. The Pagan Prieſthood therefore was not without an eximious Pagan Sanctity and Diſcipline of ſtrictneſs of Life, which the Apoſtate Julian endeavour'd to improve, forbidding them the Theaters, lightneſs of Behaviour, drinking in Taverns, injoyning them daily Devotion, to be Religious towards the Deity and Lovers of Mankind.

The Diſcipline which (not only the Philoſophic, but) the Popular Pagans exercis'd in their Religion, is very memorable, and ought to be proclaim'd upon the Houſe-tops, to ſhame and awaken (if poſſible) the degenerate Chriſtian Church, that is defin'd the City of God and his Saints, but hath in great degree loſt her God, his Grace and her Sanctity, and ſo aboundeth with Prodigies of Vice and Wickedneſs; and her People (of all Ranks and Degrees) are ſo generally wicked, that nothing is more unlike its definition than the Church is, through the loſs of her ſalutary Diſcipline. Whereas the Pagans generally in their Religion exercis'd a ſtrictneſs and ſeverity of Diſcipline againſt all ſuch Lewdneſs and Wickedneſs or other impurity, (which as they ſuppos'd) unqualify'd Men for their Sacra; for they that were ſo unqualify'd were by the Diſcipline of their Sacra interdicted their Sacra, and many of them were interdicted by a Penal Law beſides. Which twofold Interdiction is called by ſome (r) the Commonitory and the Compulſory: But theſe Terms are not accommodate. Thoſe that were Profane, that had not pure Hands and pure Garments, that were polluted or conſcious to themſelves of any Lewdneſs, and not purg'd, were by the Diſcipline of their Sacra (which was in ſome ſort, Compulſory) admoniſh'd and warn'd, to depart and be gone from their Sacra, or not to enter their Temples. As in this Inſcription upon the Front of the Temple of Epidaurus. (s)

> Ἁγνὸν χρὴ ναοῖο θυώδεος ἔνδον ἰόντα
> Ἐμφᾶναι,
>
> Be clean, or elſe to go do not preſume
> Into this Temple of odorous Fume.

Some heinous Criminals were made Infamous and prohibited from entring their Temples or partaking of their Sacra by a Penal Law (beſides that they were interdicted by the Diſcipline of their Sacra:) As Plato would have one that beateth his Parents πάντων ἱερῶν εἴργεσθαι, to be by a Penal Law debarr'd and driven from all Sacra.

VII. The ſame Author (in his Fourth of Laws) ſaith; it is neither fit for a God, nor a good Man, to accept of Gifts παρὰ μιαρῦ, from one that is unholy and polluted, therefore the unholy in vain take a great deal of pains about the Gods; τοῖς δὲ ὁσίοις ἐγκαιρότατος ἅπασι, but their Service is moſt fit to be done by all that are Holy. Whence it hath been the cuſtom of all Nations, λευχειμονεῖν, to wear white Garments (ſignificative of Sanctity) in their Sacra. (t) If any was defiled by Homicide, by the Dead, or by the Pollutions of Child-Birth, even Diana Taurica (who admitted of Human Sacrifices) repell'd them from her Altars as impure and abominable. The Gentiles therefore pretended not to approach their Gods without cleanſing and purifying; and the mighty regard which their foul Superſtition had for their Purity (for the moſt part meerly Ritual and External) appeareth (u) from their waſhing their whole Body, their Heads or their Hands before their Prayers, Sacrifices, and before they entred into their Temples, their Aſperſions after their Waſhings, their luſtral or purgative Water and the Aſperſions thereof when they entred their Temples, and elſewhere; their purifying waſhings from Blood (and great Crimes,) from the uſe of the Conjugal Bed, and the Purifications proper to every God; their uſe of Marine Water (which was thought to purifie effectually, becauſe it hath ſomewhat igneous in it) for their waſhings and aſperſions, or mixing Salt with Water in lieu thereof, and ſometimes Aſhes for more effectual cleanſing; the Preparations that they made for their Sacra by being ſhaven, by faſting and various abſtinences; the abhorrence of many Pagan Nations from Swine becauſe of their impurity, and their care to purifie themſelves from the Pollution of the Night, of things incident to the Night, of contact and the exonerations of Nature; (w) the Inſtitutes of the Zabii (who had laborious obſervances about Pollutions, ſaith Maimonides) and the old Arabians Rites of gargarizing the Mouth, purging the Noſtrils, rubbing the Teeth, paring the Nails, and cleanſing other parts of the Body; the Traduction of their Children through the fire to Moloch for initiation and Purgation, and the Rite of purging thoſe that were initiated into their Myſteries by Water, wherein a burning Torch taken from the Altar was extinguiſh'd, which was their Luſtral Water; (x) their three remarkable Modes of Luſtration in their Sacra, by the Air, Water and the Fire; their Apocathartic Sacrifices; their uſual Mode of purging the polluted with Eggs, or Bitumen, Sulphur and a lighted Torch made of the unctuous Pine-tree; their mixing Sulphur with Marine Water for Purification; their carrying and rubbing about the Body the Plant Scilla for Expiation, or a ſacrific'd Whelp (περισκυλακισμός,) their ſtrange ſuffumigations, and their Luſtrations by Spittle and Duſt mix'd together; (y) their numerous Rites of Expiation and Luſtration for places, things and perſons, their ſcrupulous care for the cleanneſs and immaculateneſs of their Sacrifices, their abhorrence of the profane and polluted, and their Opinion, that pure Souls make one Commonwealth with the Gods, that we are to come to the ſupreme God by the inferiour (non ſine Sacris Purificatoriis) not without the purifying Rites; the Purgative Virtues of the Philoſophers with the deſign of their ſublime Philoſophy (which was to purge themſelves from the foulneſs and feculency of the Body and the Contagion of this material World;) their Methods of purging the upper and lower Soul and the Vehicle alſo by the Teleſtick Recedente diſciplina receſſit & gratia. S. Cypr.

(r) Selden de Synedr. l. 1. c. 10.

(s) Porph. de Abſt. l. 2. S. 19.

(t) Gale not. in Jambl. p. 283, 259, Spencer ſupr. l. 1. c. 8. S. 3.

(u) Spencer ibid l. 3. diſſ. 3. c. 3, 4, 5, & 1. & c. 8. S. 3.

(w) Ibid. l. 1. c. 8. S. 2. & l. 3. diſſ. 3. c. 3. S. 1. l. 2. c. 10. S. 4. & c. 15. S. 5.

(x) Voſſ. de Idol. l. 2. c. 14. & l. 5. c. 9. Berald. in Apul. p. 982. Caſaub. in Theophr. p. 221. in Perſ. 201. Gale ſupr. p. 276. Alex. ab Alex. l. 5. c. 27.

(y) Ibid. & l. 4. c. 17. Marſham. Can. chr. p. m. 213, &c. & p. 331. Stob. Ecl. Phyſ. p. 115. S. Aug. Ep. 21.

ſtick Catharms, and their recourſe to Theurgic Arts (that is to the Devil) for Sanctity and Purity.

The Heathen World having ſuch a ſuperlative regard for their Heathen Purity, the debauch'd World called Chriſtian ſhould learn from hence an high Eſteem and zealous Concern for the Purity that is in their Religion, (eſpecially for the ſtrictneſs and Purity of the Chriſtian Life,) and that without it they are atheous at a more than Heathen rate. Nor is it unreaſonable, to go to School to the Pagans, to learn what is Purity; for although Paganiſm is like Popery, wherein are conjoin'd extreme Pomp and Riches with extreme Poverty, extreme Luxury with extreme Auſterity, prodigious Uncleanneſs with extravagant Caſtimony, ſubſtantial Villainy with ceremonial Purity and Sanctity; and for the moſt part the Paganical Purity is either meerly Rituality, or what is nothing better than ſo; yet there are amongſt the Pagan Theologers ſeveral good and laudable Notices and Recommendations of real ſubſtantial Purity, which abſtracted from their Application to the Service of their Deities are ſound Theology. (z) Such is Menander's Theology.

(z) V. Grot. de V. R. C. l. 4. S. 12. cum Annot. Clem. Strom. l. 7. p. m. 513. Simplic. in Epict. p. 196. Hierocl. in aur. Car. p. 25, 26. Porphyr. de antro p. 260.

Εἴ τις δὲ θυσίαν προσφέρων, ὦ Πάμφιλε,
Ταύρων τε πλῆθος, ἢ ῥίφων, ἢ νὴ Δία
Ἑτέρων τοιούτων· ἢ κατασκευάσματα
Χρυσᾶς ποιήσας χλαμύδας, ἤτοι πορφυρᾶς,
Ἢ δι᾽ ἐλέφαντος, ἢ σμαράγδου ζώδια
Εὔνουν νομίζει τὸν θεὸν καθεστάναι,
Πεπλάνητ᾽ ἐκεῖνος, ϗ φρένας κούφας ἔχει·
Δεῖ γὰρ τὸν ἄνδρα χρήσιμον πεφυκέναι,
Μὴ παρθένους φθείροντα ϗ μοιχώμενον,
Κλέπτοντα ϗ σφάττοντα χρημάτων χάριν.
——Θεῷ δὲ θῦε διατέλους
Δίκαιος ὤν, ϗ λαμπρὸς, ὡς ταῖς χλαμύσι
Τῇ καρδίᾳ——

Clem. Strom. l. 5. p. m. 441, 442

He that great Sacrifices brings
Of Bulls or Goats or ſuch like things,
Or of things which Art deviſeth,
Purple Veſtments ſacrificeth,
Or elſe ſome ſplendid ones of Gold,
Of Ivory or of Emerald
The Animals, to get thereby
The Favour of the Deity,
He is beſool'd, and nothing can
Wiſely diſcern; for 'tis the Man
That muſt be good, no Deſlowrer }
Of Virgins or Adulterer, }
Or Thief or Cut-throat for lucre. }
Without and eke within be bright
To Sacrifice to God aright.

So Charondas the Law-giver injoineth ἔχειν τὴν ψυχὴν καθαρὰν πάσης κακίας, to have the Soul pure from all Wickedneſs; for the Gods delight not in the Sacrifices and coſts of evil Men, but in the juſt and good Practices of good Men. This leadeth us to contemplate and examine our Heathen Virtue and Goodneſs, touching which our Fourth Conſectary is, that it is a bad kind of Virtue and Goodneſs.

CHAP. VI.

1. Of ſome fond pretenſions of Philoſophy. 2. Of the Philoſophic Pagans Divine Virtue. 3. Of the Stoicks Divine Virtue, that it was Pride. 4. Their Pride miſtaken and miſrepreſented. 5. Of the Philoſophers acquaintance with Humility. 6. Their Virtue of no better kind than the Popular Pagan. 7. Of the Platoniſts Divine Virtue. 8. Of a late Pretenſion touching the ſuitableneſs of the Agenda of our Religion to the Philoſophic-Pagans Reaſon. 9. The Chriſtian Apologiſts Cenſures of them. 10. Of the Pelagian Controverſie touching the Gentiles Virtues and good Works. 11. A true account of them. 12. Of their Principles of laudable Practice. 13. That their Virtue and Well-doing was an unholy degenerate kind of Virtue and Well-doing.

I. OUR Fourth Conſectary (touching the badneſs of our Heathen Virtue and Goodneſs) concerneth in the firſt place the Pagan Philoſophy, which was not a leſs formidable Adverſary to Chriſtianity, at the riſe of it, than the Pagan Religion; for then it had obtain'd a very great Reputation in the World by its magnificent Pretenſions to Virtue; to Virtue commonly called Moral, whereby the Philoſophers mean (a) What is of good and laudable Quality in matter of Life and Practice, which conſtituteth the virtuous Livers, and according to which Men are denominated, not good Mechanicks, or good Scholaſticks, but ſimply good Men, as Ariſtotle ſpeaketh. For their Philoſophy is defin'd the art of living ſo as to be good, wiſe and excellent, and ſo as to live in Felicity and Beatitude. (b) Certa vivendi diſciplina, per quam benè beatéque vivitur, a certain Diſcipline how to live well as to Virtue and Felicity. Uſually they call it Sapience, and not without Reaſon; (c) for all of us would be Good and Happy; accordingly ſuch as are furniſh'd and adorn'd with all Virtues, we call both wiſe and good Men. And uſually they ſtile it (d) The Guide and Rule of Life, the School-miſtreſs of Virtue and of Manners, the Science of living (honeſtè) without baſeneſs of Manners, the ſanative Medicine of the Diſeaſes of the Soul, the Medicine of the Mind and the Culture of it, which plucketh up Vices by the Roots, the Inveſtigatreſs of the Virtues, the Exterminatreſs of the Vices, the Inventreſs of Laws and of the Dues and Rights of Men. Sometimes they intitle it (e) the Founder of the Worſhip of the Gods and the Rights of Men, of Cities, Families, Marriages and Laws. In which high Elogies of their Philoſophy (Moral) there is the ſame ineptitude and injuſtice towards the Popular Pagans, as in the Stoicks magnificent Pretenſions touching their wiſe Man; for they fondly pretend, that their wiſe Man is a Taylor and a Shooemaker, and that all the Mechanic Arts which are in uſe were invented by Philoſophy. (f) Every thing that looketh like Wiſdom the Philoſophic Pagans arrogate it to themſelves. They pretend, (g) it is their Philoſophy that muſt teach Mankind, what is honeſt and what is baſe, what is juſt and unjuſt, what they ought to chuſe and refuſe, and how they ought to carry themſelves towards the Gods, their Parents, Seniours, the Laws, Strangers, Magiſtrates, Friends,

(a) Decorum quod elucet in vita Cic. Off. 1. Quod decet honeſtum eſt, & quod honeſtum eſt decet. Idem.

(b) Cic. Off. 1.

(d) Lactant. l. 3. c. 13, 15. Lipſ. Manud. l. 2. diſſ. 6. Sen. Ep. 90. Cic. Tuſc. 2. & 5.

(e) Idem Tuſc. 1. & 5.

(f) Quintil. Inſt. or. Arg. p. 3.

(g) Plutarch. de Lib. Educ. p. 7.

(c) Omnes enim bonos & beatos eſſe volumus, omnibus autem virtutibus inſtructos & ornatos cùm ſapientes tum bonos viros dicimus. Cic. Tuſc. 5.

Friends, Wives, Children, Servants; whereas they were manifeſtly beholden to the Popular-Pagan Doctors for much of their Moral and Political Wiſdom (Homer's Sayings were as Oracles with Socrates himſelf;) themſelves ſay, (h) that Philoſophy was but of late original; their Religion, their Cities and Commonwealths (with their Laws and Inſtitutes) were founded by Popular Men long before Philoſophy was born; (i) many wiſe and good Men flouriſh'd in the World long before there was any Philoſophic Inſtitution, or the Name of Philoſophy was known (k).

——— Fuit hæc ſapientia quondam
Publica privatis ſecernere, ſacra profanis,
Concubitu prohibere vago, dare jura maritis,
Oppida moliri, Leges incidere ligno.
Sic honos & nomen divinis vatibus atque
Carminibus venit.———

In ancient times Poets were Men of Sence,
And taught the rude Herd of Men, to difference
Publick from Private things, Sacred from Profane,
To ſettle Marriage, Luſt vagrant to reſtrain,
Laws to deſcribe in Tables, Towns to found,
Thus Honour to inſpir'd Sonnets did redound.

The Philoſophers (who amongſt the Greeks ſucceeded the Poets in the Profeſſion of teaching Virtue) made Improvements in Moral Diſcipline, they reduc'd it into the form of an Art, enrich'd it with variety of Argument, fortify'd its Precepts with great Reaſons, propos'd many wiſe Conſiderations for ſubduing exorbitant Affections and Paſſions, they ſet forth the Praiſes of Virtue, its Excellency and Importance with great Vigour and Eloquence, and (in ſeveral Inſtances) excellently declaim'd againſt Vice, with great Wit and Judgment, they diſparag'd the Vanities of the World and the Follies of Humane Life. (l) Aliens from the Faith ſay many things of a ſound Life agreeable to us; (m) there is amongſt them an unpopular kind of Virtue, which although hugely diſſonant from the holy Life, yet in ſeveral reſpects doth reſemble it; their Diſcipline and Inſtitution had a conſiderable effect upon ſome of themſelves, ſome of the Philoſophers were great Examples of the Virtue which they taught; of a ſort of Temperance, Abſtemiouſneſs, Poverty or Frugality, Equanimity and Contentment of Mind, Apathy, Generoſity, Magnanimity and Contempt of the World, its Smiles and Frowns. (Gr. Naz. calleth a great Man (n) Ἕλληνα μὲν τὴν θρησκείαν, τὸν τρόπον δὲ ὑπὲρ Ἕλληνα, A Gentile as to Religion, but as to his Manners above a Gentile,) their Doctrine had a conſiderable effect upon others, they made ſome few Converts from Debauchery to Philoſophy, (o) Pythagoras made a notable Reformation of the Pride and Luxury of the Crotonian Women, (p) ſome few Commonwealths had their uſeful Laws from Philoſophers (Zaleucus and Charondas;) the Philoſophers therefore may ſeem to have done a great deal of Service to the Intereſt of Virtue; but if their Diſſervices be ſet againſt their Services; if the bad that is in their Polypus's Head be confronted with the good; their Infection with their Antidote; if their Ignorance, Vice and Extravagance be compar'd with their Virtue, it may juſtly be doubted (upon a full Computation of things) whether they have done any real Service at all to Virtue and Goodneſs. The mighty Prejudices which they have done to the Intereſts of it, clearly enough appear in the Accounts already given of their Theology, Philoſophy, and of the Heathen Life; but for a further Elucidation of them we will here take a brief Survey both of their Moral Learning and of their Life.

II. The ſublimer ſort of them diſtribute Mankind (q) into three Claſſes; thoſe that live παρὰ φύσιν, againſt Nature, κατὰ φύσιν, according to Nature, ὑπὲρ φύσιν, above Nature. Agreeably to which diſtribution of Mankind they make a partition of Virtues into ἠθικαὶ, Ethical, πολιτικαὶ, Political, θεῖαι, Divine. The Ethical and Political Virtue may be call'd the common Morality, being the ordinary ſort of virtuous Morals, (r) which conſtitute a good Man; but the Divine Virtue is ſuppos'd to be his Aſſimilation to God and his Deification. The Stoicks uſe not the Phraſe of living above Nature, yet pretend to be (s) Divine Men, to live εὔρουν ϗ θεουδῆ βίον, a proſperous and deiform Life, (t) naturam vincere, to have the better of Nature, as the Cynicks exceed it, (u) to live above Man and at the rate of (Pagan) Gods in this Mortal Body. This Divine Virtue is purely Philoſophic-Pagan (the Popular-Pagans had no concern in it,) and was the Invention of Philoſophy, but was not for the Intereſt of Virtue, but was rather to its prejudice and diſſervice; for it is not truly Divine-Moral Vertue (which conſtituteth Divine Good Men) but an Impoſture, Unpopular Humour, Phantaſtry, and an improbous humane ſort of Bravery is made the End, the chief Good, the Divine Virtue and Beatitude of Man, his Aſſimilation to God and his Deification. Apollonius ask'd the Brachmans what they were? Jarchas the Prince of them anſwer'd, They thought themſelves Gods. The Pagan Gods are above Paſſion; (w) παντελὴς ἀπάθεια μέγα ϗ θεῖον, omnimodous Apathy is a great and divine thing: Such an Apathy the more judicious Philoſophic Pagans admire as a grand Perfection of their Divine Man, to be troubled at nothing no more than the Hog in the Ship, that undiſturbedly ate his Barly in a Tempeſt, (x) to live in the Body as the Mundane Soul (the Siſter of our Souls) liveth in the World, which cannot be ſtruck or impreſs'd upon from without. (y) He is devoid of Grief, is not a compound of Soul and Body, accounteth not the Death of Mortals or the ruine of his Country any great matter, he is above the fear of any thing, (z) truſting to himſelf, that he ſhall have nothing of Evil (he oppoſeth the ſufficiency of his Virtue againſt all Externals) ſo he ſhall be fearleſs of any thing. (a) As Fiducia ſui is one of the Popular-Pagans Virtues, ſo an Irreligious Self-confidence is one of the Philoſophic-Pagan; but to be thus unapprehenſive of danger is Folly and Foolhardineſs; ſuch an Apathy unnatural, inhumane and irreligious is ruinous to all true Virtue and Goodneſs (which is founded upon Nature, and is a Divine kind of Nature) it ſpeaketh the Philoſophic Pagans Divine Virtue, a Gigantick Impiety, that their temper of Mind was Gigantic, and that in an impious Senſe they deify'd themſelves and their Virtue by their Self-ſufficiency, Self-ſecurity and Confidence: (b) They that are furniſh'd with the Virtues, living in greatneſs and celſitude of Mind are alway in beatitude. Philoſophy ſetteth them intirely in the Fortreſs of Virtue, and ſetteth them above Grief and Fear.

III. There

(h) Lactant. ſupr. c. 16.

(i) Ibid. c. 15.

(k) Horat. de Art. Poet.

(l) Orig. c. Celſ. l. 8. p. 411.

(m) Plut. de profect. virt. ſent.

(n) Or. 3. p. m. 90.

(o) Jambl. de vit. Pythag. c. 11.

(p) Sen. Ep. 90.

(q) Salmaſ. in Epict. p. 15, 16.

(r) Hierocl. in aur. car. p. 2, 6.

(s) M. Ant. l. 7. s. 67. l. 2. s. 5.

(t) Sen. de Brev. vit. c. 14.

(u) Epict. diſſ. l. 2. c. 9. & l. 3. c. 21.

(w) Plut. de profect. virt. p. 82, 83.

(x) Plotin. En. 2. l. 9. c. 18.

(y) Idem En. 1. l. 4. c. 7, 14, 15.

(z) Πιστεύσας ἑαυτῷ, ὅτι μηδέν ποτε κακὸν ἕξει, οὕτω ϗ ἀδεὴς ἔςαι περὶ πάντα. Ibid.

(a) Valer. Max. l. 3. c. 7.

(b) Virtutum compotes magno erectoque animo viventes ſemper ſunt beati. totos in ſolido virtutis munimento confirmat Philoſophia, potentiores metu ac dolore faciens. Cic. de Fin. 5. lege Tuſc. 1. & 5. Val. Max. l. 3. c. 3.

